

Introduction

This is an Einsig family generated dependency report and oral account of the Einzig German origins. These accounts had no source references to verify relationships and events. Other than the name of Johann Georg Einzig, there was no evidence he was the York County Einzig family German patriarch. According to traditional German Baptism naming conventions. Johann would have been known as Johann Georg and Georg, the “e” at the end of “George”, is an English spelling version.<sup>1</sup>

Baptism had a saint’s name, secular name, and last name. After a person’s baptism, the person may have been recorded using their saint’s name, secular name, or both names; this made it difficult to determine who was who. Thus Johan Georg may also be known as Johann, Joannes, George, or Johann George. This convention also applies to the females; Maria Brigitta, Brigitta, or Maria; Maria Barbara, Maria, or Barbara.

One thing is clear; the Einzig German heritage was centered on the Northern and Western Roman Catholic Parishes and smaller German districts, located in the Black Forest District (Schwarzwald Kreis) within the state of Württemberg Germany. What is not clear is in what villages the families lived in, and their geographical locations to one another.

Germany used the term district to describe local, county, and regional administrative areas of the state. In American vernacular, this is Township, County, and State. Then there was the use of the local district, which also was a village, and the use of the church parish name, which also could represent a village. Example of this is a typical record:

- Johann Georg Einzig was born in Wachendorf, Horb, Württemberg German
- Translation: Johann Georg Einzig was born in the Wachendorf Roman Catholic Parish located in the Horb District within the State of Württemberg Germany. There is also a town of Wachendorf, which is about 162 miles northeast of the village Horb.

There are a number of villages and parishes where births or baptisms took place. Vollmaringen was a common one, so we used it as the center of where the Einzig’s events were reported; See the 1855 Einzig German Origins Map

- Vollmaringen is about 150 miles South of Wachendorf (Johann, Brigitta, Barbara, and Teresia)
- Vollmaringen is about 1.5 miles West of Baisingen ( Martin Einzig was born)
- Vollmaringen is about 48 miles south of Hochdorf (the rest of Johann and Brigitta children were born)
- Vollmaringen is about 10.5 miles south of Reusten (David’s wife Barbara and five Einsig children were from when they immigrated in 1843.)

The following is a modified and improved transcription version of the original Einsig report, and their oral history. I particularly focused on identifying and understanding the German names used and their geography; Emigration and Immigration records; providing sources where the information came from for verification and in identifying events and relationships.

This paper addresses the Einsig family generated dependency report and oral account of the Einzig German origins. There are well-documented research papers on all of the Einsig members in our library.
