Mrs. Sarah (Eckert) Himes was born Nov. 27, 1811, in Paradise township, Lancaster county, and died Aug. 22, 1899, and was laid to rest by the side of her husband. She was a consistent member of Bellevue Presbyterian Church for many years. Her parents were George and Susan (Kerns) Eckert of Lancaster county, where the former was a farmer, and for many years a well-known miller in Paradise township. For years before his death, on Feb. 27, 1829, at the age of fifty-five years, five months and nine days, he had given up business cares into the hands of his son, Louis. His widow survived until June 14, 1840, her age being sixty-five years, eleven months and twenty-four days. They were buried in the cemetery attached to the German Reformed Church in New Holland, both being members of that religious body. Their children were as follows: Jacob, who married Hannah Varns; Henry, who married Elizabeth McNeal; Lewis, who married Sarah Slaymaker; Catherine, who married Henry Kinzer; Ann, who married James McIlvaine; and Sarah, who became the wife of Mr. Himes.

When the Himes brothers started to Galena, Ill., they made the trip on horseback. Later George returned to Chester county and married and returned with his wife, this trip being made by wagon. Among the many gifts from home that went out to what was then far West, was a choice set of gilt-edged china, and as a remarkable fact it was not broken on the way and still is in a good state of preservation, and is carefully cherished in the possession of Rees C. Himes, a son, now of Shippensburg.

REV. JACOB R. HERSHEY. The Hershey family is not only one of the most prominent, but also one of the oldest, families in Lancaster county, having been founded by three brothers of the name, in 1709, who came hither from their home in Switzerland. Its descendants have been noted for their excellence as farmers, their intelligence and morality as citizens, and for their influence in the Mennonite Church.

Rev. Jacob R. Hershey of Salisbury township is a worthy descendant of this family, perpetuating the name of his grandfather Jacob Hershey, who was long a well-known farmer of Salisbury township. Jacob Hershey, the grandfather, married Anna Newcomer, and they had children: John, Christian, Abraham and Joseph. The father of these children died in 1825, at the age of eighty years, his widow surviving until 1830, when she died at the age of eighty-one years.

Bishop Joseph Hershey, son of Jacob, was for many years a bishop in the Mennonite Church, and by precept and example promulgated his belief. His home was on the old Hershey estate, in Salisbury township, where he died, in 1856, at the age of sixty-four years. His wife, Magdalena (Roop) Hershey, died April 19, 1887, aged eighty-nine years and ten months, and was laid to rest by her husband's side in the old Hershey cemetery, in Salisbury township, this quiet spot having been a part of the original estate. The children born to this union were: Rev. Jacob R.; Christian, who died at the age of eighteen years; Barbara, deceased, who was the wife of David Hoover; Anna, who died young.

Rev. Jacob R. Hershey, son of Bishop Joseph and Magdalena (Roop) Hershey, was born on his present farm, Aug. 9, 1817, and grew to manhood on his father's farm. For many years he was a well-known agriculturist, retiring from active work in that line in 1877. Brought up under Christian influences, in a pious and godly home, with noble examples before him in his beloved parents, the young man early professed his faith, and became a minister in the Mennonite Church. In 1858 he was ordained to the work, and for forty-four years he has been a faithful worker in the field of usefulness in which he was placed. He is known and much beloved over a wide extent of territory, and particularly in the Old Road Hershey and Paradise charges, where his labors have been much blessed. Although no politician, his sympathies have always been with the Republican party. For a long period he served as school director. Except four years on a neighboring farm, the one he now occupies has always been his home. Here he is surrounded by all that makes advanced life comfortable, the center of loving relatives and friends, and he appears much younger than many of his contemporaries, as he reads without glasses, hears without effort, and in every way shows that Time has yet touched him very gently.

On Nov. 29, 1839, in Lancaster, Rev. Hershey was married to Margaret Eby, born July 14, 1819, in Salisbury township, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Weaver) Eby, and sister of Bishop Eby. (For sketch of Eby family, see sketch of Bishop Peter Eby or Bishop Isaac Eby, of Paradise township, elsewhere in this volume). To Rev. Jacob R. and Margaret (Eby) Hershey were born nine children, of whom we have the following record: Josiah; Magdalena, wife of John R. Buckwalter, of Kinzers, Pa.; Peter, who went West, and has never been heard from; Ephraim, a farmer of Salisbury township; Mary, who married Christian Metzler, a farmer of Paradise township; Jacob E., a farmer in Salisbury township; Susan, wife of John S. Rohrer, a farmer of Salisbury township; Lizzie, who died young; and Margaret, deceased.

EPHRAIM HERSHEY, third son of Rev. Jacob R. and Margaret (Eby) Hershey, was born on the old homestead in Salisbury township, Dec. 6, 1844. Until his marriage he remained under the parental roof, at that time taking charge of the old homestead and carrying on the farming operations there for three years. Then he removed to his present farm of ninety-three acres, which he has developed in the same excellent manner. In his locality he is much esteemed, and he and family belong to the Mennonite Church. He belongs to no political party, casting his vote as he deems best for all concerned.

On Jan. 1, 1867, Mr. Hershey was married to Susan E. Leaman, of Paradise township, and to this union were born the following children: Ira, a farmer of Salisbury township, married Sarah Kreider, and has six children; Emma M., who married John G. Wenger, has four children and lives in Salisbury township; Frank B., who married Lydia W. Buckwalter, is a farmer in Salisbury township; and Omer E., Elam W., Ephraim K., Jacob R., Jr., and Alice W., all are at home. Mrs. Susan E. (Leaman) Hershey was born May 3, 1845, in Leacock township, daughter of Jacob and Lydia (Buckwalter) Leaman, the former of whom was a farmer, and for many years a school director of East Lampeter township. He died in 1891, at the age of seventy years, and was buried in Mellinger's cemetery, near Lancaster. His widow resides in Paradise township, with her daughter Mrs. John Kreider. Both Mr. and Mrs. Leaman were members of the Mennonite Church.

JACOB E. HERSHEY, general farmer, was born in Salisbury township, on his father's farm, Sept. 13, 1856, son of Rev. Jacob R. and Margaret (Eby) Hershey. He was reared to farm life, and has followed agricultural pursuits exclusively on this farm, all his active life, with the exception of three years spent on a neighboring estate. Mr. Hershey, like the other members of his family, is highly esteemed as a man of honesty and reliability, and belongs to a family which is one of the most substantial in this part of Lancaster county. He has taken a deep interest in educational matters, and has served as school director for the past fifteen years. In politics he is a Republican. With his family he belongs to and assists in supporting the Mennonite Church.

On Oct. 26, 1876, in Lancaster, Mr. Hershey was married to Miss Mary Esbenshade, and the children born to this union were as follows: Herbert, at home; Clayton, who married Ella Buchwalter has one child, and lives in Paradise township; Milton, Elwood, Bertha, Mabel, Edna and Margerie are at home; and Willis died young.

Mrs. Mary (Esbensshade) Hershey, was born in Earl township, Nov. 25, 1852, daughter of Jacob and Susannah (Bushong) Esbensshade, of Lancaster county, both of whom died in East Earl township, where they were farming people all their lives. The father of Mrs. Hershey died in 1898, aged sixty-nine years, and the mother died in August, 1901, aged seventy-one years. Both parents were interred in Eaby's cemetery in Upper Leacock township, having long been members of the German Baptist Church. They had these children born to them besides Mary, the wife of Jacob E. Hershey: Elizabeth, deceased, the wife of John Kochel; Sarah, the wife of Rife Myers, a farmer of Earl township; Emma, the wife of Frank Buckwalter, of Paradise township; Susan, the wife of Elam Kreider, of West Leacock township; Lydia, the wife of Martin Ebersole, of Paradise township; Amanda, the wife of Walter Mays, of East Earl township; and Adam, a farmer of East Earl township.

HENRY M. BRENEMAN (deceased). Though the temporal life of Henry M. Breneman was ended while he was yet comparatively young in years, having scarcely more than passed his forty-seventh birthday—a time in the career of an earnest and successful man when the future looks bright, when effort is redoubled and the glimmer of hope points to a season of rest and enjoyment in the distant years to come, as the fruition of worthy achievement—yet even in the brief span of time, encompassed by the life of this exceeding well-doer, an impression for good was made by the influences radiating from his kindly and ennobled nature, wider and more lasting than can be readily perceived or measured. Aided by a devoted, intelligent, capable and cultured wife, he won recognition as one of the substantial, progressive and worthy representatives of Lancaster county.

Henry M. Breneman was born in Manor township March 10, 1832, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Miller) Breneman. The parents were prominent and life-long residents of Lancaster county, where they reared a family of nine children, and lived to a good old age. These children were as follows: Nancy, widow of Abner Bausman, of Millersville, Pa.; Elizabeth, widow of Henry Herr, of East Hempfield township; Barbara, wife of Henry Bausman, of Manor township; Jacob, of East Hempfield township; John, of California; Abraham and Kate, twins, the former a resident of Coldwater, Mich., the latter the deceased wife of Isaac Groff; Henry M.; and Sarah, deceased wife of Isaac Baumberger.

Henry M. Breneman was reared on his father's farm and followed through life that vocation. He received in his youth a good common school education, and then seriously devoted himself to the life work so prematurely closed by death. He married in Lancaster county, Nov. 25, 1862, Miss Anna M. Greider, a native of West Hempfield township, and, as the daughter of Christian and Susannah (Miller) Greider, the representative of an old and prominent family of Lancaster county.

Christian Greider was one of the old and influential citizens of Lancaster county, son of John Greider, who for many years was a farmer and miller in West Hempfield township. Christian was born about 1799, and followed agriculture until well advanced in life, when he retired, spending his last twenty years in the peace and comfort that crowned many active and successful years. He died in 1889, aged ninety years. His wife, Susannah Miller, preceded him to the grave many years, passing away in 1864, aged fifty-seven years. They were faithful and prominent members of the Mennonite church, and were buried in the Landisville cemetery of that denomination. Susannah was the daughter of Benjamin Miller, a life-long farmer of Rapho township, and a member of the Mennonite church. To Christian and Susannah (Miller) Greider were born children as follows: John M., who died in Ohio; Christian, who died on the old farm; Benjamin, who was a lumberman, coal merchant and malter at Mt. Joy, Pa.; Elizabeth, who married Daniel Mellinger, and died in Virginia; Martha, who died young; Mary, who died in infancy; Jacob M., a retired farmer of West Hempfield township; Susan, wife of Andrew Garber, of West Hempfield township; Anna M., widow of Henry M. Breneman; Mary, who for her first husband married Christian Rohrer, and is now the wife of John S. Nissley, a retired farmer of Mt. Joy; Barbara, wife of Jacob McAllister, a farmer of Pequea township; and Amos M., a farmer, now residing on the old homestead. The family was more than ordinarily active mentally, as shown by the fact that three of the sons taught school.

To Henry M. and Anna M. (Greider) Breneman was born a family of seven children, namely: Susan G., wife of W. L. Heisey, a merchant and extensive farmer of West Donegal township; Barbara, who died aged five years; Christian G., a farmer of Rapho township; Phares, a dealer in flour, grain and feed, at Columbia; Amos, at home; Henry, deceased; and Abraham, at home.

In 1877 Henry M. Breneman purchased and moved to the farm of ninety acres in West Hempfield township, now occupied by his widow. Here he died two years later, April 1, 1879, aged forty-seven years. In politics he was a staunch Republican, and in religion he held to the Mennonite faith of his forefathers. He had won the respect and high esteem of the people of Lancaster county through the many sterling traits of character exemplified by his daily life. His widow and their younger sons continue to occupy the home he had so briefly possessed, and in addition to general farming they successfully conducted there, from 1892 to 1901, an extensive dairy business. They are communicants in the old Mennonite church, and influential members of the social life of West Hempfield township.

DANIEL HERR (Pequea). The name of Herr is inseparably connected with the moral and material growth of Lancaster county. Members of the family have for many years held honored places in the communities in which they have made their homes.

The house of Herr is an ancient one. The family is of free or noble origin, and its "knights were brave and worthy." Large and valuable estates were owned in Schwaben, called Herr of Bilried. The founder of the family was known as "Knight Hugo," the Herr or lord of Bilried. As far back as 1009 flourished a widely known family from whom the Herrs are descended, but in the fifteenth century several members resigned their nobility and joined the ranks of the citizens. These, however, retained their noble name and their coat of arms, as is shown by records in 1593, when John Herr, or Herr of Bilried, was granted by Emperor Ferdinand, a written testimonial, proving the right of his family to their coat of arms, and to their free and noble descent to the latest generation. By this testimonial the coat of arms yet rightly belongs to the family. All this is recorded in the Register of Noble Families, with their Coats of Arms, Book 5, Page 258.

In direct line from this ancient and honorable family comes Daniel Herr (Pequea), the subject of this sketch. The founder of the family in America was Hans Herr who emigrated from Switzerland. John Herr, son of Hans, became the father of Rev. John, and Rev. John, by his wife Frances became the father of Christian. Christian Herr married Maria Bowman, and their son, Rev. Christian married Anna Forrer.

Daniel Herr (Pequea) was born in 1818, son of Rev. Christian and Anna (Forrer) Herr, and was reared in West Lampeter township. He began his early active business career on a farm of 100 acres, now the property of his daughter Mrs. C. S. B. Herr in Strasburg township, located near the village of Refton. At several times he added small tracts to the original farm, and made his home on this place during his life. Although he began life as a farmer, and devoted attention to agricultural pursuits all his life, this did not by any means bar the way to other large and important enterprises. Soon after starting out on his own responsibility, he began the manufacture of grain drills, the first that were used in this part of the State of Pennsylvania, and was engaged thus for many years, during which time he also opened up a business in lime burning, and this became an important industry, his product being in demand over a very large territory. He was awarded the contract for the lime used in the construction of the Millersville State Normal School, and many other equally large contracts. In addition to these interests, Daniel Herr became an investor in the pine lands in Potter county and the manufacture of lumber there, and later became a director in the Beaver Creek Lumber Co., of West Virginia, which at that time operated a tract of 10,000 acres, although of late years it has greatly increased its acreage. He was the owner of one-half of this land less one-eighteenth, and was one of the founders and first directors of this valuable company. He founded the village of Refton, and was one of the founders and a director of the Lancaster & Quarryville R. R. Co., as well as one of the founders of the Beaver Creek R. R. Co., of West Virginia. He was also founder and director with others of the Beaver Valley Turnpike road, besides being a large land owner in Lancaster county.

In financial circles Daniel Herr was an important factor; he was one of the originators of the Strasburg National Bank, and for years was one of its directors; he was a director in the Northern Mutual Insurance Co., and was one of the trustees of the Millersville State Normal school. At his death he left to his estate, with other large properties, eight-eightieths of an interest in the large tract of land in West Virginia, consisting of both coal and timber land of great value. Politically he was an Old Line Whig, and later became a Republican, and was actively identified with the public affairs of the county, serving as treasurer, during the term of 1857, and for several terms as director of the Poor and a member of the school board. His death occurred Oct. 19, 1894. During the latter part of his life he was a member of the Mennonite Church which had benefited by his benefactions, and in which he was known for his admirable traits of Christian character.

Daniel Herr married Anna C. Brenneman, daughter of Henry Brenneman, and they had a family of five children: Henry B., who died in childhood; Enos B., who died Sept. 19, 1869; Lizzie A., who is the widow of C. S. B. Herr, and resides in West Lampeter township; Reuben D., mentioned below; and one that died in infancy.

REUBEN D. HERR, the only surviving son of his parents, became his father's assistant and supporter in many of his varied enterprises. He was born July 7, 1850, and after completing the common school course he entered the Lititz Academy, and then spent one term, during 1868, at the Saunders Military Academy, in preparation for a college course, but the death of his brother recalled him home, and he then took charge of the work which his brother Enos had managed—the farming and lime burning—and continued until 1875, when he discontinued the latter industry. Later he opened up a coal and lumber business in Refton, and managed that in connection with his farming for one year, but finding the accumulation of business too large, he discontinued personally to direct matters on the farm. About December, 1878, he became the agent for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Co., at Refton, and remained with that company from 1875 to 1881, and later was engaged in various enterprises, including that of commercial traveler and collector, but much of his time was employed in looking after his father's affairs, and since the death of the latter, as trustee and executor, his time has been fully occupied. For the past eighteen years he has managed a trucking business, finding a market in the city of Lancaster for the produce of his small farm of thirty acres in Refton, but the output from his successful green-houses is shipped to distant parts of the country.

For a number of years Mr. Herr was a director in the First National Bank, of Strasburg, and he is also financially connected with the lumber manufacturing industry in West Virginia, and in mining bituminous coal. Inheriting much of the energy and business capacity of his father, he, like him, is a progressive, broad-gauged man, esteemed and respected by business associates and the community in which he has lived so long.

Reuben D. Herr has been twice married, his first union being to Harriet Musselman, daughter of John Musselman. At her death, on May 30, 1878, she left two children, Miriam M., who married D. W. Patterson, of Philadelphia; and Carolyn M. His second marriage was to H. Louisa Coho, daughter of John Lee Coho, of Schuylkill county, and who died Nov. 9, 1900. To this union was born one child—Clair C., who resides with his father in the old family home in Refton.

FREDERICK STONER (deceased) was born Feb. 22, 1790, one mile southwest of Central Manor, Lancaster county, son of Christian and Anna (Brenneman) Stoner, and died Sept. 4, 1877. He was a farmer, and in politics was a Whig. Of the family of eleven children born to Frederick and Elizabeth Stoner six grew to maturity, viz.: Christian, a blacksmith, who settled in Cumberland county, and died in February, 1898; Frederick, of whom further mention will be made; John, who was shot at his home during the Civil war, supposedly by accident; Bernard, a carpenter by trade, and later a farmer and hotelkeeper of Manor township; Levi, a wheelwright at Mountville; and Mary Ann, deceased wife of Benjamin Young, also of Manor township.

Frederick Stoner, son of Frederick, was born Dec. 7, 1818, in the home now occupied by Daniel H. Mellinger, at Central Manor, and on March 14, 1836, began learning the wheelwright's trade at Millersville, with Jacob R. Barr. After finishing his apprenticeship he worked one month as a journeyman, and then, in May, 1839, rented a small shop about a mile from his home, and for one year carried on business on his own account. Mr. Stoner next erected a shop on his homestead, where he carried on his business five years, and in 1845 erected a shop at Central Manor which is still standing, and is now utilized as a wagon factory. Until 1885 Frederick Stoner did a large business in wagon manufacturing, and also in repairing threshing machines, horse powers, grain cradles, etc., and, being a natural mechanic, he erected on his homestead of seven and a half acres, besides his shop, two good frame dwellings, and remodeled another frame and brick, having now four neat and substantial tenements, which are rented.

On Dec. 24, 1844, Frederick Stoner married Miss Sarah S. Mann, a daughter of John and Elizabeth Mann. She passed away August 8, 1886, at the age of sixty-eight years, seven months, thirteen days. They had a family of six children, born in the following order: Caroline M., who died in childhood; Elizabeth, wife of Rev. Abraham R. Myers, of Steelton, Pa.; Sarah Ann, who died in infancy; Catherine, who passed away when nineteen years old; John J., who died at the age of five years and six months; and Albert M., of Central Manor, who was born July 10, 1860, and married Fannie Shenk, daughter of Abram L. Shenk.

JOHN G. TANGER. The general aspect of prosperity and activity noted through Lancaster county is due in great measure to the energy and industry of her agricultural residents. Among those farmer citizens who have done much to advance the interests of the county, may be mentioned John G. Tanger, a substantial citizen, who owns a most desirable estate of sixty-two acres, located a short distance east of the borough of Strasburg.

Andrew Tanger, the father of John G. Tanger, was born in Willowstreet, and remained there until his death, this sad event taking place when he was about twenty-nine years of age. During the time he lived there, he conducted a hotel in the village. His family is an old one in Cumberland county, many of its members being distinguished in public affairs. Andrew Tanger married Catherine Gall, a daughter of Martin and Catherine (Groff) Gall, of Willowstreet, and she survived until 1875. By her marriage with Andrew Tanger, Mrs. Tanger became the mother of five children: Ann, who married Samuel Rowe, of Drunore township; Catherine, who is the widow of David Donichy, and lives at Christiana; Andrew, of Strasburg; John, who died an infant; and John G., of this biography. Mrs. Tanger married for her second husband, David Mowery, of Strasburg township, and was the mother of five more children: Amanda, who married Jacob Hostetter, of Strasburg township; Mary, who is the widow of Christian Groff, of Providence township; Sarah, who died early in life; Martin, a merchant in Philadelphia; and David, a resident of Hawkesville, in Eden township.

John G. Tanger was born June 11, 1836, and was reared to farm life, obtaining but limited school opportunities. At the age of eleven years he began to work with the neighboring farmers for his clothes and board, and at the age of fifteen he was thrown completely upon his own resources. Understanding farm work better than anything else, he continued in this line, working by the month, or season, at different places, making three trips thus through the West, but in 1874 he returned to Strasburg township, and purchased the valuable farm which he now occupies. At present this farm is one that would command a very high price if placed upon the market, as Mr. Tanger has put time, strength and money into the many permanent improvements which he has made, resulting in the excellent conditions which exist.

On Nov. 27, 1873, John G. Tanger was married to Mary A. Huber, a daughter of Michael L. and Mary (Baer) Huber, who was born in Lancaster township in November, 1845. Two children have been born of this union: Landis, born March 10, 1875, who received his education in the Millersville State Normal school, graduating in the class of 1898, and in the normal course in 1900, has been a teacher in the public schools for the past six years, and has been principal of the Millersburg (Dauphin Co.) High school since September, 1900; and Jacob, born Oct. 6, 1880, graduated from the Millersville State Normal school in 1902, and is also engaged in teaching. Both Mr. Tanger and his estimable wife are valued members of the Old Mennonite Church, and possess the esteem of all with whom they are acquainted, in public or private life.

GEORGE F. BAKER. Among the prominent and successful farmers, loyal citizens and representative business men of Lancaster county, is George F. Baker, of Sadsbury township, a worthy member of one of the leading families of Chester county. He was born at Doe Run, Chester county, Feb. 7, 1839, son of Jehu and Martha (McHarg) Baker.

The Baker family originally came from England. The great-grandparents of George F. were Aaron and Sarah (Hayes) Baker, well known members of the Society of Friends in Chester county.

John Baker, son of Aaron, lived and died in West Marlborough township, Chester county, his death occurring there Nov. 13, 1812, at the early age of thirty years. His widow, Mary McNeil, was born in 1779, a daughter of William and Mary (Baily) McNeil, of Chester county, and of English and Irish extraction. She died in May, 1870, the mother of the following children: Sarah, born Feb. 20, 1805, married Reuben Miller, and died in April, 1878; Aaron, born Oct. 22, 1807, married Alice Leonard, and died in January, 1888; and Jehu, the father of George F.

Jehu Baker, son of John and father of George F., was born in West Marlborough township, Chester county, June 18, 1809, and died in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, Jan. 18, 1881.

In Colerain township, on May 22, 1834, by Rev. Andrew Murphy, a Methodist clergyman, Jehu Baker was married to Martha McHarg, and the children born to this union were: John, who was one of the gallant soldiers of the Civil war, a member of the First Pa. Reserves, gave up his young life to his country, at the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862; Louise, who resides on the old homestead;

George F. is mentioned below; and Mary R., the youngest, married Elwood P. Pownall, a farmer of Christiana, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Martha (McHarg) Baker was born at Doe Run, Chester county, March 22, 1810; she died Feb. 21, 1883, and was laid to rest by the side of her husband in Mount Pleasant cemetery, in Sadsbury township. She was a daughter of William and Hannah (Conner) McHarg, of County Derry, Ireland, the former of whom came to America alone in 1793, when eighteen years of age and later his future wife came across the Atlantic with her parents. Mr. McHarg became employed in an iron foundry, and died in 1838, at the age of sixty-five years, his wife dying in 1820, at the age of forty-three years. The children born to William McHarg and wife were: John; Mary, who married George Fritz; Nancy, who married David Irvin; James, who married Margaret Rogers, of Oxford, Chester county; Margaret and Rebecca, twins, the former of whom married Levi Baker, and the latter died unmarried, at the age of seventy-four; Martha, who became Mrs. Jehu Baker; Sarah, who married Jacob Bryan; William, who married Hope Pettit, of Reading, Pa.; Hannah, who became the widow of Daniel Tucker, of Philadelphia; and Hiram, who died young. All of this family have passed away with the exception of Hannah Tucker, who resides in Philadelphia in her eighty-eighth year.

Jehu Baker was engaged in farming all his life, growing up under the care of his grandfather McNeil, as his own father died when he was but three years old. When he was about eighteen, in company with his brother Aaron, he took charge of the old homestead farm which had been in the family for many years, and the brothers operated the farm together until the marriage of Jehu, at which time he sold his interest to Aaron, and in 1834, purchased a farm on Doe Run, in Chester county. There he remained until April, 1839, and in 1843 came to the present farm which his son now occupies. Jehu Baker was a most estimable man, honest and upright in all his dealings. His progenitors were Friends and he adhered to the principles of that denomination, but was not a member of the society. In politics he adhered to the principles of the Republican party. His influence was ever given in favor of educational and moral movements, and no man in his neighborhood better represented the leading and best citizens of the county. The beautiful old homestead is the property of George F. Baker and his sister, Louise, is well managed and is considered one of the most valuable estates in the township.

One of the first and loyal patriots to answer to the call of his country, in those days of wild alarm and dire distress when Rebellion lifted its head, was George F. Baker, who enlisted on June 10, 1861, and saw service under General McClellan in the great Peninsular campaign, and was wounded in an engagement in front of Richmond. Later he was among the brave and gallant soldiers at South Mountain and Antietam, and received an honorable discharge. After the close of the war, Mr. Baker returned to his home in Lancaster county and engaged in farming. He also began to teach school, continuing for twenty terms, and finally resigned his position in 1881. In 1889 he came to his present fine farm, adjacent to the old homestead, although in 1888 he had become interested in the conduct of a general store at Andrews Bridge, in Colerain township, continuing here until 1891. Mr. Baker has been one of the progressive, energetic and intelligent men of this locality, and has taken a deep interest in the management of the schools, serving as a director for twenty-seven years. In politics he belongs to the Republican party, and has been township assessor, efficiently filling the duties of the office.

Mr. Baker was married, first, in 1864, Nancy J. Thurston becoming his wife. The children born to this union were: John A., a park guard at Willow Grove, Pa., married Eva J. Todd, and has two children, William R. and George E.; William A. died in 1890; Martha L., who married H. K. Givin, a farmer of Sadsbury township, has two children, Thurston L. and Jean Gertrude; and Hannah G., a teacher, resides with her aunt Louise, on the old homestead. Mrs. Baker was born in Ontario and died in 1880 at the age of forty-two years. She was a daughter of Hiram and Catherine (Boughner) Thurston, of Ontario.

In March, 1892, Mr. Baker was married to his present wife, Mrs. Amanda Althouse, who manages the affairs of his household with much regard for his comfort. She was born in Chester county, Pa., in 1858, a daughter of Isaac and Levina (Pennegar) Albright, of Lancaster county. Mr. Albright was the manager of the well-known "Red Lion Hotel," in Sadsbury township for some twenty years, giving this hostelry up about one year prior to his death, in 1888, at the age of sixty-eight years; he was supervisor of the township at that time. Mrs. Albright survived until 1899, dying at the age of seventy-three. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Albright were: William, a farmer of Chester county; Benjamin, deceased; Newton, a farmer of this township; Amanda, who is Mrs. Baker; Elizabeth, who married George Graham, of this township; and Jennie, who married Fred. Arnold, a carpenter, in Lancaster.

The first marriage of Mrs. Baker was to John Allen, Jr., and the children born to this marriage were: Mary, who married William Dinkelberg, a railroad carpenter, of Philadelphia; and Elizabeth, who married Ira Dorsey, of Lenover, Pa. The second marriage of Mrs. Baker was to David Althouse, and the children born to this union were: Charles G., at home; Herman G., of Parkesburg, Pa.; A. Wesley, a farmer of Atglen, Pa.; and Amy E., at home. Mr. Althouse was born in Eden township, a son of Woodward and Mary (Harsh) Althouse, of Lancaster county, and died at the age of thirty-seven years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Baker are prominent members of the Methodist Church, and are highly esteemed in this locality for their generous hospitality and many estimable qualities. Few families are better known or more justly belong to the representative people of Lancaster county.

JOHN WILSON (deceased). Whether long life wins success in agricultural pursuits, or whether the days of the prosperous farmer are naturally lengthened, instances have been common where types of highest physical manhood and types of that sterling character essential to good farming have united in the same individual. A splendid instance of this combination was afforded in the life of John Wilson, one of the oldest and best known residents of Drumore township. He lived to the age of ninety years, and he ranked among the most highly respected and most prominent farmers of that township.

James Wilson, his father, was a sturdy, influential farmer of York county, Pa., who attained the ripe old age of ninety-two years. His wife, a Miss Hutchinson, of Chester county, Pa., lived to the age of seventy-nine years.

John Wilson was born in Fawn township, York county, in 1796. He was reared in his native county, and under the capable and inspiring direction of his father he acquired an inclination and skill for farming. In 1820 he married Miss Charlotte Watt, a native of Chester county, daughter of John and Margaret (Mucully) Watt, natives of Chester and Lancaster counties, respectively. John Watt bore arms for the Colonial cause during the Revolutionary struggle, and afterward settled down to the pursuits of farming. He died about 1816.

John Wilson, in 1824, removed with his young wife to Lancaster county, there to establish amidst new surroundings his future home. He purchased 156 acres of land in Drumore township and devoted his energies to their cultivation. His success was far above the average. He became one of the prosperous and prominent men of the county. With a taste for his vocation, he sought no preferment beyond; and his political career, aside from the interest which he ever took in political and social affairs of the community was limited to the casting of his ballot. Himself and wife were earnest and active members of the United Presbyterian church. The death of his beloved helpmeet which occurred in May, 1874, after a half century of wedded life, was a serious blow, and from that time he retired from the active management of his properties, and enjoyed the peace and rest of retirement from routine work which he had so richly won in his long and successful career. He survived his wife twelve years, passing away July 4, 1886, aged ninety years. Both are buried in Chestnut Level cemetery, where a beautiful shaft marks their resting place. Their lives had shone with the graces and noble attributes of true Christianity and their loss, even in the mellowness of old age, brought a shock to a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, who had been helped and inspired by their righteousness and many kindnesses of disposition. Two children were born to John and Charlotte Wilson: James M., a retired farmer of Coreysville; and John David, now a resident of Lancaster.

JOHN DAVID WILSON, the younger of these two children, was born Aug. 11, 1825, and he remained on the farm until thirty years of age, then removed to the city of Lancaster, where he devoted himself to business and politics, becoming one of the active and prominent factors in the life of the city. Ill health had marked his boyhood and youth and his education was received chiefly in the neighboring schools. His mercantile career began in Drumore—his native township—where for four years he conducted a general store, thence in the fall of 1860 he removed to Lancaster. Later he entered the sheriff's office. For eleven years he was deputy sheriff, and for seventeen years was connected with court house work. He has engaged profitably in various business enterprises, and in 1879 retired from active work. Mr. Wilson is a member of the United Presbyterian church. He has traveled extensively, possesses a broad culture, a keen business ability, and he ranks high among the prosperous and influential men of the city.

HIESTAND. The Hiestand family of East Hempfield township descends from John, or Johannes Hiestand, who prior to 1800 located on a tract of timber land just northeast of Salunga, of which tract the present Hiestand homestead or farm is a part—the original tract having been divided into four farms. A farmer himself, he passed all his days in the active pursuit of agriculture until he retired. John Hiestand was three times married, but of the first two wives nothing is now known, except the fact that by one or both of them there were six children born, viz.: John, Christopher, Abraham, Susan, Barbara and Maria. By his third and last wife, who bore the maiden name of Catherine Good, there were born seven children, who were named as follows: Jacob, Mary, Magdalene, Sarah, Catherine, Henry and Benjamin, of whom Henry is the only survivor, and who now occupies the old farm and homestead established by John, the pioneer, and by him improved with its present substantial buildings. The barn, which was destroyed by fire not long since, bore the date of 1801, while the dwelling, which is still standing, bears the date of 1804.

Jacob Hiestand, eldest born of the seven children of John and Catherine (Good) Hiestand, was born on this farm in 1814, and first confined his labor to the cultivation of the place, but later engaged in the coal and lumber business at Salunga, but did not entirely relinquish the supervision of his farm, which he cultivated by hired help. Jacob Hiestand was one of the most public spirited and progressive men of the county, and was a trustee in the Mennonite church. He married Elizabeth Stehman, who was born in 1820, and died in 1861, the mother of ten children: John; Henry S., of whom mention is made in the sketch of Simon H. Hiestand; Catherine, deceased wife of Christian Swarr; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Amos Lehman; Sarah, wife of Daniel Kready, of Manor township; Barbara, married to Abraham Harnish; Mary, now Mrs. Christian Mussleman; Susan, deceased wife of Christian Swartley; Annie, wife of Phares Mussleman; and Fannie, who died unmarried.

Henry S. Hiestand, son of Jacob, received a sound common school education, and at twenty-six years of age began farming on his own account on his present farm of 110 acres, and continued the calling until 1899, when he retired. His marriage to Miss Fanny Herr took place Nov. 11, 1870; she was born in 1849, and was a daughter of Christian and Mary (Hostetter) Herr, both of whom are now deceased.

SIMON H. HIESTAND, a thriving young general merchant, postmaster and agent for the Adams Express Co. and for the Penn Township Mutual Fire Insurance Association, at Salunga, Lancaster county, was born in East Hempfield township, June 22, 1873, son of Henry S. and Fanny H. (Herr) Hiestand, natives of East Hempfield and Rapho townships, respectively.

Henry S. Hiestand, father of Simon H., was born in 1853, was reared a farmer and is now living retired on the old homestead in East Hempfield township. Mrs. Fanny H. Hiestand passed away in 1891, at the age of forty-one years, a member of the Mennonite Church, and was buried in Landisville, this county. The children born to Henry S. Hiestand and wife were seven in number, and were named as follows: Amos H., farming on the old homestead; Simon H., whose name opens this sketch; Anna H., Albert, Lizzie, Fanny and Henry, Jr., all at home.

Simon H. Hiestand lived on the home farm until seventeen years old, meanwhile receiving the usual district school education, and then entered the Lancaster Business College, from which he was graduated in due course, and he then entered the branch house of Wanamaker & Brown at Harrisburg, in order to become acquainted with the business, and after traveling two years for the same firm, he, on Jan. 1, 1895, opened his present store at Salunga.

On March 26, 1895, Simon H. Hiestand married, in East Lampeter township, Miss Bertha M. Denlinger, who has borne him two children: Victor D., deceased; and Verne E. Mrs. Bertha M. (Denlinger) Hiestand was born in East Lampeter township, a daughter of David and Susan (Myers) Denlinger, the father being a retired farmer and residing in Salunga.

Simon H. Hiestand is a Republican in politics, and his first public office was that of school director, to which he was appointed for a year, but proved to be so efficient as to be elected for the three years following. On Nov. 14, 1900, he was appointed postmaster by President McKinley, and is still satisfactorily discharging the duties of that office. This young merchant has already made his mark in the business world, and by his fair and liberal dealing has secured the confidence and good will of the general public of Salunga and surrounding country. The Union Trust Co. was organized in January, 1902, and was opened for business the following March, with an authorized capital of $300,000. Of this company Mr. Hiestand was elected a director. Socially Mr. and Mrs. Hiestand enjoy a very desirable position, being greatly esteemed by the leading people of Salunga. They are both consistent members of the Mennonite Church.

J. R. MISSENER, editor and publisher of the Mount Joy Star and News, and also the editor and publisher of the Steelton Advocate and Verdict, is a son of George and Elizabeth Missener, both of whom are now deceased. He was born on the banks of the Little Chiques Creek, in Mount Joy township, March 24, 1851. Mr. Missener's ancestors originally came from Switzerland about two hundred years ago. His grandfather was a justice of the peace for many years. His father, a miller and farmer, died almost half a century ago.

Mr. Missener spent the first twenty-five years of his life on the farm where he was born. There he received the education which the country schools afforded at that time, and the important practical training, which industrious employment in farming gave him. At the age of seventeen he was granted a teacher's certificate, by the county superintendent, and he taught school in his native township three terms. When he was twenty-one years of age he was elected a justice of the peace for five years, at the expiration of which he was elected for a second term. During that time he carried on an extensive business as a surveyor. In 1875 our subject engaged in the newspaper and printing business, which he has followed ever since. At that time he established the Milton Grove News. In 1878 he purchased the Mount Joy Star and News, and consolidated the two papers, under the title of the Mount Joy Star and News, which paper he published for ten years, enlarging and improving it, and making it a power in that section. For a number of years it was the largest of the eighteen newspapers in the county, outside of Lancaster city. Mr. Missener conducted a newspaper syndicate for a number of years, during which time he edited and published the Florin Independent, the Bainbridge Banner, Sporting Hill Messenger, Salunga Siftings, Landisville Vigil. In 1888 he purchased the Steelton Advocate, which he has been publishing ever since. At the present time he is issuing only a weekly edition, but for some time prior to the hard times of 1893 he published the Daily Advocate. In 1892 Mr. Missener associated his son, George W., in business with him. The junior member of the firm was only fifteen years of age at that time, and was the youngest editor and newspaper publisher in the United States. In 1898 our subject purchased the Steelton Verdict, which he consolidated under the title of Advocate and Verdict. Mr. Missener believes in training his sons to practical business, and at an early age, in fact while yet in their teens, all his sons, George, Garfield, John and Benjamin, were associated with him. In 1893 Mr. Missener again purchased the Mount Joy Star and News, which he had sold six years before. Since that time he is publishing the Steelton Advocate and Verdict, as well the Mount Joy Star and News, but both offices and papers are as distinct and separate as though they belonged to different proprietors. In this feature of his business he is demonstrating, by practical operation, the advantage of having more than one newspaper and printing office under one management. This plan has been carried out very successfully in many branches of business, but had not before been attempted in the publication of country newspapers. The result is so eminently successful that he is considering the addition of another newspaper and printing office to his list.

Mr. Missener has always taken a prominent part in politics, but though frequently urged to run for office has never done so, except in the case of local positions, for which he has never been defeated. His newspapers have wielded much important influence in shaping and controlling local politics. While he had his hands so full of work at home, he has not failed to look abroad. He has made for himself a notable record as a traveler, having been to Canada three times and across the continent twice, going as far West as the Pacific ocean, and South to the Gulf of Mexico.

In March, 1877, Mr. Missener was married to Miss Fannie R. Weaver, by whom he has had nine children. His two eldest sons, George and Garfield, are printers in New York City. His sons John and Benjamin are associated with him in his newspaper and printing business. His daughters, Mary and Bertha, and his youngest son, Edgar, are also at home. Daniel and Kathryn joined the silent majority in their infancy.

CLINTON HIMES. Historical associations cluster about the home and the home-life of this influential and well-known resident of Salisbury township. His home, known as Ivy mansion, was built one hundred years ago, and was, before the railroad era, the old stage coach house and postoffice. Here Gen. Lafayette, while on his way to Lancaster in the year 1825, tarried a few hours and received public entertainment. Ivy mansion was then a center of commerce and travel, past which and through which the current of human events flowed ceaselessly.

Mr. Himes was born in Leacock township May 9, 1831, son of Rees C. and Sarah (Eckert) Himes, and grandson of Thomas and Catherine (Clemens) Himes, of Chester county. The grandfather died at Honeybrook, and Rees C. came in his boyhood with his widowed mother to Lancaster county, settling in East Earl township. In his early manhood he engaged successfully in mercantile pursuits in Leacock township, later yielding its more active duties for the comparative quiet of an agricultural life, passed in Salisbury township. Here he died in the prime of life in May, 1849, aged forty-nine years. He had married Sarah Eckert, a native of Lancaster county, and a daughter of George Eckert. She survived him many years, passing away in August, 1899, at the ripe old age of eighty-seven years. Rees C. and Sarah Himes were active members of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church. The children born to them were as follows: Clinton, subject of this sketch; George Clemens, a farmer who died in 1856; Cecelia, who married Rees C. Himes, a retired farmer of Shippensburg, Pa.; Anna C., who lives unmarried on the old homestead Spring Run Farm, in Salisbury township; Susan A. and Martha L., both residing unmarried on the old homestead; P. Timlow, who died young; and Rees L., justice of the peace at Kinzers, Pennsylvania.

Clinton Himes was a lad of eighteen years, the eldest of a family of eight children, when the household was bereft by the death of the father and husband. Responsibility thus came to him early in life. He took up its cares, and for many years conducted the affairs of his mother's estate. He attained standing in public and religious affairs, and possessing the taste and the opportunities for a broad culture he ripened into a deep and influential thinker, attaining prominence in the constantly widening circle of his acquaintanceship.

Mr. Himes married Feb. 28, 1878, at Peoria, Ill., Sophia R. (McIlvaine) Negley, daughter of Rev. William B. and Elizabeth (Breeding) McIlvaine. Her father was a well-known divine of the Presbyterian church, who for forty-one years was pastor of East Liberty Church at Pittsburg, Pa., but resigning that charge on account of ill health, he removed to Peoria, Ill., where he preached for twenty years.

The MCILVAINE family had been prominently identified with the development of Lancaster county for several generations. It was founded here by Robert McIlvaine, who in 1729, came to the county from Philadelphia. He had been an elder in the old Pine Street Church at Philadelphia, and after his settlement in Lancaster he followed farming. His home consisted of a 200-acre tract lying in Salisbury and Paradise townships, which had been purchased from William Penn by his father-in-law, George Duffield. To Robert and Mary (Duffield) McIlvaine were born five children: Andrew, who removed to Butler county; William; Elizabeth (Mrs. Springer); George; and Robert.

George McIlvaine, son of Robert and Mary (Duffield) McIlvaine, was born about 1742. He was a lieutenant in the Continental army during the Revolutionary war, and served at Valley Forge. He was a man of superior intellectual attainments, and for forty years was an elder in the Leacock Presbyterian church. He married Jane Hamilton, and their family consisted of four children, namely: Robert; Mary, wife of William Dickson, editor of the Lancaster Intelligence; Jane, wife of Capt. John Slaymaker; and Elizabeth, wife of James Boyd, of Philadelphia. George McIlvaine, the father of these children, died in 1807, aged sixty-five years; his wife died in 1790, aged thirty-two years.

Robert McIlvaine, son of George and Jane McIlvaine, was, like his father, a farmer by occupation. He served as an ensign in the war of 1812, and was for twenty years an elder in the Pequea Church. He was twice married; by his first wife, Sarah Slemmons, who died in 1818, aged thirty-seven years, he had six children, namely: Thomas S., George D., William B., Jane (who married James Slaymaker) and John and Sarah (twins, the latter becoming the wife of Isaac Walker). By his second wife, Abigail Whitill, Robert McIlvaine had one child, Mary, who married James McHaffy. Mr. McIlvaine passed away in 1832, aged fifty-five years.

William B. McIlvaine was born in 1807. He was reared in Lancaster county and received a collegiate education at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., concluding his theological studies at Princeton Theological Seminary, from which institution he graduated. He was thrice married, his first wife being Sophia S. L. Duffield, daughter of Dr. William Duffield, who died at Pittsburg in 1830. His second wife, whom he married in 1832, was Elizabeth Breading, who was born in Fayette county, daughter of Nathaniel and Mary (Ewing) Breading, natives, respectively, of Lancaster county, Pa., and of Cecil county, Md. Nathaniel Breading served in the Continental army as commissary in 1777-78; he was principal of the academy at Newark when the Revolutionary war began, but the Continental troops took possession of his school, and his occupation thus gone, he found service in the army. He became judge of the courts in Fayette county, where he died at Tower Hill. The Breading and Ewing families came from Londonderry, Ireland, in 1725, the former settling in Little Britain, Lancaster Co., Pa., and the latter in Cecil county, Md. By his marriage to Elizabeth Breading Rev. William B. McIlvaine had four children: Mary E., who died at the age of twelve years; George H., who for many years was cashier and later president of the Peoria National Bank, and who died Jan. 1, 1897; Sophia R., wife of our subject; and William D., who died at the age of ten years. The mother died in 1850, aged forty-one years. The third wife of Rev. William B. McIlvaine was Margaret McGiffin, daughter of Thomas McGiffin, of Washington, Pa., and to them was born a son, Thomas, now a physician at Peoria, Ill. Rev. McIlvaine died at Peoria in May, 1892, aged eighty-five years.

To Clinton and Sophia R. (McIlvaine) Himes

was born one child, a daughter, Sarah Rees, who resides at home with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Himes are prominent members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he has been trustee for the past forty years. In politics he is a Republican. With its ancestry of several generations, both paternal and maternal, prominent in the development of Lancaster county, men and women of superior mentality, possessing strong personal convictions and high principles, combined with business sagacity of a high order, it would be but natural to look to this family for a representative of the best life of Lancaster county. Nor would that expectation be disappointed. The home life of Mr. and Mrs. Himes is one in which may be found the charm of manner, the graces and accomplishments which blossom best in an environment of earnest purpose, of good will towards men, of interest in public and social affairs, of devotion and loyalty to causes espoused. It is a home from which radiate many strong influences for the happiness and the development of those whose good fortune it is to come within its beneficence.

GEORGE EDWARD WISNER, the leading manufacturer of paper and cigar boxes in Lancaster, has an exceedingly interesting history, not only in the matter of his long and illustrious ancestry in this country, but in the development of his business from a very small beginning to extensive proportions. His ancestors on his father's side came from Germany, while the progenitors of his mother, the Werntzes and the Fon Dersmiths, came from Berlin. Quite recently articles appeared in the press of this country telling of the claims the descendants of these people made to the greater part of Berlin, alleging that it was given to one of their ancestors in payment for arms furnished the authorities in one of the early German wars. Mr. Wisner's great-great-grandparents on both sides are buried at Strasburg, Lancaster county, thus showing the early settlement of these families in Lancaster.

Jacob Wisner, the grandfather of George E., once farmed the land on which the home and factory now stand. Indeed, he farmed a large tract of land in that section before the western development of the city took place.

Jonah Wisner, father of George E., married Ann Elizabeth, daughter of Daniel and Rosanna Werntz, of Strasburg. Mr. Werntz was known as "The Blacksmith" of Strasburg, and was employed at one time by the Colemans, the "iron kings" of Colebrook furnace, Lebanon county. By this union there were four children, of whom George E., is the only survivor. The father died in 1861, when George was only thirteen years old, but the mother still survives and resides with our subject.

George E. Wisner was born April 27, 1848, and up to the time of his father's death attended the public schools of this city, but at that time he bravely faced his duty as a loyal and devoted son to his widowed mother, and right manfully set about making his way in the world. The young lad first secured employment in the rifle works of Henry E. Leaman, and his next scene of employment was at Twining's whip factory. At the age of fourteen he took entire charge of a soap factory for six months. In 1861 he entered the old Express office as an apprentice at printing, remaining there for three years. From printing he passed to photographing, and then was employed at the confectionery business with Charles Eden and Joseph R. Royer. After finishing his apprenticeship he started in the confectionery business for himself at the corner of North Queen and Walnut streets, where he remained five years, when he moved to Columbia, Lancaster county, and continued in the same business four years longer. At the end of that time he closed out his business and returned to Lancaster. In 1884 Mr. Wisner began the manufacture of cigar boxes at his present location, No. 515 West Chestnut street, starting the enterprise in the wash-kitchen of his residence. As his business grew he converted an extensive chicken coop on his lot into a cigar box factory. In 1891 he built a four-story brick structure 20x40 feet, fitting it out with the most modern requirements for the trade, having added paper boxes to his line. His business has so greatly increased, that in 1895 he built a four-story brick annex to his main structure, 40x30 feet, both buildings being filled to-day with busy workers engaged in supplying Mr. Wisner's patrons in Lancaster and the neighboring towns. He employs some sixty hands.

In 1875 Mr. Wisner was married to Miss Mary R., daughter of the late Charles Kryder, of Lancaster, the manufacturer of a celebrated herbs biters. To this union were born two children, one of whom died in infancy. The other, Charles Edward, was the leading salesman in Kirk Johnson & Co.'s music store for a number of years, but is now a teacher of music, and an organist and pianist of acknowledged merit; his work is largely devoted to classical music. He is the organist of the First Methodist Church of Lancaster. Mrs. Wisner died in 1885.

Mr. Wisner is a member of the First Methodist Church, having been associated with this body since 1867. He has been a church and Sunday School worker from boyhood, and was secretary of the Sunday School for fifteen years. He is now president of the Landisville Camp Meeting Association, in which he is very much interested; was an organizer and is a director in the Lancaster General Hospital, and belongs to the Lancaster Board of Trade. Mr. Wisner is a member of the Knights of Malta, the Odd Fellows, and the Junior American Mechanics. In politics he is a stalwart Republican and a champion of the temperance cause, in which he has been engaged since he was fifteen years old, and his position on that subject is beyond doubt or hesitation. Positive and upright as he is, his heart is ever open to the appeals of the erring, to whom he has always proved a good Samaritan.

MCGOWAN. Few citizens of Sadsbury township left more friends when called from earth than did John McGowan, whose widow, MRS. ANNIE E. MCGOWAN, lives on the comfortable home place in this township. Mrs. McGowan was born on the old home farm, in Bart township, whither her parents had removed in 1832, a daughter of Samuel and Eliza A. (Hollis) Good, natives of Chester county. The mother died in 1861 at the age of fifty-eight years, but the father, having lived ten years of retirement, in Christiana, died in 1888, at the age of eighty-eight years. Their parents were: Jacob and Anna (Boyl) Good, of Chester county, and German ancestry, and George and Ann (Moore) Hollis, natives of Chester county, who moved to Lancaster county at an early day.

The children born to Samuel and Eliza A. (Hollis) Good were: Joseph F., who is a machinist, at Renovo, Pa.; Annie E., who became the wife of John McGowan; Sarah J., unmarried, living in Chester county; William H., who is an insurance agent in Philadelphia; Mary L., who lives, unmarried, with her sister in Chester county; Samuel R., a contractor and builder of Philadelphia; George W., deceased; John M., a farmer of Bartville. The parents were worthy and consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and were buried in Middle Octoraro cemetery.

JOHN MCGOWAN was born in Sadsbury township Aug. 20, 1832, a son of John, Sr., and Catherine (Knott) McGowan, and he died June 28, 1897.

John McGowan, Sr., was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, son of John and Anna McGowan, natives of that county, May 2, 1798, and he died in Sadsbury township Oct. 18, 1851, and was buried in Cochranville cemetery, but in 1895 his remains, with those of his two daughters, were removed to Mt. Pleasant, Pa. The other children in the family of John and Anna McGowan were: Anna, Margaret, Sarah, James and Thomas. John McGowan, Sr., came to America in June, 1819, and settled in New York for one year, and then removed to Lancaster county, Pa., where he was employed on the farm of David Brisbea, in Salisbury township, for a period of three years. He then became a clerk for the late Daniel Buckley in the iron works in the Salisbury district, remaining with that firm until the death of Mr. Buckley in 1825. Later he went to Lebanon county, and there became a clerk for James Coleman, in the iron works, for the succeeding three years, when he was made manager for the late James Sproul, the iron manufacturer, in Sadsbury township.

Mr. McGowan remained with this concern for a period of six years and then became the manager in the iron works of Swayne & Pennock, located one mile from his former place of work. Here he remained for two years, but business difficulties assailed this firm and at a forced sale Mr. Sproul rented these works for a period of thirteen years, John McGowan continuing as manager, making money during this time not only for himself, but also for Mr. Sproul. After the death of the latter, who had always taken a deep interest in his faithful manager, Mr. McGowan moved to Atglen, Pa., where he lived for one year in retirement. Mr. McGowan, on April 1, 1849, purchased a farm in the valley, in Sadsbury township, and there he passed the last years of a very useful life. Mr. McGowan was a man of superior education and great business ability. With almost all of the progress and development of his section he was thoroughly identified, and he held many of the local offices, notably, school trustee and auditor, for many years. His family were left very well provided for, his estate being valued at something like $30,000, which was efficiently managed by his widow, who was a woman of excellent judgment and executive ability.

John McGowan, Sr., was married in 1830 in Lancaster, to Catherine Knott, who was a daughter of William and Sarah (Miller) Knott, natives of Maryland, who came to Sadsbury township at an early day, where Mr. Knott became an iron worker and farmer. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. McGowan were: Hon. William, who for thirty-five years has been a justice of the peace in Christiana, Pa., has held all of the local offices except constable, served with distinction four terms in the House of Representatives, and was a delegate during two terms in the county convention; John, mentioned below; Joseph, in the government service, who was a soldier in the Civil war; Samuel, who is a retired merchant at Christiana, Pa.; Caleb B., who lives a retired life at Atglen, Pa.; Clement B., deceased; Dr. Hiram, who is a well-known physician of Harrisburg, Pa.; Thomas, who was a deputy internal revenue collector; Noble, who is a merchant in Philadelphia; Sarah A., who lives unmarried, in Christiana; Rachel, also unmarried, and resident of Christiana; Mary, unmarried, and living in Philadelphia; Elizabeth, wife of Philip B. Rea, of Chestnut Level, Pa.; Hannah P., who died in infancy; and Margaret, who died unmarried, at the age of twenty-one years. The mother died Sept. 17, 1888, at the age of seventy-seven years.

John McGowan grew up on the farm and devoted his life to that occupation. His education was obtained in the public schools of his neighborhood, and he became identified with the best interests of his locality. In politics he was an active member of the Republican party, and most efficiently filled many of the township offices, notably those of assessor, tax collector and auditor, and was a leader in political circles.

Mr. McGowan was married (first) May 19, 1859, to Elizabeth J. Davis, and their two children were: Catherine, a resident of Christiana; and Joanna, the widow of William E. Thompson, also of Christiana. On Feb. 6, 1879, Mr. McGowan wedded Annie E. Good, at her home in Bart township. The one son of this marriage, John W., manages the home farm. Here Mr. McGowan settled in 1891, having previously occupied one located within one-eighth of a mile. It is well improved and valuable, Mr. McGowan having been an excellent farmer and good manager. His high character made him esteemed through the county, while his neighborly kindness and domestic virtues made him beloved by a large circle of friends.

EUGENE BAUER, in his lifetime a popular hotelkeeper at Lancaster, was a native of Freiburg, Baden, Germany, where his parents, John Joseph and Margaret (Kern) Bauer, were well-to-do people. They owned valuable stone quarries and a number of boats on the Rhine. Of their nine children, but three came to America: Eugene, Margaret, who married Frederick Munz, and resides in Philadelphia; and Malena, who married Charles Schmitt, of Philadelphia.

When he was eighteen years of age Eugene Bauer came to America to win home and fortune amid the wider opportunities of the new country. His first employment was at his trade, that of monument work, and he assisted in the building of the Columbia Bridge and St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Abandoning his trade, he entered the employ of Lawrence Knapp, of the "Empire Hotel," in East King street, and after long service there purchased the "Golden Horse Hotel," which he conducted for thirteen years. His genial disposition made him an ideal host, and his hostelry was ever popular and well filled. His death occurred Aug. 14, 1894, when he was aged forty-four years.

In early manhood Mr. Bauer married Miss Judith Lamparter, daughter of the late Eberhart J. Lamparter, and two children came to bless their home: Eugene, who died when one and a half years old; and Eberhart J. The latter was engaged in the plumbing and gas fitting business in Lancaster, and formerly had been manager of the Sporting Goods Co., but on June 12, 1900, he started on a pleasure trip to Idaho, and, liking that country, determined to make it his home. On June 10, 1901, he married Miss Mabel Hartmyer, of Lancaster. Like his father, Eberhart J. Bauer was very popular, and no two men in Lancaster were greater favorites with the public than they.

In his political affiliations Eugene Bauer was a staunch Republican. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the I. O. O. F. Always looking to the best interests of his adopted town, he was ever foremost in giving of his time and means to any measure that would advance the moral or material welfare of Lancaster. He was an active member of the Union Fire Co. for a number of years.

Mrs. Bauer still owns the "Golden Horse Hotel," but rents it, devoting her time to religious, charitable and social duties. Her greatest pleasure is in doing good to others.

Eberhart J. Lamparter, father of Mrs. Bauer, was a tanner at Millport, in this county. Abandoning that occupation, he engaged in the manufacture of glue, and, removing to Rockland, established a glue factory in 1865, and died there in 1869. The factory is still run by one of his sons. Mr. Lamparter married Miss Elizabeth Helb, sister of Jacob Helb, one of the pioneer tanners of Lancaster, and to this union came nine children, six of whom are living: Jacob, George and Eberhart, glue manufacturers of Rockland; Miss Pauline, living in the homestead on Rockland street; Miss Lisette D., pension clerk at Washington, D. C.; and Mrs. Judith Bauer, of Lancaster. The mother of this notable family died Sept. 13, 1899.

JOHN ZERCHER, Superintendent of The Helvetia Leather Co., of Lancaster, is one of the prominent men and leading citizens of this community. His connection with the above named company has dated since 1888, after a long business experience with other reputable firms. He is a native son of Lancaster county, born in New Danville, April 20, 1838, his parents being John, Sr., and Esther (Shaub) Zercher, both of Lancaster county.

John Zercher, Sr., was a weaver in early life and later took charge of the hotel in New Danville, and then operated a general store in the same village for two years. He then turned his attention to farming, and it was upon his farm in Pequea township that his death occurred in 1872, at the age of sixty-seven years. His widow, Esther (Shaub), survived until 1895, dying at the age of eighty-three years. They were members of the Dunkard faith, and were laid to rest in the cemetery of the Mennonite Stone Church, near New Danville. They had two children: Christian S., a millwright, who moved to St. Louis, Mo., in 1870, and lives there, in retirement; and John.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Zercher were John and Elizabeth (Tanger) Zercher, the former of whom was a miller in this county, of Swiss extraction. Their family consisted of the following members: Harry, deceased, was a miller in this county; Andrew, deceased, was a wheelwright and a farmer, and died in Conestoga township, where he lived retired; John became the father of our subject; Jacob, deceased, was a farmer of prominence, a large landholder in Adams county, Ohio; and Anna died at the age of fourteen years. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Zercher were John and Esther (Goghenauer) Shaub, natives and farming people of Lancaster county, of German extraction.

Until his marriage Mr. Zercher made his home with his parents. His early rearing was on the farm, and his education was acquired in the district schools. At the age of seventeen he began teaching school at Run Valley, and taught for eight consecutive terms—in fact, if Mr. Zercher had not turned his attention to other lines of usefulness, it is probable that he would have become a noted educator. Three years were then spent in farming and then, seeking a wider field, he went to Lancaster, and there became bookkeeper for Samuel Hess, in the lumber business, and also filled the same position for one year with Thomas & Henry Baumgardner, coal merchants. He then became bookkeeper in the tannery of Amos Hollinger, which business connection lasted for twenty years, and during this time Mr. Zercher, in addition to his other duties, taught two terms of school. In 1888 Mr. Zercher accepted the position of bookkeeper, superintendent and general manager for The Helvetia Leather Co., with R. J. Houston as president, and Charles J. Landis, as treasurer, the last named gentleman retaining his connection with the company until April, 1889, when he became Judge of the courts in the county. The Helvetia Leather Co. was established in 1887, and the plant is located at Nos. 520-538 Poplar street, Lancaster, and employs a force of ten men. They manufacture (by patent process) belting, picker, apron and lacing leather and also oak leather belting. It is one of the flourishing industries of the city and much of its prosperity is due to the excellent business methods and wise supervision of Mr. Zercher.

In 1863, when the State militia was increased in order to repel invasion, Mr. Zercher became a volunteer in the 50th Regiment under Brig.-Gen. Franklin and Capt. David Bear, for one hundred days' service. This regiment was used for guard duty along the Potomac river, and fortunately saw no serious trouble, being discharged in six weeks, at Harrisburg. In politics Mr. Zercher is a staunch Republican and has efficiently filled some office in almost every place which has been his temporary home. For six years he was assessor in Pequea township; for eight years he served as school director in West Lampeter township, and was then elected justice of the peace for five years, serving with credit for four years, when he resigned the office on account of removal to New Danville. With his family he belongs to and supports St. Paul's Reformed Church.

In December, 1859, Mr. Zercher was married, in Lancaster, to Miss Barbara Rowe, born in West Lampeter township, in May, 1837, daughter of Benjamin and Anna (Weaver) Rowe, of Lancaster county, where for a considerable period he was a shoemaker, later operated a hotel at Willowstreet and then became a successful farmer. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Zercher were as follows: Emma, who is the widow of Jacob M. Harnish, resides with her father; Ada L., who died at the age of four years; George W., who died at the age of two and one-half years; Clara A., who married Irvin S. Schmehl, a druggist in Philadelphia, and had three children, James Frederick, Emma Florence and John Irwin, of whom the last named died at the age of five years; and Miss Nora, who resides at home. Mr. Zercher is a man of intellect and means, and is well and favorably known through Lancaster county.

DAVID B. MYERS, who was well and favorably known for many years in East Donegal and adjoining townships, and who died Dec. 17, 1900, was born in East Donegal township Oct. 5, 1834, a son of Henry and Barbara (Brenner) Myers. The family history is quite fully treated under the head of Michael B. Myers on another page. The parents lived to a ripe old age, and were much loved and respected in the community in which their peaceful and well-ordered lives were passed.

David B. Myers was married, in 1876, in Marietta, Pa., to Miss Mary Shoemaker, by whom he had one child, Clara, who married Samuel Eshleman, a farmer of Mt. Joy township, and became the mother of two children, Walter and David, but is now deceased. Mrs. Mary (Shoemaker) Myers was born near Manheim, in Rapho township, a daughter of Christ and Elizabeth (Hershey) Shoemaker, of the same township, who now live in Mt. Joy township, where the former who was born in 1828, is now a farmer. Mrs. Elizabeth (Hershey) Shoemaker was born in 1833, and died in 1891, and was buried in Florin Cemetery. Both were members of the German United Brethren Church. Their children were: Christ, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Elizabeth, married to Monroe Shaffer, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Anna, who married Jacob Frye, a farmer at Centreville; Mary; Hettie and John, at home; Sarah, (deceased); and Harry, at home.

David B. Myers was engaged in farming until the spring of 1900, when he gave up farm work, and moved to the home he occupied for a number of years. In his earlier years he was closely associated with his father in farming operations, and it was not until 1872 that he purchased the farm to which he devoted a good part of his life. In politics he was a Republican. For several years Mr. Myers had been sickly, and shortly before his death was stricken with paralysis. Before his health failed he built a fine three-story brick house, which stands on the cross roads, about a half mile from Florin.

CAPT. PHILIP L. SPRECHER. No more capable leader or more gallant soldier stepped forth from the farmer ranks of Pennsylvania into the garish light of the Union army during the Civil war than Capt. Philip L. Sprecher, in private life a hotel manager, merchant, master of the science of deduction as an expert detective, as well as an all around versatile man of affairs. In the wake of a strenuous and varied career he is one of the most popular men in Lancaster county, and bears a reputation commensurate with his large attainments and splendid personal characteristics. A native son of Lancaster county, he was born at New Holland, Sept. 12, 1839, was educated in the district schools, and spent his earliest boyhood days on the paternal farm. When ten years of age he found employment in the hardware and implement store of his two half brothers, George D. and W. D. Sprecher, with whom he remained until the breaking out of the Civil war, an opportunity which ignited the possibilities of men, and of none more than Capt. Philip L. Sprecher. On the paternal side his ancestors are identical with those of George D. Sprecher, who is mentioned at length elsewhere.

The justice of the plaint of the Southern slave found no greater confirmation than in the service of such soldiers as Captain Sprecher. No finer record illuminates this time of unloosed passions, of unreasoning and bitter hate. A fair idea of his place in the roll call of the national honor is best conveyed by the following interesting account compiled from authentic sources for the United States Army and Navy Association:

"Philip L. Sprecher enlisted from Lancaster county, Pa., on the 4th of June, 1861, to serve three years or during the war, and was mustered into the United States service at Westchester, Pa., as a private of Capt. Thomas B. Barton's company B, 30th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, known as the First Pennsylvania Reserve, Colonel R. Biddle Roberts commanding. The regiment rendezvoused at Camp Wayne, near Westchester, Pa., and left the state for Baltimore, July 22d, thence moved to Annapolis, Md., where it performed guard duty until the 30th, when it moved to Washington, D. C., thence to Tennallytown, Md., where it was assigned to the 1st Brigade of the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps. On October 10th marched to Langley, Va., and December 20th to Dranesville, Va., reaching the latter place just after the battle had closed. March 10, 1862, marched to Alexandria, Va., and was soon after assigned to the 1st Brigade, 2nd Division, 1st Corps, and later to the 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac. It participated in the following engagements, viz.: Tunstall Station, Seven Days Fight, including Mechanicsville, Gaines Mills, White Oak Swamp, Charles City Cross Roads, Malvern Hill, Manassas, Bull Run, Chantilly, Va., South Mountain, Antietam Creek, Antietam, Md., Bennett House, Fredericksburg, Va., Gettysburg, Bristoe Station, Mile Run Campaign, New Hope Church, Wilderness, Parker's Store, Spottsylvania, Laurel Hill, North Anna, Jericho Ford, Tolopotomy, Bethesda Church, and numerous minor skirmishes.

"The said Philip L. Sprecher was at all times with his command, and for gallantry and meritorious conduct was promoted to Corporal August 17, 1861, and to sergeant October 18, 1861, and was commissioned 2nd lieutenant March 1, 1863, for conspicuous bravery, and to brevet 1st lieutenant to date from March 13, 1865, for gallantry and meritorious service in the Wilderness Campaign. At the battle of Antietam, he, with a comrade, forced themselves into the enemy's lines, but succeeded in returning to the Union lines, having captured two Rebel officers and two men. He still has in his possession a sword that he took from one of the said officials. He was honorably discharged June 13, 1864, at Philadelphia, by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment. He re-enlisted, July 20, 1864, to serve one hundred days, and was mustered into the service at Camp Curtin, Philadelphia, and commissioned captain of Company G, 195th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, Colonel Joseph W. Fisher commanding. He veteranized to serve one year or during the war, and on Nov. 1, 1864, was transferred to command of Company C, of the same regiment, Colonel Fisher being still in command.

"On July 24, 1864, the regiment moved to Baltimore, Md., thence to Monocacy Junction, where it was engaged in guarding lines of railroad, and was thoroughly drilled, on the 1st of October proceeding to Berkeley county, W. Va., and was posted along the line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, with headquarters at North Mountain station. In February, 1865, the regiment was re-organized and shortly afterward ordered to Charleston, where it formed part of the command of Gen. T. W. Egan. On April 1st the regiment was detailed to guard the fords of the Shenandoah river, with headquarters at Cabletown, afterward moved to Berryville and Harrisonburg, performing guard duty and provost duty until ordered home for muster out, on the way participating in a number of skirmishes with bands of the enemy.

"Captain Sprecher was constantly with his respective commands during his three enlistments, and earned high commendations, as is evidenced by his frequent promotions. He received his final honorable discharge June 21, 1865, at Harrisburg, Pa., by reason of the close of the war."

But one thing concerning the captain's army record should be added to the above, and that is that he was discharged with the rank of brevet major. Interesting as was his military career, however, his experiences in civil life have been quite as entertaining.

After the war Capt. Sprecher found employment as a salesman for the late A. W. Russell, hardware merchant, after which he clerked at the "Leopard Hotel" for a time, and in 1866 became superintendent of the "Lititz Springs Hotel," remaining in that capacity three years. For the following two years he was proprietor of the "Neffsville Hotel," and in 1873 we find him in the office of the chief of police of Lancaster, serving two terms under the administration of Capt. W. D. Stauffer. He then opened a detective bureau, having discovered a natural aptitude for work of this kind, and the wisdom of this departure was evidenced by the speedy reputation he made all over the State as a cool, collected, and wise determiner of criminal responsibility. The attributes which had made him a soldier par excellence, were in demand in his new line of work, and by applying them as occasion demanded he was enabled to make some of the most important arrests in the annals of Pennsylvania criminology. He captured John Frankford, the State's most desperate horse thief, and in this effort displayed unusual ingenuity. He followed the much wanted man's wife to Coatesville, boarding the train with her unnoticed, and without a weapon of any kind. Frankford was waiting at the railroad station for his wife, was fully armed, yet nevertheless surrendered to the Captain after being informed that he would put a bullet hole through him if he refused to surrender. The desperado was much disgusted after boarding the train and being handcuffed, to learn that the Captain's arms were purely those of the imagination. This capture led to the conviction of the horse thief, and his sentence to nineteen years in the penitentiary. The Captain was also largely instrumental in securing the capture and breaking up of the notorious Buzzard gang of outlaws, and worked up the case that led to the conviction of James E. Pannell, the wife murderer, who, however, cheated the gallows by committing suicide.

After giving up the detective business Captain Sprecher entered the United States Internal Revenue service, in fact was twice in the service, from which he eventually resigned to remove to Franklin county. Here he found relief from the strenuous activity which had characterized his former life, and, purchasing a mill, managed the running of the same for about seven years. Upon returning to Lancaster he was a salesman in Diller's hardware store, afterward in Herr & Snively's establishment, and then became superintendent of the weaving department in the Lancaster county prison, a position which he is creditably filling at the present time.

Captain Sprecher married Mary Elizabeth Streaker, daughter of the late Benjamin Streaker. Of this union there was one son, Edward Diller, who died in March, 1898, at the age of twenty-eight. This son had been a bookkeeper in the Farmers' National Bank of Lancaster for ten years. Mrs. Sprecher died March 31, 1887. Captain Sprecher, whose residence is at No. 325 East Walnut street, Lancaster, is a quiet, unobtrusive gentleman, and only those who know of his splendidly directed life would suppose that his mind contained so many memories of great and important occurrences. Drawn out, he is intensely interesting, and his conversation is replete with the sparkle and conviction born of enthusiasm and direct knowledge of his subject. He is justly popular in military, political, business and social circles, and no man of whom we have any immediate knowledge in this neighborhood has greater strength of character, or exerts a more enviable influence.

WILLIAM C. PENNY. One of the thrifty and well-established farmers of Drumore township, is William C. Penny, who was born Feb. 29, 1848, son of Hugh and Sarah (Wentz) Penny, both of Drumore township, their extraction being Irish and English.

Hugh Penny, the father of William C., was born in 1812, a son of Joseph Penny, and died in 1882. He was one of the leading men of his township, well known and thoroughly respected. In 1836 he married Sarah Wentz, who was born in 1817 and died in 1889; she was a daughter of Joseph Wentz, of Martic township. Their marriage was blessed with these children: Mary M., who married Henry Peagan, of Martic township, but is now deceased; Joseph, who is a farmer of Colerain township; Adelaide, the wife of Thomas Wilson, of York county, Pa.; Maria J., the wife of Aldus Aument, of East Drumore township; William C., our subject; Hugh J., of Chester county; and Laura M., who is the wife of William Overholt, a retired druggist of Baltimore, Maryland.

The Penny family in America can be easily traced to great-grandfather Hugh Penny, who came from Ireland at an early day and settled in the southern part of Lancaster county. He was a staunch Presbyterian and an uncompromising Democrat, and these two family beliefs have descended from father to son ever since.

Joseph Penny, the grandfather of our subject, reared these children: James; Hugh; Hannah, who married William Wentz; Sarah, who married John Wentz; Mary Jane, who married Thomas Wentz; and Harriet, who married Steele Morrison, all of these well known in their day, but all have passed away.

William C. Penny was reared on the farm, and acquired his education in the common schools of his native township, choosing farming as his life work. Although he was hampered in his early career by limited means, he has been careful and industrious, and now is the owner of a fine farm with good barns and improvements, and a most comfortable residence, as payment for his past labors. Their residence has some historic interest, having been built by the Calhoun Brothers, about 1815, they being the brothers of the great-grandmother of Mr. Penny.

On Dec. 21, 1882, Mr. Penny was married to Miss Mary J. Bockins, of Little Britain township, who was born Dec. 25, 1861, daughter of George and Sylvia (Wilson) Bockins, a family of English origin. Besides Mrs. Penny their children were: John L. of Little Britain township; and Fannie M., unmarried, a resident of Britain. Mr. Bockins was born in 1817 and died in 1889, his father having been Samuel Bockins, a member of one of the old families of this part of the State. His wife died in 1885.

Mr. and Mrs. Penny have no children of their own, but in the kindness of their hearts, they adopted five-year-old Charles R. Clark, who was born Aug. 4, 1885, and he has proven a dutiful and affectionate son, honestly grateful for the parental care he has received from Mr. and Mrs. Penny. Both Mr. Penny and wife are members of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church where they are highly valued. Mr. Penny enjoys the esteem of his neighbors and the affection of his friends, his estimable character being known through the locality. This is one of the truly representative families, in point of character and public respect, in Drumore township.

REUBEN K. SCHNADER, a prominent tobacco merchant of the city of Lancaster, as well as one of its keen, intelligent business men, was born Aug.

16, 1832, near what is now Terre Hill, East Earl township, this county, son of Jacob and Lydia (Clime) Schnader.

The Schnader family originated in this country with the great-great-grandfather of Reuben K., who emigrated, in the early part of the eighteenth century, to East Earl township, this county, settling on a farm which is still in possession of the Schnaders. It is not known where he is buried.

Jacob Schnader, the great-grandfather, was one of the organizers of the Centre Lutheran and Reformed Church, the site of which was the burial ground of one of his children. When Jacob settled four miles back from the Conestoga river, in the virgin forest, all the surrounding country was a wilderness, and he commenced to clear a farm with his axe. He worked with the energy of those men of iron, who seemed to know no fatigue, during his entire life, and at his death this sturdy pioneer was the owner of 1,000 acres of excellent land. Jacob Schnader was a most remarkable man, for he lived to his ninety-fifth year, being born in 1735 and died in 1829. He was married for the second time at the age of seventy-five.

Baltzer Schnader, son of Jacob and grandfather of Reuben K., was born in 1765, at the old homestead, where he resided until he married Barbara Kitzmiller, when he located in Franklin county, engaging in agricultural pursuits for a few years. He then returned to the township where he was born, became the owner of a fine farm of 270 acres, and erected a stone house for a place of residence. This was the first stone house built in the neighborhood; the roof was imported tiles, and the glass in the windows only four inches square.

Jacob Schnader, son of Baltzer and father of Reuben K., was born Dec. 25, 1800, and was one of a family of fourteen children. His death occurred Nov. 13, 1861, when he was sixty years, ten months and eighteen days old. He married Lydia Clime, who died Jan. 11, 1878, aged seventy-one years, nine months and twenty-three days. Both were interred in Terre Hill Cemetery. During his active life, the father was a farmer of Terre Hill, East Earl township, but retired before his death. Both he and his wife were consistent members of the Evangelical Church, and most worthy and excellent people. To them were born: Caroline, deceased, who married the late John Bowman of Mt. Joy; Sophia, deceased, wife of the late Jacob Flickinger; Davis, deceased; William, retired landowner of large means residing in Terre Hill, this county; Levi, a tinsmith of Adamstown; Reuben K.; and Lydia, who married Isaac R. Garman, an invalid retired from active business, residing at Reamstown, Pennsylvania.

The boyhood days of Reuben K. Schnader were similar to those of any hearty country boy, he working upon the farm in summer and attending subscription schools whenever opportunity offered. When he was nineteen, he went to Clearfield county to prospect for lime, and upon his return passed two years in his native township, in company with his father operating a dry goods, grocery and grain business at Terre Hill. His next removal was to Brecknock township, this county, where for eight years he devoted himself to farming. In 1869 he located in Lancaster, and began handling leaf tobacco, in which line he has built up a large and constantly increasing business, and he also deals in cigars. His goods are reliable and some of his special brands of cigars have a large sale. In his establishment, he gives employment to thirty men, and all modern methods are used in the conduct of his business.

On Dec. 27, 1855, Mr. Schnader was married at Mechanicsburg, Pa., to Eliza Killian, born July 8, 1837, near Mechanicsburg, daughter of Philip and Nancy (Cunningham) Killian, farmers of Lancaster county. Mrs. Schnader died Nov. 27, 1896, and was buried in Woodward Hill Cemetery, Lancaster. Three children were born of this union: Walter R., Albert P. and John J., the latter of whom died in infancy. Walter R. resides in the adjoining house to his father, with whom he is in partnership; on June 21, 1882, he married Clara, daughter of Philip Schum, of this city, and they have one child—Roscoe. Albert P. is unmarried and resides with his father, he, too, being in business with him. Since his sons were taken into partnership, Mr. Schnader has transferred the greater portion of the business to their shoulders, and has partially retired.

Fraternally Mr. Schnader is a member of Earl Lodge, No. 413, I. O. O. F., at New Holland, and Lodge No. 68, K. P., at Lancaster. In political matters he is a Prohibitionist, and was school director in his native township six years, and occupied the same office for three years in the city of Lancaster, giving the most complete satisfaction, his interest in educational affairs being deep and intelligent. For twenty-five years he has been Sunday School superintendent of the Second Evangelical Church, now known as Bethany United Evangelical Church, of which he is one of the most honored members, and he is justly looked up to as one of the leading and generous supporters of that congregation.

FILBERT SMITH, one of the best known and most popular freight and passenger conductors in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., was born at Bainbridge, Lancaster county, Jan. 3, 1851.

Mathias W. Smith, his father, was a well-known grocer and much respected citizen of Millersville, who for several years filled the office of coroner. He died Aug. 24, 1895, aged seventy-nine years, five months and twenty-eight days. He was an earnest Christian, and an earnest member of Bethel Church, as was also his wife, whose maiden name was Mary Rapp, who was born Jan. 8, 1818, and who died April 20, 1902, at the home of her daughter, Elizabeth, aged eighty-four years, three months and twelve days. By her marriage with Mr. Smith she became the mother of ten children: Simon and Eliza, who died in infancy; Mary (Mrs. Conrad Page);

Henry, who was drowned in the Pennsylvania canal; John, in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Filbert; Horace G., a railroad flagman living at Columbia; Sheaffer S., of York; Elizabeth, the wife of John Mathis, an iron molder of Royalton; and Edward, whose home is in Philadelphia.

The paternal grandfather of Filbert Smith was a farmer, and a life-long resident of Lancaster county. The family of Rapp were also Lancasterians, Mr. Smith's maternal grandfather, Jacob Rapp, being many years the sexton of the Lutheran Church at Elizabethtown.

On July 12, 1875, Filbert Smith was married to Mary C. Killinger, of Lancaster, the wedding taking place at Camden, N. J. Their union having been without issue, they adopted a daughter of his brother, John W. Smith, whose baptismal name was Pearl. On reaching womanhood she married D. Luther Black, a marble cutter of Columbia. Mrs. Smith was born June 10, 1858. Her father, John F. Killinger, was a hotel keeper of Harrisburg from 1875 until 1887, when he died, aged fifty-two years; he married Catherine Boot, who passed away in 1869, when a young woman of thirty-five years. Of their children Mrs. Smith was the third, the others being Anna, George, John, Edward, Emma, Salina, Sophia and Martha. Mrs. Smith, with her sisters Anna, Emma and Martha, are all that survive. Of these Anna is Mrs. Harry Reese, of Lancaster; Emma is the wife of Abel Barnett, of Philadelphia; and Martha also lives in Philadelphia. Sophia, deceased, was the wife of Harry Sanderson. After the death of Mrs. Smith's mother, her father married again, his second wife being Mary Peterman, who bore him one son, Valentine, since deceased.

Filbert Smith remained with his parents until his twenty-fourth year, and in 1875 came to Columbia. Long before that date he had become accustomed to hard work. When a boy of twelve he began driving along the towpath of the canal, and the next twelve years of his life were spent as a canal boatman. On reaching Columbia he found employment with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as a brakeman, and eight years later he was given a position as flagman. His next promotion was to the post of freight conductor, and in May, 1900, he was transferred to the company's passenger service. He is of genial disposition, sunny temperament and generous heart, is faithful to his friends and charitable toward all. He is a member of various social and benevolent organizations, and among them are the I. O. O. F., the Order of Red Men, Knights of the Mystic Shrine, and the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors. He is a Republican politically, and in religious belief an active member of the United Brethren Church.

WILLIAM MAXWELL. Few families in Sadsbury township enjoy a higher measure of esteem than the descendants of the late William Maxwell, who for many years was a prominent citizen of Lancaster county, a successful merchant, excellent farmer and one who was ever interested in the advancement of all educational and moral enterprises in his locality.

The late William Maxwell was born in Stewartsville, N. J., some six miles from the town of Eastman, June 4, 1791, and after a busy and useful life of sixty years, passed away in his home on the farm now occupied by his daughter, in Sadsbury township, Feb. 4, 1851. His parents were Robert and Elenora (Salone) Maxwell, born in Ireland, but with a mixture of Scotch blood, a combination acknowledged to make the most robust and intelligent race of the present time. These parents came in their early married life to America, and settled in the State of New Jersey, where they engaged in farming and where they reared a large family. These were: Margaret, deceased, married Maxwell Kennedy, of Salisbury township, and had a family of twelve children; Elizabeth, deceased, married James Kennedy, and also resided in Salisbury township; Ellen, deceased, married Thomas Barton, and resided in Belvidere, N. J.; Anna, deceased, married Adam Ramsey; Jane died unmarried; Mary died unmarried; John married Mary Maxwell; and William.

William Maxwell spent his early years on a farm, but he was liberally educated, passing through college with honors, becoming a thorough classical scholar. He then embarked in the mercantile business, in association with his brother-in-law, Adam Ramsey, this partnership continuing until 1817. Prior to his marriage, William Maxwell came to the farm which is still in possession of his children, the estate originally consisting of 260 acres, from which ninety acres were sold some fifteen years ago. Although he was left an orphan at the age of eight years, he became a useful member of society, was noted for his industry and close attention to business, living a particularly unobtrusive life. This, however, did not prevent an active interest in educational and religious matters, his liberality assisting in the advancement of many beneficial enterprises. Although not connected by membership, he was a constant attendant and generous supporter of the Presbyterian Church. His political interest was with the Republican party.

On Feb. 20, 1817, William Maxwell was married in Sadsbury township, to Hannah Templin, and the children born to this union were: Ellen E., who was born Aug. 12, 1818, now resides on the old homestead; Henrietta T., born Jan. 3, 1820, died June 6, 1902; Jane T., born Dec. 13, 1821, died March 31, 1902; Robert, born July 13, 1823, married Mary Rea, and died in 1899, having been an elder in the Presbyterian Church for forty-five years; Richard T., who married Maria Stoner, died from a wound received during service in the Civil war; Henry, born July 2, 1830, died in 1856, unmarried; Mary T., born April 23, 1828, died June 25, 1890; Edward, born May 27, 1832, died in infancy; Hanford, born April 5, 1835, died Feb. 4, 1854, all of these having come into the world in the old homestead which has for the survivors the pleasant associations of a life-time. The three daughters of William Maxwell were all ladies of education, intelligence and refinement. Their memories of their parents were among their most precious recollections. They were universally esteemed through the neighborhood, and all were leading and consistent members of the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. J. R. Maxwell, only son of the late Robert Maxwell, has practiced medicine in Parkesburg, Pa., since 1888.

JOHN LEVERGOOD, M. D. The medical fraternity of Lancaster has numbered among its members some very prominent physicians in the past who have conferred great honor upon their noble profession. For four decades prior to 1891 Dr. John Levergood was one of the leading physicians and surgeons of the city, and a man who was very prominent in its municipal and educational life. His surviving widow was the daughter of one of Lancaster's leading public men in past years, Judge Emanuel Schaeffer.

Dr. Levergood was born in Lower Windsor township, York Co., Pa., Feb. 13, 1826, and died in Lancaster July 5, 1891, the greensward of Woodward Hill Cemetery covering all that is mortal of him. He was the son of Jacob and Frances (Litzenberger) Levergood, the former of York, and the latter of Lancaster county, where Jacob died in 1850, his wife dying in Wrightsville, Pa., March 3, 1893, at the advanced age of ninety years. Jacob Levergood was an extensive farmer of York county and prominent in the public life of his community for many years. His children were: William, a retired school teacher of Philadelphia, Pa.; Jacob P., in the tobacco business, Wrightsville, Pa., where he is also justice of the peace; and John.

On Oct. 25, 1849, in Lancaster, Pa., Dr. Levergood was married to Margaret Louisa Schaeffer, who was born in Lancaster, Pa., a daughter of Hon. Emanuel and Elizabeth (Metzger) Schaeffer.

Emanuel Schaeffer was a native of this county, born Feb. 27, 1793. Having lost his father when young, his mother and her children became part of the household of his maternal grandfather, John Miller, an eminent citizen of Lancaster, once high sheriff of the county, and also a member of the State Senate. On March 14, 1781, John Miller was appointed by the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania, a commissioner of purchase for the county of Lancaster, and was active in the patriot cause; his descendants are, to-day, found in the McNeal, Schaeffer and Keller families in this county. At the age of fifteen, Emanuel Schaeffer was apprenticed by his grandfather to a harnessmaker, and after learning the trade, followed it until he had saved enough to go into business for himself. At the age of twenty-five he was married to Mary Metzger, who died five years later, and he then married on March 8, 1827, a sister of his first wife, Elizabeth Metzger, who was born Sept. 3, 1803, and died Nov. 6, 1856, leaving the following children: Mary E., deceased wife of John Herr; Margaret Louisa, Mrs. Levergood; Emeline R., deceased wife of Henry Brady McNeal; and Emanuel W., a retired saddler of Harrisburg, Pa. The third wife of Mr. Schaeffer was Mrs. Winebrenner, a native of Ohio, and who died, leaving no children, in the State of Illinois. In 1841, Judge Schaeffer was appointed by Gov. Porter, associate judge of the courts of Lancaster, which position he held for the following five years, when he was reappointed by Gov. Shunk, and discharged his duties with great fidelity for four years more. He was prominent in municipal affairs also, having served for thirteen years in the City Council, besides filling many other offices of trust. He was also connected with one of the financial institutions of the town, having been in 1841 elected president of the Lancaster Savings Institution, and which position he held for many years. In religious matters he was exceedingly zealous. From the organization of the Church of God in Lancaster, he was an elder, receiving his election annually, and he also acted as Superintendent of the Sabbath School, and was a delegate to the East Pennsylvania and General Elderships for a number of years. His death occurred Nov. 13, 1864, in Newburg, Cumberland Co., Pa., where he was at the time in attendance as a delegate to the Eldership of his church denomination.

The early life of John Levergood was passed under the strictest of Presbyterian training. His father sent him at the age of eleven to the York Academy, the principal of which at that time was an old school Presbyterian preacher. Here he attended for three years, and then was entered as a student at Strasburg Academy, whose principal was again an old school Presbyterian, in the person of the Rev. David McCarter. Here he studied for the following three years, and then took up the study of his profession with Dr. Washington L. Atlee, of Philadelphia, Pa., and with whose family he resided during the term of his reading. He passed the examination and was licensed to practice his profession in 1847, but continued with Dr. Atlee until the spring of 1848, at which time he began active practice for himself in the town of Wrightsville, Pa. It was here he married, and soon after removed to Lancaster, where he practiced with the exception of two years and three months spent in the army as surgeon, until the date of his death. Before going into the army, he served his country loyally in the hospital service, being on duty in the Lancaster County Hospital, and resigning from that position to accept a surgeon's commission in the regular army offered him by Gov. Curtin. He went to the front and served faithfully to the close of the war in alleviating the sufferings of the noble "boys in blue." Returning to his home, he was appointed by President Andrew Johnson examining pension surgeon of the Lancaster County District, in which position he served for two years.

Dr. I. evergood was a power in the municipal life of his community, and was found ever ready to sacrifice his valuable time and great executive ability in the furtherance of her progress. He was a member of the common council during the years 1880 and 1881, during which time he acted as president of the same. One of the measures which he carried through while a member of that body, and which resulted in a great financial saving to the city, was a joint resolution instructing the Finance committee to refund city bonds to the amount of $200,000 at a lower rate of interest. This measure was carried and resulted in saving to the city the sum of $4,000. He also took an active part in the movement to abolish the old volunteer fire department, and to substitute the present efficient paid department. The public work of Dr. Levergood was probably more efficient in the line of his duties as a school director than in any other line, he having been a member of the board of education almost continuously from 1859 until 1889. In this body he is remembered as a splendid parliamentarian, and he left a code of rules governing that body which is in use at the present time. His decisions as president of the board were always just, and very rarely appealed from or reversed. In social life he was a prominent member of the I. O. O. F., likewise a member of the Encampment. In political faith he adhered to the principles of the party of Jefferson, and was an active worker in the ranks of that organization. The history of Lancaster county could not be written without mention of the services of this eminent man.

HARRY S. STOLL, foreman of a section crew on the Pennsylvania railroad, has his home in Florin, where he is highly esteemed by all who know him. Mr. Stoll was born in Elizabethtown, Pa., June 14, 1849, a son of John and Barbara (Harry) Stoll, natives of Wurtemberg, Germany.

John Stoll came to this country when a young man and settled in Elizabethtown, whither his wife had come the previous year. For forty-six years he was a section foreman for the Pennsylvania company, and at his death had been on the retired list for eight years. He died Nov. 12, 1897, at the age of eighty years; and his wife Dec. 15, 1895, at the age of seventy-five years. They were both buried in the cemetery at Florin, having made that borough their home since 1854. Mr. Stoll was a Democrat, and both were members of the Methodist Church. The following were their children: Mary married George G. Lindsay, who is in business at Marietta, Pa.; Harry S.; John H. is a passenger and ticket agent at Mt. Joy; Frank is a "boss" section foreman at Landisville; and Reuben is deceased.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Stoll was John Stoll, of Germany, where he spent his life in farming. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Stoll also lived and died in Germany.

Harry S. Mrs. Lydia (Geistwhite) Stoll was born in Mt. Joy township, April 23, 1850, a daughter of John and Mary (Hoffman) Geistwhite, natives of Dauphin county, and Mt. Joy township, respectively. Her father came to Lancaster county, settling in the township of Mt. Joy where his life was spent, and where he died in March, 1846, at the age of forty-six years. His remains now rest in the cemetery at Florin. His wife was born in 1829, and is now living with her daughter in Florin. Both Mr. and Mrs. Geistwhite were members of the Methodist Church. They were parents of the following family: Lydia, became Mrs. Stoll; Henry, who died at the age of twenty-three years, was working on the railroad; and Elizabeth married Henry Musselman, a coach trimmer of Florin. Mrs. Stoll's paternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Winagle) Geistwhite, both natives of Dauphin county, but whose latter days were spent with their granddaughter, Mrs. Stoll. Her maternal grandparents were Jacob and Mary (Shaffer) Hoffman, both of Lancaster county, where he followed the occupation of a fence maker.

Harry S. Stoll spent his boyhood days on the farm, but for the past thirty-nine years has been in the employ of the railroad company. For five years he was assistant foreman, and for twenty-six years has been foreman of the section for the company. An alert and active man, he has an eye for every feature of the service, and is regarded as one of the most valuable on the line. Mr. Stoll is a member of the Methodist Church, and in his politics is a Democrat. Socially he is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and is highly esteemed in that fraternal order.

JOSEPH DICKINSON COATS POWNALL, a retired farmer of Christiana, was born in Solebury township, Bucks county, March 26, 1840, son of Hon. Moses and Susanna (Walker) Pownall.

Hon. Moses Pownall was born Aug. 5, 1815, and was a farmer and a merchant. From 1847 to 1849 he operated a store in Christiana, dealt in coal and lumber, and was interested in a planing mill in Columbia until 1851, when a fire destroyed about $4,000 worth of lumber for him. He was associated in the firm of Pownall, Dickinson, John L. Wright & Son. The year he was married he moved to Bucks county, where he farmed until 1845, going from there to Christiana to take up a mercantile business as noted above. In 1850 he was elected a representative in the General Assembly, and was re-elected for the succeeding term. While in Bucks county he held the position of justice of the peace and sustained a good reputation as a business man. His death occurred Feb. 12, 1854. His widow, whose maiden name was Susanna Walker, was born June 29, 1820, and died March 26, 1882. Both were buried in Old Friends Cemetery, Sadsbury township, they being members of the Society of Friends. They had only one child, Joseph D. C.

The paternal grandparents of Joseph D. C. Pownall were Joseph and Phoebe (Dickinson) Pownall, of whom the former was born Jan. 5, 1791, and died in 1870. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Pownall were Asahel and Sarah (Coats) Walker, being farming people of Sadsbury township.

Joseph D. C. Pownall was married Feb. 17, 1864, in Philadelphia, to Mary Haines Stubbs, by whom he had the following children: M. Mrs. Pownall was born in Fulton township, Lancaster county, and is the daughter of Vincent and Mary (Haines) Stubbs, the father being a native of Fulton township, and the mother of Cecil county, Md. Mr. Stubbs remained all his life on a farm in Fulton township, where he died April 8, 1875, at the age of seventy-eight years. From 1854 he had lived retired from active work. His wife, the mother of Mrs. Pownall, died Feb. 28, 1874, being seventy-one years and nine months old. They were buried in the Friends Meeting House Cemetery in Penn Hill, Little Britain township. Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs had the following children: Joseph died at the age of eighteen years; Rebecca is the widow of Steven Richards, and lives in Cecil county, Md.; Thomas is deceased; Elizabeth Oxford is the widow of Dr. A. Neel, a retired farmer of Christiana, Pa.; Hannah is the widow of Samuel Parry, and has her home in Oxford, Pa.; Sophia married Thomas Smedley, and is deceased; Priscilla is the widow of Clayton Harland, and has her home in Oxford, Pa.; and Mary H. is Mrs. Pownall.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Pownall were Vincent and Priscilla (Cooper) Stubbs, farming people of Fulton township. Her maternal grandparents were Joseph and Rebecca (Reynolds) Haines, farming people of Cecil county, Maryland.

Joseph D. C. Pownall spent the first seven years of his life on the farm, and was then brought by his parents into Christiana. When he was eleven years of age he began clerking in the store of Mr. Coats, in which his mother bought a half interest, and remained there from 1851 to 1859. While engaged in that store he sold the powder that was used in the Christiana Riot of 1859. Mr. Pownall was a student for a time in the State Normal School at Millersville. For a few years he was interested in a mercantile enterprise with T. B. Mercer, and for four years he was engaged in farming in Sadsbury township; but then returning to Christiana, where he became engaged in a general mercantile business, in which he continued until 1882. From 1880 to 1896 he was connected with brick and pottery manufacturing. With his family he belongs to the Society of Friends, and is counted among the solid and substantial citizens of the community. In his politics he is a Republican.

HENRY S. HERSHEY, general manager of the Chestnut Hill Ore Mines, in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, where his residence is also located, was born on the banks of the Big Chickies creek, in the same township, March 16, 1827, and is a son of Christian and Elizabeth (Strickler) Hershey, natives, respectively, of Donegal and Rapho townships.

Christian Hershey moved to Columbia, Pa., in 1846, and was there employed by a brother, Ephraim Hershey, in a mill. Christian Hershey became a man of considerable influence; was one of the board of directors in West Hempfield township, upon the adoption of the free school system; was county commissioner for Lancaster county prior to 1840; and was also tax collector for the borough of Columbia for several years. His death occurred in Columbia in 1883, when he was aged eighty-two years, and that of his wife, who was born in 1804, occurred in the same city in 1871. They were among the founders of the United Brethren Church in Columbia, and their remains were interred in Mount Bethel cemetery. In politics Mr. Hershey was a Republican. The children of Christian and Elizabeth Hershey were as follows: Henry S., who is mentioned at the opening of this sketch; Peter, who was killed on the Mississippi river in 1859, by the explosion of the boilers of the steamer "Princess;" Elizabeth, widow of Thomas P. Cooper, of Columbia, Pa.; Ephraim, deceased; David, an engineer in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, and residing in Philadelphia; Samuel, who was killed when six years old by a kick from a horse; Isaiah and Amos, who died young; and Wilhelmina, who died when an infant. The paternal grandparents of Henry S. Hershey were Peter and Anna (Brenneman) Hershey, the former of whom was a farmer; he fell from and was run over by his wagon and was killed.

Henry S. Hershey was born on a farm, and remained there with his parents until thirteen years old, when he went to Pittsburg and resided with an uncle and attended school until 1843. He returned to his native township in 1845, and followed milling until 1848, when he went West, passing the time in Illinois and Missouri until 1853. Returning home, he followed his trade until 1863, when he removed to Center county, Pa., and there followed lumbering for a year and a half. He next went to Columbia, where he held an official position with the Susquehanna Rolling Mill Company from 1864 until 1868, and then operated the Chickies Rolling Mill three years, after which he engaged in coach building until 1886.

In politics a Republican, Mr. Hershey served two terms as justice of the peace while engaged in coach-making, his last term expiring in 1896, and also served as borough councilman of Columbia several terms. In 1897 he was appointed to his present position, and in August, 1900, moved to his present home.

Henry S. Hershey was married, in Columbia, Oct. 4, 1855, to Miss Margaret S. Cox, and this marriage has been blessed with the following named children: Alice, wife of William B. Stephenson, a civil engineer in Tacoma, Wash.; Margaret, who died when fifteen years old; Mary E., widow of Frank H. Steacy, who was a chemist of prominence in Columbia; Anna B., who is unmarried, and lives with her father; Bertha, who died at the age of eight years; and Henry B., an electrical engineer, a graduate of the Lehigh University, and a resident of New York City.

Mrs. Margaret S. (Cox) Hershey was born in Lancaster, Pa., and died in Columbia in June, 1896, aged fifty-nine years; her remains were interred in Mount Bethel cemetery. She was a daughter of Thomas and Margaret Cox, of the State of Delaware, both of whom died in Columbia, Pa., where the father had been engaged in the coal business, and had also carried on the manufacture of stages and coaches in Lancaster.

Henry S. Hershey is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, and in politics is a Republican. He has traveled nearly all over the United States, and has made friends wherever he has been. He is still healthy and strong, and remarkably active for his age, and no man in the township commands more profound respect than that which is freely shown to him.

JACOB L. RANCK. Among the prominent farmer-citizens of Strasburg township, Lancaster county, is Jacob L. Ranck, who was born on his father's homestead, in Paradise township May 27, 1842, a son of Jacob and Susan (Leaman) Ranck, both of whom are deceased, the father in 1876, passing away at the age of sixty-five, the mother surviving until 1883.

Jacob Ranck, the father of Jacob L., was a son of Jacob and Annie (Stuck) Ranck and was reared in Paradise township, under the watchful and careful eye of his mother, who was early left a widow, and was a woman of very superior attainments and great force of character. When an older brother took charge of the farm, Jacob remained for eight years on the home farm, and then began farming operations for himself, conducting an estate consisting of 110 acres, where he lived for some two years previous to his marriage, his sisters keeping house for him. It was remarked of Jacob Ranck that he always had an object in view and steadily worked toward it, and in this way he succeeded where many men would have failed. His life was a quiet one, as he loved his home and was domestic in his tastes, devoted to the interests of his family and friends. At the time of his decease he had the satisfaction of knowing that he had done his full duty toward his children, giving each one a farm which he had earned for them. Both he and wife were members of the Old Mennonite Church and none were more truly worthy of the esteem of their neighbors. The five children born to these good people were: Benjamin, a resident of Paradise township; John K., who was a farmer and a minister; Jacob L.; Annie, deceased, who was the wife of Bishop Abraham B. Herr, of New Danville; and Amos L., who resides on the old homestead, in Paradise township.

Jacob L. Ranck was reared on the old farm and was educated in the public schools, growing to sturdy manhood, alternating school with work on the farm. At the age of twenty-four he began operations on his own account on the farm his father had purchased for him, in Strasburg township, located about one mile northeast of Strasburg. When Jacob L. took charge of the place, it was sadly in need of improvement, as it had been much neglected, but in a very short time things put on a quite different appearance and it now ranks with the best in the county. For some thirty-two years he resided on this place, becoming one of the leading farmers and, following the example of his father, has provided farms in Strasburg township, for his three children. A stockholder and director in the Strasburg National Bank, he is reckoned one of the solid and substantial men of the county, and for ten years has been a member of the school board, always taking a deep interest in educational matters. In 1898 he erected a fine modern residence near Strasburg—one of the best houses in the neighborhood.

On Oct. 31, 1865, Jacob L. Ranck was married to Hettie Herr, daughter of Rev. Amos and Elizabeth (Rohrer) Herr, born in West Lampeter township, June 11, 1844, and the children born of this union were: a son that died in infancy; Elizabeth, who died at the age of twelve; Amanda, who died at the age of ten; Amos, who died at the age of twenty months; Reuben, who died at the age of thirteen months; Milton H., born June 2, 1877, a tobacco packer in Strasburg, who lives at home; Anna N., born June 28, 1880, living at home; and S. Etta, born April 5, 1883. The family are all members of the Old Mennonite Church, with which their ancestors and connections have been so closely allied, and are among the most esteemed of the congregation in Strasburg, where Mr. Ranck is one of the trustees.

MAHLON B. KENT, whose long and creditable career as a hardware merchant at Christiana abundantly deserves the well earned rest he is now taking, was born in West Fallowfield, Chester Co.,

Pa., Nov. 14, 1841, son of Daniel and Sarah (Brosius) Kent, natives of East and West Fallowfield townships, respectively.

Daniel Kent, who was a farmer, died in 1881, at the age of seventy-nine, proving himself a thoroughly competent and successful business man, and skilled in agricultural industry. He married Sarah Brosius, daughter of Henry and Mary (Roberts) Brosius, farming people of Chester county. She survived until 1894, dying at the age of eighty-six. They were members of the Religious Society of Friends. Their children were as follows: Mary B., who married, first, Caleb M. Brosius, second, Harry Perry, and third, Elihu M. Clark, is now deceased; Anna E., deceased, married Isaac D. Shoemaker; Agnes J., deceased, married J. Calvin Bickling; Henry B. married Jane W. Bailey, of Cambridge, Chester county; Ruthama married H. K. Cooper, of Chester county; William L. G. married, first, Elizabeth Shoemaker, and second, Anna E. Lofland; Mahlon B.; and Thomas E. and Sally A. both died young.

The paternal grandparents of Mahlon B. Kent were Daniel, Sr., and Esther (Hawley) Kent. Daniel Kent, Sr., was born in Limerick, Ireland, and came to this country in his twentieth year, on the brigantine "Asia." He bound himself by indenture, dated May 21, 1785, in the sum of £10, 10s. to the master, John Johnson, to pay for his passage. On his arrival in Philadelphia the indenture was signed over to Joseph Hawley in consideration of £14, 10s. paid by him. The young emigrant faithfully served his time, and afterward married Esther Hawley, a daughter of his benefactor. He engaged in farming in Chester county, though by trade a cutler, and attained considerable prominence in his new home, serving as justice of the peace for many years.

Mahlon B. Kent was twice married. In 1867, in Philadelphia, he wedded Maranda Brosius, who became the mother of one child, Wilfred M., who died at the age of four months and twenty days. Mrs. Kent was born in Colerain township, Lancaster county, in February, 1842, and died June 12, 1872. She was a sister of the Hon. Marriott Brosius, whose sketch appears elsewhere. On Nov. 14, 1874, in Chester county, Mr. Kent married for his second wife Anna Roberts Walton, who was born in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, in 1835, a daughter of Isaac and Mary (Walton) Walton, the former a successful farmer of that locality.

Mahlon B. Kent was reared on a farm, and there he remained until 1873. The following year he secured a position as Indian Agent, and was stationed at the government reservation in Richardson county, Neb. For seven years he well and faithfully fulfilled the arduous duties of this place, when he engaged in the hardware business at White Cloud, Kans., continuing same for five years. Following his stay at White Cloud, he was in the coal and lumber business for two years at Hockessin, Del., but this business did not prove congenial, and he came to Christiana in 1893, to find a home, which he has maintained to the present time. For six years Mr. Kent has held a position in the borough council, for four years acting as president of that body. In religion he is a member of the Friends' Association, and in politics he is a Republican.

JOHN E. HERSHEY, a representative farmer in Lancaster city, belongs to one of the most highly respected agricultural families of this county.

John Hershey, his grandfather, lived and died near Bareville, this county, where his farm was one of the best cultivated and most productive. Through life a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church, he lived a quiet, unostentatious life, devoted to his work, his religious duties and his family. His children were: Eliza, deceased, who was the wife of Everheart Weaver; Maria, who was the wife of John Landis; Annie, who was the wife of Peter Brown; Lydia, who was the wife of Samuel Groff; Andrew, who was a farmer near Bareville; Samuel, the father of John E.; and Jacob, who was a farmer and miller, near Leaman, this county.

Samuel Hershey was born on the old homestead, about 1813, and was devoted to the tillage of the soil during his long and useful life, which closed in 1873. In politics he was a Republican and held the office of school director a number of years. His religious connection was with the Old Mennonite Church. He was thrice married. His first wife, Nancy Groff, died leaving no children. By his second wife, Elizabeth Eby, five children were born, of whom the eldest died in infancy; Eby (deceased) was a farmer of Strasburg township; John E. is our subject; Mary is unmarried; and Milton E. is a farmer of Lancaster township. After the death of his second wife, Mr. Hershey was married to Fanny Lintner, who still survives. The children of this union are: Lintner, a farmer, residing with his mother; Aldus, a farmer of Lancaster township; Willis, of Lancaster township; and Ella, who resides at home.

John E. Hershey was born on the home farm, adjoining the place where he now resides, in February, 1846. His education was acquired in the public schools, and he remained with his parents until he was twenty-three years of age, beginning then his own career by taking charge of a farm adjoining, upon which he remained for three years, when he moved to his present location. Here Mr. Hershey has expended time, energy and labor, the result being one of the best eighty-acre tracts in this locality. Its value is enhanced on account of its location being partly within the city limits of Lancaster. This land originally belonged to his father, and was purchased from the latter's estate. Mr. Hershey has most comfortable and appropriate buildings, both for residence and for dairying, having been in the latter business for thirty-two years. During the past fifteen years he has been fattening horses for New York dealers.

Mr. Hershey was married to Annie Bausman, and six children were born to this union: Mary, at home; Clayton, who died at the age of five years; Albert, who died at the age of three years; Edith, at home; Laura, who died at the age of nine years; and Florence, who died at the age of seven years. Mr. Hershey is one of the most respected and substantial residents of the township, is well known through the city of Lancaster, and is a thoroughly representative citizen. His political support is given to the Republican party.

JACOB ZERCHER, a general farmer and a man of much character and standing in Mt. Joy, was born in Pequea township, Lancaster county, Dec. 25, 1840, a son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Johnson) Zercher, of Lancaster county. His grandparents were also natives and residents of Lancaster county.

Andrew Zercher died in Conestoga township in 1889 at the age of seventy-eight years, and was buried in the cemetery connected with the Pequea Meeting House, in the township of that name. In his younger days he was a wagon maker, and from 1845 to 1866 he was engaged in farming. His last years were spent in retirement. Mrs. Elizabeth Zercher, who is still living in Conestoga township, was born in February, 1809. They were the parents of the following children: John J., who died at the age of thirty-two years; Benjamin, who died at the age of eighteen years; Jacob; and Elizabeth, who married Christ. B. Miller, a farmer of Conestoga.

Jacob Zercher was married in November, 1866, in West Hempfield township, to Lizzie S. Hostetter, and born to this union were: Ezra H., a farmer in East Donegal, who married Lizzie Hertzler; Lizzie, the wife of Jacob N. Hershey, who is in the creamery business in East Berlin, Pa.; Mary, married to Ezra H. Engle, a farmer; Fanny, who married Abigner Martin, a farmer of West Donegal; Andrew, at home; Anna, who died young; Naomi, who is at home unmarried; Jacob, deceased, twin to Naomi; and Martha and Ira J., at home.

Mrs. Lizzie (Hostetter) Zercher was born in West Hempfield township March 15, 1844, daughter of Rev. Jacob and Anna (Stauffer) Hostetter, natives of West Hempfield and Donegal townships, both of whom died in West Hempfield. Her father was a farmer and died in December, 1888, at the age of ninety years; her mother died the same year at the age of eighty-two years. Both were members of the River Brethren Church, and were buried in the Cross Roads Church Cemetery in Donegal township. The father was a bishop in his church for many years, and was a consecrated and devoted Christian. The following children were born to them: Abraham, a retired farmer in Rapho township; Catherine, who married Martin Musser, a retired farmer in West Hempfield; Jacob, now a retired farmer in West Hempfield; Martha, who married Michael Grove, a retired farmer in West Hempfield; Christian, a retired farmer living on the old homestead in the township of Rapho; Mary, deceased wife of Eli Lindemuth; Anna, who is the widow of Abraham Engle, and is living in Donegal township; Susan, who married Benjamin Zeigler, a farmer in Providence, Lancaster county; and Lizzie.

Jacob Zercher remained with his parents until 1867, when he began farming for himself, leasing land of his father, paying his rent with a share of the produce. This he continued for six years, when he took charge of his present farm of two hundred acres. Here he has done well, both in general farming, and in the specialties of horse and cattle breeding to which he gives close attention. Mr. Zercher is a member of the Church of the River Brethren, and is regarded as one of the solid and reliable members of that communion. An energetic and progressive citizen, he has won a good place in life, and holds the confidence and respect of the community to a marked degree.

AMOS K. HERR, a retired farmer, and one of the well-known and highly respected citizens of Lancaster, was born Nov. 15, 1839, a son of John and Fanny (Greider) Herr, the former a native of Strasburg township, and the latter of West Lampeter township, both of this county.

John Herr was engaged in farming until 1889, when he retired, removing to Lancaster, and occupied himself with cultivating some fifteen acres, all of which land was in excellent condition. His death occurred Oct. 11, 1894, when he was eighty-six years, ten months and twenty-two days old, and his wife died Aug. 26, 1878, aged seventy-eight years, one month and fourteen days. Both are buried in Longnecker Cemetery, and they were prominent in the Mennonite Church. The family born to them was as follows: Christian, who died Dec. 6, 1855, aged twenty-two years, one month and four days; Abraham K., who died Nov. 7, 1896, aged sixty-one years, seven months and twenty-one days; Anna, who died Feb. 21, 1886, aged forty-eight years and seven months, and who was the wife of Franklin Bowman; Amos K.; Fanny, who married George L. Buckwalder, a retired farmer of E. Lampeter township; and Susan, who married B. F. Herr, of Millersville, Pa., a prominent merchant and ex-physician. The paternal grandfather was Martin Herr, a prominent farmer of Lancaster county; he married Susannah Buckwalder.

The boyhood days of Amos K. Herr were spent upon a farm, and when he attained manhood's estate, he engaged in farming for himself, and also manufactured bricks at Strasburg, Pa., in 1876, becoming a partner of Jacob Lahr in the latter calling. This partnership continued seven years, when it was dissolved and for five years Mr. Herr continued the manufacture alone, then sold his interests, and in 1891 retired to Lancaster, where he has since resided, enjoying the fruits of his years of labor.

On Feb. 2, 1879, in Lancaster, Mr. Herr was married to Elizabeth Kohr, born Nov. 17, 1839, in Conestoga township, daughter of Bishop John Kohr, Sr., of Manheim township. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Herr, John K., a machinist, who resides at home. For forty years Mr. Herr has been a member of the New Mennonite Church, and is a man of sterling integrity and uprightness of purpose, who enjoys the good will and confidence of the community in which he makes his home.

SAMUEL S. HIGH (deceased) belonged to that class of business men who leave an impress upon their day and generation, through the integrity of their dealings and the uprightness of their lives. At his death the city of Lancaster parted with one of her most useful and progressive citizens. Mr. High belonged to Lancaster county by parentage and birth, the latter taking place Nov. 28, 1839, in East Earl township. His parents were Jacob and Susan (Hoffman) High.

The early rearing of Mr. High was on a farm, and his education was obtained in the country schools. While still a young man he was engaged in storekeeping with his brother, ex-Sheriff John H. High, at Spring Grove, for a period of eight years. Moving then to Ephrata he embarked in a mercantile business, continuing at this point until 1872, when he came to Lancaster. Here Mr. High entered into a partnership with Isaac Stirk, the firm name being, Stirk & High, and the business was located on the present site of the large new store of Watt & Shand. This was called China Hall, and a very large and prosperous business was carried on here, the firm gaining friends and patrons for many miles in the vicinity of Lancaster. In 1875 Mr. Stirk retired and Mr. High took into partnership J. Charles Martin, his step-son, and the firm style was changed to High & Martin, and the business was located at No. 15 East King street.

The first marriage of Mr. High was to Harriet Geist, a native of Earl township, who died without issue. His second marriage was to Mrs. Catherine (Kinzer) Martin. By her first husband, John J. Martin, Mrs. High has two children, viz.: Laura, who married Landis Levan, a miller, in Lancaster township, and they have five children; and J. Charles, a retired merchant of Lancaster, who has one child. Mrs. High was born in East Earl township, daughter of Amos S. and Maria L. (Himes) Kinzer, of Lancaster. Mr. Martin was a farmer in East Earl township, where he died in 1852, aged twenty-seven years, and was buried in the Weaverland cemetery in that township.

Mr. High was a thorough and practical business man and was relied upon for his excellent judgment and keen insight. His prosperity was won through industry and honorable methods, and when he died, the community lost a valued citizen. His progressive character was shown in his connection with some of the leading enterprises of the city. He was interested in the Electric Lighting Co. and the Street Railway Co., and also the Steam Radiator

Co., of Lancaster, and was secretary of the Poplar Bluffs Lumber & Mfg. Co., of Missouri. Although he had so many business interests, he never forgot his religious duties and was an active worker in St. John's Lutheran Church, trustee in the same, and was chairman of the building committee. At various times he was trustee and elder, and for many years, superintendent of the Sunday-school. He was a man who lived up to his principles and thus won the sincere esteem of all who knew him.

ABRAHAM E. STAUFFER, a general farmer and highly respected resident of Silver Spring, in West Hempfield township, was born in Chickies, that township, Sept. 11, 1833, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Eshleman) Stauffer, both of whom lived and died in West Hempfield township.

Henry Stauffer was a farmer by vocation and was quite a prominent and influential citizen, and for some years served his fellow townsmen as school director and supervisor. His death occurred in 1890, when eighty-three years old; that of his first wife had taken place much earlier—in 1849, when forty-two years of age. To the marriage of Henry and Elizabeth (Eshleman) Stauffer were born the following named children: Anna, widow of Jacob Risser, of Maytown; Hettie, wife of Jacob Bowers, of Downersville; Elizabeth, who died young; Abraham E.; Jacob, a farmer in West Hempfield township; Barbara, deceased wife of Michael Schindle; Mary, the wife of John Fridy, a farmer of West Hempfield township; and Miss Susannah, deceased. Some time after the demise of his first wife, Henry Stauffer married Barbara Harnish, and to this union were born two children, both of whom died young. The paternal grandparents of Abraham E. Stauffer were natives of Lancaster county, and were farming people, and the same may be stated of the maternal grandparents.

Abraham E. Stauffer assisted on the home farm until he had attained his majority, then rented the home place for three years, and carried on agriculture on his own account. At the termination of this period, Henry Stauffer deeded the farm to his son Abraham, on the sole condition that the latter was to pay the former a limited sum annually during life. Two years later Abraham traded the old place for his present farm of forty-seven acres.

In October, 1854, Abraham E. Stauffer was joined in matrimony at Black Horse, this county, with Miss Adaline B. Hoffman, who was born in East Hempfield township in October, 1836, a daughter of John and Catherine (Ballmer) Hoffman, of Lancaster county. To this marriage have been born five children, viz.: Mary A., who married Andrew G. Shirk, a railroad flagman in Columbia, and has one daughter, Adaline S.; Miama H., who married Adam D. Heidlauf, of West Hempfield, and has a son, Phares S.; Hiram H., of Manor township, who married Frances Garber, and has two children, Clarence G. and Anna May; Catharine H., who married Aram Lenhard, a farmer of West Hempfield, and has a daughter Saloma S.; and Milton H., unmarried, and living at home.

Abraham E. Stauffer has ever been a hard-working farmer and an upright man, whose course through life has been of that even tenor as to gain the respect unsought, of the entire community in which he has passed so many years of his useful life. In politics he is a Republican.

MARIS B. WEAVER. Among the energetic and successful business men, long and well-known in Lampeter, is Maris B. Weaver, a member of the old established family of that name, of whom this record has had much to say.

Maris B. Weaver was born in Conestoga township, Jan. 8, 1848, son of Simon R., and a grandson of Samuel Weaver, both old residents of the county.

Simon R. Weaver was born on the farm near Lampeter, which is now the property of Henry Shaub, and there he was reared and learned the blacksmith trade, which he followed some ten years, his place of business being at Conestoga Center, but he later engaged in farming for a number of years, returning to his trade, previous to his decease, which occurred at the age of forty-six. He married Hettie Bachman, daughter of John Bachman, of Pequea township, and to them were born: Maris B.; Annie, who married T. L. Stafford, of Colerain township; John B., a resident of Gordonville; Emma (deceased), who married William Sterling, a resident of Gap; Charles, of Leacock township; S. W., of Paradise township; Effie, who married Samuel Harting, of Germantown, Pa.; Frank B., of Paradise township; and Jennie, who married Philip Hottenstein, of Lancaster.

Maris B. Weaver was the oldest of the children and he was reared on the farm. After he had received his education in the public schools of his district, he entered his father's shop and soon became a very capable workman. When twenty-six years old, he embarked in the business for himself, opening a shop at Stonersville, where he remained for four years, purchasing his present excellent location in 1878, where he has, by close attention to business and a complete understanding of the farrier trade, built up a large and increasing business and has gained the confidence of the public. In 1899 he purchased a farm of forty-two acres, in West Lampeter township, where he is making valuable improvements, and he is also the owner of other real estate, consisting of a seven-acre tract at Lampeter, and his residence property. His rank is with the substantial men of the locality, and he is one of the stockholders of the People's Bank, at Lancaster City.

Being a representative Republican, he has taken an active interest in the public affairs of his district, and he has been called upon to serve as a delegate to the State conventions. In 1897 he was honored by the appointment as prison superintendent of Lancaster county, and served as president of the Prison Board in 1899, and has also filled all the local offices most efficiently.

Maris B. Weaver was married, in 1874, to Hettie A. Zittle, a daughter of Elijah Zittle, of West Lampeter township, and three children have been born of this union: Effie B., who remains at home; A. Mylin, a blacksmith by trade; and Esther, also at home. This family possesses the respect and esteem of the community and well represents the old and honored families from which it has descended.

HENRY B. HAINES. Among the prosperous business men of Maytown, who, by energy and ability, have done much to place this locality favorably before the public, is Henry B. Haines, the well-known cigar manufacturer.

Mr. Haines comes of worthy ancestry. His great-grandfather, Henry Haines, was born near Columbia, Pa., Dec. 3, 1759, and at an early age was apprenticed to a tailor, according to the custom of the times, his desultory education being acquired at a German night school. His eighteenth birthday came in a trying period of our country's history, and at that time he was one of the brave young men who came forward to help to uphold the banner of his country. Song and story have told the world the tale of the brave deeds done by the youth of the land during the Revolution, and in some of the most stirring events Henry Haines bore well his part. On account of his reliability he was one of the guards chosen to assist in the removal of the Hessian prisoners to Lancaster county, after the battle of Trenton, and later he was attached to Col. Bole's command, in the expedition up the Susquehanna, against the Indians. After the close of the war, Henry Haines settled down in the village of Maytown, where he became a prominent man. An ardent upholder of Democratic principles, he took a leading part in the politics of the day, and in 1810 and 1811 was a member of the General Assembly, being re-elected in 1825, and again in 1828, but failing health prevented any more public service. In this connection it is interesting to record that he was approached by members of the Anti-Masonic party, which was then agitating public matters in the country, with a proposition to become their Senatorial candidate, on account of his known popularity. This suggestion was met with scorn and contempt by the stern old Jeffersonian, his Democracy being so pronounced that at the age of eighty-three, feeble and blind, he still insisted upon casting his vote in favor of the party in whose principles he had so much faith. In 1797 he had been appointed a justice of the peace, and some time afterward was commissioned a captain of militia, by Gov. Simon Snyder. His death took place Feb. 1, 1842, and he left a mark upon his day and generation. Henry Haines' wife also bore the name of Haines, and to this union were born: Henry, Jr.; Thomas; Anthony; Catherine, who married Reuben Welschance; Elizabeth, who married George Terry; Charlotte, who married Philip Shaffner; and Rosetta, who married Michael Miller.

Major Henry Haines, Jr., grandfather of our subject, married for his first wife, Elizabeth Barr, and their children were as follows: Ann, who married A. C. Reynolds, of Elmira, N. Y.; and Elizabeth, who died in infancy. His second marriage was to Anna Barr, a sister of his first wife. Their children were, Henry A., and George B. For his third wife Major Haines married Mrs. Jacob Barr, and to this marriage there were no children.

Capt. Henry A. Haines was born Nov. 8, 1835, and died in Maytown April 7, 1896, at the age of sixty, his remains being reverently interred in the Union Cemetery of Maytown. In his death Lancaster county lost a popular veteran and one of its most prominent citizens. Early in life Capt. Haines had followed the trade of a shoemaker but in the course of time became manager of a large tobacco farm belonging to Hon. Simon Cameron. Having inherited from his father a talent and desire for public life he naturally entered therein, and for many years was more or less in the service of the public. For some time he was captain of the militia company known as the Maytown Fencibles, and at the outbreak of the Civil war he offered the service of himself and his company to the government. Their offer was accepted, and as Co. A, they were assigned to the 10th P. V. I. for the term of three months, Capt. Haines being the company's commanding officer. At the expiration of the three months for which they had enlisted, the company was mustered out of service, and Capt. Haines at once raised a company which became Co. B, 45th P. V. I. under Col. Welsh, which was raised in Lancaster and adjoining counties, and in which Capt. Haines was the ranking captain. When the battle of Antietam was fought, Capt. Haines, who was then in recruiting service, was commissioned major of the regiment, he being entitled to the vacant position as he was then ranking captain. The General commanding the brigade, with whom the Captain had had some differences, refused to indorse the appointment, and Capt. Haines at once resigned his commission as captain, although he was urged by men of prominence not to do so. Soon afterward he was made captain of Co. C, 184th P. V. I., and served with that regiment until his discharge at Annapolis, Md., in 1865. He took part in the battles of Fredericksburg and Cold Harbor, and was taken prisoner at Petersburg and was in rebel prisons eleven months. Until the Gubernatorial campaign in which Gen. Beaver was defeated for Governor of Pennsylvania, Capt. Haines was a Democrat. In that campaign the Captain took an active part in the interest of his beloved commander, and from that time until the close of his active life he was an ardent Republican, as a man of his positive character would naturally be. Under Collector A. J. Kauffmann he served as storekeeper and gauger in the revenue service. During the administration of Gen. Arthur, his services to his party were recognized, and he was made postmaster of Maytown, holding the position until the election of Grover Cleveland in 1892 made a change in the office in favor of a Democrat. Fraternally the Captain was connected with Lieut. William A. Childs Post, No. 226, G. A. R., Department of Pennsylvania, and located in Marietta.

On Oct. 13, 1857, in Elizabethtown, Capt. Haines was married by Rev. Latzel, to Catherine A. Brown, who was born in Maytown, May 5, 1840. To this union were born: Anna L., who married Rev. J. F. Mackley, a minister of the Reformed Church, of Fairfield, Adams Co., Pa.; and Henry B., the subject of this sketch. Catherine A. (Brown) Haines was a daughter of John and Catherine (Murray) Brown, of Chester county, and of Maytown, respectively. John Brown had come to Maytown at an early day, in pursuit of his trades of wheelwright and chairmaker, remaining here until his death in 1852, at the age of sixty-one, his wife surviving until 1875, and dying at the age of sixty-nine. Both were interred in the Lutheran cemetery at Maytown; they had been devout church members, he of the Lutheran, she of the Reformed Church. Their children were Charles, Elizabeth and William, all three deceased; Fanny, of Stockton, Cal.; Henry, a shoe merchant of West Milton, Ohio; Rebecca, the widow of Abraham Geltmacker, of Maytown; John, who died in Andersonville prison, during the Civil war; George, a soldier, of Parkersburg, Va.; Mary, deceased; and the youngest, Catherine A., Mrs. Haines, who now resides in Maytown.

Henry B. Haines was born in Maytown, May 3, 1867, and was educated in the public schools. He assisted his father in the management of the tobacco farm until the age of fifteen, when he received an appointment as assistant express messenger, between Philadelphia and Pottsville, retaining this run for five months; at the end of this time, through the kindness of Gen. Cameron, he was appointed to a position in the Electric Light department of the Philadelphia postoffice, where he remained for eight years, leaving there as superintendent. At this time Mr. Haines is manufacturing cigars in Maytown, his output of cigars annually amounting to great numbers.

On Nov. 22, 1893, Henry B. Haines and Miriam L. Longenecker, a daughter of Christian Longenecker, of Maytown, were united in marriage, and to this union has been born one son, Henry L. Socially Mr. Haines is connected with the A. O. U. M. and the Sons of Veterans, is an active member of the Republican party, and is a valued and consistent member of the Reformed Church.

COL. WILLIAM COLEMAN HENDERSON. This gallant veteran of the Civil war, and retired farmer with his residence in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, on the old Lancaster & Philadelphia Road near White Horse, was born in Salisbury township June 22, 1827, a son of Thomas Gilfillan and Mary Ann (Jacobs) Henderson, of Salisbury and Colebrook Furnace, respectively, and the parents of nine children, namely: James S., who died in infancy; Maj. Samuel J., a retired farmer and ex-justice of the peace; Col. William C.; Mary S., who died when twelve years old; Anna W., unmarried and living with Col. William C.; James, deceased; Thomas G., who died aged twenty; and Rachel and Eliza, who died young.

Thomas Gilfillan Henderson, the father of this family, was extensively engaged in farming and was familiarly known as "King Tommy," from his owning an immense amount of land. He was a justice of the peace, and he died honored and esteemed in 1870, at the advanced age of eighty-two years; his wife was called away in 1863, and their remains were buried in St. John's Episcopal Churchyard at Compass, Chester county.

Col. William C. Henderson remained with his parents until seventeen years of age, when he went to New York City and clerked four years, when, on account of impaired health he returned to his home and farmed until 1860, when he sold his property and went to Whiteside county, Ill., where he was engaged in farming when the Civil war broke out. He at once offered himself in the defense of the integrity of his country's flag, enlisting in Co. B, 13th Ill. V. I., having himself raised the company; he was appointed quartermaster by Gov. Richard Yates, served at the front for three years, and bore a brave and gallant part throughout, and was finally honorably discharged for disability, his avoirdupois having been reduced from 235 at the time of enlistment to 104 at the date of his discharge at Vicksburg—rheumatism and diarrhoea having wasted his frame.

Prior to his enlistment Col. Henderson had been twice married: first, in 1852, at Fairfield, Conn., to Emma A. Phelps, who bore him one child, George P., now in the fruit business at Philadelphia, but residing at Parkesburg, Pa., and married to Lucy Essick. Mrs. Emma (Phelps) Henderson was born in Fairfield, Conn., a daughter of George A. and Eliza (Ayers) Phelps, and died in New York, in 1855, at the age of twenty-four years, her remains being sent to Fairfield for interment. The second marriage of Col. Henderson took place Oct. 17, 1856, in Chester county, Pa., to Jane B. Jacobs, and to this union has been born one son, Richard J., now a machinist in Newark, N. J., and who first married Anna Cross, and second Celestia Shaffer. Mrs. Jane B. (Jacobs) Henderson was born in Chester county, Pa., a daughter of Joseph B. and Anna (Bowen) Jacobs, of the same county, and died in Bellefonte, Pa., while on a visit in 1867, when thirty-seven years old.

To resume the record of Col. Henderson's life career from the point where the above digression was made: on his discharge from the army in 1864 he returned to Whiteside county, Ill., with the intention of recuperating his health, but found that his wife's health had become impaired; he therefore sold his farm and returned to Pennsylvania and lived in retirement in Chester county until the death of his second wife (in 1867), when he returned to the old homestead, where he remained until 1871, when he went to Colorado Springs, El Paso Co., Colo., and dealt in horses, etc., for five years. Col. Henderson then came back to the old homestead in Salisbury township, lived there a few years, when he retired to his present farm.

In politics Col. Henderson is a Republican, and for twenty-five years served as township auditor off and on, finally declining further service; in religion he is an Episcopalian. His military title was not acquired through his service in the army, but from his having been appointed an aide-de-camp on the staff of Gov. William F. Johnson in 1852, on which he served his full time. Fraternally he is a Master Mason, and a member of Thompson Lodge, No. 340, and also a member of Post No. 31, G. A. R., Westchester.

Col. Henderson, a brother, a sister and a granddaughter all reside together in domestic felicity. The Colonel is still compelled to use crutches on account of rheumatism contracted while in the army.

Thomas Henderson, great-great-grandfather of the Colonel, came from the north of Ireland to Lancaster county, Pa., in 1727, and settled in Salisbury township on the old Lancaster & Philadelphia Road, seventeen miles from Lancaster, forty-nine miles from Philadelphia, one-eighth of a mile from White Horse, and there engaged in farming and mercantile business, besides conducting a hotel. He had a family of nine children, to-wit: Matthew (born in 1733), Archibald, William, Thomas, Mary (who married John Skiles), Rebecca (who married John Griffith), Catherine (who wedded Robert Darlington), Margaret (wife of John Graham), and John.

The paternal grandparents of the Colonel, James and Mary (Skidmore) Henderson, were natives, respectively, of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Pa., and Long Island, N. Y. The grandfather was a prominent merchant and farmer, and died in 1822, at the age of sixty-six, but the grandmother was comparatively young at her death. They were members of the Episcopal Church and were interred in St. John's cemetery. They were the parents of three children, viz.: Thomas G., father of the Colonel; Rachel, who was married to Richard Suydam, of New York; and Abigail, who died young. The paternal great-grandparents, Matthew and Rachel (Clemson) Henderson, were natives of Lancaster county, and of whom the great-grandfather was a farmer and hotel keeper, being landlord of the "Three Crowns" Hotel (England, Ireland and Scotland), in Salisbury township. He was also a wealthy landowner. He had born to him ten children in the following order: James (grandfather of the Colonel), Sept. 12, 1756; Sarah H., Jan. 19, 1758; Thomas, Aug. 30, 1759; Mary, Dec. 17, 1761; Clemson, March 8, 1766; Archibald, Jan. 31, 1767; Matthew, Sept. 10, 1768; John, July 4, 1770; Barton, Dec. 4, 1775; and Mary Ann, July 17, 1778. Of these children, James served in the war for American independence on the British side, as he had had six fine horses stolen by the Colonial troops; he fought all through the conflict, and for his services was granted land in Nova Scotia by the British government, but after a short residence there he settled on the Col. Atley farm, which he purchased in Salisbury township, Lancaster county.

MAJ. SAMUEL JACOB HENDERSON, brother of Col. William C. Henderson, was born in Salisbury township, Nov. 8, 1824, and is now living retired. He was formerly a farmer and a justice of the peace. He never married, but lived with his parents until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he was one of the first to enlist in Co. F, 25th P. V. I., in the ninety-day service, having assisted in raising the company. He was appointed on Gen. B. A. Shaffer's staff as major and quartermaster, and in time of peace has served in various civic offices for the past fifty years. In 1871 he went to Colorado and was engaged in prospecting for gold until 1875, when he returned to his home, a panic having occurred. He is a member of the Episcopal church, and politically is a Republican, and both brothers are greatly respected as among the most substantial and most public spirited citizens of Salisbury township.

AMOS RUTTER, who died Aug. 15, 1902, was a prominent coal and grain dealer in New Holland, where he also had an extensive feed and salt business. He was born in Leacock township, this county, May 24, 1830, son of Amos (Sr.) and Esther (Royer) Rutter.

The first representative of the Rutter family in Lancaster county of whom anything definite is known was Conrad Rutter, who left Rhenish Prussia in 1682, going to England to escape the French war, and came to America the following year, making his home in Philadelphia. He was one of a colony of thirteen families who under the leadership of Francis Danielson Pastorius took up the land which is now the site of the city of Germantown. There he remained until 1689, when he removed to Montgomery county, where he took up land and made his home until 1700, in that year going into Lancaster county with some English families by the name of Douglass, and settling in Salisbury township. Conrad Rutter still later moved into Leacock township, where he secured 580 acres of land in one piece. He had two neighbors, Peter and Henry Skiles. From this ancestor the line is through his son Andrew, who had a son Henry; Henry became the father of Joseph, whose son, Amos, Sr., was the father of Amos.

Conrad Rutter was instrumental in founding the first Episcopal Church in Lancaster county, one hundred and seventy-one years ago. In 1730 Sebastian Royer donated ground for a Lutheran and Reformed Church in northern Lancaster, which church was located in Brickerville, and became a hospital during the Revolution; in 1808 it was rebuilt. The German Reformed Church built in 1747 was known as the Royer Church, and was also used as a hospital during the Revolution; it was rebuilt in 1813. Some of the soldiers who died in the church were interred in the church burying ground.

Joseph Rutter, the grandfather of Amos, was born and reared in Lancaster county. On Aug. 29, 1786, he was married, by Rev. J. Frederick Illings, to Margaret Besore, who bore him the following children: John, Joseph, Amos, Sr., Daniel, Henry, Mary (who married a Mr. Foltz), and Baltzer.

Amos Rutter, Sr., was born in 1791, and died in 1868. His entire life was passed in Leacock township, where he was first engaged in shoemaking, but later followed farming. For the last fifteen years of his life he lived retired. A man of unusually sound judgment, he was often called upon to settle estates and to fill other positions of trust. He married Esther Royer, who was born in 1795, daughter of Jonathan and Anna (Frick) Royer, farming people of Lancaster county, and died in 1859. The first of the Royer family in America was Sebastian Royer, who left two sons in Montgomery county, Pa., from whom sprang a numerous progeny in Chester and Montgomery counties. Sebastian Royer first located in Montgomery county in 1720, and the same year came to Lancaster. Mrs. Esther (Royer) Rutter was in the fifth generation from him. To Amos Rutter, Sr., and his wife were born the following children: John, who married Caroline Snader; Anne, who wedded Levi Good; Mary, who became the wife of Rudy Evans; Joseph, who married Henrietta Hartman; Catherine, who married Roland Wenger; Jeremiah H., who married Christiana Bear; and Amos, all these now deceased. The survivors are Jonathan, a retired farmer of Leacock township; and Esther, widow of Isaac Miller, of Paradise township.

Through his maternal grandmother, Anna (Frick) Royer, Mr. Rutter's ancestral line is traced to Jacob Frick, who was born in 1620 in Switzerland, where he held an official position in one of the Cantons. He suffered terribly in the persecution of the Protestants, being a convert of Menno Simon, the Mennonite reformer. He had one son, born in 1650, who had one daughter, Barbara, and two sons, Jacob and John.

Amos Rutter was reared on the farm, remaining there until he reached the age of twenty-three, when he entered a dry goods store in New Holland. There he continued until 1855, in which year he became a partner with D. Richwine and his brother, in a dry-goods and notions store in New Holland. Seven years later Amos and his brother, Jeremiah H., purchased the interest of the Richwines. Together they operated the store a few years, and then disposed of it at a good figure, buying the J. F. Seldomridge store, at Intercourse, where they remained eleven years, Amos Rutter being postmaster there during the time. In 1874 he came back to New Holland, and, building a warehouse, engaged in the grain, coal and feed business, in connection therewith handling second-class freight and tickets for the Pennsylvania Company, doing also an express business until 1892. Mr. Rutter was prison inspector of Lancaster county for three years, a position thrust upon him against his will, as he disclaimed all political ambitions. He had been a vestryman in the Lutheran Church from 1862, had been deacon and elder, and was a trustee in that body up to the time of his death. He belonged to the Lancaster County Historical Society and the Pennsylvania German Society.

On Sept. 2, 1856, in New Holland, Amos Rutter was married, by Rev. John Kohler, to Catherine E. Mentzer, and there were born to this union: Eugene M., of New Holland, who married Annie Geahr, and has four children, Lillian M., Mary E., Pauline K. and Emily G.; and Lillian, at home.

Mrs. Catherine E. (Mentzer) Rutter was born in New Holland in 1835, daughter of Paul and Sarah (Kurtz) Mentzer, who were born in New Holland and Lancaster, respectively. Paul Mentzer, who was a blacksmith by trade, died in New Holland in 1892, at the age of eighty-seven; his wife died Nov. 25, 1864, at the age of sixty years. Both were buried in the cemetery at New Holland, which is connected with the Lutheran Church. They had the following children: Catherine E., Mrs. Rutter, is the eldest; Jacob K., now a grocer of Lancaster, married (first) Margaret Schafer, and (second) Annie M. Leightner; Annie L. died at the age of twenty-four; Samuel J. died when a year and a half old; William H., a retired farmer of New Holland, married Jane Wilson. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Rutter were Jacob and Elizabeth (Johns) Mentzer; her maternal grandparents were Christopher and Magdelina (Martin) Kurtz. Mrs. Rutter has been a member of the Lutheran Church of New Holland for the last fifty years, and for many years has been a teacher in the Sunday-school. She is a woman of much character and ability, and was a worthy companion for Mr. Rutter.

JOHN W. KINARD, M. D. Among the successful physicians of Lancaster is Dr. John W. Kinard, who is recognized as a man of ability, wide and comprehensive study and large experience. Dr. Kinard is a son of Simon and Elizabeth (Olewiler) Kinard, natives of York county, Pennsylvania.

The great-grandfather of Dr. Kinard was a native of Scotland, who emigrated to this country at an early date, and settled in York county, Pa., engaging in farming to the time of his death. His son, the grandfather, as well as Simon Kinard, the father, were born in this prosperous region of the Keystone State, and became well known in that locality.

Simon Kinard owned and operated a fine farm of 120 acres near Wrightsville, Pa., residing upon it until the time of his death, which occurred in 1886, when he was fifty-six years of age. His wife survived him until September, 1896, when she, too, passed away, aged sixty-six years, and is buried at East Prospect. She was a daughter of Jacob Olewiler, also a native of York, Pennsylvania.

Dr. John W. Kinard was born Feb. 15, 1858, at Wrightsville, York county, and grew to manhood upon his father's farm. Of the eleven children, six sons and five daughters, who lived to grow to maturity, Dr. Kinard is the eldest, and he has one brother, George C., who is also a physician of Lancaster county, and his other brothers are school teachers. Like many country boys, Dr. Kinard attended the district school, but he had the advantage of an academic course, after which he followed the calling of a school teacher for six years. During his vacations, however, he attended the Millersville Normal School for five years, and then took up the study of medicine, for which he had always had a strong inclination, with Dr. Bigler, of East Prospect. For a year he studied with this excellent physician, then continued his studies with Dr. J. Hay, of York, until 1879, when he was prepared to enter the University of Maryland at Baltimore, from which he was graduated in 1882, with the degree of M. D.

Following his graduation, Dr. Kinard established himself at East Prospect, and for five years was successfully engaged in the practice of his profession in that locality, building up a large and wealthy list of patients. But feeling that he needed further experience and instruction, Dr. Kinard sold his practice to Dr. J. A. Stoner and went to New York, entering Bellevue Hospital Medical College, from which he was graduated March 11, 1888, with degree of M. D. Prior to this he had taken a post-graduate course in Philadelphia in the Polyclinic College and College for Graduates in Medicine. In the spring of 1888 Dr. Kinard located at No. 17 East Walnut street, Lancaster, where he has since remained, and during the years which have followed he has firmly established himself in the confidence of the people of the city, while his success demonstrates his ability to cope with disease. In politics Dr. Kinard is an ardent Republican, and supports the principles of that party upon every occasion. During his residence at East Prospect he served as school director, and held every office within the gift of the people from an inspector to chief burgess. His religious connections are with St. John's Lutheran Church, of which he is a liberal supporter. Socially Dr. Kinard is a thirty-second degree Mason, and belongs to the F. & A. M., No. 276, Lamberton Lodge, Chapter No. 43, Knights Templar, and Harrisburg Consistory. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., East Prospect Lodge, No. 944; Jr. O. U. A. M.; A. & I. O. of Malta, No. 99; Eagles; member and ex-president and secretary of the Lancaster Pathological Society; president of the Lancaster City and County Medical Society; member of the State Medical Society and American Medical Association, and attended the last session of the American Medical Association at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., as a representative.

In September, 1883, Dr. Kinard was married to Miss Isabelle Weidman, of York City, Pa., and their children are: Kerwin W., attending the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1905; and Margaret C., at home. Mrs. Kinard, a most charming and accomplished lady, is a daughter of Jacob Weidman, a farmer of York county, and was born in York, where she was reared and educated. Dr. Kinard possesses more than ordinary ability, is successful in a marked degree, and, judging by the light of the past, his future is a bright and promising one.

JOHN KENDIG (deceased) was during a long life one of Lancaster county's excellent farmers and highly esteemed and substantial citizens. He was born in West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Dec. 18, 1818, and his death took place on his farm March 4, 1896, his remains being interred in Longnecker's cemetery, in West Lampeter township.

John and Frances (Herr) Kendig, his parents, were natives of Lampeter and Manor townships, respectively. The former died in 1848, and the latter in 1856. They were members of the Methodist Church, but were interred in the New Mennonite cemetery at New Danville. Their children were as follows: Eliza, deceased, married John Hoover; Barbara is the widow of Martin Mylin and the mother of Hon. Amos H. Mylin, of West Lampeter township; Fanny died unmarried; John is the subject of this sketch; George is deceased; and Abraham is a farmer of New Carlisle, Ohio.

By birth and environment John Kendig was a farmer, his honored ancestors having successfully cultivated the soil for generations. He showed a natural aptitude for his vocation, and from the age of twenty-one years operated the farm upon which his quiet and upright existence was spent, until his retirement from activity in 1874. When Mr. Kendig resolved upon shifting the burdens to younger shoulders, he erected a separate home, which also was one of comfort and attractiveness. As a man of scrupulous honesty, highest integrity and financial responsibility, Mr. Kendig was prominent in Lancaster county. He was one of the directors of the Willowstreet Turnpike Co., and later president until his death.

On March 15, 1842, in Lancaster, John Kendig was united in marriage to Miss Mary Herr, born in West Lampeter township May 31, 1820, daughter of Martin and Mary (Herr) Herr, of West Lampeter township, the former of whom was born June 12, 1788, and was a farmer on the old Herr farm of that locality, and both of whom were members of one of the oldest and most highly esteemed families of the county. His death occurred when he was aged eighty years. Mrs. Herr died March 5, 1823, when only twenty-five years of age. Both were consistent members of the Mennonite Church. Their children were: Frances, born March 28, 1818, died in infancy; Mary married John Kendig; and Martha, born August 23, 1822, is the widow of Gabriel Wenger, of West Lampeter township. On the paternal side the family may be traced on back to Francis and Fanny (Barr) Herr, farming people of West Lampeter township, and still farther, to John Herr, of Lancaster county, father of Francis. Through intermarriages this family is connected with almost all of the leading families of the county.

The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. John Kendig: M. Frances, who died unmarried, at the age of fifty-five years; Addah L. and Martin H., twins, the former of whom married Frank Bare, and died March 14, 1901, the latter of whom is a farmer of Clark county, Wash.; John E., who died in infancy; John B., who resides on the old homestead in Willowstreet, married to Susan R. Brackbill; Mary, who is the widow of Christian Herr, of Manor township; Dr. Elizabeth, now a resident of Lancaster; and Miss B. Alice, also a resident of Lancaster. The removal of Mrs. Kendig from the farm to Lancaster was accomplished in April, 1896, and she is one of the most highly esteemed ladies of this city, and a most devoted and worthy member of the New Mennonite Church.

Dr. Elizabeth Kendig is one of the highly educated and successful practitioners of Lancaster. Her tastes early led her to begin the study of medicine, and under the able instruction and direction of Mrs. Dr. Mary Wilson, of Lancaster, she was prepared for entrance to the Woman's College of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, from which she graduated with honors in 1886. She then located for practice in Reading Pa., where she remained until 1898, going thence to Chicago, Ill. Several months in the Windy City gave her needed experience, and she returned and located permanently in Lancaster. Here she has taken a leading position. She belongs to the Berks County Medical Society.

Miss B. Alice Kendig is a lady of independent means, and she and her sister, Dr. Kendig, have long resided together. Both ladies belong to the German Reformed Church, and mingle with the best social circles of Lancaster.

JOHN F. CHARLES. This prominent and respected citizen of Millersville is the son of Christian Charles, a well known and successful farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county. He was born Jan. 5, 1843, and received his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. He remained with his father upon the farm until his marriage, which was solemnized Nov. 21, 1865, his bride being Miss Anna Denlinger, who was born May 2, 1844, a daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Mellinger) Denlinger. After their marriage Mr. Charles and his wife took up their residence on a farm of ninety-seven acres, near Little Washington, in the Susquehanna valley. This he continued to cultivate for eighteen years, when he removed to the paternal farm, which he managed for fourteen years. In the spring of 1898 he gave up active work and took up his residence in Millersville, where he owns a handsome, well-appointed home and six acres of land. His life has been a remarkably successful one, and the success is due chiefly to those sterling qualities of mind and heart which have distinguished him from boyhood. His ideas on public questions are fully abreast of the times in which he lives, and his influence in the community is widely felt. He is a stockholder and director in the Mountville Bank, as well as in the Mountville Manufacturing Co., and is regarded as one of the county's foremost and substantial citizens.

To Mr. and Mrs. Charles three children have been born, two of whom, Henry D. and John D., are yet living, to do honor to their parents' name and to benefit the community in which they reside. Henry was born May 31, 1874, and John on June 29, 1878. Both are graduates of the State Normal School at Millersville, the elder in the class of 1891, and the younger in 1899, and both have had experience as teachers. Henry D. is a farmer, working the home place, and married Hettie Charles. John D. is attending Franklin and Marshall College, in Lancaster, from which he will graduate in the regular classical course leading to the degree A. B. in the summer of 1905. The entire family are Mennonites.

JOHN C. SEITZ, a retired farmer, ex-soldier and greatly respected citizen of Mountville, Lancaster county, was born in Manor township, this county, March 9, 1835, son of Jacob Seitz, Sr., and a brother of Charles C. Seitz, whose sketch will be found elsewhere.

In Lancaster City, Aug. 15, 1859, John C. Seitz married Charlotte Herr, and to this union have been born six children, as follows: Jacob H., a farmer residing at Mountville, married Catherine Shuman; John H., a carpenter at the same place, married to Barbara Wriggle; Aaron H., a grocer at Mountville, married to Anna Copland; Susan H. is at home; Isaiah H., principal of the Pearl street school in Lancaster, married to Laura Myers; and Barbara H. is at home, but a school teacher by profession. Mrs. Charlotte (Herr) Seitz was born in New Danville, Pequea township, Lancaster county, Oct. 2, 1838, daughter of Rudolph, and sister of Aaron, Herr, mentioned elsewhere.

John C. Seitz lived on the home farm until twenty-three years of age, and then farmed on his own account in Manor township for thirty years, when he came to live in retirement in Mountville, doing only such work as suits his taste, occupies his mind and gives him necessary exercise.

On Aug. 24, 1864, John C. Seitz enlisted in Co. H, 203d Reserve Pennsylvania Volunteers, Birney's Sharpshooters, but his company later changed its commander, Capt. Charles Liman assuming charge. Mr. Seitz took part in many skirmishes, and in the bombardment and capture of Fort Fisher escaped being wounded or taken prisoner, and was honorably discharged in Raleigh, N. C., June 22, 1865, since when he has resided in quiet on his farm, or in retirement in Mountville. Mr. Seitz is a Republican in politics, and his amiable wife is an active and faithful member of the Mennonite church.

HENRY WORST, the senior member of the mercantile firm of Worst & Shertz, of Springville, Salisbury township, was born in that village, March 20, 1835, son of Henry, Sr., and Mary (Kurtz) Worst.

The Worst family was established in Lancaster county about 1760, by three brothers of the name who came hither from Switzerland, one settling in Germantown, one settling in Cornwall, Lebanon county, and the third in Terre Hill, Lancaster county. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Worst, of this sketch, were Peter and Barbara (Weaver) Worst, farming people of Lancaster county, who died on the old homestead in Springville.

Henry Worst, Sr., father, was born in the same house as was his son, and became a well known and respected farmer of Salisbury township. He was born in 1795, and died at the age of eighty-nine years. He married Mary Kurtz, daughter of Samuel and Barbara (Showalder) Kurtz, of Lancaster. She died in 1843, aged forty-four years, and was buried beside her husband on a part of the old farm, in a private cemetery. Both were members of the Mennonite Church. Their children were as follows: Barbara, deceased, married John Wanner; Peter, deceased, married Maria Good; Samuel married Nancy Kurtz, deceased, and is a farmer of Salisbury township; Elias, deceased, married Susannah Gaybill; Mary, deceased, married Joseph H. Bair; Miss Elizabeth resides on the old homestead; Susannah, who married Daniel Kurtz, resides in this township; Henry is the subject of this sketch; Leah died at the age of six years; and Catherine died at the age of eighteen years.

Henry Worst acquired a good, common school education and remained assisting his father on the farm until he was twenty years of age, at which time he embarked in a general mercantile business, opening up a stock of goods, in Springville, at his present location. In 1871 he admitted C. M. Shertz as a partner, and the business has been very prosperously conducted ever since. Both Mr. Worst and Mr. Shertz are men of business ability, and have made it their rule to buy and sell as suits the convenience of their large number of patrons. Their upright methods and careful selection of seasonable goods have attracted and retained a large trade.

In politics Mr. Worst is a Republican, and has held the office of postmaster since 1855. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and is one of the representative citizens of Salisbury township.

In June, 1863, Mr. Worst was married in Providence township to Miss Susan Frailey, born in Earl township, Aug. 26, 1838, daughter of Daniel and Anna (Long) Fraileick, the former of whom was a blacksmith and died in Paradise township, in 1888, and the latter of whom died in 1886, aged sixty-one years. They were respectively members of the Menonite and the Dunkard Churches, and they were interred in Mellinger's cemetery, near Lancaster. Their children were: Joseph, deceased; Daniel, a railroad baggage master in Harrisburg, married Lillie Herr; Anna married Henry Brown, of Paradise township; Rebecca is the widow of Elias Herman, of Lancaster; Abby married John Wright, of Lancaster; Susan is Mrs. Worst. Her maternal grandparents were Jonathan and Susan (Reno) Long.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Worst are as follows: Catherine, who is the widow of Clayton De Haven, resides at home and has four children; Clayton, who married Margaret Bowers and has one child, resides on the old homestead; Henry, who married Mazie Kurtz, has one child, and they live in Springville; and Miss Anna is at home.

PHILIP DIETRICH, the founder of the Dietrich family in Lancaster county, came hither from Alsace, Germany, and made his home in Manheim township, along the New Holland Pike road, buying land located within two miles of the city of Lancaster. This worthy German emigrant brought with him the provident habits of his native land, and at the time of his death left his heirs not only 600 acres of rich and improved land, valuable on account of its nearness to a flourishing city, but also a sum of $75,000 in money. On account of some disagreement, litigation began over this estate, continuing until it was about consumed, making one of the most famous cases in the annals of Lancaster county. The family of the founder consisted of two sons, Henry and Michael, and several daughters. Two of his great-granddaughters who now reside in this county are Mrs. I. P. Mayer, of Landisville, and Mrs. B. W. Hershey, of the same place.

Henry Dietrich was a well known farmer, and he lived on the old homestead until the age of fifty-one years, marrying a member of the Diller family, later, after her death, marrying her sister, Sally Diller. The children of the first marriage were: Adam; Daniel; Samuel; Mrs. Gip; Mrs. Carpenter; and Mrs. Michael. The children of the second marriage were: Philip; Sallie, who became Mrs. Frissler; and Martha, who married Israel Groff. Both parents were worthy members of the Lutheran Church.

Adam Dietrich, son of Henry and father of Samuel Dietrich of Bamford, was born and reared on the old homestead, and in the course of time became the successor of his father in the administration of the large estate of his grandfather, Philip Dietrich. In early life Adam Dietrich was a farmer, but later he engaged in the hotel business, successfully managing hostleries in different localities until advancing years made it necessary for him to retire from activity. His life extended to the unusual age of ninety-six years, four months and twenty-six days. Adam Dietrich married Miss Mary Swope, who was born in Leacock township, and she lived to the age of seventy-six years. They had a family of ten children: John, who is now deceased, but for many years was a hotel keeper; Catherine, deceased, married Martin Bombarger; Daniel, deceased in infancy; Adam, a drover, now deceased; Mary, who resides in Lancaster, and is the widow of Martin Musser; Henry, deceased, who was, like his father and brother, a hotel keeper; Samuel, of this sketch; Elizabeth, deceased wife of John Rudisill; Sarah, the widow of Abraham Brown, and living with Mrs. B. W. Hershey; and Graybill, deceased.

SAMUEL DIETRICH, son of Adam and great-grandson of Philip the emigrant, was born Sept. 10, 1824, and is a resident of Bamford. Until the age of seventeen years he lived on the farm, and then became engaged in assisting his father in his hotel enterprise, remaining with him until he married. He then removed to Landisville, this county, and there he remained for the succeeding fourteen years, later occupying several other locations in East Hempfield township. It was about 1883 that Mr. Dietrich purchased the small property in Bamford, where he resided until the death of his wife, in 1897, broke up his home. Since that date Mr. Dietrich has made his home with his son. By occupation Mr. Dietrich is a fence-builder, and has constructed many miles of fencing in this and adjacent counties, and has also done the butchering, in the season, for his farmer neighbors, this being a very important branch of work on the farm. A man skilled in the art of preparing meats for winter consumption is always in demand through the rural districts.

In 1854 Mr. Dietrich was married to Miss Mary Steward, who was a daughter of Alexander Steward, who was born in East Hempfield township, and lived a most estimable life through sixty-six years, passing away in 1897. A family of six children was born to Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich: Elizabeth, who married I. P. Mayer; Emma, who married B. W. Hershey; Henry, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Franklin, who makes his home in the West; and Adam, who is a resident of Bamford. The Dietrich family have always been supporters of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Dietrich was a member of the German Baptist Church. Both she and her husband enjoyed the esteem of a wide circle of friends.

GEORGE K. HERR, a resident of Pequea township, was born in West Lampeter township, near the mouth of Mill Creek, May 27, 1847, son of Jacob and Mary (Kreider) Herr (both deceased), and grandson of Christian and Catherine (Kauffman) Herr.

Jacob Herr was born Nov. 17, 1817, near Millersville, in what is now Lancaster township, where he was reared and educated in the public schools. He was married Oct. 13, 1846, to Mary, a daughter of George and Mary (Swarr) Kreider, a native of Pequea township (which then bore the name of Conestoga), where she was born Nov. 4, 1822. After their marriage the young couple located at the mill in West Lampeter township, where Mr. Herr was engaged in the milling business some twenty-four years, and was familiarly known as "Sawmiller Jacob Herr." His attention was largely given to the manufacture of lumber until 1870, when he purchased seventy-seven acres of land, near Hollinger, in West Lampeter township. His death occurred Dec. 4, 1871, and his widow survived until Feb. 28, 1898. They were members of the old Mennonite Church, and had the following children: George K.; Christian, a resident of West Lampeter township; Jacob K., who died July 17, 1902; Miss Mary; Henry K., who died in infancy; Catherine K., the wife of Samuel Gochnauer, of West Lampeter; Miss Elizabeth; Barbara, the wife of John Herr, of Lancaster township; and Benjamin K., of East Lampeter township.

George K. Herr was reared to the sawmill business and received his education in the common schools. When he was twenty-six, in 1873, he married and took charge of the mill that had been so long operated by his father. He put in a chopping mill, and carried it on for twenty-one years. In 1895 he purchased a farm of ninety-one acres at Baumgardner Station, in Pequea township, which has been his home to the present time. Here he has made valuable improvements and brought the farm up to a high condition of cultivation. For three years Mr. Herr was a member of the school board in West Lampeter township.

On Nov. 27, 1873, Mr. Herr was married to Elizabeth Harnish, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Buckwalter) Harnish, who was born in Conestoga township, June 10, 1853. They have been blessed with the following children: Jacob, who married Miss Barbara Huber, daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Reinhart) Huber, operates the Martic mills in Pequea township; and Mary, Aaron, Annie, Lizzie and Barbara, all of whom are still under the parental roof.

ELIAS H. HERR, now living retired, was long one of the energetic and successful farmers of East Lampeter township, where his family has for many years been one of the most respected. He is a son of Solomon Herr, and a grandson of Abraham Herr.

Abraham Herr was born in Lancaster county and lived near Lancaster City all his life. By occupation he was a farmer and distiller. He was one of the Old Mennonites in Lancaster county. His family consisted of five children, as follows: Solomon, the father of our subject; Peter, Abram and Christian, all deceased; and Annie, wife of Henry Herr.

Solomon Herr was born in East Lampeter township, Jan. 6, 1806. He lived at home with his parents until he was of age, receiving a common school education, and he then began farming for himself on the place a part of which our subject now owns. He, too, was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Catherine Herr, daughter of John and Barbara Herr, of Manor township, and they became the parents of six children, two of whom died in infancy; Emanuel H.; Abraham and Elias H., our subject, twins, of East Lampeter township; and Adam H., of Lancaster City.

Elias H. Herr, whose name introduces this sketch, was born in East Lampeter township, Aug. 12, 1842. He lived at home with his father until he was twenty-one years of age, received a common school education, and he then began life for himself. After living one year on the farm of his father-in-law, he took charge of that place, where he remained thirty-one years. He has since lived retired. Mr. Herr has ably sustained the reputation which all the members of his family have enjoyed for industry, honesty and upright living, and he ranks, decidedly, among the most valuable citizens of his section of Lancaster county.

On Nov. 5, 1863, Elias H. Herr was married to Mary L. Rohrer, daughter of John Rohrer, of East Lampeter township, and to this union have been born two children: Aaron R., who died when six years of age; and Elam R., who still lives at home. Mr. and Mrs. Herr are both members of the Old Mennonite Church.

CHRISTIAN H. COBLE (deceased). Few men in Mt. Joy township were better known or more thoroughly respected through a long and successful life than was Christian H. Coble. He was born Feb. 22, 1836, in Conewago township, Dauphin Co., Pa., just over the line of Lancaster county, Pa., and he died in February, 1896, in the village of Bellaire, which at one time was a portion of his farm. His burial took place in Risser's Meeting House cemetery, in Mt. Joy township.

Christian H. Coble was the second son of Christian and Eliza (Hoffer) Coble, farming people of Dauphin county, where Christian died in 1880, and his years had reached seventy-five. His second wife, Nancy Snyder, died in 1897, aged eighty years. No children were born to the second marriage, but those born to the first union were as follows: Barbara, deceased, who married Isaac Meckley; Isaac, who is a farmer in Dauphin county; and Christian H., John, Jacob and Samuel, all deceased. The parents were buried on a portion of their old farm, set aside for that purpose.

Christian H. Coble was reared on the farm and acquired his education in the district schools. He became an excellent farmer and continued to follow agriculture until the wheel of progress, in the shape of the Cornwall & Lebanon Railroad, was turned across his land. After satisfactory arrangements were made with this road in 1880, Mr. Coble embarked in the grain, coal and lumber business, opening up a first-class general store, and he conducted this with success and ability until his death. His very capable wife still carries on the business, which is one of the prosperous ones in the village of Bellaire. Mr. Coble had the honor of being appointed the first postmaster of Bellaire, which position he most efficiently filled until his death, when its duties were assumed by his son and wife. Mr. Coble was prominently identified with Republican politics, and faithfully served the county as one of its commissioners for a period of six years. He was a conveyancer and surveyor, was also justice of the peace, in fact, was one of those estimable, level-headed men who naturally become almost a necessity to a growing community. In every relation of life Christian H. Coble bore an honest, manly part, and won the esteem of his fellow-citizens.

In 1854 Mr. Coble was married, in Harrisburg, to Anna A. Eby, and a most estimable family was born to this union, as follows: Allen A., a farmer of Mt. Joy township, married Emma Keiper; Edwin E., who married Mary Meckley, is a jeweler in Elizabethtown and is president of the Electric Light Co.; Clara C. married Harry Bachman, the proprietor of a hotel in Campbellstown; Christian L., deceased, married Alice Ressler, of Bellaire; Samuel L. and Grant died young; Robert A., a grain and coal dealer, married Jennie Breneman, and lives at home; and Emlin W. died at the age of eleven years.

Mrs. Anna A. (Eby) Coble, who so efficiently manages the business left in her hands by her husband, was born March 17, 1836, in Derry township, Dauphin county, daughter of Peter and Mary (Wisler) Eby, natives of Dauphin and Lancaster counties. The former was a farmer in Dauphin county, where he died in 1846, aged forty-two years. The latter made her home subsequently with Mrs. Coble, where she died in 1894, aged ninety years. They were members of the Mennonite Church. Their children were: Samuel O., who is in the hotel business at Bismarck, Pa.; George W., who died in 1902; Henry B., a merchant in Bachmanville, Pa.; Anna A., the widow of Mr. Coble; Mary, deceased, wife of John Detwilder; and Peter, deceased. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Coble were Michael and Elizabeth (Oberholtzer) Eby, of Lancaster county, and the maternal grandparents were George and Anna (Breneman) Wisler, also of Lancaster. Mrs. Coble is a valued member of the Mennonite Church, and a lady who enjoys the friendship and respect of a very large circle of friends.

JOHN H. DIEM. The agricultural supremacy of some portions of Lancaster county can easily be explained when one considers the various classes of farmers who manage these interests. Good farmers are no more accidents of chance than are capable workers in any other line. To be a successful farmer every branch must be understood, from a knowledge of the properties of the soil, and its adaption to the vegetable and cereal growths, to the economical breeding and feeding of stock.

Among those who have thus succeeded in Salisbury township is John H. Diem, who is now retired from active labor, enjoying the ease won by earlier effort. He was born in Earl township, this county, March 21, 1842, son of Kennedy and Hettie (Brower) Diem, the former of whom belonged to Salisbury and the latter to Earl township, by virtue of birth. Kennedy Diem was a miller by trade and died in Salisbury township, Jan. 21, 1891, at the age of seventy-eight years, the mother of John H. passing away Aug. 21, 1862, when but forty-five. Both these worthy people were consistent members of the Pequea Presbyterian Church, and they were buried in its shadow. For a number of years Kennedy Diem was the efficient supervisor of his township, and a prominent man in public affairs. The children born to Kennedy Diem and wife were: Mary, who died in 1896, first married George Sweigart, and second, Davis Weller; Catherine, who married Mansell Reed, of Salisbury township; Emma, who married David High, and lives in Philadelphia; John H.; Lavina, who married Joshua Roop, of Colerain township; Ellen, deceased; Kennedy, who is a machinist of Atglen, Pa.; Sarah, who married William Axe, of Salisbury township; Margaret, who married Harry Parker, of Parkesburg; Christiann, who lives, unmarried, in Philadelphia; Susan, who married Frank Hall, an attorney in Lancaster; Benjamin, who is a farmer in Kentucky; and Harvey, who lives in California. John Diem, father of Kennedy Diem, was a shoemaker in Salisbury township at the time of his death, although he had been born in Germany. His wife's maiden name was Kennedy.

Belonging to a large family, John H. Diem finished his public school education in order to become an earning factor in the family, at the tender age of eleven years leaving home to assist neighboring farmers. Until he was eighteen this was his custom, his ready and willing service always making him welcome. Then Mr. Diem learned the wheelwright trade in Salisbury township, and was engaged in this when came the stirring events of 1861. His services were with the transportation department, and as a driver and wheelwright he was in the service of the Government until the close of the war, often being placed in the most dangerous situations, but he returned to Salisbury township in safety.

For one year Mr. Diem engaged here in his trade, and then added to it a coach manufacturing business, continuing in this line for a period of thirteen years. In 1881 he moved upon his present farm, which consists of forty acres of well-improved land, and here he remained, also interested in his other enterprises, until 1891, when he retired. Formerly Mr. Diem was connected with a number of fraternal organizations, but resigned from them all, and for many years has been an Independent in politics, voting as his judgment directs, trying to select the best man for the position, irrespective of party ties.

In December, 1868, in Lancaster, John H. Diem was married to Miss Catherine Trego, and the family born to this union is one of the most highly esteemed in this township. They are as follows: Harlin, who operates the home farm; Dorothy, who married Christian Erb, a farmer of this township; Amanda, who married Harry Mullen, a livery keeper, of Christiana; Frederick, who resides in Lancaster; Rebecca, who is attending college in Philadelphia; Evanna, who is attending the Millersville Normal School; Brinton, a barber by trade, living at home; Scott, deceased; and Flora, deceased. All of these children have been afforded excellent educational advantages.

Mrs. Catherine (Trego) Diem was born in Salisbury township Jan. 25, 1843, daughter of Robert and Dorothy (Ely) Trego, the former of whom was a native of Chester county, and the latter of Lancaster county and Salisbury township. In his younger years Mr. Trego was a mason by trade, but later he purchased a farm and operated it until within two years of his death, when he retired from active work. The father of Mrs. Diem died April 15, 1880, at the age of seventy-seven years, and the mother at the age of eighty-three years, having survived until 1888. Both parents had been most worthy members of the Presbyterian Church, and they were laid to rest in the cemetery at Pequea, regretted by all who knew them as kind neighbors and reliable friends. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Trego were: Mary A., who married John Ream, a farmer of Salisbury township; George M., who is a retired farmer of Gap; Christiann, who died young; Catherine, the wife of John H. Diem; and John L., who is a farmer of Salisbury township. The grandparents of Mrs. Diem were Peter and Mary C. (Jenkins) Trego, farming people of Chester county, and George and Catherine (Pearl) Ely, of Lancaster county.

Mr. Diem is one of the substantial and respected citizens of this township, who built up a large business by the exercise of sound methods, and in connection proved himself a most excellent farmer and a representative citizen.

PARKE EDMUND SHEE, secretary of the International Cream Separator Co., whose works are located at the corner of Grant and Christian streets, is a Lancasterian by adoption, having lived here for the past three years, and has had business relations with our people for twenty years. One year ago, he became the organizer of the Cream Separator Co., of which he is secretary. The other officers are: Byron L. Dodge, of cork works and safety buggy interests, president; ex-sheriff John H. Myers, vice-president; and Charles H. Locher, president of the City Trust Company, treasurer. The cream separator which this company manufactures saves twenty-five per cent. over the old crock process. It is not strange, therefore, that the output of the company should find vast sales, not only all over the United States, but even in South Africa, Portugal, Spain, Venezuela, England and other foreign countries.

Mr. Shee has an exceedingly interesting history, and no man in the State—perhaps no man in the country—is descended from a more historical line of ancestry. These ancestors came from Westmeath, Ireland, and were the owners of Ardanogroh Castle. They left Ireland on account of the tea riots, and settled in Germantown, where their lands were confiscated by the British. Mr. Shee's great-great-uncle is mentioned in the Encyclopedia Britannica as President of the Royal Academy of Arts, in London, and his great-grandfather, Walter Shee, who was a successful wholesale tea merchant in Philadelphia, was a brother of Gen. John Shee, who was commander of the Ninth Continentals in the Revolutionary war, and who afterward succeeded Muhlenburg as Collector of the Port at Philadelphia, to which position he was appointed by President Madison. Walter and John Shee, tea merchants, were among the first to sign the Non-importation Act in 1773, and their names hang in Independence Hall. Mr. Shee's great-grandmother, on his father's side, Cecilia Parke, was a sister of Col. John Parke, of Revolutionary fame, who carried to Washington the news of the surrender of the British in New York harbor, and the renowned John Parke Custis was a cousin. Few, indeed, among us, can boast of Revolutionary ancestry like this. His grandfather, Parke Shee, was one of the oldest paper manufacturers in Delaware county (near Media), and he was one of the most prominent Whigs in the State. He died about thirty-five years ago, aged eighty-six years, and the paper business descended to his son, Edmund Brooks Shee, the father of Parke E. Shee, of Lancaster.

Edmund B. Shee, who entered into rest at the early age of forty-two years, married Emaline D. Wayne, daughter of Joseph Wayne, a wholesale lumber merchant of Philadelphia, and a granddaughter of a brother of "Mad Anthony" Wayne. Four children were born of this union, one of whom, Frank, died in early childhood. The survivors are: Edward, in the insurance business, in Philadelphia; Anna, widow of William Thompson, a lawyer of New York, and now making her home in Maryland, near Washington, D. C.; and Parke Edmund, of Lancaster.

Park Edmund Shee was born in Philadelphia Aug. 8, 1855, and was educated in the public schools of that city. He began his business career as a clerk in a sugar refinery, afterward held the position of time keeper for the Wharton Railroad Switch Co., for two or three years. He then passed three years as assistant superintendent of the Riverside Oil Works, and six years with the Seaboard Oil Works. Two years more were spent with Thomas P. Conard, dealer in rails and equipment, boilers, engines and machinery, after which he engaged in the same business for himself, in Philadelphia, for three or four years. In 1898, Mr. Shee came to Lancaster, and is very comfortably located, with his family at No. 552 West James street, College Heights.

Mr. Shee has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Marguerite Bonsall, daughter of Job T. Bonsall, of Middletown, Delaware county. Five children were born of this union, one of whom died in infancy. The survivors are Parke B., a machinist in Philadelphia, married and has one child; Emma and Mary, both attending Maryland College at Lutherville, Md.; and Warde attending school in this city. The mother of these children died at Chester, in 1897, and on April 2, 1899, Mr. Shee married Miss Sarah Roberts, daughter of the late Samuel Roberts, of Lancaster. Religiously Mr. Shee is of the Episcopal faith, although his ancestors, paternal and maternal were Hicksite Quakers. Politically he is a Republican, but he never held any office save that of census enumerator, in Delaware county in 1880. Socially he is a member of the B. P. O. E. He is a thoroughly wide-a-woke, progressive and liberal minded business man and citizen.

JOHN B. STROH, who is serving as justice of the peace in Manheim, has filled that position for twenty years with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. He is thoroughly impartial in meting out justice, his opinions being unbiased by either fear or favor, and his fidelity to the trust reposed in him is above question.

Mr. Stroh was born in Annville, Lebanon Co., Pa., May 22, 1847, son of John and Leah (Booser) Stroh, both of whom are deceased. Being left motherless in infancy, he was reared by his maternal grandmother and an aunt, Elizabeth Booser, and was educated in the common schools and the Annville Academy, attending the latter institution during the summer months. At the age of sixteen he began teaching in the public schools of Dauphin county, and taught eight years in the same township, working on the farm during vacations and in the evenings. He devoted all his spare moments to study, and by close and continuous application gained a large fund of practical knowledge.

In 1872 Mr. Stroh came to Manheim, Lancaster county, where he purchased property, and at once secured a position as teacher in the public schools. Each spring he also assisted in the Manheim National Bank for some four weeks. At first he had only a county certificate for teaching, but in 1880 he secured a State certificate, signed by J. P. Wickersham. He always took a great interest in his pupils, and through his devotion to them turned out some fine scholars. On first coming to Manheim he had charge of the secondary school; later served as assistant principal one term; and then had charge of the grammar school. In 1879 he taught the high school, but after his election to the office of justice of the peace he returned to the grammar school, with which he was connected until 1898, when, on account of his increasing duties in his private affairs, as well as his official work, he retired from school teaching, having been re-elected justice of the peace at each succeeding election. He is now serving his fourth term in that office, has been notary public many years, and has also been a member of the town council and auditor of his borough, as well as deputy coroner for Manheim and vicinity for eight years, having just been reappointed for another term. Mr. Stroh assisted in establishing the city water works, was also one of the promoters of the Manheim Heating &

Manufacturing Co., of which he was secretary and treasurer, and is engaged in the fire and life insurance business, while in a legal capacity he does a large business in executing deeds, etc.

In 1867 Mr. Stroh married Miss Susan Stern, a native of Lancaster county, and to them were born seven children, of whom two died in infancy. Those living are John Jacob Uriel, a graduate of the high school and Union College of Lancaster, and now chief bookkeeper in a wholesale house in Philadelphia; Mary Ann, wife of A. K. Huber, of Crete, Neb.; Elizabeth, wife of W. C. Enck, of Beatrice, Neb.; Susie Maud, a graduate of the Manheim high school, now at home; and Florence Bell, also at home.

Fraternally Mr. Stroh is an honored member of Manheim Lodge, No. 587, F. & A. M.; Chapter, No. 43, R. A. M., of Lancaster; Lancaster Commandery, No. 13, K. T.; Manheim Lodge, No. 657, I. O. O. F.; Ridgely Encampment, No. 217, of Lancaster; Canton No. 25; Kittanning Lodge, No. 25, A. O. U. W., of Lebanon; Washington Camp, No. 590, P. O. S. A.; Manheim Council, No. 154, O. U. A. M.; Steigel Castle, No. 166, K. G. E.; and the Manheim Volunteer Fire Company. At present he is serving as senior warden in the Masonic Lodge. He attends the Lutheran Church, has been a member of the choir for the past twenty years, and also takes an active part in Sunday-school work, teaching the Bible class. Since 1878 Mr. Stroh has taken quite an active and influential part in political affairs; is at present a member of the Republican committee of his ward; of the Republican county committee, in which he is serving on the executive board; and has been a hard and constant worker in the party ranks. He is a recognized power in his community, and has always been alert and active in advancing any enterprise for the public good of Manheim and Lancaster county in general. He has erected a nice modern home in Manheim, complete in all its appointments.

MARTIN WITMER. One of the representative citizens of whom all speak with respect and esteem, in Strasburg township, is Martin Witmer, a member of one of the oldest and most honorable families of Lancaster county.

Martin Witmer was born July 6, 1836, and was reared on the farm of his father, the well-known Jacob Witmer, of West Lampeter. With others of his age, Martin attended the district schools and acquired a very fair education, remaining with his father until the age of twenty-four, since which time he has been operating upon his own responsibility. Until 1892 he was the efficient manager of one of his father's farms, consisting of forty-nine acres, and when it came into his possession at that date, he added a small tract to it. Much interested in all agricultural pursuits, he has been a very successful farmer, and is so regarded by his neighbors, and has also shown himself a public-spirited and progressive citizen, interested in all the affairs for the good of the county.

The first marriage of Mr. Witmer was on Sept. 2, 1862, to Lizzie Huber, a daughter of Levi Huber, of Willowstreet, who died in 1871, at the age of thirty years, four months and seventeen days, leaving four children: Ida L., born May 27, 1863, married J. Frank Herr, of Paradise township, and they have four children, Ivan, Edna, Myrtle and Miriam; John H., born Oct. 3, 1864, a resident of Strasburg township, married Barbara Irvin, and they have six children. Clara, Irvin, Lizzie, Clayton, Cora and Irene; Catherine, born Dec. 22, 1865, was the wife of Isaac Hostetter, of Paradise township, and died May 2, 1893, aged twenty-seven years, four months, and ten days; and Martin, born March 11, 1868, a resident of Lancaster, married Naomi L. Finnisfrock, and has one son, Howard; the youngest of the family, Abraham, born Jan. 12, 1870, died on Sept. 7th, following. The second marriage of Mr. Witmer was on Nov. 13, 1873, when Mary Mowrer, a daughter of Adam and Mary Mowrer, became his wife. She was born near Strasburg Oct. 14, 1836. To this union were born five children: Adam, born June 29, 1874, resides in Strasburg, and married Lizzie Groff; Aaron, born Oct. 20, 1876, resides in Strasburg, married Florence McClune, and they have two children, Nora and Sarah; Amos, born Oct. 27, 1879; Mary, Aug. 27, 1881; and Enos, born Oct. 6, 1883, all these younger children still remaining at home. The family is one which has long been connected with the Old Mennonite Church, and in it and in the community at large it enjoys the esteem of all. In 1892, Mr. Witmer took possession of his property at Strasburg, adjoining the borough on the north, this place containing twenty-eight acres, and on account of its close proximity to the town it is very valuable and desirable.

MARTIN M. FIELES, a retired hotel man of Christiana, Pa., who bears well the weight of many years, was born in Warwick township, Feb. 20, 1823, a son of Peter and Magdelina (Manderbach) Fieles, natives of Duesseldorf, Germany, and Pennsylvania, respectively.

Peter Fieles came to this country alone when only eleven years of age, and was sold for his passage, serving out its cost in Lancaster county, for a man named Batterman. He worked in the distilling business near Lititz, Pa., and for over forty years operated a distillery in Warwick township at the same stand. After a successful career he lived retired, and died near Berlin, Lancaster county, in 1850. He took an active part in county politics, and on several occasions served as a delegate to the Democratic conventions, though he would not accept office. His wife died in 1853, at the age of fifty-six. They were members of the Moravian Church, and had the following family: Elizabeth, deceased, married Samuel Bricker; Catherine married Isaac Kline, and is now deceased; William is also deceased; Maria married John Shirk and Abram Bair, and has entered into rest; Henry is deceased;

Matilda, deceased, married Nathan Sole; Lucy Ann, deceased, married Jeremiah Rhodes; Reuben and Henrietta are both deceased; Martin M.; Thomas B. is a retired butcher at Amboy, Ill.; William (2) was a resident of Haysville, Pa., but has passed away.

Martin M. Fieles was married in February, 1848, to Ellen R. Rogers, who was born in Leacock township, Dec. 26, 1830, a daughter of William and Margaret Rogers. This union was blessed with the following children: Martin L., deceased; Mordecai M., a hotel man in Christiana; Margaret C., and Kansas M., who both died young; William R., a hotel man in Christiana, who married Cecilia Peters, by whom he has two children, Myrtle and William; Mary E., who married Giles Rush, and lives in Washington (They have lost one child); Maggie, who died at the age of twelve years and two months; Carrie B. and Harry P., twins, who both died young; and two sons and two daughters that died in early infancy.

Martin M. Fieles remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-eight years of age, for three years being in partnership with his father in the distilling business in Warwick township. In 1851 the distillery was sold, and Mr. Fieles then engaged in the hotel business in Williamstown, Lancaster county, being located there for some three years. At the end of that period he spent several years on a small farm in Leacock township. For seven years he was in the hotel business at Georgetown. This hotel was destroyed by fire, and for about twelve months he was out of business. For the ensuing seven years he was in a hotel at Paoli, Chester county, after which he lived retired at Lititz some seven years, and then removed to Baltimore, to take charge of a hotel, which he conducted for ten years. In the spring of 1887 he came back to Christiana, and bought a hotel for his two sons, which they have continued to carry on to the present time.

Mr. Fieles takes a Democratic view of the politics of the country. He recalls with satisfaction the fact that in all his busy life he was never before a court, that his fees and dues as a hotel man were promptly paid, that he maintained the most friendly relations with his servants, and that he never sold a drink on Sunday. The hotel at Christiana is a four-story brick structure, containing twenty-five rooms, and is furnished with baths and electric lights.

William Fieles runs a livery and feed stable in connection with the hotel, and also handles trained hunting dogs. In Baltimore he was an extensive shipper of pigeons.

PLANK REESER. Agriculture has found in the person of this gentleman an able exponent of its theories as scientifically understood, and as a demonstrator of its actual value through practical labor, although he is now living in retirement in his native township of Salisbury, Lancaster county. He was born April 4, 1838.

John and Elizabeth (Mast) Reeser, his parents, were born, respectively, in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, and in Berks county, Pa., and in Salisbury township the mother, who was born in 1804, was called to rest in 1869, and the father, who was born in 1800, died in 1887. Both were members of the Mennonite church, and their remains were interred in the Old Road Mennonite cemetery. Their children were eleven in number, born and circumstanced as follows: Jacob, a retired railroad man and living in Philadelphia; Christian, who lost his life at a barn-raising; Barbara, living in Berks county, the widow of Christon Mast; John, deceased; Nicholas, a retired farmer in Chester county; Susanna, wife of David Wanner, also a resident of Chester county; Plank, in whose interest this biography is prepared; Martha, deceased, but who was twice married, first to Amos Kurtz, and secondly to Milton Coffroad; Joseph, a retired merchant in Lancaster City; and Samuel and Amos, retired farmers of Salisbury township. The paternal grandparents of Plank Reeser were Jacob and Barbara (Plank) Reeser, of Lancaster county.

Plank Reeser aided in the cultivation of the homestead until his marriage, Dec. 8, 1865, in Salisbury township, to Miss Mary Ann Wanner, who has borne him six children, viz.: Samuel J., a farmer; Mrs. Amanda Eby, who is the mother of one child; John A., still at home; Elias P., a farmer, and married to Sarah A. Reeser; Harry W., also a farmer and married to Lena Metzler; Martin H.; and Anna E. The three last named still reside under the parental roof, and the others reside elsewhere in the township. Mrs. Mary Ann (Wanner) Reeser was born in Salisbury township April 13, 1845, a daughter of Jacob and Nancy (Kurtz) Wanner, the former of whom followed agriculture from boyhood until within twelve years of his death, which occurred in May, 1898, at the well advanced age of eighty-one years; his wife died in 1869, when she was but forty-eight years old. The remains of both, however, now rest side by side, in the Old Road Mennonite cemetery, they having been life-long members of the Mennonite Congregation. They had born to their union five children, namely: Mary Ann, wife of Plank Reeser; Elias, a farmer in Salisbury township; Margaret, wife of Moses Hershey, a farmer in Leacock township; Lydia, deceased wife of Frank Kurtz; and Elizabeth, who died in infancy. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Reeser were David and Susannah (Garber) Wanner, and the maternal grandparents were Jacob and Mary (Whitzel) Kurtz, both families being of German extraction and of old Pennsylvania parentage, whose pursuit through life was entirely of an agricultural nature.

At his marriage, Plank Reeser and wife located on a farm adjoining the Reeser homestead, on which they resided and then settled on an adjoining farm of 114 acres, which has since been their home. To this they have since added another adjoining farm of 114 acres, and own besides a farm of 119 acres and one of 107 acres, both in Salisbury township. Mr. Reeser has been one of the best agriculturists that Salisbury township has ever had within its limits, and he has won for himself the competency that he now so deservedly enjoys.

In politics Mr. Reeser has been a life-long Republican, has been very popular with his party, and has served seven years as township auditor. He has been very liberal in his contributions in aid of the public improvements of the township, and in the maintenance of the Mennonite church, of which he and wife are devout members, and the teachings of which they unswervingly follow.

WILLIAM HAMILTON. The pursuit of agriculture, although at times vexatious and disappointing, is as a rule not unpleasing, and if understandingly and persistently followed is sure to reward the pursuer with returns adequate to the time and labor expended, as the retired gentleman whose name heads this brief biography can testify, he having been born and reared to the vocation of farming. His birth took place in Leacock township, Oct. 23, 1818, but his home is now in Salisbury township. He is a son of William and Elizabeth (Miller) Hamilton, natives of Bart and Paradise townships, and, respectively, of Scotch-Irish and German extraction.

William Hamilton, the father, was a carpenter by trade and died in 1828, at the age of forty years, his remains being buried in the old Presbyterian churchyard in Leacock; the second marriage of Mrs. Hamilton was to Eli Jackson. To William and Elizabeth (Miller) Hamilton were born seven children, named as follows: James, now deceased; Margaret, who died young; Mary, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-six years; William, whose name opens this article; Joseph, deceased; Elizabeth, widow of Charles Marron, and residing in Philadelphia, and Sarah, widow of Michael Murr, and now living in New Holland, this county. To Eli and Elizabeth (Hamilton) Jackson were born two children: Sabilla, deceased wife of James Miller; and Mardula, widow of Benjamin Weaver of Lancaster. The mother of these children was called away in 1879, at the well-advanced age of eighty-six years, and her remains now lie at rest in the Episcopal cemetery in Leacock township.

William Hamilton, whose name heads this sketch, aided his mother on the home property until he was twenty-two years old, and then worked out among the neighboring farmers until he was twenty-nine. On March 4, 1847, in New Holland, he married Sarah Miller, and began farming on his own account in Salisbury township. This marriage was crowned with the birth of five children, namely: Maria, who is married to Jacob Rife, a farmer in Salisbury township, and has four children: Elizabeth, wife of James High, also a farmer in Salisbury township, has five children; Veronica, twin of Elizabeth, died in infancy; Susannah, also died in infancy; Lydia, who is married to Winfield Ramsey, farmer in East Lampeter township, has three children.

Mrs. Sarah (Miller) Hamilton was born in Upper Leacock township, Lancaster county, Feb. 22, 1822, and died in 1866, when she was about forty-four years old, her remains being interred in Christ Church cemetery in Leacock. Her parents were George and Mary (Ronk) Miller of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a carpenter and died in 1857, when eighty years old; his wife died in 1855, at the age of seventy-nine years, and their remains were interred in West Leacock Dunkard cemetery, they having been members, respectively, of the Christian Lutheran and German Reformed churches. They were the parents of the following named children: Emma A.; deceased wife of William Anderson; Henry, deceased; George, deceased; Maria, deceased wife of Michael Wise, and Sarah, the deceased wife of William Hamilton, of this biographical memoir.

Since the death of his wife, Mr. Hamilton has made his home with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Rife, although he has ample means to pay his way anywhere; here he is at home, with loving hands to attend to his every want. Mr. Hamilton and his family are members of the Episcopal church. In politics he is a Democrat. Remarkably active and well-preserved for his years, very generous in all things and charitable in the broadest sense of the word, he is looked upon as one of the best natured men in the county. He has many friends, and there is not an individual in the township that does not respect and honor him.

HERMAN W. GRAYBILL. The founder of the Graybill family in Lancaster county was Daniel Graybill, who came from Switzerland to America, and made his home in the new land, upon a fine farming tract in the locality of what now is Pennville—the original purchase of 100 acres, made more than a century ago, still being in possession of the same family. Two farms have been made of this productive land, upon which succeeding owners have been honest and energetic tillers of the rich soil ever since. The early members of the family were among the founders of the German Baptist Church in this locality.

Daniel Graybill had three sons: David, who removed to Ohio, and was the founder of a family there, which has many descendants; Samuel, who settled down near his birth place and engaged in farming, rearing a worthy family; and the second son, Daniel, was the grandfather of the Graybill family of this vicinity.

In 1813 Daniel Graybill, son of the founder, came into possession of the old homestead, and thereon erected a residence which still is fit for occupancy, and remained on the place until his eldest son was ready to marry and form a home for himself, when he purchased some 200 acres of the old Hershey estate at Petersburg, removed to it, and gave up the homestead to his son. There he died, at the age of seventy-two, having been during his entire life a farmer. His wife was Mary Hollinger, and to them were born: Joseph, Daniel and Isaac, deceased; Jacob, who died at the age of seventy-seven years; and Benjamin, Martha, Elizabeth and Barbara, all deceased.

Daniel Graybill, the third of the name, was born in 1814, and died in 1890. He always followed a pastoral life. Politically he belonged to the Republican party, but ever set an example of the value of a quiet life, devoted to his family and his religious duties, and reared a family which possesses the respect of the community in which it holds a prominent place. He married Elizabeth Witmer, the daughter of Herman Witmer, who died in 1886, and Daniel Graybill died at the age of seventy-six. Their children were: Martha, the wife of Daniel Kreider, resides on the old Graybill homestead, near Petersburg; Herman W. is our subject; Amos W. died while on his way to California, from his home, in Kansas, where he had located, at Morrill, and was a well-known carpenter, farmer and undertaker; Benjamin W. is a farmer and stock raiser of Oregon; and David W. is a tobacco dealer of Petersburg.

Herman W. Graybill was born Sept. 15, 1842, and was reared as a farmer boy, early learning the duties and pleasures of agricultural life. He received his education in the most excellent schools of his district, his farther educational career being interrupted by the outbreak of the Civil war. In 1863 he enlisted in Co. H, 47th State Militia, and faithfully served for three months. Mr. Graybill had advantages superior to the ordinary farmer boy, as he was able to spend two years in travel, visiting in this tour seventeen States, and gaining much experience and seeing life under many phases. Upon his return to Petersburg, he engaged in the coal and lumber business, also doing some farming, but public affairs have claimed a great portion of his time ever since he reached his maturity. Of a progressive and energetic nature, he has been identified with almost all the matters of public interest and improvement, and has been particularly prominent in all educational movements. For twenty-four years he has served on the school board, for sixteen years being its efficient secretary, during which time many needed reforms have been made in the conduct of the schools, and in the erection and management of buildings, the demands of increasing population making the labors no light task. Mr. Graybill has filled almost every local office in the gift of his party, and was a delegate to the Republican County Convention, as early as his twenty-first year, has been judge of elections, and is now serving his fourth term as director of the poor, the confidence of the whole county being placed in him. Many estates are satisfactorily settled by his good judgment and knowledge of law; for the past twenty-five years probably four or five have been in his hands at one time. No man stands higher in the community, and no one is better fitted worthily to represent it.

Mr. Graybill has been married three times. His first marriage was to Martha Landis, a daughter of Henry Landis, of Petersburg, but her death, with that of her infant, occurred in 1868. Mr. Graybill was married second in 1869, to Mrs. Kate Minnich, a daughter of Jacob Swarr, but her death occurred about one year later, and on Oct. 21, 1873, he married Fannie A. Bassler, the estimable daughter of John Bassler. To this union were born four children: Nora, who is the wife of John M. Groff, an attorney of Lancaster City; John B., who lives at home, a brilliant young man, who, after graduating with honors from the Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster City, in the class of 1900, was immediately appointed a justice of the peace for Petersburg; and Daniel and Kathryn, at home. The religious connection of the family is with the Reformed Church, where it is much esteemed. Mr. Graybill is a man who deserves the high favor in which he is held by his fellow-citizens, and in the many trusts that have been placed in his hands, he has acquitted himself with credit and to the satisfaction of all.

JOHN G. ZOOK, publisher of The Express, Lititz, was born in Manheim township, on the farm now occupied by James Purvis, on the Conestoga, a mile north of Binkley, May 30, 1853. He obtained his education in the common schools, with an elementary course at the Millersville Normal school from which he graduated in 1875. While attending Normal school in summer, he taught school in winter, teaching six terms in all. In 1877 his father, John Zook, moved to Lititz, where, in connection with E. Z. Ernst, the subject of this sketch started the printing and publishing business, the first publication being The Sunbeam, a literary and educational monthly. In 1879 Mr. Ernst withdrew from the firm and went West. In September, 1881, in connection with C. N. Derr, Mr. Zook changed The Sunbeam to the Lititz Express, and it has been published now for twenty-one years. Mr. Derr withdrew in February, 1895. The Express has been politically mainly independent. The publisher was a Republican until 1889, when he espoused the Prohibition cause, and voted the ticket as a matter of conviction of the righteousness of the cause. In the same manner he examined the Socialist program, and is now a conscientious advocate of the public ownership of the means of production and distribution as the best way to secure social and economic justice. He has held no public office except that of school director in 1887-89, and from which he retired because he was a candidate on the Prohibition ticket. He said he would rather be right than school director. He is a member of the Moravian Church, the congregation's treasurer and assistant superintendent of the Sunday School.

In 1879 Mr. Zook was married to Alice Carey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wolfe, of Marietta. Their children were: Harry W., with the Pennsylvania Steel Co., at Steelton; Ethel, assisting in the bookstore of her father at Lititz; Herbert, employed in The Express office; and Alice and Edna, at home. Mr. Zook's mother, who has attained the advanced age of four score years, is now an honored member of his home at Lititz, but his father passed away in 1880, at the age of sixty-seven.

Our subject's grandfather, John Zook, lived in Chester county during the Revolution, and the fences on his farm were taken down before the battle of Brandywine. As far as Mr. Zook can gather from tradition the great-grandfather, Christian, was one of three brothers Zug (changed to Zook) who emigrated from Zug, Switzerland, early in the 18th century, and from whom all the Zooks descended. The name is now spelled four ways, Zug, Zuck, Zuch and Zook.

BENJAMIN M. BARR. Among the old and well-known families of East Lampeter township, that of Barr takes a prominent place, having been founded in Lancaster county many years ago by German pioneers. The name of Benjamin has been a favorite one in this family, and there are many who still recall the father of Benjamin M., also Benjamin, who was a son of Benjamin, the grandfather. The latter had his residence near Willowstreet, where he was known as a distiller and prosperous farmer; he married Catherine Mayers, a member of another old family, and to them were born: Samuel, who married Maria Stauffer; Harry, who died at the age of twenty-one; Benjamin; Elizabeth, who married John Hernley; Mary, who married Jacob Kreider; and David and Katie, both of whom died in childhood. The burial of the grandparents was in the cemetery at the Old Brick Church, near Willowstreet.

Benjamin Barr, son of Benjamin, was born near Willowstreet, May 10, 1796, and died Jan. 29, 1890. His life was passed in agricultural labor, in which he was very successful, as he accumulated land and means, and was one of the highly esteemed residents of the township. He married Mary Mayley, and the children of this union were: Elizabeth, who is the widow of Isaac Hostetter; Catherine, who is the widow of Isaac Weaver; Martha, born in June, 1826, now the widow of John Landis; Martin, who married Elizabeth Parent, and resides in Darke county, Ohio; Mary, who married Jacob Denlinger; Benjamin M., of this biography; Fanny, who married Henry Groff, both of whom are dead; and Susanna, who resides at Fertility, on the Strasburg pike road, a lady who is known far and wide, in the neighborhood, as a pious, Christian woman, full of good deeds and kind acts, and one of the most devout members of the Reformed Mennonite Church. The parents of this family of children were reverently interred in the cemetery at the Longenecker Meeting House.

Benjamin M. Barr was born in Manor township Dec. 9, 1831, a son of Benjamin and Mary (Mayley) Barr, and was reared on the farm. Until he was twenty years of age, he attended the schools of the district, although his tendencies were not of a literary bent, being more inclined to learn something of the world by observation, than from books. At the age of twenty-four he accompanied his father on a trip to Darke county, Ohio, and he had some idea of remaining in that State, with his brother Martin, but at the termination of six months, he became homesick and returned to Lancaster county. Before settling down permanently on the old farm, he made another short trip to Ohio, and then went on a prospecting trip, at the instance of his brother-in-law, John Landis, into West Virginia, but likewise returned from the South, well contented with Lancaster county as a home.

On Oct. 9, 1860, Benjamin M. Barr was married to Lydia, the estimable daughter of Thomas and Leah (Urban) McMullan, of Pequea township, and they began housekeeping upon a small farm of nineteen acres, on the Wilmington pike road, this now being included in the farm of Samuel Burkhardt. On that farm Mr. Barr and his family resided until in 1873, when he purchased the present farm, consisting of thirty-eight acres. In 1878 he bought a fine farm adjoining, but sold it seven years later.

To Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Barr were born these children: (1) Ellis G., the capable manager of the home farm, has been twice married, the children of the first marriage being: Ada E., Lydia May, Benjamin E., and Martin B. (who died in early childhood); his second wife, Ida Andrew, has borne him one son, Martin McKinley, born January 1, 1898. (2) Benjamin Franklin, familiarly known by his second name, Frank, is one of the well-known and active young business men of Lancaster, where he is engaged as a florist.

Although Mr. Barr has never connected himself with any religious denomination, he stands very high in the community, and is regarded by his neighbors as an upright man, and a useful, charitable and honorable citizen.

SAMUEL N. ROOT. Among the well-known citizens and highly respected residents of East Hempfield township, who now makes his home in Landisville, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he is engaged in the tobacco business, is Samuel N. Root, whose birth took place in East Donegal township. While but a babe he was taken by his parents to East Hempfield township, and there reared, and there received his preparatory education in the public schools. Later he took a business course at the well-known Eastman Business College, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and then engaged in farming.

Prior to his attendance at College, Mr. Root had been for a year engaged in the implement and feed business in East Petersburg, but after his return he settled on a farm about one mile north of Petersburg, and there continued agricultural labors until 1900, when he moved into the town of Landisville, erecting there a three-story building for a warehouse, with dimensions of 102x40 feet, managing the tobacco business in connection with farming. He is a man of business ability and owns several fine farms, one of forty-two acres in East Hempfield township, and another in Drumore township, consisting of eighty-five acres, both of them well cultivated and finely improved.

Politically the neighbors of Samuel Root know just where he is, for he is a staunch Republican, and as becomes a good citizen, never fails to cast his ballot. On Aug. 2, 1887, Mr. Root was married to Amanda Swarr, daughter of Aaron and Elizabeth (Norwich) Swarr, who was born in East Hempfield township on the old family homestead situated along the Harrisburg Pike road. Both Mr. Root and wife are prominent members of the German Baptist Church, where they are highly valued for their Christian character.

ABRAHAM HARNISH. Agriculture is the noblest, as well as the most essential, of all the employments to which the hand of man can be turned, and when to this industry its follower adds the art of building, which in its higher branches may be termed a fine art, he is indeed fortunate. Abraham Harnish, whose brief biography is herewith presented, can justly lay claim to title of expert in both callings, being a stone mason, brick-layer and farmer, with his residence in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Pa. He was born near Conestoga Centre, this county, March 19, 1837, son of Elias and Fanny (Urban) Harnish, of Swiss descent.

Elias Harnish was a distiller in his younger days, but later became a farmer, and was very successful. He died in February, 1877, when sixty-nine years old. Mrs. Fanny (Urban) Harnish was called away in August, 1853, at the early age of thirty-nine years. The remains of these parents were buried in West Lampeter township, they having been members of the New Mennonite church. Their nine children were born in the following order: Sabanah, who married Levi Eby of Lampeter township, and died in 1898; Lydia, who died single in 1900; George, a farmer in West Lampeter township; Abraham, whose name stands at the opening of this biographical notice; Anna, wife of Jacob Eshleman of Strasburg, Lancaster county; Catherine, deceased wife of Abraham Herr; Frances, unmarried and living in Strasburg; Elias, deceased; and Amanda, deceased wife of John C. Kaylor, a school teacher in Strasburg.

Abraham Harnish was united in marriage May 9, 1869, in Lancaster with Miss Frances Dieffenbaugh, who has borne him eight children, in the following order: Enos, who is a plumber at Stevens Point, Wis.; Avzula, wife of Howard Kemmer, a shoemaker in Paradise township, Lancaster county, Pa., and the mother of three children; Adelia, married to Duffy Folk, a bricklayer in Strasburg; Alta, unmarried and at home; Chester L., a farmer in Leacock township; Morris, Lizzie and Harry F., all three at home.

Mrs. Frances (Dieffenbaugh) Harnish was born in Willowstreet, Lampeter township, Sept. 4, 1847, daughter of Jacob and Martha (Urban) Dieffenbaugh, the former of whom was a prominent farmer, but died in 1852, at the early age of thirty years; the latter survived until 1895, when she was called to rest at the age of sixty-four. Their remains were interred in Lancaster. They were the parents of the following children: Harry, a farmer in Oklahoma; Martha, wife of Adam Lefever, a machinist in Milwaukee; and Frances, Mrs. Harnish. The mother, however, was twice married, her second husband being James Kern, and to this union were born: James, a horse trader in Trenton, N. J.; Anna, deceased; Augustus, of New York; Charles, deceased; and Ada, unmarried and living in New York City. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Harnish were Henry and Anna (Bressler) Dieffenbaugh, of Tannery, Pa. [Further particulars concerning this respected family will be found in the biography of Mrs. Jason K. Eaby, of Leacock township.]

Abraham Harnish remained with his parents until his marriage and then located at Intercourse, Leacock township, where he conducted a general store seven and a half years, and finally settled on his present farm in the spring of 1881, filling in several intervals by working at his trade. In politics he is a Democrat. He is strictly upright, and bears a name that is respected wherever known.

HON. JEREMIAH ALBERT STOBER, whose residence is in Schoeneck, Lancaster county, represents the 14th Senatorial District in the State Legislature.

Jacob Stober, his grandfather, was of German-born parentage. He is supposed to have been the first of the family to settle in Lancaster county. His home was in Clay township, and there he followed farming. His life was brief, as he was called away when he was but forty-two years of age. He was interred in the Brickerville Lutheran cemetery. His wife belonged to the Zartman family, prominent in Lancaster county for many years; after the death of her husband she made her home with her only son, Elias, until her death.

Elias Stober, the father of Senator Stober, was born on the old Stober place in 1816, and made it his home until 1842. In 1837 he was married to Sarah Zeigler, a daughter of Dr. Charles Frederick Wolfgang Zeigler, who had come from Stuttgart, Germany, when a young man. After his arrival in this country Dr. Zeigler was married to Mary Regar, and became the father of a family whose home was at Reamstown. For many years he practiced medicine at Reamstown, and died at Akron, in 1841. The first child of Elias and Sarah Stober was the subject of this sketch, who was born Jan. 20, 1842, on the old homestead, the birthplace of both his father and grandfather.

About 1842 Elias Stober removed with his family to near Lincoln, then named New Ephrata, in Clay township, where he was engaged as a clerk in the general store of Levi S. Hacker, and became quite prominent in the community, being elected a school director soon after the establishment of the free school system. Another son and three daughters were here born to Mr. and Mrs. Stober, but not one of them survived the perils of childhood, and Senator Stober remained their only living child. It was in this community that Elias Stober acquired sufficient means to enter upon a business career for himself, and he accordingly established a general store in a building which is now occupied by the Lincoln National Bank. Some eight years later he bought the general store run by Allen W. Mentzer, and established himself at Schoeneck, where he continued in business until 1893. Mrs. Sarah Stober died Dec. 31, 1899. Both were devout members of the Brickerville Lutheran Church, where they had attended from early youth.

Jeremiah Albert Stober, whose name introduces this sketch, is well known in the political circles of the northern part of Lancaster county, as Senator "Al. Stober." He spent his early boyhood in the vicinity of Lincoln, Clay township, and attended the local schools. One of his early teachers, William Oberly, is still living in Ephrata, and another, the Rev. Isaac Keller, is the present pastor of the Baptist circuit, of which Springville is the center. When about fourteen years old Mr. Stober attended the famous "Ephrata Academy," then conducted in the Cloister buildings at Ephrata, as a private enterprise under Prof. Hill, and a little later under Prof. Yeager, the father of the present editor and proprietor of the Ephrata Review. Here Senator Stober completed his common school education. His next step was to take a clerkship in the general store of S. P. A. Weidman, under whose efficient eye he acquired a practical knowledge of business in many of its most familiar forms. At the end of two years he entered his father's store as a clerk. Shortly after this he married Harriet Musser, and moved to Schoeneck. Mrs. Stober was a daughter of William Musser, of Lincoln, and a sister of Edwin Musser, the present auditor of Lancaster county. At the time of her marriage Mrs. Stober was about twenty-four years of age. About a year after coming to Schoeneck, Mr. Stober was appointed postmaster, his commission bearing the name of President Grant. His first presidential vote was cast for the re-election of President Lincoln, and from that day to this he has always been a staunch Republican. After serving as postmaster for about a year, Mr. Stober resigned to take the position of justice of the peace of West Cocalico township. For twenty-eight years he has been justice, except when he represented his district in the House of Representatives. In 1875 he was elected a member of the Legislature from the Third district of Lancaster county. He was re-elected and served four continuous sessions of the Lower House. At the expiration of this period he was again elected justice of the peace, and continued to serve in that capacity until his election to the State Senate in 1898, from the 14th Senatorial District.

Senator Stober is an efficient member of the Upper House, and keeps a vigilant eye on everything that might affect the interests of his constituents. He was active in securing the appropriation of $5,000 for the erection of a monument to the memory of the Revolutionary soldiers, who were buried at Mt. Zion, near Ephrata, and he delivered the historical address to an immense audience at its unveiling. Senator Stober served his country during the late war, and was a volunteer in the 50th Regiment, Pa. Militia. He is now a member of Major Ricksecker Post, No. 152, G. A. R., at Lincoln, and was a delegate from this post to the last State Encampment.

Senator Stober is prominent in fraternal circles, being a master Mason, and a member of Ashara Lodge, No. 398, F. & A. M., at Marietta; a past grand of Lodge No. 408, I. O. O. F., at Reamstown, a member of Lodge No. 253, K. of P., at Lititz, in which order he was deputy grand chancellor, of Lancaster county; a member of Camp No. 13, P. O. S. A., at Denver, in which order he has served two terms as District president for Lancaster county.

From a poor boy Senator Stober has risen to a condition of independence, and has accumulated a fair competence. In business life he is as prominent as he is in politics. In Schoeneck he has a modest but attractive home, and is in business as a dealer in leaf tobacco and a manufacturer of cigars. During his long service as justice of the peace, scrivener and surveyor, he has deeply impressed himself upon this section of the county, and he has made a name for himself above reproach.

WILLIAM BRINTON, in his life time a successful farmer, was born in November, 1785, and he died in the present home of the family, which is situated on the Newport Pike, about half way between Gap and Christiana, Lancaster county, Feb. 10, 1878. His remains are resting in a private burying ground on the family homestead.

The Brintons are of English descent. William Brinton, a native of England, came to America in 1684, and settled in Chester county, Pa. Moses Brinton, son of the emigrant and grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born in Chester county in 1725, but in 1747 he located on land in Leacock township, Lancaster county, given him by his father. He married Eleanor, daughter of Hattel Verman, a native of Ireland, and died in 1789.

Joseph Brinton, son of Moses and Eleanor, was born Nov. 22, 1754, and died in 1809. He was married in 1784 to Susanna Rigbe, and their children were: William, whose name introduces this article; James and Samuel, both deceased; Mary, who married (first) Joseph Cole, (second) David Townsend, and died at the age of ninety years; Sarah, born in 1793, who married Joseph Cooper, and died in 1858.

William Brinton engaged in agricultural pursuits all his life, and in 1858 located on the place yet occupied by his family. In Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, in 1823, he wedded Gulielma Cooper, by whom he had the following children: Cassandra R., who married Thomas Harvey, and died the mother of three children; Jane, who married Parvin Smith, became the mother of eight children, and is now deceased; Joseph, who married (first) Mary Howland, and (second) her sister Anna; Susanna; and Mary B. who married Joseph J. Hopkins, a farmer in Sadsbury township. Mrs. Gulielma (Cooper) Brinton was born in Chester county, Pa., and died Dec. 29, 1879, at the advanced age of eighty-six. She was a daughter of James and Mary (Paxton) Cooper, of Chester and Berks counties, respectively, and a granddaughter of Calvin Cooper, of England. James Cooper was a fuller by trade, and spent his entire life in Chester county; his children were; Joseph, Gulielma, Cyrus and Aaron.

William Brinton was a man of pronounced Abolition convictions; he took an active part in freeing slaves, and helping them on their way North. All the Cooper family belonged to the Society of Friends. Miss Susanna Brinton, who occupies the old home, has ample means to gratify her charitable inclinations, and has given among other substantial public benefits, two large iron fountains for watering horses to the borough of Christiana.

SAMUEL McNEAL, a retired carpenter, of Gap, was born in Earl township, Lancaster county, Sept. 27, 1821, son of Archibald and Catherine (Corl) McNeal, both natives of this county.

Archibald McNeal, who resided in Sadsbury township, was a plasterer by trade, and while working, in 1850, when in his seventieth year, fell from a ladder, and died. His remains were buried at Georgetown. His widow, Catherine Corl, born in April, 1795, died in Gap, in October, 1886, her burial being in the Gap cemetery. The children born to this union were: Daniel, deceased; Samuel, of this sketch; Cyrus, a retired carpenter of Bart township; Jacob; John, deceased; Mary A., who died young; Henry, deceased; Archibald, a carpenter, in Philadelphia; Elizabeth, who died young; Abraham, a carpenter at Pottsville; Rebecca, who married Thomas Nixon, a blacksmith at Gap; and Margaret, wife of Jacob Wise, a farmer of Salisbury township.

Until his marriage Mr. McNeal remained at home working for his parents, and after that he lived with them, and for some years followed his trade, which he had already learned. In 1870 he moved to Philadelphia, where he lived until 1893, when he came back to spend his declining years among his old friends in Lancaster county. Mr. McNeal has been a successful man in his line of work and enjoys ample means. Both he and wife are consistent members of the Methodist Church in which he is one of the trustees. In his political sympathy, Mr. McNeal is a Democrat, but has never sought office.

On Feb. 10, 1846, Mr. McNeal was united in marriage in Lancaster, to Miss Elizabeth Groff, and the children born to this union were as follows: William, a minister in the M. E. Church, resides in Monroe county, Pa., married Isabella Guthrie and they have one child; Cyrus is a machinist in Philadelphia, married Anna Baldwin, and they have had six children, three of whom are deceased; Mary died unmarried at the age of forty-seven years; and Susan married William B. Williams, a miller in Chester county, and has four children.

Mrs. McNeal was born in Strasburg, Lancaster county, Sept. 10, 1825, a daughter of George and Mary (Myers) Groff, of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a well-known brick manufacturer, who was born in Lancaster in 1789, and died in 1842. His widow died in November, 1876, aged eighty-four years, and they were both interred in the cemetery of the German Lutheran Church, being consistent members of that religious body. Their children were: Samuel, George and Angelica, deceased; Kate, deceased, the wife of James Brady; Elizabeth, who became Mrs. McNeal; Michael, deceased; John, who is a painter in Oxford; and Susan, deceased, who married William Strine.

RICHARD BLICKENDERFER, proprietor of the general iron foundry and machine works at Lancaster, is one of that city's prominent business men and highly esteemed citizens.

The Blickenderfer family originated in Switzerland, from which country came Christian Blickenderfer, born in 1751, to join his two brothers, who had previously come to the United States. One of these located in Maryland, and the other settled in the western part of Pennsylvania, where he became conspicuous later as an Indian fighter. Christian, who was the grandfather of Richard, located in Lititz, Lancaster county, where many of his countrymen of the Moravian faith had made their homes, and there he passed his life.

Henry Blickenderfer, father of Richard, was born in Lititz August 17, 1808, and in 1832 married Elvina L. Beitle, who was born in Nazareth, Northampton Co., Pa. He settled down in his birthplace to the business of manufacturing cigars, a line in which he engaged very extensively until 1849, when he moved to Neffsville, where he spent one year as manager of a hotel. From there he moved to Lancaster, taking charge of the "Washington House," a hotel which occupied the site of the present "Northern Market House," and there he remained until 1864, when he retired from activity. For a long period Mr. Blickenderfer was prominently identified with public affairs in Lancaster county. During the administration of President Buchanan he was census enumerator, and with efficiency filled various offices in the gift of the Democratic party. He was particularly well known as a Free Mason, being a member of both Council and Commandery (treasurer of the latter), and he belonged also to the Odd Fellows and Red Men. His religious training was received in the Moravian Church, of which he was a birth-right member. He died Jan. 31, 1897, and his widow still resides in Lancaster City; although she was born in 1812, she still retains her faculties in a remarkable degree. Mr. and Mrs. Blickenderfer had children as follows: Ellen, born Feb. 14, 1834, married the late Judge Henry Starbuck, of Salem, N. C., whose son is now notable as being the youngest judge of the Superior Court in North Carolina; James, born August 20, 1835, is now a resident of Colorado; William, born April 5, 1837, is a grocery merchant in Lancaster (he served in the Civil war with credit to himself and his country); Edward, born Feb. 27, 1839, was in the dry-goods business in Lancaster, and died Nov. 20, 1887; Richard is mentioned below; Mary, born May 9, 1842, married Emanuel Weidler, of Reading, Pa.; Harry, born Feb. 26, 1846, served in the Civil war, was later, as a skilled machinist, a foreman in his brother's foundry, and died Jan. 12, 1891; Jacob, born March 8, 1845, is postmaster at Farmington, Wash. (he was also a soldier in the Civil war); Miss Emma, born August 5, 1848, resides with her venerable mother, in Lancaster; two died in infancy.

Richard Blickenderfer was born in Lititz, Lancaster county, Feb. 3, 1841. His education was acquired in the public schools, and at the age of eighteen years he entered a cabinet shop in Lancaster. There the first call for troops reached him, at the outbreak of the Civil war, and with loyal enthusiasm he assisted in forming Company B, of the 1st Reserves, for three years' service, but owing to an accident he never served in that company. On Oct. 14, 1861, he enlisted at Pitts, Pa., in Company K, 79th P. V. I., and was under Capt. Dysart until his death, in Kentucky, when Capt. Boone took charge. Mr. Blickenderfer remained with his company until Oct. 8, 1862, when, at the battle of Perryville, he was seriously wounded, a minie ball passing through his right leg. Although he was taken to hospital No. 8, Louisville, Ky., gangrene set in, and he was mustered out of the service at Louisville on March 27, 1863. A truly brave as well as loyal man, the following June found him engaged in forming Company D, of the 50th Emergency Regiment, in which he was commissioned second lieutenant. This regiment was engaged in guard duty along the Susquehanna river, at Williamsport, Md., and on the Potomac river, and was finally discharged, in 1863. Then Mr. Blickenderfer went to Washington, D. C., where he served in the Quartermaster's department until all danger of invasion was over. Returning to Lancaster, he re-enlisted, entering the 3d Heavy Artillery, with which he was stationed at Fortress Monroe for two months, later taking a transfer to Company E, 188th P. V. I., 24th Army Corps, and serving in the James River campaign. He was honorably discharged June 18, 1865. After this long, varied and faithful service Mr. Blickenderfer returned to Lancaster, but did not remain idle. He apprenticed himself to Arburger, McCollough & Co., for one year, and worked for them as a journeyman until April 1, 1866, as a patternmaker. In April, 1867, he started a brass foundry. After three months of such experience, the opportunity presented itself for him to enter into an iron foundry business, which he purchased from Marsh, Bank & Martin, and he operated the same at Duke and Chestnut streets until May 11, 1879, at which time his plant was destroyed by fire. Mr. Blickenderfer was not to be discouraged in this way, and after looking about a short time purchased his present valuable plant. This was built by William Diller, in 1855, and is located at Water and Marion streets, extending back to Arch street; the establishment comprises a general foundry and machine work shops, and employs a force of fifty-five men. By July following his loss by fire he had his new business in fine running order. He has continued its operation ever since, and through energy and ability has placed it in the front rank among the industries in this part of the State.

In August, 1866, Mr. Blickenderfer married, in Lititz, Miss Clara A. Kryder, and to this union have been born these children: Minnie O. married H. L. Zook, a leather merchant and dealer in shoe findings in Lancaster; Charles H., who married Bessie Manby, is a patternmaker with his father; Bertha M. married H. L. Forry, who fills a clerical position in Lancaster; Miss Mabel E. is at home.

Mrs. Clara A. (Kryder) Blickenderfer was born in Lititz, Pa., daughter of Charles H. and Olivia Kryder, the former of whom was a tailor, but later engaged in the wholesale liquor business. For four years he operated a hotel in Neffsville, but his later years were spent in Lancaster, his death occurring in 1897, at the age of seventy-eight years. His first wife died in 1863. They had these children: Adelaide (deceased), who was the wife of Martin Groff; Theodore (deceased), who married Fanny Miller, of Washington, D. C.; Mary (deceased), who married George Wisner, a box manufacturer of Lancaster; and Clara A., wife of Mr. Blickenderfer. By his second marriage, to Sarah Christ, Mr. Kryder had one daughter, Sarah, now deceased. Mrs. Kryder lives in Lancaster.

In politics Mr. Blickenderfer is a staunch Republican, but he always declines to accept office. He is justly valued as a comrade of the G. A. R. post in his city, and also belongs to the Royal Arcanum, of Lancaster, and to the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Blue Lodge No. 43, Lancaster; Chapter No. 43; Council No. 19; Commandery No. 13, Lancaster; and Harrisburg Consistory, 32d degree. Like his forefathers, Mr. Blickenderfer belongs to the Moravian Church. Coming of a family which has taken an honorable part in the history of Lancaster county, full of energy and business acumen, he has fulfilled the expectations of his friends, who have with interest watched his upward career. Mr. Buckenderfer is regarded as a strong man in business, a most admirable citizen, and a representative factor, in many ways, in the progressive industrial life of this city.

ISAAC W. SLOKOM, president of the Christiana National Bank, of Christiana, Lancaster county, and one of the most prominent men in his section of the State, comes of a family which has been represented in Lancaster county for over a century.

The Slokoms are of English origin, and four generations of the family rest in a private burying-ground in Lancashire, England. Isaac Slokom, great-grandfather of Isaac W., came to America from his home in Lancashire after his marriage. He first came to Pennsylvania, and located in the Wyoming Valley, about two years before the famous massacre, carrying on farming there until a short time prior to that event, when he removed to Jefferson county, W. Va. There he passed the remainder of his days, and his family of three children grew to maturity in that section: Thomas was the grandfather of Isaac W.; Jane married James Heath, and after his death made her home in New Holland, Lancaster county, where she died; Nancy married Isaac La Rue, after whose death she moved with her family to Ohio, settling at Skeel's Crossroads, in Washington township, Mercer county, where her son, Uriah La Rue, still resides.

Thomas Slokom migrated to Pennsylvania in 1798, and first resided in Providence, Lancaster county, in 1810 settling in Sadsbury township. There he carried on farming, and he also conducted the old "Red Lion Hotel," which he erected, until his death, Aug. 1, 1833. His remains rest in Sadsbury graveyard. Thomas Slokom married Susanna Miller, and of the eight children born to this union Samuel, father of Isaac W., was the last survivor. Mrs. Slokom died in 1842, at the home of one of her daughters, Mrs. Cross, in Redford, Mich. She was a descendant of Jacob Miller, who was born in 1663, emigrated to America from Germany, and purchased a large tract of land in the Pequea Valley, in Strasburg township, this county. His son Samuel was the first child born in the Swiss colony. Henry Miller, a descendant of Jacob, was a member of the convention that framed the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Samuel Slokom was born Feb. 5, 1817, in Sadsbury township, where he spent his entire life. When his father died he fell heir to the hotel and forty acres of land connected with that property, and he carried it on for six years. In 1841 he sold this place and purchased an improved farm in Wayne county, Mich., intending to settle there, but deciding to remain in his old home he bought a farm of 108 acres in Bart township, and worked the same for about six years. His next purchase was a farm of thirty acres near Christiana, and during his three years' residence on that place he carried on the Noble foundry in the village. During the last year he was in partnership with William F. Baker, to whom he sold his interest in 1853. He then invested in a farm at Coopersville, consisting of 102 acres, with three residences, a store and a blacksmith shop, and resided there for one year. The next year he carried on the Boone farm, of 108 acres, which he had purchased. In 1857 Mr. Slokom removed to the old Pownall farm at Christiana, comprising 128 acres, which he purchased of Junius P. Marshall, and there he spent the remainder of his life, which closed in 1889. As may be inferred from the various transactions in real estate referred to, Mr. Slokom was a man of keen judgment in land values, and he dealt largely in real estate, having executed over three hundred title deeds for lands. As a business man he was recognized by all who knew him to possess superior ability, which, combined with wonderful energy and industry, was the means of bringing him a fine competence. His judgment in the ordinary affairs of life was unusually sound, his practical common sense and wide knowledge of human nature, applied to every problem which presented itself, enabling him to foresee clearly many results to which others were blind or indifferent. As was natural for a man of such strong character, he exerted considerable influence in his section, and he was respected wherever his name was known. Mr. Slokom was chiefly instrumental, in 1882, in the organization of the Christiana National Bank, of which he was elected president, and he held that position until his death. For over twenty years he was a director in the Lancaster County Mutual Insurance Co., of which he served as president a number of years prior to his decease. Mr. Slokom acted as justice of the peace fifteen years, and was county commissioner one term. In 1855 he lacked but one vote of receiving the nomination of his party for the State Senate. His political affiliation was originally with the Democratic party, but he voted for Fremont, and from that time was an active worker in the Republican party.

On Jan. 4, 1837, Samuel Slokom married Mary Walker, who was born April 6, 1806, in Sadsbury township, daughter of Isaac and Deborah Walker, and they had four children who grew to maturity, Susan, Dora D., Isaac W. and Mary R. Susan is the wife of Thomas J. Houston. Dora D. married William H. Sproul, and they have two children, Samuel E. and William C. Isaac W. is mentioned below. Mary R. is the wife of James Sproul, and they have three children, Dora, Anna and Mary. Mrs. Mary Slokom died in 1892, and she and her husband are buried in the old cemetery of the Society of Friends, in Sadsbury township. Both were Friends in religious connection, Mr. Slokom joining the Society in 1844.

Isaac W. Slokom was born June 26, 1841, in Sadsbury township, and attended the district schools until he was eight years of age, after which he went to school in Christiana. He was also a student in the Christiana high school and at the Millersville Academy, from which he was graduated in 1862. Following this he read law for a year with Judge Livingston, and on leaving his office entered the Chester Valley Bank, as teller, remaining there until he entered the army for service in the Civil war, in 1863. He was clerk at Gen. Sheridan's headquarters to the close of the Rebellion, and after his return home served one year as deputy county treasurer. His next position was in the Mechanics Bank of Lancaster, where he was paying teller for two years, and for the two years following this connection he was chief clerk and assistant superintendent of the Lancaster Mfg. Co., which conducted what is now known as the Penn Rolling Mills. He was then internal revenue collector for a year and a half, at the expiration of which time he went to Washington, D. C., to take a position in the Treasury Department, where he was a clerk for two years. From this time until 1889 Mr. Slokom acted as cashier of the National Bank of Christiana, in the latter year succeeding his father in the presidency of that institution, which he has ever since retained, so managing the business that it has been successful far beyond the expectations of its founders. He has also been president of the Christiana Water Co., since its organization, in which he was one of the prime movers. He was also instrumental in the formation of the Christiana Building & Loan Association, in 1890, and has been one of the directors from that time to the present.

Mr. Slokom was the first burgess of Christiana borough, resigning that office after three years' service. He served another year after the death of his successor in that incumbency, but resigned again, and he has steadfastly refused all offers of official honors since, though it is not saying too much to assert that he could have any office in the gift of his fellow townsmen. He is popular in the Republican party, and popular in his locality irrespective of party, and the nomination to such high position as representative in Congress has been urged upon him, but he has so far resisted all the efforts of his friends and enthusiastic townsmen to get him to assume public duties. His business affairs occupy a large share of his time, and though he began life under very favorable circumstances he has made good use of all his talents, has worked as industriously as any man in his community, and has managed his affairs so ably as to materially increase his heritage. His property holdings in Christiana and Sadsbury township are extensive, and well looked after. Mr. Slokom needs no higher praise than the simple statement that he is a worthy successor to his father, whose standing in Lancaster county, both as a business man and as a citizen generally, is too well known to need remark here.

In February, 1867, Mr. Slokom was married, in Winchester, Va., to Laura V. Shyrock, and two children came to this union, Samuel and Charles S., both of whom are in the Christiana National Bank, the former as cashier, the latter as teller. Samuel married Anna Gibney, of Chester county, Pa., and they have two children, Samuel and Virginia. Charles is unmarried, and lives with his parents. Mrs. Slokom was born in Newtown, Frederick Co., Va., daughter of Col. Charles E. and Martha Shyrock, who still live in that State. Col. Shyrock was a large land owner before the Civil war, which all but broke down his fortunes, and he was a prominent man in his section during his active years. He served as a colonel in the Confederate army during the Civil war. Mrs. Slokom's paternal great-grandfather was a colonel under Washington during the Revolution, and her maternal great-grandfather was also an officer under that leader in the same struggle.

Mr. Slokom is a member of the Society of Friends, to which his wife and sons also belong.

JOSEPH K. BRENNEMAN, a well-known farmer of Manor township, residing two and a half miles south of Millersville, where he owns fifty-three acres of what was formerly known as the old Stehman farm, was born Sept. 30, 1845, on the Breneman homestead, of which full mention is made in the Breneman Family sketch, to be found elsewhere.

Joseph K. Breneman was reared to farming on the parental homestead, southeast of Creswell, and was educated in the common schools of his district. At the age of twenty-five years he started in business for himself by cultivating the home place for two years, and he then moved upon Reuben Garber's farm, where he conducted general farming for twenty years. In 1891, Joseph K. purchased his present home, and in 1892 took possession, making many valuable improvements and now owning one of the best farms of its dimensions in the township, if not the county.

In 1869 Joseph K. Breneman first married Mary Eshleman, daughter of Martin Eshleman, and to this marriage were born four children, viz: Elizabeth and Annie, deceased; Christian, at home; and Ella, wife of John Hoover, of Manor township. Mrs. Mary (Eshleman) Breneman passed away in 1880, and in 1882 Joseph K. Breneman married Miss Fannie M. Neff, daughter of Jacob Neff, and this union has been blessed with three children, namely: Emma and Phares, deceased; and Amanda, at home. Mr. and Mrs. Breneman are Mennonites in religion, and are classed among the county's most worthy citizens.

JACOB C. KREITER, a progressive farmer of Warwick township, residing one mile from Lititz, comes of a family which has long been prominent among the agricultural citizens of Lancaster county.

Christian Kreiter, his grandfather, was born Jan. 3, 1789, and lived and died in Lancaster county, passing away Jan. 1, 1874. He was a farmer for the greater part of his life, but at one time was interested in a brewery at Lititz. He belonged to the Old Whig party and served as a school director for some time. He married Catharine Behmer, and they became the parents of one child, Solomon, who was the father of our subject.

Solomon Kreiter was born April 16, 1827, near where our subject now resides. He, too, was a farmer, and followed that calling until his death, which occurred May 8, 1863. He was baptized in the Moravian Church, but eventually joined the Lutheran Church. Mr. Kreiter married Maria Grossman, and they were the parents of eight children, two of whom died in childhood; Jacob C. is our subject; John S. is a physician in Akron, Pa.; James E. died in 1885; David H. and Henry D. are twins, the former living in Fairland, the latter in Ephrata, this county; and Martha M. is the wife of Levi H. Wissler.

Jacob C. Kreiter was born May 20, 1849, in Warwick township, on the farm of which he now owns a part, and where he resides. His father died when he was a mere lad of fourteen years, and he remained at home with his mother until he was twenty-three years old, receiving his education in the common schools of the county, with one term in the State Normal at Millersville, and two in the Lititz Academy. He then began life for himself at farming on the place adjoining the one whereon he now lives. He purchased his home place in 1879, and is one of the respected citizens of Lancaster county, broad-gauged, public-spirited and fully alive to all the needs of his community. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and he has held the office of assessor since 1891.

On Nov. 14, 1872, Mr. Kreiter wedded Miss Mary A. Brunner, who was born Dec. 12, 1853, daughter of Peter and Susan Brunner. To this union came one child that died in infancy.

DAVID W. KURTZ (deceased). Reverence for the memory of departed loved ones is an instinctive attribute of human nature, and it is often intensified with the lapse of time. At the contemplative mind in its hours of solitary retrospection throws back the portals of memory on their resting hinges, and peers into the caverns where lurk the recollections of former relations, friends and associates, a brighter and more hallowed light seems to enshroud the objects of the mental vision and to give to them a coloring before unnoticed, or at least but dimly seen, and through which new characteristics, so to speak, become perceptible and add to the melancholy interest felt for the departed loved one, unavailing though that interest may be; practically such, however, are the conditions that pervade the recollection of the late David W. Kurtz.

David W. Kurtz was born Feb. 5, 1830, on the farm still occupied by his widow and surviving child in Salisbury township, and died on the same farm in October, 1884, his remains being interred in the United Evangelical Church cemetery. His parents, Christian and Anna (Weaver) Kurtz, were also natives of Lancaster county, where Christian was all his life a farmer, and where his remains after death were buried in a private cemetery beside those of his wife, both having been devout members of the Mennonite Church. They were the parents of seven children, born in the following order, but all now deceased, including the youngest, David W., himself. To-wit: Maria, who was married to Moses Sharp; Susannah, married to Moses Eby; Jonathan, who married Prudence Good; Elizabeth, married to Peter Eby; Joseph, who died in young manhood; Lydia, who was married to Christopher Umble; and David W., whose name is mentioned above.

In January, 1853, David W. Kurtz was married at the parsonage in Salisbury—the ceremony being performed by the late Rev. John Wallace—to Miss Maria Hurst, a most amiable young lady, who was born June 5, 1829, in Leacock township, a daughter of Henry and Mary (Varnes) Hurst. To this union were born two children, namely: Harry H., who married Sallie Hamilton, had two children, Guy (deceased) and Alta M., and is now living retired with his mother, Mrs. David W. Kurtz; Laura E., who married Luther Mentzer, a farmer in Salisbury township, and has had five children, viz: Herbert, Helen (deceased), Luella, Ruth and Guy.

Henry Hurst, father of Mrs. David W. Kurtz, was a native of Leacock township, was a farmer by vocation, and a prominent and well-known citizen. His death occurred Jan. 5, 1856, at the age of sixty-two years and ten months, and that of his wife in June, 1848, when forty-two years old—the latter being of German parentage. The remains of this honored couple were buried in a private cemetery in Leacock township, the mother having been a pious and consistent member of the German Reformed Church, while the father, although not a member, was a constant attendant at the same, and a liberal contributor to its support. To the marriage of Henry and Mary (Varnes) Hurst there were born seven children in the following order: Martin, who died young; John, who married Julia Dorsey, and lived to be seventy-two; Hannah, who was married to David Brisben, and died at twenty-eight; Henry, who died young; Maria, now Mrs. David W. Kurtz; Rebecca and Susan, who died young. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Kurtz were John and Annie Hurst, of whom more may be learned by reference to the biographical sketch of M. S. Hurst, of Leacock township.

The late David W. Kurtz was all his life a farmer, and passed his entire life on the 133-acre homestead on which his birth took place, and which came to him by inheritance. While his wife was and is an earnest member of the United Evangelical Church, Mr. Kurtz could never be induced to join, but he was, nevertheless, a sincere Christian and a constant attendant at the services of the congregation. He freely contributed financially toward the maintenance of this, as well as other religious bodies, and to the very deserving work of charity that was brought to his notice. In promoting works designed for the convenience, comfort and happiness of the public he was ever foremost, often taking the initiative in such measures and aiding them promptly with his capital. He was also prompt and reliable in all business transactions, and was quiet and domestic in his home relations. He possessed a handsome competence, which has passed into the hands of his widow, who is making such use of it as she feels would have pleased her late husband. Mr. Kurtz was a truly beloved and honored citizen, whose acquaintance extended all over the township and into the adjacent country, where his pleasant ways and cheerful countenance are still cherished in the memory of his former associates.

M. G. SCHAEFFER, a prominent member of the Lancaster Bar, is a son of Martin Schaeffer, of Bareville, whose sketch and ancestry will be found elsewhere among these annals.

Mr. Schaeffer was born in Earl township July 30, 1868, and after studying in the schools of the district, went to Muhlenberg College, from which he was graduated in 1890. After his graduation, he entered the law office of the late Judge Brubaker, and was admitted to practice in the courts of Lancaster county, in November, 1893. Two years later he was admitted to the Supreme Court, and now practices in that court as well as the local courts, the Superior Court, and the United States District Court. During the three years' term of office of District Attorney W. T. Brown, Mr. Schaeffer acted as assistant district attorney, proving a most painstaking, efficient and popular official. An ardent Republican, he has been a local campaign orator since 1891, doing most effective service for his party's cause. He was slated by the Republican State Central Committee for State campaigning, but never took up the work, preferring the local field.

On May 6, 1895, Mr. Schaeffer was married to Miss Anna M. Light, daughter of Bishop H. E. Light, of Mountville, a well-known clergyman of the German Baptist Brethren. Two children have been born of this union: Elizabeth Dorothy and Anna Martha. Mr. Schaeffer's law offices are at No. 13, North Duke street, and his home is at No. 137 East James street, in the city of Lancaster. As one of the younger members of the Lancaster Bar, Mr. Schaeffer has been very successful, enjoying the absolute confidence of a large clientage, and we bespeak for him continued success, and a constantly increasing practice in his chosen profession, as the well merited fruits of industry and close attention to business.

JACOB EABY. The general farming interests of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, have a fitting representative in the person of Jacob Eaby, an ex-soldier who although in but the prime of life has attained prominence in the pursuit of agriculture and has secured for himself a competency. He was born May 18, 1846, in Intercourse, Leacock township, a son of Moses and Susannah (Kurtz) Eaby, the former of whom had been a merchant in that village for forty years.

Jacob Eaby passed his boyhood days in aiding his father in his business and in attending school until a little over seventeen years old, when, seeing that the slavery propagandists of the South were determined to disrupt the Union rather than see their pet institution perish for want of new territory in which to nourish it, he enlisted, March 24, 1864, for three years, as a defender of the integrity of the States, provided the war was not sooner brought to a close. He was assigned to Co. C, Lieut. Cyrus L. Eckert, 79th P. V. I., and although he had a part in several skirmishes did not have an opportunity of being engaged in a regular battle, and was honorably discharged, unhurt, at Alexandria, Va., July 12, 1865, about three months after the close of the war.

On returning from the army Mr. Eaby re-entered his father's store, where he remained three years; he then went to Kansas and entered 160 acres of land which, four months later, he abandoned. He then returned to his old home in Leacock township, Lancaster county, worked three years among the farmers, added to his savings and purchased his present home of fifty acres. At Lancaster, Oct. 10, 1871, Mr. Eaby married Miss Lucie E. Murr, the accomplished daughter of Isaac and Anna (Glouner) Murr, of East Earl township, but her own birth took place in Leacock township March 31, 1854. Isaac Murr was a blacksmith by trade, was greatly respected in his community during his long and useful life, and died March 27, 1898, at the age of seventy-two years; his wife died in 1865, when she was but forty-two years old. The remains of both were interred in Roland's Church cemetery, in Earl township. To Mr. and Mrs. Murr were born five children, namely: Lucie E., now Mrs. Eaby; Joseph, a blacksmith, in Leacock township; Maria, wife of Harry Grover, a milk dealer at Long Branch, N. J.; Anna, wife of Newton Hoar; and Ida, married to Henry Hoar, a blacksmith at Intercourse, Lancaster county. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Eaby was Jacob Murr, a farmer of Lancaster county, and the maternal grandparents were Jacob and Anna Glouner, natives of Lancaster county, Pa., and Germany, respectively.

To the marriage of Jacob and Lucie E. (Murr) Eaby have been born a family of thirteen children, all with the exception of Isaac W. still living, viz: Moses, a farmer in South Hermitage, Salisbury township, married to Anna Ayers, who has borne him four children; Cora, wife of Frederick Heim, of Lancaster, is the mother of one child; Miss Cecelia M. lives in Philadelphia; Anna M. married J. Willis Martin, a jeweler, and is living in Savannah, Ga.; Miss Mary E. resides in Philadelphia; Isaac W. died young; David K. lives in Lancaster; Gracie M.; Jason K. and A. Amanda are twins;

Susan C.; and Samuel S. and Nellie B. are twins. The six last named are all at home.

Mr. Eaby is an up-to-date agriculturist, and although his farm comprises but fifty acres it is one of the best tilled and most productive in the township of Salisbury. He thoroughly understands his calling and has always been industrious and thrifty. He is a genial, good-natured gentleman and counts his friends by the score, who all hold him in the highest esteem and admire him for his personal merit and his upright walk through life. In politics Mr. Eaby is a Republican.

JACOB C. SEITZ comes of an old Lancaster county family, his grandfather, John Seitz, with his wife, Annie Garber, having settled in Manor township in early days. John Seitz was a hard working farmer; he was the father of one son, named Jacob G., who in turn was the father of Jacob C. John had three brothers, Michael, Jacob and Henry.

Jacob G. Seitz was born in 1814, and died in 1892. He cultivated a farm of three hundred acres, but ceased active work several years before his death. He was a man of progressive ideas, stimulated by native shrewdness and close observation, and was noted for his enlightened public spirit. No well-matured scheme for the general welfare was ever submitted to him without commanding his hearty approval and liberal support. In early life he was an Old Line Whig, but after the formation of the Republican party he affiliated with that organization. His fellow citizens attested their confidence in his ability and integrity by elevating him to various positions of honor and trust. In educational and sociological matters he cherished a deep interest. He served as prison inspector and as a member of the school board, and after the passage of the new State school law officially aided in carrying it into execution. He was a man of means, and for many years was a director in the First National Bank of Columbia. He married Barbara Charles, who died in her forty-first year. She was the mother of nine children: Anna, John, Jacob C., Charles, Amos, Barbara, Elizabeth, Christian and Henry. The two last named died in early childhood. Anna married Henry W. Mann, of Manor. John is a resident of Mountville, as are also Charles and Barbara and Amos, none of whom are married. Elizabeth is the wife of Jacob R. Myers, of Manor township.

Jacob C. Seitz was born in Manor Oct. 30, 1836. At the age of twenty-three years he began farming on his own land, and is today one of Lancaster county's most successful agriculturists, owning 123 acres of choice, highly cultivated land, within a mile of Mountville. Like his father, he is a man of broad, advanced views on all questions of public import, and like him he has made his influence felt in the community at large. For nine years he served upon the school board, and he succeeded his father in the directorate of the First National Bank of Columbia.

Genial and generous, with a heart lenient toward the failing of others, he is deservedly popular, numbering his friends by scores. He is an enthusiastic sportsman with both rod and gun, and his home is filled with trophies of his prowess. He is an expert taxidermist, and has himself mounted his specimens with his own hands. He is no less dextrous in wood-carving, and he exhibits to his friends numerous specimens of his skill in the form of walking sticks, embellished with figures symbolic of the achievements of the sportsman in field and stream, executed with a boldness and delicacy which might well awaken envy in the breast of a professional artist.

Mr. Seitz has been twice married. His first wife was Lucy Ann, a daughter of Joseph Stoner, to whom he was united in 1857. The issue of this marriage was two sons, Joseph and Clayton, both of whom are Manor township farmers. On Sept. 30, 1866, Mr. Seitz was married to Elizabeth, a daughter of Benjamin K. Lehman; her mother, before marriage, was Elizabeth Newcomer. One daughter has been born to them: Mary E. L., who graduated from the State Normal School, at Millersville in 1899, and lives with her parents. Her first actual experience as a teacher was during the winter of 1899-1900. Mrs. Seitz is a member of the Mennonite Church.

BENJAMIN W. HERSHEY, who entered into rest Feb. 3, 1902, aged forty-nine years, four months and twenty-two days, was a contractor and builder of Landisville, Pa., and was one of the leading citizens of Lancaster county. He was born on a farm in West Hempfield township, this county, Sept. 11, 1852, son of John N. and Mary (Witmeyer) Hershey, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county.

John Hershey, Sr., his grandfather, married Mary Nolt, and they reared a large family. Mr. Hershey was not an industrious farmer, preferring the pleasures of hunting and kindred sports, but having inherited a large fortune, it was not a necessity for him to till the soil.

John N. Hershey, son of John, Sr., and father of Benjamin W., was born on the farm near Silver Springs, in West Hempfield township, where he remained for twenty-one years, removing then to the Hoffman Hershey farm in West Hempfield township, where he lived six years. He then came to his farm of eighteen acres in East Hempfield township, within one mile of the village of Landisville, and here he lived until his death, in 1883, at the age of sixty-five years, his birth having been in 1818. John Hershey was married to Mary Witmeyer, and she still resides in the village of Landisville. They had a family of thirteen children, and Benjamin W. was the third in order of birth.

Benjamin W. Hershey acquired his education in the public schools, and remained at home until the age of twenty-three years, beginning then a trade in which he afterward attained such marked success.

For two years after finishing his apprenticeship to the carpenter trade he worked as a journeyman, and then, at his father's request, returned home, renting what was known as the John Hess farm. This he operated in connection with his trade, and by his industry and energy became the owner of considerable property, and reared a family of seven children in comfort, giving them educational advantages, and at his death he was considered one of the substantial citizens of the county.

Mr. Hershey owned his residence tract near Landisville, and also a valuable building lot in Rohrerstown. He assisted in the erection of many of the most substantial and imposing buildings in the beautiful city of Lancaster, his work being seen in the Western Market house, also in Rohrerstown; the Mennonite Church and the school building, while a great number of the commodious and convenient barns which make Lancaster county known to the tourist as a prosperous agricultural section were erected by his skill and mechanical knowledge. Mr. Hershey was one of the examples of capable industry who are always found where prosperity reigns, for when the winter settled down, and both farming and carpenter work were at a stand-still, he assisted his farmer neighbors in their butchering, this being a very important branch of agricultural industry. Few men in this locality displayed more energy or industry than did Mr. Hershey, and few men were more thoroughly esteemed. Mr. Hershey was a devoted and consistent member of the German Baptist Church, and in 1899 he was ordained a deacon, an honor which was well deserved, as he was a sincere and conscientious man.

On Dec. 5, 1878, Mr. Hershey was married to Miss Emma Dietrich, and a family of seven children were born to this union: Dora, who is a teacher in the public schools; Milton, a brakeman; Samuel, a clerk in a store; Franklin, Emma, Mary and John, at home. Mrs. Hershey was born on the old Andrew Kauffman farm near Landisville Dec. 17, 1860, a daughter of Samuel H. and Mary (Stewart) Dietrich, the former of whom is still surviving at the age of seventy-six years, in Bamford, the mother having died Jan. 12, 1898, at the age of sixty-six years, two months and twenty-six days. She was a most worthy member of the German Baptist Church, a devoted mother, excellent wife and kind neighbor. Mr. Dietrich is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church.

GEORGE L. BUCKWALTER. Prominent among the leading citizens of East Lampeter township is George L. Buckwalter, a popular and progressive member of an old and honored family of the county. Although now living a retired life, he formerly was well and favorably known through this locality as a successful stockdealer, and an excellent man of business.

George L. Buckwalter was born on the farm of which he is the present owner, located in East Lampeter township, on the Williamstown pike road, locally known as the old Philadelphia road. His parents were Martin and Ann (Lefever) Buckwalter, the former of whom was a son of John Buckwalter, Sr., and a brother of John Jr., and Eliza. One daughter of John Buckwalter, Sr., Susanna, deceased, married first Hugh Moore, and later became the wife of Tobias Leaman, who now lives retired at Millersville, with his son's widow; and Elizabeth married Abram Leaman.

The original title, in the Buckwalter family, to the lands now owned by George L., was held by grandfather John Buckwalter, who improved the property with out-buildings, and who also erected two stone dwellings, facing from opposite sides of the road, this location being formerly of some note, being famous under the name of "Running Pump Hotel," and the first proprietor of this comfortable hostelry was John Buckwalter, Sr., and at his death he was succeeded by his son, John.

The children of Martin and Ann Buckwalter were: Maria, the widow of Christian Rohrer; Susan, deceased wife of Isaac Bushong; Sarah, the wife of Henry Leaman; Eliza, deceased wife of David Lefever; Annie; and George L. The parents of this family were buried in the old Mellinger burying ground. They were good and consistent members of the German Reformed Church.

George L. Buckwalter grew to manhood on the farm, with only common school advantages, and he has been a very successful agriculturist and has been identified with much of the progress of East Lampeter township. Politically he is a staunch Republican. In 1874 he wedded Eliza E. Esbenschade, whose death occurred in 1878. For his second wife he married Miss Fanny Herr, fifth child of John and Fanny (Kreider) Herr, both of whom were of the Reformed Mennonite faith. They now rest in the old Longenecker cemetery.

The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Buckwalter were: Christian K. died unmarried in 1855, at the age of twenty-two; Abraham K. married Serena Diller, and died in 1896, at the age of sixty-two years; Anna, who died March 21, 1886, aged forty-eight years, was the wife of Franklin Bowman, and left one daughter, Annetta H., a charming and accomplished woman; Amos K. married Lizzie Kohr, daughter of John Kohr, and has one son, John K.; and Sue A. married Dr. B. F. Herr, of Millersville, and has one daughter, Fannie M.

WITMER. The name of Witmer has long been known and respected in Lancaster county. David Witmer passed a long and useful life there, leaving behind him the record of an exemplary life, as a minister in the Old Mennonite Church, as an excellent and industrious farmer, kind neighbor and devoted care-taker of his family. For a number of years he officiated at the Mellinger meeting house, well known in his locality. He married Annie Rutt, and they became the parents of eleven children, all but two of these reaching maturity: Jacob, a retired farmer, lives in East Lampeter township; Abram was a farmer and tobacco dealer; David; Hettie is unmarried; Annie is the widow of Christian Kendig; Mary, deceased, was the wife of Emanuel Herr; Elizabeth died unmarried; Barbara, deceased, the wife of Christian Frey; and Benjamin R.

Benjamin R. Witmer was born in East Lampeter township in 1838, and during a life that reached to 1888 he devoted his time to agricultural pursuits, becoming one of the most successful farmers of this locality. His well-tilled fields and excellent improvements testify to his thrift and good management. His most estimable wife was Mary Kreider, and ten children were born to them, two of whom died in infancy, the others attaining maturity and becoming some of the most highly esteemed residents of this part of Lancaster county. These are: Annie K., the wife of Elias Myer; John K., the farmer on the old homestead; MARY K.; Amos K., a farmer of East Lampeter township; Benjamin K., a farmer also of East Lampeter township; David K., a farmer of Leacock township; Daniel G., a farmer of Lancaster township; and Esther K., at home. Both parents were worthy members of the Old Mennonite Church, and no family in the township is held in higher esteem.

AMOS A. WEAVER, one of the progressive and substantial farmer-citizens of Lancaster county, who owns and occupies the old family homestead in Strasburg township, was born March 9, 1852, a son of Henry K. and Christianna (Hoover) Weaver.

Henry K. Weaver was born Sept. 7, 1823, in Juniata county, Pa. His father died when he was a small boy, and soon after this affliction the mother with four of her children moved into Lancaster county. After some residence in Providence township the mother married Tobias Kreider, and the children of her first marriage became scattered. These were: George; Samuel, who married the daughter of Simon Groff; Catherine; and Henry K., the father of the subject of this sketch. A man by the name of Yordy took Henry K. as an apprentice on his farm, and there he was reared and later learned the tailoring trade, with John Raub, in Martinsville, working at this for some eight years, and gave it up in order to give his attention to farming, which had always been a favorite occupation. In 1878 he bought a farm of seventy-nine acres of fine, valuable land, located three miles south of the borough of Strasburg, and here he spent the remainder of his days, his death occurring March 15, 1891. Through life he had been a consistent member of the Reformed Mennonite Church. On Oct. 16, 1845, he was married to Christianna Hoover, a daughter of Abraham Hoover, who was born in Strasburg township Oct. 1, 1822, and died Aug. 1, 1883, the mother of eleven children: Mary Emma, born in July, 1846, resides on the old homestead; Gideon, born in September, 1848, died in 1852; Ada, born in January, 1850, mar-

Amos A. Weaver, who resides upon the old homestead, has devoted the greater part of his life to farming interests, although he learned the blacksmith trade, when younger. His line has been general farming, and since taking charge of the old place he has added land until he now owns ninety-two acres, and this he has improved until he possesses one of the best properties in the neighborhood. Both he and his sisters are devoted and consistent members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, where they are valued for their Christian life and character. The family is one of the most highly respected in Strasburg township.

ALBERT ROSENSTEIN; the senior member of the well-known business corporation known as the Lancaster Silver Plate Company, manufacturers of umbrella, parasol and cane mounts and fine natural sticks, with a New York office at No. 89 Franklin street, is one of the leading and substantial citizens of Lancaster.

Albert Rosenstein was born in Lancaster June 29, 1854, a son of Levi and Caroline (Strauss) Rosenstein, the former a native of Hanover, Prussia, and the latter of the vicinity of Frankfort. Both came to Philadelphia in 1850, where they met and were married, and later located in Lancaster, where Mr. Rosenstein engaged in the grocery business for a period of forty years, living retired thereafter until his death, which occurred in February, 1897. His burial took place in Lancaster. Mr. Rosenstein was one of those careful, quiet, conservative business men, whose excellent methods and untiring industry invariably bring them success. His widow, now aged seventy-five years, is an esteemed resident of Lancaster. The children born to these most estimable people are among the most respected residents of Lancaster county: Albert is one of the proprietors of the Lancaster Silver Plate Company; Rosalie married M. H. Marx; Miss Hattie conducts a millinery establishment in Lancaster; Morris is a cigar manufacturer of Lancaster; Emma married Isadore Goldberg, a cigar manufacturer and jobber, of Coatesville, Pa.; Isaac represents the Silver Plate Company in New York.

Albert Rosenstein was educated in the public schools of Lancaster, attending up to the age of thirteen years, when he went to New York City, and there entered the employ of J. Rosenthal & Co., importers of fancy goods, with which firm he continued until he was twenty years of age. Then he returned to Lancaster to engage in business for himself, embarking first in a wholesale notion business, but soon changing to merchant tailoring, in which for five years he was a leader in Lancaster. Mr. Rosenstein attracted the very best and most critical custom of the city, and conducted the business until the present company was organized, when he sold his former establishment to Robert Pierce.

In 1887, with a force of thirty hands, Mr. Rosenstein, in partnership with M. W. Fraim, organized the Lancaster Silver Plate Company, which has gradually increased in magnitude until employment is now given to 250 hands, and a New York office is necessary to handle the constantly increasing trade, which extends all over the United States and Europe. In 1894 occurred the death of Mr. Fraim, and Mr. Rosenstein continued alone until 1898, when he sold a half interest to H. Z. Rhoads, who is the other member of the present firm. Theirs is the largest umbrella, parasol and cane mounting establishment in the world, and they not only sell but purchase choice goods and raw materials in every land.

In February, 1875, Mr. Rosenstein was united in marriage with Hannah Rosenthal, who was born in Philadelphia, a daughter of Jacob and Lena (Ettinger) Rosenthal, natives of Germany who came to America in 1845, and engaged in the manufacture of clothing in Philadelphia. Mr. Rosenthal becoming one of the largest manufacturers of his day. He died in 1887, aged seventy years; he had been retired from business for some time. His widow survived until 1892, dying at the age of sixty-eight.

To Mr. and Mrs. Rosenstein have been born three children, namely: Edwin I., who is in his father's employ; Florence, who married Isadore Rosenthal, Esq., an attorney of Lancaster; and Miss Helene, at home. Mr. Rosenstein is of a social temperament, genial and affable, and is identified with the following fraternities: K. of P., I. O. O. F., I. O. B. B., Royal Arch. In politics he supports the Republican party. His religious membership is with the Temple Shairry Shomaim.

Mr. Rosenstein lives a busy life, looking carefully after his business interests, as befits one with so large a capital at stake, while his civic pride and social obligations also command much of his time and attention. In every way he ranks with the leading citizens of Lancaster.

EZRA PFAUTZ. When death removed Ezra Pfautz, at the early age of twenty-four years, there passed out of life one of the most honorable and esteemed citizens of Warwick township, Lancaster county, a quiet, just and unassuming man, who lived a most estimable life in the discharge of his daily duties, leaving behind him a memory that will long be tenderly cherished.

Ezra Pfautz was a son of John and Mary (Royer) Pfautz, of Warwick township, the former one of the most prominent men of Lancaster county, and the latter connected with one of the old and honored families, both paternal and maternal names being known among the earliest settlers.

John Pfautz, the grandfather, was of German origin, and became one of the wealthiest farmers of Lancaster county. He reared a most estimable family of children, these being: Daniel, Mary, Joel, John, Ephraim, Lydia, Leah and Annie, all of them being consistent members of the German Baptist Church, and all of them having now passed out of life.

John Pfautz (2), son of John and father of Ezra, was the father of four children: Elias, Joseph and Ezra, deceased; and John Jr., who lives in Elstonville, Manheim township, where he is a thrifty farmer.

Ezra Pfautz was born May 10, 1845, and died Jan. 21, 1870, in the flower of his youth, leaving behind him a devoted wife, Susanna (Rupp) Pfautz, whom he had married Nov. 7, 1867, and an infant daughter, Matilda, born March 25, 1869, she being now the representative of the sixth generation of the name in America.

Thirteen years ago Mrs. Pfautz and her daughter removed to Ephrata, buying at that time the valuable property located at No. 32 West Main street, where they established themselves in handsome style. They are regarded as not only among the most substantial, but the most highly respected, among the residents of the borough. They are highly valued and consistent members of the German Reformed Church, at Ephrata, giving liberally to its support, and are interested in its benevolent and charitable enterprises.

During life Ezra Pfautz was an honest, industrious and God-fearing man, a kind husband and father, and one of the best of neighbors and most excellent of citizens. Such men are an honor to a neighborhood, and at their death are deeply deplored.

PRESTON E. HANNUM, who is postmaster at Christiana, where he has been engaged for many years as a cattle dealer, was born in Aston township, Delaware Co., Pa., Sept. 27, 1851, a son of William and Anna (Eyre) Hannum, both natives of Delaware county.

William Hannum was a son of Aaron and Sarah (Mercer) Hannum, farming people of Delaware county. He, too, was in his earlier life a farmer, but became a miller when he was about forty years old, making milling his occupation for the rest of his active life. He died in August, 1884, at the age of sixty-three. His widow, whose maiden name was Anna Eyre, survived until 1900, when she too passed away, at the ripe age of seventy-three years. William Hannum held various township offices, was justice of the peace, and school director, and in his time a very active and public-spirited citizen. Both he and his wife were members of the Friends Association. To them were born the following children:

Sally, who married Hayes Clark, a farmer of Chester county, Pa.; Preston E., whose name appears at the opening of this article; Belle W., a teacher in Bucks county; Rebecca E., who married George Hoopes, a farmer in Chester county; Harriet W., who married J. Edson Shallcross, a resident of Coatesville, Pa.; Frank M., in the lumber business at Christiana; Walter, in Chester county; and George W., with our subject.

On April 18, 1878, Preston E. Hannum was married, in Atglen, Chester Co., Pa., to Lottie E. Philips, by whom he has had the following children: John P.; Sarah and Anna, who are dead; William; and Caroline B. Mrs. Lottie E. (Philips) Hannum was born in Atglen, a daughter of John M. and Sarah (Jones) Philips, both natives of Chester county. Her father, who was a farmer, died in Chester county, and her mother, born July 28, 1819, died July 19, 1902.

Mr. Hannum remained on his father's farm until he was thirteen years old, when he entered the mill, and learned the milling trade under the parental care and direction. He was engaged in the operation of the mill until 1884, when he sold it, and turning his attention to the cattle business, soon built up a very good trade. He was appointed postmaster June 1, 1897, and by his genial disposition, business abilities and accommodating disposition he has made a host of friends since his accession to the postmastership. Mr. Hannum has been school director for thirteen years, and clerk of the borough since its incorporation. For the past ten years he has been on the County committee. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a member of the Baptist Church. His standing in the community in every way is beyond question, and he is numbered among the leading citizens of Christiana.

JACOB PICKEL, one of the successful and representative farmers and dairymen of Sadsbury township, was born in Bart township, this county, Sept. 1, 1845, son of Leonard and Mary E. (Miller) Pickel, natives of Bart and Pequea townships.

Leonard Pickel was a man well and favorably known in this county, and was equally at home in the trades of farmer, cooper, carpenter and horse dealer. His business connections were extensive, and it was while he was attending to some large transaction in Ogden, Utah, in 1881, that he died, at the age of sixty-five years. The mother survived until Sept. 2, 1895, dying at the age of seventy-two years. For many years Leonard Pickel was a prominent man in Lancaster county, was poor director and county commissioner for some years. The children born to Leonard Pickel and wife were: Ross M., who died at the age of sixty years; Ephraim, who is a farmer and carpenter, in Paradise township; Jacob; Samuel G., a farmer of Sadsbury township; Ellis, a grocery merchant of Lancaster; Saminah, deceased, who married James Martin; Elizabeth E., who married Jonathan Hoke, of Illinois; and Flora, who married Ray Reed, a bookkeeper, in Lancaster.

Until his marriage Jacob Pickel remained with his parents, assisting his father in his various lines of business. The seventeen months succeeding his marriage were employed in the smelting furnace in Paradise township, and then he accepted the management of a farm of 218 acres, in Salisbury township, for Joseph Warton, and continued with him, as his reliable and efficient superintendent, for a period of thirty years. In 1899 he moved to his present well-cultivated and valuable farm, purchasing the same from Samuel Fogle. Here Mr. Pickel has made many valuable improvements, and now owns one of the best farms in this locality.

In February, 1869, in the Presbyterian parsonage, in Bart township, Jacob Pickel married Mary E. Smith, and the children born to this union are: Esther M., who graduated from Millersville State Normal School in 1892, married William P. Hoar, a lumber merchant of California; Leonard C., who married Cora Wise, daughter of Jacob Wise, has one child, and is a farmer in Chester county; Mary F., who married William Virtue, a farmer of Sadsbury township, has two children; Leeta M., is a music teacher, at home; and Emma R. is at home.

Mrs. Pickel was born in Paradise township July 6, 1848, a daughter of Stewart and Mary A. (Worth) Smith, both of Chester county. Shortly after their marriage they settled in Paradise township, where they became farmers, and there he died in 1885, at the age of seventy-six years, her death also being in April, 1885, at the age of sixty-four years. Both were members of the Presbyterian Church, and both were buried in the cemetery at Octoraro. Their children were: Susannah, the widow of Jesse Pickel, of Chester county; Hester, the widow of Lewis Pickel, of Sadsbury township; Emma, who married Miller Mendenhall, of Bart township; Robert, of Sadsbury township; Miller, deceased; Phoebe, who married Aaron Harnish, of Chester county; Joseph, of Philadelphia; and Mary E., Mrs. Jacob Pickel.

Mr. Pickel is a leading member of the M. E. Church in this locality, and has long been prominently identified with the Republican party. His upright dealing and kind neighborliness have made him many friends in the township, and he is much respected.

DAVID HUBER. In its farming community is found the bone and sinew of a State's prosperity. Questionable is it if any other profession is so well represented in the legislative bodies of the State, and her prominence in the Union is gauged not by her population, but by the value of her agricultural products. In Lancaster county are located a number of old and wealthy agricultural families who have for many years done worthy service in placing their section favorably before the country, and among these is the Huber family, well and favorably known all through the county.

Henry Huber, the grandfather of David Huber, of whom this biography is written, was reared on Beaver Creek, south of Strasburg, where he owned and operated a large property. He spent his whole life there, engaged in its improvement. His wife was Ann Herr, a granddaughter of Rev. Christian Herr, who came from Switzerland in 1709, with his father, Hans Herr. Henry and Ann (Herr) Huber had a family of nine children: Henry, John, David, Christian, Jacob, Abraham, Fannie (who married John Rush), Ann (who married Jacob Herr), and Maria (who died single). The mother of this family lived a long and eventful life, her birth taking place far back in the 18th century, and her experiences being those of early pioneer days. For seventy years she was a devout member of the Mennonite Church, and was noted for her Christian piety. At the age of ninety-two she passed away, leaving behind her an example worthy to be emulated by her descendants.

Henry Huber, the eldest child of this family, was born near Strasburg in 1773, and his death occurred in 1849. Early in his business life he engaged in teaming, his route being between Wilmington and Philadelphia to other points of more or less distance, as at that time the most of the transportation had to be accomplished in this way, but previous to his marriage he located on a farm in Lampeter township, consisting of 120 acres, which belonged to his mother. There he made many valuable improvements in the way of fences, planting of orchards, draining and the erection of commodious and suitable buildings, and as this property later came into his possession, he remained upon it until his removal to the fine estate now owned by David Huber, this location taking place in 1822. This fine property was originally owned by Hans Herr, and descended in line to the son, Rev. Christian Herr, and ever since has been in the family, with the exception of a few years, when it was owned by the Withers family. The father of David Huber purchased and restored it to the family. Henry Huber lived upon this place until the time of his decease, a quiet, domestic man, at peace with his neighbors, and a worthy member of the Mennonite Church.

Henry Huber married Veronica Buckwalter, of near Muddy Creek, Lancaster county, and her life extended over seventy-six years, filled with good deeds. She was also a consistent member of the Mennonite Church. Eight children were born to this worthy couple: Mary, deceased, married David Hess, a deacon in the Mennonite Church; Susan, deceased, married Peter Huber; Christian became an extensive farmer on the place in West Lampeter township, on which his father had settled, and is now deceased; Ann, deceased, married Nathaniel Harnish; Fannie, deceased, married Jonathan Stauffer; Elizabeth, deceased, married first John Harnish, and second, Adam Gochbauer; Martha, deceased, married Samuel Burkholder; and David.

David Huber was born Sept. 4, 1822, and was reared on the farm which he now occupies, receiving his education in the public schools of his locality. As his father was the owner of large properties, young Huber found sufficient work to engage his attention as soon as he had finished his school days, and in the course of time came into possession of the home farm of seventy-five acres, which he has managed, since proving himself to be one of the successful agriculturists of the county. In connection with this estate, David Huber also owns other valuable property, both in this county and in some of the Western States. A man of recognized probity, he has been entrusted with the management of many estates and has administered them with judgment and justice. By the rectitude of his life he has won the confidence and esteem of all, being called upon to identify himself with some of the most important public interests of the place. For many years he was a business leader, for twenty years was a director in the Lancaster County Bank, in which he is also a stockholder, and was one of the promoters of the Southern Market House.

David Huber has twice married. his first wife having been Elizabeth Good, a daughter of Christian Good, of Pequea township, and three children were born of this union: Frank, who is an extensive farmer and stockraiser in Missouri, located twenty miles south of Kansas City, near Belton, in Cass county; Catherine, who married Amos Good, of West Lampeter township; and one that died in infancy. The mother of these children died in 1848. The second marriage of David Huber was to Maria McCartney, a daughter of John McCartney, of Pequea township, and to this union four children were born: Amos, an extensive farmer of Cass county, Mo.; John, who resides at home, engaged in the tobacco packing business, and who is one of the directors in the Southern Market House of Lancaster city; Mary, who married Martin Hess, of Pequea township; and David H., a farmer of West Lampeter township, and a member of the school board. For many years David Huber has been a member of the Mennonite Church, and is one of its most esteemed and consistent attendants. Although advanced in years, he is still possessed of much of the keen business ability of youth, and is quite capable of attending to the business which his large property entails. The family is one of honor and respectability in Lancaster county.

JAMES P. MARSH, a general merchant and highly esteemed citizen of Gap, Pa., was born in this town Oct. 22, 1846, son of Jehu and Rosanna Marsh, more extended notice of the family being found elsewhere.

Mr. Marsh was reared in his native village and acquired his education in the district schools. He early manifested an inclination for a business life, and began his successful career in the capacity of clerk in the employ of Coates & Thomas Marsh. In 1869 he went to Smyrna, in Sadsbury township, where he was engaged in clerking, when he was appointed postmaster by President Johnson. In 1873 he left Smyrna and spent one year as a farmer in Sadsbury township, and then became traveling representative for R. J. Houston. On year later he returned to his clerical work, in the employ of the Nickel Mine store, which was then under the management of Hon. Milton Heidelbaugh, in which situation he continued for three years. He then was engaged on the mine farm for a period of eight months, when he took charge of Esquire Frees' store which was located in Georgetown, Pa. In 1878 after this varied experience, Mr. Marsh returned to Gap, and in partnership with his father, engaged in a general mercantile business, and since the death of his father has operated it alone.

Since assuming sole charge of this business, Mr. Marsh has enlarged its original scope and proportions fully one-half, and now carries a large and varied stock, second to none in quantity or quality, in this locality. Under the first administration of President Cleveland, Mr. Marsh was postmaster at Gap, having been a stanch Democrat at that time. With many others of his political faith, he changed his views when Bryan was the nominee for President, and cast his vote for the late President McKinley. For a long period Mr. Marsh was a leading member of the Old Democracy in this locality, and very often was sent as a delegate to the county and State conventions. Mr. Marsh is a liberal supporter of the Methodist Church, to which his whole family belongs, and he is a leader in all public movements looking to the advancement of his town.

Mr. Marsh was married (first) in 1871, in Sadsbury township, to Miss Julia Rockey, and two daughters, Anna and Ida, born to this union, both died in infancy. Julia (Rockey) Marsh was born in Sadsbury township, a daughter of Leonard Rockey, a farmer in the township, and she died in 1875, at the age of twenty-five. The second marriage of Mr. Marsh occurred Sept. 5, 1876, in Bart township, when Miss Sally J. Johnson became his wife. She was born near Oxford, Chester county, Aug. 3, 1854, daughter of William and Mary (Speakman) Johnson, the former of whom was a wheelwright by trade and a resident of Chester county all his life; there he died Feb. 20, 1897, at the age of sixty-four years. The death of the mother of Mrs. Marsh occurred in 1893, when she was aged sixty-two years, and both parents were interred in the cemetery connected with the Union Methodist Church at Nottingham, of which they were members. Their children were as follows: Rev. Charles B., who is a minister located at Strasburg; Mary A., who married Frank Thompson, a farmer near Des Moines, Iowa; William B., who resides at Andrews Bridge, in Lancaster county; Harry, who is the foreman of the Pullman Car shops at Wilmington, Del.; Harvey, who is a carpenter in Philadelphia; and Frank, who is a carpenter in Strasburg; Mrs. Marsh being the second of the family. Her paternal grandparents were James and Jane (Alexander) Johnson, natives of England who came to America and lived out their lives in Chester county, engaged in farming. The maternal grandparents were Joshua B. and Sarah (Mahlan) Speakman, who were English Quakers who settled for life in Chester county. The family born to Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have all been spared to them, and are as follows: Alice F., who acceptably taught school for one year, and is now in her father's store; Mary A., who has graduated with high honors at Millersville, and has been a successful teacher for the past four years; and Mabel E., James G. C., Frances F. and Sarah H., all remaining at home. Socially the family is prominent, and all number a wide circle of friends.

HENRY C. MILLER, of Rohrerstown, is one of the leading business men of his section of Lancaster county. He was born March 2, 1850, in East Hempfield township, this county, son of Andrew Miller, and grandson of Henry Miller.

Henry Miller was a land owner in Lancaster county, where he was born and where he spent his entire life. He was a devout member of the Mennonite Church, and all who knew him respected him for the faith which he so earnestly upheld. He married a Miss Shenck, and to them were born six children: Andrew, Henry, John, Jacob, Adeline and Anna. The last named married Philip Hottenstein, now deceased.

Andrew Miller was born in East Hempfield township in 1812, and received a practical education in the public schools. Like his father, he followed agricultural pursuits, owning a valuable tract of 200 acres. In politics he was a Republican after the formation of that party, and loyal to its principles, but he never sought office, content to use his influence in a quiet way. Mr. Miller married Susan Greider, daughter of Jacob Greider, a farmer of East Hempfield township, and to this union came seven children, as follows: Elizabeth, Phares, Adeline, Clara, Annie, Andrew and Henry C. The father died March 28, 1861, and was followed to the better land by his good wife in July, 1892, when she was in her sixty-sixth year. Mrs. Miller was also a member of the Mennonite Church.

Henry C. Miller was reared on his father's farm, where he received a thorough training to agricultural work in all its branches. During his boyhood he attended the local school. On starting out for himself he engaged in farming, carrying on a good sized place until 1885, when he purchased a gristmill in the township. In 1890 he took up the business of a coal and feed merchant, succeeding Jacob Mauk in this line. Mr. Miller still continues in both enterprises, having from the start met with success which exceeded his highest expectations. The business has doubled within the last ten years, and is still on the increase. All this has been brought about by Mr. Miller's unfaltering desire to please his patrons, to deal honorably with all, and to retain the esteem of those with whom he is associated, whether in commercial or private life. His business interests have naturally received the greater share of his attention, but though he has given up the active work of farming, he still owns forty-two acres of fine land. The busiest citizens of a community, those who come in daily contact with every phase of its life, know best the public needs and are most concerned in the general progress. Mr. Miller is no exception to this, and he has ever taken a deep interest in the advancement of his town and county. Though not an office seeker, he has consented to serve as township auditor, which incumbency he has filled, it is scarcely necessary to say, satisfactorily, for the past ten years. In political opinion he is still a strong Republican.

On Nov. 9, 1875, Mr. Miller was married to Miss Elenora Binkley, daughter of William Binkley, of East Hempfield township, now deceased. This union has been blessed by one daughter, Alice B., who in 1898 became the wife of W. Scott Bushong; they have one child, Blanch. Mr. and Mrs. Bushong occupy a fine residence erected by Mr. Miller, with whom he is associated in business, as clerk and part owner.

JOHN M. WADE presents in his own life an illustration of the value of natural intelligence, grit and honorable and persistent effort.

John Wade, his father, was born in the North of Ireland, but came to the United States when a young man, landing in Philadelphia, and eventually settling in Butler county, where he entered into the life of a farmer.

John M. Wade was born July 20, 1861, and he acquired his education in the neighboring schools. When he was thirteen years of age he went to Parker City, in the oil regions, there securing employment with a furniture dealer and undertaker. At the age of seventeen he came back to Butler county, and attended the district school for two winters, and for a time he attended the North Washington Academy, later engaging as a teacher. He attended Curry University and Union Business College, Pittsburg, Pa., where he took two courses, and then engaged in teaching in Michigan. His schooling was finally completed at the Northern Indiana Normal School, Valparaiso, Indiana, sustaining himself by teaching and tutoring among the students there attending, until he could graduate. This occurred in 1884, and for five years after he was a teacher in a business college at Wilmington, Del. From there Mr. Wade went to Wilkesbarre, where he purchased a half interest in a business college, which he held for a year, and then selling it, located in Lebanon, where in July, 1895, he established the Pennsylvania Business College, and in June of the following year the College was removed to Lancaster, and located in the Eshleman Law Building. At once the College sprang into prosperity, and its increased patronage demanded a more commodious location in the Frey Building, Nos. 2 and 5 East King street, whither it was removed in the early part of 1899. By the following spring the school demanded the use of the entire second, third and fourth floors of that great building, and there, ending with July, 1900, one hundred and seventy-five young men and women were graduated in the studies of bookkeeping, commercial law, stenography, and similar work usually done in a first-class college, in less than twelve months. This college practically never closes, but is in continuous session the entire year. Mr. Wade is assisted in his work by his two brothers, William J. and Robert M. Wade, the first, a thorough teacher of all commercial branches, and the latter an expert in shorthand. In addition to the above, able assistants are engaged in each department. The yearly enrollment is about one thousand. The Pennsylvania Business College has proved a blessing, and hundreds of young men are prospering to-day through its instruction.

Mr. Wade is an active member of St. Andrews Reformed Church, where he serves as an elder. In all that he undertakes to do he is conscientious and thorough. Aside from his school business he is accomplished and skilled in a number of lines of work; and he is the author of valuable text-books on commercial subjects which he publishes. Mr. Wade's knowledge is largely of the self-acquired kind, and very practical and serviceable. His versatility is due to continuity of effort.

ISRAEL P. MAYER, the genial and popular proprietor of the "Sycamore Hotel," of Landisville, Pa., has been one of the main factors in the progress and development of his section. He was born on a farm situated one mile from Rohrerstown, Lancaster county, Feb. 25, 1850, son of Henry and Anna (Hoefgen) Mayer, both of whom were natives of this county, and both of whom have passed from life.

Jacob Mayer, his grandfather, was a native also of this county, and was a prominent and successful farmer of his time.

Henry Mayer, son of Jacob, and father of Israel P., was for a number of years a laborer, becoming a section boss for the Pennsylvania railroad. He was also an auctioneer, and in his later years retired to a farm, passing his last days thereon, and dying when about seventy-one years of age. His wife passed away at the age of sixty-seven. They had a family of fourteen children: Emanuel, deceased; Eliza, deceased, first married John Rudisell, and second, Isaac Hurtz; Jacob, deceased; Maria, the wife of Jacob Gerbach, of Lancaster; Christian, of Lancaster; Henry, deceased; Abraham, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Sarah Ann, who died unmarried; John, of Trinidad, Colo.; Israel P., of this sketch; Annie, a Mrs. Smith, of Indianapolis; Samuel, of Indianapolis; Emma, the wife of John Lichty, of Columbia; and Sally, deceased.

Israel P. Mayer was educated in the public schools of his township, and at the age of eighteen years learned the carpenter trade with William Bowers, at Landisville, and entered the employ of Israel Brinkheiser of the same place, remaining three years, and later worked with John D. Roering for one year. Mr. Mayer then moved to the country and purchased a farm, continuing in its operation for three or four years, and working in the meantime at his trade. Mr. Mayer then moved to Lancaster, and there, after one year of journeyman work, began contracting and building, following this for a period of eighteen years, becoming the heaviest contractor in Lancaster City. Specimens of his handiwork and skill can be found all over the city, some of the notable buildings erected by him being: the Lancaster Hotel, the Northern Market, the First M. E. Church, the West Chestnut street school, the Western M. E. Church, Rathvan & Sons establishment on North Duke street, the residence of Henry Cochrane, of James and David Rose, on West Chestnut street, of Henry Rathborn, the row for Myers & Rathborn on East Chestnut, the Lancaster Planing mill, houses on West James street, the Green stone row, on North Duke street, the famous Northern Hotel, and many others that might be cited, among these being a large warehouse on North Queen street, also Jacob Shirk's warehouse, this being the first warehouse erected in Lancaster City which has remained solid on account of its proper construction. Other builders have since followed Mr. Mayer's plans.

Mr. Mayer was the first man to lay cement pavement in Lancaster and he was the principal factor in securing the northern end sewer system for the city. His business operations amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly, while the value of his work in building up the permanent improvements can not be computed. His employes numbered fifty men at times, and he became one of the heaviest taxpayers in the city. Always a man of public spirit, in 1884, Mr. Mayer accepted an election to the city council and served as a capable member of the board for several terms, declining a last election. In 1896 he removed to Bamford, and there was engaged for a time in the mercantile business and was the means of having a postoffice established at that point, Mrs. Mayer being the first postmistress. Two years later Mr. Mayer removed to Landisville, and took charge of the "Sycamore Hotel," becoming one of the most popular hotel keepers in this section. His wide acquaintance through the county and also through the State attracts to his hostelry all of the traveling public in this section, and in this well appointed and modern inn both friend and stranger are hospitably entertained.

In 1871 Mr. Mayer wedded Elizabeth Dietrich, the estimable daughter of Saul Dietrich, and to this marriage was born one daughter, Annie E., who has been thoroughly educated, and who resides at home. Few men in this locality have displayed more energy and ability than has Isaac P. Mayer. His business tact and judgment have been only equaled by his public-spirit, and many sections have had cause to feel grateful not only for his progressive ideas, but also for the ability which he showed in carrying them out for the benefit of the public. Mr. Mayer is peculiarly well qualified for the position he now holds, his genial personality and true hospitality making his house one of the favorite resting places for a large part of the traveling public.

JOHN L. GROFF, of Strasburg borough, is one of the leading and representative citizens and belongs to an old and prominent family of Lancaster county.

John L. Groff was born in the old Groff homestead March 12, 1847, a son of Emanuel Groff, and was reared on the farm, early becoming skilled in agricultural labor. His education was pursued in the common schools of the district, and at the age of twenty-four he took charge of his father's farm, conducting it on shares for a period of eighteen years, and then purchased it. This most valuable property has been under his care for thirty years, and contains 112 acres of some of the best land in the county. In 1900 he removed into Strasburg, where he erected a fine, modern residence, which is probably just as complete as any in the town, being equipped with electric lights, and hot air heating, in combination with all improvements which are designed to make life comfortable.

On Nov. 10, 1870, John L. Groff was married to Barbara Leaman, a daughter of Tobias and Elizabeth (Denlinger) Leaman, who was born Feb. 21, 1851, in East Lampeter township, and one son, Aaron L., born April 7, 1873, blessed this union. Aaron L. married Lizzie Groff, and they reside in Leacock township, where he is a successful farmer. Both Mr. and Mrs. Groff are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and the family is one of the most highly respected in the community.

JOHN R. FRANTZ, junior member of the milling firm of Frantz & Son, of Millersville, is a worthy representative of an honored old family which has been identified with the business interests of this county for over a century.

Jacob Frantz, his great-grandfather, when a young man, about 1815, purchased property near Leaman Place, east of Lancaster, consisting of a farm of 200 acres and a flouring mill, for which he paid $40,000. Locating here, he devoted the remainder of his life to the operating of his farm and mill, and being a keen, shrewd business man he accumulated much wealth. He was one of the leading and influential citizens of the county, and an active worker in the Mennonite Church. He died in 1840, at the age of seventy years, and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Hershey, died at the age of ninety-five. Of the children born to them two died in early childhood. The others were as follows: (1) Jacob received the mill property and eighty acres of the home farm, where he remained throughout life, dying there at the age of seventy years. He operated the mill and was often called upon to settle estates for his neighbors. He married but had no children. (2) Joseph is mentioned below. (3) Annie married Sem Eby, now deceased, and she died at the age of over eighty years. (4) Henry secured a part of the old homestead, where he followed farming for a time, but finally sold out and moved to Baltimore county, Md. He spent his last years, however, in Rock Island, Illinois.

Joseph Frantz, grandfather of John R., was born near Lititz, Lancaster county, Nov. 1, 1807, and died Aug. 25, 1897. After his marriage he located in East Earl township, where he purchased 113 acres of land and engaged in farming, but finally sold that property and bought eighty-seven acres of land and a mill in Salisbury township. He added to the farm sixteen acres, and operated the mill three years, after which he lived a retired life, while one of his sons conducted the farm until it was sold in 1899. He was a Mennonite in religious belief, was a man of good business ability, and was called upon to settle a large number of estates. He was twice married, his first wife being Annie Martin, his second Barbara Kreider, also deceased. In his family were twelve children, seven of whom reached mature years, three of these by the first marriage, and four by the second. They were David, father of John R.; Jacob, who died at the age of nineteen years; Elizabeth; Hettie, wife of John Brackbill, of Soudersburg; Joseph, who is director of the poor of Lancaster county, and a retired resident of Soudersburg; Ezra, an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad and a resident of Harrisburg; and Barbara, deceased wife of Adam Eby.

David Frantz, senior member of the milling firm of Frantz & Son, of Millersville, was born in East Earl township, Lancaster county, Dec. 9, 1830, and there grew to manhood on the home farm, attending the public schools of the neighborhood. At the age of twenty he commenced learning the miller's trade at the Brook Mill, in East Earl township, with David Martin, where he spent two years, and then assisted his father in the operations of the farm until he was married in 1863. Later he rented a farm at Goodville four years, and one in Salisbury township seven years, after which he had charge of his father's mill for twenty-six years, or until 1900, giving his whole attention to the milling business. With his son John R. he then leased the Groff Mill, or what is more familiarly known as the Normal Mill, at Millersville, which they are now successfully conducting. Since boyhood he has been an active and consistent member of the Mennonite Church, and while a resident of East Earl township served as a member of the school board. He married Maria Rohrer, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Landis) Rohrer, and by this union five children have been born: Ida; John R.; Jacob, a miller of Fairton, N. J.; Anna E., who has been teaching in the public schools of Lancaster county since 1897; and Benjamin, who died at the age of seven years, five months and twenty-five days.

John R. Frantz, whose name introduces this review, was born May 24, 1865, in Goodville, but was only two years old when the family moved to Salisbury township, where he was reared and educated. On account of his father being a miller he early became familiar with that business, assisting him in his labors until he started out in life for himself. In 1889 he entered the mill of Michael Moore at Columbia, as assistant, but as the position was not congenial, remained there only a short time, and in 1890 commenced working in the mill of E. E. Hunsecker, with whom he remained three years. During the following three years he was assistant miller for Levan & Sons in Lancaster township, and for two years had charge of the plant as head miller. In 1898 Mr. Frantz leased the John D. Myer's mill at New Danville, a custom and merchants' flouring mill, which he conducted until 1900. On April 7th, of that year, he formed a partnership with his father, under the firm name of Frantz & Son, and leased the Normal Roller Mills, of Millersville, which is also a custom and merchant mill with a capacity of 100 barrels. In this undertaking they are meeting with well-deserved success, for they are thorough millers and capable, enterprising business men.

On Aug. 15, 1889, John R. Frantz was united in marriage with Annie S. Eby, a daughter of Benjamin and Lizzie (Hoover) Eby, and to them have been born six children, namely: Ira E., Roy E., Eva Amanda, Marie Elizabeth, Lillie May and Willis E. The family are members of the Mennonite Church, and Mr. Frantz is a staunch Republican in politics.

GEORGE HIBSHMAN. In the northeastern portion of Lancaster county but few family names date farther back in the settlement thereof, and none that has been connected with it is more of historic interest than the name of Hibshman, of which George Hibshman is a proud and worthy representative—proud in knowing that his ancestors served the State and nation prominently and ably in both civil and military capacities in the early days of our country's history.

John Gerhard Hibshman, the founder of the family in America, was a native of Switzerland, and left the land of his birth in 1732, at the age of nineteen. Five years afterward he returned to his native land for his wife, returning with her to America Sept. 24, 1737, in the ship "Saint Andrew," which sailed on that date from Rotterdam, Holland, bound for New York. Upon landing in the New World, where he was to make for himself and family a home, he came to Lancaster county, and, allured by the natural beauty of the country and the richness of the soil, he purchased the tract of land which is now the farm of Israel Miller, four miles north of the borough of Ephrata, and thereon made his home. He and his wife were blessed with four children, viz.: Wendel is mentioned below; Henry married and moved to Lebanon county, Pa.; Catharine married an Albrecht, and moved to Selins Grove, Pa.; Elizabeth married Conrad Mentzer.

Wendel Hibshman became the owner of the farm upon the death of his father. He married Hannah, daughter of John and Elizabeth Heffley, who were also among the early settlers of Ephrata township. The farm owned by John Heffley passed to his daughter, Mrs. Hibshman, and from her to her son Jacob, through whose son John it descended to George. To Wendel and Hannah Hibshman were borne five children, viz.: Jacob, Henry, John, Hannah and Mary. Wendel Hibshman was a man of marked ability, and naturally became a leader among the people of eastern Pennsylvania. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary war he espoused the cause of the Colonies, and as major of the 3d. Battalion of Pennsylvania troops did good service in the war which ended in the formation of the Republic. After his marriage he became the owner of the farm which had belonged to his wife's family, but on the farm he first bought he passed the remainder of his days, an honored and influential citizen of the commonwealth whose soldiers he had commanded in the struggle for independence. He and his wife were both interred in the family burying-ground on the home farm.

Jacob Hibshman, eldest son of Wendel, became a man of prominence, and added luster to the family name. At an early age he entered the field of politics as a Jeffersonian Democrat, and for years wielded an influence second to none in his part of the State. He was a scrivener, and for many years a justice of the peace. He was a distinguished member of the XVIth Congress, having defeated James Buchanan, afterward President of the United States, in the Congressional election of 1820. At one period he was surveyor general of his district, which was composed of the counties of Lancaster, York and Dauphin, and was twelve years associate judge of the Lancaster county court. In 1824, when Gen. LaFayette visited the United States, Mr. Hibshman, then a member of Congress, was chairman of the committee appointed by the citizens of Lancaster county to receive and entertain him, and had the honor of introducing the distinguished Frenchman to the people who met to do him honor. Mr. Hibshman was also prominent in the military affairs of his State, and reached the rank of brigadier general. He married Miss Elizabeth Atkinson, daughter of Thomas and Saloma Atkinson, who bore him the following children: Polly, Lydia, Edward, Jacob, Elizabeth, Amelia and John. Jacob Hibshman inherited the home farm which is now owned by his grandson, George Hibshman, and on which he died May 19, 1852. He was a man of noble qualities and upright character, and passed away honored and esteemed by a wide circle of friends and fellow citizens. His wife's death took place May 4, 1811, and both sleep their last sleep in the Hibshman family burying-ground.

Henry Hibshman, a younger son of Wendel Hibshman, was also a man of prominence in his day and generation, and held offices of honor and trust in his native State, the most important of which was that of member of the State Legislature. Like his brother, Jacob, he took an active interest in the State militia for many years, and retired from its service with the rank of general. He married Miss Catharina Miller, who bore him two children: Wendel and Elmira. For his second wife he married Hanna Sweitzer, and their children were Lewis Harrison and Mary.

John Hibshman, son of Gen. Jacob, and father of George, was born on the home farm March 7, 1807, and grew to manhood there. His education, like that of all farmers' sons of the time, was obtained in the district school of his neighborhood, and was deemed sufficient to fit him for the avocation marked out for him, that of tiller of the soil, which he followed and honored through a long and well spent life. In time he became the owner of the Hibshman homestead, which he successfully managed, and which at his death, Oct. 14, 1871, became by purchase the property of his son George. In early life he was a Whig in political belief, and when the Republican party sprang into life under the oaks near the city of Jackson, Mich., he became, and until his death remained, a staunch member thereof. But although he was always active in the support of his party and its principles, he was not an office seeker, but was content to be a private in its ranks. In March, 1838, Mr. Hibshman was joined in marriage to Miss Magdalena Shirk, who was born Aug. 4, 1813, daughter of John and Annie (Eberly) Shirk, residents of West Calico township, where they were well-to-do and prominent agriculturists. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Shirk were Magdalena, Leah and Michael. Mrs. Hibshman passed from earth June 18, 1898, at the ripe old age of eighty-five years. To Mr. and Mrs. John Hibshman were born eight children, as follows: Annie, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Dr. D. Rhine Hertz, of Ephrata; Jacob, deceased; John (deceased), who married Hannah Boyer, and had five children, all of whom died in infancy except Harry, the present cashier of the Ephrata National Bank; Henry, deceased; Isaac, deceased; George, mentioned below; and Amelia, who married J. Craig, of Chester, Pa. In the family cemetery on the farm where he was born, and where all his life was spent, John Hibshman and his wife Magdalena are sleeping the sleep that knows no waking until the dawn of the resurrection morning.

George Hibshman, like his father and grandfather before him, was born on the farm of his ancestors, which is now his own. Like them, he grew to manhood thereon, and obtained his education in the district schools, and he too selected as his vocation the life of a farmer, having been content to till in an intelligent and successful way the beautiful farm any man might be proud to own. Year by year he adds to his wealth, and the beauty and comforts of his surroundings, thus setting an example some of the sons of his farmer neighbors will surely follow. In politics he is a Republican, and one as to whose position there is never any questioning, and who sees no shame in being called stalwart. He is active in the interests of his party, but has no time to seek and no desire to hold public office. He is a member of the Republican township committee, and was a delegate to the Republican State convention held in Harrisburg in June, 1902.

On Dec. 3, 1874, Mr. Hibshman married Miss Mary Kratz, who was born Oct. 18, 1852, daughter of David and Mary (Bear) Kratz. Their union has been blessed with two children: Alice, born Sept. 16, 1884, who died June 27, 1897; and Edward, born Sept. 9, 1887.

David and Mary (Bear) Kratz were natives of Bucks county and Bareville, Leacock township, Lancaster county, respectively. Mr. Kratz was born Aug. 12, 1824, and died June 27, 1892. Mrs. Kratz was born July 27, 1829, and resides in Ephrata, in the home which has been hers for thirty-five years.

HON. HENRY K. BLOUGH, M. D., prominent in the professional, political and social circles of Elizabethtown, is a native of South Hanover township, Dauphin Co., Pa., born Dec. 29, 1844, son of George and Mary (Keller) Blough, natives of New York State and Dauphin county, respectively.

George Blough accompanied his parents to Dauphin county, Pa., shortly before his marriage. He was a bricklayer and stonemason by trade, and followed these callings all his life. He married Mary Keller, who was born in 1823, a daughter of Michael Keller, a farmer of Lancaster county, Pa., who died in Dauphin county at the age of seventy-four. Of the children born to this union, Sarah is unmarried and at home; David H. is a stock dealer and farmer of Dauphin county; Hon. Henry K. is mentioned below. The parents were both faithful members of the United Brethren Church.

Henry K. Blough was educated in the public schools and at Palmyra Academy. In early manhood he learned the miller's trade, and followed it from the age of fifteen years—the time of his leaving home. At the age of twenty-three he began reading medicine under the direction of an uncle, Dr. D. C. Keller, of Union Deposit. By 1870 he had finished his medical studies, graduating from the University of Philadelphia, and began the active practice of that profession in Bachmanville, where he remained until 1872, at which time he located in Elizabethtown, his present home. He has been eminently successful in practice, and by his careful treatment of the afflicted, his kindly, sympathetic nature, and his ever bright and cheery manner, has won hosts of friends. He has found success not only in the professional world, but has taken an active part in the advancement of the material welfare of his town. In 1887 he helped to organize the Elizabethtown Exchange Bank, and has since continued as one of its directors. He is also president of the Elizabethtown Water Company, having served as such since its organization in 1897, and president of the Elizabethtown branch of the Lebanon Building & Loan Association, he having been one of the first to offer inducements for the establishment of such a branch.

M. K. Blough

In municipal affairs the Doctor has played a prominent part. For twenty-four years he has been a school director, and in 1891 and 1892 he served as a representative from his district to the State Legislature, of which he is also a member at present, having been again elected in 1902. Politically he has for years been an enthusiastic worker in the ranks of the Republican party. Socially he belongs to the Jr. O. U. A. M., while professionally he is identified with the city and county medical societies. He has also served on the staff of the Lancaster County Hospital. The Doctor is a great lover of fine horses, and is the owner of several, whose pedigrees entitle them to great consideration.

On Sept. 14, 1869, Dr. Blough was united in marriage with Elizabeth Shank, of Annville, Lebanon county, who was born in 1850, a daughter of Abraham and Leah (Moyer) Shank, both now deceased. Two children blessed their union: Albert S., a graduate of the Philadelphia Medico Chirurgical Institute; and Jennie, wife of Dr. D. Frank Kline, a prominent physician of Lancaster. Dr. Blough is an extremely popular man, and is held in high estimation for his upright life.

JACOB B. BRUBAKER, a general farmer in East Donegal township, was born in Rapho township May 7, 1857, son of Andrew and Mary (Brubaker) Brubaker, of the same township.

Andrew Brubaker was born Sept. 20, 1832, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Strickler) Brubaker, residents of Rapho township, where the former was engaged in farming all his life. Andrew Brubaker was a farmer and a man of considerable importance in the community in which his industrious and well ordered life was passed, and where he served six years as school director. He died June 17, 1892, in East Donegal township, and was buried in the Cross Roads cemetery, a well known burial place in that township. He married Mary Brubaker, who was born June 6, 1836, daughter of Benjamin and Maria (Lehman) Brubaker, farming people of Rapho township. She is now living in Mt. Joy, Pa. To Andrew and Mary Brubaker were born: Elizabeth, who married Peter Graybill, supervisor of Mt. Joy township, and a resident of Florin; Mary, who is at home with her mother; Jacob B.; William B., a professor in a polytechnic college in Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Harvey B., in the United States Postal Service, at Florin. Benjamin Brubaker, father of Mrs. Mary Brubaker, married for his second wife Mary Landis, of York county.

On Nov. 13, 1884, Jacob B. Brubaker and Barbara Felker were married in East Donegal township, and to this union were born: Frances K., now deceased; Simon, deceased; and William, Amos, Jacob B. and Mary, all of whom are at home. Mrs. Barbara (Felker) Brubaker was born in Rapho township, Nov. 6, 1863, daughter of Philip and Fanny (Kaufman) Felker, who were born in Rapho and Manor townships, respectively. Philip Felker was a farmer in East Donegal township, where he died Feb. 12, 1899, and his remains were buried in the Graybills Cemetery. Fanny (Kaufman) Felker, who was born in 1840, is now residing in Rapho, a faithful member of the Mennonite Church. They had the following children: John and Amos, both of whom died young; Barbara; Amanda, who married J. K. Layman, a drover in Mt. Joy township; Abraham, a farmer in East Donegal township, Elizabeth, who married Christ Rohrer, a farmer in Rapho; Mary, of Lancaster; Philip, a school teacher in Mt. Joy; Frances, deceased; Anna, who is living in Elizabethtown; Samuel, a day laborer in Mt. Joy township; and Catherine, who is living with her mother. Both the Felkers and the Kaufmans were all residents of Lancaster county.

Jacob B. Brubaker remained at home with his parents until his marriage, when he worked for the neighboring farmers until 1894. That year he purchased the farm on which he is now residing, where he has achieved a decided success in his agricultural labors. He is a thrifty and energetic farmer, with a good place and a reputation for thorough and careful work. In his politics he is a staunch Republican.

WILLIAM B. BRUBAKER, who is mentioned above as a professor in a polytechnic school in Brooklyn, was born in the township of Rapho, March 14, 1866, where he spent his early life on the farm, and began his education in the district school. At the age of sixteen years he began a course in Millersville Academy, from which he was graduated in both branches in 1887. During this time he also attended the old Franklin and Marshall Academies. For four years he taught district school, and for eight years was a teacher in the Millersville Academy, achieving such a reputation as an instructor and a valuable all-around teacher that in September, 1899, he was taken on the teaching force of the Polytechnical Institute in Brooklyn, where he is now engaged. Prof. Brubaker thoroughly understands the work he has in hand, and is an earnest and inspiring teacher.

CHRISTIAN KINDIG, JR. The baptismal name of Mr. Kindig's father was Christian, and his mother's maiden name was Alice Milan. He was one of the substantial and influential citizens of Lancaster county in his day, and first saw the light in Conestoga township, on Dec. 29, 1815. His long and useful life of eighty-three years came to an end at Millersville on July 21, 1898. While he died at Millersville, his life was passed in Conestoga and Manor townships, chiefly in Conestoga. He was a successful farmer, owning 120 acres of his own, and was a prominent and influential citizen, a man of broad and enlightened public spirit, and he filled various local offices. One of the early Whigs, he cast his first presidential vote for General William Henry Harrison, and his last for Benjamin Harrison in 1888. He was a member of the Mennonite Church. Mary Frantz, his wife, died in 1881, at the age of sixty-eight years. A family of nine children was born to them: E. J., Mary, Barbara, Elizabeth, Annie, Christian, Adeline, Maggie and Amanda. E. J. occupied the old homestead, and became a man of influence in public affairs. Mary married Abraham Eshleman, of Millersville. Barbara became the wife of Jacob Herr, of New Danville, in Pequea township. Elizabeth married Amos Harnish, of Lancaster. Annie married Jacob Miller, of New Danville, and is deceased. Adeline married Abraham Nissley, of South Hempfield. Maggie became the wife of the Rev. Daniel Lehman, of Manor. Amanda, the youngest of the family, is unmarried, and lives at Millersville. Christian, Jr., lives in Manor township.

Christian Kindig, Jr., was born May 15, 1848. He grew up on the old homestead in Conestoga and attended the common schools of his native town. On Dec. 12, 1871, he married Mattie L., daughter of John Hess and Elizabeth Landis, his wife, of Manheim township, who was born Oct. 2, 1849. Mr. and Mrs. Kindig are the parents of six children, one of whom died in infancy. The others—Ivan H., Minnie H., Mary H., Lizzie H. and Annie H.—live at home with their parents.

After his marriage Mr. Kindig settled upon a farm of 138 acres, bought by his father in 1863, and situated one mile west of Millersville. There he still lives, although he has added to his original holdings by the purchase of seventy-five acres adjoining on the north. The land is under high cultivation, and the improvements, nearly all of which have been made by Mr. Kindig, are extensive and modern in character, such as might be made by a farmer of progressive ideas and keen, close observation. As a citizen he is broad minded and public spirited, esteemed and influential. As a husband and father he shows estimable virtue, and as a Christian his life is without reproach.

Mrs. Kindig's paternal grandparents were Christian and Barbara (Hoover) Hess. Her father, John Hess, was born May 31, 1815, and died Jan. 20, 1891. He was a man of substantial means, and a devout member of the Mennonite Church. In early life he was a farmer, but later owned and operated the Oregon mill in Manheim for nearly a quarter of a century. His marriage to Elizabeth Landis occurred Oct. 18, 1838. She was born Oct. 7, 1820, daughter of Benjamin L. Landis and Anna Lang. Mrs. Kindig was one of a large family of children: Annie, the eldest, married Peter G. Hershey, of Lancaster; Benjamin L. lives in Manheim; Barbara died while a child of four years; David L. is a resident of Manheim; Lizzie L. died in childhood; Mattie L. is Mrs. Christian Kindig. Maria L. is unmarried and lives with her mother. Fannie died in childhood, as did also an infant son. Isaac L. is a missionary in China, laboring under the direction and care of the Christian Alliance, in the province of Quangsai, where he has been stationed since 1896. Amelia L. is a practicing physician in Philadelphia. Mrs. Hess, the mother of Mrs. Kindig, is yet living, a lovable old lady, hale and well preserved, despite her four score years of active, patient toil; her father, Benjamin Landis, died in his fifty-ninth year, while her mother lived to be nearly eighty-five.

DAVID FRANCIS MAGEE, a prominent member of the Lancaster Bar, enjoys the somewhat unique distinction of having practically built in Lancaster county an enterprising village—White Rock, where, he still retains extensive business interests.

James Vincent Magee, father of David Francis, was born at Kennett Square, Chester county, where he was a farmer and, following in the footsteps of his father, James Magee, a cattle dealer. Later for a few years James V. Magee kept a hotel in Wilmington, Del., afterward moving to Lynchburg, Va., where he died. He married Mary Ann Bradley, a daughter of John Bradley, who came from Ireland in 1806, settling in Phoenixville, where he became a well-known farmer and cattle dealer, and where he died in 1860. To James V. and Mary Ann (Bradley) Magee came eleven children, two of whom died in infancy and three after reaching maturity. The survivors are: Margaret, Ann, Kate and Mary, all living in Philadelphia; Laura, the wife of John Frerren, a farmer by occupation, and at present a member of the board of county commissioners of Chester county; and David Francis, of Lancaster.

David Francis Magee, familiarly known as Squire Magee, by reason of his having been justice of the peace so many years, was born in Wilmington, Del., in December, 1854, his parents removing to Virginia during his infancy. There they remained until 1868, when they came back to this State, settling in Hopewell, Chester county. Mr. Magee remained with his parents until 1880, when he removed to White Rock, Lancaster county, at that time a mere country cross roads, with one dwelling house and a small store. Mr. Magee completed his schooling in Georgetown College, but he has always been a student, and has followed out the study of political economy to such an extent that he is one of the best posted men on that subject in the State. For five years he was a school teacher, but on his removal to White Rock became an active business man, building a warehouse, a creamery, a smithy, a wagon-maker's shop and six dwelling houses. His enterprise has opened the way, and White Rock is to-day a hustling and energetic village. Mr. Magee still owns considerable property there, though living in Lancaster. For thirteen years he served as a justice of the peace, and was three times elected in a Republican district, though he was and is an uncompromising Democrat. During his long service as a justice of the peace he had fully seven hundred cases before him, and every case stood as he decided it. In 1894 Mr. Magee was nominated by the Democrats for Auditor General of the State, and made a handsome run, speaking in almost every county in the State. Mr. Magee began reading law with Theodore K. Stubbs, but stopped only to begin reading again with J. A. Coyle, and was admitted to the Bar in 1888. Before he was eligible, on account of the time limit, he argued a case in the Supreme Court, to which he was formally admitted just as soon as the two years had expired.

Mr. Magee is a ready and fluent speaker, and challenged the prominent Republicans of the State for a discussion of the tariff question. This discussion was with many of the best-posted Republicans of the State, and extended over some twelve years. It attracted much attention and demonstrated the fact that Mr. Magee was thoroughly informed as to all matters under consideration. After being admitted to the Bar Mr. Magee retained for several years a silent partnership in all his business enterprises, including that of the White Rock Warehouse property, which he had greatly improved, and a store of considerable magnitude. He was an organizer, a director and the first counsel for the Octoraro Telephone Co., which proved a great local success.

Mr. Magee was married in 1878 to Miss Lewrainer Twaddell, a daughter of John Twaddell, a farmer of Chester county. From this union were born: Lewrainer T. and Mary T., both graduates at Emmitsburg, and now at home with their parents; D. Frank, a graduate of the Lancaster high school, and now a clerk with Reilly Brothers & Raub; James F., Helen A. and Charles Albert, all three at school.

Mr. Magee is a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church of this city, and is grand president of the Pennsylvania Catholic Beneficial League, whose headquarters are in Lancaster, and of which he was one of the principal organizers. Mr. Magee is quite an enthusiast in cycling, and is president of the Lancaster Cycling Club, entertaining the members annually at his country home, and going along with the "boys" when they make the run to his elegant mansion at White Rock. Although Mr. Magee tips the scales at 220 pounds he rides the wheel with more than ordinary ease, and is so much interested in the exercise that he has taken up the matter of good roads, writing a series of articles on the subject for the Lancaster press, which have since been brought together and published in book form.

ABRAHAM H. MECKLEY, a trusted and popular engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad and a resident of Columbia, was born on a farm in Conoy township, Lancaster county, Jan. 21, 1851, the seventh of ten children born to Benjamin and Barbara (Halderman) Meckley, the former of whom was first a farmer and then sawmill proprietor, but his latter years were passed in retired ease. He lost his wife in 1859, when she was forty-five years old, and his own death took place in 1895, at the age of seventy-five. They were members respectively of the Mennonite and United Brethren churches and the remains of both were interred in Conoy cemetery. Their ten children were born in the following order: Jacob, who is a lumber merchant in Bainbridge, Pa.; Anna, wife of Benjamin Fink, a carpenter in Conoy; Christian, a cigarmaker in Lock Haven; Elizabeth, wife of Andrew Shenk, of Bainbridge; Barbara, with her brother in Bainbridge; Mary, who died young; Abraham H.; Benjamin and Samuel, deceased; and Martin, of Conoy.

Abraham H. Meckley assisted his father on the home farm until eighteen years old, and then learned the carpenter's trade, at which he worked until 1880. He then made two trips on the railroad as brakeman, spent six years, nine months and nineteen days as fireman, and was then promoted in 1887 to engineer.

On April 13, 1884, Mr. Meckley was married, in Elizabethtown, Pa., to Miss Elizabeth Goss, and to this union has been born one child, Cora. Mrs. Elizabeth Meckley was born in West Donegal township, Lancaster county, April 29, 1855, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Erb) Goss, natives respectively of Hanover, York Co., Pa., and Conoy township, Lancaster county. Their family comprised nine children, viz.: Amos, who died young; Elizabeth; Christian, school-teacher, farmer and justice of the peace in Conoy township; Joseph, in Elizabethtown; Mary, who died in infancy; Anna M., wife of David F. Gable, of Mt. Joy; Ella married to John Shireman, a farmer in Conoy; Emily, married to Harrison Brenzer, a school-teacher in Bainbridge; and Myra, wife of Joseph B. Martin, a school-teacher in Middletown, Pa. Joseph Goss, the father, was a farmer by vocation and died in Conoy township in May, 1899, aged seventy-four; and his wife, who was born in November, 1831, now resides in Elizabethtown. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Meckley were John Goss, a farmer, and Elizabeth (Haldeman) Goss, both of Lancaster county; her maternal grandparents were Christian and Elizabeth (Grable) Erb, who moved to Ridgeville, Conoy township, when they retired from business. Mr. Erb was a justice of the peace.

Abraham H. Meckley is a Democrat in politics, and religiously he and his wife and daughter are members of the Church of God; socially they stand very high in the esteem of their neighbors.

REUBEN SHAUBACH, one of the representative young men of Strasburg township, resides upon his farm one mile north of Martinsville, this county. He was born in West Lampeter township, Dec. 31, 1853, son of Andrew Shaubach, and he was brought up on a farm and educated in the common schools. Until he was thirty years old he remained assisting his father, but after marriage located in the village of Refton on a farm of 139 acres, which he rented for two years, and he then removed to the desirable place where he has since lived, and which, since it has come into his possession, has been transformed into one of the finest in this locality. The farm owned by Mr. Shaubach comprises fifty acres and upon it he has made many improvements, erecting all of the buildings except the residence; and he has shown himself to be one of the progressive farmers who, by industry and good judgment, become the substantial men of the future. In 1898, Mr. Shaubach, in association with his brother Martin, purchased a farm of 112 acres in Providence township, and this is in charge of Martin Shaubach.

On Nov. 15, 1883, Reuben Shaubach was united in marriage with Miss Susan Barge, daughter of Witmer J. Barge, who was born in Strasburg township Dec. 25, 1849. Three children have been born to this union; Annie B., born May 6, 1885, and two sons who died at birth. The whole family are valued and consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and none are more highly respected in this neighborhood.

FRANK R. FOLMER, who conducts a thriving butcher business in Columbia, is a native of Lebanon county, Pa., born Nov. 4, 1858.

John Folmer, his father, was the only son of John Folmer, Sr. Both were coachmakers by occupation. John Folmer died in 1861, in his twenty-sixth year. He married Miss Angeline Gerhart, who was third in the family of five children born to Henry H. and Sabina (Carl) Gerhart, namely: Cornelius C., a Union veteran of the Civil war, lives in Lebanon; John, who also served in the Civil war, is deceased; Milton, a resident of Lebanon, also served in the Union army during that conflict; and Sarah married Isaac Docker, and both are now deceased. Henry H. Gerhart made his home in Lebanon county, and he died in Lebanon in 1847, in his thirty-sixth year. His widow made her home with her daughter Angeline during her latter years, and died in Columbia in 1882, in her sixty-sixth year. Both were members of the Reformed Church. To John and Angeline Folmer were born three children, of whom the eldest, Phillip H., is a yardmaster in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at Columbia; he married Bridget Welsh. Frank R., whose name opens this sketch, is mentioned below. John, the youngest, died in childhood. In May, 1864, Mrs. Folmer became the wife of Hugh Donnelly, who is mentioned elsewhere, and by that union had two children: Mary E., now the wife of Gordon W. Blakesley, a grocer of Lansing, Mich.; and Alex. C., who died in childhood.

Frank R. Folmer received his education in the public schools, and was but ten years old when he commenced work, being employed three summers in a brickyard. He then learned the butcher business, with C. W. Minich, with whom he continued fourteen years, at the end of that time embarking in business on his own account. He has been engaged thus up to the present time, with uninterrupted success, and has met with substantial reward, which he justly deserves. Mr. Folmer owns some valuable property, and, as a result of industry and good business methods, is now comfortably situated. In 1885 our subject was married, in Columbia, to Miss Alice M. Rupp, a native of Cumberland county, Pa. They have no children. Mr. Folmer is a Republican in politics, and fraternally unites with the I. O. O. F. In religious connection he is identified with the M. E. Church.

On May 27, 1855, in Mechanicsburg, Pa., he married Elizabeth Moler, who was born Oct. 8, 1836, also a native of Cumberland county, where her parents, Samuel and Rachel (Miller) Moler, passed all their lives. Mrs. Rupp now makes her home in York, Pa. She is an Adventist in religious belief. Mr. Rupp died Jan. 13, 1886, in Shiremanstown, Pa., aged fifty-four years. To this union were born children as follows: Samuel; Laura and Sarah E., both of whom died young; Benjamin H., of Lancaster; Alice M., Mrs. Folmer; Barbara A., Mrs. Charles H. MENNO MARTIN FRY. Among the prominent and representative citizens of Lancaster is Menno Martin Fry, who is not only the leading business man in his line in that city but is also one of the largest dealers in leaf tobacco in the State.

Mr. Fry was born at Millport, Warwick township, Sept. 3, 1854. After finishing his course in the public schools of his district he entered the State Normal school at Millersville, and so well did he improve his opportunities that he was accepted as a teacher at the age of sixteen years, and followed that profession through four terms. He then began the manufacture of cigars at Rothsville, and continued in that business for three years, removing at that time, to Lititz, enlarging his scope by adding leaf tobacco to his trade. Here he remained for the succeeding twelve years. Mr. Fry desired still larger fields of operation, and then removed to Lancaster, where in partnership with his brother, Phares W. Fry, he began trading in leaf tobacco, under the firm name of M. M. Fry & Bro. Their first location was on Market street, but the business increased to such a degree that a change was soon necessitated, and the fine warehouse at the southeast corner of Grant and Christian streets was built for their use. After four years of partnership the brothers dissolved the connection, and for a time each conducted business in the same warehouse, but it was not long before the quarters again became too contracted, this resulting in Phares Fry withdrawing to another warehouse and Menno Martin employing all of this building for his own use. However, by July, 1900, Mr. Fry found it necessary to secure a still larger building, and he completed arrangements by which he secured the Steinmetz building, at the northwest corner of Grant and Christian streets, the most complete tobacco warehouse in this section, if not, indeed, in the whole State. This building is six stories in height and has a storage capacity of 7,000 cases of tobacco. In addition to these buildings, Mr. Fry has a large warehouse at Landisville, in this county. His business is one of large proportions, consisting in selling in large quantities to the jobbers and to all of the important cigar manufacturers in the United States.

Mr. Fry was married to Miss Anna Hess, the accomplished daughter of the late Capt. Hess, of Safe Harbor, who fell in battle during the Civil war, a brave young martyr to his country. No children have been born to them. In social circles both are prominent, and generous hospitality is shown in the elegant home at No. 624 West Chestnut street, Lancaster. Although an ardent Republican, Mr. Fry has never taken any very active part in politics, his large business interests requiring his close attention. For a number of years he has been a leading member of the First M. E. Church, where for six years he served as trustee, and where he is a liberal contributor to all benevolent and charitable enterprises. He is widely known and is esteemed as a man of integrity and high business principle.

HARRY LIGHTNER TROUT, proprietor of the leading book bindery in Lancaster, and the present clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, is a native of that city, born Oct. 28, 1853.

Mr. Trout is connected with one of the oldest and best known families in this locality, and his father, Adam Trout, is well remembered by many of the older citizens as a genial, popular man. He married Salome Lefever, who died in 1857.

Harry L. Trout received a liberal education at the public schools of Lancaster, completing his studies at the age of fifteen years. In 1870 he went to Philadelphia, for three years was there engaged in the queensware business, and then returning to Lancaster commenced a four years' apprenticeship to the trade of bookbinder, by diligence and application thoroughly mastering all the details of the business. In 1881 he commenced for his own account in the city, his first bindery being in Centre square, whence, his business having rapidly increased, he removed to more commodious quarters on North Christian street, in rear of the New Era building, and at a considerable pecuniary outlay equipped his establishment with the very latest and best appliances for efficiently carrying on a first class bindery. Mr. Trout soon established a reputation as an expert and reliable bookbinder, and he does much of the finest work for the county offices, besides enjoying patronage from all over the State, and from even far distant localities.

On Sept. 2, 1875, Harry L. Trout was married to Miss Sarah E., daughter of Joseph Y. Colby, at one time prominently identified with the cotton mill industry in Lancaster. One child has blessed this union, Maude, now the wife of James Wesley Harvey, a lawyer of Baltimore.

In politics Mr. Trout is a stalwart Republican, and for years has been recognized as a leader in the ranks of the party. For nearly a dozen continuous years he represented the Fifth ward of Lancaster in the city council, and for three terms served as president of the Common branch; but these incumbencies he had to resign in order to take the office of clerk of the court of Quarter Sessions, to which he was elected in November, 1899, entering upon his duties Jan. 1, 1900.

Mr. and Mrs. Trout are identified with the First Presbyterian Church of Lancaster. Socially he is a member of Lamberton Lodge, No. 476, F. & A. M. A whole-souled, generous man, with a friendly nod and a pleasant word for everybody, faithful in his friendship and open and manly in his political or other differences with men, Harry L. Trout is personally one of the strongest men in the community in which he lives.

Nissley was born in Hempfield township, Sept. 29, 1863, only daughter of Henry K. and Mary (Rhodes) Shenk, who were born in Manheim and Manor townships, respectively. Henry K. Shenk is now living in East Hempfield the honored life that belongs to a farmer who has worked hard all his years and seeks rest and peace at the close of his days. Mrs. Shenk died in 1893, at the age of sixty years, and was buried in the Lutheran Church Cemetery at Maytown.

Eli L. Nissley was reared on the home farm, where he remained with his parents until he was fourteen years of age, and then accompanied them in their removal to Mt. Joy township and to Graybills, spending three years at each location. When he was seventeen years of age he came to Florin, and six years later became engaged in the leaf tobacco business, which has continued his occupation to the present time and in which he is remarkably successful.

Mr. Nissley is a Republican, and has taken a leading position in the community. In 1901 he was elected a school director for a three years' term. In 1899 he was made a director of the First National Bank of Marietta, and his business judgment, always good, is making itself felt throughout the county. Mr. Nissley is a pushing and energetic character, bound to make progress, and is widely known as an enterprising and thoroughly reliable man.

BENJAMIN F. BYERS. The ancestors of the Byers family, in Lancaster county, came from a country which has given the world some notable men, and whose people, the country over, are considered among the best of American citizens.

John Byers, his grandfather, was a native of Germany, and in that country he was reared and there married, soon after emigrating to the United States and locating in Pequea township, Lancaster county. Here he purchased a large tract of land which was situated north of Baumgardner Station, and on this property was built what is known as the Byers Church, the Byers family contributing a tract for that purpose. John Byers came upon this land as a pioneer, being one of the first settlers, finding the locality unimproved, and when viewing the extraordinary change that has been made, one can not but admire and comment upon the zeal, intelligence and energy that has so successfully made of this region one of the best improved in the county. John Byers lived to advanced age in spite of the exacting life of the pioneer, and was noted for his progressive spirit and force of character, rearing a large and excellent family, many of whom located in the West, and have established family branches there.

John Byers (2), son of the pioneer, was born in 1807, and died in 1852, having been reared on the homestead in Pequea township. After his marriage he came to West Lampeter and located on a farm about one mile south-east of Willowstreet, where he bought and operated over 100 acres, and there pursued agricultural activities all his life with excellent results. He was highly esteemed, being made supervisor and for a long time serving as school director.

John Byers (2) married Kate Johnston, daughter of Abraham Johnston, of Pequea township, who died in 1879 at the age of sixty-three. They had a family of ten children: Barbara married Samuel Minney, of West Lampeter township; Henry died at the age of forty-four, unmarried; Jacob is a farmer of Quarryville, Lancaster county; Mary is the widow of Peter Sicor; Sarah is the wife of Henry Barr, of Pequea township; John died at the age of twenty-eight, leaving a wife and two children; David is a resident of Whiteside county, Ill.; Annie is the wife of John Huber, of Willowstreet; Benjamin F.; and Amaziah died in childhood.

Benjamin F. Byers was born July 16, 1853, and was reared on the home farm, attending the public school of his district, until the age of twelve. At this early age he started from home with the intention of taking care of himself, engaging in farm work by the month, and thus he continued until he was twenty-five. At this time he saw a favorable opening in the butchering business, at Lampeter, and since that time has been engaged in that line, very successfully, being both a wholesale and retail merchant. Mr. Byers has the best of facilities for his work, having erected a large slaughter house, and supplying the Lancaster City markets, as well as the country trade. Being a live business man, his future success is assured, the public having learned to repose confidence in his integrity. As a staunch Republican, he has filled a number of the local offices in the gift of the party, serving efficiently under all circumstances.

Benjamin Byers was married in 1886, to Elizabeth Eshleman, a daughter of Christian Eshleman of West Lampeter township, and three children have been born of this union: Willis, Myrtle and Harold. This is one of the representative families of the township, and by his energy and industry, Mr. Byers has place his business in a front rank in this part of Lancaster county.

WILLIAM B. DETWILER. Prominent in the realty business, in Mt. Joy, Pa., and one of the most progressive and enterprising business men, is William B. Detwiler, a native of Rapho township, where he was born in 1851, a son of Joseph and Anna Detwiler. The name is one well known in financial and business circles, carrying with it the suggestion of uprightness of character, combined with sound business ability.

Mr. Detwiler remained with his parents until his marriage, and then engaged in farming on the old homestead in Rapho township, successfully operating a large farm, for fourteen years. Since that time, his residence has been in Mt. Joy, the varied and increasing interests of his father, requiring his assistance in their management. Aside from the vast amount of work entailed in successfully managing his father's estate, he is also engaged in the real estate business, for which he has shown great capacity.

The marriage of William B. Detwiler occurred in Conoy township, when Emma Hoffman, a daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Rhodes) Hoffman, of Manor township, became his bride. They now reside in Conoy township, where Mr. Hoffman is one of the most extensive farmers and tobacco merchants in that locality. They are pious and worthy people, members of the River Brethren and the Church of God, and are the parents of ten children. Mr. and Mrs. Detwiler have four children,—Parthenia A., who married Dr. B. E. Wright, a dentist of Harrisburg; Joseph H., Jr.; Mabel; and Beulah.

For the past six years, Mr. Detwiler has been a member of the city council, and is one of the leading politicians in this section.

JAY BACHMAN. The Bachman family, of Lancaster county, possesses an old and honorable ancestry, its members having been identified with the advancement of the county since as early as 1746, when its founder in the United States located in West Lampeter township. His son, Jacob, became the grandfather of Jay Bachman, the immediate subject of this biography.

Jacob Bachman was born April 25, 1782, and died May 10, 1849, and on March 31, 1814, married Barbara Eshleman, who died at the age of seventy-eight years, eight months and three days. Jacob Bachman was a farmer, but possessed a natural aptitude for working in wood, and the family still possesses some valued examples of his cabinet work. Both were members of the Old Mennonite Church, and both were of quiet, domestic habits of life. Under their roof grew up a large and intelligent family, many members of it having made homes for themselves in other States, everywhere being known as quiet, well-ordered citizens and worthy of their name. To Jacob Bachman and wife were born: Maria, born in 1815, married William Parker and removed to Illinois, where she died, May 13, 1854; Susan, born in 1816, died single; John, born in 1818, died Sept. 15, 1894; Anna, born in 1820, married David Longenecker and removed to Maryland, where she still survives, a widow since Feb. 5, 1889; Jacob, born in 1825, married Elizabeth Eshleman, resided in Strasburg township, and died March 8, 1888; Fannie, born in 1827, married John Jameson, and in 1855 removed to Quincy, Ills., where she died in 1893; Benjamin F., born in 1829, removed to California when a young man, and spent his life in that State; and Elizabeth, born in 1832, died in infancy.

John Bachman, son of Jacob and father of Jay Bachman, was born in West Lampeter township, and when a small boy accompanied his parents in their removal to Strasburg, when location was made upon the fine farm now occupied by Jay Bachman. Here John Bachman was reared and sent to the public schools, later being given educational advantages in both select schools and an academy. About the time of his legal majority he purchased a farm in Ohio, which he cleared and worked for a period, remaining until his father's death called him home, when he returned to the homestead, and with his brother Jacob undertook the management of the estate. Until his marriage this arrangement continued, at which time he took full control and made it his home.

For many years John Bachman resided in the old homestead, engaged in farming, but when his son Jay had reached manhood he turned the farm over to him and retired from active life, remaining in the old place, however, until his days ended. For a long period John Bachman was one of the prominent, as well as one of the most substantial men of the locality, a man of more than ordinary intelligence and superior education. His services were frequently required in the settlement of estates, on account of the known probity of his character. He was one of the original directors in the Strasburg Bank, so continuing for many years.

On May 11, 1869, John Bachman was married to Lizzie B. Rohrer, daughter of Christian and Maria (Buckwalter) Rohrer, who was born Sept. 29, 1844. Four children were born to this union: Minnie, born Feb. 13, 1870, married Morris Bachman, of Pittsburg, Pa.; Jay, born Oct. 21, 1871, resides on the old homestead; Ed, born Dec. 10, 1874, died April 16, 1876; and Park, born Nov. 12, 1879, was a student of mechanical engineering at the Western University, at Pittsburg.

Jay Bachman, who is one of the most progressive young farmers of Strasburg township, and a son of John and Lizzie (Rohrer) Bachman, was reared on the farm he now occupies and which he is improving with modern buildings and stocking it with high-grade stock and cattle. His education was acquired in the excellent public schools of Lancaster county, which he has supplemented with reading and scientific studies in relation to his agricultural and stock interests. The Bachman homestead farm contains 108 acres of some of the most valuable land in Strasburg township, located three miles southwest of Strasburg, and is one of the oldest, although the stanch old buildings, almost a century old, give no such impression. Mr. Bachman has remodeled and modernized them and put them into proper condition to accommodate his growing operations. In connection with his farming industries, he also conducts one of the best and largest dairies in the vicinity, the butter from which commands the highest market price and is in much demand.

On Oct. 5, 1898, Jay Bachman was married to Edith Musser, daughter of Dr. Harry Musser, of Lampeter, and one little son, Harry M., was born, Nov. 3, 1899. In his political affiliations Mr. Bachman is a Republican, and he is one of the most esteemed citizens of Strasburg township. His respected mother resides in Strasburg, enjoying a peaceful old age, beloved and esteemed by all who know her.

After five years' experience in the cigar trade in that town, he came to Mountville, and established his present extensive business. He has since erected a large factory where he manufactures his cigars.

On Sept. 16, 1884, Henry S. Immel was joined marriage, in Mountville, to Anna Shookers, and to this union have been born two children, Elizabeth May and Luella. Mrs. Anna (Shookers) Immel is a native of Mountville, a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Shookers, well known residents of the town. Mr. and Mrs. Immel are members of the U. B. Church, and fraternally Mr. Immel is a Knight Templar Mason, belonging to Commandery No. 43, Lancaster; a Knight of Malta; and a member of the O. U. A. M. Politically he is a Republican. In 1890 he purchased his residence property in Mountville, and has one of the pleasant homes of that village.

SAMUEL B. KOSER, M. D., a rising young physician and surgeon at Mountville, Lancaster county, was born at Junction, Penn township, Lancaster Co., Pa., April 28, 1866, and is a son of William and Mary A. (Behn) Koser, natives, respectively, of Lancaster and Dauphin counties.

William Koser was born in 1836, and was reared a farmer. The family lived in Lancaster township, where Mrs. Koser died June 4, 1897, at the age of sixty-four years, and in 1899 the father retired to Lancaster, where he lives at ease and free from care. Frederick was a son of Frederick, a native of Switzerland, who settled near White Oak, Lancaster county. The Doctor's maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth Behn, of Campbelltown, Lebanon Co., Pa., where they lived on a farm for more than forty years.

Samuel B. Koser lived on the home farm until sixteen years old, and then attended Millersville Normal School two seasons. He was then employed in the drug business in Columbia, Pa., for five years, and was later engaged in the same business for two years in Baltimore, Md. In the meantime he had been assiduously studying medical works, and had prepared himself for entrance to Baltimore Medical College, in which he took a full course, and was graduated with the class of April 15, 1891.

Dr. Koser began the practice of his profession in Columbia, where for six months he met with gratifying success, but there was a more inviting field opened up to him in Mountville, of which he at once availed himself, and has there since enjoyed a large remunerative and constantly increasing patronage. The Doctor is a member of the Lancaster City and County Medical Societies, the State Medical Society, the National Medical Association, and the College of Physicians & Surgeons, of Columbia, Pa., and keeps well abreast of the progress made in the art and science of medicine.

Fraternally Dr. Koser is a Freemason of the seventh degree (Royal Arch); is a member of the K. of M., and likewise of the I. O. O. F. Religiously he is a member of Trinity Reformed Church. In politics a Republican, the Doctor has been a school director for the past eight years, now serving his third term. Socially he mingles with the highest classes in Mountville, by whom he is highly esteemed as a gentleman and as a physician.

REUBEN J. MYERS, Superintendent, and a member of the firm, of the Grey Iron Casting Co., of Mt. Joy, Pa., one of the most important industrial institutions in this part of Lancaster county, belongs to an old and prominent family of Pennsylvania.

Jacob and Esther (Strickler) Myers, the paternal grandparents of Reuben J. Myers, were well-known and highly regarded residents of Lancaster county, where the former taught school and also followed the trade of stone-mason, residing in the house in Mt. Joy which is now occupied by the beloved mother of our subject. These good people reared a large and estimable family, but nearly all have passed away. These were: Eliza, who died unmarried; Mary, deceased wife of David Stoner; Henry, deceased; Jacob, deceased; Anna, deceased wife of Augustus Walton; Esther, deceased wife of Henry Zell; and Catherine, widow of Thomas McFalls, who resided in Quincy, Ill., until her death in July, 1901.

The maternal grandparents of Reuben J. Myers were no less prominent in Lancaster county, and were Isaac and Anna (Martin) Hershey, of Penn and Rapho townships, respectively, who died in Mt. Joy borough and East Donegal township. Their children were: Fanny, who married Jacob Myers; John, living retired; Eliza, deceased, who married Daniel Lehman; Andrew, living retired; Ephraim, deceased; Christian, deceased; Anna, the widow of Frederick Stettler, of Jersey City, N. J.; George, a retired farmer of Iowa; Reuben, a resident of Illinois; Sarah, who married Reuben Risser, who conducts a steam laundry in Mt. Joy; and Naomi, who married Ely Fletcher, a retired Illinois farmer. The maternal great-grandparents were Christian and Elizabeth (Snyder) Hershey, the former a son of Christian Hershey, an old settler of Lancaster county.

Reuben J. Myers was born in Mt. Joy Aug. 9, 1854, son of Jacob and Fanny (Hershey) Myers, the former of whom followed the business of cabinet-making in this locality until his death in 1869, at the age of fifty-one. During life he was prominently identified with the temperance movement and was a consistent member of the Church of God, known as the Bethel. Mrs. Fanny (Hershey) Myers, who resides in Mt. Joy, was born July 30, 1821, and became the mother of these children: Regina, a successful educator in the Mt. Joy schools; Emma, the widow of John Singer of Mt. Joy; Hershey, who died in 1871; Mary, the wife of J. D. Boyce, a wagon-maker of this place; Reuben J.; Ezra M., yardmaster for the Pennsylvania railroad, in Philadelphia; Allen, a contractor and builder, in Lincoln, Neb.; and Harvey, a baggage master on the Pennsylvania railroad, and located in Philadelphia.

Reuben J. Myers, whose name in Mt. Joy stands for great business sagacity as well as financial responsibility, was reared and educated in that town, finishing his school days at the age of fourteen. With inclinations in the direction of machinery and iron work, he entered a foundry where he remained some time, and then made his way to Harrisburg, in 1870 completing his instruction in one of the great foundries of this city, and remaining engaged in work until the spring of 1871. Thoroughly proficient and well aware that this proficiency would always secure him lucrative employment, Mr. Myers left home, intending to see something of the country, and traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific, working at his trade, and learning much which in later years benefited him in many ways. In 1874 he returned to Mt. Joy, and there remained during the succeeding two years, thence going to New York city, where for five years he was connected with business firms in his line. Upon his second return to his old home, he opened up a foundry and galvanizing plant, which he successfully operated until 1892, when he became a member of the great firm of the Grey Iron Casting Co. This business was established in 1882 by Stauffer & Eby, for the manufacture of novelties and castings, also shelf hardware, and, as now conducted, employs 120 men, and is one of the most important industries of this locality. The present firm which is composed of the well-known solid and responsible business men, T. B. Himes, president; J. W. Eshleman, secretary and treasurer; and R. J. Myers, superintendent. They purchased this business in February, 1891, and have conducted it ever since with signal success.

In December, 1879, Reuben J. Myers was married to Miss Helen Brennessoltz, and to this union have been born: Edith, Ralph and Ethel. Mrs. Myers was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1859, a daughter of Peter P. and Helen (Johnson) Brennesholtz, who were residents of New York, where he conducted a business as newsdealer. The political affiliations of Mr. Myers are with the Republican party, although his busy life leaves him no time for office-holding. Fraternally he is a valued member of the Masonic order, and is connected with the F. & A. M., No. 147, Cope Stone, N. J.; and he also belongs to the I. O. O. F., No. 277, of Mt. Joy. For many years he has been a consistent member of the Bethel Church, where he is active in all benevolent and charitable enterprises. Mr. Myers is a self-made man, and one who has won his prominence and the respect and esteem of the community through his own efforts.

HARRY K. RUBY, one of the best known and most highly respected railroad conductors residing in Columbia, Pa., was born in York, this State. March 1, 1858, a son of Joseph and Sarah (Barnhart) Ruby, natives of Somerset and York, respectively.

Joseph Ruby, a cabinetmaker by trade, who served as constable for several years, was born Jan. 20, 1809, and died in York, Dec. 11, 1871. His wife, Sarah Barnhart, was born April 19, 1811, and died Nov. 23, 1895, the remains of both being interred in the York cemetery. She was a loving wife and devoted mother, and for seventy long years was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. At the time of her death her eldest child was sixty-five years of age, and the youngest thirty-seven. During her girlhood she was one of several young ladies, who, dressed in white, received General LaFayette on his last visit to this country, and had the honor of shaking hands with that distinguished gentleman when he passed through York.

Harry K. Ruby is the youngest in a family of nine children. The others in order of birth are as follows: William, editor of the Maryland Journal at Towson, Md.; Susan, who married Henry R. Ruby, a cousin, and is now a widow living in Chambersburg, Pa.; Adeline, widow of J. S. Boyer and a resident of York; Frank, a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad and a resident of Columbia; Walter, who is now conducting a restaurant in York; Emma, wife of a Mr. Gingrich, a railroad engineer of Philadelphia; Emerson, a railroad engineer of Chicago, Ill.; and Kate, wife of Harry Flayhart of Towson, Maryland.

Until he attained his majority Harry K. Ruby remained a resident of York, Pa., and in the meantime worked at anything which he could find to do. He then went to Philadelphia, where he clerked in a grocery store for six months, and during the following two years worked in the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad freight house at Chicago, after which he returned to Pennsylvania and spent one year in Harrisburg. Since then he has made his home in Columbia, and has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., first as brakeman eight years, as flagman fourteen years, and as conductor since that time.

In Chicago Mr. Ruby was married, Nov. 16, 1879, to Miss Catherine Westhaffer, a native of York county, Pa., where her parents, Emanuel and Sarah (Strine) Westhaffer, were also born, their early home being in Strinestown. The father, a farmer by occupation, is now sixty-five years of age, while the mother is fifty-nine. Mrs. Ruby is the oldest of their children, the others being Emma, wife of William Wise, of York; Daniel, deceased; and Minnie, wife of Frank Deamer of Lebanon, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Ruby have four children, namely: Maud, now the wife of Clarence E. Lloyd of Columbia; Joseph, Harry and Addie, all at home.

Fraternally Mr. Ruby is a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; the Pennsylvania Relief Department; and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and religiously he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. By his ballot he supports the men and measures of the Democratic party, and never withholds his aid from any enterprise which he believes will prove of public benefit.

JOHN H. HOOK, who is a prominent citizen of Lancaster, Pa., and one who has long been identified with the material improvement and growth of the city, was born April 5, 1858, in Lancaster, a son of John and Catherine (Klaus) Hook, natives of Greiss, Gross-Gerau, Hessen Darmstadt, Germany, although they met and were married in Lancaster, Pa. John Hook emigrated to America in 1831, while the date of his wife's emigration was one year later. They have their pleasant home in Lancaster, where he is employed as a stone-mason and stone-cutter. He was born in October, 1823, a son of Jacob and Christiana Hook, natives of Hessen Darmstadt, Germany, the former of whom was born on April 14, 1804, came to America in 1831, and died March 2, 1871. Mrs. Christiana Hook died in Germany, in 1850, aged fifty-six years, four months and twenty days. Mrs. Catherine (Klaus) Hook was a daughter of Ernest and Margaret Klaus, of Dreiburg, Hessen Darmstadt, Germany, who came to Lancaster county, in 1834, where he died, and was buried at Strasburg, Pa. John and Catherine (Klaus) Hook are members of the German Lutheran Church. In politics he is a supporter of the Democratic party. They had born to them these children: John H.; Elizabeth, who married Frank Witmer, of Lancaster; Henry, who resides at home, unmarried; Adam P., who died of yellow fever in Havana; Catherine, who married William Zercher, a tobacco merchant of Lancaster; Frederick, who is a barber; and William F., unmarried, who lives at home.

John H. Hook was reared in a home where he was early taught the value of industry. Until he was thirteen years of age, he attended school and then became water boy on the railroad, retaining his connection with railroad work, from 1871, when he made this humble beginning, until 1898, when he quit the road. From 1884 to 1889 he was master stonemason for the Frederick Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. In October, 1889, he made his beginning in contracting with J. F. Kellar and until his health failed, in June, 1898, he continued at that work. During that time Mr. Hook was engaged in building and contracting on a large scale, in Lancaster City, and in 1898, in association with Dr. M. L. Davis, began the building of garbage crematories, and in 1898 built a 100-ton crematory for the United States Government at Havana, Cuba. It would be a task to name all the work which has been completed by Mr. Hook in the building line, but a few of the notable constructions are: No. 13 bridge over the Juniata River, near Altoona, Pa., containing 10,700 cubic yards of masonry, built at a cost of $107,000, on the Middle Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and for the same, a bridge over Stone Creek, at Huntingdon, Pa., containing 4,000 cubic yards of masonry; also a bridge for the same over Shaver's Creek, at Petersburg, Huntingdon Co., Pa., containing 3,500 yards of masonry. It was at this point that Mr. Hook was stricken with paralysis, the heavy demands made upon his physical strength being more that he could endure. His present business includes contracting and grading, and probably there is no more competent man in his line in Lancaster county.

In September, 1884, Mr. Hook was united in marriage with Mary E. Boud, who was born at Barren Hill, Montgomery Co., Pa., a daughter of James and Sarah (Fisher) Boud, natives of that county. The former was a son of James and Elizabeth Boud, natives of New Jersey. Mrs. Hook's father was a contractor and builder, and he died in 1879, at the age of sixty-seven years. Her grandfather was a cooper. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Hook were George and Elizabeth Fisher, farming people of Montgomery county. Mrs. Hook's mother was born in January, 1821, and now resides at Audubon, Pa. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Boud were: William H., who keeps a hotel at Audubon; Kate F., who married Clinton Custer, and lives at Audubon, where he is engaged in brick manufacturing; Mary E., who became Mrs. Hook; and Margaret, who died unmarried. The children born to Mr. Hook and wife were: Adam, deceased; Henry B.; Irene M.; Josephine; Mary E. L.; John F.; and Paul R.

Mr. Hook has led too busy a life to have taken a very active part in politics, although no citizen of this locality is better qualified. For six years he consented to be judge of elections, but finally resigned the office. Until the silver question agitated the Democratic party, he had always adhered to its principles, but since that time, has been identified with the Republican party. For the past twenty-three years he has been an Odd Fellow, and also belongs to the order of Seven Wise Men. Mr. Hook was reared in the Lutheran Church, and is a most liberal contributor to its support, his family being regular attendants on its services and active in its work.

Although somewhat hampered by ill-health, Mr.

Hook has retained in a very remarkable degree his energy, and still is the active and intelligent head of his business. It is to Mr. Hook that the city is indebted for the very satisfactory electric plant, erected at Slack Water, which supplies Lancaster with its light. He is also president of the South Mountain Kaolin Co., capitalized at $250,000, and president of the Cline Stock Car Co., capitalized at $100,000. Mr. Hook is one of the reliable, energetic and progressive citizens, who leave worthy monuments behind them, when called from life, and who can be but illy spared. He enjoys the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens, and also has a large circle of personal friends.

HENRY W. GIBSON, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at Lancaster, has done such a noble work for the uplifting of the men and boys of his native city, that his name is entitled to most honorable mention on these pages devoted to the notable men of this community. He comes from an old family in this county, and is in direct descent from the Gibsons who were early settlers in Lancaster county, so early that Gibson's Corners has a history that runs back farther than the establishment and naming of the city of Lancaster. The Gibsons came from Ireland, and the great-grandfather of Henry W., with two brothers made his appearance here at a very early day. His wife died when our subject was about ten years old. Their son, Michael Gibson, married Mary Shertz, who died a few years ago.

John Gibson, the father of Henry W., was a carpenter in Lancaster, and he married Rebecca J. McCann, of York county, Pa. From this union three children were born: Henry W., of Lancaster; Sadie J., the wife of David J. Dailey, cigar manufacturer; and John, who died in infancy.

Henry W. Gibson was born in Lancaster, Oct. 21, 1867, and obtained his education in the city schools. Leaving school at the age of twelve years he entered a shoe store, where he remained four years, and then secured another engagement with a second shoe store, where he was employed three years. His next move was to Harrisburg, where he began work as an assistant secretary of the Harrisburg Y. M. C. A.; after a year he went to Chambersburg, where he was called to fill the office of secretary of the local association. There he spent a year and a half, and on Sept. 1, 1891, came to Lancaster, to assume the office of secretary of the Lancaster Association, and to become the organist of the First Presbyterian Church. He remained in charge of the organ until 1897, when the increasing duties of the Association work demanded all his time. Mr. Gibson is still singing in the choir, and is noted as one of the finest tenors in this city; he is also director of the Amphion male quartette, whose work is confined to classical music, and whose services are in much demand abroad. This organization, which took shape as late as 1898, largely through the work of Mr. Gibson, has already won an enviable reputation. The church, the Sunday School and the Association are his world, and music is his recreation and delight. When only twelve years old he was given charge of the organ at the Memorial Presbyterian Church, and for eight years officiated there.

Mr. Gibson may be said to have two hobbies, boys and music. When he began his work in Lancaster, there were only five young men who were paid-up members of the Association; now there are 667. The library has been largely increased; the old building was enlarged and remodeled, and the new and magnificent building at North Queen and Orange streets erected, at a cost of $200,000, by the tireless worker and enthusiastic Secretary, whom the people have learned to love. Mr. Gibson effected the organization of the Junior branch, and this may be said to be a pioneer in the field. Secretary Gibson is in demand in other cities to speak on various phases of his successful work, and he has managed and accompanied six camps of Juniors and Seniors at Sheibley's Grove, and at Mt. Gretna; with never an accident to mar the joy of these gatherings. In the summer of 1900 at Mt. Gretna, Mr. Gibson presided over a tri-state camp, which was named "Camp Shand," after the beloved president of the Y. M. C. A., with 114 representatives present from Philadelphia, New Jersey and New York. In addition to all this Mr. Gibson is the assistant to the Chancellor; and a director, of the Pennsylvania Chautauqua, whose summer school is held at Mt. Gretna, Pennsylvania.

FREELAND L. DENLINGER, who occupies the old home farm of his father in East Lampeter township, was born there March 23, 1865, son of John L. Denlinger.

Jacob Denlinger, the grandfather of our subject, was also a native of Lancaster county. He was a carpenter and builder by trade, but in the latter part of his life followed farming in East Lampeter. In his religious connection he was a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church. He married Miss Mary Landis, by whom he became the father of seven children, namely: Anna, deceased wife of David Weaver; Martha, wife of Joseph Swartley, of Ohio; John L., deceased, mentioned below; Benjamin L., deceased, of East Lampeter; Jacob, of Ohio; David, of Salunga, Pa.; and Mary, deceased wife of George Wisler.

John L. Denlinger was born in East Lampeter township in 1824, and he began farming in early life, continuing same until his death, which occurred in 1886. He married Miss Elizabeth Harnish, and they were the parents of seven children: Mary A., wife of Cyrus Weaver; Naomi, who died in infancy; Elam H., of Lancaster City; Frank, who died in his twenty-first year; Jacob, who died aged thirty-seven years; Freeland L., our subject; and Miss Lizzie F., unmarried, of Lancaster City.

Freeland L. Denlinger was educated in the public schools, and lived at home until he was twenty-one years of age, when he began life for himself, farming one year on the farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Fralish. Then his father died, and he inherited the home farm, on which he now resides, and where he has continued farming ever since. He takes a deep interest in the general welfare of the community in which he resides.

On Nov. 24, 1885, Mr. Denlinger wedded Miss Amanda Fralish, daughter of David and Elizabeth Fralish, and to this union have been born two children, J. Cletus, Nov. 27, 1887; and Miriam E., March 27, 1894.

DANIEL H. DENLINGER. The Denlinger family is of Swiss extraction, but has long been domiciled in Lancaster county. Daniel H. Denlinger was born in Leacock township May 23, 1855, son of Daniel and Margaret (Hershey) Denlinger, natives, respectively, of Paradise and Salisbury townships.

Daniel Denlinger, the father, was a prominent and successful farmer. In his early manhood he was a miller, operating in Salisbury township what is now known as Hunsecker's mill. During the last fifteen years of his life he lived retired from active farm labors. He died in 1884, aged sixty-nine years, and is buried in Hershey's Mennonite cemetery. His widow, the mother of Daniel H., survives and is a resident of Leacock township.

Daniel H. Denlinger remained on the home farm until his marriage in Leacock township, in October, 1878, to Miss Anna M. Kreider, who was born in that township in 1860, and who died July 19, 1882, aged twenty-two years, leaving two children, Anna E., who married Landis O. Brackbill, of Gap, Lancaster county; and John K., who lives at Coatesville, Pa. For his second wife, Daniel H. Denlinger married, Jan. 30, 1884, Fanny K. Landis, who was born in East Hempfield township, May 9, 1858; daughter of Rev. John B. and Anna (Kreider) Landis, of East Lampeter township, and granddaughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Brenneman) Landis, of Lancaster county, and of Jacob Kreider, of Lancaster county.

Rev. John B. Landis has been a Mennonite minister for the past fifty-two years. He was born March 10, 1819, and retired from active farming in 1871. He is a man of prominence and unusual mental vigor. His wife died in 1880, aged sixty years and twenty-four days, and is buried in East Petersburg Mennonite cemetery. To Rev. John B. and Anna (Kreider) Landis were born children as follows: Elizabeth, who married Israel F. Root, and is now deceased; Mariah, widow of Martin P. Swarr, of East Hempfield township; Anna, wife of Christ F. Charles, a farmer of Rapho township; Catherine, wife of Benjamin F. Charles, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Hettie, wife of John M. Denlinger, a farmer of Manor township; Fanny K., wife of Daniel H. Denlinger, subject of this sketch; and Jacob A., of Los Angeles, California.

To Daniel H. and Fanny K. (Landis) Denlinger have been born five children, namely: Lillie L., Daniel L., Fanny M., Margaret R. and Jacob L., all at home.

Following his marriage in 1878, Mr. Denlinger settled upon his farm of 115 acres in Salisbury township, which he still occupies. He is a successful and progressive farmer and one of the prominent citizens of the township. For ten years he served as school director, and in various ways has demonstrated his enterprise and public spirit. In politics he is a Republican, and in religious affiliation himself and wife are active members of the Mennonite Church.

AMOS H. HOFFMAN. Had the biographer the time and space it would be most interesting to compare the appearance of the land and the surrounding conditions of life, with those of the present, when, many years ago, Christian Hoffman, the founder of the Hoffman family in Lancaster county, established here a saddlery business, upon the large farm of which he became the owner. It was during his youth that he located in East Hempfield township, and this locality has the honor of having been the home of a real inventor, the teamster whip, which he first invented and then manufactured in large numbers, being a successful article, and one which found ready sale, as at that time the volume of business in the way of transportation, was done along the highway, by teamsters. His religious connection was with the Lutheran Church, and for that time and locality, he was rated a very substantial man. His marriage united him to Magdalena Geezy, and they reared these children: Henry; Christian; John; Susan; Emanuel; Levi; Magdalena, who married Michael Goch-nauer; and Annie, who married A. Harlacher.

Henry Hoffman, who purchased the home property, lying one mile east of Landisville, was born and reared on the place, his birth occurring in 1813, and his death, in 1894. Farming was his chief occupation, in connection with the saddlery, succeeding to this business after his father's death. He did much to improve the land, as at the time he took charge of the property, much of the native forest still remained. In his political affiliations he was a Democrat, and although he took an active part in the deliberations of his party, he never consented to hold office. He was a member of the Mennonite Church. His interment took place on the old homestead burying ground, where his parents long had slept. His wife, Elizabeth Hiestand, was born in 1824, a daughter of Christian Hiestand, of Landisville; she died in 1896, the mother of the following children: Christian, a farmer and produce dealer, of East Hempfield; Annie, the wife of Benjamin Nolt, a prominent miller and drover, of this township; Levi, who died unmarried, at the age of thirty-five; Maggie, deceased wife of Jonas E. Witmer; Lillie, deceased, who married F. L. Nissley; Harry, who was connected with the establishment of Hager Bros., and died in Lancaster, leaving a widow and one child; John, deceased; and Amos H.

Amos H. Hoffman, who resides on the old homestead, was born Feb. 21, 1867, and was reared on this pleasant old farm, receiving his preparatory education in the common schools, later becoming a student at the State Normal school at Westchester, immediately after entering the profession of teacher, satisfactorily pursuing that for six sessions. About this time he received an appointment as U. S. storekeeper and gauger, and served in that capacity in the Ninth Revenue district for four years, resigning the position, however, to take charge of the homestead farm he had purchased in 1895, since which time he has engaged in farming rather extensively.

Mr. Hoffman has been an active member of the Democratic party, has served on the County committee and has been a frequent delegate to Democratic county and State conventions.

On Dec. 20, 1896, Mr. Hoffman married Lestella M. Foust, a daughter of William Foust, a well-known distiller, of York county, and to this marriage two children, Ruth and William have been born. The Hoffman family is one of the most highly respected in the county, and Amos H. Hoffman is a worthy representative of it.

BENJAMIN BARR, a paper-hanger and water-color decorator, of Lancaster, was born Feb. 2, 1872, on his father's farm, in Pequea township. He served his apprenticeship with J. B. Martin, beginning in August, 1888, and he has remained with the same employer ever since, having taken up the work as a master workman on the completion of his apprenticeship service.

In April, 1897, Mr. Barr married Miss Sue Diefenbach, who was born in Erie, Pa., a daughter of John Diefenbach, a railroad engineer who was killed while on duty in Kentucky, in 1885. Mr. Barr purchased his present home, No. 212 South Ann street, three months after his marriage—a substantial indication of his industry and thrift. His political affiliations are Republican, and his social with the Knights of Pythias, and his fine qualities are appreciated at home and afar.

John Barr, now deceased, the father of Benjamin, was a farmer. He was born in Pequea Nov. 10, 1813, and died there on his farm, Feb. 13, 1884, and his remains are buried in the cemetery in Pequea. He was married in Lancaster in 1860 to Elizabeth Good, and the following is a list of their children in addition to Benjamin, above mentioned: Maurice, who died at the age of four years; John, living with his mother; Aaron, who died at the age of nine; Maurice (2), now an engineer living in St. Louis, Mo.; Lizzie, now of Steelton, Pa., and the wife of Frank Loy, by whom she has two children; and Abraham, now at home with his mother. Mr. Barr, the father of this family, was brought up to farming and tanning, under his own father, who in 1841, retired in his favor, the successor then being twenty-eight years of age. Thenceforward until his death he continued both industries, a period of over forty years, and achieved a competency for his family, leaving it prominent in the community, prosperous and comfortable. He was always a liberal supporter of the church, but not a member, and he could never be induced to accept political office. His widow sold the farm and tannery, and moved to Lancaster in April, 1888. She was born in February, 1837, in Martic township, daughter of John and Fannie (Miller) Good. Her father was a farmer who died in 1884, at the age of eighty-two; her mother having preceded him in 1881, aged seventy-five. Both were members of the Old Mennonite Church, and both are buried in the Byrland Church cemetery at Pequea. Their children besides Elizabeth, were as follows: Barbara married Abram Harnish, and both are deceased; Jonas is now deceased; Miss Fanny, of Lancaster; Susan, now Mrs. Benjamin Martin, of Lancaster; Miss Mary, of Lancaster; and Leah, now Mrs. Samuel Rissel, wife of a retired farmer of Lancaster. Mrs. John Barr's grandparents were Jacob and Barbara (Shenck) Good, farmers of Lancaster.

Benjamin Barr's grandfather was also Benjamin Barr; his grandmother, Barbara (Miller) Barr; and they were both of Lancaster county. We have already told that this Benjamin Barr passed his farming and tanning business on to his son John, and retired in 1841. He was a man of prominence in the community, and was well-to-do. He and his wife were both members of the Mennonite Church. Their sons and daughters were: John, already mentioned; Fanny, who died unmarried at the age of seventy-three; Eliza, deceased wife of Benjamin Snaveley; and Benjamin, a farmer of Landisville, this county.

HENRY RESSLER. For many years the milling interests of one section of Lancaster county, have been efficiently looked after by members of the Ressler family, and that name is known far and wide for excellent and satisfactory work. Henry Ressler, the owner and operator of one of the most complete and best conducted mills in this part of the county, inherited from his father a great faculty for, and understanding of, the business, and he is regarded as an authority on the subject.

Henry Ressler was born in Upper Leacock township, Jan. 9, 1870, son of William and Mary (Martin) Ressler, the former of whom was a native of Berks county and was born in 1819. When he first decided to leave home, in order to learn a trade, William Ressler chose that of shoemaking and became apprenticed to a local cobbler, but later resigned the position to an older brother and went to learn the milling business with David Ressler, at what is now known as Rupp's mill, on Conestoga creek, a short time later entering the employ of David Binkley, at Binkley's Bridge, and thus formed a friendship which lasted through the life of Mr. Binkley and had much to do with the shaping of some years of Mr. Ressler's career. After finishing his apprenticeship with this employer, he became his chief miller and remained with him for nine years.

About this time occurred the marriage of William Ressler and following this event, he rented the mill which is now known as Zook's mill, on Cocalico creek, and this he operated for two years, and then engaged with Isaac Rohrer, in the management of what is now called Snaveley's mill, but before he had become thoroughly identified with the business here, David Binkley died, and in his will he requested that Mr. Ressler return and take charge of his mill property, to conduct until his youngest son had reached his majority. Some dissatisfaction arose, owing to a misunderstanding between Mr. Ressler and the eldest son of Mr. Binkley, and after seven years the former gave up the mill. Not long, however, could he remain out of his favorite business, and soon after this, he leased Frey's mill, on Lititz creek, this now being known as Kafroth's mill, where he remained for two years. Shortly before the expiration of his lease a desirable mill property near Lancaster came into the market, and of this Mr. Ressler became the owner, paying for this $20,000.50, but he never operated this mill, selling it, at the same figure, on the day of purchase, and on the same day, bought another mill property, in Upper Leacock township, for which he paid $20,000, and this is now known as the Ressler mill. Not being able to gain immediate possession of the property, he pursued farming for the following year. He died in 1892. His children were: Joel, of whom nothing is known; Jacob K., the owner and operator of the Ressler mill, who married, Dec. 21, 1881, Annie M. Groff, a daughter of Levi Groff, at one time a well-known distiller and large land owner; Dora L.; Lizzie, who married W. S. Reidenbaugh, of Lancaster; J. Light, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and now a practicing physician of Bird-in-Hand; Henry; and Mary, wife of Samuel Herr, residing at Bird-in-Hand.

Henry Ressler lived upon the farm until he attained his majority, and his first business venture, when he was between nineteen and twenty-two years of age, was in the auctioneer business, and he became well and favorably known through the township in that capacity. However, the milling instinct was but dormant, for, in 1894, he began operations in the family business, in that year purchasing what is known as the Seldomridge mill, which he successfully operated from April, 1895, to November of the same year, at which time he sold it to C. E. Seldomridge, who is the present owner. The following year Mr. Ressler passed quietly in Ephrata, but in the spring of 1896, he leased his present mill property, known as the Bushong mill, located on Mill creek, and on Oct. 4, 1899, became its owner. Here Mr. Ressler has an excellent grist and custom business and also here manufactures lumber. This desirable property includes thirty-five acres of fine land, and a commodious two-story brick residence.

On Dec. 22, 1896, Mr. Ressler wedded Miss Emma E. Ranck, a daughter of Rev. David W. Ranck, of West Earl township, and to this union one daughter, Emma E., was born, but Mr. Ressler was bereaved by the death of his wife, Oct. 8, 1898. As a business man and practical miller, Mr. Ressler has gained the confidence of the community, and is one of the reliable and substantial citizens of East Lampeter township. In politics he is a Republican, and in February, 1902, he was elected township auditor, succeeding Dr. A. N. Miller, who had held the office for thirty years.

B. FRANK WALTER, the enterprising proprietor of a popular establishment at Christiana that is devoted to the sale of coal, lumber, fertilizers, and other goods in demand by the farming community, was born in Sadsbury township, Jan. 14, 1856, son of George H. and Hannah (Brown) Walter, natives of Chester county.

In 1854 George H. Walter came to Lancaster county, and located in Sadsbury township. In early life he was a merchant in Russellville, but after arriving in Lancaster county he devoted himself to farming. He became prominent in local affairs, and served as school director and as supervisor. Both he and his wife died in Sadsbury township in 1889, he at the age of eighty-one, and she at seventy-five, and they sleep in Bart Cemetery. Mrs. Walter was a member of the Society of Friends. They had the following family: Brinton, a resident of Christiana, is engaged in business in Parkesburg; Jesse died in the army; Lydia married William L. Jackson, a farm of Christiana; Mary married Francis Whitson, who is living retired in Christiana; Georgianna is deceased; Louisa married Dr. L. W. Pownall, of Altoona; and B. Frank.

The paternal grandparents of B. Frank Walter were Brinton and Mary Walter, of whom the former was a farmer and a hotel man in Chester county, near Avondale, and he died in 1818, at the age of fifty years. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Walter were Thomas and Hannah Brown, farming people of Chester county, who have entered into rest.

B. Frank Walter was married in 1883, in Chester county, to Sarah Linvill, by whom he has had the following family: Laura L., Maurice and Margaret. Mrs. Walter was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, in 1860, daughter of Sylvester D. and Sarah Walker Linvill. Sylvester D. Linvill was a school teacher in his early life, and later a farmer.

Mr. Walter lived with his parents until the age of twenty, when he engaged as assistant to his brother Brinton in the business, and so continued until 1892, in which year he purchased his brother's business, both wholesale and retail. Mr. Walter was elected borough councilman, and in February, 1901, was chosen president of the council. In his political views he is a Republican. In religion he is a member of the Society of Friends, and he lives an upright and consistent life.

JOSEPH BARR McCASKEY, D. D. S., the oldest and most prominent practitioner of dentistry in Lancaster, whose commodious and comfortable office is located at No. 11 East King street, over the First National Bank, is one of the best-known men in Lancaster city and county.

William McCaskey, father of the Doctor, owned and conducted a farm in Leacock township, this county, and in early manhood married Miss Margaret Piersol, who belonged to a well-known family of Compass, this county, near the Chester county line. To their union the following named children were born: J. P., Ph. D., the veteran principal of the Boys' High school, of Lancaster; Joseph B., of this biography; Kate, who is the wife of James H. Marshall, ex-postmaster, and now assistant postmaster, of Lancaster; Col. William S., of the United States army, who entered the volunteer service at the age of seventeen years, distinguished himself during the war of the Rebellion, and since that time achieving lasting fame as a soldier; Cyrus D., in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad service; Maggie (deceased), who was the wife of Wellington Spoon, a passenger conductor on the Reading railroad; and J. Newton, a dentist, now following his profession in Harrisburg.

Joseph B. McCaskey was born on his father's farm in Leacock township, this county, in 1839, passed his early boyhood days there and in 1843 came to Lancaster. Here he was educated in the public schools, finishing in the Boys' High School, and then began the study of dentistry, in 1854, his preceptor being Dr. William Whiteside, a soldier of the Civil war, who ranked high in his profession. About 1861 Dr. McCaskey went to Hanover, York county, practicing dentistry there for three years, at the end of which time he returned to Lancaster and opened up the office where he has remained ever since. Here he has enjoyed one of the largest and most substantial dental practices ever known in the county, and all these years has been a close student, never being satisfied with what he has already accomplished in his profession, but ever striving after the mastery of the latest scientific methods and discoveries. No man has ever lived in the city who has enjoyed so high a reputation in his business, and he was the pioneer in introducing to people the idea that it is better to save than to remove teeth. His crown and bridge work is unexcelled, and his patrons are numbered among the best and most prominent people in the city and county.

In 1857 Dr. McCaskey married Miss Fannie Connell, a daughter of the late Mark Connell, of Mechanicsburg, this county, who was a prominent farmer and live stock dealer. This union was blessed with three children: Harry and Joseph B., Jr., both of whom are dentists, the latter being associated with his father; and Clothilda, at home. The family residence has been at No. 320 North Duke street for twenty-seven years.

Dr. McCaskey comes of strong ancestry, being of Scotch-Irish stock of the Presbyterian faith, noted for their tenacity of purpose and their will power, as well as their ability.' Many of these traits have come down to him, and he has been called upon to occasionally make use of them. If the Doctor confesses to a fad it is for horses and tests of their speed, and many times has he been urged to act as judge of such trials, but he has refused. As an owner of many fine animals, and fond of many sports, he has done much toward elevating the amusements in his community, but he is not a sporting man, and only looks to racing as a mere agreeable pastime. The main business of his life still continues to be, as it has been in the past, the successful practice of dentistry.

HARRY S. BEATES, one of the prosperous young farmers of East Donegal township, was born in West Donegal township March 4, 1872, a son of William Christopher and Barbara Anna (Myers) Beates, both of whom belonged to old Lancaster county families.

Samuel Beates, his grandfather, was a son of Rev. William and Anna M. (Herst) Beates, of Philadelphia, who moved to Lancaster county, where Mr. Beates ministered in the Lutheran Church. Samuel Beates had once been a drug merchant in Philadelphia, and later engaged in the mercantile business in Lancaster, but he lived a retired life thirty years prior to his death, his last three years being spent in East Donegal township. He died in East Donegal township in June, 1889, at the age of sixty-seven. He married (first) Elizabeth Brenner, a daughter of Christopher and Elizabeth (Crider) Brenner, the former of whom was a farmer and hotel keeper in Lancaster. She died when her son, William Christopher, was but eighteen months old. Both Samuel Beates and his wife were buried in Woodward Hill cemetery, Lancaster.

William Christopher Beates was born in Lancaster Sept. 9, 1847, and after the death of his young mother was taken to the home of his grandfather Beates, where he remained for thirteen years, and then went to work on a farm near Londonderry, in Dauphin county, where he continued for five years. By this time he was prepared to purchase a farm, and this he operated for the following five years, and then changed his residence to Lancaster county, and farmed in East Donegal township for twenty years. In 1894 he retired from active life and now resides in Marietta. In politics Mr. Beates voted with the Republican party, and in religious matters he is an active member of the Lutheran Church, in which he is a trustee. In December, 1869, Mr. Beates was married to Barbara Ann Myers, and two children have been born to this union: Harry S., of this sketch; and Sarah, who married John D. Orth, a meat merchant of Marietta. Mrs. Beates was born in Dauphin county, Pa., July 30, 1844, a daughter of Henry and Sarah (Coble) Myers, of Lancaster county, but both died in Dauphin county, just over the line of separation, the father in 1890, aged eighty-six, the mother in 1848, aged thirty-five, and both were buried at Conewago, Lancaster county. They had lived irreproachable lives, consistent members of the United Brethren and Dunkard Churches. Their children were: Christian, a resident of Running Pump, in this county; Eli, deceased; Barbara; David, a carpenter, in Elizabethtown; Catherine, who died young; and Sarah, the wife of Harry Shoap, a farmer of Dauphin county. Henry Myers married second, Maria Zimmerman, who bore him two children: Simon, a machinist of Elizabethtown; and Ellen M., who married Ephraim D. Shenk, a farmer of Dauphin county.

Harry S. Beates was brought by his parents to the East Donegal farm when he was but two years old, and that was his home for many years. Farming was his chief occupation, and he has always been regarded as one of the most promising and progressive among the younger agriculturists of this section.

Mr. Beates was married first in January, 1894, in Columbia, Pa., to Miss Frances Miller, a daughter of Joseph Miller, of West Hempfield township. She was born there in 1871, and she died in 1897, and was buried in Silver Spring cemetery. On Jan. 28, 1898, at Oberlin, Pa., Mr. Beates wedded Miss Ellen S. Bishop, and to this union two interesting children have been born, Bertha and Alvin H. Mrs. Beates was born Sept. 6, 1872, at Oberlin, Dauphin county, a daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Metz) Bishop, farming people of that locality, the former born in 1833, and the latter in 1843. They both are members of the Lutheran faith, and are among the esteemed citizens of Oberlin. Their children are: Albert G., who resides on the old homestead; Oliver C., who is the principal of the Oberlin Schools; Ida B.; Ellen S., Warren J., Katie E., Hiram E. and Norman D., all of these residing with their parents, with the exception of Mrs. Beates and Albert G., the latter having the old homestead, which is located one-half mile from where the family reside. The paternal grandparents were Peter and Catherine (Millicen) Bishop, of Lancaster county, who died in Dauphin county, having moved there following their marriage. The maternal grandparents were George and Sarah (Fisher) Metz, of Dauphin county.

Following the death of his first wife, Mr. Beates went to Marietta and worked for one year in a planing mill, in that place, but later returned to the farm, where the family enjoy every comfort of life and extend a generous hospitality to their numerous friends. The political faith of Mr. Beates is that of the Republican party, while his religious connection is with the Lutheran church.

JACOB STONER, the efficient treasurer of Lancaster county, comes from old Mennonite ancestry who fled to this country at an early day, to escape bitter religious persecution in their native land. Jacob Stoner, his grandfather, was a farmer of Dauphin county, Pa., but removed to Lancaster county in middle life.

Jacob Stoner

Jacob Stoner, father of Jacob, was born in Dauphin county in 1804, and died in Manheim township, this county, in 1881. Susanna Funk, his wife, born in 1813, died in 1889. She was the daughter of a well-known farmer of Manor township. They had twelve children, four of whom are now living: Jacob, who is mentioned below; Barbara, wife of Martin B. Herr, a machinist of Lancaster; Fanny, wife of Jacob P. Hollinger; and Susan, wife of Christian Haverstick, a farmer of Manor township.

Jacob Stoner was born in Indiantown, Manor township, Feb. 19, 1842, and received his education in the public schools of Lancaster township, to which section his father had removed when he was a child of only one year. After leaving the district school young Stoner attended the State Normal School at Millersville for a time, but after teaching school two terms he returned to farming, which he has made his principal business in life. In 1901 he put his farm into the care of a tenant, and has given up hard and laborious farm work, feeling that he has richly earned a few years of ease and comfort. For twelve years he was a member of the board of school directors, and for some seven or eight years has been on the Republican county committee. He is prominent in Masonic circles, having risen to membership in the commandery.

Mr. Stoner was elected county treasurer of Lancaster county in 1899 by a good majority. He is a man of fine social qualities and generous impulses, and his integrity is beyond question. He enjoys the esteem of the public, and his election to the responsible position of treasurer of this wealthy county is a tribute to his integrity and ability.

T. B. ACHESON, a retired farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in Eden township in October, 1839, son of Cuningham and Anna (Markley) Acheson.

Cuningham Acheson was born in Ireland in 1811, son of George Acheson, who came to this country and made his home in Philadelphia, where he died leaving two sons, Charles and Cuningham, who settled on farms in Lancaster county, where they lived and died. Frank and Ross Acheson, sons of Charles, still live in this county.

Cuningham Acheson, father of T. B., settled on the present Acheson home in East Drumore township, where both he and his wife spent their lives. He died in 1887, and his widow in February, 1889. Among the improvements he made were only small buildings, the present large and handsome structure having been put up by his son, T. B. One of the old-time Presbyterians, he was a helpful and devout member of the Church. In politics he was a Democrat. Mr. and Mrs. Cuningham Acheson were the parents of six children: (1) Mary, born in 1838, is unmarried and lives in Harrisburg with her sister. (2) T. B. is mentioned below. (3) George, born in 1841, learned the carpenter's trade, and settled in Philadelphia, where he married Miss Ella Kelly, by whom he has had six children, May, James, John, Robert, Agnes and Anna (who died in early womanhood). (4) Isabell, born in 1842, married Benjamin Finley, of Harrisburg, where she died in 1901, leaving one daughter, Laura. (5) Robert, born in 1846, married Sadie Goodman, of Philadelphia, where they were living at the time of his death, in 1880. He was a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, and was killed in an accident, leaving a widow and one daughter, Catherine. (6) Emma, born in 1849, became one of the successful and accomplished teachers of Lancaster county, and married Mahlon Erb, of Martic township; they have the following children—Annie (who married Amos Patton, of Columbia), Oscar, Mahlon, Robert and Alma.

T. B. Acheson received his early education in the home schools, and remained with his parents until they died. In 1891 he married Alice Trimble, who was born in Drumore township in 1874, daughter of John and Amanda (Connelly) Trimble; her mother died when she was a child, and she made her home with the parents of her husband. They settled on his father's homestead, where Mr. Acheson put up a new house in 1890. There he has engaged in farming very successfully to the present time. They have four living children: Mary E., born in 1891; Anna G., born in 1893; Ruth, born in 1895; and Mabel A., born in 1899.

Mr. Acheson has always been a Democrat politically. He was reared in the Presbyterian faith, and socially he belongs to Drumore Lodge, No. 509, I. O. O. F. A few years ago Mr. Acheson suffered a serious accident, and has not been able to engage in active work for some time. Notwithstanding his sore affliction, he has a cheerful disposition, and looks upon the brighter side of things. To those who know him well his finer nature stands out bright and clear. He is proud of his devoted wife and family.

JOHN M. BOWMAN, a retired farmer of Providence township, Lancaster county, is a well-known resident and estimable citizen of that locality. He was born Aug. 5, 1830, in Strasburg township, son of Isaac and Ann (Musser) Bowman, both of whom are deceased.

Isaac Bowman, the father, was a son of John Bowman, who had a large family, of whom Joseph, Isaac and Maria were the only ones to grow to maturity. Isaac Bowman was born in 1802, and died in 1880, and the record of the intervening years is that of a worthy citizen and good man. About 1829 he married Ann Musser, daughter of John Musser, and the following children were born to them: John M.; Elizabeth, deceased; Henry, who lives in Dauphin county; Susan, who is deceased; Isaac, a resident of Lancaster county; Joseph, who lives in Philadelphia; Amanda, and Benjamin, both deceased; and Ann, who is the wife of Abraham Brubaker, a minister of the Mennonite Church.

In 1853 John M. Bowman was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Overly, of Camargo village, who died in 1859. They had children as follows: John F., of Lancaster city; Elizabeth (deceased), wife of Daniel M. Stauffer, of Lampeter township; and Charles J., of Lancaster city. On March 28, 1866, Mr. Bowman was married (second) to Mrs. Martha (Boreman) Starr, born in 1840, and this marriage has been blessed with eight children, namely: Catherine, born in 1866; Benjamin G., in 1868; Elinora, in 1870; Martha, in 1872; Enos E., in 1873 (deceased); Rheubine H., in 1875; Ezra A., in 1878; and Sarah, in 1880.

Mr. Bowman passed his early life on the farm, and has followed agricultural pursuits, combined with sawmilling, all his active life. His career has been a very successful one, although he has depended upon his own resources from the age of twelve years. Of careful, frugal habits, and endowed with energy and determination, he soon accumulated means, and now, in the evening of life, is most comfortably situated. His farm in Providence township is valuable and well improved.

In his political views Mr. Bowman is a member of the Republican party, and he takes an interest in all its movements. Although he is not formally connected with any religious body, he upholds the Christian religion, and gives of his means to further worthy enterprises. Mr. Bowman is one of the honorable and upright men of Providence township.

HENRY MICHAEL SHREINER is the son of Martin Shreiner, and the grandson of Martin Shreiner. His great-grandfather came from Germany, and settled in Lancaster county at a very early period in its history, and here the ensuing generations have been born and nurtured.

Martin Shreiner, the grandfather of Henry M., was the manufacturer of the celebrated eight-day Shreiner clocks, the "grandfather" clocks once so popular, and now coming into favor again. Henry M. Shreiner is the possessor of the first of these clocks, the handiwork of his grandfather, bearing the inscription, "Martin Shreiner, No. 1." It is as good as the day it was made, and would command an immense price if offered for sale, instead of being preserved as an heirloom. The total number of these clock made by the elder Shreiner, so far as has been discovered, was 317, that being the number the family has been able to record. Every clock was numbered in the order of its manufacture. This Martin Shreiner helped while he was still an apprentice, in 1784, to build the town clock of Lancaster, which was in constant use until about two years ago, when it was removed from the court house to give place to a clock of modern design. Martin Shreiner was the founder and owner of Shreiner's cemetery, a beautiful burying ground in the western part of the city. It was named "Concord Cemetery," and in that silent and unpretentious city of the dead lie the mortal remains of Thaddeus Stevens, known in the history of his times as the "Great Commoner." This place was selected by himself as his final home, because there was inscribed on its gateway, "The only Cemetery in Lancaster where there is no distinction as to race, color or religion."

Martin Shreiner, father of Henry M., was also a watch worker and a jeweler, and had his shop in an old-fashioned building, long since torn down to make way for the Lancaster Trust building. The site on which this building stands had been in the Shreiner family for three generations, and in that time there had never been a dollar of incumbrance placed upon it, an instance almost unparalleled in the history of the State of Pennsylvania.

Henry Michael Shreiner was born in Lancaster Oct. 3, 1832, and is the oldest surviving member of this historic family in the city. When a boy he entered the jewelry and watchmaking establishment of his uncle, Michael Zahn, at No. 30 North Queen street, and there he has remained fifty-five years, with good prospects for many years longer, as he presents a remarkably healthy and robust appearance. Beginning as an apprentice, he learned his trade, and then worked on journeyman's wages, finally becoming, with his brother, owner of the business, and then for some years being the sole owner. A year or two ago he sold out the contents of his store by auction, and rented the room for another purpose, retaining for himself, however, a small corner of the room for his bench and stand, that he might still care for his patrons, some of whom had given him their trade for half a century, and would have no other watchworker so long as he was alive and willing to attend to them.

HENRY SANDER, one of the leading agriculturists of East Earl township, worthily represents an old and highly respected family of Lancaster county. He was born in 1820, and is a surviving son of Peter Sander, long since passed out of life.

Henry Sander was reared to agricultural pursuits and has followed farming all his life. Soon after marriage he purchased a farm of ninety-nine acres near Terrehill, and there he lived for a period covering forty years, moving then to a small place adjoining the family homestead, which he continued to cultivate for fifteen years. In 1895 Mr. Sander came to make his home with his son Isaac, three-fourths of a mile south of Terrehill. In politics he has always been a staunch Republican, and has successively served his township as supervisor, and as a member of the school board.

Henry Sander was married to Miss Nancy Miller, who was a daughter of Isaac Miller, born in 1824, in Cocalico township, and still survives. Both Henry Sander and his wife are consistent members of the Mennonite Church. Their children are: Mary Ann, who is the wife of John Weaver, of Terrehill; David, who is a farmer of Brecknock township; Hettie, a cigar-maker; Henry M., a farmer on the old homestead; Peter, a bridge-builder in the West;

Isaac, a farmer in this township; and Lizzie, the wife of Samuel Zinn, a carpenter in Martindale.

HENRY M. SANDER, one of the prosperous and representative farmers of East Earl township, was born on the farm of his residence, Oct. 13, 1851, a son of Henry and Nancy (Miller) Sander. He obtained his education in the public schools, and at the age of twenty-three took charge of the old homestead farm, containing nearly a hundred acres of fine land, and located one mile south of Terrehill. Some two years later, he purchased the old homestead and has devoted much care, time and money, in making it one of the most attractive country homes in this locality. General farming has been carried on in progressive lines, with improved machinery and his success has been very gratifying.

On Nov. 19, 1874, Henry M. Sander was married to Mary M. Hershey, who was born Nov. 7, 1851, a daughter of Deacon John and Magdalena (Musser) Hershey, of Salisbury township. Three children have been born of this union: John H., born Feb. 10, 1876, married Fannie Zimmerman, and resides in Martindale, in this township, their three children being, Mary, Jacob and Francis; Maggie, born July 2, 1879, is an accomplished seamstress and resides at home; and Annie, born Feb. 25, 1884, also lives at home. All the members of this family belong to the old Mennonite Church, and are very highly esteemed in this neighborhood.

HON. HIRAM PEOPLES, ex-member of the House of Representatives of the State of Pennsylvania, and the proprietor of the most extensive fish hatcheries in this State, is a typical Pennsylvanian, and is known far and wide for his public spirit, his liberal promotion of all interests promising to be of lasting benefit to his State or locality, and for his progressive ideas along many lines.

The home of Mr. Peoples is in the commodious and comfortable dwelling house at New Providence, this county, which was erected here by his father, John Peoples, and which was the scene of his birth, on Feb. 14, 1835. His grandfather was a native of Chester county, but lived in Martic township, Lancaster county, for a considerable period retired from activity, and there he died prior to the birth of his grandson.

John Peoples was also born in Chester county, but moved to Providence, Lancaster county, about 1822, where he became one of the most active and energetic men of his locality. In the building trade he was particularly active, erecting as additions to the village of New Providence, a large storehouse, four dwelling houses, a blacksmith and a wheelwright shop and other structures, doing more in this line than any other man in the vicinity. John Peoples was prominent in public affairs in his community, faithfully served the county as director of the poor, and his efforts were always to be counted upon to assist in any public enterprise. He married Susan Miller, thus connecting two honorable families.

Their children included three sons and four daughters: Abner, Hiram, John M., Annie, Mary, Amanda and Leah P., and of these, Annie married George Witmer; Mary married John Rohrer; Amanda married John Tweed; and Leah P. married Dr. John K. Raub. Abner married Martha, the daughter of John Hess, of Strasburg township; John M. married Maggie Royer, of Pottstown, and he became professor of mathematics in the State Normal school at Lock Haven, Pa. The Miller family was one of the oldest in the State, its early settlers having been the founders of Millersville, which in after years became the seat of the widely known and justly celebrated State Normal School.

Hiram Peoples, who for many years has been in the public eye, was carefully educated, receiving instruction in the public schools of his district, and later at White Hall Academy, going from there to the Millersville Normal school, where he attained distinction as an apt and appreciative student. After leaving the latter institution, he engaged in teaching for one term, but as he was gifted in a musical line, he decided to put his ability to practical use, and for a considerable time he instructed pupils in vocal music, and also taught both organ and violin. His attention was then engaged in the mercantile business, but later he took up agricultural pursuits, locating on the old homestead, and for more than thirty years this has been his delightful home. This farm comprises ninety acres of land, but it is not operated for the cultivation of grains or vegetable products alone, his energies having developed other possibilities which he has brought to be certainties.

It was in 1881 that Mr. Peoples began the propagation of fish, introducing the German carp to this section, continuing its cultivation until 1900, since which time he has directed his efforts to the hatching of black bass and gold fish, finding a ready and eager market all over the country. Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Reading and Lancaster are his nearest large consumers, but his business has far outgrown all local lines. Mr. Peoples owns the largest fish hatchery in the State, having twenty immense fish ponds on his estate, and it is from his fishing grounds that the State Fish Commission obtains its bass. It has required much business sagacity to inaugurate successfully and to conduct a business on these lines, and only a liberally educated man could have prospered as has Mr. Peoples. Both in public and private life he has shown his interest in this subject, in which he is most justly regarded as an authority, as well as a pioneer in this locality.

Politically Mr. Peoples is a Republican, and he has long been an important factor in that party. For five terms he was honored by his fellow-citizens of Lancaster county with election to the House of Representatives, being chosen for his last two terms, practically without opposition, so great is his popularity. His first term began in 1877, his second in 1881, his third in 1887 and his next in 1896, and he was re-elected in 1898, at the close of which term he declined to be again a candidate for the coming election. During his long service, he was a member of many important committees, and chairman of three, notably the committees on Agriculture, on Roads, and on Game and Fish, and his efforts were instrumental in obtaining some very desirable legislation on these important matters. When the Fish Commission Bill was before the Legislature, the attitude which Mr. Peoples took, attracted attention and much favorable comment all over this and other States. This was that the bill should provide more liberally for the management of fish culture, and less harshly in its prohibitory and protective features, advancing arguments and statistics in support of this position.

Mr. Peoples was united in marriage with Miss Maria Brackbill, a daughter of the late John Brackbill, who was a prominent farmer of Strasburg. She is a descendant of Hans Herr, who was the founder of the Herr family in the United States, one of the largest and most influential families of Lancaster county, prominent alike in agricultural and religious circles. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Peoples, all of whom still survive: Capt. John B., the eldest, is the popular owner of the yacht the "Lady Gay," proprietor of "Peoples Bathing Resort," manager of the Woolworth Roof Garden, and he is also widely known in connection with the Northwestern Life Insurance Co.; Ida S. married Dr. Charles E. Helm, of Bart township; Angie Winona is at home; Annie Carlotta, who has inherited great musical gifts, is an artist on the violin, and resides at home; and Maria married Martin Rush, who was formerly a farmer, but who later became a leaf tobacco dealer of Willowstreet.

This brief sketch but incompletely presents a few of the leading characteristics, interests and accomplishments of a citizen of Lancaster county, who numbers among his friends and well wishers the majority of those whom either the demands of business, the claims of public affairs, or the gentle amenities of social life have brought within his radius. Upright, honest and public-spirited, his devotion to his locality is well known, and the people of Lancaster county point to him with pride as a representative citizen.

REV. JACOB K. NEWCOMER, a devoted servant of his Master and earnest worker in the Mennonite Church, was born on a farm two miles south of Mountville, Oct. 18, 1832, a son of Jacob Newcomer and his wife, Barbara Kauffman.

Jacob Newcomer, the father, was a native of Manor township, and died in 1861, at the age of sixty. As he was the eldest son at the death of his father, there entailed upon him grave responsibility and weighty care for one so young—he being then a lad of twelve years. It devolved upon him to assist his mother in the care of the farm, and he passed his life in the old homestead. He was a man of deep and earnest piety, and an active member of the Mennonite church, and for many years a deacon in that organization. His wife died in 1858. She was the mother of ten children, nine of whom reached the age of maturity. Elizabeth, the eldest, married Abraham Sanders and is deceased. Barbara died unmarried. Christian was the husband of Elizabeth Mellinger, and he, too, has died. Jacob K., the subject of this brief biographical sketch, was the fourth child. Joseph, the next in the order of birth, is a farmer of Manor township; he has been twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Rohrer, and his second Elizabeth Seitz. Mary became the wife of Jacob Snively. Catherine is the widow of Jacob Lindeman, of Manor. Abraham resides in the same township; he married Mary Rutt. Isaac died a bachelor. Anna was taken away from earth in childhood.

Jacob K. Newcomer received his early education in the common schools, and passed his youth upon the paternal farm. At the early age of twenty-five he began farming on his own account, and is still engaged in agricultural pursuits. His first farm embraced one hundred acres, and to this he has added thirty-one. It has been occupied and cultivated by his son since 1885, in which year he removed to another farm—of fifty acres—also owned by him, and on which he still lives. In 1887 his home was destroyed by fire, and he at once erected a new and modern residence of handsome architectural appearance. He has thoroughly improved both properties. He also owns twenty-one acres in Manor township, formerly the property of his brother Christian—a part of the old homestead.

Born of devout, God-fearing parents, and reared in the Christian faith from infancy, he early became imbued with an earnest desire to be actively identified with church work. In 1884 he entered the Mennonite ministry, and since then has labored earnestly among the churches of Habecker's, Masonville and Mountville. His life also has been a living sermon by way of godly example, while he and his devout wife have reared their large family "in the fear and admonition of the Lord."

Rev. Jacob K. Newcomer was married, Nov. 25, 1856, to Anna Buchwalter, who was born May 30, 1838, near Safe Harbor, Lancaster county, daughter of Jacob and Fannie (Eschbauch) Buchwalter, both of whom are deceased, each dying at the age of fifty-six years. This union has been blessed with twelve children, and their grandchildren number twenty. (1) Aaron B., born March 12, 1858, died March 1, 1899; he was a farmer, and married Elizabeth Witmer. (2) Susanna B., born Nov. 25, 1859, is the wife of Benjamin Shertzer, of Millersville. (3) Anna B., born June 28, 1861, married Levi Brubaker, of New Danville. (4) John B., born Oct. 16, 1863, died in infancy. (5) Elizabeth B. (Mrs. Henry Haverstick), of Washington borough, Lancaster county, was born Jan. 15, 1865. (6) Amanda B., born Feb. 23, 1867, married Amos Martin, of Manor township. (7) Ida B., born Jan. 31, 1869, is unmarried, and lives with her parents. (8) Jacob B., born Jan. 27, 1871, is a prosperous farmer of Manor township; he married Sallie Greider. (9) Catherine B., born March 27, 1873, died in her seventeenth year. (10) Mary B., born Feb. 7, 1875, lives at home, unmarried. (11) Harvey, born June 30, 1877, died at the age of eighteen years. (12) Christian B., the youngest of the family, born Dec. 23, 1879, lives with his parents.

REESE H. DAVIS, long time a resident of Terrehill, is one of the representative men of Lancaster county, and belongs to one of the time-honored families of this section of the State.

Isaac Davis, his grandfather, was a minister in the Albright Church, although he was reared a Presbyterian. From him the Lancaster Davises are all descended. Isaac Davis died in Caernavon township Jan. 5, 1838, at the age of eighty-three years and nine months. He was a farmer, and his home was in Earl township, in which he had very extensive real estate holdings, which have since been divided into three farms. In religion he was deeply interested, and was a local minister in the Albright Church. His wife, Lydia, died Oct. 5, 1821, at the age of sixty-three years. They were blessed with a large family of children, of whom Richard, the father of Reese H., was one.

Richard Davis was a farmer in early life, and was later engaged in a mercantile business, in connection with farming in Brecknock township, Lancaster county, where he died. He was one of the leading Republicans of that part of the county, and held various local offices, such as member of the school board, and other positions. He was a liberal contributor to the churches, as well as to any project for the public good. He married Catherine (Strohm) Yundt, who by her first husband was the mother of three children: Harriet, who married Moses Wenger, is dead; Mary married Samuel Slick, and is dead; John died in Franklin county. To Mr. Davis she bore the following children: Ann, born in 1818, and was the wife of Jacob Manderbosh, died in Ohio, May 15, 1860; Isaac, born Jan. 23, 1821, died April 23, 1830; Henry, born Sept. 10, 1822, died April 10, 1853; Richard, born May 15, 1824, died Sept. 8, 1859, at Naperville, Ill.; Lydia, born Oct. 21, 1825, is the deceased wife of John W. Oberholtzer; Elmira C., born Sept. 18, 1829, died at the age of seventeen; Reese H., whose name appears at the opening of this article, was born Feb. 5, 1828; and Samuel B., born Jan. 1, 1832, is retired, and has his home in Terrehill. The father died Oct. 10, 1861, at the age of seventy-two years and six months. His widow passed to her rest March 31, 1868. He was a successful man, and became one of the most prominent citizens of his native county.

Reese H. Davis was reared on the farm, and educated in the common schools. When a lad well in his teens, he learned the carpenter trade, following it, however, only a short time, and about the time he attained his majority, in company with his brother, Richard N., he became engaged in stock dealing, handling horses and cattle for some five or six years. After this the two brothers went into Illinois, but sickness, however, compelled Reese H. to return to Lancaster county, and to go from this State to California via the Isthmus route. He spent some five years in that State, prospecting and conducting a stock ranch. His career in the Golden West was not devoid of the discomforts that attended the pioneer life of the early days, and among other dangers and perils, he had several narrow escapes from the Indians.

Mr. Davis returned to Lancaster county a second time, where he married and located at Terrehill. Here he became prominent locally, and served three years as supervisor, and three years as a member of the school board. He was engaged in a cigar manufacturing business at Terrehill for some twenty years, and at one time employed as many as thirty or forty hands in his factory. Since his retirement from the cigar shop he has devoted himself to his private affairs, and to the discharge of his duties as director in the New Holland Bank.

Mr. Davis was married, in 1863, to Miss Mary Clime, a daughter of Abner Clime. To this union have come two children: (1) Dora, who died Aug. 14, 1866, at the age of one year and seven days. (2) Richard B., who was born Nov. 4, 1868, belongs to the firm of Davis & Watts, at Terrehill, where they are extensively engaged in the mercantile business; he married Miss Margie Weaver, and is the father of two children: Mary and Reese H. Both Richard B. and his wife are members of the Evangelical Church, of Terrehill, he being one of its trustees.

CHRISTIAN F. HOSTETTER, a highly esteemed and prosperous farmer of the township of East Donegal, Lancaster county, was born in Mannheim township, Aug. 9, 1837, son of Christian (2) and Catharine (Franck) Hostetter, who were born in the townships of East Donegal and Warwick, respectively.

The history of the Hostetter family begins with Jacob Hostetter, a Swiss Mennonite, who arrived in the province of Pennsylvania with his wife Anna, in 1712. They made a home on the north side of the Conestoga, within the present limits of the city of Lancaster, where he died in 1761. They had the following children: Anna, who married John Brubaker, and died in 1787, two years after her husband, John; Jacob, who died in Manor township in 1796; Barbara, who married Christ Hershey; Elizabeth, who married Christ Bomberger; Abraham, who married Catherine Long; Margaret, who married John Kreider; John, who married Elizabeth Shenk; and Catherine, who died unmarried in Manor township.

John Hostetter, son of Jacob the immigrant, married Elizabeth Shenk, as above stated. They became the parents of the following children: Jacob, who married Maria Bachman; Ann, the wife of Christ Kauffman; John, who married Ann Kreider; Barbara, the wife of Michael Kreider; and Christian, the grandfather of our subject.

Christian Hostetter, son of John, lived in East Donegal township, and there married Catherine Kreider, who died in May, 1844, aged seventy-five years. He died Nov. 20, 1847, at the age of eighty-two years, six months and eighteen days. They were both buried in Eberly Cemetery, Mt. Joy, Pa. Their children were: Michael, who married Catherine Kauffman; Jacob, who married Anna Stauffer; John; Christian (2), the father of our subject, who was married to Catharine Franck; Catherine, who married Jacob Newcomer; Anna, who married Henry Nissley, and on his death David Brubaker; and Benjamin, who married Elizabeth Heistand.

Christian Hostetter (2), son of Christian and father of Christian F., was born Feb. 19, 1805, and was a farmer by occupation. He died in Manheim township, Jan. 28, 1879. His wife, Catharine Franck, was born Sept. 2, 1807, a daughter of John and Maria (Bournage) Franck, farming people of Warwick township. She died Dec. 20, 1886, and was buried in East Petersburg. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hostetter were members of the Mennonite Church, and were thoroughly honorable and respectable people. The following children were born to them: Michael, born in September, 1832, is a retired farmer in Penn township; John is a carpenter in the city of Lancaster; Christian F.; Catherine is the widow of Isaac Stoner, Penn township; Henry is living on the old Manheim township homestead; Benjamin, born May 15, 1844, died March 18, 1862; Anna married Joseph Gochnauer, a farmer in East Hempfield township; and David is a farmer in Manheim township.

Christian F. Hostetter, the subject proper of this sketch, remained with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-one years, when he began for himself by working some time among the neighboring farmers, and was in Whiteside county, Ill., for about seventeen months. After this visit in the West he came back to Lancaster county and continued working out among the farmers around him until after his marriage, when he came to his present place. Here his adult years have been spent, and here he is watching the shadows lengthen behind him, knowing that he has lived a good life, honest, manly and square with all. Never has he sought for show, place or power, but has been ever willing to stand in his own place, and to do the work given him.

On Nov. 28, 1867, by Bishop John Brubaker, Christian F. Hostetter was united in marriage with Barbara K. Nissley. This union was blessed with one daughter, Catherine, who married Rohrer Stoner, who farms the home place; they have had a bright little family, consisting of Ellen H., Ada H., Christian H., Mary H. (deceased), Esther H. and Isaac H.

Mrs. Barbara K. (Nissley) Hostetter was born in her late home March 4, 1840, and there she died Sept. 16, 1888, aged forty-eight years, six months and twelve days, and her remains are now resting in the Graybill Meeting House Cemetery in East Donegal township. Mrs. Hostetter was the daughter of the Rev. Peter and Catherine (Kreider) Nissley, the former a son of Christian and Anna (Snyder) Nissley. Rev. Peter Nissley was born July 22, 1802, and died Jan. 16, 1890, aged eighty-seven years, five months and twenty-four days. He was a farmer and Mennonite preacher, and moved to the present home of our subject in 1825, and passed the rest of his life there. His wife, Catherine Kreider, born Sept. 28, 1809, died July 31, 1852. Both were buried in the Graybill Meeting House cemetery. To Rev. Peter and Catherine Nissley were born the following children: Mary, who married Solomon Schwartz, and is deceased; Esther, who died single; John K., deceased, who married Mariah Reist; Leah, who married David L. Miller, a retired farmer of Mt. Joy borough; Christ W., who died unmarried; Barbara K., Mrs. Hostetter; Catherine K., who died unmarried; and Anna K., who also died unmarried.

HENRY FISHER (deceased). The history of a community is made by the substantial, public-spirited citizens of that locality, and whenever a record is made, mention must consistently be made of those who, although no longer living, still speak in the memory of their deeds. Such a man was Henry Fisher, of Lancaster, who passed away in this city, Sept. 11, 1879, and is now buried in Woodward Hill Cemetery.

Henry Fisher was born May 2, 1825, in Gearsdorf, France, a son of John G. and Catherine E. (Helsel) Fisher, also of Gearsdorf, but who came to America, in 1820, with their children, one of whom died on the voyage and was buried at sea. The other children were: George, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., deceased; Lewis, of York, Pa., deceased; Michael, who died in Lancaster; Henry; and Charles, a tailor of Lancaster, Pa. The father died in 1847, aged sixty-eight years, while the death of the mother occurred in 1872, when she was seventy-five years of age, and both are buried in Woodward Hill Cemetery. By occupation, the father was a tailor, and he taught his trade to all his sons.

Henry Fisher was reared in Lancaster, Pa., and learned the trade of a tailor under his father, following this calling until he purchased a grocery store, and operated it until his death, being very successful in his enterprises, and gaining the respect and esteem of all with whom he had business relations.

On Oct. 19, 1848, Mr. Fisher was united in marriage, by Rev. John C. Baker, in Lancaster, Pa., to Elizabeth Flood, born in that city, June 4, 1826, daughter of George and Anna (Messenger) Flood, of Ireland and Germany, respectively, who died when Mrs. Fisher was quite young, and who were buried in Lancaster. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Flood were: Alexander, deceased; Elizabeth, Mrs. Fisher; Mary, now deceased, who was the wife of Rudolph Shultz, a now prominent cigar manufacturer of the city; Margaret, deceased; and George, deceased. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were: Henry M., a printer of Lancaster, who married Susan C. Snyder; William F., of Lancaster, and George L. (married to Kate Steever), both engaged in the grocery business established by their father, under the firm name of Fisher Bros.; and Mary E., of Westchester, Pa., married to Frank P. Thomas, a printer.

Mr. Fisher was a prominent member of all the Masonic bodies and of the order of Odd Fellows, and took an active part in these fraternities. In religious matters he was a life-long and consistent member of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church. He always took a deep interest in matters pertaining to the welfare of the city, serving at various times as a member of the city council and as school director.

Mrs. Fisher resides in her pleasant home, with her son William, surrounded by the comforts of life, and looked up to and loved, not only by her children, but eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, as well as the whole community, where she is recognized as a lady of high Christian character, a kind neighbor and a devoted mother and grandmother.

ROBERT A. SCOTT. Lancaster county numbers among its citizens many influential and progressive farmers, and a good representative of this important class is Robert A. Scott, of Little Britain township, who was born June 26, 1847, a son of Robert and Martha J. (Gibson) Scott.

Alexander Scott, great-grandfather of Robert A., was a native of Ireland, and was one of the first settlers of Little Britain township, where he purchased the home now owned by Robert A. Scott.

Alexander Scott, Jr., son of the emigrant, was reared to manhood on the farm in Little Britain township.

Robert Scott, son of Alexander, Jr., and father of Robert A., was born on the old home farm in 1805, and followed farming as an occupation until his death in 1882. He married Martha J. Gibson, who was born Sept. 5, 1816, and who passed away Aug. 19, 1900. Twelve children were born of this union, eight of whom reached mature years, as follows: Mary Ann, wife of Alexander Ewing, of Oxford, Pa.; Eliza, who married Joseph Wood, of Erie, Pa., but is now deceased; Martha J., wife of James Clendenin, of Little Britain township; Harriet G., who married J. L. Walker, of Little Britain township, and is now deceased; Emma G., wife of Ellis Brown, of Little Britain township; Robert A.; Amelia, who married William Risk, of Drumore township; and Alice, wife of E. P. Housekeeper, of Fulton township.

Robert A. Scott was reared upon his father's farm, and attended the district school during the winter months, as did all farmer boys of his day. As he grew to manhood, he continued farming, and has made that calling his life work. The homestead, which he now owns, is a fine one, consisting of 150 acres, all of which is in an advanced state of cultivation, and Mr. Scott has made many improvements. Thoroughly understanding his business, Mr. Scott has made a success of farming, and is regarded as one of the substantial men of the township.

On Sept. 2, 1874, Mr. Scott was married to Miss Mary G. Cauffman, a daughter of Christopher and Emeline (Gibson) Cauffman, of Fulton township. Mrs. Scott was born Sept. 2, 1853, and was one of a family of seven children born to her parents: Lena, wife of Jeremiah Haines, of Philadelphia; Mary G., wife of Mr. Scott; Ida, wife of Fred Paxson, of Britain township; John, of Britain township; Emma, wife of Amos Nesbitt, of Fulton township; Fred, of Fulton township; and William, also of Fulton township. The parents of Mrs. Scott are of German descent and they still reside in Fulton township, where they are highly respected.

Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Scott: Blanche, born July 25, 1875, is the wife of William Hambleton, of Fulton township; Leiper, born July 24, 1878, married Florence Herr, of Fulton township, a daughter of Silas Herr (see his sketch elsewhere in this volume); Robert C., born Dec. 18, 1882; Fred L., born Jan. 8, 1885; and Frank G., born Jan. 20, 1887. Mr. Scott is a staunch Republican, and has served his party as auditor, discharging the duties of his office to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. His religious affiliations are with the Presbyterian church, of which he and his wife are members, and they attend the Church of that denomination in Little Britain. Having always lived uprightly, being an honorable man in all his dealings, and kind and liberal in his home, Mr. Scott has gained in the highest degree the respect and esteem of his neighbors, and the friendship of the best men of the county, and the records of this locality would not be complete without a sketch of so representative a citizen.

JAMES H. FERRY, a retired mechanic of Cole-rain township, Lancaster county, was born in Bart township, same county, May 10, 1820, his parents being Patrick and Catherine (Dugan) Ferry, both of whom were born in Donegal, Ireland.

Patrick Ferry was the son of Patrick Ferry, Sr., who came from Ireland in 1780, and located at Georgetown, Lancaster county, where his son Patrick grew to manhood. The younger Patrick followed peddling until he earned money enough to buy a farm in Bart township, where he lived until his death in 1827, at which time he left a wife and three sons, his daughter, Margaret, being born three months after his death. His widow later married Samuel Sharp, and moved with him to Kansas, where she died leaving two sons by her second marriage, Isaac, a noted lawyer now practicing his profession, in Washington, D. C.; and J. L., still unmarried and living in Kansas.

Of the children of Patrick and Catherine Ferry, James H. was the eldest. Samuel B., born in Bart township, in 1823, married in Steubenville, Ohio, where he worked some years as a machinist, and where he died; he was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war, and served three years at the front, being a member of a corps of engineers formed at Philadelphia. Joseph F., the third son, born in Bart township in 1825, was sent to West Point, from which he graduated in 1846, receiving an appointment as lieutenant of artillery; during the Mexican war he was at the front, and was killed while leading the assault of the battle of Molino del Rey, known as the "Forlorn Hope," being only twenty-two years of age, and a youth of much promise. Margaret Ferry, the only daughter, born in Bart township, in 1827, married William Laughan, of Gettysburg, Pa., where he was then engaged in the coach making business. Some years later, with his wife, and two children, he started on a journey to Illinois, where he intended making a home in Joliet, but with all his family was killed in a railroad wreck.

James H. Ferry received a very fair district school education, and was numbered among the bright and scholarly youths of his native town. When a young man he took up teaching, and followed it as a business for some years. In 1842 he was married to Mary M. Montgomery, daughter of Samuel and Ellen (Baily) Montgomery, one of Colerain's old families, and represented in that township since 1780. Mrs. Ferry was born in 1822. Mr. and Mrs. Ferry settled in "Dry Wells Hotel," Lancaster county, where he kept hotel until the building was destroyed by fire, when he moved to Lancaster, to take up his trade of tailoring, at which he worked in the summer season, and taught school during the winter. In 1858 he bought land and built a home. He worked at different trades, being good at tailoring, carpenter work and at stone masonry.

Mr. Ferry enlisted as a soldier in the Union army, becoming a member of Co. I, 122nd P. V. I., which regiment received its arms at Harrisburg, and was at once moved to the front under command, at first, of Gen. McClellan, and later of Gen. Burnside. It participated in the great battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and in the fighting along the Weldon Railroad, beside many skirmishes that in less important wars would rise to the dignity of noted battles. Mr. Ferry was promoted to second sergeant, and was honorably discharged at Harrisburg.

Mr. Ferry returned to his wife in Colerain township, where he has maintained his home to the present time. In these years he has won a high standing for personal probity and business ability. His wife died in March, 1901, leaving him no family. They had three children, but they all died in infancy. She was long a member of the Baptist church, and lived an upright and Christian life, and was much beloved by all who knew her.

Mr. Ferry has always voted the Republican ticket, and belongs to Byerly Post, No. 511, G. A. R., at Quarryville. He is a member of the Masonic lodge at Christiana, and of the lodge of Odd Fellows at Kirkwood. Mr. Ferry is one of the old and highly esteemed citizens of Colerain township, and is much respected, alike for his learning, industry and character. In his long and active life he has displayed a kind heart, and is possessed of a host of lasting friends where he is known the best.

WILLIAM HARM, the enterprising and successful grocer of Columbia, was in the Fatherland, during his youth, a school teacher, having acquired a good education, and possessing a fondness for intellectual pursuits. Emigrating to America, mercantile business claimed him, and he became one of the prosperous and substantial citizens of Columbia, public-spirited, influential and forceful as a man of his character should be.

Mr. Harm was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, May 6, 1835, a son of John and Catherine (Wolf) Harm. The father was a lifelong farmer in Germany, and died in 1852, aged sixty-five years. His wife survived him until 1873, passing away at the age of seventy-four years. Their children were: Fred, who died in Germany; Leonard, a coal merchant, who died in Harrisburg, Pa.; John, who farms the old homestead in Germany; Christian, a machinist of Steelton, Pa.; and William.

William Harm attended school during his youth, and at the age of eighteen became a school teacher. He taught for a term of seven months, and then came to America, where a bright and prosperous future awaited him. Locating in the city of Philadelphia, he soon obtained employment in a bakery, in which he worked steadily for nine years. He then started in business for himself, and conducted a bakery at Philadelphia successfully for three years. Then removing to Columbia, he opened a grocery store, and soon became one of the reliable, substantial business men of the borough. He remained continuously in trade until 1895, when he transferred his grocery business to his son George. Upon the latter's death, in 1898, Mr. Harm again assumed control of the business, which he now conducts with the assistance of his sons Harry and John. In 1896 the Columbia Brush Company was organized as a stock company, of which, the concern failing in 1898, Mr. Harm and Thomas Edwards became the successors; they at once changed the name to the East Columbia Brush Company, which they have thus far run successfully, and not only reap wealth from it, but also give employment to a hundred men in the works and a number outside, who take material and work it up in their own homes. Mr. Harm was one of the original stockholders in the Columbia Trust Company, and is now one of its directors. In politics he is a Democrat, but he is in no sense an office seeker. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and one of its liberal supporters. Fraternally he is a Knight of Pythias.

In 1863 Mr. Harm was married, in Columbia, to Miss Barbara Greene, who was born in Bavaria, Germany, Aug. 15, 1845, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Greene. Her mother died in February, 1846, and four years later the father, with his two young children, Jacob (a farmer of St. Cloud, N. J.) and Barbara, came to America and settled in New York, where he died in 1871. To William and Barbara (Greene) Harm were born the following children: Emma, wife of Charles Rochow, of Columbia; Katie, who died young; Lizzie, deceased; William, who married Effie Seasholz, and is manager of the East Columbia Brush Co.; George, who married Mary Wolf, of Lancaster, and died in 1898; Rosa; Charles, deceased; Harry; Albert, a traveling salesman; John; Minna; Bertha; Mary; and Huber. Mr. Harm is another instance of the industrious, prosperous American citizens the Germans become in the land of their adoption. He not only has a beautiful home and a competency, but he has gained an enviable position as a citizen and a business man in the borough where he has resided for the past thirty-six years.

JOHN S. NAUMAN (deceased), was born in Manheim, Lancaster county, Aug. 23, 1818, and died at Elizabethtown April 7, 1894, his remains lying at rest in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. He was a son of John and Elizabeth (Showers) Nauman. The father, who was a farmer, died in Manheim, and the mother's death occurred in Mt. Joy. They were members of the United Brethren Church. They had the following children, all now deceased: Susan D., who married Henry Shaffer; Mary, wife of Henry Shaffner; Rebecca; Annie; Elizabeth, wife of John Dyer; and John S.

John S. Nauman was married in Lancaster, July 19, 1842, to Annie R. Reese, by whom he had the following children: William H., of Elizabethtown; Miss Annie E., who resided with her mother in Elizabethtown; J. Wesley, who married Sophia Lehman, and is a resident of Mt. Joy township; Francis, a carpenter of Florin, this county, who married Sallie Menaugh; Sampson R., who married Fanny Brown, and is a produce merchant of Topeka, Kans.; Charles J., who married Laura Harding, and is a farmer near Topeka, Kans.; Carrie A., wife of Henry Straub, of Harrisburg; James R., who married Christiana Kuhn, and is a lumberman in Elizabethtown; and George W., a farmer in Mt. Joy township, who married Lillie Wademan. Mrs. Annie R. Nauman was a native of Mountville, Pa., born Nov. 22, 1825, daughter of Sampson D. Reese, and a sister of S. D. Reese, whose history appears elsewhere.

John S. Nauman followed the honorable and laborious life of a blacksmith until 1892, when he retired from active labor, moving to the home where his widow resided until her death, to spend the last two years of his life. In his active days he was a man of considerable prominence in Mount Joy township, where he was engaged in farming and blacksmithing for many years. He served as tax collector there. For thirteen years he lived in Mt. Joy borough, prior to his removal to East Donegal township, where he farmed six years, and then located in Mt. Joy township, where he farmed thirty-nine years.

Mrs. Nauman's grandfather Reese was drowned at the age of forty years. Her great-grandfather Reese, who lived to be one hundred and eleven years old, passed his life near Frederick, Md. Mrs. Nauman was a lady of much character, highly esteemed by all who knew her for her industrious and exceedingly useful life, as well as her amiable disposition and kind heart. She passed away March 17, 1901.

ABRAHAM S. RHOADS. Among the prominent, substantial and highly esteemed citizens of Maytown was Abraham S. Rhoads, who was born in Conestoga township, a son of George and Elizabeth (Sweiger) Rhoads, of Rapho township, both of whom died in East Donegal, the former on the farm to which he had moved, in 1841, and the mother in Maytown. The father was born in 1801, and died in September, 1854, while the mother survived until June, 1885, dying at the age of eighty-four years. Both were worthy members of the Lutheran Church, and are buried in the old Maytown cemetery. Children, as follows, were born to their marriage: Abraham S.; Fanny, who married George M. Lutz; Elizabeth, who married Benjamin Hoffman, a farmer of Conoy township; Mary, who married Henry Shenk, deceased; Levi, a farmer of Eden township; and Susannah, widow of Christ Brandt (he died Oct. 7, 1891, aged fifty-three, and she resided in Maytown with her brother Abraham); and George, a farmer of East Donegal township.

Abraham S. Rhoads was reared on the farm and attended the schools of his district, remaining with his parents as their comfort in their declining years. After the death of his father he conducted the farm for ten more years, and then moved into Maytown, in 1865, where he lived retired until his death, Sept. 28, 1901. In politics he was a stanch Democrat, and was one of the leading members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Rhoads was known as an upright man and excellent citizen.

NATHANIEL S. GROFF, whose home is in Manheim township, a mile and a quarter east of Petersburg, was born March 25, 1841, in the old homestead. When eight years of age he went to live with his sister, Mrs. George Shriner, on the farm where he has since made his home, until he was ready to begin operations for himself. His education was gained in the common and Normal schools. When he was fifteen he went West with his brother Samuel, who bought a drove of cattle in Ohio, which they drove through to Lancaster county, young Nathaniel walking the most of the way, and leading an ox at the head of the herd.

When he was nineteen Mr. Groff formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr. Shriner, and went alone to Ohio, to buy a drove of cattle, which he brought back unassisted. This was the laying of the foundation of a prosperous career, as the venture was quite a success. His entire attention was given for some years to the droving business, bringing cattle to the Lancaster markets. After a few years in the cattle business he associated himself with his brother-in-law in farming. Farming and stock dealing have seemed to go so well together that Mr. Groff has combined them all his life. With his brother Abraham he bought the family homestead, and has purchased his own farm of 113 acres, which is one of the fine places of the county. Mr. Groff buys and packs tobacco, and has a warehouse on his farm, handling much stock yearly. He also grows tobacco extensively, and has met with success in this branch of farming.

A public-spirited man, he has been a stockholder in several of the banking enterprises of the county, and also in other enterprises, such as the Penn Turnpike Company. A stanch Republican, he takes an active interest in politics.

Mr. Groff was married, March 25, 1871, to Miss Mary, daughter of Israel Groff, of Eden, and they have one child, George, who married Miss Mary Haverstick, by whom he has two children, Paulina and Leon. Mrs. Groff and the son are members of the Lutheran Church.

AARON EDWARD REIST, cashier of the Conestoga Traction Company, and sole manager of the Conestoga Park Amusements, is one of the best known figures in Lancaster. His ancestors came to America from Germany, and were among the very earliest settlers of Lancaster county. But one family of Reists came across the water, and from them all the Reists in this section are descended.

Abraham Reist, grandfather of Aaron E., was born near Manheim, Lancaster county, where he died, on the old homestead where his father had lived before him. His son, Aaron E., father of Aaron E., of Lancaster, is now living between Manheim and Lititz, where he is leading a practically retired life. He married Anna Zook, daughter of John Zook, a farmer, and to them came three sons: Nathan E., a school teacher in Lititz; Amos E., a contracting builder, of Pittsburg; and A. Edward, of Lancaster.

Aaron Edward Reist was born in Manheim, in 1859, and was educated in the public schools of the district. Leaving school when sixteen years of age, young Reist became a clerk in the dry-goods house of George S. Danner, of Manheim. When he had clerked there a short time he took a business course at the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after which he engaged with Stawbridge & Clothier, at Philadelphia. For two years he remained with them, and then spent eleven years in the dry-goods house of Givler, Bowers & Hurst. At the expiration of this prolonged period he connected himself with Watt & Shand, at the New York Store, Lancaster, but failing health compelled him to give up his work and seek an out-door life. When he had partially regained his health Mr. Reist entered the service of the Traction Company, and by the advice of his physician ran on the line four months. By this time his health was again normal, and he was taken into the office of the company, where he has been cashier for nine years, and for the past four years manager of the Conestoga Park Amusements, which are under the auspices of the Traction Company. All the money of the company passes through his hands, and all employees are paid by him. As a manager of attractive amusements his ability is known to the community, and in every position in which he is placed those whose interests he serves are delighted with his able and attentive management of the duties intrusted to him.

Mr. Reist was married, in 1884, to Miss Rettie, daughter of William Laverty, the principal employe of the Pennsylvania railroad at Leaman Place for forty years. To this union were born two children, Anna and Georgia, both attending the Girls' High School at Lancaster.

Mr. Reist is a Presbyterian, belonging to the First Presbyterian Church of Lancaster, and fraternally is connected with the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Malta, the Royal Arcanum, and the Jr. O. U. A. M. In these and in various other circles he is most highly esteemed.

EMANUEL H. ZERCHER, a resident of Conestoga Center, was born April 17, 1854, and was a lad of nine years when his father died. He lived with his grandfather until he arrived at the age of fourteen, when he started out in life for himself. For one year he worked for his uncle, David Nissley, and then went to work on his mother's farm, where he remained two years. From there he went with Milo Herr, and worked for him one year, when he again returned to his mother's place in Providence township and did general work. He then went with Abraham H. Schock to learn the tinsmith's trade, and worked for him four years. After farming Benjamin Kneisley's farm for three years, he bought out the business of A. H. Schöck at Safe Harbor, and carried on the business for one year, when he removed to Conestoga Center to engage in the same line, and he still carries it on.

On Dec. 2, 1877, Emanuel H. Zercher married Mary A. Kneisley, daughter of Benjamin and Rebecca Kneisley, residents of Conestoga township. Mr. and Mrs. Zercher had eight children, as follows: Benjamin F., at home single; John C., of Conestoga Center; Emma L., wife of Charles Kreider; Bertha M., who died in infancy; Clara A., at home, single; Andrew and Ezra, deceased; and Anna M., at home.

Mr. Zercher is a Republican, and has always taken an active part in the political affairs of the county. He was a county committeeman for three years; a school director for six years, from 1893 to 1900; and was appointed justice of the peace in 1898, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of P. C. Hiller. He is a member of O. A. K. of M. C., Conestoga Lodge, No. 178, in which he has passed all the chairs, and is now recording scribe. Mr. and Mrs. Zercher are consistent members of the United Evangelical Church, and have been such since 1879. They are highly estimated in their community and enjoy the friendship of a wide circle.

HENRY H. WITMEYER, a general merchant and representative citizen of Penryn, Pa., is a descendant of one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county.

David Witmeyer, the great-grandfather of Henry H., was an emigrant to America from Germany, and he founded the family in Lancaster county. His son, David, was born in the western part of this county, Jan. 31, 1800, and became a carpenter by trade, and also understood the intricacies of watchmaking. The greater part of his life was spent in carpenter work, and his death occurred April 7, 1851. He married Miss Elizabeth Hummer, and they were the parents of eight children: John, deceased; David; Jacob; Aaron, a watchmaker in Indiana; Elizabeth, the wife of Dr. Shaffer, of Shafterstown; Priscilla, the wife of Jacob Shue; Catherine, the wife of Samuel Plasterer; and Anna, who died at the age of twenty years.

David Witmeyer, the father of Henry H., was born on April 13, 1832, and early in life he learned the trade of watchmaking, following this all his life, and being recognized as a very skillful workman. His death occurred on July 28, 1861. His wife, Susanna Hummer, bore him three children, the oldest one dying in infancy; Jeremiah H., a miller in White Oak, Pa., and Henry H.

Henry H. Witmeyer was born at Penryn, Nov. 17, 1857. When he was four years old, his father died, and he lived with his mother until he was twelve years of age, attending school. At this time he began to learn the cigarmaking trade with David Kauffman, continuing for one year. From there he went to Manheim, where he worked at cigarmaking for three years during summer seasons and attended Manheim high school during winter seasons. At this time he accepted a position as clerk in the general store in Cornwall, conducted by David Kauffman. Here he remained for two years, and spent the two following years at Millway, in the store of Simon Eisenberger, going from there to Clay, where he was the valued clerk for George Steinmetz for three years.

Mr. Witmeyer then returned to his native place and embarked in the cigar business, also opening up a mercantile line, three years later purchasing the business where he is now located. His long experience in the mercantile business, under wise and successful merchants, enabled Mr. Witmeyer to become thoroughly instructed in this business, both as to buying and selling. This has been demonstrated by his success, and he has now one of the most complete general store stocks in the county, and a lucrative trade. In politics Mr. Witmeyer is an ardent Republican, and in 1889, he was appointed postmaster, efficiently filling the office at the present time, holding also the position of deputy coroner. Mr. Witmeyer is one of the most progressive citizens of this community, taking a just pride in adding to the prosperity of this section, in proof of which, he has erected some ten of the finest residences in the town, worthy in every way to decorate a much larger borough.

The marriage of Mr. Witmeyer was to Miss Dora A. Gross; to them were born six children: David, who died at the age of fourteen years; Sadie S.; Elsie G.; Gertrude G.; Chester G.; and Harry G.; a family of beautiful and intelligent young people who reflect credit not only upon their parents, but also upon the prosperous village of their birth.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN LANDIS, the widely known shoe merchant at Nos. 28-30 South Queen street, Lancaster, is descended from a very old Pennsylvania family.

Jacob D. Landis, the father of Benjamin F., was a son of Benjamin Landis, a farmer in Montgomery county, where he died full of years and honor. Jacob D. Landis is still a well preserved man, and bears his years so lightly that he is able to render his son assistance in his business. He came to Lancaster when he was only nineteen years of age, and made a home in Manor township. Later in life he married Elizabeth Conrad, the daughter of Daniel Conrad, a hotel keeper at New Danville, the place bearing his name because he owned the land on which it was established. The union of Jacob D. Landis and Elizabeth Conrad was blessed with eleven children, of whom now survive, as follows: Jacob H., shipping clerk for Long & Davidson, of Lancaster; Mary S., the wife of Daniel Volrath, a salesman for the A. & P. Tea Co., of Lancaster; Sarah, the wife of Henry Brennerman, of Pequea; Elizabeth, the wife of Henry Fager, of Columbia; Elvina, the wife of Henry Killian, of Lancaster; Emma, unmarried and at home; and Benjamin Franklin.

Benjamin Franklin Landis was born at Slackwater, Pa., April 3, 1857, and acquired his education in the public schools of Pequea. When he was eighteen years of age he left school to become an apprentice at shoemaking in a shop at New Danville, in which he spent three years. When he had mastered his trade he worked at it a year and a half in Lansdale, Montgomery county, and for three years in Millersville. Mr. Landis was connected with the shoe house of Shaub & Brother in Lancaster, for seven years, where he developed so much ability as a salesman, and won so many friends by his genial ways and accommodating disposition, that he felt warranted in starting in business for himself. In the fall of 1889 he opened a shoe store at No. 37 South Queen street. His business was transferred after a year and a half to Nos. 12-14 South Queen street, where it remained five years, and was then removed to its present commodious quarters at Nos. 28-30 South Queen street. The entire building is occupied by Mr. Landis, both as a store and a residence, and here he enjoys a most excellent trade.

Mr. Landis was married to Mary D., a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Shuman, the former of whom is now deceased. One child has blessed this union, Edna, who is now at home with her parents. Mr. Landis belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of the Golden Eagle, the Knights of Malta, the Jr. O. U. A. M., the I. O. O. F. and the Royal Arcanum. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion he is a member of St. Paul's Methodist Church, of which he was a trustee and steward for several years. He is a thorough business man, prompt in all his dealings, and courteous and kind to all with whom he comes in contact.

JOHN H. BLETZ (deceased), a popular conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, and an honored resident of Columbia, was born in that city, March 19, 1849, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Mellinger) Bletz, also natives of Lancaster county, the former born in Mountville, the latter in Manheim. Soon after their marriage they located in Columbia, where the father conducted a grocery store. He died March 6, 1865, aged forty-one years, his wife, April 6, 1867, also aged forty-one. To them were born six children, namely: Mary J., who died young; Harriet A., wife of James Crowther, manager of the Columbia Opera House; John H.; Susan B., deceased wife of John Hernizer, a railroad man; Benjamin F., who died at the age of twenty-five years; and Anna L., who died at the age of thirty-one. The grandparents of John H. Bletz were Jacob and Mary Bletz, and David and Susan Mellinger, all residents of Lancaster county.

During his boyhood John H. Bletz clerked in his uncle's store at Columbia, and later spent some time in the West. Subsequently he accepted a position as conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad running from Philadelphia, and remained a trusted employe of the company up to the time of his death, which occurred March 26, 1898. Politically he was identified with the Democratic party, fraternally affiliated with the Order of Railway Conductors and the Knights of Malta; and religiously was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He commanded the confidence and respect of all with whom he came in contact either in business or social life, and had a host of warm personal friends.

On Nov. 25, 1875, in Columbia, Mr. Bletz married Miss Naomi Hart, by whom he had one son, Ira M., who is clerking in a foundry in Columbia and resides with his mother. Mrs. Bletz is a native of Drumore township, Lancaster county, and a daughter of Samuel and Susan (Newport) Hart, of Pequea, same county. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, died in 1877, aged sixty-seven years, the mother, in 1895, aged eighty-one, and their remains were interred at Clearfield, Pa. Religiously they were active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Their children were Hester, wife of Frank Binds, of Frenchtown, Md.; Susan, wife of Washington Walker, of West Hempfield township, this county; Mary, widow of Eland Crider and a resident of Wilmington, Del.; Sarah, wife of John Grable, of Drumore township, this county; John, who is living retired in that township; Barbara and Harry, both deceased; and Naomi, now Mrs. Bletz.

JOHN F. HAINES. It is a happy conjunction of callings which combine farming and hotel keeping, inasmuch as in the latter capacity a person has the constant demand for the delicacies produced from the garden, and in the former a ready means of supplying such demand, as was the case with John F. Haines, ex-hotel keeper and retired farmer of Spring Garden, Salisbury township.

John F. Haines is a native of Salisbury township, born Aug. 20, 1853, son of Stephen and Mary A. (Place) Haines, the former of whom was born in Salisbury township, Nov. 21, 1817, was a farmer by occupation, and died Oct. 8, 1864. Mrs. Mary A. Haines was born Dec. 20, 1818, and died March 7, 1889. Stephen Haines was a highly respected and popular citizen, served as township supervisor for many terms, and was classed with the solid men of his locality. The remains of Stephen and his wife were interred in the Pequea Presbyterian Church cemetery, of which church they were members. Their children were ten in number: Christian, who died in infancy; Hannah E., wife of Frederick B. Wilson, a retired marble manufacturer, of Covington, Ind.; George W., deceased; James S., also deceased; William D., a farmer at Newport, Ind.; John F., of this sketch; Alfred A., a farmer in Salisbury township; Clement H., deceased; Minnie F., deceased, wife of William Stirck; and Eva J., unmarried, and living in Lancaster.

At the age of twenty-two years John F. Haines rented a farm in Salisbury township and cultivated it until 1899, when he abandoned the calling and rented the "Spring Garden Hotel," which he conducted one year and then retired to his present home. His marriage took place in New Holland, Pa., Feb. 13, 1883, to Miss Sallie Shirk, and to this union have been born six children, in the following order: Chester S., Lida M., Ruth J., Mable F., Elva M. and Minnie E.

Mrs. Sallie (Shirk) Haines was born in West Earl township, Lancaster county, Jan. 25, 1853, daughter of Samuel and Barbara (Beltz) Shirk, prominent agricultural people of Lancaster county. Samuel Shirk retired from the cares and duties of agricultural life somewhat late in life; his wife died Sept. 11, 1882, at the age of fifty-seven years, after which Mr. Shirk resided with Mr. and Mrs. Haines, until his death in 1897, at the ripe age of seventy-four. Mr. Shirk and his wife were devout members of the Blue Ball German Baptist Church, and their remains were interred in its cemetery. Seven children were born to them, as follows: Wilson, who died in infancy; Anna E., who is married to W. A. Warner, of Reading; Sallie, now Mrs. John F. Haines; Kate, wife of Isaac Taylor; Isaac, a farmer in Earl township; John, a carpenter in Philadelphia; and Harry, a traveling salesman of Butler, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Sallie (Shirk) Haines were Peter and Martha Shirk, prominent people of Lancaster county.

John F. Haines is a substantial and honored citizen of Salisbury township, and has secured for himself an ample competency. He is a Republican in politics, and in 1897 was register of his township.

GEORGE W. WALTON, who is at once the merchant, postmaster and telegraph operator at Falmouth, Conoy township, Lancaster county, was born in that township, Feb. 22, 1853, son of David C. and Anna (Kinney) Walton, natives of New Holland, York county, and of Lancaster county, respectively.

David C. Walton was a farmer until the last five years, when he became a track walker for the Pennsylvania Railroad, and was killed while engaged in the performance of his duty, Sept. 17, 1899, his remains being interred in the cemetery at Falmouth. His widow, Anna Kinney, who was born in 1849, is living in Falmouth. Early in life they became connected with the Bethel Church, and their industrious habits and upright character cast no discredit upon their faith. The children born to them were: George W., of whom mention is made later in this sketch; Mary M., widow of Daniel Bryan, living at home; and Edgar W., a mail agent, living at Harrisburg.

The paternal grandparents of George W. Walton were Hiram and Mary (Dunkel) Walton, natives of Chester county, who died in York county, where they had long followed an agricultural life. Mr. Walton's maternal grandparents were George C. and Anna Kinney, who were born in York county, but moved to Lancaster county in 1848, and there near the village of Bainbridge, in Conoy township, engaged in farming.

George W. Walton and Mary B. Keller were united in marriage June 11, 1884, in Harrisburg. Mrs. Walton was born in Lock Haven, Pa., a daughter of John and Mary (Bricker) Keller, both born in Bainbridge, Lancaster county. For many years her father was a merchant, and in his later years an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He died in Harrisburg in 1882, at the age of sixty-four years. Mrs. Keller is still living, and makes her home with Mrs. Walton. Both father and mother were members of the Lutheran Church. They had the following children: Frank, a railroad man in Harrisburg; Mary; Elmer, also in the railroad employ; Harvey, a manufacturer and wholesale dealer in medicine; Bertha, wife of Louis Bridgeon, a merchant in Harrisburg.

Mr. Walton's grandparents were all farming people, and natives of Lancaster county, where their entire lives were spent.

George Walton remained with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-eight, when he established his own home. At the age of nineteen years he began learning the art of telegraphy, and spent his first year in that study in Bainbridge, and then worked at the telegrapher's desk in Parkesburg, Ronks, Dillerville, Harrisburg, Highspire, Steelton and Middle Town Branch, effecting a permanent location at Collins in the spring of 1884. In 1886 he was appointed the village postmaster, a position he has retained to the present time, and one in which he is very popular.

Mr. Walton is affiliated with the I. O. O. F. and the K. of G. E., taking much interest in the successful working of these orders, and holding from time to time various official positions. In his politics he is a Democrat, and is one of the leading citizens of this part of the county.

JACOB H. ENGLE (deceased), was born in Rapho township, June 14, 1850, and came to the farm where his family now reside March 27, 1899, and there he died March 13, 1900. His remains rest in the cemetery connected with the Cross Roads Meeting House in East Donegal township.

Rev. Henry and Fannie (Hoover) Engle, his parents, were of East Donegal township, and moved to the present Engle homestead in 1860. There the father lived retired for forty years, a successful and prominent farmer, and for about fifty years an active and influential minister of the Brethren in Christ. When he died Jan. 12, 1896, he was aged eighty-eight years, two months and six days. His wife died in 1881, and they were buried in the cemetery connected with the Cross Roads Meeting House in East Donegal township. Rev. Henry and Fannie Engle had the following children: Noah H., a farmer in Abilene, Kans.; Mary H. died in 1891, unmarried; Michael H. is a retired farmer in Elizabethtown, Pa.; Sarah H. lives in Maytown, the widow of Christian Hershey; Ann H. is unmarried, and has her home in Mt. Joy; Eli H. is a farmer in Mt. Joy; John H., who is engaged in the butcher business at Mt. Joy; and Jacob H.

Jacob H. Engle was married in January, 1871, in Rapho township, to Harriet Missemmer, by whom he had the following family: Norman M., a farm foreman at Woodland, Cal., and as yet unmarried; Dr. Howard M., of San Francisco; Walter M., at home; Joseph M., deceased; Henry J., at home; Robert M., deceased; Fanny G., M. Lena, Bertha M. and Bruce Q. C., all at home.

Mrs. Harriet Engle was born in Rapho township, a daughter of Jacob and Magdelina (Gantz) Missemmer. They were both born and reared in Lancaster county. Jacob Missemmer followed the milling business until his death in 1883, at the age of sixty-six; his widow died in 1890, at the age of sixty-seven. Their remains rest in the burying ground of the Cross Roads Meeting House in East Donegal township. They were members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: Susan, who married Rev. David Wohlgegnuth, now a retired farmer and a Dunkard preacher at Florin; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Gruber, a farmer in Rapho township; Kate, widow of Henry G. Snyder, with her home in Mt. Joy; Henry, who died in infancy; Sarah, who married Henry Martin, a farmer in East Donegal township; Mattie, who married David Brant, of Mt. Joy township; Anna, wife of Samuel Witmer, of Rapho township; Jacob, Henry, David, Adam, William, Joseph and Frederick, who all died in infancy; Harriet, Mrs. Engle; Louise, who married Dr. W. B. Thome, of Mt. Joy township, whose sketch may be found on another page; and Mary, who married Edward Boyd, of Manheim.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Engle were Jacob and Lena (Hoeman) Missemmer, who were born in Berks county, Pa., and came to Lancaster county in an early day. Jacob Missemmer married, for his second wife, a Miss Kraybill, of Lancaster county.

Jacob H. Engle, who was a farmer all his life, remained at home with his parents until his marriage, when he removed to a farm in Chiques Creek, where he remained twenty-seven years. His next move was to the farm where his family is now living. Mr. Engle was in his life time a man of character and standing in the community, where his industry, integrity, and simple and unaffected manliness commanded ready recognition, and won a host of friends. For three years he was a school director. For many years he followed tobacco buying, and met with much success. Connected with no church, he was a man of fine character and absolute integrity, much beloved and esteemed by all who knew him. His legacy to his children was, above all, a good name and a spotless reputation.

ROBERT C. LINTON, an elderly farmer in Colerain township, was born in East Drumore township, in September, 1844, a son of Alexander and Margaret (Glackin) Linton.

Alexander Linton was born in Ireland, and his wife, who was a daughter of John Glackin, in Drumore, Lancaster county. After his marriage Mr. Linton settled on a wild wooded farm in East Drumore township, which is now owned by his son, James, and good buildings and thorough cultivation have made this one of the fine farm homes of that section. Here Alexander Linton died in 1865, and his widow in 1899. They were members of the Presbyterian and Catholic churches. Mr. Linton was a staunch Democrat, and a Union man during the war. Of their family of six sons and two daughters, four are living: Mary and Rachel died young; John and Augustus died in early manhood; Sylvester, the eldest living son, married Eliza Linton, of Lancaster county, and they now reside on his farm adjoining the old homestead, and have a family of four children: John, Mary, (who married Benjamin Draucher, of Bart township), Augustus and Anna; James, who is now living on the old homestead, where he was born, is still single; Jasper, born at the East Drumore home, went to Iowa, when a young man, where he married and settled (he is the father of three sons); and Robert C.

Robert C. Linton was born and reared on the old home, attended the district school after the usual farmer fashion of the time, working on the place during the summer season, and attending school in the winter. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in Co. G, 1st Battalion, P. V. I., at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, where the command was drilled and prepared for service. They did duty at Chambersburg, and were then marched to Hagerstown, Md., where they went into camp until assigned to special duty at Philadelphia, being set to guarding deserters and drafted men in that city. They were mustered out in Harrisburg, Jan. 4, 1864.

Mr. Linton returned home and worked on his father's farm until his marriage, Feb. 24, 1870, to Miss Fannie Boohar, a daughter of Jacob and Angeline (Mercer) Boohar. Mrs. Fannie Linton was born in November, 1848, and when she was still young her parents moved into the city of Lancaster, where their children might be educated. Mr. Boohar was a miller, and worked at his trade in different mills in the county until 1861, when he moved to the Puseyville Mills, where he was employed until 1871, when he died. His widow survived until 1891. Of their family of seven children, six are living: Handford died in Christiana; Ross W., born in Chester county, lives in Christiana; Walter E., born in Chester county, married and resides in Philadelphia; Henrietta married Thomas Carpenter (deceased), of Philadelphia, and they had one daughter, May; Josephine married Joseph Barkley, of Chester county; Adaline married Bayard Stott, and lives in Philadelphia; and Fannie married Mr. Linton.

Mr. and Mrs. Linton settled on the old Linton homestead, where they lived for seven years. In 1870 he bought the Dr. Dare farm in Colerain township, where he has since erected a large bank barn, wagon sheds and other outbuildings, improving the house, also, and making the place one of the most desirable homes of this county. To Mr. and Mrs. Linton have come seven children: Lina, born in December, 1870, married Walter Scott, of Bart township, and they live in Strasburg township; they have no family. Oliver J., born in 1872, married Miss Sadie Eckman, of Quarryville, and lives in Christiana; they have one son, Claude C. Margaret, born in August, 1873, died Dec. 6, 1902. Ada N., born in July, 1877, married Harry Groff, of Georgetown, and had one son, Uhler, who died Oct. 17, 1901. Edgar A., born in August, 1879, is single, and at home. J. Clyde was born in May, 1881. Robert G. was born in August, 1884.

Mr. Linton has always taken an independent position in politics. Both he and his wife belong to the Methodist Church. They are well-off, highly respected and have always been closely identified with the best interests of East Drumore and Colerain townships. The farm shows a thrift characteristic of the Linton family.

WILLIAM O. MARSHALL, one of the best known and most popular men in Lancaster, is one of the oldest surviving members of a family that has long been associated with the city's business interests. For many years he was associated with his father in the shoe trade in Centre square, and, after his father's death, conducted the business himself, but he is now living retired—that is, retired from active business pursuits, although he is kept well occupied in looking after his private interests, as well as the interests of the church, of which he is so devoted a member. Mr. Marshall was born in Philadelphia Oct. 12, 1840, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall. His grandfather Marshall, with two of his brothers, came to Lancaster at an early day.

James Marshall was a shoemaker. He married and located in Philadelphia, in which city he worked at his trade until 1844, when he returned to Lancaster and became a manufacturer and retailer. In 1865, his son, William O., became a partner, the firm name being J. Marshall & Son. James Marshall, now deceased, but who lived to advanced age, was an active member of St. John's Free Episcopal Church for many years. His wife, whose maiden name was Maria Okeson, was a native of Lancaster, a daughter of John Okeson, who came from England. The mother died at the age of seventy years, leaving a family of six children, three of whom are living: William O., George A. and Lizzie C.

William O. Marshall obtained a good common school education, and at the age of thirteen was apprenticed to learn the printer's trade. He served five years, and then became foreman in the composing room of the Evening Express, which position he held for two years, at the end of which time he entered Franklin and Marshall College. He remained in college three years, until the close of the Sophomore year. This was during the war of the Rebellion, and he enlisted in the Union army. After the war he took up his trade on the Express and other journals.

In 1868 Mr. Marshall wedded Miss Mary Richards, daughter of the late Luther Richards, of Lancaster, who was one of the founders of the Examiner and Herald, and was prominent not only as a journalist, but as a Republican, that party having elected him to some of the most important positions in the gift of the county. By his marriage with Miss Richards, Mr. Marshall became the father of two children: Elizabeth R., a graduate of the high school, who married John S. Thackeray, of Philadelphia; and Charles L., also a graduate of the high school, and business college, and now bookkeeper for the extensive clothing house of S. M. Myers & Company. Charles L. Marshall married Miss M. Louise Stamm, daughter of Frederick Stamm, the inventor, whose interesting sketch will be found elsewhere. He is a Mason, being senior warden of Blue Lodge, No. 43, and he belongs to the chapter, council and commandery.

William O. Marshall is a Republican in politics, and served two years in the common council from the Third ward. In 1877, he was elected a member of the school board, and two years later he moved into the Fifth ward, and was re-elected. In 1879 he was made treasurer of the school board, and held that position for more than twenty years. He was also the receiver of school tax for many years. He is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to the Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, and has held all of the chairs, and was at one time Deputy District Grand High Priest. In religious connection he is a member of St. John's Free Episcopal Church, and has been one of the vestrymen for an ordinary life time.

PETER O. ELSER, one of the representative citizens of Clay township, was born March 18, 1851, in this township, a son of Samuel and Catherine Elser, both deceased.

Peter Elser, the great-grandfather of Peter O. Elser, was born in 1760, and he left a son, also Peter, the grandfather from whom our subject takes his name. Grandfather Elser was a farmer in Elizabeth township, and was twice married. Two sons, John and George, were born to the first union, and one son, Samuel, and four daughters, by the second marriage, these being: Catherine, Rebecca, Sarah and Elizabeth.

Samuel Elser was born in 1812, and died May 4, 1879. He married in Clay township, and had a family of ten children, as follows: Miss Mary Ann; Rebecca, deceased; Elizabeth, the wife of Solomon Eberly, of Clay township; Catherine and Susan, twins, the latter of whom died at the age of fifty-two years, the former the wife of William Ramig; Peter O.; Hannah, the wife of Henry Mellinger, a resident of Brickerville, Pa.; Fannie, the wife of Zocher Fory, of Clay township; John, a resident of Harrisburg; and Adeline, deceased.

Peter O. Elser was reared on the farm, and was educated in the public schools. Although he has engaged in farming to some degree all his life, he has also had other important lines of business. He learned the carpenter's trade, and for several years worked as a mill carpenter. All of his ventures in a business line have prospered, as he possesses the proper qualifications to insure success. Mr. Elser is one of the leading Democrats in his township, and has most efficiently filled a number of the local offices. He has been a delegate to State conventions a number of times, and is an effective party worker. Mr. Elser has performed the duties of supervisor and school director with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the tax payers in his township.

On Nov. 26, 1871, Mr. Elser was united in marriage to Miss Maggie Weit, daughter of Henry Weit, of Clay township, and two children were born to this union: Lillie, the wife of J. W. Gerhert, of Clay township; and Samuel W., living unmarried, at home, the carrier of the U. S. mail between Ephrata, Clay and Hopeland. Mr. Elser and family are highly esteemed in Clay township. He is known as one of the reliable and honored citizens who truly represent this important portion of Lancaster county.

FRANK SHILLOTT, deceased. Germany has given to America many of her most estimable and prominent citizens. Biographical records in the United States present many examples of young men from the Fatherland who to better their conditions have come strangers to a strange land, and, with no advantages, have by the mere force of their native talents won success and a prominent place among the people of their adopted land. Prominent among these must be mentioned the late Frank Shillott. He was never a shirk. The eminence he attained was the result of honest and untiring effort, and he was a most highly esteemed resident of Columbia, where he lived retired from active business duties. He was born in Rheinpfalz, Germany, June 21, 1827, son of Frank and Victoria (Glaubeau) Shillott, natives of Germany of French extraction, and grandson of John Shillott, a native of France.

Frank Shillott, who was a butcher and drover by trade, came to America in 1842, and settled in New Orleans, La., but within a year he fell a victim to fever and died at the age of forty-one years. His widow, Mrs. Victoria (Glaubeau) Shillott, emigrated to America in 1853, the year after her son Frank had crossed the ocean. She settled at Columbia, Pa., and died of cholera in 1854, aged fifty-three years. The family of Frank and Victoria Shillott consisted of the following children: Victoria, widow of Joseph Kelp, of Columbia; Charles, who died at Columbia; Frank, whose name opens this sketch; Katie, who married Michael Thomas, and died at Columbia; John, a butcher at Marietta, Lancaster county, now deceased; and Thesbia, widow of Peter Dersch, a blacksmith.

Frank Shillott, at the age of ten years, entered his father's butcher shop in Germany. In 1849 he entered the German army, but after three years' service, having tired of military life, he ran away. Coming to New York friendless and alone, he secured employment in a butcher shop in that city, and three months later came to Columbia, Pa., accepting for a time whatever employment he could secure. Then for three years he worked at the butcher business for Harry Minnich, after which he embarked in the business for himself, continuing thus most successfully for seventeen years. Mr. Shillott then conducted a general store at Columbia for three years, at the end of which time he withdrew to a farm, and in addition to agricultural pursuits he also followed butchering for fourteen years. He subsequently lived in retirement, enjoying the leisure which he had so well earned, until his death, which occurred June 5, 1902. Mr. Shillott was one of the organizers of the Central National Bank of Columbia, of which he served as a director from the beginning until his decease. He was highly esteemed in the locality where he had passed the greater part of his useful life.

In February, 1855, Mr. Shillott married Catherine Schroeder, who was born in Baiern, Germany, in April, 1825, daughter of Andrew and Barbara (Schwautz) Schroeder, of Marksteinhock, Germany, and granddaughter of Andrew Schroeder. Her father, who was a brickmaker, died in 1821; Barbara, his wife, lived until 1840. Their children were: John, who died at Baltimore, Md.; Barbara, deceased; George John, who came to America and has not since been heard from; and Catherine, widow of Frank Shillott. Mrs. Shillott came to America in 1851, and settled at Columbia. To Mr. and Mrs. Shillott were born four children, namely: Caroline, of Newark, N. J., is the widow of H. L. Snyder; she has two children, Katharine M. and Florence P. Franklin, proprietor of a hotel at Columbia, married Katie Ament, and has eight children, Martin, Elizabeth, Cecilia, Charles, Stella, William, Edward and Regina. Catharine M., widow of John W. Swartz, a prominent butcher of Columbia, has one child, Lillian Marie. Charles died in Denver, Colo., Aug. 28, 1901.

Mr. Shillott was a member of Trinity Catholic Church. In politics he was always a Democrat. By his many sterling qualities and industrious application to business he gained a goodly competence, and was a representative citizen and a typical self-made man. His increased means, however, were not followed by ostentatious display. He retained the plain, simple manners of his early years, and held the esteem and regard of all who knew him.

JEREMIAH H. WITMEYER, one of the well-known and highly respected citizens of Penryn, Pa., now engaged in the milling business, is a worthy descendant from an honorable Lancaster county family.

David Witmeyer, his great-grandfather, came to America from Germany and settled in Lancaster county at a very early day. His son, David (2), the grandfather of J. H., was born in this county Jan. 31, 1800, and he combined the trades of watchmaker and carpenter, working principally at the latter trade. His death was on April 7, 1851. His wife was Elizabeth Hummer, and they had a family of eight children: John, who died young; David, who was the father of J. H., of this sketch; Jacob; Aaron, a watchmaker in Indiana; Elizabeth, the wife of Dr. Shaffer, of Shafferstown; Priscilla, the wife of Jacob Shue; Catherine, the wife of Samuel Plasterer; and Anna, who died at the age of twenty years.

David Witmeyer (3), was born April 13, 1832, and in early life he learned the trade of watchmaker and followed the same through life. On Oct. 11, 1855, he was married to Susannah Hummer, and his death took place on July 28, 1861. Their children were three in number, the two survivors being Jeremiah H., of this sketch; and Henry H., the successful merchant of Penryn.

Jeremiah H. Witmeyer was born in Penn township Dec. 24, 1859. He was but one and one-half years old when his father died, and he remained with his mother until he neared twenty. His education was obtained in the district schools of the township. Later he learned the cigarmaking trade with his brother, continuing to work at it for over five years, becoming then associated with his brother in the mercantile business in Penryn. Here he remained until 1900, since which time he has been occupied in milling and farming. In 1894 he purchased the mill property at White Oak, and has since resided there. Mr. Witmeyer is a consistent member of the German Baptist Church, and is one of the leading citizens of his neighborhood. His friends are numerous and he is known to be a man of the highest integrity as well as a citizen of public-spirit.

The marriage of Mr. Witmeyer was to Miss Lizzie Arndt, who was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Arndt, and to this union were born ten children: Lillie A., Emma A., Susan A., Mary A., Aaron A., Lottie A., Annie A. and Bessie A., and two who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Witmeyer have these bright young people with them yet, all receiving the best of educational advantages. Few families in this locality are more highly esteemed.

JOHN S. KREITER, M. D. Prominently identified with the interests of Akron borough where he is known and most highly esteemed, is Dr. John S. Kreiter, who was born near Lititz, Pa., Nov. 25, 1852, and for many years has been the faithful and successful physician in the majority of the old families of this part of the county.

Christian Kreiter, his grandfather, was a prosperous farmer who was located near Lititz, and near this place Dr. Kreiter was born and reared, a son of Solomon and Maria (Grossman) Kreiter.

Solomon Kreiter was born in April, 1827, and died on May 8, 1863, at the early age of thirty-six. In November, 1847, he married Maria Grossman, and to this union eight children were born: Jacob, the present assessor of Warwick township, resides at Lititz; Catherine, born in 1851, died in childhood; John S.; James E., born in 1855, died in 1884; David Henry and Henry David, twins, born in 1858, are thrifty farmers of Lancaster county; Martha married L. H. Weisler, of Clay township; and Solomon, Jr., died in infancy.

Dr. Kreiter was reared on a farm and passed his boyhood there, attending the common schools, Lititz Academy and later the Normal Schools at Millersville and Indiana, Pa. In 1879 he began the study of medicine, under Dr. J. C. Brobst, graduating from Bellevue Hospital Medical College in New York city in 1882, the same year locating at Akron, where he has since practiced his profession with success.

On Oct. 15, 1885, Dr. Kreiter was married to Miss Carrie L. Zentmyer, of Lititz, daughter of Benjamin and Caroline (Sands) Zentmyer, and to this union have been born two sons and three daughters: Irene A., born Dec. 28, 1886; John E., born Nov. 6, 1888, died Jan. 20, 1889; Robert Ellsworth, born Jan. 28, 1890; Maud Victoria, born Nov. 22, 1892; and Josephine Alberta, born July 11, 1901.

In his political belief the Doctor is an ardent Republican and has taken a great interest in public affairs. Socially he is connected with the Lancaster City and County Medical Society, also with the State Medical Society, and is an efficient member of the board of health of Akron. Always interested in educational matters, he has frequently served as school director, and at all times gives his time and means to measures which promise good to the community. During the years of his residence in Akron, he has not only built up a fine practice by his skill, but he has gained the confidence and esteem of the whole locality by his display of the characteristics of a true citizen.

ELLA M. WINTER, of No. 14 South Queen street, is the only representative in Lancaster, bearing the family name of one of the oldest and best known families of Lancaster county. Her ancestors settled in this county early in 1700, and they have lived for generation after generation in Providence township. Her great-grandfather was a very extensive land owner of Providence, and possessed, at the time of his death, eight fine farms, bequeathing one to each of his eight children. Miss Winter's grandfather, Christopher Winter, and her father, Silas Winter, were both born on the old homestead. There, too, Miss Ella was born, as were most of her brothers and sisters. Her mother was Miss Catherine Marks, daughter of Nicholas Marks, a storekeeper, potter and farmer of West Willow. Ten children were born to Silas and Catherine Winter, of whom seven are living, as follows: Miss Ella M., of South Queen street; Mary A., wife of Martin Lefevre, a farmer of Chestnut Level; Augustus, a farmer of East Drumore; John F., of Pittsburg; Catherine, wife of Martin K. Reese, a milk dealer of Lancaster; Laura, wife of J. Albert Rockey, a traveling salesman of Atglen; and Walter H., a farmer of East Drumore. Silas Winter died in this city June 27, 1900, having retired six years before his death, and his wife entered into rest on March 21, 1895.

Miss Ella M. Winter was born, as stated above, on the old homestead in Providence township. She was educated in the schools of that district, and came to Lancaster in 1875. Here she at once began dress-making, a pursuit in which she has been more than ordinarily successful. For six years she conducted dressmaking parlors over Rogers's confectionery store, West King street, and then for about four years was located in the Metzger & Haughman building in the same block; in March, 1895, she took possession of the large building at No. 14 South Queen street, subletting some portions, but retaining enough room for her business and residence. She has been eminently successful, and in her busy seasons, frequently employs half a dozen or more expert dressmakers. Her work is noted for its reliability, and the artistic creations from her establishment are much prized by the ladies of Lancaster. Miss Winter is very intelligent and well-informed on all general subjects. She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and popular alike in business, church and social circles.

JOHN C. THOMPSON, an industrious, successful and highly esteemed farmer of Bart township, Lancaster county, was born in the borough of Strasburg Feb. 3, 1842, his parents being Jacob B. and Mary (Clayton) Thompson. The father was born in Steelville, Chester county, Dec. 5, 1792, the mother, in Maryland, July 6, 1818.

Jacob B. Thompson was a son of James and Lydia (Bailey) Thompson, both of whom were born in Sadsbury township, this county, he in 1745, and his wife in July, 1750. The Thompsons were of Scotch-Irish extraction; and the Claytons of English blood. James Thompson, grandfather of John C., was a soldier in the Revolution, and the sword he carried is now in the possession of his grandson, John C., in a good state of preservation. James Thompson lived for a time in York county, where he began his business life as a merchant, but later moved to Steelville, Chester county, where he bought a large body of land. There he erected a gristmill, cleared up a farm, and did a general trading business in flour, feed and such goods as were usually carried in a country store, his goods being conveyed on wagons from Philadelphia. He died at his home in Steelville in 1807, and his wife passed away in 1806. They left a large family: Elizabeth, born in York county, in 1774, married James Paxton, of Lancaster county; William died young; Robert was born in 1778; Andrew was born in 1781; Francis, born in May, 1785, died in 1820; James died in childhood; James (2), born in October, 1786, died in March, 1809; William (2), born in March, 1790, died in 1793; Jacob B. is the father of John C.

Jacob B. Thompson was reared at home, and was married in March, 1840, to Mary Clayton, a daughter of John and Harriet Clayton, both of whom were natives of Maryland, and early settlers of York county, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson made their home in Strasburg borough for several years, and there he began business as a merchant. After a time they removed to Nobleville, on the line of Chester and Lancaster counties, where he conducted a general store for many years. It should be noted that upon his marriage he kept store some ten years at Buck, in Drumore township. At one time he was a very prosperous and successful merchant, but his brother being in difficulties he endorsed for him—an unfortunate move, as much of his savings were swept away. He died at his home in March, 1855, and his widow came to Bart township, where she purchased the present home of the family in 1857, making her home with her son until her death, July 26, 1898. Both she and her husband were members of the Presbyterian Church for many years. He was a Whig in political sentiment, and a thoughtful and public-spirited citizen. They had a family of seven children, of whom (1) John C. was the eldest. (2) Lydia Thompson, born April 28, 1844, married Charles H. Tyson, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere. (3) James A., born in May, 1845, married Miss Ella Whiteside, of Colerain, and located on a farm near Collins, in that township, where he died April 14, 1899, leaving his wife with four children—John B. and Charles, of Bartville; William N., at home; and Violet, who graduated from the high school, and was just entering upon a bright and promising young womanhood when she was called to the Better Land, in September, 1900. (4) Harriet, born in May, 1847, married Milton Heidelbaugh, a member of the Pennsylvania Senate from Lancaster county, and they have four children—George Ferree, a train dispatcher in Philadelphia; Mary Blanche, wife of Rev. William B. Anderson, now a minister in India (they have had two children); and Jacob and Willie, at home. (5) Robert, born in October, 1849, married Miss Martha Gilliland, of Lancaster county, and lives in Philadelphia, where he is engaged in business as a commission merchant. (6) William D., born in March, 1851, married Miss Ella Baughman, of Bart township, and resides in Christiana, where he is a clerk in a store. They have four children—Mary L., wife of Frank Pickle, of Bart township; Maud, wife of Amos Fickning, of Bart township; Clyde, who married Miss Lillie Groff, and resides in Bart township; and Harry, who married Marian Helm, and has his home in Georgetown. (7) Jacob G., born in July, 1853, married Miss Clara Miller, a daughter of William and Sarah L. (Gilliland) Miller, and lives on his farm in Bart township. Their six children all live at home, James, Charles, Marvin, Frank, Anna G. and Robert M.

John C. Thompson was reared and educated at home. His father died while he was still a boy, leaving him to care for his mother and manage the family estate. He has lived at home, and has remained unmarried. While the other children married and established homes of their own, he lived with his aged mother until her death. Since that time he has continued on the home farm, his mother's estate, and he has taken high standing as an industrious and upright citizen. He has many warm friends in his locality, who cherish him for his kind acts and benevolent spirit. In politics he is a Republican, and he has held the office of township auditor. The Thompsons have mostly been associated with the Octoraro Presbyterian Church, and have held a high place among the families of the section.

HACKMAN. The Hackman family is prominent in Manheim township, Lancaster county, and its oldest representative in that township is Jacob W. Hackman, who was born April 29, 1824, son of Jacob and Susan (Wise) Hackman, both natives of Clay township, where their lives were passed. The great-grandfather of Jacob Hackman is supposed to have been Henry Hackman, who came from Germany and settled in Clay township, where some of his descendants are still residing. The first of the family to come to this county was a farmer and probably a clergyman of the Mennonite Church.

Jacob Hackman, the grandfather of Jacob W., was one of the extensive farmers of Clay township. His son, Jacob, the father of Jacob W., was reared in Clay, but after his marriage removed to Rapho township, where he spent some twenty years in farming, then moving to Stark county, Ohio, and from there to Indiana, where he died at the age of sixty-five. His wife died when only about thirty years of age. They were the parents of four children: Peter, who was a farmer, had his home at Millport, Warwick township, where he died at the age of seventy-two; Elizabeth died unmarried; Jacob W. is mentioned below; Susan married Samuel Ruhde, and died in Upper Leacock township.

JACOB W. HACKMAN was reared in Rapho township and educated in the public schools. At the age of twenty-one years he engaged in farming in East Donegal township, where he remained two years, and then rented a farm in Millport, Warwick township, for twenty years being engaged in cultivating rented property in that township. In the meantime he had purchased a farm of 117 acres near the borough of Akron, which he cultivated for a time in connection with his rented property, and then sold it to buy a farm of 110 acres, lying in both Clay and Warwick townships, on which he lived for some nine years. He then bought a farm of 138 acres near Oregon, Warwick township, which became his home for more than twenty years. He is now retired from active farming labors, and is making his home with his daughter, Mrs. A. S. Lutz, of Warwick township.

When Mr. Hackman was a young man of some thirty-five years he united with the German Baptist Church, of the West Conestoga district, and in 1862 was ordained to the ministry by Bishop Christian Bambarger. After his ordination he was assigned to the West Conestoga district, where he served as a faithful and God-fearing minister in active labors until within a very few years. Advancing years and the infirmities of age had made the duties of the head eldership burdensome to him, and after a long and devoted service he resigned its labors to younger men. Throughout the church he is much beloved and highly esteemed for his long and faithful ministry. He is a venerable gentleman, and bears his years well.

Mr. Hackman was married, Oct. 9, 1845, to Miss Elizabeth Stauffer, daughter of John and Julia Ann (Kinsey) Stauffer. Mrs. Hackman was born in the east part of Lancaster county, Feb. 24, 1821, and is still living. To this union came five children: Julia Ann, wife of A. S. Lutz, of Warwick township; Franklin S., a resident of Manheim township; Jeremiah, residing in Mastersonville, Rapho township, where he is engaged in business as a merchant (he was a director of the Manheim Bank for about ten years, when he opened the store, and his directorship was then transferred to his brother, Jacob S., who continued to serve for some years); Jacob S., a resident of Rapho township; and Fianna, who died at the age of nine years.

FRANKLIN S. HACKMAN was born Aug. 24, 1849, and was reared on the home farm, receiving his education in the public school and in the State Normal at that point. About 1872 he began operations as a business man on his own account, being engaged in various enterprises until his marriage. After that event he followed farming. For four years, however, his farming operations were interrupted by his connection with the Rossville mill. His home was in Warwick township until 1889, when he removed to his present beautiful home, three miles north of Lancaster city, where he has a fine farm of 152 acres. He had previously lived on rented property. On this farm he has made extensive improvements, and the place bespeaks the ownership of a thrifty and successful farmer. The house has been thoroughly remodeled, and Mr. Hackman has built a fine barn. He is a public-spirited man, ready to co-operate in movements for the general good. While in Warwick township he was a member of the board of education for six years.

Mr. Hackman was married, Nov. 20, 1874, to Miss Mary G., daughter of Joseph and Martha (Graybill) Pfautz, of Warwick township. She was born near Lititz, and is the youngest of the family, her birth occurring Jan. 16, 1855. Mr. and Mrs. Hackman have five children, Clayton P., Gertrude, Ada B., Franklin P. and Mabel. Gertrude is teaching in the county schools. The family have musical tendencies, and the home gives evidence of taste and refinement. The family belong to the German Baptist Church, and stand high in the community.

AMOS SHAUBACH. Since about 1844 the name of Shaubach has been known in various parts of Lancaster county, and has always represented respectability, honesty and industry.

The family originated in Germany, Andrew Shaubach, the father of Amos, having been born about 1826, at Hessen-Darmstadt, near the beautiful Rhine, the river of song and story, where he was reared, and learned the trade of turner. When eighteen years old Andrew Shaubach came to America, and found his way to Lancaster county, where he knew he would find countrymen. His first employer was Henry Mussleman, of Strasburg, with whom he remained several years, learning all of the details of farming. His means were limited, but he applied himself so industriously that when he wished to set up a home for himself he had the money and the knowledge to enable him to start farming on shares, and the succeeding two or three years were spent in that way. In the meantime Andrew Shaubach had purchased a small property in the vicinity of Herrville, comprising thirty-seven acres and for five years he worked this place, later disposing of it, as it was too small for his energies. Until 1871 he rented a large farm, at which time he was able to purchase one of his own, consisting of 152 acres, located in Strasburg, along the Beaver Valley pike road, near Refton, upon which place he made his home until his death. An accident terminated the life of this excellent and worthy man, on Dec. 19, 1889. As an example of the success which attends earnest effort the life of Andrew Shaubach deserves wide consideration, and the universal opinion of the community was that the township had, in his death, lost a good citizen and a kind neighbor. In politics he was a member of the Republican party; he never held office.

Andrew Shaubach married Christianna Wirth, who was also born in Hessen-Darmstadt, in 1829, daughter of Paul Wirth, coming to the United States when ten years of age; she passed away Feb. 26, 1898. To this union came a family of six children: Amos, the subject of this article; Reuben, of Strasburg township; Annie, wife of Jacob S. Harnish, of Strasburg township; Andrew, a stockman of Lancaster city; Maggie, wife of Adam Hornig, of East Lampeter township; and Martin, a farmer of Providence township. The parents of this family belonged to the religious body called Dunkards.

Amos Shaubach was born Oct. 16, 1850, and was reared a farmer boy, attending, in season, the district schools of his neighborhood. When he decided to marry, at about the age of twenty-six, he rented an excellent farm in Strasburg township, and continued at general farming for six years, at the end of that period finding a property for sale which he desired. This land is situated two and one-half miles southeast of Strasburg, and contains eighty-eight acres, which under his excellent management compare favorably with any other tract in the county. A part of the success which has attended his efforts is no doubt due to the fact that Mr. Shaubach is a progressive man, and believes thoroughly in the use of improved machinery and modern methods of tillage. His buildings testify to his taste and good management, while his cattle and stock speak well for the manner in which he cares for them. No new improvement is introduced in the locality that does not find him an investigator of its merits, and if he finds it sensible and desirable he is often one of the first to put it into operation.

Amos Shaubach was married, Dec. 7, 1876, to Elizabeth Lutz, daughter of George and Sarah (Nagle) Lutz, who was born in New Danville, Pequea township, Dec. 24, 1853. To this union have been born seven children: George, who died in infancy; Enos, born May 16, 1879; Jennie May, Aug. 5, 1881; Sarah Ella, January, 1884; Park, July, 1887; Amos, January, 1890; and Elizabeth, September, 1896.

EDWIN H. BROWN. Few residents of Lancaster have left a more enviable reputation in the wake of their tireless activity than did Edwin H. Brown, for thirty-two years connected with the Farmers' National Bank of Lancaster, of which institution he was cashier for twenty-eight years. An innate public-spiritedness dominated the career of Mr. Brown, an earnest endeavor to advance the best interests of his native town, along lines approved by latter day thought and achievement. He was born in Sterling, Oct. 28, 1830, and died among the scenes which had profited by his business sagacity and unquestioned integrity, Oct. 17, 1889.

John Brown, the father of Edwin H., was a watchmaker by trade, and through his union with Deborah Herman, reared to years of usefulness four children. Of these, Mary was the deceased wife of Jacob Rathfon, of Lancaster; Gilbert, also deceased, was at one time editor of a magazine, and was also coroner of Philadelphia; Edwin H.; and William, deceased, lived in Baltimore, Md. The children of John Brown received as good an education as the circumstances of their father permitted, and in his youth, Edwin H., especially, improved the chances that came his way. After quitting the public schools he gained his first business experience in the dry goods establishment of David Bair, with whom he remained for five years, and then resigned to accept a similar position for one year in Shamokin, Pa. He then returned to Lancaster and was employed in the postoffice, in charge of Mrs. Mary Dixon, and continued his position under the administrations of G. W. Hammersley and Henry M. Reigart. He resigned from the postoffice to enter the employ of Reigel Brothers, dry goods merchants, of Philadelphia, in which capacity he continued to serve until his return to Lancaster, Jan. 12, 1854. As bookkeeper of the Farmers' National Bank he worked his way into the good graces of the bank authorities, and proved himself so thoroughly in touch with advanced business methods that his promotion was from the first an assured thing. He soon became general bookkeeper, was after that receiving teller, and was elected cashier Oct. 1, 1858, succeeding Henry R. Reed. At that time he was the youngest man ever assigned to so important a responsibility. Upon his resignation and retirement, Nov. 22, 1886, he was succeeded by C. A. Fon Der Smith, the present cashier. Mr. Brown was noted for his faithfulness to every trust that came his way, for his devotion to his friends, and for his conservative and wise characteristics. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran church, in which he was an active worker, and he was for many years librarian of the Sunday school. He was a Republican in politics, but as became so broad-minded a citizen, believed rather in personal fitness than in political creeds. He was very prominent in the general affairs of the town, was highly esteemed by his business and social associates, and exerted a progressive influence in the various avenues of activity to which nature and inclination called him.

In his home relations Mr. Brown was particularly happy. His first marriage, which occurred in 1857, was with Susan Widmyer, born in Lancaster, Pa., a daughter of Christian and Harriet M. (Brown) Widmyer, natives, respectively, of Germany and Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa. Mr. Widmyer came to America when eighteen years of age, and settled in Philadelphia for a few years, later removing to Lancaster, where he was the pioneer cabinet maker and undertaker of the town. He died in 1892, at the age of eighty-six, his wife having pre-deceased him in 1886, aged seventy-eight years. He is buried in Woodward Hill cemetery. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran church, and filled many positions of trust in the community, including that of director in the Farmers' National Bank. He built the first four-story building in Lancaster, his old home being on the present site of the court house. To himself and wife were born the following children: Susan A., deceased wife of Mr. Brown; Clara H.; Mary E., the wife of Daniel S. Bursk, a prominent grocer of Lancaster; Emily F., living with Mrs. Brown; J. Harry, a deceased undertaker of Lancaster; and Christian H., a real estate dealer of Philadelphia, Pa. To Edwin H. Brown and his first wife were born two children, of whom Christian H. is a physician of Philadelphia; and Clara is the wife of Harry Williamson, a dry goods merchant of Lancaster. In 1884, two years after the death of his wife, Mr. Brown was united in marriage with Mrs. Clara H. (Widmyer) Kauffman, widow of Daniel M. Kauffman (and sister of the first Mrs. Brown), by whom she had one son, Harry S., deceased when eighteen years of age. Mr. Kauffman was a jeweler of Lancaster, and died in 1861, at the age of twenty-five. He is buried in Woodward Hill cemetery.

JOHN C. BROOME, contractor and proprietor of plaster and cement works, and a specialist in laying granolithic pavements, with his works and residence in Columbia, Lancaster county, was born in Windsor township, York county, Pa., Jan. 17, 1847, son of Isaac and Mary (Frey) Broome, natives of Chester and York counties, respectively.

Isaac Broome was a brickmaker at Black Horse, Chester county, but after settling in York county became a charcoal burner. He died in the latter county in 1879, at the age of eighty years, and his wife died in Columbia, in 1892, aged seventy-two, both in the faith of the United Brethren church. To their marriage were born the following children: George D., deceased; Esther, wife of Isaac B. Uhl, of York county; Maria, deceased wife of David Tarbert; Catherine, deceased wife of George W. Johnson; Elizabeth, who was married to John C. Kingbell, but is now deceased; Harriet, also deceased, who was the wife of Orril Kettlers; John C., whose name heads this article; Isaac, a contracting plasterer in Columbia; Stephen, deceased; and Mary, who became the wife of Dr. Wilmont Ayres, of Harrisburg, and died Nov. 7, 1902. The paternal grandfather of John C. Broome was named Isaac, and was a native of Chester county, and the maternal grandparents, Frey, were natives of Bavaria, Germany.

John C. Broome remained with his parents until he was twelve years old, and then worked on an outside farm until fourteen; for two summers he worked on the canal. On Aug. 27, 1861, he enlisted for three years in Co. C, 87th P. V. I., and was first under Capt. Andrew J. Fulton, and later under Capt. Findley Thomas, and was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, taking part in all its marches and engagements as a brave and gallant soldier until April 4, 1864, when he was veteranized in the same company. A synopsis of his service, though necessarily brief, is here given: His company joined its regiment at York, Pa., Sept. 11, 1861, and Sept. 28th was stationed at Cockneyville, Md., on the Northern Central Railroad, where it remained until May 19, 1862, when it was transferred to Baltimore; June 22nd it was sent forward to New Creek, Va., and Aug. 22nd was started out in the real activities of war. Its line of march was for Elkwater, Va., via Rowlesburg, St. George and Beverley, in quest of the notorious Imboden; Sept. 12th it marched for Clarksburg and other points, and arrived in Winchester Dec. 24th, after having had a skirmish with the enemy at Strasburg. On June 23, 1864, in a charge on the Weldon Railroad, he was wounded in the right thigh and was confined to the hospital from that date till January, 1865, but still suffers from the injury, as it was a suppurative wound. On Feb. 1, 1864, he took part in battle, and May 1st was promoted to be corporal; June 23d, he was wounded at Petersburg; later he fought at Winchester, Front Royal, Wapping Heights, Kelley's Ford, Locust Grove, Mine Run, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Gaines' Mill, Cold Harbor, Bermuda and Petersburg (both battle and siege). Mr. Broome received an honorable discharge, and was mustered out of the service at Danville, Va., June 12, 1865. He returned to his home in York county, but in September, 1865, came to Columbia, and began the plaster business, and in 1872 began his present extensive contracting operations.

On Feb. 22, 1865, John C. Broome was married at York, Pa., to Miss Mary J. Laucks, and to this union have been born thirteen children, viz.: Charles F., at home; Maggie A., wife of Samuel Arms, merchant in Columbia; Belle, at home; Samuel L., married to Maggie Fisher, and still living in Columbia; Essie, Helen, Nelson and Esther, all four deceased; J. Garfield; Edward S.; Lulu; Melvin and Lillian, all still under the parental roof.

Mrs. Mary J. (Laucks) Broome was born in Windsor township, York county, Pa., June 10, 1846, daughter of Samuel and Margaret (McGuigan) Laucks, of Chester county, but for more than fifty years residents of the county of York, where the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which took place in 1887, at the age of seventy-two years; his widow lived to be eighty-three years old and passed away in 1896. Their children were born in the following order: John, a plasterer; Elizabeth, wife of John Schenberger; Samuel, a carpenter; Philip, a farmer; Margaret, married to Henry Gilbert, a farmer; Mary J., now Mrs. Broome; George, a merchant; and Mattie and Hettie, both of whom died young. With the exception of Mrs. Broome and the deceased children, the others reside in York county, and all were reared in the faith of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Broome is a contributor to the support of the United Brethren church, although not a member. He belongs to the K. O. T. M., and G. A. R., and is a Mason of high degree. In politics he is a Republican, and as a citizen is honored and respected wherever known.

SIMEON W. SWISHER, Esq., a much respected and retired farmer of Colerain township, was born in the home where he still lives, Sept 11, 1835, son of Uriah and Eliza (Coulter) Swisher, born in Colerain and Bart townships, the father in 1802, and the mother in 1801.

John Swisher, grandfather of Simeon W., was born in Colerain township in 1762, and his wife, Rachel Woodrow, in 1769. They were married in 1789, and settled on the farm which is now owned by our subject, and there Mr. Swisher died in 1840, and his wife passed away in 1851, aged eighty-two years. They had a family of eight children, of whom all the sons except John settled in Colerain township: (1) John married Rebecca McConnell, and settled in Cecil county, Md., where he lived and died; his family are also all deceased. (2) Simeon Swisher, born in 1792, married Elizabeth Pennington, and lived on a farm in Colerain township, until his death in 1859. (3) Henry. (4) Jeremiah Swisher, born in 1796, married Mary Pennington, and located on the farm now owned by his son, Samuel, and later in his life he bought property in Kirkwood, where he lived until his death, leaving a family, three of whom are living: Samuel, a farmer in Colerain township; Eliza, who married Hiram McClelland, and has her home in Ohio; and Hannah, the wife of Hiram Pierce, of Kansas. (5) Martha Swisher, who was born in 1799, died unmarried in 1818. (6) Uriah was the father of Simeon W. Swisher. (7) Ellen Swisher, born in 1807, married John Coulter, and settled in Bart township, where they both died, leaving two children: John, who lives on the old homestead; and Rachel, who married John Homsher, a merchant in Bartville. (8) Eliza Swisher, born in 1809, married Henry Keylor, and both are deceased; they left a family as follows: Rachel, who married Charles Rynear, of Bart township; Martha, who married Joseph Clark, of Chester county; Betsey, who married Robert A. Ferguson; John J., a resident of Mechanicsburg; and Jacob, a farmer in Bart township.

Uriah Swisher was reared at the old home where he received a good education in the subscription schools, there being no free school system at that time. Remaining on his father's farm all his life, he took care of his parents in their old age, and displayed qualities of a high order. The farm was deeded to him. He was married in September, 1824, to Eliza Coulter, the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Caughey) Coulter. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Coulter were as follows: John, Jr., married Ellen Swisher, and died in Bart township; Mariah became the wife of Matthew Scott, removed to Iowa many years ago, and is deceased; Martha died unmarried; Hugh married Anna Ross, of Chester county, who moved to Iowa, where he died; and Samuel married a Miss Caughey, and moved to Ohio, where he died. Uriah Swisher died in February, 1871, and his widow, Jan. 4, 1893. They were worthy and consistent members of the Presbyterian church, which they supported many years. In politics he was a Democrat, and was one of the first members of the school board after the establishment of the free school system in Pennsylvania. In the county conventions of his party his face was familiar, and he was a leading politician of his day. Several local positions were filled by him, including that of township treasurer, and he was much respected in the community in which he lived. To Uriah Swisher and his good wife were born the following: John H., born in 1825, died in 1844; Marshall E., born in 1827, died the following year; Jeremiah F., born in 1829, died in 1844; William M., born in 1832, died in 1843; Martha A., born in 1839, died in 1844; and Simeon W.

Simeon W. Swisher was reared on the farm and was given such educational advantages as the times afforded. In 1850 he entered the store of Thomas Ferguson, at Bartville, where he proved himself a capable and reliable clerk. Four years later he entered the employ of Graham & Wilkinson, at Georgetown, but did not long remain there, going back to the old homestead where he took charge of the farm in his father's declining years. In 1857 he was married to Anna L. Pennington, of Chester county, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. (Starr) Pennington. Mrs. Swisher was born at Coatesville, Chester county, Aug. 12, 1836, and was reared to young womanhood in a Quaker family. Her people had always been prominent in the Friends' Association. Mr. and Mrs. Swisher settled on the old homestead, where have been born six generations. The modern improvements on this farm are the result of the labors of both the present and late owners of the place, and it is regarded as one of the most desirable pieces of property in Colerain township.

Mrs. Anna L. (Pennington) Swisher died Aug. 18, 1900. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. Her husband and a family of six children survive: (1) Mary E., born in 1858, received her education in the county union high school, and is at home with her father. (2) Leonora, born in September, 1859, received a classical education, and married Lewis Ferguson, of Colerain township, where they reside on his farm, with their two children, Thomas W., and Charles L. (3) R. Luella, born in September, 1861, was educated in the Millersville Normal School, and for ten years was a successful teacher in the schools of Lancaster and Chester counties; she is now the wife of Dr. E. Hogg, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and has three children, Marian R., Edwin, and Orion. (4) Clement P., born in July, 1863, died in childhood. (5) Charles P., born in October, 1864, was given an education in the home school and in the high school at Union and at Pennington (N. J.) Seminary. In young manhood, he engaged in farming the home place with his father, and for the last twelve years has taken its management in his own hands. He was married in March, 1890, to Maud L. Patterson, the daughter of T. L. and Elizabeth Patterson, representatives of old and prominent families in Little Britain township. For three years they lived on a part of his father's home, and later moved into the present home of the family, where his wife died Nov. 27, 1895, leaving two children, Harold P., born in 1891; and Mary A., born in 1894. Mr. Swisher has remained at the home of his father, and is now engaged as manager and treasurer of the Southern Telephone and Telegraph Co., of which he is a stockholder and a leading spirit in its construction. He is a young man of fine business ability, and is a devoted church man, being an elder in the Union Presbyterian Church, and superintendent of the Sunday school. (6) Anna A., born in January, 1867, was educated in the Westchester Normal, and the Fernwood Ladies Seminary, and was a successful teacher for some seven years; she is now the widow of Howard P. Harvey, of Pomeroy, Chester county, who on the night of Nov. 22, 1901, was shot by an unknown hand, his body being found the following morning. (7) Minnie B., born March, 1873, was educated at the high school, and at the Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, and is at home, unmarried.

Simeon W. Swisher is a Democrat, and has long taken an active part in politics. For over twenty years he has held the office of justice of the peace, as well as other positions, such as school director and treasurer of the township. He has often been a delegate to county conventions. Mr. Swisher and his family are connected with the Presbyterian Church. He is a charter member of Lodge No. 417, F. & A. M., at Christiana (with which his son also affiliates), and was also a charter member of Lodge No. 544 I. O. O. F. He is the second oldest past master of the Christiana Masons now living. For twenty-seven years Mr. Swisher has been president of the Southern Mutual Insurance Fire Co., and for forty-seven years has been an auctioneer in Lancaster county, where he is one of the leading and popular citizens, much esteemed for his solid and substantial character.

FREDERICK HOEFEL (deceased) was for many years a prominent business man of Lancaster county, where he left many evidences of his ability in the shape of buildings of his construction.

Mr. Hoefel was born July 22, 1847, in Wurtemberg, Germany, son of Christian and Magdalena (Wagner) Hoefel, who passed all their lives in the Fatherland. The father was a cooper by occupation. Frederick was one of a family of five children, namely: George, who is in the coopering business in Wurtemberg, Germany; Michael, who died in Wurtemberg; Frederick; Magdalena, whose husband is engineer on a railroad in Germany; and Christian, a carpenter of Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Frederick Hoefel was reared and educated in his native land, and there learned the trade of cabinet-maker. At the age of nineteen years he came to the New World, locating at once in Lancaster, Pa., where he entered the employ of Philip Dinkleberg, contractor and builder. After four years' work with that gentleman, he in 1873 commenced business on his own account, and was actively engaged thus until his death. In all he erected some five hundred houses in Lancaster City, among which we may mention the Maennerchor Hall, a square of buildings on Lime street, another on Frederick street, and a full square on New street from Duke to North Queen, besides many others. All testify to his skill and thoroughness, which brought him so large a patronage. Honesty and integrity were his marked characteristics, and when Mr. Hoefel undertook a piece of work it was a guarantee that it would be well done. He gave his entire attention to his business, and though often solicited to accept office by his fellow citizens invariably refused. He acquired a well-deserved competence, and though a comparatively young man at the time of his demise, which occurred April 16, 1890, at the home in Lancaster now occupied by his widow, had gained a substantial position in his adopted home. He is buried in Lancaster cemetery. Specially Mr. Hoefel was a member of the Maennerchor and the Schiller Verein, and in religious connection he united with Zion Lutheran Church, in which he was an active worker. His political support was given to the Democratic party.

On May 4, 1871, Mr. Hoefel was married, in Lancaster, Pa., to Elizabeth Hoffman, a native of Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, and children as follows blessed this union: Elizabeth is the wife of W. T. Killinger, who is in the stone business in Lancaster. Frederick is a tinsmith in Pottsville, Pa. George is a carpenter in Lancaster. Lena is the wife of Clifford Funk, a grocer in Lancaster. Harry is deceased. Christian, who was a telegraph operator, died May 30, 1902, at the age of twenty-one years; he was accidentally killed while on an outing with his club. William, Mary and Philip are at home with their mother.

George and Catherine (Hoerr) Hoffman, parents of Mrs. Hoefel, were natives of Germany, and passed all their lives in that country. The father was a coach builder by occupation. They had children as follows: William, deceased, who was a coachmaker in Germany; George, who is a school teacher in Germany; Philip, deceased, who was a resident of Lancaster; and Elizabeth, widow of Frederick Hoefel.

JOSIAH BEYER, a retired farmer of Bart township, Lancaster county, was born in Colerain township, April 15, 1830, son of David and Mary (McElwain) Beyer.

The Beyer family came originally from Germany. Daniel Beyer, the grandfather of Josiah, was born in Montgomery county, Pa. He was a millwright by trade, and pursued that work in a number of mills in Lancaster county, and was the owner of a farm in Colerain township (which is still in the family), where he died. He married Rebecca Woodward, also a native of Montgomery county. The Woodwards were of Welsh origin. To Daniel and Rebecca Beyer were born: One child that died in infancy, before their removal from Montgomery county; Henry, who lived and died in Colerain township; Andrew, a resident of Colerain township, where he lived and died; Daniel, born in Colerain township, where he married, lived and died; Rebecca, who married John McElwain, a farmer of Colerain township, where one of their children yet lives; Robert, of Colerain, who married a Miss Johnston, and had a family, two of whom are still living—Mrs. William Jacks, of Colerain, and Mrs. Joseph Carheart, of New Jersey; David, father of Josiah; and Thomas, born in Colerain, who spent his life in his native town, and died leaving a widow and five children, of whom one son, W. F., is a noted lawyer of Lancaster.

David Beyer, father of Josiah, was born in Colerain township Dec. 26, 1803, and engaged in farming there. For some years he was also engaged in cutting wood for the iron company, to be used for charcoal. In 1832 he purchased the farm now owned by his son, and two years later moved upon it, erecting a house and barn, as well as making other substantial improvements: he devoted the rest of his life to its tillage, and died there in July, 1865. He married Mary McElwain, who was born in 1797, daughter of Patrick and Mary McElwain, who were born in Ireland and London, England, respectively, and who located in Colerain township soon after the close of the Revolution. Mr. McElwain crossed in the ship "Faithful Steward." He came to this country to escape military service in the British army, and with others had been obliged to remain in hiding in his native country in order to escape fighting against the American Colonies in the Revolution. Mrs. Beyer died in 1874. Both she and Mr. Beyer were members of the Middle Octoraro Presbyterian Church. In politics he was a Democrat. To David Beyer and his wife were born the following named children: Rebecca, born in Colerain township, married Milton Keyler, a highly respected citizen of this county, whose sketch appears elsewhere; Mary, married William McElwain, and both are now deceased; David, born in 1838, lived to be eighteen years of age, when he was called to the Promised Land; and Josiah is mentioned presently.

Josiah Beyer was reared to manhood at the present home of himself and family, and secured his education very largely by attendance at the winter schools while he was growing to manhood. He continued to remain at home throughout the lifetime of his parents. In December, 1860, he was married to Miss Hannah, daughter of Henry and Julia (Baughman) Heidelbaugh, prominent and respected farming people of Bart township, the former born there Dec. 6, 1802, and the latter in 1804. Of the eight children of Henry and Julia Heidelbaugh, two are living, George, Peter, Elizabeth, Mary A., John and Margaret being deceased; Susan is the wife of Samuel Keen, of Bart township; and Hannah is Mrs. Beyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Beyer went to live on the old Beyer homestead after their marriage, and there they have remained to the present time. He has made his influence felt in the community, as a good citizen, a successful business man, and a thoroughly competent farmer. In the past forty years he has greatly improved the old place, and converted what was always a good farm into one of the best in the county. Four children have come to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Beyer: (1) Laura, born in June, 1862, was reared and educated at home, receiving her instruction at the local schools, and proving one of the bright and capable young women of the day. She married Edward H. Johnston, of Chester county, and they live on her father's farm in Sadsbury township; they have one daughter, Lillian May. (2) David H., born in November, 1863, married Anna E. Shimp, and they have their home on one of his father's farms in Bart township; they have two sons, David S. and Ralph S. (3) John D., born in 1866, lives at home. He belongs to the Middle Octoraro Presbyterian Church, of which he is one of the elders. (4) Anna M., born in 1872, was given a collegiate education, and is a fine musician and instructor in the art of music. She is now the wife of Amos Pickle, and they have their home near Cochranville, Chester county. Josiah Beyer and his family are all members of the Middle Octoraro Presbyterian Church, of which he has been a trustee for more than thirty years. In politics he has been a Democrat. He is a kind and pleasant Christian gentleman, and a thoroughly competent and reliable agriculturist.

JOHN N. LEHMAN. The family of Lehman is one of the oldest and most deservedly esteemed in Lancaster county.

Joseph Lehman, the great-grandfather of John N. Lehman, was a farmer of West Lampeter township. He was a Mennonite in faith, and a man held in reverence for his many virtues, dying at an advanced age. He was the father of five sons and two daughters: John, Joseph, George, Samuel, Abraham, Elizabeth and Charlotte. All the sons were farmers, and Charlotte married a Mr. Bruneman, who was also a farmer.

John Lehman, the grandfather of John N., was born in East Lampeter, Nov. 2, 1782, and died Dec. 2, 1870, having reached the advanced age of eighty-eight years. His wife, Elizabeth Kreider, was born July 7, 1780, and entered into rest April 21, 1857. Their three sons were named Joseph, John and Benjamin K., of whom Joseph was born Aug. 22, 1812, and died in 1899, aged eighty-seven years; and John, was born June 15, 1814, and died in 1897.

Benjamin K. Lehman, the father of the gentleman whose life forms the subject of this biography, was born Nov. 8, 1817, in West Lampeter township. He was an infant of some eighteen months when the family removed to Manor, where his father was for some years a farmer in a small way. He lived at home until he had passed his twenty-fifth birthday, when he secured a farm for himself, and made a home for his parents until their death. His filial devotion was in consonance with his character, which was at once gentle and robust, tender yet firm. He continued to cultivate the farm until 1874, when he gave up active physical labor, and removed to his present home, two miles south of Mountville. At the age of forty-five he entered the Mennonite ministry, and in this field of Christian effort he has ever since been an earnest, zealous, self denying laborer. The Habacker and Masonville churches have been the chief objects of his pastoral care, he conducting services in these places on alternate Sundays. His influence in the community has been potent for good, and it is not surprising that men admire his devotion and seek to follow in his footsteps. In 1840 he pledged his marital troth to, Elizabeth Newcomer. She was born April 25, 1818, daughter of John Newcomer and his wife, Elizabeth Eshleman. She entered into rest eternal in her seventy-fifth year.

To the Rev. Benjamin K. Lehman and his wife were born ten children: Elizabeth, John N., Anna, Amos, Benjamin, Leah, Daniel, Catherine, Sarah and Emma. Elizabeth, born Dec. 3, 1841, married Jacob C. Seitz, of Manor township. John N., the subject of the present sketch, was born Oct. 9, 1843, and a somewhat extended account of his life and work may be found in the succeeding paragraphs. Anna, born in 1845, is the widow of Abraham Shellenberger, of West Hempfield. Amos, born April 14, 1847, is a Manor township farmer. Benjamin, born May 4, 1849, is a resident of Philadelphia. Leah died in infancy. Daniel, born Oct. 12, 1852, is a Mennonite minister and stationed at Millersville. Catherine, born Nov. 24, 1855, is the widow of Cyrus Neff. Sarah, born Sept. 18, 1857, is now Mrs. Peter Kreybill, of West Donegal. Emma (Mrs. Henry Haverstick), was born July 11, 1860, and died in July, 1887.

John N. Lehman, as has been said, was born Oct. 9, 1843. The first thirty years of his life were spent upon the homestead farm, and it was while living there that on Oct. 15, 1868, he was married to Enily S. Mann, whose parents were Bernard and Mary Ann (Staner) Mann, of Manor township, where she herself was born Aug. 1, 1845. Six years after his marriage Mr. Lehman purchased the property known as the Berger farm, comprising seventy-five acres, and there he and his wife took up their home. There, too, they remained for twenty years, the energy, sound sense and probity of our subject rendering his success a certainty in both general farming and market gardening. In 1894 he surrendered the management of this property to his son, and retired to his present home, which is situated two miles south of Mountville. There he owns a plot of five acres, in the cultivation, improvement and beautifying of which he takes great pleasure. He has enlarged, renovated and practically remodeled the house standing on the land when he purchased it, and has erected barns and outbuildings of a substantial character and ornate appearance, rendering his place one of the most attractive in that section of Lancaster county. He has been an investor in various enterprises. Among them are the Mountville National Bank, the Columbia Stove Works, and the Mountville Manufacturing Co. He is thoroughly well informed on public affairs, and takes a deep interest in everything pertaining to public interests, and calculated to promote the general welfare. In religious matters, also he feels a vital concern, both he and Mrs. Lehman being active, devout and consistent members of the United Brethren Church. Their marriage has been blessed with two sons—Harvey M. and Cyrus. The younger died while a youth of seventeen years. Harvey M. Lehman manages his father's farm; he married Miss Florence Sherrick, and has had three children, of whom two, Carrie S. and John S. are living. Mr. and Mrs. John N. Lehman have also taken to their home and hearts a little one named Amanda C. Schultz, to whom they have given parental love and care since her babyhood.

HENRY WOLF. For the past thirty-six years Henry Wolf has been identified with the business interests of Lancaster, winning the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens. He is one of the most highly respected German-American residents of this city, and was born in Baden, Germany, June 3, 1845, son of Henry and Philipena (Gaberdiel) Wolf.

Henry Wolf, the father, came from Germany to America in 1851, settling with his family in Lancaster, Pa., where he engaged in the manufacture of rope, but his career was stopped by his death about six months later, in April, 1852, at the age of forty years. His wife was born in 1810, and died in 1893. Both parents of our subject were most worthy members of the Lutheran Church, and their remains lie in the Old German Lutheran and Lancaster cemeteries. The mother's second marriage was to Christian Hug, but no children were born to that union.

Henry Wolf, subject of this sketch, was one of three children born to his parents, and the only one who survived infancy. He accompanied his father and mother to Lancaster, in 1851, and was educated in the German schools. He began to learn the cabinetmaking trade with Anthony Iski, of this city, remaining with him two and one-half years. In January, 1863, he entered the army and worked as a wheelwright for the Government, at Falmouth, Va., for four months. On his return he was again employed by Mr. Iski for a few months, prior to going to Philadelphia, where he followed his trade a short time, later doing carpenter work in Washington City, in this way seeing considerable of the country, and at the same time gaining valuable experience in his trade. Upon his return to Lancaster, Mr. Wolf worked at his trade for a short time, but then accepted a Government offer and returned for ten months to Washington. When he again took up work in Lancaster, it was for himself, opening up a business in cabinetmaking and furniture dealing, also undertaking, continuing until June, 1899, when he retired from the last named line, and in November, 1901, gave up business activity, deeming it time to take the rest his long years of industry had so well earned.

Although deeply engrossed in his business, Mr. Wolf has always found time to perform the duties of a good citizen. Politically he is a Democrat. For one year he was a very efficient member of the common council, and for two years belonged to the select council. His interest in educational matters has been shown by a membership of ten years on the school board. He has been liberal minded and public-spirited and possesses in a high degree the respect of the community. Mr. Wolf has been prominent in fraternal circles, being a Commandery and Chapter Mason, while in the order of Odd Fellows he was a representative of the order to the Grand Lodge for twenty years, and was trustee also for many years. In the order of Knights of Pythias he has also been very active, and has passed all the chairs with the exception of the Seven Wise Men. He belongs to Zion Church.

On Oct. 16, 1866, Mr. Wolf married Anna Hoffman, born in Hessen, Germany, in December, 1845, daughter of Christian and Mary (Kreighbaum) Hoffman, who came from Germany to America in 1847, and carried on a tailoring business in Lancaster. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wolf were: Anna M., who married J. Henry Gerhart; Mary, who died at the age of four years; Wilhelmina, who married William L. Marshall, a clerk in the Farmer's Bank, in Lancaster; Henrietta, who died young; Louisa, who died young; and Ella and Elizabeth, at home.

ELI L. KREIDER, a successful farmer of East Lampeter township, comes of a family which has been long established in Lancaster county.

Jacob Kreider, his grandfather, was born and reared in West Lampeter township. When a young man he purchased a farm near where our subject now lives, in East Lampeter township, and continued to follow agricultural pursuits during his entire life. He married Miss Lizzie Denlinger, of Lancaster county, and they were the parents of the following children: Polly, the wife of John Buckholder; Barbara, the wife of Joseph Frantz; Tobias, a farmer of West Lampeter; Jacob, a farmer of Leacock township; Lizzie, wife of Benjamin Landis; Hettie, wife of Isaac Stoner; Annie, wife of John Landis, a preacher in the Old Mennonite Church; Abraham, the father of our subject; Catherine, wife of Benjamin Landis; and Isaac, a farmer of East Lampeter township.

Abraham Kreider was born in East Lampeter township, Aug. 5, 1821, and followed farming all his life on a place of which our subject now owns part. He died Feb. 20, 1899. On Jan. 14, 1845, he was married to Elizabeth R., daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Landis. They had a family of eight children, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: Elizabeth, wife of Isaac Lefever; Anna, wife of Jacob Bernheimer; Eli L., our subject; Amanda, wife of Levi Weaver; Barbara, wife of Harry Denlinger; Mary, unmarried; and Amos L., a resident of East Lampeter township. The parents were both members of the Old Mennonite Church.

Eli L. Kreider was born in East Lampeter township, May 12, 1851, and lived at home until about 1887, since which time he has continued on the place where he now resides. He has also conducted his father's farm. He owns a place of about twenty acres, on which he and his father have made extensive improvements. Mr. Kreider is one of Lancaster county's progressive men and most respected citizens.

HENRY TERRY, a retired and highly respected farmer and citizen, was born Sept. 10, 1829, in his present home in Maytown, East Donegal township, son of George W. and Elizabeth (Haines) Terry, the former a native of Bucks county, Pa., and the latter of Maytown, Lancaster county.

George W. Terry, a shoemaker by trade, came to Maytown a single man, was here married and here died in 1837, at the age of forty-three years, his widow surviving him until February, 1870, when she passed away aged seventy-seven. They were members of the Reformed church, and their remains were interred in the cemetery of that denomination at Maytown. The children born to George W. and Elizabeth Terry were four in number, and were as follows: Anthony, who died at the age of forty-three years; George, also deceased; Elizabeth, who died unmarried when twenty-two years old; and Henry, whose name opens this sketch.

The paternal grandfather of Henry Terry was a farmer by calling and was of Scotch descent; the maternal grandparents, Henry and Elizabeth (Haines) Haines, were natives, respectively, of Maytown and the lower part of Lancaster county.

Henry Terry, at the age of thirteen years, entered a tailoring establishment in Philadelphia, learned the tailor's trade, and at the age of eighteen went to Caledonia, Tenn., where he worked for a brother two years. He then went to Mills Point, next to Memphis, which latter city was his headquarters for a year and a half while he worked at his trade up and down the river. After an absence of two years Henry Terry returned to his home, and went on the road as a salesman, clearing about $1,800 for his employers in a year and a half, and with his own share of the earnings paid for his schooling at the high school in Maytown for two years. Later, he attended the Millersville State Normal School, in which he was a member of Page Literary Society. Of this Society, in 1863, including Mr. Terry, 101 members formed a military company (under Captain J. P. Wickersham) and offered their services to the Nation for the protection of its flag and the preservation of the Union, but the company was never mustered into the service, although for seven days it was stationed before Wrightsville, whence it was returned to Lancaster and dismissed. On his return from this little military duty, Mr. Terry taught school seven sessions, then engaged in the agricultural implement business for eleven and a half years, and then in farming in East Donegal township for fifteen years, retiring in 1894.

Henry Terry has been twice married, his first wedding having taken place in Manheim, in 1854, to Caroline P. Arndt, to which union was born one child, Cyrus, who died in infancy. Mrs. Caroline P. (Arndt) Terry, a native of Manheim, Pa., was called away in 1856, at the age of twenty-two years. She was a daughter of George and Mary A. Arndt, who are among the most respected residents of Manheim borough.

In December, 1864, in Mechanicsburg, Pa., Henry Terry, married Susan E. Deemy, a record of whose antecedents will be given later on. To this happy union have been born six children, in the following order: Ion E., druggist at Millville, N. J., and married to Sally Troyer; Hiester C., married to Tenah Harmon, a molder of Maytown, Pa.; Edith T., married to Adam Kautz, farmer of East Donegal township; Laura E., married to Wilson McMullen, also a molder; Virginia E., married to Charles Evans, bricklayer, of Maytown; and Blanche C., married to Albert Johns, a molder of the same town.

Mrs. Susan E. (Deemy) Terry was born in Cumberland county, Pa., Feb. 10, 1841, and is the seventh of the eight children born to Jacob and Mary (Page) Deemy, of Dauphin county, Pa., where they resided many years, and whence they removed to Cumberland county, where the father died in 1868, when seventy-four years of age, in the faith of the Lutheran church; his wife had passed away in 1857, when fifty years old. The eight children alluded to as constituting the Deemy family were born in the following order: Christ, William and Jane, deceased; Emanuel, a physician of Mechanicsburg, and formerly a surgeon in the army; Daniel, a farmer in Kansas; Samuel, deceased; Susan E., now Mrs. H. Terry; and Martha, deceased wife of John Schaffer.

Politically Henry Terry is a Democrat. In religion he is a member of the Reformed Church, was the first vice president of the Nevin Missionary Society in Maytown, and is a remarkably moral and abstemious gentleman. He has never sworn an oath in his life, nor has he ever been under the influence of strong drink. He is extraordinarily spry for his years, and his chirography is both elegant and free from nervousness.

SAMUEL ESHLEMAN. Among the old, honored and substantial families of Lancaster county, none are held in higher esteem than that of Eshleman, and one of its worthy representatives was Samuel Eshleman, of Strasburg township, who entered into rest Jan. 2, 1902, aged seventy-one years, two months and twenty-nine days.

Samuel Eshleman was born on a farm adjoining the one upon which he died, Oct. 3, 1830, son of Jacob and Barbara (Miller) Eshleman, both of whom were highly regarded in that locality. Samuel grew up on the farm and attended the common schools, remaining at home until the age of twenty-one, when he began agricultural operations on his own account, on the place he last occupied as a home. When he first took charge of this property, the farm consisted of seventy-two acres, but with the additions he was afterward able to make it now comprises 103 acres. Mr. Eshleman owned other desirable property, consisting of a farm of seventy-one acres which adjoins the home farm, and another of sixty-two acres, located in Providence township. In addition he owns several tracts of timber land in Providence and Martic townships, ranging from four to eighteen acres, and a farm of forty-two acres in Strasburg and one of twenty-one, which adjoins the farm, east of the homestead.

Mr. Eshleman devoted almost his entire time to his farming interests, operating the homestead and the adjoining farm, carrying on a general line and also raising considerable stock. Some years ago,

Mr. Eshleman took a rest from active labors, but later resumed operations. Through life he was industrious and made a success of his business, because he paid such close attention to it, and his life was an excellent example of what can be accomplished by one who has sufficient energy and determination, as most of Mr. Eshleman's property was acquired by his own efforts.

In 1870, Samuel Eshleman was married to Miss Annie Eshleman, a daughter of Elijah and Christiann (Barr) Eshleman, and they became the parents of ten children: Enos J., born June 28, 1871, lives at home, and is the executor of his father's estate; Ira S., born April 7, 1873, married Miss Matilda Stively; Edith Annie, born April 17, 1876, died Feb. 15, 1883; Mary Emma, born Oct. 24, 1877; Ellis Miller, born March 8, 1879, died Jan. 2, 1883; John Henry, born Aug. 19, 1880; infant son, deceased; Clara Susan, born Jan. 15, 1884; Anna Elizabeth, born March 17, 1885; and Emlin Franklin, born on June 3, 1889. Mrs. Eshleman is a valued and consistent member of the Reformed Mennonite Church, of which Mr. Eshleman was also a member, and in which he had been a deacon since 1888. The family is one of the most worthy and respected in this part of Strasburg township.

ISAAC BUCKWALTER, a well-known resident of West Lampeter township, belongs to one of the old families of Lancaster county, being the fifth generation of the Buckwalters.

John Buckwalter, his father, was born on the old family homestead in East Lampeter township, about a half mile north of Greenland, in 1815, son of John Buckwalter, Sr., also a resident of East Lampeter township. John Buckwalter was reared on the farm where he was born, and after his marriage located on a farm of seventy-nine acres in West Lampeter, two and a half miles southeast of Lancaster, what was known as the Yordy Farm, which he greatly improved, remodelling the house, and making the place one of the most desirable in the township. All his life he was a farmer, and was known as a man who never sought, or would accept, a public office, much preferring the peaceful and happy life his family and friends afforded. John Buckwalter was married to Fannie Resh, daughter of Henry and Judith (Buckwalter) Resh, who lived north of Bird-in-Hand. She was born in 1815, and died in 1884, her death and that of her husband occurring in the same week. They were both members of the Mennonite Church and were the parents of a family of seven children: Annie is the wife of Jonas Harnish, of Strasburg; Jacob lives in East Lampeter township; Martha is the widow of Henry H. Herr, of New Providence; Judith is single; John died in April, 1900, when fifty years of age; Isaac; and Lizzie is unmarried. In 1872 Mr. Buckwalter retired from active life, and removed from the farm where he had passed so many industrious years to another property which he owned in the same township, where he lived retired, and in due time died full of years and honor.

Isaac Buckwalter was born Aug. 31, 1854, on the farm where he is now living, and which he is engaged in cultivating. His education was secured in the public school, and when he was twenty-four he was married. At this time he began farming operations on his own account, taking charge of the farm where he is now living. His entire attention has been given to farming and dairying. For nine years he had a milk route in the city of Lancaster, his dairy being known as the "Crystal Springs Dairy." In 1899 he retired from the milk business, and is now giving his entire attention to the conduct of his farm, on which he has made some very valuable improvements. Both as a man and a citizen the worth of Isaac Buckwalter is conceded, and he has been chosen to administer several large estates.

On Nov. 25, 1877, Isaac Buckwalter was married to Mary Stauffer, who was born in East Lampeter township in 1859, daughter of Benjamin and Annie (Kreider) Stauffer, and who died in the spring of 1881, at the early age of twenty-two years, leaving two children, Benjamin S. and Fannie. Benjamin S., who married Cora Seaboldt, and has one child, Paul, lives in West Lampeter township; Fannie died in infancy.

On Nov. 22, 1884, Isaac Buckwalter was married to Annie Kreider, daughter of Benjamin and Lizzie (Good) Kreider. To this union have come five children: John K., Elias K., Mary K., Annie K. and Lizzie K. All the Buckwalters belong to the Old Mennonite Church, and are reckoned among the most substantial people of this section of the county.

DAVID LEFEVER. Among the old and highly respected families of East Lampeter township, is that of Lefever, whose numerous descendants have scattered over many parts of the Union, and with the name have established reputations for thrift, honesty and uprightness of life. David Lefever, a much esteemed farmer of this township, was born in East Lampeter township, Oct. 15, 1824, son of John and Magdalena (Neff) Lefever, and grandson of John and Betsey (Howry) Lefever.

To John and Betsey (Howry) Lefever were born four children: Daniel, who married Barbara Neff; George, who married Barbara Denlinger; John; and one child, who died in youth.

John Lefever, the father of the subject of this biography, was born Feb. 27, 1792, and died in 1856. He married Magdalena Neff, who was born Nov. 19, 1797, and who died in 1831. Their children were: Susanna, born Jan. 11, 1819, is the widow of Henry Kreider, and lives in Illinois; Henry, born April 7, 1820, died April 6, 1900, leaving his widow, Charlotte (Blair) Lefever, a resident of Sterling, Ill., where he was engaged as a merchant, miller, dealer in lumber, etc.; Daniel, born June 19, 1821, married Frances Martin (deceased), and died April 3, 1898; John, born Jan. 26, 1823, married Mary

F. W. Woolworth

Douer and lives retired, in Millport; David; Jacob, born Dec. 19, 1826, married Annie Kreider, and is a retired farmer, of East Lampeter township; Barbara, born July 25, 1829, first married Benjamin Diffenbach, and is now the widow of Levi Howard; George N., born July 25, 1829, a twin brother of Barbara, married Annie Landis, and resides in West Lampeter township.

This family has a very remarkable record of longevity, the first death in the family circle of children being that of Daniel, on April 3, 1898, on which date the youngest in the family had reached the age of seventy. The parents of these children reared them in the religious atmosphere of the Old Mennonite Church, of which they were consistent members, and they rest in the cemetery connected with the Mellinger Church.

David Lefever was reared on the farm and was but seven years of age when his kind mother was removed by death. Until he was nineteen years old, he was able occasionally to attend school some sixteen or seventeen days in a term, if the threshing or corn planting did not have to be done, and as he was a studious lad, made all the progress he could. The school house at Mellingers, he remembers as being equipped with slab seats and the light admitted through windows of four or five panes of glass, 6x8, and all of the other surroundings were of a similar nature. However, in making any comparison with the superior advantages afforded the children of to-day, we should pause and question whether the probabilities are that the latter will fit for the battle of life any class of citizens more likely to adorn every station of life, than those who obtained their desultory education under such adverse circumstances.

At the age of twenty-one, David Lefever was married to Eliza Buchwalter, a daughter of Martin Buchwalter, and at once began housekeeping, renting a farm belonging to his wife's grandfather, John Buchwalter. For the succeeding three years he operated this farm, but in 1848 purchased a farm in Bareville. It required much good management and economy to pay off the indebtedness on this place, but his energy and industry were untiring and he soon had improvements under way and was prospering, when he had the misfortune to lose his barn by fire. This he replaced by a better one and later sold this farm to advantage, buying his present most desirable farm in 1880, and taking possession of it in 1881. This is one of the model farms of the county, all of the improvements being of the most substantial and modern character, and all of the surroundings indicating the thrift and prosperity which prevails.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lefever, were: Sarah; Martin, who was given an excellent education and taught school for several terms; Amos; twins, both of whom died; David, a student of Annville College, who taught school for ten years and is now publisher of a newspaper at Ephrata;

Eliza, the twin of David, born Jan. 5, 1855; Elias, who is a Baptist clergyman, in Ephrata; Martha, a deceased twin sister of the latter; John; and Emma. The beloved mother of this family died Sept. 10, 1894, having been a devoted Christian, a member of the Old Mennonite faith, a kind neighbor and a woman of the most exemplary character. David Lefever is also a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church, and is a man who possesses the respect of the community in which he has lived so long. His influence is always given in the direction of education, charity and temperance.

F. W. WOOLWORTH, the millionaire owner of seventy-five Ten Cent Stores, all east of Pittsburg, and who has erected the finest business block in Lancaster, and one of the finest in the State, practically began his business life in that city, as it was there he achieved his first pronounced success. The store which he established here June 21, 1879, was a small affair 14x35 feet, at No. 170 North Queen street, but it was a success from the moment he opened its doors. In recognition of the encouragement which the Lancaster people had given him at the beginning of his career, Mr. Woolworth put up the magnificent structure on North Queen street, known as the Woolworth Building, which was opened to the public just before the Christmas holidays of 1900. This gentleman is regarded as a Lancastrian, not only by adoption, but by feeling, sympathy and loyalty. Although modest and unassuming to a marked degree, there is that about him which indicates the strength of purpose and execution of a giant. In the New York Tribune, Jan. 6, 1901, appeared a half-page article, accompanied by pictures of himself, his Lancaster building, and his palatial residence at Fifth Avenue and 80th street, New York City, of which F. W. Woolworth was the subject. From this lengthy and interesting article the substance of the following paragraphs is taken:

"In the old Stewart building, on the corner of Broadway and Chambers street, New York, a capacious suite of rooms is occupied as the headquarters of the Woolworth stores. From this private office Mr. Woolworth keeps his hand upon the large commercial structure which he has reared. With the telephone he talks with his seventy-five managers whenever the occasion requires, hears their verbal reports and gives orders for their guidance. Each store has a local manager; there is one man who does nothing but look after the various fixtures of the different properties; two inspectors, who keep constantly on the move, and arrive when least expected; a financial manager; five buyers of domestic goods, and two of foreign goods; and a large force of office employees.

"Mr. Woolworth's buyers go abroad on business every year, and the population of several considerable German towns is entirely occupied in filling his orders. This plan goes far to explain the large value received by the purchasers of the Woolworth goods.

Cash is paid, and there is no middle profit. Mr. Woolworth imports a larger tonnage of toys and tree ornaments than all other United States buyers put together, more than one-half the product of the world. In the holiday season he employs more than 5,000 people in this country, while in midsummer his employes may not number more than 1,800. His salary list last year exceeded half a million dollars."

F. W. Woolworth, the proprietor of the Woolworth stores, is typical of the Americans who see the road to success through original ideas, who have the courage and pluck to follow that path. Still on the sunny side of fifty years, erect, clear-eyed and vigorous, direct of speech and manner, it is not difficult to see in him the qualities that have made American trade and commerce synonymous with enterprise and pluck the world over. Mr. Woolworth comes of an English and Irish stock, and was born in Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y., on his father's farm, April 13, 1852. He had ten years' schooling, walking two miles back and forth for it in the hard winter weather of that country, and in the summer helping his father on the farm. The elder Woolworth moved to Great Bend, N. Y., in March, 1859, where he bought another farm. Here, the boy led the life of a farmer until he was twenty-one years old, in the meantime completing a thorough course at the Watertown Commercial College. This was done by the exercise of the strictest economy, young Woolworth and his chum boarding themselves, while his mother not only made his clothes, but drove in the old mare from the farm ten miles away, every week, and brought them a basket of "board."

Following his graduation young Woolworth went to work in the dry-goods store of Augsburg & Moore, which became Moore & Smith, of Watertown, N. Y., who introduced a five cent counter where Woolworth got the idea of a five cent store. For six years he remained at Watertown, displaying such business ability that his employers backed him with a small line of credit for the establishment of a store in Utica. This was in February, 1879, and the enterprise was practically a failure. Undaunted and undiscouraged his former employers extended the credit of Mr. Woolworth, and he came to Lancaster, Pa., to open a store near the corner of North Queen and Chestnut streets. This was a success, and from it Mr. Woolworth has gone on to a brilliant career.

Mr. Woolworth was married June 11, 1876, to Miss Jennie Creighton, then of Watertown, N. Y., her father, Thomas Creighton, being a farmer of Picton, Ontario, Canada. This union was blessed with the birth of three children, Helena, Edna and Jessie, the latter still at school. They all display marked musical talent, and enjoy the best opportunities of the great metropolis.

EDWARD J. KNOX, who is now a retired farmer at Christiana, where he has in former days ably filled the position of justice of the peace, is one of the prominent citizens of this part of Lancaster county. He has a well-earned reputation for ability and character. Mr. Knox was born in Leacock township, this county, Dec. 20, 1844, son of David S. and Anna (Jacobs) Knox, also natives of that township.

David S. Knox, who was a prominent and wealthy farmer, began life with nothing to help him but his strong arm and good clear mind, and he left at his death an estate of over $60,000. His later years were spent in Salisbury township, where he lived retired from business cares and activities, and where he passed away Dec. 8, 1898, at the age of seventy-nine. His wife, Anna Jacobs, died in 1888, at the age of sixty-seven, and both were buried in Bellevue Cemetery at Gap, Pa. They were members of the Presbyterian Church. To them were born the following children: Edward J., whose name appears at the opening of this article; Robert N., a drover and cattle dealer at Gap; Martha A., on the old home farm in Salisbury township; John D., a farmer in Sadsbury township; Eva M., married to Harry Reeser, a farmer in Chester county; and Clara, who died young.

The paternal grandparents of Edward J. Knox were Robert and Martha (Sterling) Knox, farming people of Leacock township, where they spent their lives. His maternal grandfather was Edward Jacobs, also a farmer of Leacock township.

Edward J. Knox remained with his parents until he was twenty-one, when he took charge of one of his father's farms, which he carried on for six years before he was married. After that event he continued to live on this place for a few years, and then settled on another farm in Sadsbury township. After a time he purchased a farm in that township, on which he made his home until 1900, when he gave up active work and located in Christiana, where he lives retired. Shortly before his removal to his present quarters he was elected justice of the peace at his home in Sadsbury township, for a term of five years.

On Jan. 9, 1873, Edward J. Knox was married, in Sadsbury township, to Frances A. Williams, a daughter of Zachariah B. and Hannah (Dolby) Williams. He and his wife belong to the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, and are highly respected for their many good qualities. In his political views he is a Democrat, and has proved himself a good and upright citizen.

HENRY B. BUCH, an enterprising and prosperous coachmaker in Lititz, was born Oct. 23, 1835, at Kissillhill, Lancaster Co., Pa., and is a son of Jacob and Maria (Brubaker) Buch, also natives of Lancaster county. Jacob Buch was born at Kissillhill in 1810, was a blacksmith and coachmaker, was a Democrat in politics, and died in 1877; his widow is now eighty-six years old. Their children were: Henry B., whose name opens this article; Jonathan B., deceased; Sarah, wife of Joseph R. Bollinger, of Lititz; Jacob A., in the lumber business in Reading,

Pa.; and Franklin B., manager of the Knitting Mill, but a coachmaker by Henry B. Buch was reared at Kissill, was educated in the common schools and at an academy in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county. He first learned the blacksmith's trade under his father, and then woodwork and painting under Isaac Hollinger. At the age of twenty-two years he married and started in business at Kissillhill, and for twenty-four years did an extensive business, employing a large number of hands. In 1879 he came to Lititz, and for a time was connected in business with his son-in-law, and later with the Grosh Carriage Co. In 1890 he started in business on a small scale, on his own account, and now does quite an extensive business in coach manufacturing and in repairing.

On May 12, 1857, Mr. Buch married Miss Catherine L. Stehman, a daughter of Christian and Catherine Stehman, and to this union have been born five children, of whom two only reached the years of maturity, viz.: Elizabeth Ida, wife of Joseph B. Wissler, a farmer in Clay township; and Ellen, married to John M. Amer, manager of Barney McGran's farms, at Lancaster. Mr. Buch is a member of the Evangelical Church. In politics he is a staunch Democrat, and is very popular with his party and with the public, as is evidenced by the fact that he has been twice elected a burgess—a body which stands four Republicans to one Democrat. He has also been a member of the Democratic county committee, and has often been sent as a delegate to Democratic conventions. He is a useful and public-spirited citizen, and is ever ready to lend a helping hand in promoting the prosperity of his borough and township.

GEORGE H. ROATH, patternmaker and general machinist for the Marietta Casting Co., and residing in East Donegal township, West Marietta borough, was born in this township Sept. 26, 1850, son of Hon. E. D. and Susan W. (Hipple) Roath, of whom a full biography is given on another page in this work.

George H. Roath lived on a farm from 1860 until 1865, then located in Marietta and worked at various occupations until 1868, when he entered a coachmaker's shop and there worked two and a half years. He was next employed by his father, who was conducting a machine shop in partnership with a Mr. Stibgen, learned the trade, and became an expert mechanic, but in 1873 the father sold out his interest. George H. then went to Middletown, Pa., for a few months, and thence to Mount Vernon, Ohio, where he worked in a steam-engine foundry a few months longer. Owing to the panic in the fall of 1873, he thought it prudent to return to Marietta, Pa., where he worked at coachmaking until 1874, then as a machinist until 1875. In 1876 Mr. Roath and Henry Stoner leased a foundry in Drumore township and operated it until 1878, when Mr. Roath returned to Marietta, and for two and a half years conducted a machine shop for R. J. Clark & Co. His next employment was on the road as engineer for the American Steam & Heating Co. From 1884 until 1889 Mr. Roath worked in a sash and door factory, and then accepted his present position with the Marietta Casting Co., giving the greatest possible satisfaction, as he is a natural-born mechanic, and can make almost anything that can be made from iron or wood.

In June, 1887, Mr. Roath married, in Marietta, Maria Fisher, and to this marriage came one child, who died young. Mrs. Maria (Fisher) Roath was born near Birmingham, England, daughter of Edwin and Louisa (Marrifield) Fisher. Edwin Fisher, who is now living in retirement in East Donegal township, was born in Smethwick, Staffordshire, England, July 2, 1818, son of Joseph and Mary (Johnson) Fisher, the former of whom served seven years in the British army, participating in the war in the Spanish peninsula, the battle of Waterloo, and on his discharge was decorated with four bars by the Government. To Joseph and Mary Fisher were born: Edwin, father of Mrs. Roath; Eliza, Salina, Mary, Matilda, Hannah and Sarah, all of whom were married and all deceased, save Edwin. Joseph Fisher died in England in 1855, and his wife in 1871, at the age of seventy-two years. Of the children, Edwin, Salina and Mary came to America.

To the marriage of Edwin and Louisa (Marrifield) Fisher were born the following children: Sarah A., who was married to Joseph Mason, but both of whom are now deceased; Joseph, a machinist in Marietta; and Maria, now Mrs. George H. Roath. Mrs. Louisa (Marrifield) Fisher, daughter of Isaac and Ann Marrifield, died in 1876, at the age of seventy-six years, and her mortal remains were interred in Marietta. Edwin Fisher was a glassblower in England, and came to America in 1872 with the intention of becoming a farmer, but changed his mind after arrival. He settled in Marietta and worked in the hollow-ware works until 1888, when he retired, and now, with George H. Roath and wife, has his pleasant home in the city of his adoption.

Mr. and Mrs. Roath are members of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and Mr. Roath is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, the Red Men and the Knights of Malta. In politics he is a Republican, and socially the family are universally respected.

AMOS F. HERR, one of the old and honored citizens of West Lampeter township, was born on the old homestead that lies adjacent to the Longenecker Church (which in fact occupies a part of the farm), May 18, 1818, a son of Francis and Fannie (Neff) Herr, natives of West Lampeter and Strasburg townships, respectively. The grandfather of Amos F. also bore the name of Francis Herr.

Francis Herr, the father of Amos F., was born in West Lampeter township, and there passed his life following the occupation of farming, and possessing such fine business qualifications that he was often called upon to settle estates. In local politics he was much interested, and took a forward position in the community. For many years he was a director in the Farmers' National Bank at Lancaster. Several farms in the two townships belonged to him, and he ranked among the successful men of his day. When he died he was sixty-nine, and his wife lived to be eighty. She belonged to the Reformed Mennonite Church, and was the mother of the following children: Cyrus N., Franklin J., Amos F., Elizabeth, Anna, Fannie, Charlotte and Amanda.

Amos F. Herr was reared on the farm of his birth and educated in the common schools. Remaining at home until his marriage in 1848, he then located on the property where he still makes his home. It belonged to his father, and comprises 122 acres along the Strasburg pike, at the Longenecker Church. This is one of the most desirable and attractive homes of Lancaster county, and the residence, which was erected in 1810 by John Longenecker, has been greatly remodelled since it came into his possession. He also owns fifty-six acres in Martic township, and a six-acre tract of timber land in Drumore township. His attention has been given to farming, and by his industry and integrity he has won the warm regard of a wide circle of friends.

On Oct. 22, 1848, Amos F. Herr was married to Anna Frantz, who was born in East Lampeter township in 1828, a daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Miller) Frantz. The following family has blessed this union: Homer A. is a mechanical engineer in Philadelphia; Francis C., a physician in Ottawa, Kans., graduated from the University of Pennsylvania; Willis C. is a traveling salesman for the Keystone Manufacturing Co., of York, and has his home in Strasburg; Harry N. is a civil engineer in Lancaster, and a graduate of Lehigh University; Ida E. is the wife of Amos R. Frantz, of York, Pa.; Mary F. is unmarried and lives at home; Anna A. is the wife of A. Lincoln Moyer, of the Conestoga Bank, of Lancaster; Edith C., the wife of J. Elmer Frantz, of Waynesboro, Pa.; and Lottie L. is unmarried and at home.

Amos F. Herr and his wife early became members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and their industrious and useful lives have placed them among the most respected people of the county.

LEVI S. RHOADS. Among the prominent and successful farmers of Eden township is Levi S. Rhoads, a highly respected citizen of Lancaster county. He was born in Manor township, this county, June 11, 1835, son of George and Elizabeth (Sweigert) Rhoads, both of Neffsville, this county, and both born in 1801. John Rhoads, the grandfather of Levi S., was also a native of Lancaster county, but of Canadian parentage. His family consisted of four sons,—Jacob, John, Henry and George. The three elder brothers moved to Ohio, in which state they all married and established homes.

George Rhoads learned the trade of blacksmith when a young man, and followed same for twenty-five years. He became a citizen of prominence in the community, and was known as Capt. Rhoads, being the commander of a company of State Militia. He was very prosperous in the pursuit of his trade, but finally bought a farm in Manor township, on which he settled, some years thereafter moving to East Donegal township, near Marietta. There he purchased a large farm upon which he resided until the time of his death, in 1859. Following his decease his widow sold the farm and removed to West Donegal township, later to Maytown, where her death took place in 1879.

A family of seven children was born to George and Elizabeth Rhoads, as follows: Abram S., born in this county, died in Maytown at the age of seventy-seven years, ten months, eleven days, unmarried; Fannie (deceased) was the wife of George Lutz, of Manor township (they left no family); Elizabeth married Benjamin Hoffman, has a family, and resides near Bainbridge; Mary (deceased) was the wife of Henry Shenk, of East Donegal township, and left one daughter, Elizabeth, who is the wife of Eli Nissley, of Maytown; Levi S. is the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch; Susan, born in 1837, married Christian Brandt, of Maytown, where they reside (they have no family); George, born in 1840, married Annie Groff, of Maytown, and they reside in Maytown; they have one son, George S., now a young man, who resides at home.

Levi S. Rhoads was reared on the home farm, and was educated in the local district schools and in Marietta. Commencing before the death of his father, and until his marriage, he engaged in farming on the home place. He and his wife settled first near Columbia, where for two years he cultivated a farm. Then he removed to Mountville, where he bought a large farm, upon which he resided for seven years, at the end of that time selling the place advantageously, and removing his family into the village of Mountville. One year later he took charge of a farm in Conoy township, continuing there for two years, and then returned to Mountville.

In 1881 Mr. Rhoads purchased the well-known Jacob Bushong farm, in Eden township, which consists of 143 acres of finely cultivated, fertile land. It is by far one of the best farms in that part of the county, and Mr. Rhoads has spared neither labor nor money in its improvement.

In 1864 Levi S. Rhoads and Miss Frances Herr, of Lancaster, were united in marriage. She was the estimable daughter of Abram H. and Maria Herr, prominent old settlers of the county, and was born in Salunga, West Hempfield township, Jan. 24, 1845, received exceptional educational advantages, and is a lady of education and culture. She is a member of the Old Mennonite Church. To Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads ten children have been born, as follows: Mary, born in this county Jan. 21, 1866, married A. B. Collom, a machinist of Philadelphia, where they reside; they have no children. Abram H., born July 25, 1867, married Miss Mary Herr, a native of Drumore township, who was a daughter of Benjamin Herr, and they reside on a farm in Eden township; they have three children, Irwin, Jerome and Mary E. Benjamin F., born July 19, 1869, married Miss Jessie McClure, of this county, and they reside in Eden township, where they purchased the Harding Gilbert farm and are farming people; they have three children, Abram T., Francis M. and Margaret I. Levi H., born Jan. 13, 1871, married Miss Katie Groff, daughter of John Groff, a prominent citizen of this county, and he purchased a farm in Eden township; their two children are Edith E. and John L. Lillie F., born Oct. 9, 1873, married Benjamin F. Yunginger, a resident of near Martinsville, and they now live on his farm in Strasburg township; their three children are Jay R., Marion R. and Francis M. Emma S., born March 31, 1876, was educated in the home schools and is a talented and cultivated lady, living at home. Charles H., born August 21, 1880, is unmarried, and is the very capable manager of his father's farm; he stands high in the public esteem. Bertha M., born May 7, 1883, was educated in the home schools, and also in Quarryville high schools, and is a very talented and cultured young lady, an ornament to the home circle. Elsie O., born June 21, 1885, died Sept. 5, 1889. George S., born July 16, 1887, resides at home. This domestic circle has been invaded but once by Death, and is one of the most closely bound and most highly esteemed families of Lancaster county.

In politics Mr. Rhoads has always been identified with the Democratic party, and has most efficiently served as school director for a period of three years. The daughters are members of the Old Mennonite Church, and the unmarried ones manage the home, in which comfort and simplicity reign.

Mr. Rhoads has always been interested in advancing the agricultural interests of his section, has kept thoroughly posted on modern methods, and has not hesitated to make use of them when his judgment assured him of their value. His fine farm is a testimonial to the soundness of his views and methods.

ANDREW F. SHROM, justice of the peace at Vogansville, is one of the representative men of Lancaster county, and a son of Frederick Shrom, who is now deceased.

Frederick Shrom was a native of Bavaria, where he spent his earlier years, and served in the Bavarian army. Soon after his discharge from the army, he came to this country, and made his home in Leacock township, Lancaster county, where he entered the employ of Rev. Henry Lantz, a farmer, and a minister of the Amish Church. With that gentleman he made his home until his marriage, when he located in the neighborhood, and worked for the neighboring farmers some years. In 1855 he moved to Illinois, and bought a tract of thirty-six acres near Decatur. The land was covered with timber, and Mr. Shrom set himself to clearing it and making a home for his family, but he died the same year, at the early age of forty-eight. Coming of Scotch-Irish ancestry, he was in religion a Catholic. Anna Frank, his wife, was a daughter of Jacob Frank, and her ancestors, the Franks and Shaeffers were old settlers and honored residents of Lancaster county. She is still living at the advanced age of eighty-two. After the death of Frederick Shrom, his widow brought her four children back to Lancaster county. They were Andrew F.; John F., a mechanic of Reading; Frederick, a blacksmith of Lancaster; and Susan, who is unmarried, and lives with her mother. Three children of this worthy couple died in infancy.

Andrew F. Shrom was born Feb. 17, 1845, and received but a limited schooling, as he was reared among the Amish. When he was eighteen he struck out in the world for himself. For a time he worked on a farm, and then learned the trade of a brick and stone mason. When he had accomplished this, he began a contracting and building business, in which he has achieved a large success. In the county he has had many large and important contracts, and has employed many men. His work has stood the closest inspection, among his most important constructions being the Ephrata school building, the warehouse, the United Brethren Church, and George W. Kinzer's residence at New Holland. He is not only deeply interested in his business, but is a broad-minded and public-spirited citizen. In politics he has filled the offices of assessor and justice of the peace, holding this last position eleven years. At first he was appointed justice of the peace, and has been re-elected three times. It is a rare compliment to his judicial spirit that none of his decisions have been reversed on appeal to the higher courts. In the Civil war he served during its closing scenes in the Union army, enlisting Feb. 20, 1865, in Co. I, 195th P. V. I., being mustered out Jan. 31, 1866. Much of the time from 1862 he had been out with the forces as a teamster. His patriotic spirit was profound, and he would have been in the ranks before, but was deemed ineligible.

In 1868 Mr. Shrom was married to Miss Lydia Garra, who was born in Earl township, a daughter of David H. and Lucy (Shaffer) Garra. Five children blessed this union: David G., a farmer, married Miss Emma Sensenig, and is the father of three children, Ruth, Blanch and Amos; Anna, the wife of Jacob Fritz, of Reading, Pa., has two children, Jacob and Andrew; Lilly wife of Augustus Lescher, of Reamstown, Pa.; Edgar W. is a teacher in the county schools; and Mabel is at home. Mr. and Mrs. Shrom are members of the Reformed Church, he taking an active part in the church work, and while in New Holland served as deacon and elder. The eldest son is a member of the Evangelical Association. All the family stand high in the community.

LEWIS FRANKLIN SIEGLER, M. D., whose cozy home and offices are at No. 115 South Queen street, is a familiar figure in Lancaster, where his entire life has been passed.

Ludwig Siegler, his father, came from Gruorn (Oberampt Urach), Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1851, and settled in York county, removing to Lancaster the following year. Here, for years, he operated an establishment for the manufacture of bone dust, knife and fork handles, etc., and in 1873 embarked in the hotel business, from which he retired in 1888. He entered into rest March 27, 1894, aged seventy-five years and one week. His widow, who in her maidenhood was Regina Hollinger, was also a native of Wurtemberg, Germany. She died Sept. 25, 1901, aged seventy-seven years and seven months. Thirteen children were born to this couple, but only three are now living, namely: Matthias C., a cigar maker, and at one time an efficient member of the police force of Lancaster; Rosie, wife of John Ripple, superintendent for Siegler Bros., cigar manufacturers; and Dr. Lewis Franklin.

Lewis Franklin Siegler was born in Lancaster Sept. 8, 1866, and, after receiving a good education in the public schools of the city, read medicine with the late Dr. Henry Carpenter, one of Lancaster's most prominent physicians. He was graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1886, and immediately after graduation, he began the practice of his profession in Lancaster—first in an office in East King street, later in East Orange street, and finally in South Lime street, where he bought a home. In 1891 Dr. Siegler removed to Reinhold's Station, this county, where he practiced medicine and surgery until 1898, at which time he returned to Lancaster, and, abandoning the practice of his profession, became the general agent for Lancaster, Dauphin and Lebanon counties of the American Relief Association, an organization which not only pays a benefit at death, but which pays a weekly amount in case of sickness or accident. This system of insurance is so admirable that it commends itself to all intelligent people, and Dr. Siegler is so able and effective in his furthering of its interests, that his name appears monthly on the "roll of honor" in the monthly publication issued by the association, no man's name appearing on that roll unless he has written twenty applications during the month. The Association had received 23,543 applications up to Dec. 1, 1902, and had paid $80,536.38 in benefits up to that date—a most remarkable showing. So conspicuous have been the Doctor's services that he was elected a director of the Association in 1899, and re-elected in 1900, 1901 and 1902.

Dr. Siegler has been twice married. His first wife, Ellen Lutz, of Ohio, died May 12, 1898. On Oct. 20, 1899, the Doctor married Margaret L. Miller, of Bridgewater, Va., and three children have been born of this union: Lewis F., Jr., born in 1900; Anna Marguerite, who passed away Aug. 30, 1901, aged ten weeks; and Reinhold Richard, born Sept. 30, 1902. During Dr. Siegler's active practice in Lancaster, he served two years as health commissioner, and two terms as physician to the Lancaster county prison. Politically he is a staunch Republican and active in party work. In religious belief, a Lutheran, he is affiliated with Trinity Church. While practicing his profession he was a member of the Lancaster City and County Medical Societies, and of the State Medical Association of Pennsylvania, to which latter organization he was one time sent as a delegate from the local society. Dr. Siegler has always been active and enterprising, and so positive in his convictions that there is never an uncertainty as to his position.

MICHAEL HARNISH (deceased) was in his life time one of the well-known residents of West Lampeter township, where he was born Jan. 7, 1798, and where he died in September, 1881.

Jacob Harnish, his father, was a farmer of West Lampeter township, and cultivated his father's farm as long as he lived, dying at the age of fifty-two years, his father surviving him four years. Jacob Harnish left a family of six children: Michael, whose name introduces this article; Jacob, who moved to Cumberland county, Pa., where he died; John, who moved to Ohio, where he died; Emanuel, who moved to Cumberland county, where he died; Elizabeth, who married Samuel Hershey, of Mt. Joy township; and Mrs. Coyer, who moved to Ohio. Jacob Harnish and his wife were members of the Reformed Mennonite Church.

Michael Harnish was reared and spent his life in West Lampeter township, where he owned the old homestead farm of 118 acres, which at present belongs to George Lampeter. He also owned a farm of eighty-two acres, which is now owned by David Kendig, a son-in-law. A timber lot of six acres, which belonged to him, is now the property of Benjamin Harnish.

Michael Harnish was an industrious and honorable man, who possessed the confidence of the people to a very unusual degree. Susanna Hess, who became his wife, died in 1883, at the age of eighty-five years. To this union were born: Catherine married Benjamin L. Denlinger, who preceded her to the grave; Ann married Henry Zindt, of East Lampeter township, and is now dead; Benjamin; Mary, the wife of Amos Weaver, of East Lampeter township, is now deceased; Susanna is the wife of David Kendig, of West Lampeter township; Michael is now living in Lancaster; and Jacob is also a resident of Lancaster. The parents of these children belonged to the Reformed Mennonite Church.

BENJAMIN HARNISH was born Dec. 14, 1828, and was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the common school. When he was twenty-two he began farming operations on his own account, cultivating his father's place for a year, and then went into the country north of Lancaster, where he remained four years. Returning to West Lampeter township, he again engaged in the cultivation of his father's farm, and continued with him some five years. At the expiration of that time he bought a farm of seventy-seven acres from his father-in-law, Martin Harnish, in East Lampeter township, and there for more than twenty years he made his home, and it is now owned by his son, Elam. In 1882 Benjamin Harnish moved to the farm he has since occupied in West Lampeter township, containing twenty acres at the time it passed into his possession. Since buying it he has added seventeen acres to it, and greatly improved it. Adjoining this he owns a tract of fifty acres, and both of these are being conducted by his son, Michael, an expert young farmer, while Mr. Harnish himself has lived retired since 1890. He also owns sixty-two acres in East Lampeter township, which his son, John A., manages and cultivates. Mr. Harnish has ever been a leading farmer, and his integrity and industry have won for him a large circle of friends.

Benjamin Harnish was married Nov. 7, 1850, to Susanna, daughter of Martin and Martha (Weaver) Harnish, who was born in West Lampeter township, Oct. 11, 1831, and is still living. To this union were born: Benjamin, a farmer of East Lampeter township, married Miss Emma Groff, by whom he has had eight children; Elam, a farmer of East Lampeter township, married Miss Emma Froelich, by whom he has had four children; Emma, the wife of Samuel Eshleman, of Strasburg township, is the mother of four children; John, who is a farmer of East Lampeter township, married Miss Catherine Frye; Martin is living at home; and Michael, who lives on the home place, married Miss Lizzie Nolt.

Mr. and Mrs. Harnish belong to the Reformed Mennonite Church, and are people highly esteemed for their good works and excellent character.

HENRY F. McCANNA, of Columbia, and a well-known conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in Gordonville, Lancaster county, May 2, 1850. John and Elizabeth (Starr) McCanna, his parents, were natives of Lancaster county, where they resided until 1859, when they removed to Chester county. John McCanna had been employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for many years as foreman of construction and died in Chester county, Feb. 13, 1885, when seventy-two years old. His widow, who was born July 21, 1814, now has her home with her son, Henry F., in Columbia. To this venerable couple were born eleven children, in the following order: Mary J., widow of Harry Whitman, of Cumberland county, Pa.; Kate, William and James, deceased; Sue, married to David Boyer, of Harrisburg; John, deceased; Emma, residing in Harrisburg and unmarried; Henry F.; Cecelia, wife of Joseph Quinn, of York, Pa.; Alice, deceased; and George, a brakeman at Harrisburg.

The paternal grandparents of Henry F. McCanna came from Ireland and settled in Lancaster county, when children, and there the grandfather plied his trade of carpet weaver until his death; the maternal grandparents were natives of Chester county and early settled in Lancaster county.

Henry F. McCanna lived on the farm with his parents until twenty years of age and then began braking on the Pennsylvania Railroad; two years later he was made a flagman, and two years afterward was promoted to a conductorship.

On May 20, 1874, Mr. McCanna married Miss Salome A. Knipe, and their family of children were six in number, viz.: John M., a physician in Philadelphia; Harry A., a telegraph operator in Philadelphia; William K., deceased; Charles B., a clerk at Columbia; Maria M., deceased; and George R., baggage master at Lancaster. Mrs. Salome A. McCanna was born in Schaefferstown, Lebanon Co., Pa., Feb. 2, 1855, a daughter of Henry C. and Maria (Knipe) Knipe, of Lebanon county. Henry C. Knipe was a blacksmith and died April 25, 1865, aged thirty-six years. To his marriage were born six children, viz.: Henry and John, who died in infancy; Salome; Kate, wife of John Welsh, of Philadelphia; and Ida and Anna, deceased. Mrs. Maria Knipe, some five and a half years after the death of her husband, married John Ross, who died in March, 1893, and to this marriage was born one child, Laura, wife of Luke Lederman, a merchant in Los Angeles, Cal. The mother resides in Philadelphia, at the age of seventy years. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. McCanna were Henry and Elizabeth (O'Connor) Nipe, and the maternal grandparents were John and Mary (Farmer) Nipe, all of Lebanon county, Pa. The two grandfathers were brothers, and the change of the name from Nipe to Knipe came during the war, when Gen. Knipe, a brother of Mrs. Ross, began spelling his name with the "K," and the family adopted that spelling.

Henry F. McCanna is a member of the O. of R. C., and of the Church of God, and in politics is a Republican. Socially he and family are held in very high esteem by their neighbors, and as a conductor Mr. McCanna has the implicit confidence of his Company.

MAJOR MICHAEL BRENNEMAN STRICKLER, a retired farmer and a gallant ex-Union officer of the war of the Rebellion, was born in West Hempfield township, Oct. 10, 1831, and West Hempfield township is still his home.

Henry H. and Ann (Brenneman) Strickler, his parents, were born, respectively, on this homestead in West Hempfield township and in the township of East Donegal. Henry H. Strickler was an extensive cattle dealer, who made trips to Virginia each fall, bought stock, fattened it and shipped it to market. Mr. Strickler was the owner also of a fine farm of 138 acres, which was always under a high state of cultivation, and which was utilized also for fattening live stock. On this homestead he passed away June 18, 1841, at the early age of thirty-eight years, but his widow lived to be eighty-one years old, and she died Oct. 8, 1885. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, and their remains were interred in the family burying ground on the present homestead. In politics Mr. Strickler was an old-line Whig. To Henry H. Strickler and wife were born four children, of whom Catherine E. died in infancy; Sarah J., deceased, was married to John S. Given; Jacob H. died on the homestead; and Michael B. is the gentleman in whose interest this sketch is chiefly prepared. The paternal grandparents of the Major were Jacob and Sarah (Wilson) Strickler, the former of whom was born on the West Hempfield homestead, and the latter in York county, and to their union were born three sons and eight daughters. Jacob Strickler was very wealthy, owning 3,000 acres of land in this community. He and wife died on the farm now owned by the Major.

Henry Strickler, paternal great-grandfather of Major Strickler, came from Switzerland to America in 1727, sailing on the ship "Friendship" from Rotterdam, Capt. John Davis, and coming via Cowes, England, which port he left June 30, 1727, with 200 other passengers, and eventually reached Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

The maternal grandparents of Major Strickler were Michael and Catharine (Snyder) Brenneman, of Donegal township, now Conoy township and to their union were born two children only: John, deceased; and Ann, mother of the Major, also deceased.

Michael B. Strickler remained on the home farm until 1857, and then traveled a year in Virginia. Upon his return North he was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman at Columbia from 1858 until 1861, when in the fall he enlisted, in Philadelphia, in the 8th P. V. C., was mustered in as chief, or regimental, bugler, and remained with the regiment until February, 1863, when all musicians were mustered out by special order. Ex-Bugler Strickler now raised a company of cavalymen, which was assigned as Co. B to the 20th P. V. C., with himself as captain, and at the expiration of six months the company veteranized, re-enlisting for three years or during the war. The Captain had in the meantime been promoted to Major, and took part in all the marches and engagements and skirmishes in which his regiment had a share and served until honorably discharged at Cloud's Mills, W. Va., June 20, 1865, with the rank of Major, although he had frequently acted as Colonel of his regiment.

On returning home the Major purchased two teams and hauled stone for the furnaces in his vicinity for two years, and was then re-employed by the railroad company as brakeman for a few years. Renting a farm adjoining that which he now owns, he farmed it for five years, and then worked for the railroad company a year and a half. Finally, in 1879, by reason of his mother's age and his brother's ill health, he settled on his present farm, on which he was born.

In August, 1866, at Philadelphia, Major Strickler married Marian Virginia Corbit, who was born in Harrisburg, Pa., in 1846, daughter of William and Mary L. (Sprigman) Corbit, the former of whom was the State printer at the time, but who later died in York, where he had been engaged in printing, book binding, publishing, etc. No children have been born of this union.

Major Strickler is a member of Post No. 118, G. A. R., at Columbia, and in politics is a Republican. He and wife are members of the Reformed Church, and socially stand with the best circles in Lancaster county.

MARTIN WEAVER. The name of Weaver in Lancaster county is well-known, and represents integrity, morality and wealth. Hanns Weber, or in English John Weaver, the founder of the family in Pennsylvania, was a native of Switzerland, who came to America in 1717, locating in Lancaster county, where he took up a large tract of land, consisting of 370 acres in West Lampeter township, one mile northeast of Lampeter Square. Here he engaged in farming and spent the balance of his life, leaving at death one son, Jacob, who inherited the property, and in turn transmitted it to his descendants, and the greater part of the original estate is still in the possession of the family. Many changes have been made, divisions and sub-divisions, but could the original owner return to view his old home, he would find in place of the wild land and forest trees, great fields of waving grain and lush meadows where sleek cattle browse, and also eleven residences and a school house in which his children's children are instructed. Surely he would feel satisfied that it was indeed a "goodly heritage."

Jacob Weaver, son of the founder, had twin sons born to him, on July 4, 1750, and at his death he divided the estate equally between them. His marriage was to Magdalena Barr, and the family consisted of four children: Jacob and John, twins; Magdalena, who married Jacob Rohrer; and Barbara, who married Abraham Herr. John Weaver married Ann Landis and died in 1832.

Jacob Weaver, son of Jacob, born July 4, 1750, died July 25, 1824. He married Esther Neff, who was born Sept. 27, 1756, and died Feb. 2, 1817, daughter of Jacob and Ann (Brackhill) Neff. They reared the following family of children: (1) John, born Oct. 3, 1777, died Nov. 10, 1779. (2) Susannah, born Nov. 23, 1779, died April 30, 1805. (3) Jacob, born Sept. 12, 1780, died Nov. 1, 1872; he married Mrs. Anna Mylin, daughter of Francis and Fannie (Barr) Herr, and had a family of six children, all of whom died young. (4) Samuel, born March 8, 1782, died Oct. 23, 1840; he married Magdalena Rush, daughter of Jacob and Martha (Kendig) Rush, and they had seven children. (5) Ann, born March 28, 1784, died Oct. 24, 1865. (6) David, born Nov. 25, 1785, died Oct. 2, 1817. (7) Martha, born May 16, 1787, died Dec. 10, 1864; she married Martin Harnish, son of David and Lizzie (Gross) Harnish, and they had three children. (8) John, born June 12, 1789, died Aug. 24, 1869; he married Elizabeth Kreider, who was born Jan. 23, 1797, daughter of Christian and Ann (Harnish) Kreider, and who died May 26, 1886, the mother of nine children. (9) Rev. Joseph, born April 5, 1792, died April 5, 1872; he married, first, Barbara Barr, daughter of Jacob and Ann (Kendig) Barr, by whom he had seven children; on March 5, 1843, he married, second, Mrs. Esther Brubaker, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Bowman) Stehman, and they had two children. (10) Elizabeth, born March 10, 1794, died Sept. 20, 1820; she married Rev. Henry Bowman, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Herr) Bowman, and they had one child. (11) Hettie, born April 5, 1798, died July 3, 1881; she married Jacob Lantz, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rodaker) Lantz, and they had twelve children. The parents of this family belonged to the Reformed Mennonite Church.

John Weaver, the eighth child of the above family, was born on the old homestead in Lampeter township, where his father and grandfather had first seen the light, and was reared to be a good farmer and worthy citizen. A portion of the old farm came to him by inheritance, and here he spent his life in the peaceful pursuit of agriculture, and here he and his good and pious wife worthily reared a family of nine children: (1) Martin, born Aug. 6, 1820, married Nov. 28, 1843, Annie C. Herr, who was born Jan. 26, 1816, daughter of Francis and Fannie (Neff) Herr; she died Sept. 7, 1882, the mother of four children. (2) Christian, born May 14, 1823, married Nov. 6, 1849, Rebecca Brubaker, daughter of Samuel and Esther (Steaman) Brubaker; she was born Feb. 14, 1831, and became the mother of ten children. (3) Amos, born May 22, 1825, married, Dec. 10, 1850, Mary Harnish, who was born Feb. 16, 1831, daughter of Michael and Susan (Hess) Harnish; she died April 11, 1894, the mother of seven children. They were residents of East Lampeter township. (4) Elizabeth, born May 2, 1827, resides in Strasburg. (5) Ann, born March 25, 1829, died Feb. 24, 1899. (6) John K., born March 15, 1832, married Rebecca Frantz, a daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Miller) Frantz, and they have one child. (7) Cyrus J., born March 2, 1835, married Oct. 7, 1856, Mary Witmer, daughter of Abraham and Susan (Newcomer) Witmer, and they have four children; they reside near Lenover, in Chester county. (8) Francis J., born April 7, 1838, married Mary Buckwalter, a daughter of Benjamin and Betsy (Mylin) Buckwalter, and they have four children; they reside on a part of the old estate in Lampeter township. (9) Dr. Jacob G., born April 9, 1840, married Dec. 31, 1873, Lizzie Shultz, daughter of Christian and Maria (Dieffenbach) Shultz, who was born July 28, 1846, and they have six children. All of these children were reared in the Reformed Mennonite Church.

Martin Weaver, eldest child of John and Elizabeth (Kreider) Weaver, was born on the old homestead. His education was acquired in the common schools of his district and he prepared himself for an agricultural life. His first essay for himself was on the old homestead, which he successfully managed for two years, and then rented a farm in West Lampeter township from his father, where he remained three years, and spent the succeeding three on a farm in Strasburg township, finally settling down upon a fine farm of 107 acres, located in East Lampeter, some six miles east of Lancaster. Until his retirement from activity, in 1875, this was his home, but at that date he purchased a comfortable little property at Midway, on the Strasburg and Lancaster Pike road, and made his home there until 1899, when he removed into Strasburg, where he and his sister Elizabeth, reside together. For the past fifty-four years, Mr. Weaver has been one of the leading members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, while for fifty years his sister has also been a member of that beautiful faith.

In 1882 Mr. Weaver lost his wife, leaving him four children: (1) Frances E., born June 8, 1846, was married Dec. 1, 1872, to John H. Weaver, son of Rev. Henry and Anna (Howery) Weaver, and they have three children, Elmer G., Charles M., and Cora. (2) Anna M., born Sept. 19, 1849, was married, Dec. 10, 1876, to Daniel D. Girvin, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Dieffenbach) Girvin, and they have three children, Meta, Anna, and Emily. (3) Enos H., born Aug. 3, 1851, was married, Oct. 8, 1879, to Mary N. Musser, daughter of Dr. Benjamin and Naomi (Herr) Musser, who died Oct. 6, 1895, leaving six children, Myrtle, Annie, Maud, Martin M., Mary and Ruth. The second marriage of Enos Weaver was to Annie Esbenschade, and they have one daughter, Catherine. (4) Ida Naomi, born Aug. 27, 1854, married Dec. 26, 1875, Rev. John Kohr, a son of John and Hettie (Denlinger) Kohr, and they have one child, Enos W., born in 1879, and they reside in Manheim township. This numerous and long-lived family is connected by marriage with many of the other old and prominent families of the county, and very generally belongs to the Mennonite faith.

LANDIS LEVAN, a merchant miller of Lancaster township, is a member of an old and highly respected family of this section of country.

George Levan, his father, was born in Berks county Feb. 7, 1817, and came to Lancaster county, when a boy of thirteen. At this early age he engaged with a Mr. Bowman, of Ephrata, and learned the fulling trade. About 1843 he began the manufacture of woolen goods, near Bareville, where he remained for two years, and then located at Intercourse, continuing the manufacture of woolen goods for a number of years. In 1857 he moved to Wabank, where he took charge of a woolen mill, and two years later he assumed control of a flour mill, running the two establishments in conjunction. There he remained, successfully engaged in his work until 1863, when he removed to what is known as the Willow Grove mills, Manor township, and for five years operated that concern. At the expiration of this time he located in Lancaster City, and operated a woolen mill on Prince street, continuing there until 1870, when he erected the works known as the Levan mills, about a mile south of Lancaster City, on the Lancaster and New Danville pike, and conducted a woolen and flour mill until 1877, when he abandoned the woolen mill and converting the whole building into a flouring mill, operated it until his death, which occurred May 19, 1892. George Levan was a very worthy man, beloved by his friends and trusted by all who knew him. For twenty-five years he was trustee of the State Normal school at Millersville, and was chairman of the building committee when the beautiful chapel was erected. In his religious affiliations he was a member of the German Baptist Church, and took an active part in its work. He married Nancy Landis, and to them were born: Samuel L., now in partnership with our subject; Mary A., who died unmarried in 1900; Sallie A., wife of J. J. Ross, of Seaford, Del.; and Landis.

Landis Levan was born at Ephrata, June 20, 1855, and remained with his father until he was twenty-three years of age, receiving his education at the district schools, and at the State Normal School at Millersville. A partnership was then formed, the members of the firm being George Levan and his two sons, Samuel and Landis, under the style of Levan & Sons, which name is still retained. The mill has a capacity of two hundred barrels per day, and they export considerable of their product to Scotland. Landis Levan has since that time devoted his entire attention to the merchant milling business, and has attained a success that is enviable. For thirteen years he was secretary of the State Millers' Association, and has been its treasurer for twenty-two years.

Landis Levan was married to Miss Laura E. Martin, daughter of John J. and Catherine Martin, and to them five children were born: S. High, of Lancaster City; George K., Catherine E., Marie L. and John J., all at home. The beautiful home erected by George Levan in 1877 is now the property of Landis Levan, and is considered one of the finest residences in the entire township, and is conveniently located to the works. Mr. Levan is justly regarded as one of the representative and leading men of Lancaster county, and has always given his support to all measures calculated to prove of benefit to the community, where he has passed all of his business life, and in which he and his family have so many friends. His political principles are those of the Republican party.

GEORGE HEIM. No better illustration of the characteristic energy and enterprise of the typical German-American citizen can be found than that afforded by the career of this gentleman, who at present is practically living a retired life in Columbia, Pa. Coming to this country with no capital except his abilities, he has made his way to success through wisely directed effort, and can now look back with satisfaction upon past struggles.

Mr. Heim was born Feb. 13, 1832, in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, where his parents, Adam and Catherine (Yorhann) Heim spent their entire lives.

In his younger years the father followed the shoemaker's trade, and later worked as a lumberman. He died in 1857, aged seventy-five years; his wife died aged ninety-five years. Their children were: Peter, who died in Germany; John, a shoemaker of York county, Pa.; Leonard, a millwright of Germany; George; and Catherine, who married George Beitsel, a miller, and died in Germany.

During his boyhood George Heim attended school until fourteen years of age, and then commenced learning the shoemaker's trade, which he has made his life work. On Dec. 23, 1852, he came to America, and first located in East Prospect, York Co., Pa., where he followed his chosen occupation four years, but since then his home has been in Columbia. There he has met with success, and is now quite well-to-do, being able to lay aside active labor. For the past five years he has practically lived retired, though he does a little work now and then. For twelve years he has been a director of St. Joseph's Building Association, and he is also a director of the Home Building & Loan Association, which was founded in 1899. The Democratic party finds in him a staunch supporter of its principles, and he is an active member of Salem German Lutheran Church.

On May 29, 1856, in Columbia, Mr. Heim married Miss Christina Gussler, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, and a daughter of George Gussler, a mason by trade, who spent his entire life in that country. Mrs. Heim came to America in 1854, and died Feb. 9, 1895, at the age of sixty-four years. She left four children, namely: George, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad and a resident of Columbia, married Ella Carter, and has four children, Rosa, Charles, Clara and Lillie; John, an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad, and a resident of Columbia, married Lizzie Ambrose, and they have three children, Edgar, Harry and Walter; Charles, a baker of Prospect, Pa., married Emma Leber, but they have no children; and Lillie is the wife of Edwin Marley, a bricklayer of Columbia, and they have two children, George and May.

MARTIN HUBER. Although each man builds his own character, it is a satisfaction to belong to a family whose name in one locality has stood for honor and respectability for generations, and such is the case in the present instance. Martin Huber, one of the most highly respected citizens of West Lampeter township, is a worthy representative of one of the best and most favorably known agricultural families in this locality.

Henry Huber, his grandfather, with his wife Anna, were, during life standard bearers in the Old Mennonite Church, and hospitable and esteemed residents of one of the excellent farms of this region.

Jacob Huber, son of Henry, was also a farmer. He died at the age of forty-one, while his wife, Mary Herr, lived to be sixty-one, rearing a family of five children; Jacob, a farmer of the county, died near Beaver; Henry moved to Illinois, where he died; Susanna; Eliza, who married Cyrus Zittle, is deceased; the only members of the family surviving being Martin and Susanna, the latter now about seventy years of age.

Martin Huber was born on the old family farm near Big Springs, July 23, 1823, a son of Jacob and Mary (Herr) Huber, and was reared and educated in the common schools of the district. At the early age of ten years he left home, and went to live with an uncle, with whom he remained until he was eighteen years old. At that time he began to learn the the wheelwright trade under the instruction of Jacob Hoover, and completed his apprenticeship when he was twenty-one. This business Martin followed for fourteen years and then began farming in West Lampeter township, between Lampeter and Strasburg, operating an eighty acre farm for ten years, at the close of that period selling it, and returning to his trade in Willowstreet, which he followed for the succeeding twenty-five years, being industrious and worthy of all confidence. Since that time he has lived in retirement, enjoying a competency which he has earned. Aside from the home property, Martin Huber owns a fine farm of eighty-six acres and both places are well improved, the home dwelling being erected in 1869.

On Nov. 15, 1847, Martin Huber was married to Maria Hoover, daughter of Christian Hoover and Anna (Shaub) Hoover, who was born in Strasburg township Sept. 18, 1825, and four children were born to this union: Aaron, who died in childhood; Anna M., who died young; Emma, who married David A. Huber, of West Lampeter; and Frances E., who married Henry Shenk, a farmer of this township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Huber are respected and esteemed in the community, are worthy members of the Old Mennonite Church and well known to a wide circle of friends. Among her neighbors Mrs. Huber is known for her kindness, and also for her skill in care for the sick, being most successful in alleviating whooping cough, by means of some of her own medicines.

JOHN MARTIN BACHMAN, the widely-known contracting house carpenter and builder whose beautiful residence is at No. 830 Columbia avenue, is descended from one of the oldest families of Lancaster county, the Bachman family to which he belongs having come to America from Germany with Hans Herr, the progenitor of all the Herrs in this country.

Mr. Bachman has several Bibles in his possession that came to him through his ancestors among the Rohrsers, and one of these bears an inscription, which shows it was in the possession of Mr. Bachman's ancestors as early as 1640.

It is very natural for our subject to be a carpenter by trade, for his father, grandfather and great-grandfather were carpenters, and all of them were born in Lancaster county, where they carried on their trade and died. All of them were named John, and all lived in the vicinity of Willowstreet, where Mr. Bachman's father died in 1876. The mother of our subject was Annie Herr, a daughter of Benjamin Herr, a farmer of Lampeter. To our subject's parents eleven children were born, of whom the following are living: Abraham, a carpenter of Lampeter; Hattie, widow of Simon Weaver, of Lancaster; Hannah (whom her brother John M. has not seen for thirty-eight years), wife of Christian Zercher, a carpenter of St. Louis, Mo.; Amanda, wife of Benjamin Weaver, of Lancaster; and John Martin, of Lancaster.

John Martin Bachman was born at Pequea, this county, Aug. 6, 1841, and was educated in the public schools of the district. When fifteen years old he became an apprentice at carpentering, learning his trade with his brother Benjamin, at Willowstreet, where he remained until 1895. In that year he built a model dwelling on Columbia avenue, Lancaster, and removed to that city. For more than thirty-five years he has engaged in contracting as a builder, and during that time has erected many hundreds of dwellings, in the city and county, and also in other sections. Some years ago he had a very large contract for the erection of buildings at the well-known sea-side resort of Oceanport, where he put up twelve large structures, including one that covered seven acres. He built eight public school houses in Lancaster county, and was the contractor who built three model barns for the Lancaster County Almshouse—the first in 1883, and the second in 1886; the third in 1902; all were destroyed by fire. He rebuilt the Lancaster County Insane Asylum some years ago, after it had been partially destroyed by fire. Mr. Bachman is a Republican in politics, and served as a justice of the peace for West Lampeter for ten years.

Mr. Bachman has been twice married, his first wife having been Mary B. Harnish, daughter of Jacob Harnish, the retired dry-goods merchant of West King street. After her death he married Susan Harnish, her sister. Four children were born of the first union, only one of whom survives, Jacob, who served in the Spanish American war. To the second marriage have been born four sons, all of whom are living, namely: Benjamin Franklin, a carpenter, who is assisting his father at house-building; John Ira, a plumber, of Pittsburg; Leroy, a watchmaker, employed in the Hamilton Watch Factory, Lancaster; and Arthur Garfield (born on the day that James A. Garfield was nominated for the presidency), who was in the class of 1902, Lehigh University.

A model builder and a model citizen, Mr. Bachman enjoys the highest regard of the entire community, and we honor him—as well as the patriotic deed—by closing this sketch with a deserved tribute to his soldier brother, Amos W. Bachman. The record of this gallant soldier, who gave up his studies at the State Normal School at Millersville, to enlist as a soldier for the Union, is as follows: Private of Co. C, 99th P. V. I., mustered in Aug.

8, 1861; promoted to corporal, sergeant and first sergeant; commissioned second lieutenant, to rank from Feb. 3, 1863; first lieutenant, May 17, 1864; captain, July 8, 1864. Service: 1862, assigned 2nd Brigade, 1st division, 3d Army Corps. Kettle Run or Bristol Station, Aug. 27th; Grovetown and Gainesville, Aug. 28th and 29th; Bull Run, Aug. 30th; Chantilly, Sept. 1st; White Ford, Sept. 15th; Fredericksburg, Dec. 13th. In 1863: assigned to 2nd Brigade, 3rd division, 2nd army corps, Army of Potomac. Chancellorsville, May 1-3d; Gettysburg, July 1-3d; wounded slightly June 2d; Wapping Heights, July 23d; Auburn, Oct. 14th; Kelly Ford, Nov. 7th; Mine Run, Nov. 26-28th; Wilderness, May 5th, wounded; Spottsylvania, May 11th, wounded; North Anna, May 22-27th; Tolopotomy, May 29-31st; Cold Harbor, June 1-12th; Petersburg, June 16-23d; Deep Bottom, July 27-28th; mine explosion, July 3d; captain of Co. A, 203d P. V. I., mustered in September, 1864; lieutenant colonel, Feb. 14, 1865; colonel, June 15, 1865. Assigned to 2nd Brigade, 2nd division, 10th Army Corps, Army of the James. Service: Darbytown Road, Oct. 7th; Fair Oaks near Richmond, Oct. 27th; Fort Fisher, Jan. 15th; advance on Wilmington, Sugar Loaf Battery, Feb. 11th; Fort Anderson, Feb. 18th; capture of Wilmington, Feb. 22nd; mustered out June 22, 1865. Such is the record in brief of Col. Bachman's gallant service in the Civil war. He died at the home of his brother John M. Bachman at Willowstreet, in the prime of manhood, in his fiftieth year. His remains were interred in Fernwood cemetery, Philadelphia, where a grand memorial tablet was erected to his memory. The ceremony of unveiling this tablet was a memorable one, and the Philadelphia papers contained lengthy account of the exercises. No more gallant soldier than Col. Bachman could be found among all the brave men who fought that this country might live.

ANDREW R. SHELLENBERGER, a retired farmer residing in West Hempfield township, was born a half-mile distant from his present farm, Aug. 25, 1836; son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rohrer) Shellenberger, natives of the same township, the former of whom was born on the same farm on which his son was afterward born.

Jacob Shellenberger was a life-long farmer, and was quite prominent in his day, being supervisor of his town when still a young man. His death took place in February, 1877, when he was seventy-six years old, but his wife, who was born March 17, 1809, survived till Jan. 22, 1890. They were members of the German Baptist Church, but their remains were interred in Habekers Mennonite Churchyard. Their family consisted of eight children, viz: Susannah R., who was born on the old homestead June 11, 1832, and has never married; Daniel, born Feb. 23, 1835, died Aug. 23, 1835; Andrew R., is the gentleman whose name opens this biographical notice; Abraham, born June 10, 1838, died Jan. 10, 1898; Jacob R., born March 9, 1841, a physician in Germantown; Elizabeth R., born May 15, 1844, lives in Mountville, and is the widow of Abram Mellinger; Sarah, born Nov. 15, 1847, died Nov. 17, 1847, and Mary, born Oct. 26, 1848, was married to Amos N. Lehman, of Manor township, and died Nov. 22, 1873.

Andrew R. Shellenberger lived in the old homestead until the spring of 1869, and then came to his present farm of eighty-four acres, where he is engaged in raising tobacco. Abraham Shellenberger, brother of Andrew R., was born on this farm, and here died. This farm was granted from John, Thomas, and Richard Penn, sons of William Penn, Sept. 17, 1746, to Ulrick Shellenberger, an ancestor of the present family. Further allusion to Abraham Shellenberger's family will be made a little further on.

On Nov. 22, 1868, Andrew R. Shellenberger married Martha Mellinger in Lancaster City, and to this union have been born three children as follows: Ella M., April 7, 1873, died Aug. 22, 1875; Jacob C., born July 9, 1876, is still unmarried; and Edward M., born Feb. 28, 1882. Mrs. Martha (Mellinger) Shellenberger was born in Manor township Feb. 15, 1841, daughter of Christian and Susan (Hertzler) Mellinger. The family are Mennonites. Andrew R., the father, has served as township auditor, being elected by the Republican party of which he is a staunch advocate.

On Jan. 14, 1872, Abraham Shellenberger, spoken of above, married Anna N. Lehman, a native of Manor township, a daughter of Benjamin Lehman and sister of Amos N. Lehman, of whom further may be read on another page of this volume. To Abraham and Anna N. Shellenberger were born three children, viz: Elizabeth L., Mary L., and Daniel L. The father, Abraham had a fine farm of 140 acres, on which he passed his entire life. A Mennonite in religion, he was a Deacon in that church at the time of his death; in politics he was a Republican.

THOMAS F. McSPARRAN, a member of one of Lancaster county's leading families, was born in Fulton township Nov. 20, 1837, son of James and Amelia F. (McCullough) McSparran, of Lancaster county. The family is of Scotch-Irish origin.

James McSparran, the grandfather of Thomas F., was a son of pioneers of the county, and was born here, on the family homestead now owned and occupied by his grandson, Thomas F. This place, which stands near Peach Bottom, will be one hundred years old in 1904, and is still in a good state of preservation. The foundation was commenced about 1800, and the house was completed in about three years. James McSparran was the father of fifteen children, of whom James, Jr., father of Thomas F., born in 1801, died in 1864; he was a twin brother of Isabell, the wife of John King, both of whom are deceased; Elinor is deceased; Thomas, now (1903) eighty-three years old, resides in York county; William, twin of Thomas, is deceased; Miss Rachel, now over seventy, resides in Drumore township, and she and Thomas are the only survivors of this large family.

James McSparran, father of Thomas F., was married in 1832 to Amelia Fraiser McCullough, a daughter of Hugh McCullough, of Lancaster county, and eight children were born of this union: James and Hugh, both deceased; Thomas F.; Miss Mary E., who died in April, 1902 (she lived in Fulton township); Eleanor, who died in infancy; Grace B., widow of Rev. Alonzo Michael; Sanders; and John K., deceased. Mrs. James McSparran died in 1900, at the age of eighty-six years.

Thomas F. McSparran married Miss Ada Berta McClure, of Philadelphia, Feb. 15, 1897. She was born Dec. 6, 1858, of Scotch-Irish parents. Thomas F. McSparran has traveled extensively. He was in the West from 1868 to 1882, and owned a large farm of 280 acres in northwestern Missouri. In 1882 he returned to Lancaster county, to manage the family farm of 240 acres, which he purchased at the death of his mother, in 1900. Half of this farm lies in Fulton township, with the farm buildings, and half in Drumore, where he resides. His place has first-class improvements, and is in a high state of cultivation. In politics Mr. McSparran holds to the old Jeffersonian doctrines, and is a leader in his party. Altogether he occupies a prominent place in the community, and he is greatly respected for his many sterling traits of character.

FRANKLIN DILLICH. The ancestors of Franklin Dillich, one of the well-known business citizens of Lampeter, Lancaster county, were of German origin, his parents, Martin and Mary (Snyder) Dillich, both having been born and reared in Bavaria, Germany, where they married, coming soon after to the United States. Many of their countrymen had already settled in Lancaster county, and hither they came, locating in Strasburg township, but soon after removing to Paradise township, where Martin Dillich purchased a small farm, and until his death, at the age of seventy-five years, his principal avocation was farming. His last days were spent in the home of his son Franklin, at the "Lamb Hotel," in West Lampeter township, his death occurring in 1876. His wife had passed away seven years previously. They were both devoted adherents of the Catholic Church, and piously reared a family of three children: Franklin, who lives in Lampeter; Charles, a carpenter by trade, who for sixteen years was in the employ of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co., and now lives in Lancaster; and Martin, also a resident of the city of Lancaster, a blacksmith by trade, in the employ of The Champion Blower & Forge Company.

Franklin Dillich was born March 4, 1837, and was reared on a farm, receiving his education in the public schools of his district. At the age of twenty-two, he decided to learn the blacksmith's trade, and with this end in view, entered the shop of Peter Eberly, at Strasburg, where he remained until he was competent to open up a business of his own. Purchasing the Rudy Shaub property, located in Strasburg borough, he conducted a blacksmith business in that place for the following seven years, and then took charge of the "Lamb Hotel," at Hollinger, conducting this hospitable and popular house for five years in connection with his other business. Upon selling this property he removed to Lampeter, where he has since been actively engaged in the conduct of his smithy, and also does some farming, owning a tract of fourteen acres, which is highly cultivated and well improved. Mr. Dillich proves that he is not only an excellent blacksmith, but also one of the best farmers in this locality.

The first marriage of Franklin Dillich was to Kate Yeager, a daughter of Christian Yeager, who died without issue. His second marriage was to Mary Ann Finefrock, a daughter of Peter Finefrock, and to this union were born two children: Frank J., who is a blacksmith by trade and is associated with his father in business; and Anna, wife of F. Gertz, of Lancaster City. The mother of these children died in 1883, and Mr. Dillich married Martha Crawford, a daughter of George Crawford, and one child has been born of this marriage, George M. The whole family are devoted members of the Catholic Church, and Mr. Dillich is justly regarded as one of the representative business men of Lampeter.

DANIEL MUSSER, a retired farmer of Lancaster, was born in West Lampeter township, this county, June 18, 1829, son of Martin and Anna (Hostetter) Musser, of Lampeter and Manor townships, respectively.

Martin Musser was a farmer and physician and died in West Lampeter township in 1847, aged fifty-six, while his wife died in 1862, aged seventy-two, and both are buried in Longeneckers Church Cemetery. They were members of the Reformed Mennonite Church. Their children were as follows: Jacob; Benjamin; Henry; Martin; Daniel; Gideon, who died in childhood; Martha, deceased, who married John F. Herr; Anna, deceased, who married Theodore W. Herr, of Denver, Colo.; Susan, deceased, who married Daniel K. Herr; Emma, second wife of Theodore W. Herr.

The boyhood days of Mr. Musser were spent like those of ordinary country boys, working upon the farm and receiving such educational advantages as lay within the means of his parents. When he attained to manhood's estate, he began farming for himself, operating a fine farm in Locust Valley, Strasburg township, this county, until 1891, when he retired from active business life, and has since then lived in Lancaster, enjoying leisure earned by years of toil and thrifty management.

On Nov. 7, 1858, in Longenecker's Church, Mr. Musser was married to Miss Susannah Herr, born March 17, 1836, at New Danville, Lancaster county, daughter of Henry and Mary (Rohrer) Herr, of this county, where the father was a farmer and miller until 1877, when he retired and removed to Lancaster, and there died in 1895, aged eighty-one; his wife died in 1838, aged twenty-four. Both are buried in Longenecker's Cemetery and both were members of the Reformed Mennonite Church. Two children were born to the parents of Mrs. Musser: Daniel K., now a florist of Lancaster; and Susannah. After the death of his wife, Mr. Herr married Fanny Herr, who died in 1857, aged sixty-two, leaving no children. Mr. Herr married a third time, his choice being Charlotte Herr, who bore him one child, Lizzie, who died unmarried in 1890. Mrs. Charlotte Herr is still living, and resides in Lancaster. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Musser was Martin Herr, a farmer and a very prominent man of his locality, who married Susan (Buckwalter) Herr, of Lancaster county.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Musser: Mary A., and Susie, who died in childhood; Martin H., a dentist of Lancaster, who married Mary Herr, of Strasburg, Pa., but has no children; and Emma E., now deceased, who married Hiram Dellinger, of Paradise, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Musser are consistent members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and are highly esteemed in Lancaster, being possessed of true charity and Christian kindness which wins them many trusty friends.

CHRIST G. LONGENECKER. Among the well-known and reliable business men of Maytown, and identified with its best interests all his life, is Christ G. Longenecker, the capable and efficient manager of the Hoffman Bros.' cigar manufacturing plant, of Maytown.

Christ G. Longenecker was born in that town April 4, 1851, son of Jacob and Mary (Grove) Longenecker, the former of whom was a farmer of East Donegal township, who was a man of means, a school director many years and who died June 14, 1879. Mrs. Mary (Grove) Longenecker survived until Aug. 8, 1888, dying at the age of sixty-five years, and was buried beside her husband in East Donegal cemetery. Both had been most worthy members of the Church of God. Eight children were born to this worthy couple, as follows: Elizabeth, who married John C. Swiler, and resides in Philadelphia; Amanda, who married W. W. Shireman, and is now deceased; Anna, who married A. M. Casel, of Denver, Colo.; John, deceased; Christ G.; Mary, deceased; George, manager of Watt & Shand's store, Columbia, Pa.; and Ella, who married J. W. Parkerson of Denver, Colorado.

The Longenecker family originated in Switzerland, leaving that country on account of the prescription laws, and settled in Lancaster county at an early day. The paternal grandparents of Christ G., the subject of this biography, were John and Elizabeth Longenecker, farmers of East Donegal, and the maternal grandparents were Christ and Elizabeth Grove, whose ancestry was also Swiss.

Christ G. Longenecker was reared on the home farm where he remained until he was fifteen years old, and then went to Philadelphia where he learned the trade of bookbinder, remaining four years, and then returned to his old home. A favorable opening presenting itself, Mr. Longenecker entered the manufactory of the S. B. Francis Cigar Co., as foreman and manager, continuing as their efficient and faithful employe for a period of twelve years. On July 1, 1900, he accepted a similar position with Hoffman Brothers.

On Dec. 24, 1874, Mr. Longenecker was married to Miss Harriet Johnstin, and to this union have been born: Miriam J., who married H. B. Haines, of Maytown; Sarah J., who married John H. Miller, of Marietta, Pa.; Howard J.; Mary J.; and Ruth M. In politics Mr. Longenecker is a leader in the Republican party, and fraternally is connected with the American Mechanics. He has long been influential in the Lutheran Church. As a citizen he stands well before the people of his town, and possesses the esteem of all, both in commercial and social circles.

SHENK. One of the old and influential families of Lancaster county is that bearing the name of Shenk. Among its worthy representatives several generations ago was Martin Shenk, a native of Manheim township. His wife, Elizabeth, was a native of West Hempfield township. They were life-long, industrious, honest toilers of the fertile soil, and reared a large family of children.

John Shenk, one of their sons, was born in Manheim township, Lancaster county, about 1808. John was reared on the farm and followed farming as his vocation in life. He married Mariah Kauffman, daughter of Jacob Kauffman, one of the sturdy settlers of Manheim township. They were devout members of the Mennonite Church, and lived in West Hempfield township through life. John, in his later years, was a Republican in politics, and lived to the ripe old age of eighty-five years, passing away in 1894. His wife, Mariah, died in 1870, aged sixty-six years. They are buried at Marietta. Six children were born to John and Mariah Shenk, namely: Henry K., a retired farmer of West Hempfield township, whose sketch appears below; Martha, who married John Minnick, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Jacob, who lives retired in Myerstown, Lebanon county; Elizabeth, wife of Henry Royer, a farmer of Lebanon county; Christian K., farmer and tobacco merchant of West Hempfield township, whose sketch also appears herewith; and Mariah, of Lewistown.

HENRY K. SHENK, one of the old and highly honored citizens of West Hempfield township, for almost half a century, has lived on the farm which he now occupies. He came to the farm when twenty years of age, and his earnest, active, influential and successful career is known to all men in that locality. He is the son of John and Mariah (Kauffman) Shenk, and was born on the old homestead in Manheim township, Feb. 27, 1833. He married Dec. 25, 1862, in East Donegal township, Mary S. Rhoads, who was born in Manor township, April 8, 1833, daughter of George and Elizabeth Rhoads, residents of East Donegal township, where George Rhoads was widely known as an industrious and skillful blacksmith, and as an enterprising farmer. To George and Elizabeth Rhoads were born six children, as follows: Abraham, who lived retired in Maytown, Lancaster county, and is now deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Hoffman of Conoy township; Mary, deceased wife of Henry K. Shenk; Levi, a retired farmer of Quarryville; Susan, widow of Christian Brant of Maytown; and George, a farmer of East Donegal township. Mary, the wife of Henry K. Shenk, died Dec. 23, 1893, aged sixty years. The only child of Henry K., and Mary S. (Rhoads) Shenk is Elizabeth, who married Eli L. Nissley, a tobacco merchant of East Donegal township, by whom she has a family of four children. In politics Henry K. Shenk is a Republican. His well cultivated farm comprises ninety-eight acres, and as an agriculturalist he has been progressive, wide awake and eminently successful. As a public spirited citizen he ranks high, and he holds the deep esteem of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

CHRISTIAN K. SHENK is one of the most active and prominent citizens of West Hempfield township, —a man who has engaged extensively in agricultural pursuits for many years, latterly in connection with the tobacco business, and prospered to a marked degree. He was born in Manheim township, March 5, 1840. He remained on the home farm with his parents, assisting in the arduous agricultural pursuits of the times until his marriage, which occurred when he was twenty-nine years old. He was married at Columbia, in December, 1869, to Miss Anna Heidler, and by this marriage had two children: Oliver, who married Elizabeth Hostetter and lives in Manor township; and Laura, who married Benjamin Koch, Dec. 27, 1900, and lives in Conshohocken, Pa. The wife died in March, 1876, aged thirty-five years, and for his second wife, Christian K. Shenk married at Columbia in December, 1881, Martha Heidler, sister of his deceased first wife.

They were the daughters of Levi and Martha (Hougendobler) Heidler, who individually represented two of the oldest families in Lancaster county. Levi was the son of William and Nancy (Forry) Heidler, natives, respectively, of Bird-in-Hand, and of West Hempfield township. Both died comparatively early in life, while residents of Marietta. William Heidler was drowned in 1826, at the age of thirty-five years, while fishing in the Susquehanna river. His wife died in 1829, aged thirty-three years. They left five children as follows: Levi; Nancy, who married Samuel Johnson and is now deceased; Hannah, deceased wife of Harry Heise; Cyrus, deceased; and William who became a miller and went West. Levi, who was a prominent retired farmer of Cordelia, was born Aug. 26, 1815, and died in October, 1901.

Levi Heidler married in Lancaster, Jan. 9, 1838, Martha Hougendobler, who was born in West Hempfield township April 1, 1820, daughter of Nicholas and Barbara (Geldmaker) Hougendobler, and granddaughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Peters) Hougendobler. Isaac and his three brothers emigrated from Germany, and were among the earliest settlers of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, buying the land from William Penn. Nicholas, son of Isaac Hougendobler, was born in West Hempfield township, and was a weaver by trade and later a distiller. He died in Indiana in 1880, aged eighty-seven years. He married three times. By his first wife Barbara Geldmaker, who died in 1827, aged thirty years, he had four children: Barbara, deceased wife of Jacob Bard; Nancy, deceased wife of Michael Crider; Martha, who married Levi Heidler; and Henry, a tailor of Manheim. By his second wife, Mary Conklin, Nicholas Hougendobler had one child, Samuel, a tailor, now deceased. By his third wife, Mary Eston, he had eight children, namely: Sarah, who married Amasiah Young, of Manheim; Jacob, Amos and Abraham, who live with their mother in Indiana; and Harriet, Lizzie, Franklin and Harriet (2), who died young.

To Levi and Martha (Hougendobler) Heidler were born eleven children, as follows: Anna, who married Christian K. Shenk, and is now deceased; William, who married Mary Bart, and lives in Cordelia; Henry, of San Diego, Cal.; Barbara; Harriet, wife of Henry Brennehan, a veterinary surgeon of Mt. Joy; Cyrus, proprietor of a bakery at Mountville, Pa.; Sarah, wife of Dr. Charles McAuley, a physician of Petersburg; Martha, wife of Christian K. Shenk; Mary who died young; Samuel, who married Adelia Bunn, and is a school teacher of Springfield, Ill.; and Horace, a telegraph operator of Chickies, Lancaster county. Levi Heidler retired from active farming in West Hempfield in 1887, after which he lived in Columbia and Cordelia, successively. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religious faith he was for many years a member of the English Lutheran Church, to which his wife also belongs.

After his marriage Christian K. Shenk operated his father's farm for ten years on the shares. He then engaged in the tobacco business in connection with farming and trucking and is now one of the prominent tobacco merchants of the county. In politics he is a Republican. His wife is a member of the Lutheran Church. They are prominent in the social life of the township, and most highly esteemed for their many estimable qualities. Christian K. Shenk has proved himself a successful business man, and his keen business judgment integrity and energy have placed him among the foremost citizens of West Hempfield township.

CLOYD R. COLLIER, one of the most reliable engineers on the Pennsylvania Railroad and now residing in Columbia, Lancaster county, was born in Mifflintown, Juniata Co., Pa., March 23, 1845, son of James and Margaret (Tyson) Collier, who had a family of nine children, namely: Cloyd R.; Elizabeth J., wife of William A. Partner, a farmer of Mifflintown; Alice A., married to George Kelley, a railroad engineer of the same place; Lucian W., Loran McG., and John M., deceased; Harvey F., a brakeman; Charles, of Columbia; and William A., of Harrisburg. The father died at the age of fifty-three years, and the mother in 1899, at the age of seventy-three, the former in the faith of the Baptist Church, and the latter in that of the Lutheran.

Cloyd R. Collier was reared on a farm, but at the age of sixteen years he left home to become a defender of the integrity of his country's flag. He enlisted for three years or during the war, in August, 1862, in Co. F, 16th P. V. C., under J. Robinson, who went out as captain and returned as colonel. During his service he took part in some of the severest battles that occurred in the Army of the Potomac, and in skirmishes innumerable. He was mustered out at Richmond, Va., and honorably discharged at Harrisburg, Aug. 23, 1865.

Mr. Collier, on reaching home, was employed as a laborer on the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. until 1867, then went to Gettysburg, where he farmed until 1871. He then returned to Lancaster and resumed work in the furnaces. He continued to be thus employed until 1874, when he began as fireman with the Railroad Company, and in 1882 was promoted to engineer.

On July 2, 1868, in Chickies, Lancaster county, Mr. Collier was united in marriage with Miss Sarah A. Lochard, who was born in Newtown, Pa., a daughter of John and Margaret (Hammonds) Lochard; she died March 25, 1899, at the age of forty-eight years. Mr. and Mrs. Lochard were the parents of the following children: Margaret J., wife of George W. Humble, engineer at Columbia; James W., who died young; Cloyd R., boilermaker for the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at Columbia, and married to Katherine Hougontogles; John F., a brakeman at home; Saloma C., wife of John L. Madden, a machinist at Columbia; and Alice F. and Charles C., at home.

John Lochard, the father of Mrs. Collier, is a retired stationary engine manufacturer, and was born in March, 1824. He lost his wife March 4, 1888, she being sixty-four years of age at the time she died, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church. There were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lochard nine children in the following order: Saloma, wife of Joshua Collier, a lumberman of Marysville, Pa.; Sarah A., the deceased wife of Cloyd R. Collier; Emma F., married to J. K. Snyder, a street-car conductor in Philadelphia; John B., of Columbia; Samuel, in the West; Anna M., Maggie J., and Ulysses G., deceased; and Clara B., wife of George White, a tinsmith in Columbia.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Sarah A. Collier were John C. and Anna (Conklin) Lochard, of Newtown, where the grandfather was engaged in farming, and also conducted a temperance hotel; the maternal grandparents came from Chester county to Lancaster county, where grandfather Hammonds also conducted a hotel, and here he and wife passed the remainder of their days.

Cloyd R. Collier is one of the most trustworthy engineers in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., and with the children that now form the home circle is in the enjoyment of the highest esteem of all his neighbors. They are consistent members of the English Lutheran Church, and Mr. Collier is a member of the B. of L. F., the Relief, and the K. O. T. M. In politics he is a Democrat.

LEMUEL CHEW EBY, the popular and successful local representative of the American School Furniture Co., of New York, is a conspicuous and welcome figure in this community. He comes from a prominent and long-lived family, his great-grandfather having died at the age of eighty-three years; his grandfather at eighty-four; his father at eighty-one; his mother at eighty-four. The line of ancestry is a lengthy one. The paternal great-grandfather and grandfather bore the name of John.

John Eby, the grandfather, lived in Brickerville, Lancaster county, and the father, Christian Eby, was a fruit-grower of Conestoga Center. Mary Eby, the mother of Lemuel C., was a daughter of John Kendig, a well-known hotel keeper of Conestoga Center. To Christian and Mary Eby were born six children, three of whom are living. Lemuel C., of Lancaster; L. H., of Philadelphia; and Elmina, the widow of Aldus Groff, of Philadelphia.

Lemuel C. Eby was born in Conestoga Center, Sept. 2, 1843, and was educated in the district schools until he reached the age of eleven years. In 1854 he came to Lancaster to take a position as a newspaper carrier, and was then employed in the book store of his uncle, the late Elias Barr. He remained seven years, in the book store of John Bears' Sons when he took a position with the American School Furniture Co., of New York, where he soon became a very successful traveling salesman. There is not a school probably in Lancaster county that does not possess some article which it has bought from this gifted and energetic representative of the great firm. In the spring of 1900 he placed 600 chairs in the Lancaster Court House, and in October of the same year he secured the contract to supply 1000 opera chairs for the main auditorium of the Y. M. C. A.

Lemuel C. Eby was married, in 1868, to Miss Mary, a daughter of the late David B. Hostetter, one of the most respected citizens of Lancaster. By this marriage he became the father of two children: Edward G., who is now at the head of the notion department of the New York Store of this city; and David Charles, who is at the head of the shoe department of J. R. Foster's Department Store.

Mr. Eby was elected by the Republicans of the Sixth ward to a seat in the common branch in the city council, but was obliged to resign, after serving two terms, on account of the fact that his headquarters are now in Philadelphia, and he is able to spend only Saturday and Sunday with his family in their elegant and new home on East Chestnut street. From boyhood he has been a member of the First Methodist Church, and was at one time a member of the board of trustees of the Church, but his absence from Lancaster during the week compelled him to retire from the Board; for seven years he was superintendent of the Sunday School. Mr. Eby is a member of the Knight Templar degree of the Masonic Fraternity. As a representative of a great business house he has won hosts of friends by his genial manners, unfailing courtesy and honorable methods. Liberal in his views and acts, and indefatigable in his efforts to promote the interests of his house, all who know him wish him success in an unmeasured degree.

WILLIAM H. GUTHRIE, a leading contracting painter and decorator, Lancaster, with place of business at No. 38 West Walnut street, comes of a long-lived rugged Scotch ancestry, some of whom were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania.

Joseph Guthrie, grandfather of William H., came to America from Scotland, settling in Chester county, Pa., where he founded the now thriving village of Guthriesville, becoming prominent in all the affairs of the locality, and first postmaster of the village. From Chester county he removed to Franklin county, and here passed the rest of his days. Of his family three are yet living, viz.: William D., in Chambersburg, Pa., aged eighty-three years; and two daughters aged, respectively, eighty and eighty-two, one residing in Chambersburg, the other in Altoona, Pennsylvania.

Allen Guthrie, father of William H., was for many years the leading house painter in Lancaster, coming to the city in 1848, after having followed the business in Chester and Franklin counties. He married Miss Mary A. Garrett, a native of Chester county, born of Scottish ancestry, and seven children were the result of their union, five of whom are yet living. The father passed away Feb. 17, 1893, in the sixty-ninth year of his age, and no man in the city died more deeply lamented. The mother was called from earth in 1882, mourned by a wide circle of relations and friends. They were active and consistent members of the Methodist Church, and interested in everything looking to the uplifting of their fellow creatures.

William H. Guthrie was born near Guthriesville, East Brandywine township, Chester Co., Pa., and was a small boy when the family moved into the city of Lancaster. Here his earlier education was secured, and for a time he attended Franklin and Marshall College. In 1864 he commenced an apprenticeship at the trade of machinist in the Norris Locomotive Works, now known as the Pennsylvania Iron Works; but after three years he abandoned this line and took up the painting and decorating business, under his father's excellent tuition. In 1882 his father admitted him into partnership, under the firm name of Guthrie & Son, which continued until 1892, since when William H. has conducted the business alone. That he has made a success goes without saying, and the many fine residences and public buildings he has painted and decorated testify to his skill. Among the latter may be mentioned the Duke Street M. E. Church, the "Hotel Lancaster," and the Folmer & Clogg umbrella factory, all in Lancaster; the Industrial School and Soldiers' Orphan School, at Scotland, Franklin county; the new Chester County Insane Asylum, besides many other buildings, while, year after year, he and his expert painters, grainers and decorators are kept busy nearly the whole time at the ancestral home of the Grubb family at Mount Hope, Lancaster county. In March, 1901, Mr. Guthrie had the contract for painting a large building in Coatesville, Chester county, which was among the lesser contracts he had secured for the spring work of that year.

In April, 1882, William H. Guthrie married Miss Mary S. Etter, daughter of Josiah Etter, a prominent farmer of Franklin county, Pa., and four children have blessed this union: Mary (a graduate of the Girls' High School, Lancaster, class of 1900), Roswell, Helen, and Allen Herschell. Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie are members of Grace Lutheran Church, of which he is serving as vestryman.

Socially Mr. Guthrie is a member of the Odd Fellows, being a past officer in Herschel Lodge, No. 123, and its representative to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. He also belongs to the Masonic fraternity, including Harrisburg Consistory 32nd degree. A Republican in politics, he was elected on that ticket to the city council, and has served in same with his well-known zeal and ability. He enjoys a wide and influential social and political connection, while personally, no man stands higher in the community than William H. Guthrie.

ADAM WISMAN. Among the prominent, successful and self-made men of Marietta is Adam Wisman, one of the well-established business citizens who is held in high esteem. His business is that of tin-smith, plumber and jobber, and on account of his reliability he has a large patronage which is steadily on the increase.

The birth of Adam Wisman occurred in Hesselndarmstadt, Germany, Oct. 27, 1846. His parents, Adam and Anna M. (Erhardt) Wisman, came to America in 1847 and settled at York, Pa., where the mother died in the same year; she was born in 1799. The bereaved husband continued to live in York, and remained there as a laborer until his second marriage. He wedded Catherine Dysert, making a comfortable home in York until his death in 1882, when seventy-nine years old. During life he was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. The children of the first marriage were: George, who died in Baltimore, Md., in 1897; Barbara, who married Henry Bernstock, a plumber of Wrightsville; and Adam, of this sketch. The children of the second marriage were: Lewis, of York; Mary, who married Andy J. Nickey, of Illinois, where she died; John, who was killed on the railroad in 1881; and William.

The home life of Adam Wisman was not a happy one for the little lad, after the death of his mother, and at the tender age of eight years he ran away, securing work with a kind farmer who lived four miles from the city of York. There he remained for two years, and then went back to the city, entering in the employ of Capt. John Hay, with whom he remained until 1859, and then acted as an errand boy for six months or until the opening of the Civil war. Among the striplings who enlisted Nov. 25, 1861, in Co. B, 3rd. Md. V. I., was Adam Wisman, but he was soon discharged on account of being too light for the service. Nothing daunted, the brave boy enlisted then in Co. I, 130th P. V. I., as a drummer boy, although it was his intention to carry a gun instead of a drum, and he efficiently served through nine months, re-enlisting in Co. B, 13th P. V. C., under Capt. H. H. Gregg, and served with gallantry until November, 1865, taking part in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and other great battles, and was in thirty-two engagements, but did not escape unharmed. His first wound was received from a gun shot, on the field of Chancellorsville, again a gunshot at Charles City Cross Roads, and a third wound was from a sabre on nose and chin, at Sycamore Church, where he was obliged to escape from the enemy in his underwear, as he was on his way to take a message to Gen. Grant. Mr. Wisman displayed his courage and endurance by never entering a hospital for care, but submitted to the rude and bungling assistance which the members of his company gave him.

After his return from the war Mr. Wisman entered as an apprentice in a shop some three miles from York, and received $40 for that year, and then went to York and worked for D. D. Dowdell for three years, under instruction. He then passed nine months in the Pennsylvania railroad shops, going from there to Goldsboro, Pa., where he opened up a tinsmith and plumbing business. This did not prove a good location, and he returned to York and worked there and in Wrightsville, at his trade, also doing some work in Lancaster, until 1874, when he came to Marietta and engaged for one year as a workman with Sterritt & Spangler, this association lasting for twelve years. In 1886 Mr. Wisman opened up a business of his own and since that time has done the principal business in tinsmithing and plumbing in this town.

On Jan. 26, 1868, in the village of Dillsburg, York county, Mr. Wisman was united in marriage to Miss Sarah J. Ziegler, and the children of this union are: Harry, who married Susan Starr; Lotta, who married John H. Smith, and lives in Marietta; Sarah J., deceased; Walter, who married Elizabeth Westenhoeffer, and resides in Marietta; Laura, at home; Mamie, who married Joseph C. Kline, of Klinesville, this county; George; Maud; Area; Horace; and James, Anna and William, deceased.

Mrs. Sarah J. (Ziegler) Wisman is a native of York, Pa., born in 1847, a daughter of Samuel and Charlotte (Danner) Ziegler. The former was a man of prominence, a saddler by trade, and the treasurer of York county for three terms. His death occurred in January, 1867, at the age of fifty-eight, and that of his widow, in 1872, at the age of fifty-two. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler were: James B., an attorney in York; Mary, deceased, who was the wife of Jonas Neice; Jacob, deceased; Emma, who married James B. Mundorff, postmaster at Mount Holly Springs, Pa.; Sarah J.; Samuel, deceased; Laura, who married William H. Lewellyn, of Marietta; Catherine, who married J. Krurg, of Hanover; Edward; and Daniel, of Hanover.

Mr. Wisman has taken a prominent part in Democratic politics in the county and city, and has been a member of the council for two years, his sensible and sound advice being of great value in civic affairs. His fraternal connections are with the G. A. R.; the I. O. O. F., Encampment No. 176; the Red Men, and he is president of the Pioneer Fire Co., an organization of much merit. The religious connection of the family is with the M. E. Church. Mr. Wisman is a man of large charities and generous impulses.

ISAAC HERR, an industrious carpenter in the township of West Lampeter, was born in the community where his life has passed since May 29, 1837, a son of Abraham and Anna (Stoner) Herr, and a grandson of Joseph Herr.

Joseph Herr was a native of Pequea township, and in his time an extensive farmer. His last years were spent in West Lampeter township. He was a man of fine character, of great liberality and broad charity. He married Miss Maria Forrey, by whom he had the following children: Abraham, the father of Isaac; Martin, a hotel keeper; Joseph, an undertaker and a carpenter at Willowstreet; David, who followed farming in Pequea and in Leacock townships, and died in the last named township; Barbara, who married Isaac Houser; Maria, who became the wife of John Harnish; and Anna, who married John Stoner.

Abraham Herr, the father of Isaac, was born Dec. 19, 1803, and he mastered the milling trade when a young man. After his marriage he located at the mill now known as Pugh's mill, between Lancaster and Hollinger, which he operated as long as his wife lived, when he took up farming and tobacco handling, going into cigar making on a small scale. On Jan. 26, 1832, he married Anna Stoner, who was born Feb. 9, 1806, and died Nov. 30, 1838. Abraham Herr died Feb. 18, 1885. Four of their children grew to maturity: Fannie, who married John K. Bender; Anna, who married George Leaman; Abraham S., living in Leacock township; and Isaac. The father of these children was a member of the Mennonite Church, and a man of character and standing in the community.

Isaac Herr learned the cabinet-making trade with his uncle Joseph at Willowstreet, beginning at the early age of fifteen years. On the completion of his apprenticeship he attended school a year, and then resumed his trade as a journeyman. After his marriage in November, 1860, he began operations for himself, and the following year he bought a half acre of land, where he erected a shop and a small house in which to live. As time passed and his family increased, his means grew larger, and from time to time his home was improved, increased and modernized, the shop having been moved to make room to meet the needs of the larger residence. Here Mr. Herr and his wife have lived for forty years, and reared a good family in peace and tranquility. Mr. Herr gives his attention to undertaking and carpenter work. In the years that have passed he has laid to rest many of the prominent people of this community, and his sympathizing spirit and kind heart, together with his unquestioned integrity and industrious ways have won him the confidence and esteem of the community. His sons, Abraham L. and Benjamin L., are now associated in business with him, under the firm name of Isaac Herr & Sons.

Mr. Herr was married Nov. 29, 1860, to Miss Mary H., who was born in East Lampeter township, April 28, 1837, a daughter of Samuel and Barbara (Heller) Leaman. This union has been blessed by a numerous family, of whom two are deceased: Barbara L., Jan. 30, 1862, is a seamstress, giving special attention to the making of burial robes, and for the past twenty years she has been a blessing to the community for her sympathetic services in the laying-out of the dead; Annie L., born Aug. 26, 1863, died Sept. 10, 1864; Lizzie L., born April 6, 1865, is the wife of Martin S. Zimmerman, of East Lampeter township; Hettie L., born June 7, 1866, is the wife of Frank S. Lefever, of West Lampeter township; Abraham L., born Aug. 29, 1867, married Miss Amanda Herr, and has his home in West Lampeter township, where he is engaged as carpenter and is also associated with his father in the undertaking business, being a graduate of the Philadelphia School of Embalming; Mary Ann, born June 18, 1870, is at home; Isaac L., born Aug. 22, 1871, graduated from the State Normal School at Millersville, class of 1895, lives at home, and is a teacher in the county schools, having begun the work in 1893, and he is also the township assessor; Samuel L., born Feb. 17, 1873, is a farmer at home; Emma L., born July 6, 1875, married Abraham D. Metzler, and lives in East Lampeter; George L., born Nov. 13, 1877, graduated at the State Normal School at Millersville in 1898, and has been a teacher in the public schools since 1898; an infant daughter, born Nov. 7, 1878, died unnamed; Benjamin L., born Jan. 29, 1882, was a student at the Millersville State Normal, and in 1901 was graduated from the Renouard School for Embalmers, is also associated with his father in the undertaking business.

Isaac Herr owns a fine farm of forty acres, on which he makes his home. Beginning his career with no capital save his strong heart and ready hand he accumulated with the assistance of his wife and the help of his children, a good property, and is classed among the well-to-do people of the county. The father, mother and all the children belong to the Mennonite Church.

SAMUEL SPRECHER. This gentleman was prominently identified with the industrial and civil life of Lancaster for a number of years prior to his decease in 1888. He was a civil engineer of note, having during his life time been connected with some of the largest enterprises in this part of the State, and being also identified with the Pennsylvania Railroad in the laying out of a good many of its feeders. He died from a severe attack of pneumonia, Oct. 15, 1888, in Denison, Iowa, while on his way to California for the benefit of his health.

Samuel Sprecher was a native of Lancaster, where he was born Nov. 5, 1850, son of Lewis and Lavinia (Baer) Sprecher. The Sprechers are one of the oldest and most prominent families in Lancaster county, the name having been a landmark in Lancaster on account of the old "Sprecher House," which for long years was the chief hostelry of the city. This was built by Lewis Sprecher, who was also the owner of the "Leopard Hotel," and a large amount of other city property. The old "Sprecher House" still stands on Duke street, and is still the property of the Sprecher family. The parents of Mr. Sprecher were leading citizens in the public and social life of Lancaster during their life time, and were identified with the Trinity Lutheran Church, of which they were active members. The following children besides Samuel were born to them: Jonathan, deceased at the age of thirty-five; Amanda, the wife of Enos Sheaffer, a farmer living in Leacock township; Solomon; Elizabeth; and Mary A., who died young. For further matter concerning the early history of the Sprecher family, the reader is referred to the sketch of George Sprecher.

Samuel Sprecher was reared amid the refining influences of a Christian home, and his early education was received in the private schools of his native town. He later entered Tuscarora Academy, where he was prepared for Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., from which institution he graduated in the course of civil engineering in the year 1874. For several years thereafter he was in the employ of the large contracting firm of Keller & Reilly in Lancaster. He then opened an office for himself, which he conducted until he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad. One of his early more important enterprises was the running of the boundary line between Chester and Lancaster counties. It was in the year 1878 that he was first in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and for the next five years he was busied in the laying out of branch lines. In the year 1883 he became superintendent of Robert H. Coleman's Conowingo Ore Mines, which position he held until they suspended work in 1884. He remained in the employ of Robert H. Coleman until his death. He was, during this latter period, interested in converting the mountain wilderness of Mt. Gretna, then the property of Mr. Coleman and since famous as a summer resort, into one of the most beautiful summer residence places in the State. In the fall of 1886 Mr. Sprecher was taken down with pneumonia, and partially recovering, a trip to California was advised by his physician, from which he returned much improved. In 1888 he again started for California to remain permanently. But he was not able to make the trip in his weakened condition, and he died as stated. Mr. Sprecher was a leading member of the Trinity Lutheran Church, and in political life voted the Republican ticket, although he took but little part in politics.

In 1875 Mr. Sprecher was married near Landisville on the present site of Bamfordville, Lancaster county, to Miss Lottie S. Buch, who bore him two children, and who still survives him: Lewis B., a shoe merchant of Lancaster; and Clay, mechanical engineer of Pittsburg, Pa. The mother of these children was born at Neffsville, Lancaster Co., Pa., daughter of Benjamin and Anna (Grube) Buch. Benjamin Buch was for long years connected with the cattle industry of Lancaster county, being a drover of large property. He died in the home now occupied by his daughter Aug. 22, 1899, at the age of seventy-three years, and now lies buried in Woodward Cemetery. He lived in Lancaster from 1869. His wife still survives, living in the home of her daughter; she was born Feb. 28, 1835, and is still hale and hearty, with the exception of some little rheumatic afflictions. She became the mother of Lottíe S., Mrs. Sprecher; Ada M., deceased; and Harvey M., now residing in the West. The Buch family were also pioneers of Lancaster county. Peter and Mary (Leib) Buch, the parents of Benjamin, were born and reared in Lancaster County. On the maternal side the grandparents, David and Martha (Stoner) Grube, were also natives of this county. Mrs. Sprecher and her mother are ladies of many gentle traits of character, and are much esteemed in the more exclusive circles of Lancaster, where they have passed a great part of their lifetime.

HON. DAVID W. GRAYBILL, one of the leading citizens and most influential men of Lancaster county, well known in both public and private life, and identified with some of its most important industries, is pleasantly located in the village of East Petersburg, where he manages a large tobacco business, of which he has made a great industry, which gives employment to a large force of men, and has opened up commercial relations with many other sections, much to the advantage of his locality.

David W. Graybill was born in East Petersburg, Lancaster Co., Pa., Nov. 10, 1853, and there he has resided all his life, with the exception of two advantageous years spent in study at the State Normal School at Millersville. His preparatory education was received in the public schools of his town, and after his return to his home from Millersville he engaged in business for some time prior to his marriage, in 1880, following which he set up a domestic hearth of his own and more extensively engaged in the tobacco business. Mr. Graybill has been a very active dealer in his line, and his progressive spirit has been of the greatest advantage to his locality, giving an impetus to other lines of trade. The years 1899 and 1900 were particularly prosperous, and Mr. Graybill found employment in his great warehouses for a force of 140 men. He has warehouses in both East Petersburg and Rohrerstown, three at the former place, and one at the latter, which was built in the fall of 1899.

Aside from his private interests, which are many and varied, for he is a keen, practical man, educated and alive to all that promises to conduce to prosperity, Mr. Graybill has always been animated by high ideals of business and civic life, and has probably done more than any other one citizen toward the permanent upbuilding of East Petersburg. His own residence is the most desirable in the village, and the creditable enterprise lately shown by the other citizens may, in a measure, be attributed to his example.

Mr. Graybill was one of the promoters of, and is also a stockholder and a director in, the Farmers' Creamery Company, of East Petersburg, and has taken a prominent position in the organization from the first. Politically he has been a strong man in the Republican ranks, taking an active part in all party matters, and was twice made a delegate to the State convention, first in 1883, and later in 1898. For some eighteen years he has served as a justice of the peace, having been elected to that position four different times. In 1879 he was made a notary, but resigned this office in order to accept the former one, which he also resigned in June, 1900, in order to accept the nomination from the Republican party for the State Legislature. During his service in the Legislature, in 1901-02, he served on the committees on Railroads, Senatorial and Representation Apportionment, Counties and Townships, and others. The bill known as Centralization of Public Schools received his hearty co-operation, and was passed largely through his efforts, and it was in favor of this bill that he made his maiden speech. He firmly opposed the bill for the removal of the State Capitol. He has received the nomination for a second term in the Legislature, by nearly 5,000 majority, at a primary election held March 15, 1902. For three years Mr. Graybill most efficiently served as township assessor in East Hempfield township, and for the fifth time he has had the honor of being chosen chairman of the Republican County Committee, an honor never before conferred, in his district, upon the same individual twice in succession. Mr. Graybill throws himself heartily into whatever he undertakes, and, where his judgment and sagacity sanction it, knows no such word as fail.

Fraternally Mr. Graybill is as prominent as he is in both public and private life, being identified with Lancaster Lodge, No. 43, F. & A. M., and also Lancaster Lodge of Perfection; is a past grand of Selah Lodge, No. 657, I. O. O. F., of Manheim; also a member of Meridian Sun Commandery, No. 99, Knights of Malta; Lancaster Castle, No. 126, Knights of the Mystic Chain; Red Rose Co., No. 20, Military Branch of Knights of the Mystic Chain, serving as assistant inspector general of the State, with the rank of brigadier general; past regent of Conestoga Council, No. 463, Royal Arcanum, and past councillor of the Loyal Addition; he is also a member of the Annual Annuity of the Mystic Circle, and was the first representative of this lodge to the grand lodge; and is consul commander of Cherry Camp, No. 83, Woodmen of the World. These many connections have made him better known through various parts of the State than almost any other citizen of his vicinity, and he is everywhere regarded as a high-minded, honorable man in whatever capacity he may be found.

David W. Graybill was married April 27, 1880, to Miss S. Alice Martin, a daughter of William K. and Susan C. (Getz) Martin, residents of East Hempfield township. To this union have been born three interesting children, all sons, Guy M., Reid M. and David W.

The religious connection of the family has been with Trinity Reformed Church, to which Mr. Graybill has been a most generous contributor, and in which both he and his estimable wife are highly valued for their many excellent traits of character. Mr. Graybill possesses the esteem of his neighbors, and is looked upon in the county as one of the progressive and honorable citizens who are, by sound business sense and individual application, the men who build up and prove of most value in any community.

JOSEPH G. KAUFHOLD, a grocer and one of Columbia's prominent business men and influential citizens, was born in that town Aug. 27, 1856, a son of Jacob and Catherine (Geislar) Kaufhold.

Jacob Kaufhold was born in Prussia, and his wife in Bavaria. The latter emigrated to this country in 1848, and Mr. Kaufhold's feet first touched American soil two years later. They were married in Columbia, where he was employed in a blast furnace. Jacob Kaufhold died in 1881, aged sixty, and his widow still survives, her home being in Columbia. She was born July 12, 1836. Jacob Kaufhold and his wife were the parents of nine children. The eldest, Sarah, is the widow of L. Bitner, of Columbia; Anna married Edward Pordahl, of Lebanon; John, the third child and eldest son, is a resident of Columbia; George J. is in the monument business in Columbia; Bartholomew and William have both seen service as United States soldiers, the former having done duty in Cuba, and the latter being at present stationed in the Philippines; Margerie, the youngest daughter, is at home and unmarried. Joseph Kaufhold's paternal grandparents were Joseph and Helen (Mockenruts) Kaufhold, of Germany. The former died in 1846, in his sixty-seventh year, and the latter in 1831, aged forty. Their children were Conrad, Lawrence, Duridale, Jacob and Joseph (second). The grandfather married a second time, after the death of his first wife. His second wife was Catherine Artleb, and the issue of the marriage was two children: John, who died in the Fatherland; and Bartholomew, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Kaufhold's maternal grandparents were George and Anna (Stegar) Geislar. They emigrated from Germany to America in 1848, and settled in Havre de Grace, Md. At that time they were youth and maiden, and no word of troth had passed between them. Two years thereafter they were united in marriage, and removed to Columbia, Pa. He worked in an iron furnace, and died in 1891, after reaching the ripe age of four score years. His wife died in 1897, aged eighty-six. Their children were four in number, Mr. Kaufhold's mother, Catherine, being the eldest. The others, all of whom are deceased, were Sarah, Margaret and John. Sarah married Martin Eppley, and died in May, 1900. John died in 1899, and Margaret in childhood.

In October, 1886, Mr. Kaufhold was married to Miss Elizabeth Hagel, at Columbia. The issue of the union has been four sons and eight daughters: Clara, Mary, Frank, Bartholomew, Anna S., Beattie, Gertrude, Margaret, Charles, Sabina, Joseph and Lucy. Gertrude and Joseph are both deceased, as is also Charles, who was Margaret's twin brother.

Mrs. Kaufhold was born at Chestnut Hill May 12, 1860, daughter of Peter Hagel and his wife, Sabina Spangler. Both her parents were Bavarians, and were married in the country of their birth, and both are now deceased. They emigrated to America in 1850, and, coming to Lancaster county, settled at Chestnut Hill. He was a farmer, but also a miner as well. Mr. Hagel lived to the age of sixty-nine, and died Jan. 25, 1881. His wife passed from life April 1, 1895, having reached the same age as her husband at the time of his demise. They were both Catholics, and sleep in the cemetery at Columbia. Mrs. Kaufhold was the sixth of seven children born to this union. Joseph and May, the two eldest, are both deceased; Mary is the wife of Anthony Seebower, a furniture dealer of Columbia; Anna is deceased; and Catherine, who is unmarried, makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Kaufhold.

Joseph G. Kaufhold faced the world in early life. That he has struggled successfully against its temptations and won the battle of life, alone and unaided, is chiefly due to his indomitable pluck, his tireless energy, and his unassailable probity. At the early age of twelve years he began working in a grocery store. For two years he followed this toil, being able to attend school for only six months. From 1871 to 1883 he found employment in a rolling mill. Industry, sobriety, patience and integrity enabled him to embark in the grocery business then on his own account. The same sterling characteristics have won for him a steady, uninterrupted success. He believes in the faith of his ancestors, and is a devout and practical Catholic. Politically he is a Democrat. He is a member of St. Joseph's Society, and of the P. C. B. L.

ALBERT M. HERR, wholesale florist and carnation specialist, located at Rider avenue and Elm street, Lancaster, is one of the prominent business citizens of the city.

Henry Herr, the grandfather of Albert M. Herr, was both a merchant and miller in Strasburg township, retiring from activity in 1861, and dying in 1894, at the age of eighty-one years. He married (first) Mary Rohrer, who died in March, 1838, at the early age of twenty-four years, leaving two children, Susannah, who is the wife of Daniel Musser, a prominent retired farmer; and Daniel K., the father of Albert M. The second marriage of Henry Herr was to Fanny Herr, widow of Samuel Herr, and his third marriage was to Charlotte, daughter of Francis Herr. The paternal great-grandparents of our subject were Martin and Susan (Buckwalter) Herr, farming people of Strasburg township, of Swiss ancestry.

Daniel K. Herr, son of Henry and Mary (Rohrer) Herr and father of Albert M., was born in New Danville, Pequea township, Dec. 2, 1837. Prior to his thirty-seventh year he engaged in milling in Strasburg township, and then began gardening, which business he followed for three years, the business developing into market-gardening and finally into that of florist, Mr. Herr being for twenty years one of the best-known and most successful wholesale florists in this part of the county. For the past four years he has made his home in Lancaster, but prior to that lived in Lancaster township. Mr. Herr has a large business for which he has most excellent accommodations, comprising four hot houses with dimensions of 100x18 feet, and with some 8000 feet of glass. He is a member of the Mennonite Church, and is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of Lancaster. In December, 1859, Mr. Herr was married in Lancaster township, to Miss Susan Musser, born in West Lampeter township, daughter of Dr. Martin Musser, who died March 3, 1870, at the age of thirty-five years, and was buried in Longenecker cemetery, in Lampeter township. The one child born to this union was Albert M., of this sketch.

Albert M. Herr was born July 19, 1862, in Strasburg township, and resided there with his father until his fourteenth year, accompanying him then to Lancaster. He became interested in his father's business, first assisting him and then thoroughly learning the same, and in 1881 began the business for himself. Mr. Herr's greenhouses cover an acre of ground, and he has 60,000 square feet of glass, his first building being done in 1888. At various times since he has made additions, and has introduced all of the latest improvements in floriculture, and his carnations and other specialties have gained for him a wide and deserved notoriety.

Mr. Herr is prominently identified with all of the Masonic bodies in Lancaster, and also belongs to the Mystic Shrine in Reading; is a member of the B. P. O. E., being one of the original fifteen members in Lancaster, and serving as secretary of the lodge for five years. He belongs to a number of horticultural societies, is secretary of the American Carnation Society, and is treasurer of the Florist Hail Association. In politics he is a Republican. Few men are better or more favorably known to the trade than is Mr. Herr, the deep interest he has taken in his line having enabled him to advance the science of floriculture very much.

On Feb. 24, 1897, Mr. Herr was united in marriage, in Philadelphia, to Miss Elizabeth Irwin, born in Sadsbury township, Chester county, daughter of Andrew and Mary (Clendenen) Irwin, the former of whom is a railroad carpenter, residing with his family in Philadelphia. One son, Daniel Irwin, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Herr. The family is held in high esteem in Lancaster.

CONRAD Z. HESS, one of the intelligent, progressive agriculturalists of Pequea township, was born there, Nov. 5, 1856. He comes from a family of Lancaster county whose members have always commanded the highest respect, being a great-grandson of Michael Hess. The last named bought a farm of 115 acres for five shillings—the place now occupied by the father of our subject.

Abraham Hess, the grandfather, was born in Pequea township, and there passed his entire life. He married Elizabeth Musser, and to this union three sons were born, one dying in infancy; Benjamin died at the age of eighteen months; and Abraham M. is the father of our subject. He was born in Pequea township in 1829, was educated in the common schools of the county, and began life for himself when twenty years of age, taking up farming which he has always followed. In the fall of 1850 he married Elizabeth Hess, and one son was born to them, Emanuel, who died in infancy. The mother died in the fall of 1851, and Mr. Hess afterward married Anna Zigler, of East Donegal township, by whom he had seven children: Conrad Z.; Benjamin, of Fulton township; Abram, of East Donegal township; Noah Z.; Ezra, deceased; Ezli, who died in infancy; and Mattie, wife of Paris Engle, of Columbia, Pa. Mrs. Anna (Zigler) Hess died in July, 1868. Abraham M. Hess then married Barbara Herr, who became the mother of four children: Annie, wife of Graybill Mann, of Manor township; Enos, of State College, Pa.; Barbara, who died in infancy; and Lizzie, who is at home. Mr. Hess is a member of the Dunkard Church, better known as the River Brethren Church, and he has been a deacon in same for a number of years. He has settled up a number of estates, and has been guardian for several families, a fact which testifies forcibly to the estimate placed upon his character and ability by those who know him well.

Our subject lived at home with his father until he was twenty-one years of age, meantime receiving his education in the common schools of the county. He then went to live with his uncle on a farm in East Donegal township for two years, returning home again for one year, after which he went to Quarryville, and engaged in raising tobacco for one year. He then purchased a farm of his father, in Quarryville, and conducted same for nine years, at the end of that time coming back to his old home and taking charge of his father's farm. Here he has remained to the present time.

Mr. Hess represents the Agricultural Insurance Co., of Lititz. He has proved himself in the management of his fine property, an able business man, and he is regarded by all who know him as a valuable citizen, one who works for the good of the community, as well as for his own advancement in life.

On Jan. 19, 1882, Mr. Hess married Ada Sue Keen, daughter of David Keen, of Eden township, and they are the parents of eleven living children and have lost two by death. Those living are: Anna Martha, Abraham Musser, Alice May, Ada Mary, David Avery, Martha Ann, Emma Rhoda, Ruth Lizzie, John Zigler, Beulah Viola, and Verna Pauline, all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Hess both belong to the Dunkard Church, known also as the River Brethren in Christ.

CHARLES EDGAR SHREINER, a well-known native citizen of Lancaster was born Oct. 1, 1863, son of the late Charles F. and Eleanor (Cox) Shreiner, more extended mention of the family being found in another part of this volume. Charles F. Shreiner passed away in July, 1865, and his widow, who was a native of New Jersey, in 1883. The children of their marriage were nine in number, the survivors being: William M., who is a printer in Sioux City, Iowa; Sallie A., and Charles Edgar, the well-known advertising man.

Charles Edgar Shreiner was given an excellent common-school education in Lancaster, and then spent five years in the grocery establishment of the late George Wiant, and the succeeding eight years in the service of the Pennsylvania railroad, in Philadelphia. Returning to Lancaster in 1893, he organized the Shreiner Advertising Co., with offices at No. 43 East Marion street, near the post-office. Although this company makes a specialty of outdoor advertising, it also engages in the business in other lines, much of its work commanding attention and admiration. That it has proved such a success is due to the energy and ability of its founder, and in it he supplies a want that has long been felt in this community.

In August, 1887, Mr. Shreiner was married to Miss Alice A. Hale, a daughter of John Hale, who is now a retired contracting carpenter, of Georgetown, Mass. Mrs. Shreiner came of distinguished ancestry, one of her forefathers being a Spofford, and belongs to the same family as A. R. Spofford, so long the librarian of the Washington Library. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Shreiner are: Helen Spofford, Sallie Agnes, Carl Hale and Anna Frances.

Fraternally Mr. Shreiner is connected with the Knights of Malta, while politically he is an ardent and active Republican. His religious rearing was in the Moravian faith, but Mrs. Shreiner is a Congregationalist, her ancestors long having been prominent members of that body, in New England. Few young men have made better business showings in the same time than Mr. Shreiner, his pleasant personality winning him friends, while his upright methods, and the excellent work turned out by his company, have gained him the confidence of even a critical public. It is no small matter to control a trade in which so large a city as Philadelphia attracts on account of its proximity. This Mr. Shreiner has been able to do, and his prosperity reflects not only credit upon him, but also upon the public spirit of the community.

JOHN RUPP BURKHOLDER, a wholesale grain dealer in the Northern National Bank Building, Lancaster, and at one time manager of the broker business of his father-in-law, Hon. A. H. Summy, belongs to a family long and favorably known in Lancaster county. His grandfather was Jonas Burkholder, who lived and died in the eastern part of this county.

Isaac Burkholder, father of John R., died in 1882, in West Earl township. He married Maria Rupp, daughter of Samuel Rupp, a well-known farmer of West Earl township, and they had fourteen children, thirteen of whom are living at the present writing; Samuel R., a farmer in Kansas; Joseph R., a horse dealer in Manheim township; Jonas R., a traveling salesman from Lancaster; Isaac R., a traveling salesman in Ohio; John R., our subject; Elizabeth R., wife of Wayne Carpenter, a farmer of Warwick township; Maria, wife of Frank Stauffer, a farmer of West Earl township; Susan, wife of Amos Dillman, a carriage builder at Farmersville; Annie, wife of J. Musser, a farmer of Lititz; Barbara, wife of J. M. Sheaffer, a merchant of Ephrata; Hattie, wife of B. Hoover, a farmer of New Holland; Emma, wife of Diller Sheaffer, a farmer of Bird-in-Hand; and Sarah, at home with her parents.

John Rupp Burkholder was born in West Earl township Jan. 25, 1856, and was educated in the public schools of the home district. Leaving school when sixteen years of age, he entered his father's flour mill, where he remained until 1880. For a period of about twelve years following he was engaged in the milling business in different mills along the Conestoga. In 1892 he came to Lancaster, and entered into a partnership with H. K. Keller, in the wholesale grain business, trading under the firm name of H. K. Keller & Co. In 1895 this partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Burkholder opened an office in the Northern National Bank Building, where he has since continued his grain business. In 1901 Mr. Summy bought out the broker business, which had been established on the second floor of the Northern National Bank Building, and Mr. Burkholder became his manager, conducting the broker business in connection with his grain offices. The broking is done through J. B. Fleschman & Co., of Philadelphia, with whom direct telegraphic communication is had. Genial and clever in his intercourse with the public, Mr. Burkholder has built up a handsome shipping trade, and is well and favorably known.

Mr. Burkholder was married, in 1883, to Miss Annie Summy, a daughter of Hon. A. H. Summy, whose history appears elsewhere. To this union has come one child, Guy Summy, born in 1886, who is now a pupil of the Boys' High School, Lancaster. Mr. Burkholder is of Mennonite descent. Politically he is a Republican, as are all the members of his family.

HENRY WEILL, dealer in driving, heavy draft and fine coach and saddle horses, with sale and exchange stables at Nos. 200-216 West Orange street, Lancaster, and also extensive dealer in leaf tobacco, was born in Alsace, France, March 16, 1860, son of Benjamin and Esther (Woertenslock) Weill, the former of whom was born in Alsace, the latter in Strasborg, France.

Benjamin Weill, the father was engaged in the horse business for a great many years, but retired in 1892 and resides in Alsace at the advanced age of ninety-two years. The mother of our subject died in 1873, at the age of forty-nine years. They had these children: Solomon, who engages in the horse business in the old home in France; Benjamin, also in the horse business in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Myer, also in the same business in France; and Henry, the subject of this sketch.

When our subject was but thirteen years of age he was deprived of the love and care of his mother by her death, and he left his home, working at various kinds of labor in his native country, until at the age of twenty years he found himself in Paris. After one year in that great city, he determined to reach America and make a career for himself. In 1881 he reached Lancaster, and with his brother Benjamin, began the buying and selling of horses, the partnership lasting for ten years, since which time he has carried it on with increasing success on his own account.

Mr. Weill is a self-made man, and has accumulated large means and established great business connections by his own efforts. The horse business is one with which he is thoroughly acquainted, being one in which several generations of his family have successfully engaged. Until 1899 he dealt both wholesale and retail, but since that year has retired from the retail business. In 1892 he built at a cost of $10,000, his fine sale stable to accommodate 100 horses, and has been a large horse exporter, exporting as many as 2,000 horses to London each year. Since 1897 he has been extensively engaged in the leaf tobacco business, and employs about fifty men in his warehouse. Few men in this locality have displayed better business judgment than has Mr. Weill.

On Aug. 26, 1884, in Lancaster, Mr. Weill married Julia Pioso, born in Alsace, France, who died May 24, 1895, at the age of twenty-nine years. Her children were. Adeline P., Beatrice P., Blanche P. and Rosa P. Mrs. Weill was a daughter of Lathrase Pioso, who came from Alsace with his family to Lancaster in 1881, and engaged in the horse business. He died in 1887, aged forty-five years. His widow resides with our subject at the age of sixty-one. On April 3, 1900, Mr. Weill was married to Rose Hirsh, born in Lancaster, daughter of Abraham Hirsh, a retired millinery merchant of Lancaster. Mr. Weill is a well-known and highly respected citizen of Lancaster, where he is liberal in his support of all public-spirited enterprises. He belongs to no political party. He is a member of the Jewish Synagogue, and is generous in his support of its work.

NOAH Z. HESS. Among the most esteemed residents of Pequea township is Noah Z. Hess, who is descended from a family of Lancaster county, whose members have always commanded the highest respect. Michael Hess, his great-grandfather, bought a farm of 115 acres for five shillings and the place is now occupied by the father of our subject.

Abraham Hess, the grandfather, was born in Pequea township, and there passed his entire life. He married Elizabeth Musser, and to this union three sons were born, one dying in infancy: Benjamin died at the age of eighteen months; and Abraham M. is the father of our subject.

Abraham M. Hess was born in Pequea township in 1829, was educated in the common schools of the county, and began life for himself when twenty years of age, taking up farming, which he has always followed. In the fall of 1850 he married Elizabeth Hess, and one son was born to them, Emanuel, who died in infancy. The mother died in the fall of 1851, and Mr. Hess afterward married Anna Zigler, of East Donegal township, by whom he had seven children: Conrad Z., of Pequea township; Benjamin, of Fulton township; Abram, of East Donegal township; Noah Z.; Ezra, deceased; Ezli, who died in infancy; and Mattie, wife of Paris.

Engle, of Columbia, Pa. Mrs. Anna (Zigler) Hess died in July, 1868. Abraham M. Hess then married Barbara Herr, who became the mother of four children: Annie, wife of Graybill Mann, of Manor township; Enos, of State College, Pa.; Barbara, who died in infancy; and Lizzie, who is at home. Mr. Hess is a member of the Dunkard Church, better known as the River Brethren Church, and he has been a deacon in same for a number of years. He has settled up a number of estates, and has been guardian for several families—a fact which testifies forcibly to the estimate placed upon his character and ability by those who know him well.

Noah Z. Hess was born in Pequea township, Jan. 15, 1861, and was educated in the common schools of the county, remaining at home until he was about twenty-six years of age, when he married Miss Ada Eckman, of Pequea, and began life for himself. After farming on his father's place for three years he purchased the place where he now resides, and continued in agricultural pursuits in which he has met with gratifying success. He owns a farm of 138 acres, one of the finest places in Pequea township, and he holds a high place among the best citizens of his community. Mr. Hess was admitted to the ministry of the River Brethren Church by Bishop Henry L. Heisey, in May, 1897, and officiates at the churches in Lancaster, Strasburg and Pequea.

Mr. and Mrs. Hess are the parents of four children: Mamie E., at home; Ira E., who died in infancy; and Ada E. and Roy Noah, at home.

JOHN JOHNS BAIR, the genial head of the coat and wrap department of Watt & Shand's big establishment, Lancaster, comes from a family who settled in Lancaster county early in the eighteenth century. Three brothers Bair came to America and secured from William Penn, a large land grant along Mill creek, extending from Spangler's mill to Hoover's mill, near the Welsh mountains. This tract extended for a distance of perhaps five miles, and the road which these three Bair brothers laid out was originally only an Indian foot path.

Of the descendants of these pioneers, John Bair became a prominent drover and farmer, and his son Levi E., was for many years a farmer, but is now living retired, by reason of ill health. Levi E. Bair married Josephine Johns, a daughter of the late Jacob Johns, a farmer of West Earl, and who, like the Bairs, came from an old and honored family. The marriage was blessed with six children, only two of whom are living: Levi R., of the class of 1902, Franklin and Marshall College; and John J.

John Johns Bair was born in Upper Leacock township, Oct. 12, 1867. His parents removed from that section when he was only two years old, and his education was obtained at Honey Brook, Chester county (where he was graduated from the high school), and at the State Normal School at Millersville. After leaving the State Normal, Mr. Bair returned to his father's farm, and, after spending two years there, entered the service of Messrs. Watt & Shand. This was in 1886 and he has remained there ever since. After mastering the details of a general mercantile business in the ever popular New York store, Mr. Bair took charge of the cloak department—a department which, largely through his exertions, has become noted all through the community. Mr. Bair does all the buying, and superintends all the selling of that important part of this big establishment. He is accepted as an authority on ladies' wraps by many of the best dressers of Lancaster.

Socially Mr. Bair is a member of the Knights of Malta, and Odd Fellows, being a past officer of the latter; politically he is a Republican; and religiously a Lutheran, being identified with Grace Lutheran Church. In all the walks of life he is a courteous, intelligent and conscientious gentleman.

WILLIAM S. GROFF. There are many lines of business successfully carried on in the large cities of the country, by those who have been reared in quiet country homes and there taught by excellent parents those principles which have contributed much to their later prosperous careers. Such is the case with William S. Groff, one of the well known fruit and produce merchants of Philadelphia.

Abram Groff, his grandfather, was a farmer and miller in West Earl township, where he died March 4, 1885, at the age of seventy-eight. His wife, Hettie (Wenger) Groff, died in 1852, at the age of thirty-five years, both of them being buried in the Groffdale cemetery. Mr. Groff had been long a leading man in his community, and for many years served as school director. His children were: Daniel W., deceased; Abram W., deceased; Maria W., who is the widow of John Graybill, of Upper Leacock township; Martin W., deceased; Samuel W., the father of our subject; Christian W., a farmer of West Earl township; and Hettie W., of Reading, Pa., who is the widow of Peter Snyder. The second marriage of Abram Groff was to Mrs. Catherine (Bare) Good, and one son was born to this union, Elam, now a retired farmer of Bareville.

Samuel W. Groff was born in West Earl township, May 19, 1839, and he remained with his parents until he had reached his majority, at that time taking charge of a farm in West Earl township, where he remained until his purchase of his present farm in 1886. On Dec. 22, 1864, he was united in marriage to Miss Susannah Sprecher, and to this marriage was born one son, William S., who is the subject of this biography.

Mrs. Susannah (Sprecher) Groff was born in Earl township, Nov. 3, 1841, a daughter of William and Susannah (Wenger) Sprecher, who were natives of Earl and Upper Leacock townships, respectively. Mr. Sprecher died in 1878, aged sixty-eight years, his widow surviving until 1898, dying at the age of seventy-eight, and both were buried in the cemetery attached to the Lutheran Church of

New Holland, of which they were consistent members. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sprecher were: Elizabeth, of New Holland; Susannah, the wife of Mr. Groff; Maria, the wife of George Groff, of Bareville; George, a farmer and supervisor in Brecknock township; William, a farmer of West Earl township; and John, Amanda and Louisa, deceased. William Sprecher was a son of George Sprecher, and his wife, Elizabeth Sheaffer; and Susannah (Wenger) Sprecher was a daughter of Joseph Wenger, of Lancaster county.

William S. Groff of this sketch was born in Earl township, Oct. 23, 1867, son of Samuel and Susannah (Sprecher) Groff. He was educated in the public schools of his district, and until he was ten years old he remained with his parents in his native township, and then accompanied them to Upper Leacock, where he continued until the age of sixteen. At this period he entered the store of J. D. Buckwalder, as a clerk, remaining with him for eleven years. When Mr. Stump purchased the business, he continued with the new proprietor for the succeeding two years, going then to Philadelphia where he engaged in his present business, which he has most successfully conducted ever since. Mr. Groff resides at No. 2223 Columbia avenue, Philadelphia, and is known as a highly esteemed citizen and upright man of business. Politically he is a Republican, and he takes a very active interest in public affairs.

On May 10, 1899, William S. Groff was married in Philadelphia to Miss Eva M. Myer, a daughter of the late Rev. Samuel and Amanda (Evans) Myer, of Upper Leacock township.

WILLIAM DAVID KING, a well known business man of Lancaster city, is descended from a very old and influential family of this county. His grandfather, Jacob King, was one of the pioneer coopers of the section, and his father, the late David King, was a leading grocer of Lancaster for thirty-five years. David King married Miss Margaret Ann Lewars, who belonged to a well known family of this city, and eight children were born to them, four of whom are deceased. Among those who have passed beyond was Dr. George A. King, for many years one of the most prominent physicians in Lancaster. The surviving children are Walter E., a telegrapher in the Western Union service, New York; W. Newton, extra cashier in the Third National Bank of Baltimore; C. Henry, who is assisting his brother, William D., in the wine and liquor business; and William David, our subject proper.

William David King was born in Lancaster thirty-eight years ago, and was educated in the public schools of this city. At an early age he entered his father's grocery store as clerk, remaining there several years, and then passing ten years as a clerk in the grocery store of Capt. J. L. Binkley. Leaving the Binkley establishment, Mr. King spent one year with D. S. Bursk, grocer, one year with Samuel Clark, grocer, and two years with A. A. Shaeffer, wine and liquor merchant, and on April 1, 1900, purchased and took possession of the extensive wholesale and retail wine and liquor establishment of the late S. G. Gensemer. It is located at No. 253 North Queen street. Mr. King has greatly increased the business since taking possession, for he has given it the closest personal attention, and had added largely to the trade.

Politically Mr. King is a Republican, but he takes no active part in politics. Religiously he is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church. Mr. King owns and occupies a beautiful cottage on the Philadelphia turnpike, in the eastern suburbs of the city, and his venerable mother, to whom he is devotedly attached, makes her home with him. His wife was Sadie Fisher, daughter of Henry Fisher, millwright of Salisbury township, Lancaster county.

WILLIAM L. SHOEMAKER, a farmer of Fulton township, was born Dec. 20, 1843, son of Jesse and Sarah (Lukens) Shoemaker (deceased), of Martic township. The father and mother originally resided in Montgomery county, Pa., and removed to Martic township during their younger days.

Jesse Shoemaker was a son of Joseph Shoemaker, who was a native of Montgomery county. Joseph Shoemaker was the father of four children: Abraham, Jesse, Charles and Lydia, all deceased. Jesse Shoemaker was born in 1796. His first wife was Miss Sarah Ambler, to whom he was married in 1825. One child, Hannah A., was born to this union and is now deceased. Mr. Shoemaker married (second) Miss Sarah Lukens, in 1828, and six children were born of this union, namely: Joseph, born July 9, 1829, is deceased; Enos, born Nov. 19, 1830, is deceased; Abraham, born May 12, 1832, is a farmer in Martic township; Martha Ann, born April 1, 1837, is deceased; Charles, born Nov. 2, 1840, is deceased; and William L., born Dec. 20, 1843.

William L. Shoemaker married Miss Alice A. Lamborn, daughter of Smedley and Margaret (Bolton) Lamborn, on Jan. 20, 1870. Mrs. Shoemaker's parents were of English origin. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker has been blessed with children as follows: Winona E., born Dec. 7, 1870, and is the wife of Harry J. Drennen, of Fulton township; Jesse, born Sept. 19, 1880, and died in childhood; and Lula M., born Oct. 30, 1888. Mrs. Shoemaker was reared on a farm and was one of eleven children. Her father, Smedley Lamborn, was born Jan. 6, 1807, and married, Dec. 22, 1830, Miss Margaret Bolton, who was born Aug. 26, 1810. He died Sept. 26, 1851, and his wife died Nov. 21, 1855. They had children as follows: George S., born Nov. 24, 1831, resides in Martic township; Aquilla B., was born Feb. 23, 1833; Emeline, born Sept. 30, 1834, is the wife of Joseph Shoemaker, of Martic township; Elwood, born Aug. 4, 1836, is deceased;

William L., born Jan. 6, 1839, is deceased; Mary Elizabeth, born June 22, 1840, is the wife of Thomas B. Hamilton; Sarah, born Nov. 8, 1842, is the wife of Jacob Brown, of Fulton township; Priscilla, born Jan. 19, 1844, is deceased; Alice A., was born April 14, 1847; Lucinda, born Aug. 22, 1849, is the wife of Benjamin Tennis, of Drumore township; and Lydia S., born Oct. 29, 1851, is the wife of Amos Smith, of Drumore township.

William L. Shoemaker was reared on his father's farm, and received his education in the public schools of his district. He chose farming as a vocation, and has followed that occupation ever since. His farm of 113 acres is finely improved and shows every evidence of careful care and cultivation. Mr. Shoemaker is also half owner in the old homestead, consisting of eighty-nine acres, in Martic township. He is a Republican in politics, and at present holds the office of president of the school board of Fulton township (he has been a member of the board for sixteen years), a position which is of considerable importance in the educational interests of the neighborhood. He and his family are members of the Society of Friends. He stands as one of the foremost men of Fulton township, on account of his well known probity of character and kindly disposition.

FRANCIS L. HERR, one of the prominent business men of Lancaster, treasurer and bookkeeper of the Lancaster Cork Works, was born near Strasburg, Pa., Aug. 3, 1844, son of Benjamin G. and Mary Emma Herr, and remained with his parents on the farm until his sixteenth year, in the meantime improving his educational opportunities to the extent of graduating from the high school and attending the State Normal School. Mr. Herr then located in Lancaster, and for three years was employed in the office of the clerk of Sessions court. Afterward he secured a position in the First National Bank at Strasburg as clerk and teller, but in June, 1863, at the time of the invasion of Pennsylvania by the Confederate army, he enlisted in Company D, 50th P. V. I. Three years later he assumed the management of a cotton plantation in Arkansas, owned by a Lancaster firm. Owing to ill health Mr. Herr was obliged to cut short his plantation experience at the end of a year and a half, and, in the hope of restoring his health, settled on the old homestead and farmed for several years. In 1870 he was employed by Jay Cadwell in his cork works, and from the position of bookkeeper rose to manager of the works, which position he held until 1874, when he resigned for the purpose of associating with others to establish the Lancaster Cork Works. This factory subsequently passed into the hands of George W. Dodge & Son, and was operated by them until 1891, when it was purchased by the Armstrong Cork Co., of Pittsburg, and has since been operated by this company in connection with their works in Pittsburg, Pa. These two works furnish four-fifths of the corks manufactured in this country. The Lancaster branch moved into their present factory in 1881, which has been enlarged from time to time, and now employs five hundred men and girls. Mr. Herr has been identified with the works during the whole time since they were first established.

In 1874 Mr. Herr was married to Sarah A. Myers, daughter of David and Elvina Myers, of Lancaster city. Mrs. Herr died Feb. 2, 1882, leaving two daughters, Mabel E. and Alice A. Mr. Herr is well and favorably known in business and social circles of Lancaster, and he has many friends to appreciate his financial ability and admirable personal characteristics. Politically he affiliates with the Republican party.

EPHRAIM H. REITZEL, SR. Mr. Reitzel is now in his sixty-second year, having been born Feb. 4, 1842. His life has been an active and useful one, and he is one of the honored veterans of the Civil war. He is a grandson of Conrad Reitzel, a weaver by trade, who emigrated to America from Switzerland, and settled in West Hempfield township, where he died. Mr. Reitzel's father was named Joseph. He, too, learned the carpet weaver's trade in early youth, and in later years that of a miller, but toward the end of his life embarked in business as a butcher, in which line he continued until his death, which occurred in 1867, after he had attained the age of four score years and four. He was distinguished for patriotism and personal courage, and carried a colonel's commission during the war of 1812, and settled in Lancaster county in 1825. While not a professing church member, he was a man whose standard of moral conduct was regulated by deeply seated Christian principles. He was twice married. His first wife's maiden name was Boner. She bore him four sons and two daughters, none of whom are living. Their names were: Jacob, Joseph, John (a teamster in the Union army during the Civil war), Samuel, Margaret and Elizabeth. His second wife, who has also passed away, was Elizabeth Mann, of Chester county, a brief sketch of whose family history may be found in a succeeding paragraph. She was a member of the Winebrennerian denomination, and died June 15, 1893, at the same age as her husband.

Ephraim H. Reitzel was the third child of his father's second marriage. The others were: William, Harrison, Augustus, Calvin and Sarah. William, now deceased, served as captain of Co. G, 2nd Reserves, P. V. T., during the Civil war, and was wounded in his country's service. Sarah is unmarried, and resides with her brother, Ephraim. The other children died before reaching mature age.

The first twenty-one years of Mr. Reitzel's life were passed in Mountville. At the age of nine he began working on a farm, and when fourteen years old found employment as a lime burner in the stone quarries. In his nineteenth year he commenced to learn the trade of blacksmith, but in 1862 entered the Pennsylvania Company's repair shops, remaining there until Feb. 15, 1864. He then enlisted in Co. G. 186th P. V. I., commanded by Capt. D. P. Billington, and remained in the service until he was mustered out, Aug. 13, 1865, at Philadelphia. On his return from the army he re-entered the service of the railroad company in his former position. After a few years he took the position of brakeman, and after eighteen months was made flagman. A year and a half later he was promoted to a conductorship, the duties of which post he continued to discharge with marked ability and unwearied fidelity until 1896. In that year an accident, caused by a defect in the air brakes, incapacitated him for further work as a conductor, he having sustained a fracture of several ribs, as well as other serious injuries. On his recovery he accepted the post of watchman, and in that capacity he is still in the employ of the company, which he has served so long and faithfully. He is a Republican in politics, and is a member of the Brotherhood of the Union, having been deputy grand chief Washington of the order in Lancaster county.

Mr. Reitzel was married in August, 1862, at Lancaster, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Andrew and Catherine (Fair) Sheriff. Her father was a successful farmer of Perry county, where she was born Feb. 13, 1843. She was the youngest of a family of seven children. John, the eldest, lives in the old homestead. Isaiah and Mary (who married Christian Hauss) are deceased. Conrad and David are farmers in Cumberland county. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Reitzel has been blessed with five daughters and seven sons. The eldest two, Lydia and Andrew, died in childhood. Henry married Anna English, of Columbia. Sarah is the widow of Joseph Schleif, who lost his life in a railroad accident, and lives with her brother Ephraim. Mary is the wife of Lewis Ibaugh, a brakeman, and resides in Columbia. Edward is a brakeman, and married Ida Witman; he, too, lives in Columbia. Adam died before reaching mature years. Albert and Ephraim are both railway brakemen, whose homes are in Columbia. The first named married Lillie Harman, and the latter lives with his parents. George is deceased. Catherine and Lucy are both unmarried and live at home.

Ephraim H. Reitzel's mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Mann, belonged to a family distinguished for ardent patriotism, as well as noted for the longevity of its members. Her paternal grandfather was William Mann, of Fallowfield township, Chester county. He married Jane Brown, a first cousin of the noted general, "Mad" Anthony Wayne, from which relationship it may be inferred that she came of fighting stock. She had four brothers, who served in the patriot army. John, David, Matthew and Eli. The two latter lost their lives in the massacre at Paoli. David was wounded and carried an English bullet in his body until his death. He and his brother John returned from the war and settled in Ohio. To William and Jane (Brown) Mann were born eight sons: James, John, Jonathan, William, Joseph, Samuel, Ezekiel and Eli. John Mann, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Reitzel, was also a Revolutionary hero. His wife was Anna Devine, a daughter of William Devine and Isabella Moore, who emigrated from Scotland to the American colonies during the troublesome times of the Revolution. Isabella (Moore) Devine lived to the very old age of one hundred and seven years, and sleeps in the burying ground of Upper Octoraro township, in Chester county. Jane Brown, the wife of William Mann, and the great-grandmother of E. H. Reitzel, lived to be one hundred and two years old. Her dust rests in a grave at Fallowfield. John and Anna (Devine) Mann were the parents of four sons and seven daughters, Mr. Reitzel's mother being the seventh child in order of birth. The others were Jacob, William, John, Samuel, Anna, Jane, Mary, Sarah, Hannah and Margaret. The warlike spirit of their ancestors fired the hearts of the sons, and two of them, although beyond the maximum limit of age for enlistment, entered the Union army. Anna married Emanuel Baughman, and three of their sons also fought under the Stars and Stripes throughout the Civil war, two of them dying upon the battlefield. Mrs. Baughman died in 1896 at the age of ninety. Jane Mann became the wife of John Mowrey, and removed to Michigan. She was the mother of three daughters, two of whom married soldiers who followed the flag South, and one of whom lived to mourn a husband who never returned. Mrs. Jane Mowrey is still living.

FRANK BURROWS TROUT is one of the most prominent figures in the business and social life of Lancaster, and is a brother of H. L. Trout, Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, whose sketch appears elsewhere.

Mr. Trout was born in Lancaster, and was educated in the public schools of that city. After graduating from the high school he became an apprentice at bookbinding with the late George Wiant, and at the close of his apprenticeship was recognized as an expert finisher. He took charge of the State Bindery, at Harrisburg, Pa., and after six months there removed to Washington, D. C., where he became one of the heads of departments in the Government book bindery, remaining there ten years. His next move was to Philadelphia, where for three years he was connected with the noted J. B. Lippincott Publishing Company. Then he came back to Lancaster, and, under the firm title of Trout & Shank, established a gents' furnishings store, shirt factory and laundry in North Queen street, where the Northern National Bank is now located. Continuing this until 1888, Mr. Trout bought the old Gruel Confectionery property, Nos. 166-168 North Queen street, which he completely remodeled, and he has now erected the handsome building known as the Trout Building on that site. In 1898 he closed out the gents' furnishing business, but still retains an interest in the laundry business, which is now a company concern. However, he has practically retired from business pursuits, and spends his time in looking after his varied interests.

Mr. Trout is a staunch Republican in politics. He is a member of the board of school directors of Lancaster from the First ward, now serving his second term. Fraternally he belongs to the Blue Lodge, F. & A. M., Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, Hamilton Club, the County Golf Club, and the Lancaster Road Drivers' Association, of which latter he is an enthusiastic member, for he not only loves a good horse, but always owns one. Socially he is popular everywhere; in brief, no man in Lancaster is more popular than Frank Burrows Trout. Religiously he is a Presbyterian.

JOHN LUTHER HAYS. In every community may be found representative citizens, who, as they begin to feel the weight of advancing years after an active life, have settled down in comfort to enjoy the fruits of former activity. Prominent in this class in Maytown, Pa., is John Luther Hays, who was born there Oct. 11, 1843, son of John and Elizabeth (Garst) Hays, natives of Adams county and of Marietta, respectively.

In young manhood John Hays came to Maytown, and here conducted a saddlery business, also engaged in raising tobacco, being among the first to believe in its successful culture. In the course of time he became one of the prominent men of the community, served as assessor for the township, upheld the principles of the Lutheran Church, and died in 1893, at the age of eighty-one; his wife survived until 1899. To this worthy couple were born: George, deceased; Maggie, who married Samuel Klair, and resides in Columbia; John; and Alice R., who married A. R. Houseal, a retired manufacturer of Maytown.

John Luther Hays remained under the parental roof until of legal age, assisting his father in the raising of tobacco, and then learned the carpenter trade, which became his principal business through life. Much of the excellent work to be seen in the building line in this vicinity testifies to the workmanship of Mr. Hays, and even yet he can show skill in the use of the tools of his trade.

Mr. Hays was married in Cumberland county, Pa., to Miss Elizabeth Johnstin, and to this union were born: Nellie J., now occupying the important post of matron of the Columbia Hospital; Maggie M., who died in 1897; Charles B., who died in infancy; and Rosella. Mrs. Hays was born in Maytown Oct. 11, 1841, a daughter of James and Leah (Lightner) Johnstin, of Maytown and York county, respectively, the former of whom was a mercantile clerk, and died at the age of thirty-three; the mother still survives, although an invalid, and resides with Mrs. Hays. The children born to Mr. and Mrs.

Johnstin were: Elizabeth; Harry, of London, Ohio; James F., a farmer of East Donegal; and Winfield S., of Middletown, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Hays were Francis and Catherine (Hawk) Johnstin, natives of Scotland; and the maternal grandparents were William and Esther (Brenneman) Lightner, of Greencastle, Pa., and of Lancaster county, respectively, the former a wealthy man who was said to have spent two fortunes, while the father of the latter was the noted Dr. Hans Brenneman.

In politics Mr. Hays is a Democrat, and has been one of the progressive and leading men in the vicinity. In 1864, with H. H. Klugh, he enlisted in the 195th regiment for service in the Civil war, and he was also a member and sergeant of Co. B, 114th P. V. I. His life has been a busy and useful one, and he well deserves the ease which he is able to take, surrounded by the respect and affection of friends.

WILLIAM B. MOORE, who has followed the carpenter trade very successfully for many years in Christiansburg, Pa., was born in Sadsbury township 4mo. 20th, 1846, son of Walker and Anna (Smedley) Moore, natives, respectively, of Sadsbury and Little Britain townships, this county.

Andrew Moore, the great-great-grandfather of William B., came from the town of Armagh, County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1723, and settling in Sadsbury township, Chester county, built the first mill to be erected in that part of the county. There he purchased land to the extent of a thousand acres, lying partly in Chester and partly in Lancaster counties. He was one of the Friends active in having the Meeting for Divine Worship established at Sadsbury in 1724.

John Moore, son of Andrew, grew to manhood, and became prominent in the agricultural and religious life of Chester county. He married Sarah Downing.

John Moore (2), son of John and Sarah, made his home in Sadsbury township, where he engaged in farming and blacksmithing. After his marriage he moved across the line into Lancaster county. He married Mary Walker, who was born in 1782, and died 9th mo. 5th, 1843. He died the 5th mo. 14th, 1864, at the age of ninety.

Walker Moore, son of John (2), and father of William B., was born 1st mo. 14th, 1810, and he died at the present home of our subject 9th mo. 29th, 1890. He married Anna Smedley, who was born 9th mo. 4th, 1818, daughter of Joseph and Rachel (Balance) Smedley, natives of Chester county, who removed to Lancaster county at an early day, and took a prominent place in the life of the times. Anna (Smedley) Moore died 1st mo. 10th, 1876, and was buried in Bart Cemetery, as were also the remains of her husband. Both were members of the Orthodox Society of Friends. Their family consisted of the following children: Rachel, who married William Wickersham, a farmer in London

Grove township, Chester county; Sarah and Susanah, who both died young; William B.; Joseph S., a bookkeeper at Galena, Kans., who married Clara Thoren, of Philadelphia; John W., deceased; Anna, who married Howard Webster, a farmer of New London township, Chester county; Asahel, a farmer and surveyor, who lived and died in Lancaster county, and who married Hannah Mendenhall, of Chester county; Pascal, a carpenter, who married Anna Mendenhall, of Chester county, and is now deceased; Caleb, a carpenter in Quakerville, Kans., who married Mary Harvey, of Spring River, Kans.; Joshua, who died young; and Mary, who married Eugene Scott, a grocer at Malvern, Pennsylvania.

William B. Moore lived with his parents until 1864, when he began the carpenter trade with a cousin, Truman C. Moore, with whom he remained twelve years. He then bought a farm in Sadsbury township, on which he remained sixteen years, and which he still owns. In 1891 he gave up farming, and moving to Christiana, he has since followed carpentering, although practically living retired. For five years he efficiently served as supervisor, one year as tax collector, and at the present time he is treasurer of the Christiana Fire Co., and of the Christiana Building and Loan Association. His political faith is that of the Republicans. In his religious belief he adheres to the faith of his fathers and belongs to the religious Society of Friends. Photography has furnished him a pleasing recreation, and he has many fine views of old buildings and interesting scenes in Lancaster county.

William B. Moore has been twice married. On 5th mo. 28th, 1874, in New London township, Chester county, he wedded Phoebe J. Moore, who was born in Sadsbury township, Chester county, in 1847, and who died 4th mo. 10th, 1876, the mother of one child, Anna E., born 12th mo. 6th, 1875, and died 7th mo. 10th, 1876.

Phoebe J. (Moore) Moore was a descendant of Andrew Moore, a farmer of Lancaster county. In 1762 he built a stone house, in what is now Christiana, as a home for his family, and this house stood until 1894, when it was taken down by Isaac Slocum, and the present house built on the site of the old one. Andrew Moore died in Harrisburg while on his way to Center county, Pennsylvania.

Jeremiah Moore, son of Andrew, was born in Sadsbury township. He was afflicted with lack of power of speech and hearing from birth, but although thus afflicted he made a success of life, and proved himself a good business man, being both a millwright and a manufacturer. His wife, Phoebe Jones, was born in Chester county.

Jeremiah Moore (2), son of Jeremiah and father of Phoebe J., was born 5th mo. 12th, 1803, in Chester county. When he was four years old he was brought into Lancaster county by his parents, and remained in this county until his marriage, when he settled in Chester county. By occupation he was a farmer and undertaker. He married Elizabeth W.

Ely, of Solebury, Bucks county, who died 2nd mo. 12th, 1874, at the age of seventy-one. He died 1st mo. 11th, 1887, and was laid to rest beside his wife in New West Grove cemetery in Chester county. They were both members of the religious Society of Friends. Their children were: Mary E., who married Benjamin McFadgen, of Chester county; Sarah M., who married M. P. Wilkinson, and after his death Joseph J. McFadgen, both of Chester county; Anna M., who married David Balderson, of New Hope, Bucks county; Levi P., who married Elizabeth L. Paxson, of Chester county, and is deceased; Elizabeth E., who is the present wife of William B. Moore; and Phoebe J., deceased wife of William B. Moore.

On 5th mo. 28th, 1878, William B. Moore married for his second wife, Elizabeth E. (Moore) Michiner, born 3d mo. 7th, 1843.

JOHN K. DIEM, who has lived retired since 1891, was for thirty years one of the most energetic business men of Intercourse, Lancaster county, engaged in several lines of industry. Mr. Diem deserves special credit for the unusual success he achieved, as he commenced life with no financial assistance, and he is a self-made man in the truest sense of that often misused term.

Our subject is a native of this county, born April 6, 1842, in Salisbury township, and is of German descent in the paternal line, his grandfather, John Diem, having been born in Germany. The latter married Hannah Kennedy, a native of Lancaster county. William Diem, father of John K., was born in Lancaster county, and here passed his entire life, dying in Salisbury township in 1880, at the age of seventy-two. He was a shoemaker by occupation. He married Maria Moyer, also a native of Lancaster county, who died in 1890, aged seventy-eight years, and both rest in the Pequea Church cemetery in Salisbury township. Their religious connection was with the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Diem was one of the respected men in his community, and was active in local affairs, serving as township assessor. Of his children, Catherine married Daniel D. Warfel, and lives in Salisbury township; Elizabeth, of Philadelphia, Pa., is the widow of James Ayres; Mary, Mrs. David Kurtz, is deceased; John K. is mentioned more fully below; Ellen, Mrs. Foreman, resides in Lancaster; Hannah is the wife of Edward Ranck, of Salisbury township; William is a contractor and builder in Chester county, this State; Hettie is the widow of William Cofroth, of Salisbury township; Bellmina lives in Philadelphia; Christ, a contractor and builder, is a resident of Malvern, Chester county.

John K. Diem received his education in the common schools, and remained under the parental roof until he was eighteen years of age, since when he has fought life's battles on his own account. Having served an apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade, he followed same for a quarter of a century, from 1860 to 1885, in time taking up contracting and building. He also engaged in the undertaking business, conducting a large number of funerals in his locality. Meantime, in 1884, he added coal and lumber dealing to his other interests, and continued in that line until his retirement, ten years ago. Mr. Diem's patrons found him uniformly reliable and straightforward in every transaction, and this fact, taken into consideration along with a faculty for good management and sound judgment, accounts for the abundant success which rewarded him in all his undertakings. In the accumulation of a comfortable competence he has retained the respect of all his associates, and he is passing his days among friends gained by years of upright living and devotion to duty. Mr. Diem owns a fine farm, which his son cultivates. Since 1901 he has been engaged in the wholesale tobacco business, packing, etc. His strict attention to business has prevented him from taking any active part in public affairs beyond the casting of his vote, by which he usually supports the candidates of the Republican party.

Mr. Diem has been twice married. His first union, with Miss Margaret Parmer, was celebrated in 1863, in Salisbury township, and was blessed with children as follows: (1) Alfred E., of Philadelphia, is an undertaker; he has married twice, first to Miss Susan Hoar, subsequently to Miss Phoebe Betz. (2) Henry W. is married and living in Wellsville, Ohio, where he is foreman in the Pennsylvania Railway Shops. (3) John W., a butcher of Lancaster, married Anna Bowermaster. (4) Mary A. is the wife of Ulysses Musser, of East Lampeter township. (5) Walter S., married and living in Gordonville, is a cigar box manufacturer. (6) Edgar E., a farmer of Leacock township, married Carrie Mowery. (7) Margaret married Amos Brubaker, a farmer of Upper Leacock township. (8) Emma is the wife of Jesse Bowermaster, of Lancaster. (9) Susie married Daniel Bork, a boot and shoe merchant of Lancaster. (10) Annie E. married Milton Woodward, of Coatesville, Chester county. The mother died in 1881, aged thirty-seven years, and was buried in Leacock cemetery. She was born in Earl township, this county, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Bowers) Parmer. In 1884 Mr. Diem married, in Upper Leacock township, Miss Emma Bender, and they have had four children, Nettie V., Elsa G., Estella L. and Lloyd F., all still living at home. Mrs. Emma Diem was born in 1854, in Upper Leacock township, a daughter of Kinzer D. and Leah (Berkenbine) Bender.

Kinzer D. Bender first married Mary Weidler, and of the children born to this union, Franklin is a retired farmer, now making his home in Mechanicsburg; John, deceased, was a farmer of Upper Leacock township; Henry died young; Mary married Jacob Burkholder, of Upper Leacock township; and William K. is a resident of Strasburg. The second marriage of Mr. Bender was to Susan Weidler, the sister to his first wife, and one son was born of this marriage, Weidler, who died when grown to maturity. The third marriage of Kinzer Bender was to Leah Berkenbine, and to them were born: George, of Lancaster; Emma, who married John K. Diem; Kinzer, of Upper Leacock township; Anna, who married Edward Sutton, a traveling agent; and Salome, deceased. The father died in September, 1887, at the age of eighty-three years, and was buried in Heller's Church cemetery. The mother is still living in Lancaster City. She is a member of the Evangelical Church, as was also her husband.

JACOB C. PFAHLER (deceased). By their lives men win the imperishable respect, affection and gratitude of their fellow citizens, if deeds and daily habits are of noble type. When the name of Jacob C. Pfahler is spoken, it is with kindness, respect and true regard. The career of Mr. Pfahler at Columbia was one of earnest endeavor, crowned with deserved success. For more than half a century he was a prominent citizen of that borough. As a youth of sixteen years, about 1831, with hope and ambition to live a worthy life, with principles of rectitude and righteousness firmly implanted in his nature, he came to Columbia, and there he continued to reside, one of the borough's most estimable citizens, until his death, Sept. 10, 1899.

Christopher Pfahler, his father, migrated from Germany, his native land, to America when a lad, and in 1803 settled in York county, Pa. There he followed farming and the trade of turner, which he had acquired in the Fatherland. He married Catherine Hilderbrand, and of their five sons Jacob C., born Jan. 13, 1815, was the eldest. Henry, late a resident of Columbia, was the last survivor.

As was common sixty or seventy years ago, Jacob C. Pfahler acquired a trade, that of a saddler, and that vocation he followed at Columbia for a period of sixty-five years. The most estimable character which he developed won him the friendship and affection of all who knew him. During the war he served as burgess, and for several years was councilman. For a period of forty-two years he was treasurer of the Columbia Public Grounds Co. He was also treasurer of the Mt. Bethel Cemetery Co., of the Columbia & Marietta Pike Co., and of the Pennsylvania Bible Society, holding these offices at the time of his death. In his younger years he was a Democrat, but later in life supported the principles of the Republican party. Mr. Pfahler was a man of deep and sincere religious convictions. Early in life he became connected with the Presbyterian Church, and in 1870 became an elder in the church, continuing in that official capacity until his death.

The marriage of Jacob C. Pfahler and Sarah J. Schnaeder was solemnized at York, Pa., in 1839. The wife died March 23, 1868, aged forty-nine years. Two children were born to them: Charles H., who died unmarried in 1891; and Mrs. Jemima M. Truscott, who died July 5, 1901, and who was the solace of Mr. Pfahler in his declining years. Ill health had obliged him in 1881 to retire from active life, and his later years were made pleasant by the ministrations and care of his daughter. She succeeded him as treasurer of the Pennsylvania Bible Society.

Jacob Pfahler possessed those charitable and broad views of life which distinguished the true nobleman. His business talents and application had gained for him a deserved competence, but financial success only deepened and mellowed the governing principles of humanity and charity which marked his entire career. His loss has been keenly felt not only by his immediate friends but by the wide circle of acquaintances with whom his memory will linger long as an inspiration to that which is best and highest in mankind.

PETER FOREMAN. The history of the Foreman family in America begins with the coming of Frederick Foreman from Germany, to make his home in Berks county, Pa., where he worked as a day laborer, and lived to be over eighty years old. His religious affiliations were with the Lutheran Church, and his career in life, though lowly, was in every way honorable.

Peter Foreman, his son, and the grandfather of Peter Foreman, whose name appears above, spent the most of his life in Berks county, where he was born. A few years before his death at the age of seventy-two, he came into Lancaster county to make his home. A shoemaker by trade, he followed that occupation the most of his life. Elizabeth Styer, his wife, was a native of Lancaster county, and became the mother of a large family of children: John, the father of Peter Foreman; Samuel, a collier in Caernarvon township; Daniel, who is living at Morgantown, Berks county, where he followed the carpenter trade for many years; Katie, who married Adam Styer, of Caernarvon township; Eliza, who married Nona Quaintance, of Reading, Pa.; Mary, wife of Charles Thomas, of Philadelphia; Sarah, who wedded Thomas Murphy, and lives in Illinois; Rebecca, wife of William Conway, of Caernarvon township, and who now has her home in Philadelphia; Ellen, a twin sister of Daniel, and who died unmarried.

John Foreman was born Nov. 4, 1816, and died Oct. 2, 1893. Although born in Berks county, the most of his life was spent in Lancaster county, where he owned an eighty-acre farm two miles northeast of Churchtown. A successful farmer and a self-made man, he was an enterprising and public-spirited citizen of the community, taking a deep interest in the welfare and progress of his locality. His farm was wild and uncultivated when it came into his possession, but under his industrious and practical management was thoroughly improved, and equipped with buildings, machinery and everything needed for its perfect cultivation.

Mr. Foreman was married March 14, 1837, to Rachel Pierce, a daughter of Edward and Elizabeth Pierce. Mrs. Foreman was born in Lancaster county Nov. 6, 1816, and died April 20, 1898. They had a family of twelve children, as follows: Elizabeth died unmarried; Catherine is the widow of Thomas Nelms, of Chester county; Martha and Margaret, twins, of whom Martha married Wash Woods, of Pittsburg, and Margaret became the wife of John Menzer, of New Holland; Elizabeth (2) died unmarried; Peter; Abraham is a laborer at Morgantown; Sarah is the wife of Frank McClellan, of Pittsburg; John died young; Mary Jane married J. L. Black, of Morgantown; Clement lives in Birdsborough, Pa.; and Abner died young.

Peter Foreman was born Dec. 25, 1844, and spent the first sixteen years of his life on the farm, receiving his education in the public school. At that age he began working for wages, and was engaged in this way until he was twenty-five years of age, when he married and rented a farm, beginning that career in which he has passed his life. For some years he operated rented property; but in 1884 bought his present farm, consisting of seventy acres just north of Churchtown, which he has greatly improved with fine farm buildings, making it one of the fine country homes in this part of the county. Mr. Foreman and his worthy wife began at the bottom with little resources, and they have, by patient persistence in industry, thrift and integrity, risen to an enviable standing among the leading and influential people of the county. While following general farming in the main, Mr. Foreman has made a specialty of tobacco culture, and is said to be the most extensive tobacco grower in the eastern part of Lancaster county. The Havana Seed is raised by him, and he furnished the tobacco for the Lancaster county exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago. Mr. Foreman also deals in fertilizers in connection with his farming. In his politics he is a staunch Republican, and takes a deep interest in the welfare of the party. He is a member of the township board of education, and has served as supervisor. He has also been a member of the Republican county committee.

Mr. Foreman was married Feb. 8, 1870, to Miss Susan Foreman, a daughter of John and Mary (Bartman) Foreman, natives of Lancaster and Montgomery counties, respectively. Most of their married life was spent in Lancaster county, but their last years were passed in Chester county, where the father died at about the age of seventy years, and the mother at about sixty-five years. The father was a forgerman in the iron business. They were both members of the Methodist Church. Jacob Bartman, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Foreman, was an undertaker and cabinet maker, and also owned a farm in Montgomery county. Of the children of John Foreman, Henry is a resident of Safe Harbor, Lancaster county; Matilda is the widow of John Slater, of Philadelphia; Catherine married the Rev. Ben Christ, and died in Minnesota; William was a soldier in the Civil war, and was killed in the Seven Days' battle in front of Richmond; Mary is the widow of Isacher Freeman, and lives in Chester county; Susan is Mrs. Foreman; Edward is in Philadelphia; Mahlon is in Philadelphia; and two children died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Foreman have seven children: Walter, at home; Henry, a hat finisher at Reading, who served in the Spanish-American war for eight months, being in the front in Porto Rico, and mustered out a corporal (he married Miss Agnes Ober); Bessie, at home; Mary, a seamstress at Philadelphia; John, at home; Rachael, a student at the Reading Hospital Training School; and James, at home. The Foremans are all Methodists, and Mr. Foreman is a trustee of the Church. The good lives of the various members of this notable family well entitle them to honorable mention in this book of men who have done things, and who have lived for the good of their kind in Lancaster county.

PHILIP D. REA. Among the leading and prosperous farmers of Drumore township is Philip D. Rea, a son of the late William and Sarah Ann (Dranker) Rea, of Sadsbury township.

William Rea, the father, was born March 5, 1811, while his wife was born in 1819; he died Oct. 14, 1881, and she passed away Nov. 8, 1899. William Rea was a son of James Rea, and James Rea had the following family: William; Henry; Eben; Jefferson; Robert; Louisa; Eliza; Mary; and Hannah. The great-grandfather, also James Rea, was born on board ship in the middle of the Atlantic ocean, while his parents were on their way to America, and he was of Scotch-Irish descent.

William Rea was a farmer by calling and the father of the following family: Amor, a farmer of Bart township; Mary, the wife of Samuel Fogle, of Christiana; Miss Hannah, on the old homestead; Philip D., of Drumore; Adam T., unmarried and residing on the home farm in Sadsbury; Miss Sarah, a teacher in the Lancaster county schools; Elizabeth, wife of Gilbert Smith, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Miss Emma, at home; James, of New York City, a teacher in a business college and the youngest of the family. The father was a stone mason and bridge builder by trade, and helped to build the old Georgia Central railroad bridge that was destroyed by Sherman's army on their march to the sea.

Philip D. Rea was married, on Feb. 11, 1876, to Miss Eliza McGowen, a daughter of John and Catherine (Nott) McGowen, of Sadsbury township, and they were also of Scotch-Irish descent. Mr. and Mrs. Rea have had the following children: Catherine, wife of Charles Evans, of East Drumore township; E. Noble; and Hiram M.

Philip D. Rea was educated in the common schools of his township, and at the Academy of Christiana. He early began life for himself, and he now owns one of the best farms in southern Lancaster county. In politics he is a Republican, and throughout the neighborhood he is highly respected and esteemed as a good citizen and obliging neighbor, and as a man worthy the confidence of his fellow townsmen.

WILLIAM KAHL. The wealth of encouragement emitted from the life of William Kahl, former brick manufacturer of Lancaster, is perhaps the greatest legacy left by this intrepid and remarkably successful man. His life story moves with steady and unswerving persistency from the unwilling bound-child of tender years to his marriage with fifty cents in his pocket, and on through a splendid soldier service in the Union ranks, to the possession, at the time of his death in 1888, not only of an honored and influential name, but of eighteen houses in Lancaster, besides one of the largest, best equipped, and best paying brick manufactories in the county.

A native of Marietta, Pa., Mr. Kahl was born in 1821, and was third in the order of birth of the children of Frederick S. and Elizabeth (Boas) Kahl, also born in Lancaster county, Pa. Of the other children of the family, Henry is deceased; John was for years the partner of his brother William, but is now deceased; Mary married John Kuhns, a tobacconist, and is deceased; and Lavinia became the second wife of Mr. Kuhns, and is also deceased.

When very young William Kahl was bound out to service, but was dissatisfied and ran away. He finally brought up in a comb factory, where he remained for several years, and in 1847 entered the brick yard owned by Jacob Shirk, in time advancing to the position of manager. During the several years thus employed he gained a fair knowledge of the business which was to stand him in such excellent stead in later life, and in 1855 started a like business for himself with his brother, John, as a partner. He purchased the site of the present home of his widow, one block extending from Lemon to James streets, Mary and Pine streets having since been opened through it, and there he built his kilns and general appurtenances, his brother having a half share in the whole. During the war the brother managed the business, and upon the return of William from service, he purchased his brother's interest, and continued until the brick possibilities of the land were completely exhausted. He therefore purchased another tract of ground, and erected larger and more modern manufacturing appliances, and for the remainder of his life made brick by steam power, and in increasing quantities. In the meantime the land comprising the site of the former plant was undergoing a change from a manufacturing center to one of the residence parts of the town, for Mr. Kahl erected many houses thereon, and in fact was responsible for the upbuilding of the greater part of the northwestern portion of the town. He furnished brick for many of the prominent buildings in Lancaster, and the quality of his product was as superior as skill and long experience could produce. At the time of his death he had an order for a million brick, which order was necessarily cancelled.

No more gallant and enthusiastic soldier left growing and responsible interests to shoulder arms in a just cause than Mr. Kahl. In 1861 he enlisted in Co. E, 79th P. V. I., and served until his discharge at the end of three years, Oct. 3, 1864. After a short visit to his home he re-enlisted March 1, 1865, in Co. A, 87th Regulars, was attached to the 1st Brigade, and discharged after the Grand Review up Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, June 25, 1865. He saw much of the terrible and grewsome side of warfare, and participated in most of the historically interesting battles. Among other adventures he was wounded by gun shot in the calf of his leg, and his eyes were weakened by sap from the cedar trees. Thrice captured, the third time he escaped with no clothes on, and swimming the river, succeeded in joining his regiment. He was promoted to the position of wagon master.

On July 19, 1846, in Lititz, Pa., Mr. Kahl married Anna E. Edgerley, a native of Lancaster, and sister of Capt. Edward Edgerley. Mrs. Kahl, who died Jan. 17, 1902, at the age of eighty years, was the mother of six children, viz: Fred S., deceased; William E., deceased; Jacob, deceased; Sarah L.; Gideon S., of Lancaster; and Charles, deceased. Mr. Kahl was identified with the I. O. O. F., the K. P., and Post No. 405, G. A. R., and he was a member of the Lutheran church. He was a man of large heart, and practical generosity, and the nobility and usefulness of his life appealed to all with whom he came in contact. His death occurred just one day previous to the forty-second anniversary of his marriage.

HENRY E. MUSSER, M. D. For four generations the name of Musser has been identified with the history of the successful practice of medicine in Lancaster county. According to the best authenticated reports, the first of the family to settle within that shrievalty was Dr. Benjamin Musser, who took up his home in Manor township about the middle of the eighteenth century. Details as to his career are wanting, but the fact that he was twice married is well established. His first wife was a Miss Nicely, and seven children were born of this union. After her death he married Maria Souders, the issue of their marriage being three sons and two daughters: Benjamin, Jacob, Martin, Martha and Lizzie. Dr. Benjamin Musser was the great-grandfather of Dr. Henry E., and Martin (his second son) was the grandfather. Mention of the latter is made in the succeeding paragraph, but a brief reference to collateral genealogical lines is of interest. Jacob, the eldest son of the second marriage of Dr. Benjamin Musser, was born Jan. 8, 1771; he married a daughter of John and Catherine Nissley, and died March 4, 1840. Benjamin, born Aug. 5, 1799, died March 7, 1824; he married a daughter of Christian and Barbara Kendig. Martha and Lizzie married John and Abram Hess, respectively.

Following down the direct genealogical line of Dr. Henry E. Musser, the historian finds it necessary to pursue the fortunes of Martin, the third son of Benjamin, and the direct antecedent, in the third generation, of this successful and popular physician. Martin Musser was born March 5, 1793. He read medicine under the enlightened, kindly tutelage of his father, and at the age of twenty-two began the practice of his profession. To his duties he brought both skill and patience; yet the life of a country practitioner, with all the care and toil incident to it in those (comparatively) early days, was not to his liking. He followed the life for twenty years and then resolved to seek a more quiet mode of existence. Accordingly, in 1835, he purchased a farm, on which he passed his remaining years, dying Aug. 9, 1849. His wife's maiden name was Ann Hostetter, and his children were nine in number, named Jacob, Benjamin, Henry, Martin, Daniel, Martha, Susan, Anna and Emma. All the sons, with the exception of Daniel, followed family tradition, and treading in ancestral footsteps, became students of the divine art of healing. The home of Jacob was in Smoketown, where he built up a large and successful practice, and where he died; there, too, he married Martha Herr. Benjamin practiced in Strasburg township, and died there; he was three times married; first to Letita Neff; second to Naomi Herr; and third to Catherine Buckwalter. Henry was the father of Dr. Henry E. Musser. Martin (the fourth son of Martin, Sr.) practiced medicine successfully in Cumberland county, but died in early manhood. Daniel is the husband of Susan Herr, and is leading a retired life at Lancaster, Pa. Martha married John F. Herr, and both she and her husband are deceased. Susan (deceased) became the wife of Daniel Herr. Anna married Theodore Herr; of Denver, Colorado, and died in the West. Her younger sister, Emma, is the wife of Theodore Herr.

Henry Musser, third son of Dr. Martin, and father of Dr. Henry E., was born in Lancaster county Oct. 5, 1822. He supplemented a good rudimentary education by a more or less desultory study of medicine, but never entered upon its practice. Instead, he became a successful farmer and was always a man of broad, progressive ideas. As a citizen he was public-spirited, with an eye ever open to the general good; while as an individual he closed neither his ear, his heart nor his purse strings to a tale of distress. His fellow citizens appreciating his character, regarded him highly, recognizing not only his moral worth but his natural aptitude for solving sociological and educational problems, as well. For three years he served as clerk of the court of Quarter Sessions (1868-71). He also served for several years as director of the poor, and no public man or private citizen in Strasburg township has proved himself a more ardent or better enlightened champion of public education than he. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Brenne-man. Two sons were born to them, Milton B. and Henry E. Both studied medicine, the elder receiving his diploma from Jefferson Medical College in 1868, and at once beginning practice in Philadelphia. His success was pronounced from the first; indeed, phenomenal for so young a man; but it was cut short by his death, which occurred in 1888. He married Caroline S. Swain.

Dr. Henry E. Musser was born Feb. 17, 1852. He enjoyed exceptionally good educational advantages, physical, intellectual and moral. His father, by both precept and example, instilled sound principles into his youthful mind, while the free untrammelled life of the farm aided not a little in developing to perfection a constitution which was naturally robust. He studied at Jefferson Medical College, and graduated from that institution in 1875. His first five years of professional life were passed in Centerville, Lancaster county, and in 1880 he removed to Smoketown, which has been his home for the past twenty years. Here he has built up a large and lucrative practice, being held in high repute, not less for his many virtues as a man, than for his recognized skill as a physician.

On Nov. 24, 1875, Dr. Musser married Myra, a daughter of John Musselman, of East Lampeter. Three sons have been born to them. The eldest, Charles Milton, is in the employ of the People's Trust Co., at Lancaster; while the second, Guy Musselman, is a graduate of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy; and the youngest, Parke N., is in the Custom House at Philadelphia. Dr. Musser is a member of Lancaster Lodge, No. 252, A. O. U. W., and of the Masonic fraternity.

JULIUS PAUL SIEBOLD, the successful East End florist of Lancaster, is a conspicuous example of a self-made man. Born in Mansfield, Germany, he came to this country in 1877, landing on these shores with little other capital than energy, honesty and an ambition to succeed. At fourteen he commenced to learn locksmithing, and later became an expert machinist, studying that trade in Berlin. But not liking it, he came to America in May, 1877, and after working on a dairy farm in New York State for a time, came to Lancaster, in October, 1877. Although he had never before worked on a farm, he filled the bill as though born to the business. After paying two visits to the West and one to the Southwest, he concluded to locate permanently in Lancaster, and in May, 1888, he and his wife settled in that city.

After working for a local florist from 1889 to 1894, Mr. Siebold began business for himself in gardening and floriculture on East Orange street, where his growing trade soon took on such dimensions that he was presently compelled to seek other quarters. He then found another location on East Chestnut, where it terminates in the Groffstown road. There he leased three acres, erected two large hothouses, and, making many other improvements, soon won the reputation of being the most progressive and foremost gardener of the city. Assisted by his wife, whose industry, intelligence and courtesy have contributed much to the business, he has built up a trade of great proportions, and commands a patronage from the very best people of the city. The Siebolds are successful growers of fine flowers and vegetables of every kind, and for years past their celery has been the standard of the market. They have celery on sale as late as May 1st, an achievement accomplished by no other gardener. Their celery sales are enormous, as they also have the choice of the product of Mrs. Siebold's uncle in Tioga county, who grows over 400 acres each year, and of a cousin in Chester county, who has 200 acres of this and other choice products, operating at the same time over seventy hothouses. During the winter of 1901 Mr. Siebold grew celery under glass, as well as tomatoes and other vegetables, making a great hit on the early spring market. Mr. Siebold has telephone connections, has stands in all the leading markets of the city, and no man, there or elsewhere, is more industrious and hardworking. In the fall of 1902 Mr. Siebold threw two hothouses into one, increased the length, and created one of the finest up-to-date hothouses in the interior of the State, this being in perfect keeping with the liberal and progressive work of Mr. and Mrs. Siebold in their chosen business—a business which they have reduced to a fine art, as can be attested by the hosts of people in this community who enjoy the products of their skilled labor. During the summer of 1900 they cultivated a dozen of the choicest and most beautiful flower beds in Woodward Hill cemetery ever seen in Lancaster.

Mr. Siebold was married, in 1885, to Miss Anna Theresa Mueller, a daughter of Charles Mueller, who passed away in his native Germany. Mr. Mueller lived for years in Carola, Mo., where his daughter, Anna Theresa, finished her education, which had been begun in Germany. She attended the Poplar Bluff high school, and secured an excellent education, to which her conversation and writing bear testimony. Her father returned to Germany because he could not sell his property there without a great sacrifice, and in November, 1901, entered into rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius P. Siebold are members of the Lutheran Church of the Advent, Mrs. Siebold being actively associated with the Ladies' Sewing Circle, and being a teacher in the main Sunday-school, while Mr. Siebold is a member of the church council and also treasurer.

The father of Julius P. Siebold was a master mechanic, and had his own works at Mansfield, when only twenty-one years old, employing twenty skilled workmen. He was later employed in Berlin, and worked for a time in the service of the Russian Government at Odessa, where he received a special gift of 500 roubles and a diploma from Czar Alexander for his magnificent work in superintending the erection of docks, etc. His father, Carl Siebold, was a soldier under Napoleon the Great, and took part in the disastrous retreat from Moscow.

GEORGE KURTZ, a retired farmer of Providence township, is one of the most highly respected German-American citizens of his locality. He was born in Wittenberg, Germany, April 23, 1824, son of John M. Kurtz, now deceased.

John M. Kurtz, the father, was also born in Wittenberg, and spent his whole life in Germany. He was the father of six children, these being: Rosa, Dora, Andrew, Barbara, Margaret and George, the latter being the only survivor of the family and the only one who ever came to America.

George Kurtz has had some unusual occurrences in his career since settling in America. He landed in New York on Nov. 4, 1854, and went directly to Philadelphia, thence to Lancaster. However, he soon went to one of the southern States and was residing in the South at the outbreak of the Civil war. This resulted in his conscription into the Confederate army, and he was forced to participate in some of the hardest fought battles of the war. Finally he escaped to the North, but it was with the loss of his five years' earnings. After remaining a time in Philadelphia, he went to Lancaster county, where, in 1867, he bought his farm of fifty-six acres of land in Providence township, and by great industry and frugality has accomplished much. Mr. Kurtz has been a hard-working man for many years, and has earned the comfort which he is now able to enjoy.

On March 24, 1864, Mr. Kurtz was married in Lancaster county to Miss Amelia E. Vollrath, born in 1833, in Germany, and a family of five children has been born to this union, as follows: Edward, who follows the carpenter trade in Philadelphia; Miss Mary, of Atlantic City, N. J.; Emma M., a resident of Lancaster; Bertha, who also resides in Lancaster; and Charles, who operates the home farm since his father has given up active labor, the farm being well-improved and productive.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz are valued members of the M. E. Church. In politics Mr. Kurtz is a Republican. The whole family enjoys the respect of the community, while Mr. Kurtz is noted for his honesty, his truthfulness and his many acts of kindness and charity.

WILLIAM B. THOME, M. D., the leading physician in Milton Grove, Mt. Joy township, and one of the most highly respected and useful citizens of that section, was born Feb. 18, 1854, in Lebanon county, Pa., near Lawn, a son of Dr. Joseph S. and Sarah (Brown) Thome.

Dr. Joseph S. Thome was a native of Lancaster county, born in Manheim, and died in Mastersonville Jan. 8, 1890, aged sixty-nine years. In his younger days he assisted his father in surveying and as a scrivener, later becoming a physician and making his home in Lawn, Lebanon county, for a period of forty years, returning to Lancaster county six years prior to his death. He was laid away in Milton Grove cemetery. Both he and wife were long members of the Lutheran Church. She was born in Lebanon county in 1824, and now resides with her son William B. They were the parents of four children, namely: John, who is an iron worker in Lebanon; Margaret, who died young; William B.; and May, who died at the age of two years.

William B. Thome was afforded excellent educational opportunities by a farsighted and intelligent father. He made his home with his parents until 1876, when he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania. After his marriage he settled for practice in Mastersonville, this county, remaining there for ten years, at the end of which period he came to Milton Grove, where he has remained ever since, becoming a leading citizen. Dr. Thome is widely known, and his practice is not confined to his immediate locality, his skill being in requisition over a wide extent of territory. In politics, like his father, Dr. Thome is a Democrat, but he has no political aspirations, and did not even seek the office of school director, to which he was elected. He belongs to the Lutheran Church, although his duties interfere with a very regular attendance.

On June 13, 1876, in Lancaster, Dr. Thome was married to Miss Louisa G. Missimer, and to this union were born two sons, Winfield M. and Arthur J., both of whom are attending Baltimore Medical College. Winfield M. was married, in 1902, to Miss Gertrude G. Engle, daughter of Simon H. and Mary (Graybill) Engle, of Conoy township, Lancaster county. Mrs. Thome was born in Rapho township, daughter of Jacob and Martha (Gantz) Missimer, of Lancaster county. Mr. Missimer was a miller by trade, and operated what was known as the Heistand mill, on the Chiques creek, for many years, following the example of his father, Esquire Jacob Missimer, who built the mill and operated it a very considerable time. Jacob Missimer was a prominent man, and served his district as school director for a long period. He died at the age of seventy years, in 1888, his widow dying in 1892, at the same age. They were buried in the Cross Roads River Brethren Church cemetery, in East Donegal township, although they were members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: Susan G. married Rev. David Wolgemuth, a River Brethren minister; Martha G. married David Brandt, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Sarah G. married Henry B. Martin, a farmer of East Donegal township; Catherine G. is the widow of Henry N. Snyder, of Mt. Joy township; Anna G. married Samuel G. Witmer, a farmer and trucker of Rapho township; Mary G. married Edward B. Boyd, a merchant of Manheim; Louisa G. is the wife of Dr. Thome; Elizabeth G. married Jacob Gruber, a farmer of Rapho township; and Harriet G. is the widow of Jacob Engle, of East Hempfield township.

W. B. Thorne M.D.

ABRAHAM H. HERR, one of the representative men of Lancaster county, was born on the farm he owns and occupies, Oct. 5, 1855, a son of Christian and Susanna (Hess) Herr. Reared on the home farm, and educated in the public schools, he remained at home with his parents, taking charge of the farm about two years before his father's death. The parents lived with him until their death, his father dying in 1883, and his mother in October, 1900.

Mr. Herr gives his attention to farming and dairying, keeping some eighteen head of cattle, and for seven years ran a milk route in Lancaster. At the present time he does no retail business. His farm which consists of 112 acres, is classed among the better places of the county. It has been considerably improved since it came into the possession of Mr. Herr, and is thoroughly cultivated. Mr. Herr is a public-spirited citizen, and is deeply interested in all propositions that affect the public good. He has never sought nor accepted public station, though frequently asked by his friends to take certain town offices. His home is under the charge of his sister Elizabeth, who with him is deeply interested in Sunday-school work. All the members of this numerous and widely scattered family are among the most orderly and industrious in the community, where their good character, integrity and honor have made them many friends.

CHRISTIAN HERR (deceased), in his life time one of the more prominent citizens of Lancaster county, was born March 25, 1807, a son of Joseph and Mariah (Frower) Herr, both of Pequea township. Christian Herr was born in Pequea township, where he was reared to farm life. He was married Nov. 30, 1839, to Susanna Hess, and located on the farm near Hollinger, where his son, Abraham, is now found. There he devoted his life to farming, and there died June 29, 1883. In his earlier manhood he was engaged in the milling business at what is now known as the Pugh Mills, being associated with his brother, Abraham. At one time he took much interest in the culture of silk worms, erecting a building for that purpose, and growing his own silk, but did not keep at it long, as the conditions were unfavorable to its success. The later years of his life were entirely devoted to farming, and he was well and favorably known throughout the county.

Mrs. Susanna (Hess) Herr was a daughter of Jacob Hess, of Pequea township, born April 27, 1815; she died Oct. 26, 1900. By her marriage with Mr. Herr she became the mother of seven children: Jacob H., of Willowstreet, born Aug. 26, 1840; Joseph, a resident of West Lampeter township, born Jan. 6, 1842; Maria, born Feb. 23, 1844, died in childhood; Christian H., born 1846, died Feb. 21, 1898, in Manor township, where he had followed farming, and at one time had been a school teacher; Barbara, born Oct. 28, 1850, now the wife of Jacob Lindeman, of West Lampeter township; Elizabeth, born Sept. 13, 1853, now housekeeper for her brother Abraham; and Abraham H., born Oct. 5, 1855, residing on the old homestead. Christian Herr, the father of this family, was a Dunkard, but his wife belonged to the old Mennonite Church.

JACOB HERR, the oldest member of the above family, was born and reared on the old homestead and educated in the public schools, and in the high school in Cumberland county. Remaining at home until 1880, he then located at Willowstreet, operating a small tract of five acres, giving the most of his attention to the Lancaster and Willowstreet Turnpike Co., of which he has been superintendent and treasurer. The office of secretary is also filled by him. He married, Jan. 13, 1880, Mrs. Catherine, widow of Martin Kreider and daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Forrer) Mylin, born in Pequea township, July 8, 1835. They have one of the most pleasant homes found at Willowstreet. In religious belief they belong to the Mennonite Church, and they are highly respected for their many good qualities.

HENRY H. AMENT, who has followed carpet weaving and carpentering in Columbia for a number of years, was born March 19, 1835, in Manor township, this county. The Ament family is one of the oldest and most respected in Lancaster county, where our subject's grandparents settled on their emigration from Germany, their native country.

George Ament, the father of Henry H., was born Sept. 16, 1792. He did a prosperous teaming business in the early days, carrying goods between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, when railway connections between those two places was yet a dream of the future. He was a man of many resources. By trade a carpet weaver, in his later life he became a farmer, and at the same time carried on business as a butcher. He died May 3, 1873, aged eighty years, seven months and eighteen days. He married Catherine Herr, daughter of Christian Herr, of Lancaster county, and they became the parents of nine children, namely: Christian; Catherine, who married Martin Manning, of Highville, this county; Benjamin, born Jan. 29, 1829, who died Sept. 22, 1870, aged forty-one years, seven months and twenty-four days, the father of nine children; Eliza, who married Christ Kaufman, of Highville; Elias and Mary Ann, both deceased; Henry H.; and Abraham and Fanny, twins, the former a resident of Highville, the latter the wife of Jacob Kaufman, the brother of Christ, of Lancaster. The parents were members of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Ament passed away in 1885, aged seventy-four years.

Henry H. Ament was reared to farming pursuits, which he followed up to the age of nineteen years, meantime receiving a practical education in the common schools. He then learned the carpenter's trade, and he has also acquired a thorough knowledge of carpet weaving. Since 1888 he has been engaged at both trades, and he has prospered well—industry and honest work bringing their own and just rewards. He resided at Highville until June, 1899, when he removed to Columbia, where he has since had his home. As a worthy member of one of the old respected families of the county, Mr. Ament is held in high esteem, and he is fully deserving of the substantial place he holds in the regard of his fellow men.

In November, 1856, Mr. Ament was married, in Lancaster, Pa., to Miss Catherine Schoff, a native of Manor township, and daughter of David and Susanna (Benedict) Schoff, of Lancaster county. Mrs. Ament died Aug. 1, 1896, aged sixty-one years. Of the children born to this union, Amos is a resident of Columbia, this county; Elizabeth is the wife of Henry Mellinger, of Columbia; Jonas and Franklin are deceased; Elias is a carpenter in Highville; David is deceased; and Mary married Elmer Eshleman, of Columbia. In religious connection Mr. Ament is a member of the Evangelical Church. He is independent in politics.

ADOLPH EFINGER, proprietor of the "Seventh Ward Hotel," is one of the popular and successful German-Americans of whom the citizens of Lancaster are justly proud. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, the home of his ancestors, Dec. 30, 1853, a son of Bernard and Caroline (Crim) Efinger.

Bernard Efinger was a man of more than ordinary attainments, and although he never wandered from his native land, he contributed not a little to the steady advancement of the locality in which he lived. In early life he took to surveying as a desirable means of livelihood, and so successful did he become, that he was given a public position as surveyor, the arduous duties of which he creditably maintained for more than half a century. He was interested in politics also, and his popularity and general fitness may be best estimated from the fact that he was burgomaster or mayor of Aixheim, Wurtemberg, for about thirty years. His death occurred in 1897, at the age of seventy-four; his wife died in 1881, at the age of fifty-four. They were members of the Catholic Church, and had the following children besides Adolph: Remius, who came to America in 1860, is a tinsmith in Philadelphia; Catherine, who died in Germany, married Francis Gruher; Otto is a farmer in Germany; Mary is living in Germany; and Anna is also a resident of Germany.

More ambitious than his sire, Adolph Efinger sought to enlarge his sphere of action by removal to the United States in 1871, his objective point being Lancaster, Pa., where resided an uncle, Jacob Efinger. Under this uncle he served an apprenticeship as a cabinet-maker for three years, following which he engaged as journeyman in his trade for six years. For twelve years he was employed in a planing mill, and in 1889 started in the hotel business, of which he has made a success. He has entered actively into general town affairs, and as a staunch Republican has been a member of the city council since 1898. Fraternally he is associated with the Masons and Odd Fellows, but is not a member of any church, although his family attend the German Lutheran Church. His wife was formerly Mary J. Dinkelberg, a native of Lancaster, and who has borne him two children, Bertha K. and Philip C. Mr. Efinger is well adapted to the occupation in which he is engaged, his tact, geniality, and all around good fellowship, contributing in no small measure to his success as host to the traveling public. He is exceedingly well posted, has a thorough knowledge of human nature, and by virtue of his application and integrity has acquired a substantial place among the moneyed men of Lancaster.

REV. WILLIAM FRANCIS SHERO, A. M., rector of St. John's Free Episcopal Church, in Lancaster, is a gentleman of far more than ordinary literary genius, and is doing splendid work in the parish to which he has ministered since September, 1898, having officiated there for one year while filling the office of headmaster of Yeates' Institute. In the rectorship he is the successor of the late lamented Rev. J. E. Pratt.

Mr. Shero's paternal ancestors were French Huguenots, who left France at the time of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, going first to Germany, and from that country to America. His grandfather came to America, bringing with him an infant son, Lewis, who became the father of the Lancaster clergyman. Lewis Shero married Clarissa Francis, daughter of Egbert Francis, who was leading a retired life at Fredonia, N. Y. Of this union there were born seven children, all of whom are living.

Rev. William Francis Shero, A. M., was born near Fredonia, N. Y., in 1863, and was educated in the normal school in his native town, and in the University of Rochester, from which he was graduated in 1887. He then attended the Theological Seminary in New York City, from which he was to be graduated in 1890, but left in 1888 to engage in teaching. For four years he worked in the school room, in the meantime continuing his theological studies, while he was principal of the schools at Smethport, Pa. During this time he took a post-graduate course in the University of Rochester, writing a thesis on "The Dis-establishment of the English Church," and in the study of political economy was awarded the first prize—a sum of $300 in money. Mr. Shero was ordained deacon Dec. 22, 1889, and priest, Feb. 22, 1891. His first call was to Angelica, N. Y., where he served one year and a half, and for four years was chaplain of DeVeaux Collège at Niagara Falls. At the end of that period he came to Lancaster to take the position of headmaster of Yeates' Institute, a position he filled with credit for two years, and then, as noted above, becoming rector of St. John's Free Episcopal Church.

The degree of Master of Arts was bestowed upon him by Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., in 1890.

Mr. Shero was married June 12, 1891, to Miss Lucy S. Rogers, a daughter of Col. Lucius Rogers, a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, and now serving as postmaster at Kane, Pa. In 1869 the Colonel was elected prothonotary of McKean county, and three years later he was elected a member of the General Assembly. For eleven years he was journal and reading clerk of the State Senate, and was elected county treasurer in 1889. Col. Rogers is a veteran journalist of much reputation, and by the dignity and candor of his work has made a name for himself that will long endure in McKean county. Col. Rogers has two other children beside Mrs. Shero, Fantine Livia, the wife of Dr. W. P. Bundick, of Mt. Jewett, Pa.; and H. Smull, a lawyer at Mt. Jewett, who bears the name of Mr. Smull, of "Legislative Handbook" fame. Mrs. Shero has Bishop Kidder, of Bath and Wells, England, among her more distinguished maternal ancestors, among whom is also found Noah Webster. From the union of Mr. Shero with Miss Rogers, were born two children, Lucius Rogers, and Livia Francis.

Mr. Shero has met with much success as rector of St. John's Parish, and his people are devotedly attached to him. Of a deeply spiritual nature, his fine social qualities render his work doubly effective, and with a fine pulpit presence and power he has all the elements which enter into the success of a priest. His record in Lancaster is a story of honest and honorable labor, of deep devotion, and of faithful effort for the improvement of his people.

SIMON PETER WAYNE, an old and well-known engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad, with his residence in Columbia, Lancaster county, was born in Colebrook, Lebanon Co., Pa., on the old Robert Coleman estate, May 15, 1847, a son of David C. and Sarah (Knipe) Wayne, natives, respectively of Hanover, York county, and Schaefferstown, Lebanon county, in which latter place they were married.

David C. Wayne was a miller by trade, at which calling he worked from the age of fifteen to 1878, when advanced years precluded further work in the mills, and he then engaged in the patent medicine business until ten years prior to his death, when he retired. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Wayne were born the following named children: William H., who died from the effects of an injury received on the old State railroad; Mary A., widow of John Eyman, who was master painter at Pittsburgh for the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Catherine, deceased wife of Samuel Clair; Sarah, widow of Isaac Hogentogler, of Columbia; John, who was wounded at the battle of Malvern Hill, June 30, 1861, while serving in Co. I, 23d P. V. I., died in hospital at Washington, D. C., in October, 1861; David A., a locomotive engineer, was killed in a railroad wreck; Simon Peter was the next in order of birth; Elizabeth married James Devine, a railroad engineer at Elizabethtown, Pa.; Emma is the wife of Milton Monahan, a railroad conductor at Philadelphia; Rebecca, of the same city, is the widow of Jacob Michael, who was a locomotive engineer; and Lydia married Amos Lewis, a railroad engineer at Shippensburg, Pa. Mrs. Sarah (Knipe) Wayne was very active and earnest in her work for the United Brethren Church, and in 1856-1858 collected the money with which was built the first church edifice of that denomination in Columbia, the first sermon having been preached in German in the dwelling of David C. Wayne, by the Rev. Christian Kaufman, to the embryo congregation of that faith. David C. Wayne was born Oct. 1, 1809, and died Jan. 1, 1888, and his wife was born Sept. 18, 1814, and died April 28, 1882, the family having come to Columbia about 1849.

Simon Peter Wayne, at the early age of eight years, was sent out by his parents to earn in part his own livelihood, and among the farmers of the neighborhood he found employment until fifteen years of age. He was then apprenticed to John Q. Denney, to learn the molder's trade, and was to receive fifty cents per day the first year; seventy-five cents per day the second year; and one dollar per day for the three following years. He was in the shop, however, but little over a year when the war of the Rebellion broke out, and all the molders in the factory, save one, went to the front. Young Wayne was then tested by his employers, and found to be capable of casting a molding, and his wages were fixed at $2 per day, until the expiration of his apprenticeship. He next worked as a journeyman for Malby, Case & Co., and other foundrymen until January, 1874, when he was given a place, on the 15th of May, as fireman for the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., and six years later, Aug. 20, 1880, he was promoted to engineer, a position he still occupies. In 1891 he was transferred to Philadelphia, as passenger engineer, but in November, 1893, was returned to Columbia as freight and extra passenger engineer.

Mr. Wayne was united in marriage, March 13, 1867, in Lancaster, with Miss Kate Mayer, and to this union was born one child, William M., who died at the age of three years and twenty days.

Mrs. Kate (Mayer) Wayne was born in Bernville, Berks Co., Pa., March 13, 1848, a daughter of Gotlieb and Mary (Boyer) Mayer, natives of Germany and Berks county, Pa., respectively. Gotlieb Mayer came to America in boyhood, and learned the miller's trade under David C. Wayne, father of Simon Peter. To his marriage to Mary Boyer were born seven children, namely: Kate, now Mrs. Wayne; Anna, wife of Orrick Richards, paper-hanger in Columbia; Clara, widow of John Hinkle; Elizabeth, wife of H. P. Young, retired, in Middletown, Pa.; Ella, in Columbia; John, in Marietta; and Emma, who died young. Mr. Mayer died in Columbia at an advanced age in the faith of the Lutheran Church, and his widow, who was born May 21, 1824, is also a Lutheran and still resides in Columbia.

Mr. Wayne is one of the kindest and most charitable of men. He has had educated in music several children not members of his family, and has reared three as his own. At present he has living with him a niece, Miss Bessie E. Young, whom he has reared from the age of two to seventeen years, although her father is quite wealthy, and is a resident of Middletown. Mr. Wayne is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in which he holds three offices, those of corresponding secretary, chairman of the board of legislation, and chairman of the committee of adjustments. He is also a member of the general board of the Pennsylvania system. Mr. Wayne is a past grand in the I. O. O. F., a Knight of Malta, and past chancellor, K. P. He also belongs to the Columbia Fire Department. In politics he is a Republican, and has served in the borough council two consecutive terms as president, an honor never before conferred upon a president of the Columbia council. By appointment he also filled out an unexpired term of six months as chief Burgess of Columbia. From a business point of view Mr. Wayne is a self-made man, as he has through his integrity and industry, been given by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., lucrative employment which has enabled him to acquire a competency for the years when old age will make his being able to sit under his own vine and fig tree, without a thought of the morrow, a blessing indeed. For the kindness and favors shown him by the company he has a feeling of gratitude, which grows deeper and stronger as the years go by. His elegant home on Chestnut street is an evidence of what a man may acquire by living an industrious and frugal life, and should be an incentive to the coming generations of railroad men to do likewise, and, like Mr. Wayne, to be honored and respected by all.

WILLIAM D. SNYDER has long been well and favorably known among business men in Columbia, where he has risen to special prominence in his important position of manager for the Keeley Stove Company.

Mr. Snyder was born Feb. 13, 1843, in Chillisquaque, Northumberland county, this State, son of John Frederick and Mary (Dehart) Snyder, also natives of the Keystone State. The paternal grandfather of our subject, John B. Snyder, was born in Montgomery county, where he spent the greater part of his life, following the trade of shoemaker. He was a Democrat in politics, and understood well the political issues of his day, taking an active part in the local affairs of his town. For three years he was a member of the town council, for eight years served as overseer of the poor at Milton, and in numerous other positions aided in the upbuilding of his community. He was a true Christian gentleman, greatly interested in the progress of the Reformed Church, of which he was a member. He participated in the Black Hawk war, serving as captain of a company that was sent to the front. John B. Snyder married Sarah Elizabeth Rumer, a native of Northampton county, this State, and they had three sons and one daughter, of whom J. Frederick, our subject's father, was the eldest. The others were Peter; Albert, who was killed during the Civil war; and Sarah. The grandfather died in 1875.

J. Frederick Snyder was born in Montgomery county, where he made his home until his marriage, and he was given a good education in the public schools. On reaching mature years he began clerking in a store, and continued to act as salesman from 1842 to 1860, after which he followed boating on the Pennsylvania Canal, which occupation he abandoned in order to accept work offered him in a sawmill, for which he received better pay. He passed away while residing in Milton, in 1887, when in the sixty-fifth year of his age, a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. J. Frederick Snyder was twice married, and by the first union were born five children, of whom William D. was the eldest; Sarah, the next in order of birth, is deceased; Mary is the wife of Jeremiah Datesman, and resides in Columbia; and the two remaining members of the family, twins, are deceased. The wife and mother passed to the land beyond in 1850, at the age of thirty-one.

William D. Snyder received his early education in the common schools of Milton, after which he took a course in the high school, and he subsequently received instruction from Rev. A. G. Dole, pastor of the Reformed Church of Milton, studying English grammar, rhetoric and geometry. At the age of eighteen he engaged in boating, continuing thus until he apprenticed himself to learn the trade of a tin smith. Mastering the business in three years, he followed it with fair success until 1872, when he formed a partnership with Mr. Overpeck, the firm name being Overpeck & Snyder. They carried on a thriving trade in tinsmithing and sheet iron work until the death of the senior partner in 1876, when the style was changed to W. D. Snyder & Co., and continued as such for the following three years. At the end of that time our subject disposed of his interest in the business, remaining with the new firm, however, until 1881, when he went to Middletown, becoming superintendent of Raymond & Campbell's mounting establishment in that place. After remaining there a short time, however, he located in Columbia in the employ of the Keeley Stove Co. On Thanksgiving day, 1891, Mr. Snyder was elected to the position of manager of the concern by the board of directors, and has remained in that capacity ever since, to the satisfaction of all concerned. He is a thorough business man, and whatever he undertakes is bound to succeed. The firm are doing a paying business, transacting over $200,000 worth of business each year, and give employment in all departments to about one hundred and forty men. The factory is a large structure, five stories in height, including cellar, located on Maple and Second streets. They have also a sales-room at No. 21 South Charles street, Baltimore.

In his political views Mr. Snyder is a Prohibitionist, and believes that the time will soon come when that party will elect a president. He has been very active in church work since early manhood, and has served twelve years as superintendent of the Sunday-school and eight years as deacon. In social affairs he is a prominent Odd Fellow, belonging to Mutual Lodge No. 84, at Milton; and he is also a member of Milton Lodge No. 256, F. & A. M.

Mr. Snyder married, in February, 1865, Miss Sarah E., daughter of Peter Smith, of Milton, and to them was born one daughter, Mary, now the wife of Edgar Fager, of Columbia. Mrs. Snyder died in 1867, and our subject subsequently married Miss Nancy C., daughter of James McClosky, of Clinton county, this State. To them have been born four children: Zella, deceased; William Lloyd; Jennie B.; and one that died in infancy.

WILLIAM B. SCHNEITMAN, a well-known implement dealer of Elizabethtown, was born in West Donegal township April 3, 1854, son of Matthias F. and Regina (Brantley) Schneitman. The parents were natives of Wurtemberg, Germany, where they remained after their marriage until 1844, when they came to America, locating in Elizabethtown. They remained in the borough a year, and then settled on a farm a mile from the town, where they lived and died, Mr. Schneitman passing away in 1876, at the age of seventy-two years, and his widow in 1884, at the age of seventy. Both were members of the Lutheran Church. They were the parents of the following family: Charles, who is deceased; Gotlieb, who lives in Lebanon county; Christianna, wife of Samuel Sherrer; Kate, wife of John Mashey, a farmer of Dauphin county; Henry, a furniture dealer in Casey, Iowa; Mary, wife of Israel Engle, of Lancaster county; William B.; and Louisa, who died young.

William B. Schneitman was married in November, 1881, in Elizabethtown, to Mary Rutt, and to this union was born one child, Harry R. Mrs. Mary (Rutt) Schneitman was born in West Donegal township April 3, 1856, daughter of Christian S. and Susan (Allison) Rutt, natives of West Donegal and Rapho townships, respectively. Her father farmed all his life on the farm where he was born. He died Feb. 21, 1882, at the age of seventy-eight years, ten months, and his remains are resting in the Rutt cemetery, on the old homestead, which has been in the family for more than 200 years. Christian S. Rutt and Susan Allison were married in Lancaster in 1851, and to their union were born the following children: Peter, who is deceased; Mary, Mrs. Schneitman; and Simon, who is engaged in the cultivation of the old farm in West Donegal. Mrs. Susan (Allison) Rutt was born in Newtown, Rapho township, April 6, 1826, and is now making her home with Mrs. Schneitman. Her parents, Abraham and Susan (Kauffman) Allison, were natives of Ireland and Lancaster county, respectively, and both died at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Susan Rutt, being interred in the old Rutt cemetery. They were members of the River Brethren Church. The father was a mason by trade. Mr. and Mrs. Allison were the parents of the following children: Barbara, widow of John Cassel; John, who died in Kansas; Abraham, a farmer in Kansas; Benjamin, Fanny and Anna, all deceased; and Susan.

William B. Schneitman remained with his parents on the home farm until he was twelve years of age when he was bound out, working for his board during the winter, and receiving six dollars a month during the summer season. He made good use of the winter schools, and when he was twenty years old began teaching, in which capacity he was engaged for two years. For the next eight years he followed tobacco farming, and then took up the business in which he is now engaged. He moved to Elizabethtown in 1884, but also continued to carry on tobacco farming in West Donegal township. While in that township he was clerk two terms, and in 1894 he was elected school director in Elizabethtown and re-elected in 1897. He and his wife are both members of the German Reformed Church, and in politics he is a Democrat. They are intelligent people, and enjoy an enviable standing in the community.

JACOB D. KOHR, who lives one mile northwest of Lancaster, belongs to one of the old families of the county, and well sustains the honor of the family name. His father, Rev. Bishop John Kohr, now deceased, was a noted man in the church; he is mentioned elsewhere.

Jacob D. Kohr was born April 14, 1845, on the place adjoining the one where he now makes his home. His education was gained in the public school, and when he was twenty-five years of age he began business for himself on a sixty-five acre farm belonging to his grandfather, in Manheim township, where he remained one year. His next location was in East Lampeter township, where he operated two rented farms of sixty-five acres each, remaining there only one year, however, when he moved to Lancaster to become the first steward of Harbach Hall, Franklin and Marshall College. At the end of a year he resigned this position, in which he had given good satisfaction, as he was needed at home to take charge of the farm. With his brother he carried on the family homestead for three years, and then established himself on the old David O. Shirk farm. The following year he located on a farm which his father had bought for him, consisting of sixty-seven acres, a portion of which he sold to the railroad company, and then operated the remainder from 1876 to 1896. In the latter year he bought the home property, where this writing finds him retired from active farming. This property comprises three acres, and the place has been thoroughly remodeled to meet his ideas of what a neat and attractive home should be. Though not now engaged in active farming, Mr. Kohr is still in active business, putting up for the market Saratoga chips, fruit butters, catsups, and a similar line of toothsome dainties.

Mr. Kohr was married Dec. 24, 1868, to Miss Mary F., a daughter of Benjamin and Lydia Landis. She was born in Franklin county, Pa., near Waynesboro, Sept. 1, 1848. To Mr. and Mrs. Kohr have come the following children: (1) Frank L., born Jan. 3, 1870, married Miss Barbara Harnish, by whom he has had one child, Elizabeth, and is a florist. (2) Annie L., born Oct. 21, 1871, is the wife of Jacob L. Kreider, a grocer at the corner of Chestnut and Nevin streets, Lancaster, and is the mother of three children, Esther, Jesse and Mary. (3) Alice, born May 1, 1875, is the wife of Elmer J. Weaver, the florist, of East Lampeter township, and is the mother of one child, Lloyd. (4) Howard L., born Aug. 5, 1877, is a machinist employed at the Westinghouse airbrake works, in Pittsburg. (5) Esther, born Sept. 7, 1883, is at home. (6) Lydia was born July 8, 1885. (7) John was born Feb. 8, 1890. Mrs. Kohr is a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church and the family are among the Christian and highly intelligent people of this section of the county.

Frank L. Kohr, the eldest son, obtained his education in the public schools and in the State Normal, where he attended two years. In 1875 he established his greenhouse on the site where he has since built up a prosperous business, having removed his plant from the farm, where he was reared, and where he began the business in 1890. Beginning with 3,000 feet of glass, he now has 7,000. He makes a specialty of carnations, and also of bedding plants, such as geraniums, begonias and petunias. His product goes to Philadelphia and Reading. In 1892 he began trucking, and conducts a truck farm of five acres in connection with his floral business. He has some 300 peach trees, and watches the Lancaster markets very closely. In 1892 he bought his home, situated about a mile northwest of Lancaster city. Mr. Kohr belongs to the Society of American Florists, and is a member of the Page Society.

ABRAHAM HIRSH. The Hirsh Brothers may be justly placed in the front rank of the business men of Lancaster by reason of their pronounced ability in trade, their intelligent observation of commercial and mercantile matters, their wise discernment of the wants of the people, and their readiness to cater to the wants of the people as well as their uniformly satisfactory dealing with their patrons. These have been prominent factors in their success in building up a trade in the city second to none, and in acquiring fortunes that have placed them among the heaviest taxpayers of Lancaster. They have been the architects of their own fortunes, earning what they owned, and in the afternoon of life are surrounded by happy families, in the full enjoyment of all the good things that wealth affords.

Like many other successful business men of Lancaster, the Hirsh brothers were not to "the manner born," but first saw the light in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, only a few miles from the famous city of Worms. Their parents, Meyer and Dora Hirsh, frugal and industrious villagers, reared their boys until they had attained manhood, when they were sent forth at their own request to the New World, with but small capital, to carve out their own fortunes.

Leopold Hirsh, the first of the brothers to come to America, arrived in New York in 1851, and there purchased a small stock of notions. He made his way to Reading, Pa., where he was joined the following year by his eldest brother, Abraham. The brothers united their little savings and worked hand in hand as peddlers of fancy notions, and within a year had made sufficient advance to be able in 1853 to open a store at Danville, Pa., where at the time was building the Catawassa railroad, and the Montrose Iron Works were in full blast. The young merchants rented a store and, vigorously pushing the jewelry and notion business, made money rapidly. Before they had been in business twelve months they rented another building, on the opposite side of the town, and fitted it up as a clothing store. Abraham Hirsh went to Sunbury, where he rented a room and began the watch and jewelry trade, having an old and experienced watchmaker from Germany as his assistant. He did a fair business. As times changed at Danville the brothers sought another location, selling the two stores in that place, and the Sunbury establishment passing into the hands of the German assistant. In 1854 the Hirsh brothers made their advent in Lancaster. They opened a small store on North Queen street, near Center Square, and there was the modest beginning of the extensive millinery and notion store of A. Hirsh. The place extended but half way through to Market Place, and one-half the front was occupied by another dealer. In this contracted space they began business, and soon afterward obtained the adjoining storeroom, which they fitted up as a clothing store. Their business rapidly increased to large proportions, and in 1857 they were able to purchase the Griel property, which they had rented. In 1861 they bought from John Farnum the property on the northwest corner of Center Square and North Queen street, extending it through to Market Place. In November of the same year they sold to Jacob Bowers the rear portion of this property for $8,000. In 1884 they bought the property back for $20,000, their expanding business demanding more room. The building was entirely remodeled to meet the wants of their trade. All the partitions were taken out and each floor thrown into one room, the principal salesroom extending from North Queen street to Market Place, new fronts were put in, and the entire building was admirably heated and ventilated. From the ground up it is stocked with an immense amount of clothing, uncut cloth and men's furnishing goods. Before these improvements were made to the corner building equally extensive improvements were made on the Griel property. It had been extended through to Market Place, and the entire ground floor thrown into one large salesroom for the millinery, jewelry and fancy goods trade, the upstairs rooms being stocked with an extensive assortment of miscellaneous merchandise. The original firm of Hirsh Brothers, consisting of Abraham, Herman and Leopold Hirsh, was dissolved in 1874, Abraham Hirsh taking the millinery department, and Herman and Leopold taking up the clothing department, under the name of Hirsh Brothers. Leopold Hirsh died Dec. 1, 1901, at his home in Philadelphia.

Abraham Hirsh continued in the millinery business until 1899, and in 1900 disposed of the jewelry business, retiring at that time from active life. His was the guiding hand for this extensive business in its earlier days, and he was known as a shrewd and keen business man, his success well attesting his reputation in that respect. Personally he is an affable and courteous gentleman, and he has been one of the most enterprising men of Lancaster since the day of his arrival. He has always been a generous contributor to all the deserving charities of the city, without regard to age, creed or condition.

Mr. Hirsh has owned and controlled a large amount of real estate in Lancaster, both alone and in company with his brothers, and he is still the proprietor of a fine farm, as well as of valuable real estate in the city. He also has good property in the West, and was ever alert for a good business investment. In 1867, in company with his brothers, he established a manufacturing business in Philadelphia, putting on the market a very desirable umbrella, and this business was successfully conducted by them for more than ten years. Abraham Hirsh was one of the promoters and founders of the street railroads of Lancaster, as well as of the Quarryville railroad. He was largely interested in the successful establishment of the Lancaster Inquirer.

Mr. Hirsh belongs to the F. & A. M., holding membership in Kensington Lodge, No. 21, and he is one of the oldest members of the Jewish Synagogue in the city of Lancaster, having been its president for the last sixteen years. He was formerly a Democrat in politics, but now supports the Republican party. However, he is not active in party affairs. His residence is at No. 129 North Duke street.

Mr. Hirsh was born June 21, 1827. He married for his first wife Miss Fannie Greenwald, of Philadelphia, by whom he had four sons and three daughters. The eldest son, Leopold, was a successful merchant in McKeesport, Pa., where he died March 21, 1895. David, the second son, is in the tobacco business in New York. Harry, the third son, is in the tobacco trade in Lancaster; he is married and has one child, Fanny. Benjamin, the youngest son, is in the livery business at Lancaster. Celia, the eldest daughter, married Morris Hockhimer, an extensive dealer in wool in Wheeling, W. Va., and has three sons and one daughter, Benjamin, Ellwood, Herbert and Florence. Rosa G., the second daughter, is the wife of Henry Weil, a leading horse dealer of Lancaster, and has one child, Hortense. Estella, the youngest daughter, is the wife of Henry Rider, a wholesale cigar dealer of Lancaster, and has two children, Fanny and Adrian. Mr. Hirsh married for his second wife the widow of Abraham Sussman, of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania.

SAMUEL A. SHELLEY, retired farmer of Rapho township, was born Sept. 27, 1846, on a farm adjoining the one he now occupies, and he still owns it.

Samuel Shelley, his father, died on the old homestead near by the farm of his son in 1886, at the age of seventy-eight years. He was buried on the farm. He married Maria Acker, who was born in 1819, and is still living with a daughter. Samuel Shelley was a member of the Brethren in Christ Church. For years during his life he was a director of schools for his district. The following children were born to him and his wife: Isaac A., a retired farmer of Sporting Hill; Emanuel A., a farmer of Rapho township; Samuel A., whose name opens this sketch; Anna A., wife of Henry Gible, a farmer; Maria A., wife of Daniel Wolgemuth, a farmer; and Aaron A., a farmer of Rapho township. Samuel A. Shelley's grandparents were Abraham and Lizzie (Brandt) Shelley, of Rapho township. The grandfather died at the age of ninety-two years, and his father, also named Abraham, lived to the age of ninety-four. The grandfather on the mother's side was Jacob Acker, of Lancaster county.

On Nov. 23, 1869, Samuel A. Shelley married Miss Fanny A. Erhart, of Lancaster county, the ceremony being performed by Rev. W. T. Gerherd. To this marriage has come one daughter, Fanny E., now the wife of John B. Hossler, a farmer of Rapho township; they have four children, Jennie S., Clayton S., John S. and Henry S.

Mrs. Samuel A. Shelley was born in Rapho township April 7, 1849, daughter of John and Rebecca (Brubaker) Erhart, of Rapho township. The father is still living on his farm, but the mother died in 1881, at the age of fifty-five years. She is buried in Hernlev's Meeting House cemetery. She was of the Mennonite faith. Mr. Erhart retired from farming in 1880. He and his wife had children as follows: Benjamin, a retired farmer of Rapho township; Fanny A., wife of Samuel A. Shelley;

Samuel, a farmer of Rapho township; and Rebecca, who died at the age of thirty-six years. Mrs. Shelley's paternal grandparents were John and Fanny (Rohrer) Erhart, of Lancaster county, of Swiss origin. Her grandparents on her mother's side were John and Anna (Wenger) Brubaker, of Lancaster county.

Samuel A. Shelley remained on his old homestead until 1900, when he retired and moved to his present residence, turning over his former place to his son-in-law. The family are members of the Mennonite Church. Mr. Shelley votes with the Republican party. He is a prominent man in his district, and is respected and looked up to by all who know him for his many sterling qualities.

SAMUEL F. FREY, senior member of the well known firm of S. F. Frey & Son, furniture dealers and undertakers, at Marietta, is one of the most successful merchants and prominent citizens of Lancaster county. Many of the most prominent citizens of America, to-day, are self-made men—men who through poverty and obscurity have fought their way to prominence and honor. A volume of the biographies of representative men of Lancaster county would indeed be incomplete without a sketch of Samuel F. Frey, who strikingly illustrates the force of well-directed energy, steadfast purpose and persistent effort for the accomplishment of noble results, and the overthrow of those obstacles that beset the progress of the young man who, unaided and alone, combats with life's stern realities.

The Frey family has been long and honorably connected with the history of Pennsylvania, whither the original representatives came from France. They were identified with the Huguenots as early as 1629. Originally the home of the family was in Switzerland, Cantons Aargau and Fribourg having been the ancient cradle of this race. In the old town of Fribourg there are documents proving beyond a doubt the origin of the name of Frey. These records tell that because of the bravery displayed by the chief and his clans of Aargau, and the prominent part they had taken in the victory over Charles the Bold, at Morat, 1476, they were declared "Free" (German "Frei"), were authorized to adopt the name of Frey, and were constituted a free and separate principality in Switzerland.

Abram Frey, great-grandfather of Samuel F., was an ordained clergyman of the Evangelical Association, and was for many years connected with the itinerant service, continuing thus in the Master's cause until called to his reward, at the age of seventy-five years.

Samuel Frey, son of Abram, was born in Union county, Pa., and became a farmer by occupation. In his religious views he followed the faith of his father, joining the Evangelical Association. In politics he was a supporter of the Old-line Whigs. He married Anna Bowman, and they became the parents of two sons, Abram and Samuel, and one daughter, Anna, who married Abram First, of Harrisburg, Pa.; all are now deceased. Samuel Frey, the father, died in Union county at the age of forty-nine, and his wife passed away at Florin, this county, Jan. 7, 1879, aged seventy-four years.

Rev. Abram Frey, son of Samuel, and father of Samuel F., was born in Union county, Pa., Nov. 14, 1823. He was a man of superior intelligence, and in early life engaged in teaching public school. Feeling called to consecrate his life to the work of God, he became a minister of the Evangelical Association, and filled pulpits at various points in Lancaster, Lebanon, Berks, Montgomery and Dauphin counties, continuing thus for eight years, or until his death, from typhoid fever, April 23, 1859, at the age of thirty-six. Besides his ministerial labors he had been extensively engaged in the manufacture of coverlids and counterpanes, and in dealing in wool at Mt. Joy, Lancaster county. These enterprises were managed by Joseph Classley, and were very prosperous until the panic of 1857. The heavy losses sustained then had not been overcome when Rev. Mr. Frey died, so that practically his wife and six children were left with nothing except a small home. On July 3, 1845, Rev. Abram Frey was united in marriage with Miss Mary Fauby, and this union was blessed with three sons and three daughters, as follows: Martha, wife of Joseph Heineman, of Philadelphia; Abram, an artist of note in Washington, D. C.; David, who died at the age of eleven years; Samuel F., whose name opens this sketch; Lizzie, wife of Dr. N. A. Saylor, of Philadelphia; and Emma, wife of O. G. Hull, of Kansas City, Mo. In his political faith the father was a Whig until the disintegration of that party, after which he affiliated with the Republicans. Mrs. Mary (Fauby) Frey, the beloved mother of this family, entered into rest, in New York City, May 5, 1898, at the age of seventy-five.

Abram Frey, son of Rev. Abram, and mentioned in the foregoing as an artist of note, made a trip abroad in 1878, sailing from Philadelphia, on an American Line steamer, April 18, 1878; he made an extended tour, and passed much time in France, and while in Switzerland saw the papers proving the origin of the family name.

Samuel F. Frey was born near Bloomfield, in Juniata township, Perry Co., Pa., Dec. 16, 1852. For some years he was a student in the public schools of Mt. Joy, and for one year was under the instruction of Christian Engle, a most capable instructor, near Mt. Joy. The condition of the family finances made it necessary not only that he support himself, but also that he assist in the care of the family. At the age of sixteen he left school and faced the stern realities of life for himself. On Feb. 1, 1868, he apprenticed himself to Henry S. Myers, of Mt. Joy, to learn the trade of cabinetmaker and undertaker, remaining thus employed for three and one-half years. On Jan. 3, 1872, he went to Marietta, and, finding a suitable opening, at once embraced the opportunity of embarking in business. Through close economy and hard work during extra time allotted him during his school days and apprenticeship, he had been able to save $800. Renting a small cabinet shop and ware-room in the Welchans building, he bought a stock of furniture and funeral supplies. Success rewarded his efforts from the start, and he was obliged to move to larger quarters. In 1887 he purchased the Roath property, in the heart of the business district, and, after tearing down the old buildings, erected a substantial brick structure 50x80 feet, three stories and basement. This commodious building inspired Mr. Frey to hold religious services in it before using it for business purposes. With him, to think is to act, and he at once made known his intentions to the best citizens. His project met with great favor, and after the seats had been arranged a large number of people assembled to consecrate, as it were, the building to the services of God. Rev. A. B. Saylor, pastor of the United Evangelical Church of Mt. Joy, preached the sermon, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hickman, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Marietta.

Mr. Frey now conducts the business under the firm name of S. F. Frey & Son, his son Samuel L. having been admitted as a partner. As a business man Mr. Frey has not confined his interest to his store alone. He has been largely interested in real estate, and owns considerable property in Marietta and Columbia, also being interested in farming in the northern part of the county. With others he started the Marietta Manufacturing Company, and is one of its board of directors, as well as a stockholder in the Marietta Silk Mills, using his efforts to secure the location of same in Marietta. He is an owner of stock and president of the Home Building & Loan Association, and is a director of the First National Bank of Marietta.

Education has no warmer friend in Lancaster county than Samuel F. Frey. In 1897 he was elected school director, and is now serving his fifth year. In 1898 he served as president of the school board, and he was one of the prime movers in the erection of the present modern school building, which is a credit to the town. Mr. Frey has held many positions of trust, and has frequently been called upon to settle up estates, acting as executor and administrator.

In religious affairs the name of Samuel F. Frey is written high as a zealous and disinterested worker in the cause of Christ. He, with a few others, made it possible, in 1896, to build Columbia Grace United Evangelical Church, corner of Locust and Walnut streets, and was the advisory member of the building committee, and the one who helped them bridge over the financial part of the question. They moved forward with undaunted trust and courage, never giving a thought of failure with a man like Mr. Frey by their side, until they were able to make other arrangements and help themselves, and had established confidence in their community and elsewhere, proving that they were a truly devoted, loyal Christian people, and could, and certainly would, accomplish their purpose by the grace and help of their Divine Master.

It was a success. The church was completed, and to-day there is not a more thriving congregation. Mr. Frey is not narrow in his religious work, his sympathies being broad enough to embrace all denominations, and he has assisted financially and otherwise in the upbuilding of a number of other churches. As an example of his untiring efforts may be detailed the establishment of the United Brethren Church of West Marietta, in 1879. Rev. J. M. Leshar (afterward sent as a missionary to Africa) called upon Mr. Frey, and said, in substance: "I am looking for a place to hold services to preach the Gospel, and I think there is room here. I have been informed West Marietta is a very wicked place, and has room for missionary work; that the harvest is ripe, and laborers are needed. I understand there is an M. E. chapel in that part of the town that is seldom used. This is just what I want, if I can get permission to use it. I was directed to you, being a member of the United Brethren faith, and as I need a place to stay when here to preach." Rev. Leshar was misinformed as to Mr. Frey's religious connection, inasmuch as he had been reared in the Evangelical Church, but that was immaterial. He welcomed him into his home, enthusiastically entering into all his plans, and agreeing to assist him as much as was in his power. These two men, armed with faith and led by the Master, wrought wondrous changes in the locality unto which they ministered. Success crowned the cause in the salvation of many precious souls rescued by the routing out of sin and wickedness; the homes were thoroughly changed and sanctified, where the praises of God are now sung. A more radical change was never witnessed, and there are many witnesses living to-day who will be happy to testify to this. Thirty-eight were converted, and united with the church. Not only had Mr. Frey assisted Rev. Mr. Leshar in the spiritual part of this work, but there had to be a place provided for these people to worship regularly undisturbed. They were rich in courage, and in the spring of 1880 arrangements were made to purchase the M. E. chapel, Mr. Frey giving his own personal obligation as security for the payment. After a few years the debt was wiped out, and the church marched triumphantly forward without the aid of outside help. The following was contributed by Rev. William Yenser, pastor of Zion's Reformed Church, Marietta: "In church work Mr. Frey is as active and thorough as in business, and his activities are not confined to any particular part of church work, but embrace all its departments. This activity in church life is supplemented by an unstinted generosity, which is exercised not only in behalf of his own denomination and congregation but which is as freely given to Christ's church of other denominations, he having very generously aided other congregations in their need, one of which was our own congregation, and especially at this present time, in the building of our new church." In religious faith, as noted above, Mr. Frey clings to the faith of his fathers—the Evangelical Association,—now known as the United Evangelical Church.

On Sept. 5, 1876, Samuel F. Frey was united in marriage with Miss Anna H. Longnecker, eldest daughter of Rev. John B. Longnecker, of the Old Brethren in Zion, now located in Florin, this county. Five children blessed this union: Samuel L., who was educated in Albright College, and now, fully equipped for business, is his father's partner, and is adding a strong progressive spirit to the firm; Anna and Myra, both students at Albright College; and Cora and Wilbur, at home. Politically Mr. Frey is a Republican. The success that has attended his efforts has been richly merited, and his industry, integrity and perseverance make him an example well worthy of emulation.

JACOB K. HERR, who entered into rest July 17, 1902, was a son of Jacob Herr, who, in his lifetime, was one of the representative men of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, and who was born in Manor township, this county.

Jacob K. Herr resided on the farm his father purchased in 1869, some years before his death. It contains seventy-six acres, lying just south of Hollinger, and is one of the choice and model farms of Lancaster county, attracting attention by its neat condition and thorough cultivation. Before his death Jacob Herr put up a fine barn, and his son also made many valuable improvements.

Jacob K. Herr took a lively interest in the general welfare of his community, and was always responsive to any proposition that affected the public good, being ever ready to assist in any enterprise that looked to the advancement of his section. At his death he was aged fifty-one years, eleven months and twenty-two days.

Jacob K. Herr was married, Feb. 20, 1896, to Sarah, daughter of Jacob and Lydia Zercher. Mrs. Herr was born in West Lampeter township.

WILLIAM J. BELL, who since 1885 has been one of the efficient and trusted conductors on the great Pennsylvania railroad, is a native of Columbia, born Jan. 4, 1853. His parents were William and Mary (Welsh) Bell, natives of Ireland, from which country they came when young. William Bell was a carpenter by trade, and would undoubtedly have accumulated means, but he fell a victim to the cholera in July, 1854, when but forty years of age. William was bereft of his mother in November of the same year. They left a family of six children, only two of whom yet survive, James (a mechanic of Harrisburg) and William J. The others were: Anna, who married Michael Baumberger; Maggie, who married Jonas Leas; and Thomas and Mary, who died in infancy.

Bereft of both parents, William J. Bell, when a child, was taken by his kind aunt, Ellen Supplee, to her home in Montgomery county, Pa., where he grew up engaged in healthful exercise on a farm until he was sixteen years old. At that date he went to Philadelphia, and served an apprenticeship at the painter's trade, which he followed until 1877, when he came to Columbia and was employed by the Pennsylvania railroad as a brakeman until 1882; he then served as flagman until 1885, when he received his promotion to conductor. Mr. Bell gained this position by proving his reliability, and receives, as he deserves, the confidence of his employers and the respect of the community.

Mr. Bell was married, April 22, 1879, in Columbia, to Miss Sally Adams, and to this union have been born seven children, the two youngest, John and Emil, passing out of life while young; the others are: William, who is a member of Company C, 4th Militia; Margie; Frederick; Harry; and Sarah. Mrs. Bell was born in 1862, daughter of John M. Adams, and a sister of Frederick Adams, of Columbia.

Politically Mr. Bell is connected with the Republican party, and socially with the orders of Railway Conductors and the P. R. Relief. He has long been associated with St. John's Lutheran Church.

SAMUEL SNYDER (deceased) was a reliable and progressive farmer in Leacock township, Lancaster county. He was born in Harristown, Paradise township, March 26, 1844, and died on the farm where his widow and sons are now living, Dec. 18, 1898. His remains rest in the cemetery connected with Christ Church in Leacock township.

Samuel Snyder was a son of Aaron and Hannah (Fenninger) Snyder, his father being a native of Germany, and his mother of Paradise township. The father died in 1864, at the age of sixty-one; and the mother in 1879, at the age of sixty-one. They were members of Christ Church, and were buried in the cemetery of that church. Their children were as follows: Sarah, who died at the age of forty-eight unmarried; Elizabeth, widow of John Slaymaker, and living at Gap, Pa.; Joanna, widow of Adam Groff, and residing in Lancaster; Jane, who lives unmarried in Lancaster, as does her sister, Rebecca; and Hannah, who married J. P. Herman, of Gordonville, Pennsylvania.

Samuel Snyder was married Jan. 7, 1874, to Anna M. Slack, of Leacock township. To them have come the following children: Elizabeth prepared herself for teaching by taking a course at the Millersville State Normal, and has now taught very successfully in the home schools for eight years; Anna R. died when a year old; John S. and J. Aaron, both single, operate the home place for the heirs of their father's estate. Mrs. Anna M. (Slack) Snyder was born in Leacock township, and is a sister of H. Slack.

Samuel Snyder came to the present farm home of his family in 1890, removing from Paradise township, where he had held the position of supervisor two years. He and his wife were members of Christ Church, in Leacock township, where he had held the position of warden, and was a vestryman. In his politics he was a Democrat. In his earlier life he was a cabinet maker, but in 1870 turned to farming, spending the rest of his life in that vocation. Very successful in all his undertakings, he became quite well-to-do, and reared a family whose useful lives and high character do credit to his watchful care.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN STAUFFER, insurance man, who is the district special agent of the great Northwestern Life Insurance Company, and also manager of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Coatesville, is one of the best-known and most successful men in his line in Lancaster county. Although still a young man, he has so thoroughly grasped the details of the insurance business that he has become an example to others who have spent a lifetime in the same.

Mr. Stauffer was born in Manor township March 30, 1861, son of Jacob and Maria K. (Forrey) Stauffer, both of whom were born in Manor township, in which are located the old family homesteads of both the Stauffer and the Forrey families. The father died in 1896 in Washington borough, after a retirement of one and one-half years, at the age of sixty-seven, and was laid away in the old Mennonite cemetery at the Habecker Meeting House. His active years had been spent as a farmer and drover. In politics he was a Democrat, and he was a man who won the respect of the entire community. The mother, who was born in 1830, resides in Washington. The children of this union were as follows: John J., who died in infancy, as did also Daniel; Emma, who married Joseph K. Shultz, of Washington; Benjamin Franklin; Albert F., who is a farmer of Washington; Elizabeth, who married Martin Strickler; Harry F., deceased; Milton F., who is professor of the short-hand department in Temple College, Philadelphia; Isaiah, who died in infancy; and Kate F., who resides with her mother. The older generation was represented by John Stauffer, who married a Charles, both coming of old families of Manor township.

Until the age of seventeen Benjamin Franklin Stauffer remained upon the farm where he had been born and reared, and then became a student in the State Normal School at Millersville, and, being unusually studious, he was able at the age of eighteen to accept a position as teacher in the public schools of Lancaster county. Until 1883 he alternated teaching and attendance at the Normal, where, in that year, he was graduated. His success in insurance lines has been very gratifying, and since 1898, when the business of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company was placed in his hands, he has found little time to look after other interests. Since assuming control of the latter business in this locality he has placed nearly $2,000,000 in risks.

Although not a politician in the usual meaning of the term, Mr. Stauffer is a Republican and always does a citizen's duty. His connection with the Lutheran Church has lasted through many years. On July 5, 1893, Mr. Stauffer was married to Miss M. Grace Jackson, and two daughters have been born to this union, Kathryn M. and Sara M. Mrs. Stauffer was born in Columbia in February, 1873, daughter of Newton and Sarah (Albright) Jackson, of Pequea and West Hempfield townships, respectively, now residents of Columbia, Mr. Jackson being a foreman in the roundhouse of the Pennsylvania railroad. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson were: John W., of Columbia; William K., who is a clerk in the Custom House in Philadelphia; and M. Grace, Mrs. Stauffer.

MRS. ANNA B. WITHERS. The name of the most estimable lady of whom this short biography is given, carries with it through Eden township the weight of public confidence and high esteem. Her high Christian character, her devotion to her church, and her numberless charities and acts of neighborly kindness have made her not only beloved by her immediate family, but most kindly and affectionately regarded through the whole community.

Anna B. Withers was born in Lampeter township, this county, Nov. 26, 1824, the estimable daughter of John and Fannie (Erb) Bireley, an old and leading family of this county. John Bireley, the father of Mrs. Withers, married into the prominent Erb family, Miss Fannie Erb belonging to one of the best known families of the county. After marriage they settled in Leacock township, on a farm, remaining there until his death, and his widow also died there, the children, besides Mrs. Withers, being as follows: Elizabeth, deceased, was the wife of William Good, of Lancaster county; Leah was the wife of William Good, deceased, of Leacock township; John became a brave soldier and served his country through the Civil war, later married Leah Yoder, of this county, and they moved to Cleveland, Ohio, in which city he died, leaving a widow and children; Susan, who was born in this county, is the wife of Reuben Clampson, who is a resident of Ohio, and they have a family; Fannie, born in this county, is the deceased wife of Thomas Wright, and lived in Eden township at the date of her death, when she left two children, Jeremiah and Annie; and Mary, now deceased, married David Graham, of this county, and her death left nine children motherless, namely: David, George, William, Samuel, John, Joseph, Leah (the wife of John MsGriggan, deceased), Lizzie (widow of Amos Shisley) and Mary (wife of George Struble, of this county).

Mrs. Withers grew up in her pleasant country home with her brothers and sisters, and was educated in the public schools of her neighborhood. In February, 1849, she was united in marriage to Abraham Herr, of this county, and they settled on the present home farm, in Eden township, where the father of Mr. Herr had started in life himself. Three years later Mr. Herr died, and his bereaved widow was left with one son, Abraham B., who died in childhood. The second marriage of Mrs. Withers occurred in 1859, when she was united to Augustus Withers, a prominent and wealthy business man of Lancaster county, who was the founder of the Mount Eden furnaces. Following their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Withers settled on the present farm, and here Mr. Withers engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, Oct. 25, 1868. Again was this estimable lady bereaved, but four children remained as her comfort and stay. These were: John B., born in October, 1860, married Miss Sallie Hall, and they reside in Hanover, York county, where he is successfully engaged in conducting a hotel, and has one son, Howard; Thomas A., born in this home, in November, 1861, married Miss Lizzie Hall, who was a sister to the wife of his brother, and their residence is in Lancaster City, where he is manager of the County Bending Works, and his seven living children are Jessie, Charles, Bertha, Mable, Jennie, Hazel and Grace; Mary H., born Dec. 17, 1862, and grew to womanhood in the old home, being well educated in the public schools, and in 1880 she was married to Joseph S. Groff, of Colerain township; and Howard H., born Oct. 2, 1865, is still unmarried, and follows railroading.

Joseph S. Groff was a son of John and Ellen Groff, the family being long a prominent one in Lancaster county. He and his family now reside at the Withers home, where they have the care and management of Mrs. Withers' farm. The four children of Mr. and Mrs. Groff are: John A., born in May, 1881, married Anna Strimbel, of Eden township, and they reside in Quarryville, where he is engaged as a barber, and they have one son, Howard; Eva B., born in August, 1884, is a student in Weidler's Business College, Lancaster City; Earl, born in October, 1888, is also a student; and Clyde, born Oct. 1, 1890.

Augustus Withers was born in Lancaster county Sept. 12, 1807, a son of John and Hannah (Henderson) Withers, who at an early date came from Germany and settled in Lancaster county. Their family consisted of four sons and one daughter, these being: Augustus; John, deceased, who was associated with his brother in the founding of the great industry of this township, known as the Eden furnaces, his death occurring in Virginia; William, who died in Lancaster county; Thomas, who died in the city of Williamsport, in this State; and Hannah, who died unmarried.

Mr. Withers was educated for a professional life, starting out upon what promised to be a successful medical career, but failing health made it necessary for him to give up the practice of medicine and turn his attention to other lines. As a business man he became very successful, and the flourishing industry of which he was was the founder lives as a record and testimonial to his energy and sagacity. In politics Mr. Withers was long one of the leading Republicans of this section, and was active in the interests of his party. His devotion to the Episcopal Church was a marked feature of his life, and there he was highly valued as a most worthy and consistent Christian.

Mrs. Withers and her family are equally devoted to the Lutheran Church, in which she has been active through many years, and where she is a liberal supporter of charitable enterprises and mission work. Perhaps no individual in the township has more personal friends than this very lovable and estimable lady.

WILLIAM MABLE, who died in Columbia at the comparatively early age of fifty-four, was an Englishman by birth, having first opened his eyes in Northumberland, England, May 28, 1839. His father was christened John, and his mother's maiden name was Isabella Hendry. John Mable was a tenant farmer, and a stanch Calvinist. Several of his children settled in County Antrim, Ireland, and the history of the family is full of interest.

To John and Isabella Mable were born seven children, of whom William was the third in the order of birth. Margaret, the eldest daughter, married Alexander Henderson, and died in England. Thomas is a farmer in Ireland. Isabella died in Ireland, unmarried. Mary married Thomas Moore, and also passed from life in the Emerald Isle. The two younger sons, John and George, both emigrated to this country. The first named is a mechanic living in Columbia, and the other a merchant residing in Marietta.

William Mable passed his early years in farming in both England and Ireland. In 1869, then a young man of thirty years, he crossed the ocean, finding his way to Wisconsin, where he found employment on a farm. At the expiration of four years he returned to Ireland to claim his promised bride, Margaret Miller. They were married Jan. 7, 1873, and crossed the water together, to seek a common fortune in a strange land. They settled in Columbia, and young William, then strong and sturdy, went to work in an iron furnace. Two years later failing health compelled him to quit active work, and he continued an invalid until the time of his death.

His widow, Margaret (Miller) Mable, is still living. Some seven years before her husband's death, in 1886, she opened a grocery store in Columbia, in the conduct of which (her youngest son, John, acting as manager) she has been fairly successful. She has but one other child, a daughter, Margaret, who is unmarried and resides at home, but is now visiting relatives abroad. Mrs. Mable was born in County Antrim, Ireland, May 25, 1844. Her paternal grandparents were James and Rachel (Bowman) Miller, of Scotland. James was a farmer, and died in County Antrim, Ireland. Her mother, whose maiden name was Margaret Service, was a daughter of William Service and Margaret Stewart. Her father died in January, 1892, after completing his eighty-second year. Her mother survived him until April, 1900, when she, too, fell asleep, after attaining the extraordinary age of ninety-one years. Her grandfather, William Service, died of old age, in his ninety-ninth year. She is the third child of a large family, the others being named William, Rachel, James, Samuel, John and Robert. William is a merchant in Ballymena, Ireland. Rachel is the widow of William Moore, of Belfast. James and Samuel are farmers in County Antrim, Ireland. John is the manager of a quarry in County Down. Robert, who was at one time a merchant at Antrim, is deceased.

AMOS BOWMAN. Among the worthy and representative citizens of Lancaster county is Amos Bowman, who lives a retired life on his fine farm of sixty acres, situated one mile east of Lampeter, in West Lampeter township. He was born in Providence township Sept. 25, 1849, a son of Rev. Henry and Mary (Baer) Bowman.

Rev. Henry Bowman was but twenty-eight years of age when he was chosen a minister of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and from that time until his death faithfully officiated in the capacity of minister and bishop. He was thrice married; his first wife, Elizabeth Weaver, bore him one son, Jacob. By his second wife, Susannah Weaver, he became the father of the following children: Elizabeth, wife of Henry Trout; Annie and John, deceased; Esther (Hettie), deceased wife of Christian Kreider; and Henry, deceased. For his third wife Rev. Bowman married Mrs. Mary (Baer) Brenne-man, widow of Jacob Brenne-man. Two sons blessed this union, Frank and Amos.

Amos Bowman was reared in Providence township, and was educated in the public schools. When he was twenty-eight years of age he engaged in farming operations in East Lampeter township, where he remained for one year, and then in 1868 purchased his present farm of Abraham Herr. Many valuable and permanent improvements have been made to this farm, and now all its surroundings testify to the thrift and excellent management of its owner. For many years he was well-known in the affairs of the township, but since 1870 has not taken an active part in either farming or public matters, enjoying the ease of ample means.

In 1867 Amos Bowman married Barbara Weaver, a daughter of Joseph and Esther (Stehman) Weaver, the former of whom was a minister of the Reformed Mennonite Church. No children have been born to Amos Bowman and wife, but they gave parental care and affection to two little sisters, Emma and Catherine Sloat, whom they reared to maturity, and who now have homes of their own, Emma having married Rohrer Snively, of New Danville; and Catherine, G. H. Shirtz, of Lancaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowman are most hospitable people, and none in the county possess the esteem of their neighbors in a higher degree. They are both active workers in the Reformed Mennonite church.

Rev. Joseph Weaver, father of Mrs. Bowman, was born on the old Weaver homestead in West Lampeter township, and is a direct descendant of the founder of the family who settled in this country in 1711. Rev. Joseph Weaver was born April 5, 1792, and for many years was a devoted and valued minister of the Reformed Mennonite Church in Lancaster county. Early in life he was a farmer, but later devoted his entire time to ministerial work and to the upbuilding of the Church. His was a beautiful Christian character, and all who came within his influence were benefited. He married first, Barbara Baer, and their children were: Isaac, Ephraim, Jacob and Eliza, all deceased; and Mary and Susannah, living. For his second wife Rev. Weaver wedded Esther Stehman, a daughter of John Stehman, of Strasburg township, and two children were born of this marriage: Barbara A.; and Annie E., who is the wife of John S. Kurtz, of Lancaster City.

LEVI MOHLER. Among the substantial retired agriculturists of Lancaster county, no one is better or more favorably known than Levi Mohler, who owns and occupies the old homestead which was established by the founder of the American branch of the family five generations ago.

Ludwig Mohler, the Swiss ancestor of the Mohler family, came to the United States as early as 1730, and here founded a family which has given many many sons and blooming daughters to the State of Pennsylvania, their descendants having settled throughout this and many of the neighboring States.

John Mohler, the father of Levi Mohler, was born in 1786, and about 1814 married Salome Gline, and they reared nine children: Amanda, born in 1816, married Harry Keller; Cyrus, born in 1819; John, born in 1820; Frederick, born in 1823; Levi, born in 1824; Reuben, born in 1826; Saloma, born in 1828; Isaac, born in 1830; and Samuel, born in 1835.

Levi Mohler, the subject of this biography, was born Oct. 25, 1824, and has had a busy although a quiet life. Pursuing farming exclusively, he has become possessed of large means, owning two of the finest farms in Lancaster county, one of these containing one hundred acres, and the other seventy-two acres, both of these being finely improved. In 1852 he was married to Miss Magdalena Bitzer, the estimable daughter of John and Elizabeth (Royer) Bitzer, and to this union five children were born: Elizabeth, born in 1852, married Nathan Fahnestock; Solomon, born in 1855, died in childhood; Louisa, born in 1857, died in girlhood; Fianna, born in 1859, married William J. Echart, of Berks county, Pa.; and John, born Feb. 1, 1862.

John Mohler married Jane Dinger, of Lebanon county, Pa., and manages the home place for his father, his family of children bearing these names: Lizzie, Alice, Levi, Urias, Ida, Emma, Hiram and Allen.

In politics our subject is a staunch Republican, and has long been a prominent member of the German Baptist Church. His declining years are spent in peace and contentment, esteemed and respected by the community, and he well represents the law abiding, upright citizens of which Lancaster county has cause to feel proud.

GEORGE BOWMAN BRESSLER, alderman of the Fifth ward, Lancaster, bears the name of a noted Methodist divine, and belongs to an old and influential family in his part of the State. He is the fourth George in the family since its settlement in America.

George Bressler, his grandfather, was born at Strasburg, this county, son of a native-born German who came to the United States and settled in Pennsylvania. George Bressler was a farmer, and a man of character and standing.

C. H. Bressler, father of George B., of Lancaster, was born in Mill Hall, Clinton county, Pa. After receiving a thorough elementary education he determined to take up the study of medicine and surgery, for that purpose entering the office of the late Dr. Washington L. Atlee; the late Dr. Henry Mellinger was also a student under Dr. Atlee at the same time. C. H. Bressler was graduated from Jefferson Medical College with the degree of M. D., and from 1839 to 1849 practiced medicine in Lancaster. Finally becoming associated with the late Dr. Ely Parry, one of Lancaster's most noted dentists (father of Dr. H. B. Parry, the East King street druggist), and becoming himself proficient in dentistry, Dr. Bressler took up that branch in connection with surgery, removed to Center county, and in 1854 to York county, where he built up a very extensive practice in both lines. Dr. Bressler was an ardent Republican politically, and at one time was a candidate for Congressional honors, and later appeared on the State Republican ticket as a candidate for Congressman at large. In 1866 he was commissioned by Gov. Curtin sheriff of York county, to fill a vacancy. A devout Methodist, few stood higher in the estimation of his associates in the Church than did this zealous Christian gentleman.

Dr. Bressler married Miss Sarah A. Tonner, daughter of Rev. John N. Tonner, of the Methodist Church, who died at Canton, Ohio. Eight children were born of this union, seven of whom are living: Dr. John T., a dentist of Shepherdstown, Cumberland county; George B., mentioned below; Emma Barnett and Clara V., of York; Dr. Wilbur C., a dentist of York; Andrew Curtin, a traveling salesman of York; and Ella M., at home. The father of this family died in February, 1894, at the age of seventy-four years; and the mother died in 1868, when thirty-eight years old.

George Bowman Bressler was born in Bellefonte, Center county, April 23, 1851. He was partially educated in the public schools of York, and after leaving the city schools took an academic course. When only fourteen years of age he tried to enlist in the Union army, at Harrisburg. The officer in command of the station, seeing that young Bressler, though much under age, was bright and trusty, made him a clerk at the recruiting station, where he remained until the close of the war. When he was seventeen years of age he became an apprentice at printing in the office of the True Democrat, at York, and in 1870 came to Lancaster to enter the employ of Pearsol & Geist, proprietors of the Express, where he remained until his entrance upon a clerkship in the post office in 1874, under Postmistress Hager. At a later period he became a letter carrier, but he was thrown out of service by a change in the National administration. After working for some time in the Lancaster Watch Works Mr. Bressler became a grocer, in the fall of 1885.

In 1892 Mr. Bressler was elected an alderman on the Republican ticket, from the Fifth ward of Lancaster, and so satisfactory was his administration of the duties of that position that in 1897 he was again elected, without opposition, and he was again honored with re-election in 1902.

George B. Bressler was married, Aug. 13, 1874, to Miss Eleanor Henry, daughter of the late Benjamin Henry, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Lancaster. To this marriage three children have been born: Eleanor, wife of W. Hayes Farley, a jeweler of Lock Haven; Charles H., at home; and Anna L., wife of William E. Dietz, of Sutton, West Virginia.

Mr. Bressler, like his father, is devotedly attached to the Methodist Church. Fraternally he is a member of Lamberton Lodge, No. 476, Royal Arch Masons, and of the Lodge of Perfection.

SAMUEL H. BOYD. Among the well-known business men of Columbia of established reputations is the present tax collector of that borough, Samuel H. Boyd, who for the past twenty years has been elected annually to that responsible position. A more direct evidence of general public esteem and confidence it would be difficult to find. Mr. Boyd was born in Columbia Aug. 20, 1850, son of John and Elizabeth (Stanley) Boyd, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county. His paternal grandparents were James and Mary (Fisher) Boyd. The grandmother, a native of Columbia, died a victim of cholera. The maternal grandparents of Samuel H. were James and Catherine (Hinkle) Stanley, of York county, Pennsylvania.

John Boyd, father of Samuel H., was a life-long railroad man. For many years he was keeper of the warehouse at Columbia for Leach and for the Pennsylvania lines. He died in 1871, aged fifty-five years. His wife died in 1865, aged forty-five years. Both were buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery. Five children were born to them, namely: Mary A., who married David Welsh, of Columbia, died Dec. 29, 1902; James, deceased; Ella, wife of Dr. H. V. Gress, of York county, Pa.; Catharine, widow of Joshua T. Hughes, of Columbia, who was killed at the Electric Railroad plant during a cyclone in that borough in May, 1896; and Samuel H.

Samuel H. Boyd, the youngest of the family, has been a life-long resident of Columbia, and a life-long resident of the home he now occupies. He received a good education in the public schools, and in the earlier years of his manhood he entered the railroad service, for twelve years being employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad in caring for the ware house at Columbia. In 1880 he was appointed tax collector by the school board of Columbia, and has been elected each term since, filling the duties of the office in a businesslike and satisfactory manner to the people of Columbia, and with credit to himself.

In politics Mr. Boyd is a Republican. He attends the Methodist Episcopal Church. Prominent in the fraternal orders of the borough, he is an active member of the I. O. O. F. of Columbia, and of the A. O. M. P. of Ridgely. Mr. Boyd has evinced excellent business qualities through life and possesses a good competence in consequence.

GEORGE W. BIRELEY. One of the leading men of Eden township, who has been prominently identified with the best interests of Lancaster county all his life, and who, now in his declining years, enjoys the high regard and esteem of his fellow-citizens, is George W. Bireley, a retired farmer, who was one of the loyal citizens who fought for his country's flag during the Civil war.

Mr. Bireley was born in Leacock township, this county, July 6, 1835, a son of George and Mary (Kunkle) Bireley, both of whom were born in Strasburg, in this county, the former in 1807, and the latter in 1813.

George Bireley, the grandfather of our subject, came of German ancestry, and Revolutionary stock. He settled in Strasburg, engaged in farming, and provided well for his three sons, John, who settled in Leacock township as a farmer, and died many years ago, leaving a family; Jacob, who settled for a time in Leacock township, later moving near Lancaster City, where he engaged in farming all his life, and left a family at his death; and George, the last named being the father of our subject.

George Bireley, son of George, and father of George W., settled in Leacock township, later moved to Strasburg, where he lived until 1859, and then removed to Chester county, in this State, making his home with his son, George W., who was living there at that time, returning with him to Eden township after the war, and lived with him until his death in 1886. He married Mary Kunkle, daughter of Henry Kunkle, of English parentage. She shared with him all the hardships of pioneer life, and survived until March, 1901, dying in Chester county, at the home of her son Zacheus, at the age of ninety years. These parents were blessed with seven manly sons, and one daughter, namely: (1) Christiana, born in 1828, in Lancaster county, married James Shields, a native of Ireland, and after marriage they settled in Leacock township, where she soon died, leaving one daughter, Mary J., a telegraph operator in Harrisburg. (2) Henry, born in Lancaster county, in 1830, married Maggie Hoover, of Chester county, and they reside in Sadsbury township. When the Civil war broke out he was one of the first to respond to the call for soldiers, and after his return from serving his enlistment, he was made marshal of this district, and efficiently served as such until the close of the war, when he settled in Bart township, where he lived until the time of his death; his wife died some years later. (3) George W. is mentioned below. (4) Daniel, born in 1840, also offered his services to his country, enlisting in the 79th P. V. I., under Col. Hambright, of Lancaster, served three years, and then, re-enlisting, he filled out the period until the close of the war. At the battle of Chattanooga he and six others were all that remained of a company of one hundred men, and he took part in many other severe engagements, returning home, however, in safety. He married Caroline Ikerley, of Strasburg, and they settled in Lancaster county, but later removed to Kansas City, Mo., where they still reside and have a numerous family. (5) Jacob M., born in Lancaster county, in 1842, also came forward, like his brothers, and offered his life to his country in the trying days of 1861. After a service of three years he too re-enlisted and remained in the service until the close of the war, and participated in all of the battles in which his regiment took part, until near the end, when he was taken sick, was sent home and died soon after, as much a martyr as if killed on the field of battle. (6) Winfield Scott and (7) Zachary Taylor, twins, born in 1846, both enlisted for service in the Civil war, when less than sixteen years of age, entering Co. D, 203d P. V. I., at Camp Cadwallader, Philadelphia, but Winfield died in a hospital at Wilmington, N. C. Taylor served through the war, participating in many hard-fought battles and returned with so honorable a record that he has been State marshal since. After his return he was married to Emma Steel, of this county, and they reside in Chester county. Their children are: Annie, wife of William Clinton, of Chester county; Clara, wife of Thomas Hilton; Cora, wife of Frank Hilton; Winnifred; John B.; Marshall; and Roy. (8) William T., born in Lancaster county, was a soldier through the Civil war, belonging to the 122nd P. V. C., and from three enlistments had three honorable discharges. He, too, survived the dangers of war, and after his return was married to Mary Steel, of this county, and they settled in Eden township, where his death occurred in 1891, leaving a widow and family who are residents of Chester county, the children being Lillie, who married Howard Alexander, of Chester county, and has two children, Bertie and Robert; Susan, who married Newton McGinnis, and has one son, William; George D. and Benjamin F., both unmarried, and both residents of Chester.

George W. Bireley, of this biography, was reared in the midst of a home where was taught industry and loyalty. His education was acquired in the district schools, and when his age warranted his engaging in work he soon found employment in the county in quarrying and lime burning. At that date this work was very extensively carried on in his locality. In 1857 he was united in marriage to Sarah J. Hoover, the estimable daughter of Mathias and Anna Hoover, prominent farming people of Chester county. Mrs. Bireley was born in 1835, and grew up in Lancaster county.

That George W. Bireley was roused to patriotic action when the call came for soldiers to defend his country, did not surprise those who knew him best. He became a member of Co. D, 203d P. V. I., and he took part in all of the engagements in which his regiment participated, until he was seriously wounded at Wilmington, N. C., and was placed in a hospital, where he remained until the close of the war. He also suffered from rheumatism and lumbago, as a result of the exposure and hardships endured in that great struggle.

At enlistment Mr. Bireley left his wife and two children in Chester county, and he returned there, but soon after removed to Eden and remained there until in 1890, when he purchased the Eden Furnace property. Mr. Bireley has been held in high esteem by his fellow-citizens for a long period, this being proven by his election for a season of sixteen years as supervisor of Eden township, while he has also efficiently served as county and school tax collector, and for nine years as county and township tax collector. Politically he is an ardent and active member of the Republican party.

In June, 1879, occurred the death of Mrs. Bireley, at which time she left five children, Anna M., born in Chester county, in May, 1860, who married Henry Wolf, of this county, and they reside in Eden township, their five children being Daniel J., George W., Lizzie S., Henry, Lena; and Daniel J., born Feb. 3, 1862, in Chester county, who married Sallie Hagan, of this county, and they reside on his father's homestead, and their two children are Letta I. and Dora M.; Barbara A., born in December, 1866, in this county, is the wife of Harry Frackman, of Georgetown, and their four children are Annie, Jennie, Virgie and Etna; Lydia P., born in July, 1870, is the wife of George Gaul, a farmer of Eden township, and their three children are Hilda, Enos and Myrtle; and Iva H., born in September, 1872, is the wife of William Althaus, a resident of Paradise township, and their two children are Walter and Earl.

On Dec. 29, 1881, Mr. Bireley was married to Augusta Louisa Kemmerly, a native of Lancaster county, and a daughter of Franklin and Christianna S. Kemmerly. The family came to America from Germany in 1862. Mrs. Bireley was born in Germany Aug. 3, 1860, and she grew to fair young womanhood and was educated in this county. Four children have been born to this union, namely: Catherine E., born in April, 1886; George H., born in August, 1888; Winfield S., born in April, 1891; and Agnes L., born June 9, 1895.

Few families in the country, and surely none in Lancaster county testified to their loyal love of country as did the honored one of which our subject is a member. Fitting, indeed, was it that the G. A. R. Post of this locality should be named in his honor, and that of the brave young brother who lost his life in the cause of his country. Mr. Bireley has taken a deep interest in this noble organization, and has been honored as its commander. Entirely aside from his war record, Mr. Bireley has won the confidence and esteem of the community by his honorable life, his public-spirit, and the interest and enterprise he has always shown in the advancement of his section and people. Both he and wife are leading members of the Lutheran Church, where he is a liberal supporter and regular attendant.

Mr. Bireley met with a misfortune in 1892 which has caused untold regret to his many friends. By accident he received a gun shot wound in the foot, which has necessitated his use of crutches, but it is the fervent hope of friends and acquaintances that time may remedy or mitigate the injury. Few men are more universally popular than is George W. Bireley of Eden township.

BENJAMIN P. MILLER. For nearly thirty years this well known retired merchant of Lancaster was engaged in the wholesale grocery trade in that city. He established the business, which under his supervision grew and prospered. Late in the afternoon of life himself and business partner transferred the valuable business to their sons and retired from active life. The career of Mr. Miller has been such that he is entitled to great credit. Handicapped in his early life by ill health, yet filled with determination, he did best that work which lay before him, changing the nature of his employment as he found it overtaxing his strength, until, in the creation of the wholesale house now so well and widely known, he found the vocation which has yielded adequate reward to his intelligence and well-directed application.

Mr. Miller was born in Lancaster April 2, 1827, son of Martin and Elizabeth (Mylin) Miller, early residents of Lancaster county, and was but a year and a half old when his father died. When a child of ten years he removed with his mother from Lancaster to a farm in Rockhill, where he remained two years. He then attended school at Lancaster for two and a half years, after which he began an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade. Owing to ill health he abandoned that trade a few years later, and embarked in 1855 in business as a retail grocer at Lancaster, continuing thus until 1865. The confinement incident to that business also in time proved unfavorable to his health. He had conducted the store successfully for ten years, and after traveling some time, selling groceries, he engaged in business at Lancaster as a wholesale grocer. Two years later he admitted to partnership John I. Hartman, and for nearly thirty years the firm was prominently connected with the commercial interests of Lancaster. Wishing to see the business continued after their prospective retirement, their sons were thoroughly taught the details of the expanded trade, so that in the year 1895 the business was surrendered to them. Mr. Miller's business judgment is keen and accurate, his knowledge and interest in public affairs broad and thorough, and as one of the most prominent citizens of Lancaster he is held in the highest esteem by his numerous business and social friends and by all who know him.

Henry P. Miller Jr

Mr. Miller married, at Philadelphia, Pa., in 1862, Miss Mary C., daughter of Frederick Miller; she died April 5, 1885. To Mr. and Mrs. Miller were born seven children, two sons and five daughters; namely: Ella L.; Charles A., wholesale grocer at Lancaster, who married, in January, 1892, Mrs. Jennie Gardner, and has one child, Mary; Ora, who married, Oct. 5, 1893, David S. Widmeyer, furniture dealer and undertaker, of Lancaster, and has one son, John Henry; Mary; Benjamin P., Jr.; Mabel G., who married, Oct. 20, 1901, Christian Engle; and Edna M. In religious affiliation Mr. Miller is an old and prominent member of St. John's Lutheran Church, having joined the church in 1854. He has served as town councilman for two years, being elected by the Republicans. In early life he belonged to the I. O. O. F.

OLIVER CROMWELL BALMER, the genial and successful manager of the Lancaster city office of the Western Union Telegraph office, is a native of Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and comes of a long and useful line of manly and sturdy people. His ancestors were French Huguenots, who sought a refuge on these shores from bitter persecution, and have always been a hardy and long-lived race. Elizabeth (Haybecker) Balmer, the grandmother of Oliver C., attained the venerable age of ninety-five years. Samuel Balmer, his grandfather, was a school teacher and a contracting carpenter. His brother, Daniel Balmer, served the State as member of the Legislature many years ago.

William Henry Harrison Balmer, father of Oliver Cromwell, now resides at Carnegie, Pa. He was for many years a druggist and merchant of Elizabethtown, this county. He married Martha, daughter of Mrs. Daniel Shank, living near Elizabethtown, and to this union were born five children, four of whom are living: Samuel H., shipping clerk of the Steelton Flour Mill Co., Steelton, Pa.; Oliver C., at Lancaster; Elizabeth Haybecker, wife of A. T. Stewart, president of the A. T. Stewart art Implement Manufacturing Company, at Carnegie, near Pittsburg; Mabel Blanche, wife of Henry Hamme, shipping clerk of the York Wall Paper Company, of York, Pennsylvania.

Oliver Cromwell Balmer was born at Elizabethtown Sept. 6, 1865, and was educated at Columbia, Pa., to which place his parents had removed. At the age of ten years he began carrying newspapers, and at eleven entered a store, becoming messenger boy for the Western Union Telegraph Company when not thirteen years old. This place he held for three years, when he went to Harrisburg, in the employ of the same company, also as messenger. He was appointed operator at the old Pennsylvania railroad depot at Harrisburg, and filled that position for a year and a half. In 1883 he was appointed manager of the telegraph office in the "Brighton Hotel," subsequently taking charge of the main office at Atlantic City for a short time. In 1884 he was transferred to Lancaster, to hold an operator's chair, and there he worked for a year and a half, when he was transferred to Harrisburg, to remain a year and a half. He was then transferred to Birmingham, Ala., and remained in the Southern city nearly a year, when he was recalled to Harrisburg to fill the position of operator and wire chief, continuing in that place until 1892, when he became manager at York. There he was employed until the opening months of 1899, when he was appointed manager of the Western Union office in Lancaster, an unbroken service in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company of nearly twenty-three years.

Mr. Balmer was married to Miss Lilly D., daughter of Prof. D. G. Williams, for nine years superintendent of the public schools of York county, and who is now a notary public engaged in the insurance and real estate business. To this union two children were born: Oliver Cromwell, Jr., and David Williams.

Mr. Balmer belongs to the First Methodist Church of Lancaster, and is a teacher in the Sunday-school. In politics he is a Republican. He belongs to several benevolent organizations. As manager of the Western Union office he has made many friends by his unfailing courtesy and close attention to all business that passes through his hands.

G. J. P. RAUB, general insurance manager at Quarryville, was born in Eden township Aug. 15, 1852, son of Dr. John K. and Leah (Peoples) Raub. The parents were both born in Lancaster county.

John K. Raub, after his marriage, settled in Hawkessville, where he taught school for a time, and then took up the study of medicine, which he practiced for many years, becoming prominent both as a physician and citizen. He accumulated large means by putting the income from his practice in investments which returned good interest. He moved to New Providence, where he practiced up to a short time before his death, in 1867. His wife is still living, and is now the wife of Edward Aston, of New Providence. Dr. John K. Raub left one son and one daughter: G. J. P., and Lillie. The daughter was educated at the Millersville Normal School, married Elam K. Herr, formerly of Quarryville borough, but now residing at Bloomfield, Iowa; they have two daughters, Ella and Miriam.

G. J. P. Raub was educated at the Millersville State Normal School and Kutztown Normal School. His early life was spent as a clerk in a country store, until he entered into partnership with F. W. Helm, in a general store at New Providence, at which place he continued for five years. He then moved to Quarryville, where he entered into a partnership with George W. Hensel, his father-in-law. The firm continued as Hensel & Co. until 1874, when Mr. Raub purchased Mr. Hensel's interest and continued the business until 1890. He then sold out and engaged in general insurance for the Northwestern Life Insurance Company, of Milwaukee, Wis., which he has continued until the present time. Since 1890 he has engaged in the insurance business, and he is now manager of the district, a position of honor and profit. He received a medal from the company for careful and judicious management of its affairs. When he first began in the insurance business his territory consisted of parts of Lancaster and Chester counties, but now he has charge, in addition to the foregoing, of the counties of Franklin and Fulton, and a part of Schuylkill, in Pennsylvania, and of Washington, Frederick and Montgomery, in Maryland. In point of business Mr. Raub stands first in the State of any representatives of his company, and has been awarded medals to that effect from the company.

In 1873 G. J. P. Raub married Miss Ella M. Hensel, daughter of George W. and Anna M. Hensel. He has two children: Florence H., who was born in 1875; and Charles H., born in 1879, who is a graduate of the State College of Center county, Pa., class of 1901.

In politics Mr. Raub is a Democrat, but he has never aspired to office. Fraternally he is a member of the order of Elks, Chambersburg Lodge. He and his wife are members of the Reformed Church of Quarryville.

Mr. Raub is scrupulously honest, and his integrity is well known and esteemed by all. He is a man of more than ordinary ability, and his life has been one of active business, which he has made successful by giving it his entire attention and time.

M. H. GROFF. Among the leading and representative citizens of Drumore township is M. H. Groff, who is a native of Lancaster county, born in West Lampeter township, Oct. 24, 1847, a son of Eli and Susan (Herr) Groff, the former of whom was a son of Jacob Groff, a native of Germany, who became a highly respected and well-known farmer of Lancaster county.

Eli Groff married Susan Herr about 1840, and three sons were born to them: Harvey H., whose young life went out on the terrible battle field in Virginia, in 1863, a member of Co. G, 21st P. V. C.; Aquilla, who died in Williamsport, Wyoming Co., Pa., in his seventeenth year; and M. H. Groff, of Drumore township.

Although in early life M. H. Groff possessed little in the way of worldly goods, he was full of energy and ability, and as the years passed on he accumulated means, and now is the fortunate owner of one of the best small farms in his township, which is improved with excellent and comfortable buildings. On Dec. 9, 1874, Mr. Groff was married to Miss Annie C. Rowe, of Drumore township, who was born on May 25, 1854, a daughter of Samuel and Annie (Tanger) Rowe, of Drumore, the former of whom was born July 3, 1826, and the latter April 22, 1827, and they both reside with M. H. Groff. Mrs. Groff has but one brother, Benjamin F. Rowe, who is a farmer of Drumore township. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Groff: Samuel Chester, born in 1875, married Naomi Harnish, of Drumore, and they have one son; Maurice H. Groff; Annie Myrtle, born in 1877, died at the age of twenty-one years; and Iva S., born in 1881, resides with her parents.

In politics Mr. Groff has always been devoted to the interests of the Republican party, and he has been called upon at various times to serve his party as supervisor of roads and assessor, filling these positions with satisfaction to all concerned. In 1890, and again in 1900, Mr. Groff was appointed to take the census in Drumore township, and this duty was performed with carefulness and efficiency. Mr. Groff is a leading member of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church, and is now (1902) one of the trustees, and in every way he is a reliable and representative citizen of his township, in which he is universally esteemed.

Peter Eckert was born Feb. 20, 1828, and now resides on a fine farm in Manheim township. His wife was born Oct. 8, 1824, and died March 14, 1899. Diller, a farmer and drover of East Earl township; and Otomer S., of this sketch. Levi Eckert, the grandfather, was a prominent farmer and large landowner of Leacock township, and was the father of these children: Caroline, the wife of John Bair, of Leacock township; Clara, wife of George De Haven, of East Earl; Elmyra, deceased; Peter C.; Otomer S., a farmer of Leacock township, now deceased; and Levi, who died in childhood. The great-grandfather of the Eckert family came to America from Switzerland, and was one of the early settlers of this part of the county.

Otomer S. Eckert was educated in the public schools, and grew up a farmer boy, early learning in the school of experience all the details of an agricultural life. From choice he has followed farming pursuits, and has become one of the substantial men of this locality.

Mr. Eckert was happily married on March 8, 1882, to Miss Mary J. Geist, who was born Dec. 28, 1859, a daughter of John and Charlotte (Harnish) Geist, of Upper Leacock township, and to this union have been born four daughters: Lottie, Katie, Clara and Minnie. In politics Mr. Eckert is a Republican, and the family have always been members of the German Reformed Church. JACOB G. STAUFFER, a lumber merchant of Elizabethtown, combines with his hardwood interests, extensive dealings in coal, flour and grain mill products, operates an important stone crushing enterprise, and contracts crushed stone in any quantity to cities and corporations. An enterprising and pushing business man of high character and deserved popularity, he is widely recognized as one of the representative men of this part of the State.

Mr. Stauffer was born six miles from Elizabethtown, in the township of Mt. Joy, May 29, 1850, son of Jacob and Mary (Groff) Stauffer, natives of Mt. Joy and Rapho townships, respectively. They died on the old family homestead which was the birthplace of their son, Jacob G. The elder Stauffer was a man of considerable prominence in his home community, and was supervisor for thirteen years, holding at the same time other local positions of more or less importance. He died at the age of sixty-eight years. Both he and his wife were members of the German Baptist Church, and their remains are at rest in the cemetery connected with the Chickies Meeting House. They were the parents of the following children: Fannie, the wife of Samuel Risser, of Lebanon county; Mary, the widow of David Moyer, of Mt. Joy township; Rebecca, deceased; John, a farmer of the township of Mt. Joy; Abraham, a farmer of Lebanon county; and Jacob G. Both the paternal and maternal grandparents of Jacob G. Mr. Stauffer remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority, when he rented a farm for a time and then bought it, only to sell after some four years of cultivation at a very good profit. After selling out his farming interest Mr. Stauffer moved into Elizabethtown, where he had bought a flouring mill, which he has operated to the present time. In 1886 he had achieved so much success as a miller that he felt warranted in branching out and taking up in addition to his mill work, coal and grain, as well as lumber, making many irons in the fire, but he is able to keep them all going at a white heat. Mr. Stauffer has served on the borough council six years, and has been a burgess ten consecutive years. He is a Republican, and an enterprising, thrifty man, as well as a prominent and public-spirited citizen.

DAVID A. HUBER. One of the progressive and public-spirited citizens of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, is David A. EZRA B. WOLF, owner and proprietor of The Press, of Denver, Lancaster county, is a native of West Cocalico township, where he was born Aug. 20, 1852, son of Christian and Susan (Burkholder) Wolf.

Christian Wolf, the father of Ezra B., was born and reared in Warwick township, son of Henry and Leah Wolf, the former of whom died when Christian was very small. The latter was reared to farm life, became a carpenter also, and was skilled in cabinet making, and had an undertaking establishment in the village of Schoeneck, where he died in 1881, at the age of fifty-eight years. As a cabinet maker and manufacturer of furniture he became well known and prosperous. He had a family of six children, namely: Salinda, deceased, who wedded John F. Harnish, of West Earl township; Henry, a carpenter and undertaker, at Lincoln; Ezra B., our subject; Susan, the widow of Jacob E. Shirk, of Stevens; Mary, the widow of J. M. Millinger, of Denver; Emma, the wife of J. G. Burkholder, of Denver. The mother of this family also resides in Denver.

Ezra B. Wolf was reared on the farm, and learned the cabinet-making trade, taking naturally to working in wood. He became his father's most skilled assistant. Before he was sixteen years old he had learned the details of the undertaking business, and had become so competent that his father regarded him as worthy of excellent wages. When about twenty-two years of age he succeeded to his father's business at Schoeneck and later established a branch at Denver, resulting in his removal to the latter place in 1883. Since that time Mr. Wolf has been prominently identified with the progress and development of this town, first engaging in the furniture and undertaking business which he carried on some years, but later dropped the furniture line and now conducts a first-class undertaking business, being a graduate of two embalming schools.

In 1895, in association with Dr. S. G. Burkholder, he purchased the leading newspaper in this section, The Press, which had been established in 1890 by Myers & Lutz, Mr. Myers succeeding the above named firm, and in turn being succeeded by our subject and Dr. Burkholder as stated. At that time it was a single sheet journal of some six or seven columns, which has been transformed into a double sheet paper of eight pages, which is issued weekly. In 1896 Mr. Wolf assumed entire control and has ably conducted it ever since, giving its patrons one of the best edited and most satisfactory papers of this locality. As a wise measure in a growing community, the paper is non-partisan and hence can comment without bias on general events of interest, while it can be made a power in the upbuilding of the borough. In 1900 the village of Denver was made a borough, and Mr. Wolf was a very important factor in effecting the desired change. He is president of the board of education, and his public-spirited efforts meet with the commendation of the public.

The first marriage of Mr. Wolf was to Miss Lizzie Eberly, daughter of Isaac Eberly. Her death occurred in 1890, her two children preceding her. The second marriage of Mr. Wolf was to Mrs. Linda Yeager, widow of John Yeager, and daughter of John Fahnstock, of Warwick township. The three children born to this union are: Mary Esther, Raymond Hobson and Christian Herbert. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wolf are members of the U. B. Church, in which he is trustee and steward, and to which he is a liberal contributor. Fraternally Mr. Wolf is connected with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., of Reading; Cocalico Lodge, No. 408, I. O. O. F.; Cocalico Lodge, No. 400, K. of P.; Camp 13, of Denver, P. O. S. of A.; and Lodge No. 205, K. of G. E.

Mr. Wolf has done much for the borough of Denver in the way of improvement of real estate, and has erected a number of handsome edifices, among them being two dwellings, a store building, the building occupied by The Press, also offices for lodge rooms of various kinds, and others which are among the best in Denver. He was one of the principal contributors to the present U. B. Church building, and also to the public school. His commercial and personal standing is very high in the young city where he has chosen his home, and where he has many friends.

SAMUEL G. ENGLE, one of the well known and highly esteemed farmers and dairymen of East Donegal township, Lancaster county, is located one and one-half miles from Marietta, Pa., where he successfully conducts a most prosperous business. The Engle family is one of the oldest in the county, the early records reaching back to 1754, when Ulric and Anna (Brechtbill) Engle left their home in Switzerland and came to the United States, locating in Pennsylvania. Their numerous descendants have scattered over the Union.

Samuel G. Engle was born on the old homestead in East Donegal March 7, 1850, a son of Daniel and Mary (Kraybill) Engle, of Conoy and East Donegal townships, respectively. The two-story brick residence upon the homestead was built by Daniel Engle in 1874, and both he and his wife died here, the former in August, 1888, at the age of seventy-five, the latter in November, 1900, aged eighty-four. Both had been valued members of the religious denomination known as River Brethren. Daniel Engle was a very intelligent and progressive man, much interested in educational matters, and was one of the first school directors of his district, when the free school system was put into operation. He was the originator of the Marietta Nursery Co., of East Donegal, in 1853, locating it on the old homestead, and he conducted it successfully for many years, finally retiring and leaving it in the capable hands of his two sons, Hiram G. and John G., it now being operated by the latter. The children born to Daniel Engle and wife were: Fanny, who married John B. Brenneman, a groceryman, of York; Barbara, who married Henry S. Garber, of Mt. Joy; Hiram, deceased; John G.; Samuel, of this sketch; and Daniel G., the postmaster of Marietta, Pa. The paternal grandfather of Samuel G. Engle was John Engle, of Conoy township, whose wife belonged to the Myers family; he was a farmer and died in 1861. The maternal grandparents were Christian and Mary (Nissley) Kraybill, farmers of Lancaster county.

Samuel G. Engle was reared in an agricultural family and neighborhood, and acquired his education in the public schools, remaining at home and farming on the old homestead for eighteen years, and coming to the present fine farm in October, 1896, where he has since conducted an excellent dairy in connection with his farming operations. For six years he served as school director, and has always cast his influence in the direction of morality in his neighborhood. In politics Mr. Engle is a pronounced Republican, but has never consented to hold political office.

The marriage of Samuel G. Engle occurred on Dec. 3, 1874, in East Donegal township, when Miss Mary B. Bossler became his bride. One daughter, Mary B., has been born of this union. Mrs. Engle was born in West Donegal township, a daughter of Christian and Ann (Brenneman) Bossler, the former of whom was a farmer of East Donegal township, where the family is well known. Mr. Engle is a worthy representative of an old and numerous Lancaster family, and possesses the respect of the community in which he lives, and where he has shown that he is an honest and upright citizen.

ELIZABETH M. KENDIG, whose attractive ice-cream and confectionery parlors are located at No. 132 North Duke street, Lancaster, can boast of having Revolutionary ancestry in both paternal and maternal lines.

John Kendig, son of Henry, was a farmer of Providence township, and died in September, 1884. He married Elizabeth String, daughter of John String, a tailor of New Providence, and nine children were born of this union, five of whom are living, as follows: Hiram S., of Lancaster, a veteran of the war of the Rebellion; Samuel, a farmer and tax collector of the township of Providence; John B., a contracting painter of Covington, Ky.; Elizabeth M.; Louisa S., who makes her home with Miss Elizabeth.

the death of the latter Miss Kendig, on July 11, 1898, bought the confectionery store of Mr. Erisman, on North Queen street, and on April 1, 1899, she removed to No. 132 North Duke street, where her business soon increased to double its proportions. Miss Kendig's goods soon became noted throughout the community for their excellence; and this fact, coupled with her courtesy and promptness, has won a host of patrons, and the store is justly noted as one of the leading confectionery marts of the city.

(Smith) Wolf was a daughter of Philip and Mary Smith, of York county, where the former was a prosperous farmer, and one of the earliest pilots on the Susquehanna River.

William H. Wolf remained on the home farm until fourteen years of age, then attended Cottage Hill school at York four years. After leaving school he served an apprenticeship of two years at the tin-smith's trade, but relinquished it and ran ore cars for the Henry Clay furnace for two years. On Oct. 24, 1870, he came to Columbia, and for sixteen months was brakeman for the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., was next a flagman until 1883, and was then promoted to conductor, a position he still holds.

Mr. Wolf has been twice married. He first wedded, in York, Pa., Jan. 9, 1870, Miss Melvina Peters, who was born in York county, a daughter of Jacob and Lillie A. Peters, the former a shoemaker. acceptably as school director. Christian E. and Fanny Nissley had the following children: Henry B., a resident of East Donegal township; Samuel B., a farmer, living on the old homestead; Jonas B., a farmer in East Donegal township; Anna B., wife of John Stehman, a farmer located near Lancaster Junction; Catherine B., Mrs. Forrey; Fanny B., who married Amos Shelly, and lives at Mt. Joy; Emma B., who married Witmer Rohrer, a bookkeeper in Lancaster; and Ellen B., unmarried, who makes her home with her sister, Mrs. Shelly. Mrs. Forrey's paternal grandparents, Samuel and Catherine Nissley, were life-long residents of Lancaster county.

Daniel N. Forrey remained at home with his parents until after his marriage, and was reared to farming. When he married he was given part of the old homestead, consisting of a tract of seventy acres, and there he built a residence, farm buildings, etc. During the passing years he has become quite well-to-do, and holds a fine position as a man, a citizen and a farmer in the community in which he is passing his peaceful and useful life. In religion he and his family are members of the Mennonite Church, and in politics Mr. Forrey holds strongly to Republican views.

HENRY BARTON, deceased. Every locality has its list of well remembered names, representative of those of its esteemed and useful citizens who have passed out of life, and one of those long familiar in Upper Leacock township was Henry Barton, whose integrity of character and sterling worth made him conspicuous during life.

Mr. Barton was born Feb. 16, 1803, since which date the country and even the county he loved so well and served so faithfully have made great and wonderful strides. The Barton family is an old and honored one, far back to the time when three brothers left England and first located in Scotland, where they established shipyards. Later their descendants went to County Tyrone, Ireland, and thence in 1772 John Barton, the grandfather of Henry, came to America with his brothers James and Samuel. James settled in the Tuscarora Valley, Samuel settled in Virginia, and John made his permanent home in Upper Leacock township, Lancaster county.

John Barton, son of John, married Isabella Vogan, who was a native of Vogansville, this county. By a previous marriage, to a Miss Redick, he had three children, John, Robert and Sarah, and to this second marriage the following children were born: Margaret, who married Mark Connell; Leah, who married Robert Connell; Rachel, twin of Leah, who died at the age of seventy-nine unmarried; Isaac; Samuel; Henry; James; Eliza, who married Archimedes Robbs; and William.

John Barton, the father of this family, was a native of County Donegal, Ireland, and came to America at the age of eighteen years, landing at New Castle, Del. There he remained five years, engaged in teaching school, and in 1787 came to Lancaster county, taking up his residence in Leacock township. Farming did not occupy all of his time, and he became a drover, often driving his cattle all the way from his farm to Philadelphia. At the time of his death, in 1853, at the age of eighty-nine years, he owned two fine farms, was a wealthy and prominent man, and had served for a long period as county commissioner.

Henry Barton, son of John (2), was born on the farm in Upper Leacock township which is owned and operated by his son, William H. His entire life was given to agricultural pursuits and to the advancement of the material interests of his family, county and State, and in the meantime he also built up a reputation for honesty and integrity which will long reflect credit upon all who bear his name. Mr. Barton was particularly interested in educational matters, and consented to serve as school director for a period of six years. He died July 21, 1885.

Henry Barton was married Feb. 20, 1845, in Philadelphia, by Rev. Thomas Clark, to Miss Margaret L. Simon, and the following named children were born to this union: John C., who is in the life insurance business in New Holland, Pa., married Anna Rutter; William H., who is farming the old homestead, married Nellie Burwell; and Miss Lizzie I. resided with her mother until the latter's death, Sept. 21, 1901.

Mrs. Margaret L. (Simon) Barton was born in Philadelphia, Pa., July 17, 1809, and at the time of her death was one of the esteemed residents of Mechanicsburg, this county. She was a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Ireton) Simon, the former a noted teacher of music, who instructed in one of the academies.

In politics Mr. Barton was a firm advocate of Democratic principles, but was no politician. Both he and wife were long leading members of the Presbyterian Church. The family is one of the most substantial and highly esteemed in the township, and Mr. Barton was recognized as one of its representative men.

CHARLES FONDERSMITH STAUFFER, one of the leading general contractors of Lancaster, and a man widely known throughout the State, was born Oct. 8, 1869, on the farm of his father, located near Florin, Mt. Joy township, consisting of one hundred acres, one of the most highly cultivated and substantially improved farms in the county at that time. He is the son of John Forney and Clara S. (Fondersmith) Stauffer.

John Forney Stauffer, who was at one time one of the most efficient Street Commissioners Lancaster has ever had, was born in Penn township Aug. 6, 1845, son of Benjamin Miller and Sophia (Forney) Stauffer. He was reared in his native place, educated in the celebrated Beck School at Lititz, learned the trade of miller, operated the Bossler Mill for two years, and retired from active life until 1872. In that year he removed to Lancaster and became a railroad contractor and sewer builder, being extensively employed throughout the State. On April 1, 1894, he was elected Street Commissioner, and held that office for four terms. At present he is actively engaged in the manufacture of electric fans and motors. His political opinions make him a stalwart supporter of the principles of Republicanism. Socially he is connected with the Royal Arcanum. He was Warden of Trinity Lutheran Church for three years, and is an earnest worker in and member of that body.

Johannus Stauffer, the great-grandfather of John F. Stauffer, and great-great-grandfather of Charles F., was a native of Switzerland, who came to America in 1790, built the large stone mill at White Oak, Penn township, and conducted it as long as he lived. Upon his death his son, John, inherited the property. His son, Benjamin M., in the course of time, came into possession of this mill, when twenty-one years of age. In 1856 he was elected Register of Lancaster county on the Republican ticket and so disposed of the property, purchasing a farm near Mt. Joy. He cultivated this farm with great success from 1859 to 1863, when he bought the old Bossler Mill near Manheim, on Chickies creek, but in 1868 he disposed of his interest therein and returned to Mt. Joy. He later resided in Lititz, where he died in 1897. He married Miss Sophia Forney, who was born in Earl township, daughter of John Forney, and was a cousin of John W. Forney, the founder of the Philadelphia Press. Her father was the proprietor of the "Forney Inn," on the Reading road, and there made his home for a number of years. Mrs. Benjamin M. Stauffer died in 1884, leaving two children: John F., the ex-Street Commissioner of Lancaster; and Benjamin, a member of the Board of Trade, Chicago.

On Nov. 25, 1868, John Forney Stauffer was married to Miss Clara S. Fondersmith, the youngest daughter of John and Catherine (Reed) Fondersmith, of Lancaster, and two children were born of this union, Charles F. and B. Grant, the latter secretary and treasurer of the Towle Manufacturing Company.

Mrs. John Forney Stauffer's great-great-grandfather was Ludwig von-der Schmitt, a descendant of the Royal House of Hessen-Darmstadt, who was a manufacturer of guns in Germany for the Government. He came to this country about 1749 and settled in Strasburg township, Lancaster county, where his son, John Fondersmith, manufactured guns for the war of 1812, at Fondersmithville. Gov. Pow-nall, in his journal, speaks of passing through Lancaster county in 1754, and of a manufactory of guns for which the county was celebrated, it being the business of John Fondersmith, a manufacturer of "defensive arms" for the Revolutionary patriots.

John Fondersmith, Esq., father of Mrs. John F. Stauffer, and grandfather of Charles Fondersmith Stauffer, was one of the most prominent and esteemed citizens of Lancaster. He died at his residence, No. 303 East King street, Sept. 27 1874. He was elected clerk of the court of Quarter Sessions in 1842 by the Republican party, having been a staunch Republican, and twice the nominee of that party for mayor. Although firm in his principles, he was much respected by men of all parties, being a man of superior intelligence, strict moral character and fine social traits. He was the owner of one of the pioneer stores of Lancaster, "Fondersmith's Corner," at East King and Shippen streets, having been as familiar to the people of Lancaster City and county as was Centre Square.

Charles Fondersmith Stauffer was taken from the farm, when but one year old, to Mt. Joy, and after two years to Lancaster, Pa., where he was educated first in the public schools and later at the Episcopal Parish School, Yeates Institute and the high school, from which he was graduated. After leaving school he entered the employ of Hager & Bro.'s carpet house, in Lancaster, and there remained for two years. In the spring of 1889 he became associated with his father in contracting, and eighteen months later engaged in business for himself, with offices in Penn Square, Philadelphia. Mr. Stauffer has built the roads and avenues and executed the landscape work on the Drexel tracts at Overbrook, Wayne Estate, at Wayne and St. David's, and Robert Smith Estate, at Strafford. He has also been extensively employed in railroad work, grading and bridge construction of various kinds, in many localities. Among the railroads for which he has employed his talents may be mentioned the Reading Terminal Company, Pennsylvania Railway Company, Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railway Company, Chambersburg & Gettysburg Railway Company, New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, and Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company. He has in addition to all this notable work left specimens of his sewerage, street paving and reservoir work at York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Providence and Lancaster, and has laid out many of the beautiful landscape gardens to be found in and about Philadelphia. Many private country places along the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad owe their beauty of surroundings to Charles F. Stauffer's work. He erected the large boulder at Gulf Mills, marking the point at which the Continental Army, under Gen. Washington, ceased retreating, and reconstructed the landscape about the church at old St. David's, which Longfellow named "The Little Church Among the Graves," where Anthony Wayne is buried and Gen. Washington attended services during his stay at Valley Forge. The Continental and British armies both used this church as a hospital, the Continental army having cut the leaded windows out to make bullets. The Main street at Jenkintown; the landscape, drives and lawns, rustic walks and bridges, at the "Beachwood Inn," and the private grounds of country places of Philadelphia millionaires along the Philadelphia and Reading railroad all show his work. He is at present engaged in the paving of some of the main thoroughfares and the constructing of sewers for the city of Lancaster, and is also constructing a large lake for boating and skating, and a general landscape work, incident to the making of a Park, for the Long's Park Commission of Lancaster. In addition to his other interests, Mr. Stauffer is Director of the Towle Manufacturing Company. In religious matters he belongs to Old Trinity Lutheran Church, of whose vestry he is a member. Like his ancestors, Mr. Stauffer is a staunch Republican, and takes an interest in local affairs, but has never desired or sought office, preferring to devote all his time and attention to his business. Socially he is a member of the F. O. E., B. P. O. E., the Lancaster Maennerchor, Hamilton Club, Young Men's Republican Club, Citizen's Republican Club and other like organizations, in all of which he is very popular.

Although a young man, Mr. Stauffer has already made a record in his business of which he may well be proud, and judging the future by the light of the past, his success in time to come will be even greater, for he possesses the requisite qualities—energy, foresight and ability—to grasp opportunities when offered, and a thorough knowledge of his work. Outside his business connections Mr. Stauffer has many friends, and is popular with all on account of the genial manner and pleasant attributes he possesses, and the kindly courtesy he accords those with whom he is brought into contact.

WILLIS GROSS KENDIG, Esq., one of the younger members of the Lancaster Bar, comes from old and honored stock. John Kendig, his great-grandfather, came to America from Switzerland and settled in Lancaster county, and there his son, Daniel Kendig, was an ironmaster, owning much landed estate at Safe Harbor, this county.

Dr. Benjamin E. Kendig, son of Daniel, is a popular practicing physician at Salunga. He married Barbara Stauffer, daughter of John Stauffer, a farmer of Manor township, and of this union seven children were born, four of whom are living, as follows: Jerome S., a physician of Salunga; John D., a dentist at Manheim; Willis G.; and Esther C., who conducts a private kindergarten at Marietta.

Willis Gross Kendig was born at Salunga Sept. 23, 1874, and was educated in the public schools of the district, at the State Normal School at Millersville, and at Franklin and Marshall College. Then he studied dentistry for two years with his brother, who was at that time practicing in Shamokin. Returning to Lancaster, Mr. Kendig taught school for four years, in Conoy and West Hempfield townships, and then became a law student with Eugene G. Smith, Esq., now Judge of the Orphans court of Lancaster county. He was admitted to practice March 30, 1901.

On June 19, 1901, Mr. Kendig was married to Miss Henrietta M. Hassert, daughter of the late John Hassert, a prominent grocer of Philadelphia, and they live in a charming home at No. 232 South Ann street. Mrs. Kendig is a lineal descendant of William the Conqueror; the original name of the family was Hazzard, instead of Hassert, as now written.

Mr. Kendig belongs to no secret societies. His religious connection is with the First M. E. Church of Lancaster. Courteous at all times, devoted to his profession, and sterling in his character, he has every promise of a bright, useful and successful future.

ISAAC H. WEAVER, one of the prominent and well-to-do citizens of Lancaster, and one of the most extensive dealers of leaf tobacco in this part of the county, is indebted for his success solely to his own efforts, to sterling integrity and due regard for the best interests of those with whom he has to deal. He was born in West Lampeter, this county, April 17, 1864, and from his parents, Isaac and Martha (Hoover) Weaver, inherited habits of thrift and enterprise. The mother died in Fertility, East Lampeter, March 20, 1894, at the age of sixty-nine, and was buried in Longnecker's cemetery, connected with the Mennonite Church, of which she was a devout member. The father, a retired farmer, who owns several fine country properties, and was very successful during his active life, is living in East Lampeter at the age of seventy-eight, having been born in April, 1824. He also is a member of the Mennonite Church, and is prominent in the locality where he has lived for so many years. To himself and wife were born: Susan, who married Jacob L. Houser, a farmer of West Lampeter; Mary, deceased wife of E. H. Denlinger; Emma, who became the wife of S. O. Frantz, farmer and manager of the New Ideal Seat Company of Rohrerstown, Pa.; and Isaac H.

Until his twenty-fourth year Isaac H. Weaver lived on the paternal farm, assisting his father in the manifold duties there presented, at the same time acquiring a liberal education at the district schools. His first outside business venture was as a buyer of leaf tobacco, in which occupation he has since acquired such pronounced success. Until Jan. 1, 1890, he purchased for others in the business, but after that he bought a tobacco business in Lancaster and at Strasburg, which he has since continued to conduct, and, in connection therewith, two other branches, located respectively at Dayton, Ohio, and West Carrollton, Ohio, which have also profited by his admirable management. In March, 1901, he bought his present warehouse, on North Prince street, where he employs fifty hands. In his Ohio houses he employs as many as seventy-five hands. He handles great quantities of leaf tobacco annually, and is an expert in judging of the value of this popular weed.

Mr. Weaver is active in the general affairs of his city, and among his other responsibilities is that of director of the Conestoga National Bank, to which position he was appointed in 1900. He is a Republican in political affiliation, and fraternally is associated with the Royal Arcanum and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

On Sept. 26, 1894, Mr. Weaver married Edith, daughter of Christian and Barbara Bachman, and a native of Strasburg, Pa. Christian Bachman was born in Lancaster, Pa., and was an undertaker and furniture dealer of prominence during his active career. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Weaver, Herbert B. and Edward B. Mr. Weaver is popular in business and social circles of Strasburg, and his many desirable and substantial personal characteristics have won and retained many friends.

Mr. Moench was elected and consecrated a Bishop, and besides discharging his duties as pastor and Bishop, he is at the present time serving as President of the Board of Trustees of Linden Hall Seminary, and President of the Board of Trustees of the Moravian College and Theological Seminary at Bethlehem, Pa. All in all he has proved himself an efficient worker in his chosen field, in the educational as well as the strictly spiritual interests of the Moravian Church, and his services have a distinctive value.

He has been admitted to practice in the Superior and Supreme courts of Pennsylvania and enjoys a lucrative practice. He is a member of the Library Association and the Lancaster County Bar Association.

In 1898, in a triangular contest for District Attorney in the Republican nomination, viz.: W. T. Brown, Frank S. Groff and Thomas Whitson, Mr. Brown received the nomination and was elected. Mr. Groff polled 8,180 votes, the largest vote ever received by a defeated candidate in a triangular contest for that office. During the canvass he formed a wide acquaintance among the voters of the county, and in the spring of 1901 he was nominated for the office of District Attorney by the Republican party of the county without opposition, and was elected in November, 1901, taking charge of the office in January, 1902. Mr. Groff is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party, and during the Presidential and gubernatorial campaigns he actively engages in the work of teaching the principles of his party from the stump.

Mr. Groff married Miss Ida R. Bowers, a daughter of Levi and Lydia Bowers, of Salisbury township, Lancaster Co., Pa., in 1881. Two children have been born to them: (1) Lowell E. Groff, born Jan. 9, 1882, attended Franklin and Marshall Academy for two years, and prepared to enter the college of that name, but instead left the academy and went on board the school ship "Saratoga," from which he graduated in October, 1900. He is now in the employ of the New York Telephone Company, of New York City. (2) Ira P. Groff, who was born Aug. 10, 1886, is a student of the Lancaster City High School.

GEORGE B. MCGINNESS, now residing in Frederick City, Md., was a respected citizen of Columbia, where he was born May 25, 1862, and where he has spent the greater part of his life, honored by all who know him because of his many sterling qualities of mind and heart. He is a son of John J. McGinness and his wife, Sarah Adair.

John J. McGinness was a canal boatman, and was so highly esteemed by his fellow townsmen that for seventeen years he held the office of constable, discharging its duties with a courage, fidelity and intelligence which won for him unstinted praise. He died in May, 1875, shortly before completing his forty-ninth year. His wife had preceded him to the grave in 1869. Both were earnest Christians; he was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, while she was of the Lutheran faith. They were the parents of seven children, George B. being the fourth. John J., the eldest, as well as Grant and Sadie, the two youngest, are deceased. Alfonso, the oldest living son, is a carpenter, living in Denver, Colo. Irene, the first born daughter, married Page Brown, who successfully conducts a laundry at Seattle, Wash. Anna is the widow of the late Frank Butzer, of Millersville.

The marriage of George B. McGinness took place on Nov. 28, 1889, at Frederick City, Md., his bride being Miss Kate Jacobs, the eldest daughter of Emanuel and Louisa (Morgan) Jacobs, both of whom are yet living in Frederick. Mr. Jacobs was born July 11, 1845, and is a huckster. His wife came into the world Dec. 26, 1844. Both are members of the United Brethren Church. The younger brothers and sisters of Mrs. McGinness were Clara, John H., Ella M., Charles, Grover C. and Marshall. Clara is the widow of William J. Sturquel, of Baltimore, in which city John H. also has a home. Ella M. is Mrs. Robert Rippeon, of Frederick. The younger children, with exception of Marshall, who died in childhood, live with their parents, neither of them being married. To Mr. and Mrs. McGinness four children have been born: Sarah L., Anna E., John A. and Clara M.

WILLIAM SPRENGER BARNHOLT, head of the firm of W. S. Barnholt & Co., correspondents of J. B. Fleshman & Co., commission and stock jobbers of Philadelphia, is one of the best known and most popular young men of Lancaster. He was born May 15, 1873, son of Edward Barnholt, who has been for many years past the leading detective of the city. In the fall of 1900 he purchased the "Mountville Hotel," of which he took charge the following spring. Edward Barnholt married Emma Winters, daughter of Cyrus Winters, a prominent merchant tailor of Lancaster, and they have had eight children: William S., Cyrus W. and Adam, all three of whom have learned the art of telegraphy, and have followed it at times; John S.; Hay Brown; Mabel; Emma; and Helen.

William Sprenger Barnholt was educated in the common schools of Lancaster. Leaving school at the age of fifteen, he spent some time in Fraim's Lock Works, and then in Brown & Hensel's law offices, finally entering the office of the Western Union Telegraph Company as a messenger boy. There he remained until he was twenty-one years old, becoming a thorough master of the art and science of telegraphy. For four years he was with the Postal Telegraph Company, serving as manager the last two years, and then returned to the Western Union, to take the position of manager, which he held until 1898. That year he resigned, and he and his brother, Cyrus, became the correspondents of J. B. Fleshman & Co., opening an office at No. 43 North Queen street. After two years of unusual success they removed to the magnificent quarters they now occupy, in the new Woolworth building, on the corner of North Queen and Grant streets.

Mr. Barnholt and Miss Maud Binkley were married Oct. 17, 1894. Mrs. Barnholt is a daughter of John L. Binkley, and belongs to one of the old families of Lancaster. They have become the parents of two children: Mary, who died in infancy, and Lewis, a bright little fellow of five years. Mr. Barnholt is as popular socially as he is in business circles, and has a host of friends. He belongs to the Young Republican Club, the Elks, the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of Pythias and the fraternal Order of Eagles. Both himself and his wife are associated with Grace Lutheran Church. A natural wit, a good singer and of a most genial nature, Mr. Barnholt is much sought socially, and his presence anywhere is a signal for good fellowship and enjoyment.

FRANKLIN M. HEISTAND, a retired farmer of Rapho township, was born in Mt. Joy township July 13, 1855, son of Christian J. and Elizabeth (Moore) Heistand, of East Hempfield and Penn townships.

Christian Heistand, the father, who was born Nov. 24, 1821, died in Florin, Pa., Dec. 9, 1896, and is buried in the cemetery in Mt. Joy. He was a farmer during his early life, but for twenty years prior to his death was engaged in the milling business. For a number of years he was a director in the Union National Bank of Mt. Joy. His widow, who was born June 21, 1822, now resides in Florin. There were born to their union the following children: Daniel, a miller, residing on the family place in Mt. Joy township; Amos, a farmer of West Donegal township; Simon, deceased; John, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Franklin M., subject of this sketch; Harriet, wife of Samuel Myers, a farmer of Lebanon county; and Emanuel, who died in youth. Mr. Heistand's paternal grandparents were Christian and Catherine (Heistand) Heistand, of Lancaster county. The grandfather was during his lifetime a distiller of large means, being a director of a bank, holder of turnpike stock, and was a man of prominence in his district. He retired in the latter days of his life. Mr. Heistand's grandfather on his mother's side was named Michael Moore.

On Sept. 29, 1878, Franklin M. Heistand was married to Miss Barbara Shelley, of Rapho township. The following children have been born to this marriage: Elizabeth S., wife of Samuel G. Nohrenhold, who lives on the old Heistand homestead; and Emma S., Anna S., Fanny S., Amanda S. and Barbara S., all of whom reside at home with their parents. Mrs. Barbara (Shelley) Heistand was born Jan. 11, 1858, in Rapho township, daughter of Benjamin B. and Eliza (Shaub) Shelley.

Mr. Heistand lived with his parents until the time of his marriage. He received his education in the schools of the county, and was employed during a greater part of his time at work on the farm. After marrying he sought employment at various places for two years, after which he took a farm on shares for three years. He then bought his present farm and has prospered finely ever since. He retired from active duties in the spring of 1901, and since that time has taken life easily. The family are members of the Brethren in Christ Church, and are also prominent in the social circles of the township. Mr. Heistand is a man of more than the average ability, and has taken a prominent part in the economic affairs of his district. He is well regarded by the whole community.

JOHN MICHAEL SNYDER (deceased) was for many years a well-known citizen of Lancaster, and was the genial and popular host of several of the leading hotels of that city. His birth occurred in 1851, in Germany, and his death took place Dec. 22, 1889, in Lancaster, where he was interred. His parents were George M. and Anna M. (Snyder) Snyder, natives of Baden, Germany, who came to Lancaster in November, 1851. The father's business was that of a tobacco grower. He died May 5, 1888, at the age of sixty-seven years, his wife surviving until Feb. 8, 1891, when she was also sixty-seven years old. They were buried in the Lancaster cemetery. Their children were as follows: John Michael; Martin, a hotel-keeper at Middletown, Pa.; Lawrence, deceased; J. Adam, a hotel-keeper in Lancaster; David, a cigar manufacturer at Newark, N. J.; and Mary, wife of John McGinnis, of Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

On Jan. 31, 1875, John Michael Snyder was married, in Lancaster, to Mary Getz, who was born in 1852, in Lancaster, a daughter of George F. and Magdalena (Herzog) Getz, both natives of Germany. The Getz family is well known in Lancaster, as both parents came there in youth, prior to their marriage. Mr. Getz carried on a baker business, and was also a drover. In 1865 he removed his family to Lima, Ohio, where he died in 1870. The mother still resides on her farm near Lima. She was born July 16, 1832. Both were consistent members of the German Reformed Church. They became the parents of the following named children: Jacob C., who was killed in a gold mine in Colorado; George F., who died in infancy; George F. (2), who resides with his mother on her farm; John W., who resides in Los Angeles, Cal., and operates a greenhouse; Julius B., who served in the Spanish war; and Mary, who married Mr. Snyder.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Snyder were as follows: Mary M., widow of Emil Holtz, who resides with her mother, and has four children, Emil H., Anna M., Lena E. and Lewis; John M., who resides at home; Harry M., a cigarmaker in Lancaster, who married Catherine Anderson; Charles D., deceased; James A. G., who is at home; George F., deceased; Anna M., deceased; and George M., who is at home.

Mr. Snyder was only four months old when his parents brought him to Lancaster, and there he attended school until the age of fourteen, when he began cigarmaking with Jacob Fry. He followed that trade in several States, until 1877, when he took charge of Schoenberger's Park, operating same for several years, and then went into the hotel business, conducting an inn on Manor street for several years, and the "Plow Tavern" very successfully for eight years. Mr. Snyder then retired to private life, moving to No. 803 Manor street, but lived only a few weeks to enjoy its comforts. He was a member of the social organization the Shilster Verein, and was also connected with the K. of P. and the Red Men, and in politics was identified with the Republican party. His religious membership was with Christ Lutheran Church.

The second marriage of Mrs. Snyder was to Robert E. L. Tomlin, who was a son of Robert Tomlin, and was born in Alexandria, Va. His business was tobacco packing. One daughter was born to this marriage, Ida Corinne M., who resides at home. Mrs. Tomlin is a lady of ample means, and is very highly regarded in the community for her many most estimable traits. Her acquaintance is large and she numbers her friends by the score.

JOSEPH R. ROYER, a confectioner of Lancaster, was born on the family farm in Manheim township, Lancaster county, March 5, 1835, son of Joseph and Catherine (Royer) Royer, and grandson of Joseph Royer. Both father and grandfather were natives of Manheim township, while Mr. Royer's mother was a daughter of Joseph Royer, of Clay township.

Joseph Royer, father of Joseph R., died in May, 1843, at the age of forty-one years, and is remembered as one of the intelligent and progressive farmers of Lancaster county, having taken a leading position in his community. A man of broad and progressive ideas, he was the first farmer in Lancaster county to own a threshing machine, which was made by Kirkpatrick; it was the subject of much interest at the time of its introduction into the county. Mrs. Royer, who died in 1876, was a woman of gentle spirit, and was much beloved in the circle of her acquaintance. Both were members of the Dunkard Church. They were the parents of the following family: Israel, now deceased; Sarah, widow of John Batruff, of Perry county, Pa.; David, living in Lancaster; Catherine, deceased; Joseph R.; Frances, deceased wife of Clement Gritner, who went to North Carolina from Lititz; Martin, deceased; and Tobias, an ex-soldier, now living retired at home on Duke street, Lancaster.

Joseph R. Royer started out for himself when hardly ten years of age, and secured work on a farm at four dollars a month, then considered very high wages for so young a boy. Remaining on the farm until he was thirteen years old, and having accumulated seventy dollars, the enterprising young lad went to Mt. Joy, where he began at the trade of saddle and harness making under Christian Martin, with whom he finished the trade. For seven years Mr. Royer carried on his trade at Petersburg, Pa., and was there when the Civil war broke out, having become quite a prominent character, holding the position of postmaster, and being proprietor and manager of the village hotel. He was intensely interested in the Union cause, and in the spring of 1862 raised a company near Petersburg, of which he was commissioned second lieutenant; the command was organized for the defense of Chambersburg. Late the same year a company was organized at Petersburg, in which he was also second lieutenant. This command was attached to the 157th P. V. I., which regiment in March, 1863, was stationed at Washington for the defense of that city, where it was held until February of the following year. Upon arrival at Washington M. Royer was made quartermaster, and served as such until his capture by the Rebels, April 13, 1864. Mr. Royer, while still at Washington, had become first lieutenant, and accompanied the regiment to Fairfax, Va., where, as noted in the preceding paragraph, he was taken prisoner while out for supplies at Gaines' Mills. For six weeks he was held at Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., was at Danville, Va., two weeks, and was then sent to Macon, Ga., from which point he was sent to Charleston, and kept under fire for six weeks. The breaking out of yellow fever necessitated their removal to Columbia, S. C., where they were confined in a stockade from November until the following February, being herded together like sheep, and were driven to Wilmington, N. C., at which point they were exchanged March 13, 1865. Mr. Royer on his return to the service was made quartermaster of the 191st P. V. I., and served in that capacity until the close of the war, being mustered out in June, 1865. When he was captured he was shot through the hand, was reported dead, and for six months was regarded by his people as lost.

For about a year after Mr. Royer's enlistment his wife conducted his business, but finding it too much of a burden she disposed of it, and gave up the post office as well. When Mr. Royer came home he rested for only about two weeks, and then took up the work of civil life as strenuously as he had his army work. Going to York, he bought a number of horses from the Government, and sold out at a good profit in about ten days. After the successful conclusion of this enterprise he came to Lancaster and bought out the confectionery store of Charles Eden, located at the corner of Prince and West King streets, where he was engaged for some two years, at the expiration of that time buying the Whiteside property, on West King street. This he rebuilt, and he became noted as the first merchant in Lancaster with a plate glass front to his store. It was of French plate, which at that time was very expensive, and attracted much attention to the business which he established at that point, and which became popular at once. Mr. Royer was also the first man in the city to put his name on his delivery wagon. He has the oldest business in his line in the city, and his name is known throughout the county by a host of friends and patrons. He was one of the first in this part of the State to make ice cream soda, advertising it as early as 1868, and was the first man in the city to open that line.

Mr. Royer is intensely devoted to his business, at which he works many hours a day, and calculates that if the time it had absorbed out of life were measured by ten hours a day labor he would have spent eighty years at it. He is still a young-looking man, and few would imagine him to be above fifty years. In disposition he is a warm-hearted and genial gentleman, with many friends throughout the county.

Joseph R. Royer and Miss Annie Shuman, of Manor township, daughter of Amos B. Shuman, were married in Manor, where her father was long a prominent farmer. This union was blessed with the following children: (1) Minnie, who was the wife of William Rush, died at the age of twenty-five. (2) Milton is associated with his father, having charge of the factory. He is married. (3) Joseph C. is married, and is a professional musician in New York. (4) Clarence de Vaux, a musical director, is a graduate of some of the most noted musical universities in Europe, where he studied under some of the most noted masters of the day. In 1881 the mother of these died, and Mr. Royer and Miss Leah Balmer, daughter of Andrew Balmer, of Lancaster, were married. She died in 1891, and on June 5, 1893, Mr. Royer married Miss Viola Smaling, daughter of Jacob Smaling, of Lancaster.

As might be expected from his long and creditable service at the front, Mr. Royer is deeply interested in the Grand Army of the Republic, being associated with George Thomas Post, No. 84, of that patriotic order. He is also a member of the K. of G. E.

JOHN BANZHOF. The larger number of the excellent farms of Lancaster county are owned and operated by descendants of German ancestors, and one of this class who possesses a valuable and most desirable farm in Strasburg township is John Banzhof.

David Banzhof, the father, was a native of Wurttemberg, Germany, and came to the United States while still a young man, locating in the rich and fertile county of Lancaster, after a short sojourn in Philadelphia, where he engaged in his trade of cooper. His first home was in Montgomery county, but he made no long stop there, his inclinations leading him into Lancaster. His first employer in Strasburg was Samuel Brubaker, and from there he went to the shop of Samuel Eshleman, near Martinsville, quietly pursuing his trade and accumulating means, so that in 1859 he was prepared to buy a small place in the eastern part of Strasburg township, and there he established a coopering shop of his own. In connection with his trade he operated a small farm, and lived until Jan. 4, 1899, dying at the age of seventy-two years and four months. Both he and wife were consistent members of the Reformed Mennonite Church. The latter was born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, in 1832, and she still survives. They were the parents of nine children: Jacob, who operates a planing mill in Lancaster; John, of this sketch; Annie, who married David Hornish, of Brownstown; David, who died at the age of nineteen; Christian, who lives on the old homestead; Katherine, a trained nurse, a graduate of the Philadelphia Training school, residing in Baltimore; Mary, who married Edwin Aulthouse, of Paradise township; Emma, who married Dr. W. J. Wilkinson, of Philadelphia; and Magdalena, also a trained nurse, a graduate of the Philadelphia Training school, and a resident of Baltimore.

John Banzhof, the second child of the family, was born in Strasburg township Aug. 7, 1859, and grew up on the farm and learned his father's trade. His education was pursued in the public schools, and he remained at home associated with his father, until about the age of twenty-two, when he began the carpenter trade, taking his first instruction from John Johnson, but later was under his brother Jacob's teaching, and developed into a fine workman. For the succeeding five or six years he followed the carpenter's trade, but in 1889 located on his present farm, since then becoming its owner, and here he carries on a general line of farming. This is a tract of sixty-seven acres, and Mr. Banzhof has proved that he is not only a very reliable carpenter, but also a first-class farmer. As an indication that he has by no means forgotten the skill of his craft, he has made many very desirable and attractive improvements upon his farm, although he finds no time for such employment for others.

Mr. Banzhof was married on Dec. 11, 1890, to Miss Elizabeth Brubaker, a daughter of John and Frances (Hess) Brubaker, who was born in Strasburg township Jan. 9, 1864. They have a family of four children: J. David, born Dec. 11, 1891; Fannie Magdalena, born Nov. 11, 1896; Willis John, born Nov. 16, 1897, and Marie, born April 29, 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Banzhof are members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and the family is one which is greatly respected in Strasburg township.

HARRY BACKENSTOE ROOP., M. D. During the few years which Dr. Roop has practiced in Columbia he has amply attested his professional skill and has won a large and lucrative practice. He possesses those personal qualities which are essential in spheres of wide professional influence, and easily ranks among the foremost of the younger medical practitioners of his borough.

The paternal grandparents of Dr. Roop were natives of Germany, people of devout and industrious character. They emigrated to America and settled in Dauphin county, Pa., where the grandfather followed farming. He also officiated frequently as a local minister of the Gospel.

Henry J. Roop, his son, and the father of Dr. Harry B., was born in Highspire, Dauphin county, where he was reared, and where he received a good common school education. He engaged in agriculture for many years, on a beautiful farm of about 300 acres, part of which is the site of the borough of Highspire. In 1884 he built a fine residence, on a commanding part of his farm, in which he is living a retired life. He married Miss Justina Backenstoe, daughter of John Backenstoe. She died in 1883, aged forty-five years. To them were born five children, namely: Hervin U. Roop, A. M., Ph. D., who is president of Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa.; Harry B., subject of this sketch; Della F., who married Prof. B. F. Daugherty, A. M., Ph. D., professor of Latin at Lebanon Valley College; Sarah, who is at home with her father; and William, a graduate of Lebanon Valley College. The father is a prominent member of the United Brethren Church, and a highly respected citizen of Highspire.

Harry B. Roop was born at Highspire, Dauphin county, Feb. 24, 1870. He was reared on the home farm, and there remained up to the age of eighteen years, when he entered Lebanon Valley College, graduating from that institution in 1892. Choosing medicine as his profession, he entered the office of Dr. H. McDaniel, at Highspire, as a student, and in the fall of 1893 matriculated at the University of Pennsylvania, receiving his degree of M. D. in the spring of 1897. Dr. Roop located at Columbia, where he has since continued successfully in practice.

In religious faith the Doctor is a member of the United Brethren Church. In politics he is a Republican. He is affiliated with the lodges of the I. O. O. F. and the K. P. at Columbia, and Lodge No. 134, B. P. O. E., at Lancaster, and in social life is one of the leading spirits. However, his professional duties absorb most of his time, for his practice is large. His interest in his work amounts almost to enthusiasm, and he devotes a large share of his attention to the current progress-made in medicine and surgery.

JAMES HAWKINS SPOTTS, a member of the firm of S. M. Myers & Co., successors to Myers & Rathfon, merchant tailors and clothiers on East King Street, Lancaster, is descended from a very old family, whose first progenitors in America came from Germany and settled in Caernarvon township, Lancaster county, where the grandfather of James H., who was a farmer, lived and died.

Joseph Spotts, his son, and the father of James H., was an undertaker, and lived for many years in Churchtown. For a time he was in the West, and then returned to Pennsylvania, locating in Chester county, where he made his home in Downingtown, and he built up a fine business. He came to an untimely and tragic end, being struck by a passing train and killed while crossing the railroad track. This occurred in 1875, when he was fifty-three years old. His widow, Mrs. Barbara (Ax) Spotts, belonged to the prominent Ax family of Churchtown. She still survives, carrying her years easily, and retaining all the faculties of body and mind in a serene and beautiful old age. She was the mother of ten children, only four of whom survive: Bertha, wife of George W. Lewis, of Philadelphia, a passenger conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, who has been in the service of that company for more than thirty-five years; Frances, wife of Allen S. Heller, a builder of Philadelphia; Hallie, wife of Milton H. Stanley, of Phoenixville, also in the Pennsylvania railroad service; and James H., of Lancaster.

James Hawkins Spotts has had a most interesting history. He was born in Churchtown March 25, 1868, and after being educated in Downingtown and New Holland came to Lancaster to take a position as clerk in the "Leopard Hotel," which he held for two years. For a year he was employed at the Broad street station of the Pennsylvania railroad in Philadelphia, and then entered the Lancaster clothing house of Myers & Rathfon, where he has remained to the present time, and of which he is now one of the proprietors. It was in 1888 that he entered this house, and as the years have passed his worth has become manifest, as he personally superintends the manufacturing of clothing, doing all the purchasing of ready-made goods, and buying the material for the factory.

Mr. Spotts was married, in November, 1899, to Miss Adelle Dora Frankenfield, daughter of Prof. H. L. Frankenfield, a widely-known teacher of band music, as well as composer and publisher of music, who served in the 5th N. Y. Heavy Artillery as leader of a regimental band during the Civil war, the musicians who served under him being his devoted friends to the present day. From this union one child was born, Dorothy, a lovely little girl, who entered into rest April 19, 1902, in the sixteenth month of her age.

Mr. Spotts belongs to St. John's Episcopal Church, of Lancaster. His political relations are with the Republican party, and he served as a member of the Republican City Committee for three years, as a representative from the Second ward. He also belongs to the Young Men's Republican Club. Socially he is connected with the Odd Fellows, the Artisans, and the Mutual Benefit Association of New York. He is a genial, clever and well-rounded man, and deservedly enjoys the good-will of a host of friends.

GEORGE K. GARRETT, a well-known and respected farmer of Martic township, born March 14, 1858, was a son of Henry and Annie Garrett, of Conestoga township.

Henry Garrett, the father, died when our subject was but three years of age. He was the father of eight children, as follows: Elizabeth, the wife of John Finnen, of New Danville, Pa.; Mary, deceased; Annie, deceased; Amos, a resident of Safe Harbor; Leah, the wife of Philip Mowery; Barbara, the wife of Walter Albright, of Lancaster; George K., of this sketch; and Catherine, the wife of Samuel Peters, of Colemanville.

George K. Garrett is an example of what may be accomplished by the exercise of perseverance, industry and economy. The early death of his father left the large family in reduced circumstances, and when he was but a lad it became necessary for him to begin his struggle with life for himself. It is a source of satisfaction for him to see how well he has accomplished this. His educational advantages were those provided in the district schools, and all his life labor has been along agricultural lines. He now owns a fine farm comprising 160 acres of valuable land, with excellent improvements. Some of this farm was purchased in 1895, when he secured it for $20 per acre. He is known through the township as an excellent farmer, industrious and reliable, and he has a wide circle of attached friends.

In 1889 Mr. Garrett was married to Miss Alice Fawkes, of Philadelphia, daughter of Walker Fawkes, and the two children born of this marriage are: Mary and Walter. Mr. Garrett is one of the leading Republicans of Martic township and is a member of the board of school directors. He has the good of his community at heart, and generously supports all moral and educational enterprises looking toward its advancement. He is a useful citizen, a kind neighbor and an exemplary husband and father, in fact is one of the men of whom Martic township has reason to feel proud.

ROCHOW. The Rochow family of Columbia, Lancaster county, was founded in America by the late William Rochow, whose sad and tragic death occurred at his home in Columbia early on the morning of April 7, 1900.

William Rochow was born in Strelitz, grand duchy of Mecklenburg, Germany, Jan. 15, 1829, the only child of Frederick and Wilhelmina (Miller) Rochow, the former of whom was master and owner of a sail boat, handled freight, and died in 1852, at the age of fifty-three years; the latter came to America with her son, William, in 1857, and first located in Bridgeport, Montgomery Co., Pa., where William resided one year; he then passed a year in Norristown, a year in Philadelphia, and then came to Columbia, after six months assisting a friend in the dyeing department of a woolen factory. He here turned his attention to the junk trade, bought and sold hides, bones, cast-off articles of all kinds, did a lucrative business until 1886, and then retired in favor of his son, Charles. Mrs. Wilhelmina Rochow, mother of William, died in Columbia, Pa., at the age of seventy-one years.

William Rochow was first married in Berlin, Germany, to Emma Kaiser, and to this union were born the following children: William, a book-keeper in a hotel at St. Louis, Mo.; Charles, in the junk business at Columbia, Pa.; Ernest, a clerk for his brother, Charles; and Bertha, married to John Rensink, a contractor and builder in Chicago, Ill. The mother of the family was born in Berlin, was a daughter of Ferdinand Kaiser, and died in Columbia, Pa., in 1872, at the age of thirty-three years. The second marriage of William Rochow took place in Columbia in 1875, Rosa Knob becoming his wife. To this marriage was born one son, Albert, an attorney at York, Pennsylvania.

In alluding to the sad death of Mr. Rochow the Columbia Daily News of Saturday, April 7, 1900, gave the following account: "William Rochow died at his residence, No. 513 Locust street, shortly before two o'clock this morning, from the effects of burns received on Friday while taking a vapor bath. Mr. Rochow was burned in a shocking manner over his back, arms, hands and limbs, from which the skin hung in shreds and in some places his flesh was burned to a crisp. Everything known to medical science was resorted to, but the burns were of such a character that little hopes for his recovery were entertained. During the afternoon he became delirious and it was with difficulty that he could be kept in bed and restrained from tearing the bandages from his wounds. At five o'clock last evening he grew very weak, and gradually sank into a state of unconsciousness, and remained in that condition until death came. His end was peaceful and apparently without pain."

In politics he was a Democrat, but would never accept an office. In religion he was a Lutheran and was a member of German Salem Lutheran Church. He was one of the substantial citizens of Columbia, and was a stockholder in the Central National Bank from its organization. He was public spirited, yet conservative, and acted only when he saw that the end to be accomplished was worthy of aid.

CHARLES ROCHOW, son of William and Emma (Kaiser) Rochow, was born in Columbia April 17, 1862, and is now his father's successor in business, dealing at wholesale (in scrap iron and metals). He has had experience in business elsewhere than in Columbia, but altogether in the tobacco trade, to wit: Six months in Philadelphia; two years in New York City; one and a half years in St. Louis, Mo.; and a year and a half in Chicago, Ill. In 1882 he returned to Columbia and joined his father, becoming proprietor as intimated above in 1886.

In August, 1885, Mr. Rochow was most happily united in marriage, in Columbia, with Miss Emma L. Harm, the accomplished daughter of William and Barbara Harm, the former a grocer in Columbia, the latter a native of Philadelphia. To Mr. and Mrs. Rochow have been born six children, in the following order: Rosa, Lillian, William, Walter, Charles and Robert. The family worship at the Salem Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Rochow is treasurer and member of the board of trustees. Mr. Rochow is an excellent man of business and ever alert and enterprising. He is a director in the Columbia Telephone Co., and was formerly its treasurer; he is likewise a director in the Central National Bank, and in the Loder Brewing Co., and energetic and fully up-to-date in all things. Socially he is very popular, and is a member of the Heptasophs, while in politics he is a Democrat, yet no office seeker.

AMOS SHELLY, a prominent and successful farmer, was born in Rapho township, Lancaster county, July 30, 1857, and has always made his home in his native town.

David and Susannah (Herr) Shelly, his parents, were born, respectively, in Rapho and Lancaster townships. David Shelly was a son of Abraham Shelly, and was a farmer, who entered into rest in 1880, at the age of sixty-seven years, his remains being laid to rest in the Cross Roads Meeting House burying ground. The widowed mother, who now resides with her son in East Donegal township, was born in August, 1829. To David Shelly and wife were born: Amos, whose name introduces this article; David, deceased; and Elias, a farmer in East Donegal township.

Previous to his marriage with Susannah Herr, David Shelly had wedded Susannah Engle, who became the mother of the following children: Martha, deceased, who married John M. Engle; Henry E., born July 18, 1839, now a farmer in Rapho township; Israel and Harriet, who both died unmarried; and Eli, a farmer in East Donegal township. Mrs. Susannah Engle died in 1850, at the age of thirty-six years. She was born in Rapho township, and with her parents belonged to the Dunkard Church.

Amos Shelly was married May 14, 1878, in Lancaster, to Fanny Nissley, by whom he became the father of these children: Emma, deceased; Amos N. and Ada N., at home; and Ellen N., deceased.

Mrs. Fanny (Nissley) Shelly was born in West Hempfield township May 13, 1858, a daughter of Christian E. and Fanny (Breneman) Nissley, both of whom were born and reared in Lancaster county. Her father died in Salunga, Pa., in 1889, at the age of seventy-one years. For eleven years prior to his death he lived retired, and for nine years he held the position of school director. His widow died in 1896, at the age of seventy years. Her remains were laid to rest in Landisville, Pa. They were honorable and upright people, much respected by all who knew them, and members of the Mennonite Church. They had eight children, of whom Henry B. is a farmer in East Donegal township; and Fanny is Mrs. Shelly.

Amos Shelly came to the farm where he is found to-day with his parents when he was eighteen years old, and here he has won for himself a very creditable standing among the leading citizens of the town. In religion he belongs to the Mennonite Church, and in politics is a Republican.

H. R. HEAGY, the very capable agent for the Pennsylvania railroad, at New Providence, is one of the most highly respected citizens of that township. He was born in the borough of Manheim Dec. 8, 1856, son of Francis and Lydia (Royer) Heagy, who were also residents of that part of Lancaster county. Francis Heagy was born in Germany, and came to America while still a youth. He is now a retired farmer of Penn township. His five children were: H. R., whose name opens this sketch; Catherine, wife of Frank Ritter, of Penn township; Elizabeth, wife of Cassius Snyder, of Manheim; John, of Penn township; and Frank, of Lancaster.

H. R. Heagy grew up on the farm and received his education in the public schools. When nineteen years old he began to study telegraphy with J. B. Myer, of Lancaster Junction, and on March 1, 1877, he came to New Providence and took charge of the station at that point. His capital then consisted of his knowledge of his trade and his determination to succeed, and by steady application to his duties he soon gained the favor of his employers and gradually won his way into the esteem of the public. By a provident husbanding of his means Mr. Heagy soon became independent and acquired property, owning now a handsome residence and a prosperous business, in partnership with his son, in the lumber, coal and fertilizer line.

Mr. Heagy is a staunch Republican, and he was elected justice of the peace in 1893, efficiently performing the duties of that office ever since. He has been very prominent in the affairs of the Reformed Church in New Providence, and is president of the Christian Endeavor Society.

On July 11, 1882, Mr. Heagy married Miss Lydia Groff, daughter of John and Maria (Brubaker) Groff, of New Providence, and this marriage has been blessed with seven children, viz: Miss Florence, a teacher in the Lancaster county schools; John F., with his father in the railroad office; Maria and Walter, at home; Helen, deceased; and Ruth and Paul Hiram, at home.

Mr. Heagy has been very successful in his business career, and when questioned about it, frankly attributes it to hard work. As an indication of his close attention to duty it may be mentioned that he has been absent from his post but ten days in the past twenty-five years. He is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of New Providence, a very public-spirited one, and few men in this locality have more attached personal friends.

MILTON THOMAS GARVIN, dry goods merchant of Lancaster, was born in Fulton township, Lancaster county, Aug. 14, 1860.

Milton Y. Garvin, his father, was descended from the Scotch-Irish Presbyterian Garvins who settled in Delaware about 1750, and the English Quaker family of Brown, who were among the first Quaker settlers of Chester county. Milton Y. Garvin married Hannah R. Hannum, whose ancestors were the Welsh Quaker family of Hannum, and the English Quaker family of Reynolds, both of whom settled in Pennsylvania during the governorship of William Penn.

Mr. Garvin spent his early boyhood with his father's sister on a farm in Cecil county, Md. At the age of thirteen years, his uncle having died, he came to Lancaster City to live with his mother, who was now married to William J. Baer. A few months later, at the age of fourteen, he entered the dry goods store of R. E. Fahnestock as errand boy, and two years later was promoted to be salesman. In 1882, through physical infirmities, Mr. Fahnestock was obliged to have some one to manage his business and assume its cares, and the selection fell upon Mr. Garvin, who had just reached his majority. Appreciating the responsibility of the position, he took vigorous hold, and managed this business for twelve years.

In 1886 Mr. Garvin married Catherine A., widow of Abijah D. Gyger, and a daughter of Anthony and Catherine (McLaughlin) Lechler, who was born at Paradise, this county, where her father was famous as a hotel keeper, but who subsequently moved to Lancaster, where for years he kept the County House.

Early in 1894, on account of old age and total disability, Mr. Fahnestock decided to retire, and Mr. Garvin took over the business and succeeded him. On March 5th, of the same year, under the firm name of M. T. Garvin & Co., he opened the store at the old stand, Nos. 35 and 37 East King street, next to the Court House, which, under the popular name of "The Leader" is to-day one of Lancaster's best-known shopping marts. Mr. Garvin's business is conducted on strictly up-to-date cash principles, with one price to all and discounts to none as one of the fundamentals. The interests of the employes, of whom there are an average of forty-five, are well cared for and kindly considered.

In early life Mr. Garvin received only such education as was obtained at the short winter sessions of a log cabin school, in Maryland, but the foundation laid there was afterward built upon by the devotion of spare moments to reading and study, and the knowledge thus gained has stood him in good stead in later years. While not a member of any church, Mr. Garvin takes an active interest in the Friends' Association of Lancaster, and the new Unitarian movement. In politics he is independent and progressive, and usually affiliates with the Democratic party. Mr. Garvin is connected with various interests in his adopted city. He is an officer of the Mechanics' Circulating Library; an active member of the Board of Trade, of which he is president; a director of the General Hospital; secretary of the Lancaster Dry-goods Association; a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; the Lancaster County Historical Society; the Society for Psychical Research, and others, and he is always to be counted upon as an active supporter of Lancaster's charitable institutions.

JAMES PRANGLEY, JR., of the general insurance and real estate firm of James Prangley, Jr., No. 27 East Orange St., Lancaster, was born in that city March 28, 1864.

His grandfather, also named James, was an engineer near Liverpool, England. His father, James Prangley (2), came to America sixty years ago, when nine years old. His first employment was with the saw manufactory of Henry Disston & Sons. He went to Lancaster in 1863, and opened a "Cheap John" store in North Queen street, between Orange and Chestnut. He then moved to the present location of Watt & Shand's New York store in East King street. In 1872 he retired from the store, and in 1879 engaged in the leaf tobacco trade. In 1881 he established a cigar factory, employing from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five people.

He remained in this until 1897. Mr. Prangley also manufactured brick for twenty years, until the plant was destroyed by fire in April, 1900. Late in 1900 he engaged in the coal business, and still continues in that line. Mr. Prangley married Miss Mary Macaulif, daughter of John Macaulif, a musician of England, and of this marriage three children were born: Lida and Bessie, at home; and James, Jr. A half sister of the latter, Alice, was the wife of Henry Martin, of the Henry Martin Brick Machine Manufacturing Co., but she died several years ago. Mrs. Mary (Macaulif) Prangley died in August, 1899.

James Prangley, Jr., of the third generation bearing the same name, was educated in the Lancaster schools, leaving the Boys' High School to attend Weidler's Business College, from which institution he was graduated. He became a partner of his father in the cigar factory, but quit it in 1897 to enter his present business as partner of Martin Rife. This has proved highly successful.

On October 17, 1893, Mr. Prangley married Miss Catherine Knapp, daughter of the late Lawrence Knapp of Knapp Villa, a place familiar to all. Two sons have been born of this marriage: James, named for his father, grandfather and great-grandfather; and Lawrence, named for his grandfather Knapp. Mr. Prangley has a pleasant home at No. 690 Columbia avenue. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran congregation, and has played the chimes of that church for the past twelve years, his early morning concerts being features of all church festival days, such as Christmas, Palm Sunday, Easter, etc., while his patriotic airs arouse the people at four o'clock on every Fourth of July morning. For nine years he was a warden of Trinity, and both he and his wife are members of the church choir, in which they are very popular. Mr. Prangley belongs to the Odd Fellows, the Royal Arcanum, the Knights of Malta and the Elks.

GEORGE GABRIEL GOLDBACH, the successful florist and landscape gardener, located opposite the Lancaster county Almshouse, on the Philadelphia turnpike, is a son of Lorenz Goldbach, now leading a life of well-deserved retirement at his home on the Groffstown road, just east of Lancaster.

Lorenz Goldbach came to America from Bavaria, and settled on a farm near Bareville, this county, in 1876, removing to Lancaster in the spring of 1885, and locating on Rockland street, where he carried on gardening. In 1895 he removed to his present home, on the Groffstown road, where he carried on trucking until recently, when he retired from active pursuits. His first wife was Miss Gertrude Busenbrugge, of Westphalia, Germany, by whom he had the following children: John, who died at Spokane Falls, Wash., in 1889; Theresa, wife of Oscar Hilbert, of the New Era job department; Charles, a traveling salesman for a Philadelphia drug house; Henry, a shoe cutter, who died in 1894, while in the employ of the Kray Shoe Co.; Herman, a florist and gardener, now managing his father's place on the Groffstown road; and George G. After the death of the mother of these children Mr. Goldbach married, in January, 1882, Miss Anna Kiehl, of New York, who was born in Germany, and the following children have blessed this union: Amelia, a dressmaker; Frank, who works for George G. Goldbach, the florist; Mary and Lizzie, at home; and Anthony, who died in 1896, aged four years.

George Gabriel Goldbach was born in Upper Leacock township Feb. 6, 1878, and, his parents removing to Lancaster when he was young, his education was received in St. Anthony's Parochial School. When he was thirteen years old his father placed him with A. D. Rohrer & Bro., florists, and there he received the training that has made him the expert florist and landscape gardener that he is to-day. In 1897, in association with his brother, Herman, he leased the Rohrer hothouses, and until September, 1900, they carried on the business as Goldbach Bros. The firm was then dissolved, George G. Goldbach continuing the business alone. He confines himself largely to wholesaling, finding a ready sale for all he can produce in the Philadelphia markets. He makes a specialty of growing violets, and his annual output in this flower alone is the bloom of 10,000 plants. With 15,000 feet under glass, the plant, flower and vegetable producing capacity is immense. As a landscape gardener Mr. Goldbach's work stands high, the flower beds at Rocky Springs Park having been laid out and planted by him for several years in the past.

On June 26, 1900, Mr. Goldbach was married to Ida, daughter of the late John Ransing, of Lancaster. They began housekeeping in a pretty cottage on the Philadelphia turnpike, almost directly opposite the hothouses, but Mr. Goldbach recently purchased a lot of ground at the corner of East Orange street and Ranck avenue, where he intends building himself a fine home. One child, Agnes Mary, born May 1, 1901, has blessed their marriage. Mr. Goldbach is a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, of St. Michael's Society, the Knights of St. John, St. John's Beneficial Society, the Young Men's Democratic Society, and the American Florists Association. Industrious, energetic, intelligent and prompt in his business methods, he certainly gives promise of a most successful future.

ELLIS PICKEL, proprietor of the grocery store at South Duke and Church Streets, Lancaster, is descended from a family who have been prominent in agricultural circles in Lancaster county for many generations.

Leonard Pickel, his father, owned a farm at Georgetown, Bart township, and from there removed to a point between Nickel Mines and the Furnace, where he bought another farm and engaged very successfully in its cultivation. Prominent in politics, and enjoying an excellent reputation, he was elected a director of the poor on the Republican ticket. He died over twenty years ago, respected by all who knew him for his private and public worth.

Ellis Pickel was educated in the schools of his home district, leaving school at the age of eighteen years to drive ore teams for his father, in which work he was engaged for about three years. For a time following this he was a clerk in the White Hall store of Milton Heidelbaugh (since then a member of the State Legislature), and later on farmed for himself for three years on a place near Gap. Then he came to Lancaster and took a position with Flinn & Breneman, which he held three years; for three years he rented and farmed the Elmaker place near Gap; and then he again entered the employ of Flinn & Breneman, remaining with them this time for a period of sixteen years. In 1897 he bought the grocery store noted above, and the business has already proved a flattering success, presenting most encouraging prospects.

Mr. Pickel married Miss Mary Jane Brooks, daughter of Boyd J. Brooks, a farmer of Bart township, and to this union was born one daughter, Elsie, who is now the wife of A. Heber Francis, a well-known cigar broker of Lancaster.

Mr. Pickel has long been associated with church work, and was a trustee of his church while living in the country. He is now a member of the First Methodist Church of Lancaster, and fraternally is a member of the Knights of Malta, the American Mechanics, and the Artisans. Conscientious, courteous and accommodating, he has made hosts of friends, whose friendship grows the stronger the longer he is known.

THOMAS HIBSHMAN KELLER. Among the prominent citizens of Lititz is Thomas Hibshman Keller, who comes of most excellent stock, his ancestors having been among the oldest and best-known people in this section of the State. He is a grandson of the well-known John Keller, a native of this county and a farmer of Ephrata township, whose father's farm extended along Indian Creek, toward Ephrata. On the maternal side he is a grandson of Hon. Henry Hibshman, a senator of the State of Pennsylvania, belonging to a family whose members were distinguished as jurists and in the affairs of the State.

Harry B. Keller, father of Thomas H., was a merchant of Lincoln, this county, where he died in 1854. He married Mary Hibshman, and to this union the following named children were born: Henry B., who occupies a responsible position in the United States Mint, in Philadelphia; and Thomas H., of Lititz.

Thomas Hibshman Keller was born at Lincoln, this county, in 1853, and was educated in the public schools of the district, leaving school at the age of fifteen years and becoming a clerk in Royer's store, at Lincoln. Later he engaged in clerking in Weidman's store, at West Lincoln, remaining there three years, at the end of which time he began baking the now famous Lititz pretzels, and has been so engaged ever since.

In 1876 Mr. Keller married Miss Clara V. Sturgis, daughter of Julius F. Sturgis, the original manufacturer of the Lititz pretzels, and to this union nine children were born, seven of whom are living: Mary Jane, wife of William Fishburn, editor and publisher of the Ephrata Reporter; Julius Henry, an artist in modeling, in Philadelphia; Lottie Cecelia and Carrie M., both at home; Thomas H., Jr., attending the Lititz high school; and Lewis R. and Philip Deichler, at school, the latter attending a kindergarten.

Mr. Keller is a staunch Republican in politics, and he has served as a member of the school board of Lititz for a term of three years. He is a devout Moravian in religion, and fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of the Golden Eagle. Apart from his business and church affairs, and his societies, Mr. Keller has given much time and attention to enterprises looking to the welfare of the historic borough of which he is so popular and progressive a citizen. He was one of the most active managers of the first Lancaster County Fair ever held in Lititz, and has also been manager of eight county fairs held in McGranis Park, Lancaster, being one of the gentlemen most closely concerned in the fine fairs held in 1899 and 1900; he was secretary as well as manager of the latter, the most successful fair in the history of the county. Kind and courteous to everybody, ever ready to help a friend, and ready to give of his time, efforts and interest, as well as means, to promote the interests of the community in which he lives, Mr. Keller has fairly earned a prominent place in the public regard.

As an inventor Mr. Keller has made an enviable record. His first invention (1879) was a pretzel machine, and for the past seven years he has been working on and perfecting an automatic cigar machine, in company with B. W. Snively, of New Brunnerville. Their first patent on this was received Jan. 10, 1899, since when additional patents have been granted on the invention. This machine is expected to revolutionize the cigar manufacturing industry throughout the world.

JOHN W. ARMSTRONG. Among the popular extra conductors on the Pennsylvania railroad none have more friends than this gentleman, who makes his home in Columbia. He is a native of Lancaster county, born in Marietta, Nov. 8, 1864, a son of John W., Sr., and Kate (Kugle) Armstrong.

John W. Armstrong, Sr., was born at Donegal Springs, same county, a son of Hon. Andrew A. and Mary A. (Brenneman) Armstrong, the former a native of Silver Springs township, Cumberland

Co., Pa., the latter of Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county. Both died in Mt. Joy. Andrew A. Armstrong was a farmer in early life, and being one of the most prominent and influential men of his community, he was elected to the State Legislature. On his retirement to private life, he embarked in the gray and malleable iron business, which he carried on until his death, which occurred in 1876, when he was sixty-seven years of age. His father, James Armstrong, was of Scotch-Irish extraction, and emigrated from Scotland to the United States in 1745, locating in Silver Springs township, Cumberland Co., Pa., where he conducted a tannery throughout the remainder of his life. John W. Armstrong, Sr., the father of our subject, followed farming until the Civil war broke out, when he entered the service as a member of Co. B, 45th P. V. V., and was killed at Petersburg, Va., July 17, 1864, at the age of twenty-two years. His widow afterward married William McNeil, and by that union had seven children. She is a resident of Marietta, where she was born, a daughter of George Kugle, an agriculturist of Lancaster county.

John W. Armstrong, of this review, spent the first three years of his life in Marietta, and then went to live with his paternal grandfather at Donegal Springs, remaining with him until the latter's death, when he was sent to the Soldiers' Orphans' School at Mt. Joy, where he was graduated in November, 1880. He was his father's only child. After leaving school he commenced learning the printer's trade, at which he worked in Carlisle, Pa., from November, 1880, until the next April, when the firm with which he was connected sold out, and he went to St. Louis, Mo. After working on the Mississippi river for nine months, Mr. Armstrong returned to Lancaster county, Pa., and worked at the molder's trade in Mt. Joy until January, 1886, when he came to Columbia and entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. as brakeman. In September, 1892, he was made flagman, and was promoted to extra conductor April 10, 1900.

On Sept. 5, 1884, at Florin, Lancaster county, Mr. Armstrong married Miss Anna A. Buck, who was born in York, Pa., Nov. 10, 1868, a daughter of Nathaniel and Susan (Lowe) Buck, also natives of York county. The father, a farmer by occupation, is now residing in Lehigh county, Pa. He was a soldier of the Civil war and was wounded in the service. To Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong were born four children, namely: Oscar C.; Mamie E., who died Aug. 28, 1886; Edward S.; and John W. Politically, Mr. Armstrong affiliates with the Republican party, and fraternally is connected with the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Knights of Pythias, and the Improved Order of Red Men.

LEVI BECKER. The prosperity of the great State of Pennsylvania does not rest upon her commercial relations, nor upon her wealth of mineral deposits, as much as upon her great agricultural resources. The farmers are the backbone of the State, and in no county are they more prosperous and thrifty than in wealthy, solid and respected Lancaster county. The revenue gathered into the coffers of the State from that county alone would give surprise to many of those unfamiliar with existing conditions.

Among the successful agriculturists of Ephrata township is Levi Becker, a most estimable and highly respected citizen, who owns 112 acres of some of the choicest land in the county. He was born Feb. 21, 1872, a son of the late Israel and Caroline Becker, of this county. Israel Becker was a son of Henry Becker, a prominent farmer of the county, a German by ancestry, and the father of a family of fourteen children. Israel Becker was also a farmer, and well and favorably known in the neighborhood near Lititz, and reared these children: Henry B. married Mary Seibert; John B. is a farmer located about two miles from Lititz, in Warwick township; Leah resides near Brunersville, Pa.; Henry; Levi; and Katie, deceased.

Levi Becker was reared on a farm, and as his father before him, chose farming as his life work. His education was received in the common schools of his district, and soon after finishing the course, he engaged extensively in agricultural pursuits, his fine, well cultivated farm showing that he thoroughly understands all matters pertaining to the proper tillage of the soil.

On Jan. 7, 1894, Levi Becker was married to Miss Lillie Habecker, of Clay township, the estimable daughter of Augustus Habecker, and two children have been born of this union: Elsie, born in 1895; and Leroy, born Oct. 6, 1897. In his political affiliations, Mr. Becker has always voted with the Republican party, but has never taken the time to seek for office, leaving that for those who have less fine land to cultivate. Although not formally connected with any religious denomination, he believes that a moral life is better than many protestations, and is regarded by his neighbors as a model husband and father, and as one of the best and most reliable of the citizens of Ephrata township.

REV. JOHN ALLEN CRAWFORD, pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church, South Queen street, Lancaster, is a native of West Virginia, born April 2, 1868, in the city of Wheeling, and comes of Scottish-English ancestry.

Michael C. Crawford, his father, came to America from the North of Ireland about the year 1856, and settled in Wheeling, W. Va. He married Elizabeth Malinda Allum, daughter of John Allum, of Washington county, Pa. Rev. John Allen Crawford was the second child in a family of six children, the names of the others being Lucy, Virginia Lillian, James Dellmore, William Theodore, and Robert Cecil.

John Allen Crawford received his earlier education in part at Lindsley Institute, in part at the high school in Wheeling, from which latter he was graduated with first honors in 1884. He next attended the University of West Virginia, at Morgantown, that state, and after three years' study there he entered the college at Adrian, Mich., from which he was graduated June 21, 1888. In September of the same year Mr. Crawford began his course in the Western Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church, at Allegheny, Pa.; on April 9, 1890, he was licensed to preach, by the Presbytery of Washington, at Claysville, Pa., and on May 7, 1891, was graduated from the Theological Seminary. Immediately after his graduation from the seminary he was called to the First Presbyterian Church of Hillsdale, Mich., and was ordained and installed Sept. 16, 1891, remaining there until Oct. 1, 1894, when he accepted a call to Dillsburg, York Co., Pa., at which place he continued until the spring of 1899, serving the churches at Dillsburg and York Springs. In May, 1899, Mr. Crawford accepted the call to the Memorial Presbyterian Church of Lancaster, and was installed pastor thereof June 8, 1899. He has since met with gratifying success, the church having steadily grown under his pastorate.

This, in brief, is the interesting career of one who, although a resident of Lancaster but a comparatively short time, has made his influence greatly felt in this community, and being in the very vigor of young manhood his future is full of bright promise, for all who know him and have watched his progress look confidently for the fullest fruition of the good seed thus early sown by him.

On June 14, 1893, Mr. Crawford was married at Ridgway, Pa., to Miss Blanche Webster Powers, daughter of H. M. Powers, a prominent member of the Bar of Ridgway. Mrs. Crawford's family were from Maine, and related to Daniel Webster, the famous statesman and orator; she is also connected, by descent, with Gen. Stark, of Revolutionary fame.

EDGAR B. KREADY, a thriving young tobacco packer and merchant at Mountville, Lancaster county, was born in Manor township, same county, Oct. 29, 1866, and is a son of Jacob C. and Mary (Bowers) Kready, natives of West Hempfield township.

Jacob C. Kready was a farmer and distiller in Manor township in his early days, but abandoned distilling in 1861. He served as county commissioner, and held at different times various township offices. He died in Manor township in October, 1884, at the age of fifty-six years, a member of the Reformed Church at Rohrerstown, where his remains were buried. Mrs. Kready still has her residence in Manor township. She was born in 1842. To Jacob C. and Mary Kready were born seven children, viz.: Alfred B., a farmer of Manor township; Elizabeth, living with her mother; Emma B., wife of C. F. Charles, a farmer in Manor township; John, a farmer, living with his mother; Edgar B., whose name opens this review; Mary, wife of Jacob Mow-rer, in the machine business at Lancaster; and Harry, deceased.

Edgar B. Kready lived upon the home farm until 1893, when he came to Mountville, as he had, although a Republican, been appointed by Grover Cleveland—Democratic President of the United States—postmaster at Mountville. On coming to Mountville he engaged in mercantile business in connection with his post office duties, and also began buying, packing and selling tobacco. On Nov. 1, 1899, Mr. Kready discontinued the general merchandising branch of his business, and went into partnership with his brother-in-law, C. F. Charles, confining himself exclusively to the tobacco trade.

In April, 1895, Edgar B. Kready was united in marriage, in Columbia, Pa., with Miss Laura M. Walker, and this union has been crowned with three children—Marion W., Esther W. and Mary Elizabeth. Mrs. Laura M. (Walker) Kready was born in West Hempfield township Aug. 10, 1873, and is a daughter of Christian F. and Esther A. (Kelley) Walker. Her father, who was a contractor and builder, in 1889 removed his family to Columbia, and was killed in Lancaster city, by a fall from a scaffold, Jan. 8, 1890, at the age of fifty-two years. He had served as a private in the war of the Rebellion, and was a member of the G. A. R., a Mason and an Artisan. To Christian F. and Esther A. Walker were born three children, viz.: Mary M., wife of Harry Forry, of Columbia; Laura M.; and William, who died in infancy.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Edgar B. Kready, William and Martha (Fridy) Walker, were natives of West Hempfield township; the grandfather was born in 1816, and lived retired in Kleinsville, Lancaster county, where he died Oct. 14, 1901; the grandmother was called away in 1885, at the age of seventy-five years. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Kready, John and Mary (Houghendouglar) Kelley, were also natives of West Hempfield township, where Mr. Kelley was a raftsmen on the river, and where he died; his widow then married John Kame.

Edgar B. Kready is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., affiliating with Lodge No. 65, at Mountville; and also unites with the Knights of Malta, No. 159, at Lancaster; and the K. of M. C., at Mountville. In politics he is a Republican, and he is a very popular young man with his party, but has never sought an office. He is known in the business world as a "hustler," one who drives his business.

D. JEFFERSON HERR, an enterprising young farmer of Strasburg township, was born there July 5, 1873, son of C. S. B. and Lizzie A. Herr. The father is deceased, and the mother now makes her home in West Lampeter township.

Our subject was given a good practical education in the public schools of his native township. He was reared to farming on the place he now conducts and since he commenced life on his own account has given all his attention to that occupation, with gratifying results, it must be conceded. In 1897 he took full charge of the home place, which comprises 100 acres of valuable land, devoted to general crops. Mr. Herr has already displayed a most progressive spirit and advanced ideas, as regards the development of both the agricultural interests and the welfare of his section in general. He bids fair to become a worthy representative of a family which has stood second to none in Lancaster county for generations.

On Sept. 4, 1900, Mr. Herr married Miss Cora L. Groff, daughter of Henry L. Groff, of that township. In religion Mr. and Mrs. Herr are members of the Old Mennonite Church. Politically he is a Republican.

SAMUEL S. SHELLY, general farmer and fertilizer agent, was born in Rapho township Dec. 1, 1868, a son of Emanuel and Anna (Shearer) Shelly, of Rapho and Mt. Joy townships, respectively.

The parents now reside near Manheim, in Rapho township, where they reside on and conduct a fine farm. The following children blessed their union: Samuel S.; Anna, wife of Aaron Peters, a Rapho township farmer; Emma, who died in childhood; Emanuel, who died in youth; Nathan, living with his father; and Amos, Maria, Ephraim, Harvey, Lizzie, Minnie and Emma, all residing at home with their parents. The grandparents of Samuel S. Shelly were Samuel and Maria (Ager) Shelly, of Lancaster county.

In 1890, at Manheim, Samuel S. Shelly was married to Miss Emma A. Keener. There have been born to this union the following children: Daisy K., Mabel K. and Minnie K. Mrs. Emma (Keener) Shelly was born in Rapho township in 1867, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Fretz) Keener, of Lancaster county. The father died on his farm in March, 1900, at the age of fifty-eight years, and is buried in Sterns' Meeting House cemetery. Mrs. Keener was born in 1848, and is still living in Rapho township. The following children of this union are living: Clayton, a farmer occupying the homestead; Maggie, unmarried, residing with her mother; and Emma, wife of Mr. Shelly.

Samuel S. Shelly lived in the farm with his parents until his marriage, receiving in the meantime a good education in the public schools of the district. After his marriage he worked for his father on a share proposition until 1894, when he purchased and removed to his present home. He has been more than usually successful, which fact is due to his careful and thrifty habits. He is a Republican in politics, but has not yet sought for nor held office. Friendly to all, he commands the best wishes and respect of his neighbors. Mr. Shelly has at heart the best interests of his township, and allows no opportunity to pass which enables him to assist in measures for the improvement of the vicinity both socially and financially.

CLAYTON F. KEENER, brother of Mrs. Samuel S. Shelly, is a general farmer of Rapho township, and was born on the family homestead, where he now resides, Aug. 27, 1871. As already mentioned, the father died in 1900, while his widow resides in the township, near Chiques Church. Mr. Keener's grandfather, Joseph Keener, died in Milton Grove, in May, 1899, at the age of eighty-four years. For several years prior to his death, he lived retired, resting from the cares of business in which he had for so many years been so actively engaged. Mr. Keener's grandparents on his mother's side were Daniel and Margret Fretz. In March, 1897, in Manheim, Clayton F. Keener was married to Miss Amanda Metzger. One child, Jacob L., has been born to them. Mrs. Keener was born near Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa. Mr. Keener has, as stated, always lived on the family homestead, and under his management the place has yielded an abundant income. He is a Republican in politics, and takes an active interest in the affairs of the party. He is well known and well liked in his district, and, being progressive in all his tendencies, will some day, undoubtedly, take a prominent position in his community.

ALDUS C. MYLIN, a prominent and substantial farmer and stock raiser of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, has been identified with the improvement and progress of that section for many years, residing on the old family homestead, which is located adjacent to the village limits of Willowstreet.

John B. Mylin, his father, resided upon the place previous to his retirement, at which time Aldus C., having been prepared by training, for an agricultural life, took charge of the estate, which he has most successfully managed ever since. The original homestead consisted of 126 acres of fine land, and to this Aldus C. Mylin has added two other tracts, of considerable extent, one of sixty acres, in West Hempfield, and another of 100 acres, in Manor township; he is also the owner of a number of lots and smaller tracts. Some of his land is peculiarly adapted to the raising of stock and cattle, and is used for that purpose, as Mr. Mylin is much interested in and very successful in the breeding of stock; some of his horses have been regarded as very valuable. His stock and cattle are all high grade, and he has taken great pains to introduce only the finest strains into the neighborhood, thus benefiting his locality, and setting an example for others.

All of the properties belonging to Aldus C. Mylin may be recognized by the excellence of the improvements, and the air of thrift and prosperity which surrounds them, Mr. Mylin taking a personal interest in their preservation and adornment. He is known far and wide as a man of great generosity, ever ready to extend the helping hand, and although he has sometimes been the victim of ingratitude he has not lost faith in the world, and keeps on his Christian way. Although a staunch Republican, from principle, he has never sought nor consented to hold political office. Mr. Mylin received his education in the common schools.

Aldus C. Mylin was married March 29, 1885, to Adaline Herr, daughter of David O. and Mary Ann (Huber) Herr, who was born in Manor township, on the old homestead, near Creswell (formerly known as Turkey Hill), March 5, 1857. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Mylin began housekeeping where they have resided ever since, and they are among the most respected members of the community.

David Herr, the father of Mrs. Mylin, was born on the farm in Manor township June 30, 1826, son of David and Barbara (Olenweiler) Herr, and died Sept. 16, 1890. He was reared on the farm where he lived for a long time after marriage, residing there at the time of his death. His wife was born in West Hempfield, near Mountville, July 18, 1832, daughter of John and Elizabeth Huber, and died Nov. 19, 1876. A family of ten children was born to them: One that died in infancy; John, who became a resident of the West; Emma, residing in Millersville; Elizabeth, who married Jacob B. Herr, of Fulton township; Adaline, who married Aldus C. Mylin; Anna Mary and Susan, twins, deceased; Ida, deceased, who married Amziah Herr; Fannie, deceased, and one that died in infancy. The members of this family were consistent members of the Evangelical Church.

CLAYTON LANDIS GRABILL, the popular grocer of West King street, Lancaster, descends from ancestors who came from Germany to this country about 1700, settling in Lancaster county, and furnishing to this section some of its most reliable and trustworthy people. John Grabill, his great-grandfather, was a farmer at Bareville. His father, Abram R. Grabill, was a farmer near Earlville, Lancaster county, and married Fianna Landis, daughter of Benjamin Landis, a farmer of Bareville. The children of this union are as follows: Henry M., a farmer in Kansas; Ida A., wife of J. H. Black, a merchant tailor at Akron, Lancaster county; Clayton L., of Lancaster; Landis B., at home; Ella, at home; Minnie C., wife of Rev. G. W. Hangen, of Lebanon; and Carrie, at home.

Clayton Landis Grabill was born on the old homestead, near Earlville, in 1866, and was educated in the public schools of the district, attending until he reached the age of eighteen years, when he came to Lancaster and entered the grocery store of his uncle, with whom he remained seven years. At the expiration of that time he opened business on his own account, establishing a store on West King street, which has become very popular under his careful and attentive management, and where he is found at the present time. So successful was Mr. Grabill in his efforts to please the public that he was encouraged to open a branch store at the corner of North Queen and Lemon streets, which, conducted on the high plane on which he has always done business, has commanded a very good patronage.

Mr. Grabill married Miss Orpha Good, daughter of Daniel D. Good, well known in connection with the cattle trade. Mr. Grabill is an active and earnest member of the Covenant U. B. Church, of which he has been a trustee for the last ten years. No man of his years has shown more progressive business methods than has Mr. Grabill. Both his stores are constantly stocked with the latest and the best goods, and courtesy, fair dealing and a readiness to oblige and accommodate have won wide patronage.

ABRAM K. ROHRER, member of the wholesale florist firm of A. K. Rohrer & Co., Lancaster, was born in West Lampeter, Lancaster county, Nov. 16, 1872, son of Henry D. Rohrer, who is now partially retired from the florist business.

Mr. Rohrer lived with his parents during his youth and early manhood, and received a practical education in the public schools of his neighborhood. In 1893 he became associated with the business life of Lancaster as a partner of L. S. Landis, of this city, continuing thus until June 1, 1902, and he has since allied his energies with the firm of A. K. Rohrer & Co., florists. He is regarded as one of the promising and capable business men of Lancaster.

On April 2, 1901, Mr. Rohrer married Anna E. Edgerly, daughter of Capt. Edward Edgerly, of this city. Mr. Rohrer is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge, No. 1104, and is a Republican in National politics.

HENRY D. ROHRER, father of Abram K., was born in East Lampeter, Lancaster county, in March, 1847, son of Abraham and Susan (Denlinger) Rohrer, of East Lampeter, and grandson of Jacob Rohrer, who lived and died on his farm in Lampeter; he was of Swiss extraction. Abraham Rohrer was a farmer in early life, but retired from business cares during the last twenty years preceding his death, which occurred in 1901, at the age of eighty-eight years. He is buried in Mellinger cemetery, beside his wife, who died in 1892, when eighty-three years of age. Born of this union were the following children: Abraham D., who died in 1901; John D. E., a retired farmer; Henry D.; Benjamin, living on the old homestead at East Lampeter; and Anna D., who married Jacob Landis, a retired farmer of East Lampeter.

After attaining his majority Henry D. Rohrer left the paternal farm and went to that of his father-in-law, which he managed for about five years. In 1875 he bought with the proceeds of his toil some property in Lancaster, upon which he started a florist business with his brother Abraham D., continuing the same with marked success for eighteen years. The brother then entered upon a retail florist business, and Mr. Rohrer built the present wholesale plant at the end of East Orange street, which he still owns and manages. He has accomplished great good for his special part of the town, and may be said to have entirely laid out the east end at his own expense, planting trees and shrubs, and otherwise imparting an air of thoughtful care to an erstwhile neglected suburb. The greenhouses, which have no superior, and which are still managed by him, are known from one end of the State to the other, and in many of the large cities in the surrounding States. In addition to roses, violets and carnations the firm ships more mushrooms than any other one concern in the State. They do only a wholesale business.

In October, 1869, Mr. Rohrer married Mary Kreider, daughter of Tobias Kreider, a retired farmer living in West Lampeter, at an advanced age. To Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer have been born three children: Abram K., Harry K. and Ella.

JACOB L. SNYDER. The agricultural interests of Lancaster county, are in no danger of neglect as long as such active and progressive young men are at the helm as is Jacob L. Snyder, the subject of this biography.

Mr. Snyder was born Jan. 14, 1872, a son of Christian and Susan (Longenecker) Snyder, of Warwick township, the former being one of the leading agricultural men of that section living near the town of Lititz. The grandfather of Jacob L. Snyder, was Christian Snyder, well known in his day as a wealthy and respected man, and reared these children: Simon, a farmer in Clay township; Hiram, of Stevens; Mrs. Mary Nolt, of Hinkletown; Mrs. Barbara Striner, of Murrell; Abraham A., a farmer near Murrell; and Christian B., the father of Jacob L.

Christian B. Snyder married Susan Longenecker, in 1866, and four children were born of this union: Agnes, who married Jacob Wissler, of Clay township; Jacob L., of this sketch; Amanda, who died in childhood; and Nathan, born Nov. 20, 1876, who married, Oct. 10, 1897, Emma Brubaker.

Jacob L. Snyder was born on the farm in Warwick township, and grew up accustomed to agricultural pursuits, receiving his education in the excellent common schools of his district. The fine cultivation which his farm of eighty-three acres shows, and the improvements mark him as one of the progressive, careful and successful farmers of this part of the county. Prosperity has smiled upon him, but it is because he has carefully attended to his affairs, living an industrious and upright life, and possessing the respect and esteem of his neighbors.

On Aug. 10, 1893, Jacob L. Snyder was married to Miss Sadie H. Walter, of Lititz, the estimable daughter of Jacob and Kate (Hacker) Walter, of Lititz, and to this union has come one son, Christian Walter, born Nov. 6, 1895. The farm of our subject is pleasantly located about one-half mile east of the town of Lincoln, and thus the family can enjoy both town and country associations. Reared in the Mennonite faith, Jacob L. Snyder has lived an upright life, and possesses every requisite for a long, happy and useful career.

EZRA H. ZERCHER is a young farmer of East Donegal township who is rapidly coming into notice as thoroughly awake and progressive in his calling, that of agriculture, to which he has devoted his life. Mr. Zercher is engaged both as a general farmer and as the manager of the chop mills, which are very popular among his neighbors as a means of getting cattle feed in the best shape, and at moderate prices.

Ezra H. Zercher was born in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, Jan. 19, 1870, son of Jacob Zercher, whose family history and personal sketch are found elsewhere. Mr. Zercher was married, Nov. 24, 1893, at the home of the bride's parents, in the township of Rapho, to Lizzie F. Hertzler, and the following children have been born to this union: Howard H., who is deceased; Anna, deceased; and Beulah.

Mrs. Lizzie F. (Hertzler) Zercher was born in Rapho township, Aug. 10, 1874, daughter of John H. and Salinda (Forney) Hertzler, who were born in Manor and West Donegal townships, respectively. They are now living in Rapho township, where they are spending their last days in quiet and peace, having given up the active care and labor of life to younger and more vigorous hands.

Ezra H. Zercher remained at home with his parents until his marriage, when he began business for himself on a farm of eighty-four acres in East Donegal, where he did well, making many friends by his industrious habits and upright character. In 1901 he bought a farm of seventy-four acres, three-fourths of a mile south of Mt. Joy, and a few days after making the purchase, with the kind aid of his neighbors, he tore down the old structures, which were probably the oldest in the locality, the rude figures upon the builder's stone indicating the year 1765. These structures are now laid low with the ground, and in their place is erected a new house and barn, with all the modern improvements. In 1902 Mr. Zercher moved from the old farm to his new home, which he has just completed. The chop mill, which is noted above, was put up for Mr. Zercher in June, 1899, by Stauffer & Newcomer, of Mt. Joy, and is operated by a twelve-horse power gasoline engine. It is a fine piece of machinery, and is regarded as one of the best in the county.

In politics Mr. Zercher votes the Republican ticket, and in his religious convictions he is a devout member of the Church of the River Brethren, to which the Zercher family have long belonged.

ALBERT HARTMAN. One of the progressive and successful business citizens of Lancaster county is Albert Hartman, the leading hatter, who conducts a large hat and gents furnishing store at Columbia, and another, equally prosperous, in Lancaster. Mr. Hartman owns and carries on the oldest hat store in the county, having lately purchased the Arnold hat store, in the Zahm building, located on the Square, in Lancaster.

Mr. Hartman was born in Columbia July 1, 1869, son of John and Elizabeth (Heller) Hartman, the former of whom had been born and reared with his parents in York county, and the latter at Columbia, in Lancaster county. In 1847 Mr. Hartman moved to Columbia, where he engaged in painting, contracting and decorating for some years, and later became a successful speculator in real estate. His death took place Aug. 2, 1895, when he was aged sixty-five years. His widow, now aged sixty-nine years, is one of the very highly esteemed residents of Columbia. The children born to John and Elizabeth Hartman were: William, a decorator, living in Columbia; Emma, who died young; John, a resident of Columbia; Anna, who died young; Charles, of Columbia; and Albert, whose home is also in Columbia, although he does business also in Lancaster, as noted.

Mr. Hartman was reared in Columbia, and there attended the public schools until he was twelve years of age, when he entered the hat and furnishing goods store of H. H. Lockard, as a clerk, remaining there four years, during which time he became thoroughly instructed in the details of the business. He then accepted a position in a merchant tailoring establishment, and two years later again became associated with the hat business, with M. P. Roop, with whom he remained three years. Mr. Hartman had now reached the age of twenty, and had so completely learned his business that he felt qualified to embark in the same line, opening up a business in hats and gents furnishings which has continued to gather fresh patronage since its start. On April 24, 1902, he purchased the above mentioned store in Lancaster, and has invested a large capital, which is bringing him ample and satisfactory returns. His long experience in this line enables him to buy and sell to advantage, while his trade connections are such as to insure the best and latest designs in his very complete line.

In Columbia, in 1899, Mr. Hartman was united in marriage with Miss Lillie A. Rodgers, who was born in Milltown, Lancaster county, daughter of John B. Rodgers, of this county.

Mr. Hartman is a member of the Masonic fraternity, affiliating with Lodge No. 286, of Columbia. He ranks high in the world of trade, and in his home community is held in esteem on account of personal characteristics, having a wide circle of warmly attached friends.

ACTON ASH LEFEVRE, druggist and perfumer in Lancaster city, belongs to a family as old as that of the Penns. His first ancestor in America was Isaac LeFevre, a French Huguenot, who, coming to this country to escape persecution, joined Penn in London, and accompanied him in 1682. Some time before coming to this country he secured from Queen Anne a grant of land of 2,000 acres, lying between what is now Strasburg borough and Paradise, in this county. Strasburg was named in honor of the old historic French city from which he came. The earliest of his ancestors in Europe of whom we have any knowledge translated the Bible into French for the first time, and was a correspondent of Martin Luther and Zwingli. One of this family became a great general under the first Napoleon. Part of the Strasburg grant of land is still in the possession of the LeFevres, and the cornerstone of the first log house erected by the first ancestor of the family in that section is still preserved.

Franklin Penn LeFevre, the father of Acton A., was a widely known resident of this county. He married Catherine Fulmer Ash, a descendant of a family of Revolutionary fame, and to this union were born five children, all of whom are living: Elmer I., in the lumber trade at Coatesville; Acton A., of Lancaster; Elizabeth S.; Benjamin Herr, a florist of Washington, D. C.; and Mary, unmarried and at home.

Acton Ash LeFevre was born Feb. 5, 1870, on the homestead near Strasburg, and was educated in the public schools of Lancaster, to which city his father removed while he was still a young lad. Leaving the high school, he entered the drug business, and after satisfactory examinations entered the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1894, acquiring the degree of Ph. G. The same year he opened an elegant drug store at the corner of South Queen and Conestoga streets, where he built up a handsome trade, and for four years of the time he was the owner of the second drug store located in the western part of the city.

On Jan. 1, 1900, Mr. LeFevre began the manufacture of perfumery, being the first in Lancaster to engage in that line. His first effort was on the Acton Carnation Pink, which sprang into instant and widespread popularity, and he has customers throughout the United States and Canada. He now manufactures a full line, consisting of many flower extracts, toilet waters, sachets, soaps and specialties. His trade of these delicate toilet articles extends throughout the country and is rapidly spreading, and has necessitated the erection of an extensive new laboratory.

Mr. LeFevre was married Oct. 15, 1894, to Miss Emma L., daughter of Frederick Wettig, a respected citizen of Lancaster. To this union have been born two children, Helen Catherine and Adelyne. Mr. LeFevre is a Baptist in religion and a Republican in politics. An earnest and progressive business man, his methods rank with the best in the community, and his personal character is such as to command the confidence and respect of all with whom he deals.

JACOB L. EBERSOLE, a general farmer and highly-respected citizen of Conoy township, was born on the farm where he is now living, May 3, 1866, son of Jacob R. and Anna (Lehman) Ebersole, whose married life was passed on the same place. There the father was born, and is now living retired, at the age of sixty-five years; and there the mother, who was born in Dauphin county, died Sept. 29, 1897, at the age of sixty-four years, and was buried in a private burying-ground which forms a part of the estate. Both parents were members of the Mennonite Church. They had the following children: Peter L., a farmer in Conoy township; Lizzie, who is unmarried and lives at home; Maria L., at home; and Jacob L.

The paternal grandparents of Jacob L. Ebersole were Rev. Peter and Mary (Risser) Ebersole, the former of whom was a bishop in the Mennonite Church for many years, and was engaged in farming in addition to his clerical labors. He died in 1870, at the age of eighty years, his wife in 1866. Their children were: Barbara, who lives in this county, and is unmarried; Peter R., who died in 1899; Anna R., wife of Jacob Ebersole, of Lebanon county; Fanny R., deceased, wife of John E. Ebersole; and Jacob R.

Peter Lehman and his wife lived in Dauphin county, where he was engaged in farming, and where his daughter, Anna, the mother of Jacob L. Ebersole, was born.

Jacob L. Ebersole and Miss Sadie U. Ober were married in Manheim in September, 1888, and have had the following children: Johnson O., Jennie O., Reuben O., Bertha O., Lizzie O., Agnes O., Sadie O. and Emma O. Mrs. Ebersole was born in West Donegal township, this county, Feb. 21, 1865, a daughter of John Ober, a wagonmaker of that township. Her parents were honorable and industrious people, and she is a woman highly respected by all who know her.

Mr. Ebersole has remained with his parents on the home farm up to the present time. He takes an active and enlightened interest in public affairs, is a clever and thrifty man, energetic and enterprising, and has made an enviable name for himself. Both he and his wife belong to the Mennonite Church, and in politics he is a Republican.

BENJAMIN W. HIRSH, youngest son of Abraham Hirsh, whose biography appears elsewhere, was born in Lancaster, and acquired his education in the city schools. Early in life he was taken into his father's store and given a practical knowledge of the extensive business which that gentleman had developed. The young man remained in the store for some time, but millinery and jewelry did not seem to be his line, and in 1887 he succeeded Cyrus Colvin in the livery business in Lancaster, continuing in that business until 1893, when he turned his attention to the handling of fine horses for the Philadelphia markets, buying largely in Canada and Wisconsin, and preparing the horses for sale at his own stables, known as the Eagle stables. This business he conducted for five years, in connection with the stables of the Northern Bank, and then was engaged exclusively for himself two years, with as many as eighty-six horses on his hands at one time. He has owned and tracked some of the most speedy horses in the State. Mr. Hirsh moved to North Queen street in 1895, and opened one of the largest stables in the city, which was destroyed by fire the following year, the loss to him being very heavy. For several months following the fire he was in charge of the Northern Bank stables, and then located at Cherry alley, his present location. Mr. Hirsh is a thorough horseman, and a fine judge of horseflesh, and his attention is given exclusively to the horse business. He is a keen and shrewd business man, and is advancing rapidly to the front among the solid and successful men of Lancaster. He has been long recognized as a progressive and broad-minded citizen, one of the kind who prove useful members of a community. Socially Mr. Hirsh belongs to the Germania, Maennerchor and Club, and the Liederkrantz Society.

Benjamin W. Hirsh and Mrs. Cora Cheever were married June 12, 1900. Mrs. Hirsh is a daughter of Jesse Good, and is a lady of many charming traits and characteristics.

MISS ANNA MYER, of Conestoga township, Lancaster county, has the distinction of owning and conducting a farm herself quite as well as a man could do it. Her great-grandfather, Samuel Myer, who came from Germany, settled in Conestoga township about 1720, and took up 180 acres of land near Conestoga Center; he always followed farming. There were five children in his family: Nathaniel, who went to Oregon Territory and died there; So-crates; Rudolph, who was drowned in the Susquehanna river; Peggy, wife of Benjamin Shenk, of Conestoga township; and Samuel, grandfather of Miss Anna Myer.

Samuel Myer was a minister of the Old Mennonite Church. He started in the tanning business about 1812, on the farm where Miss Myer now lives, and the business is still carried on by her brother Abram. He married a Miss Harnish, of Conestoga township, and they became the parents of fourteen children: Anna, wife of Benjamin Kauffman; Rudolph, father of Anna Myer; Maria, wife of Christian Herr; Fannie, wife of Abram Miller, of Manor township; Jacob, of Ohio; Barbara, wife of Christian Hertzler, of Cumberland county; Elizabeth, wife of Abram Miland, of Pequea township; Abram, of Conestoga township; and several children who died in infancy.

Rudolph Myer, father of Anna Myer, was born in 1807. He was educated in the public schools and lived at home with his parents until the age of eighteen, when he went to work in the tanyard where he was employed for something over six years, at the end of that time buying the business from his father and continuing it on his own behalf until the time of his death, in 1886. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Susan Miller, of Manor township, and was the father of eight children: Barbara, wife of Jacob Charles, of Pequea township; Abram, of Conestoga; Mary, wife of Joseph Eshleman, of Martic; Rudolph, who died in childhood; Isaac, who died in childhood; Samuel, of Conestoga township; Susan, wife of Joseph Harnish, of Pequea township; and Miss Anna, whose name opens this sketch.

Miss Myer is a fine manager, and under her rule the old homestead is kept in the very finest condition and is profitable as well. She is certainly to be congratulated on her fine executive ability, and is respected and esteemed by all who know her.

REV. CHARLES TOMPSON KNOX. The city of Lancaster takes a prominent place with her sister cities in educational, philanthropic and religious enterprises, and it is not a matter of surprise that within her borders Rev. Charles Tompson Knox, a Baptist minister endowed with youth, ability and true Christian spirit, should have been able to so interest the citizens at large, that they welcomed the establishment there of a little mission which was modestly named by its founder "The Strangers' Mission." Few at that date could have been found, however, to believe in the self-denial and continued enthusiasm of the young clergyman, or to have predicted the wonderful results from that small beginning.

Rev. Charles Tompson Knox was born at Rock Island, Ill., June 24, 1867. His paternal grandfather, Charles Bishop Knox, was born in Blandford, Mass., and after his marriage to Mary Gorham moved West, settling in Rock Island at a time when that thriving city contained only three houses.

Curtis Bishop Knox, a son of Charles Bishop Knox, for the past thirty years has been in the employ of the United States Government, in the Rock Island Arsenal. He married Martha Tompson, and three children were born to this union: One child died in infancy; Martha Tompson married George Stoughtenberg, who is a merchant in Moline, Ill., and the third is the founder and the beloved pastor of "The Strangers' Mission" and "The Door of Hope" in Lancaster.

Mr. Knox obtained his education at Shurtleff College, Alton, Ill., and afterward was ordained a Baptist minister, on Sept. 10, 1891. Coming to the city of Lancaster for a temporary sojourn, the trend of events, in June, 1895, led him into the work which resulted in the establishment of "The Strangers' Mission" and, later, "The Door of Hope," institutions which have done more in the way of philanthropy and charity and general usefulness than almost any other combination of benevolent enterprises. No such missionary work as has been done by Mr. Knox has ever been accomplished by any other agency or association of individuals in the history of the city. The scope and history of this wonderful work is told by Mr. Knox himself in a modest but convincing way, in "The Manual of the Strangers' Mission," from which we have been permitted to make the following extract:

"In 1895 I was in Lancaster temporarily for another purpose, and was induced to start a Sunday-school in the little old schoolhouse opposite the Lancaster County Almshouse, which I secured through the kindness of the school board. This was done through the urgency of a lady whom I met, who felt the need of Christian work among the people of the East End.

"Accordingly, on July 7, 1895, the first session was opened with twenty-eight people present. Having other business that engaged me closely during the week, so that there was no time nor strength for pastoral work, it was nevertheless agreeable to me to preach the Word of God once on Sunday. To this I consented. It bound me to nothing and pledged no one else. There was no covenant and no salary. Miss Eliza E. Smith, a rich and benevolent lady of Lancaster, became the first contributor, and a warm friend and substantial patroness of the work.

"In this way, trusting only in God, and free to leave when I would, the first year passed quickly away. With the first anniversary in 1896, came the intimation that the school board could no longer permit us to occupy the school building for religious services. The members of the board were not in any way unfriendly to the good work, but outside affairs now forced them to refuse us the use of the schoolhouse any longer.

"Not discouraged, we set about securing other quarters, and an undenominational church was organized, and the Holy Communion was administered. During 1896 the work grew rapidly, friends multiplied, people were drawn into the Church and many souls saved.

"At the end of the second year the work had so enlarged, and my pastoral duties became so manifold, that I now felt sure God would have me to cut loose from all visible means of support and trust Him alone. Whereupon I took up my abode in the Mission house, spread my table, and opened my door to all who came needing help or shelter. No one has ever been turned from the door, and God has succored the work, and we never lacked assistance in, nor furtherance of, the good work.

"The needs of the poor of our city now impressed me, and a Day Nursery was opened to care for children whose mothers were obliged to toil for their daily bread. An employment agency was also opened, to serve as a medium where those wanting help and those in need of employment could have their respective wants filled. And still another branch of the uplifting work was the establishment of a free medical dispensary, to aid the sick poor. The following well-known physicians of Lancaster have been untiring in their services in connection with my various charities: Drs. M. L. Herr, A. M. Underwood, F. G. Hartman, T. B. Appel, Wm. H. Herr, Frank Alleman, W. S. Brenholtz and G. L. Cassel."

The third anniversary found the work still progressing. Willing and influential friends made it possible to open the second "Strangers' Mission" in Faegleyville, a quarter in Lancaster that had long been in need of such missionary work, and where under the earnest ministrations of Rev. Mr. Knox and his loyal band of helpers, most encouraging headway has been made.

The fourth anniversary, in 1899, found the pastor of this unique church, with its auxiliary missionary work, with new responsibilities confronting him. "A Door of Hope," for fallen women, had been opened. On Oct. 2, 1899, the home was consecrated to its grand, soul-saving and rescuing purposes, and it immediately opened its doors to fallen but repentant women. During that year the institution fed and sheltered many. As freely as assistance came to it from all quarters, so freely and bounteously it was dispensed to those in need.

In the winter of 1901, influenced by a strange leading of God, while visiting Mrs. E. M. Whittemore, of New York, Rev. Mr. Knox felt the need of a gospel meeting to be held every night for the people of the street in Lancaster. This same peculiar leading, working on H. Z. Rhoads, caused him to offer a hall in his beautiful building in the center of the city, and thus was opened Central Hall, where the Gospel of Jesus is preached and sung every night.

This work is essentially a faith work, and as such has been blessed by God. The faithful pastor has never received one dollar as salary, and though all the contributions which support the various enterprises are entirely voluntary, the work has never halted an hour for lack of means. Mr. Knox is a strong man, one whose heart has been set upon a clearly defined purpose, and no personal lack has ever turned him from the great and noble standard which he has set up to reach. May he be still prospered in his labors!

MARTIN G. HESS, the efficient and popular cashier of the Keystone National Bank of Manheim, is a native of Lancaster county, born in Penn township April 5, 1865, son of Levi H. and Salinda S. (Gross) Hess, now residents of Manheim. His father is a retired farmer, is domestic in his tastes, and a Republican in politics. Religiously both he and his wife are members of the Mennonite Church. In the family of this worthy couple were ten children, namely; Noah, a fruit grower and farmer of Rothsville, Lancaster county; Henry, deceased; Martin G., of this review; Mary, wife of A. H. Brubaker, living near Rohrerstown, Lancaster county; Levi, manager of a branch house of the American Wringer Company at Springfield, Mass.; Phares, a teacher in the public schools of Lancaster county; Salinda, at home; Elam, a school teacher in Lancaster county; Ammon, attending school at Mt. Hermon, Mass.; and Jerome, who is attending school in Manheim, and resides at home.

Martin G. Hess received his early education in the public schools near his boyhood home, and later took a business course at the Coleman Business College, Newark, N. J. In June, 1888, he entered the Keystone National Bank, as a clerk, and in November, 1890, was appointed cashier, which responsible position he has since filled with credit and distinction. In December, 1901, he assisted in the organization of the Denver National Bank, of Denver, this county, and was elected its first president. He was one of the promoters of the Lancaster, Petersburg & Manheim trolley railroad, of which he is a director. Mr. Hess is a young man of good business ability, energetic and progressive, and commands the respect and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact, either in business or in social life.

On Sept. 23, 1890, Mr. Hess married Miss Emma R. Erb. Both hold membership in the German Reformed Church.

JOHN F. LANDIS, a retired farmer of West Donegal township, whose years and industrious life alike command respect and confidence, is still engaged in operating a feed mill in that township, on the farm where he has spent so many honest and laborious years.

Mr. Landis was born in Manheim township, near Neffsville, Sept. 30, 1837, son of David and Nancy (Frick) Landis, both natives of Lancaster county. The father was a farmer, and in his younger days a blacksmith, and retired from active work some two years prior to his death, Dec. 25, 1864, at the age of fifty-eight years. His widow survived many years, dying June 23, 1885, when over seventy-six years old. They were buried in the cemetery connected with the Landis Meeting House, a well-known place of worship in Manheim township for the Mennonite people, to whom they belonged. To them were born the following children, all deceased but Abraham and John F.: Eliza married George Shreiner; Mary died young; Ephraim died in Wadsworth, Ohio, at the age of fifty-three years; David died in Lancaster in 1900, aged sixty-five years; Abraham is a retired farmer in Washington county, Md.; Samuel died Oct. 21, 1865; his twin sister, Anna, married John Bollinger; Fanny married Jacob Kertz; Margaret married Christ Hess, of Manheim township, and died in 1900; John F. is mentioned below.

The paternal grandparents of John F. Landis were John and Mary (Snively) Landis, of Lancaster county, who spent their lives in farming. His maternal grandparents were John and Veronica (Martin) Frick, both Lancaster people.

John F. Landis and Magdalena Keller were married in Manheim township, Sept. 13, 1859, and to them have come the following children: Lizzie, wife of Jacob Horst, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Franklin K., an employe at Buch's works, in Elizabethtown, Pa.; Martin K., engineer in Kreider's shoe factory, Elizabeth, Pa.; Amanda K., deceased; Phares K., a farmer and operator of a steam thresher in West Donegal township; Samuel K., a farmer, gristmiller and coachmaker in Rapho township; Maggie K., who married George Floyd, of West Donegal township; John K., deceased; Katie K., married to Harvey Hostetter, a farmer in West Donegal township; Harry K., salesman for the New Holland Machine works, who resides at Mt. Joy; and Clayton K., deceased.

Mrs. Magdalena Landis was born near Lititz, Pa., Dec. 6, 1839, daughter of Frederick and Catharine (Gross) Keller, both natives of Lancaster county, her father having been born on a farm in Ephrata township, and her mother in East Donegal, on the Gross homestead. They were farming people, and led worthy lives.

John F. Landis remained with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-two, when he married, and for eight years was engaged in the cultivation of the old homestead. At the end of that time he sold out and moved into Elizabeth township, where he engaged in farming for twelve years. Selling out, he moved to West Donegal township, on the farm of his wife's uncle, John Gross. In 1880 he built a new barn, in which he put up a steam custom chop mill, which he ran together with the farm until the spring of 1887, when he gave the charge of the farm to his son Phares and continued milling. On the night of Nov. 18, 1897, the barn mysteriously burned down. It was rebuilt, and the mill has continued in operation up to the present time.

John F. Landis and his wife belong to what is called the Stauffer denomination, a non-voting people, who take no part in any office of the Commonwealth or participate in any worldly corporation.

HENRY KEENER, one of the old and most respected citizens of Lancaster county, has presented in his career an example of what may be accomplished by exemplary living, and the exercise of honesty and industry. Coming to Lancaster county a poor boy, with no capital but youth and energy, he is now regarded as one of the substantial citizens, whose financial backing would be sufficient to ensure the success of almost any enterprise. His accumulation of means has been accomplished through hard, earnest toil, as his principles would never have permitted him to look with any favor upon any speculative scheme with a view to increasing his possessions.

Henry Keener was born Jan. 31, 1819, in Bavaria, Germany, son of Henry and Maggie (Springling) Keener, both of whom in time became residents of the United States, and passed away in this land. Grandfather Keener was a member of the Old Mennonite Church, but the parents of Henry Keener were connected with the Presbyterian Church, in which the father was an elder. The mother lived to be seventy-three years old, and died in the home of her son George, while the father died in the home of his son Philip, at the age of seventy-five; both were buried in the old Musser burying-ground, in Leacock township. Henry and Maggie Keener were the parents of eight children: Philip, deceased; Peter, who died in Leacock township; Henry, whose name introduces this biography; Catherine, widow of Philip Hohman, who resided near New Holland; Stephen, a farmer of Leacock township; Mattie, deceased, who was the wife of A. Burtice; George, who was a farmer in Washington county, Md.; and Adam, a resident of Westchester, Pennsylvania.

Henry Keener

Henry Keener was reared in his native country, and remained there until the age of twenty, at which time he decided that he could better his prospects by emigrating to the United States, and he was the first of his family to leave the old home. Making his way to a port in France, he embarked on the vessel "Louis Philippe," and landed on these shores March 23, 1840, a very homesick and discouraged youth for a time, as he was a stranger in a strange land, and understood very little of the language. The season for farm work was about opening, however, and he obtained a few months' employment at farm labor near Albany, N. Y. But after the harvest was gathered there was no more work for him in that locality, and he made his way to the metropolis, later to Philadelphia, and finally to Lancaster county, where he knew he should, at least, find countrymen. The fifty cents he had in his possession at the time of his arrival lasted but a short time, and he again felt almost disheartened, but calling his resolution to assist him he made his way to Bird-in-Hand, and soon made friends with a most excellent man, John Stauffer. This friend in need gave him employment at wood cutting and general utility work, and here he was also offered work in the mills, at $15 per month, but he wisely decided that he could prosper better at farm work, and remained with his new friend and employer for more than a year.

In his early home Henry Keener had been taught habits of frugality, which he continued to practice later in life, the result being that year by year he was able to add to his means. When he married, in 1843, he began farming, in a small way, on sixteen acres of land in East Lampeter township, renting this property for two years. In the meantime he had purchased a small tract of land, upon which he lived two years, finally disposing of it and again renting, cultivating for two succeeding years a farm of eighty acres. Going next to Benjamin King's place, he took charge of his farm, remaining upon it for seven years, and then, in association with his brother Adam, rented the Lime Valley mill, conducting same for one year. At this time Mr. Keener felt ready to purchase the farm upon which he now lives, consisting then of seventy-one acres, and in the course of time bought seventy-five adjoining acres, later selling ten of these. He entered upon general farming on an extensive scale, giving that work his undivided attention, and employing the most approved methods in the production and succession of crops, demonstrating that his long management of the land of others had well prepared him to make the best returns from his own. At present his son, John B., possesses the old farm, Mr. Keener retaining his last purchase, now sixty-five acres, for his own residence.

Henry Keener was married, in 1843, to Barbara Bally, who was born Feb. 22, 1822, and who died in February, 1901. They had three children: Maggie, who is the wife of Sylvester F. Sweigert, a farmer and baker in Paradise township; Lizzie, who is the wife of Samuel Martin, of Strasburg; and John B., who is one of the leading farmers of Strasburg township, is an elder in the Old Mennonite Church, and wedded Lizzie Martin. Mr. Keener is an adherent to the Old Mennonite faith, as was also his wife. He is one of the stockholders in the Strasburg National Bank. Many still remember when he was a poor but honest boy, a stranger in their midst, and his life tells its own lesson of what can be accomplished by steady, persistent effort. Mr. Keener has had a beneficial influence in Lancaster county, and no family is more highly respected, either in the church or in the community, than his.

JACOB FRANKLIN TREXLER, M. D., an eminent surgeon and physician of Lancaster, was born in Berks county May 5, 1863. His parents, Henry J. and Mary A. (Kercher) Trexler, are both descended from ante-Revolution families who came to America from Germany, and received their land grants in Berks county, Pa., from the then reigning king of England. The founders of the Trexler family in this country were two brothers, one of whom settled in Oley and the other in Mertztown, Berks county, the Doctor belonging to the latter branch of the family. Most of the members of this family have been engaged in farming and the iron industry, but several adopted professional pursuits, and became eminent in the ministry of the Lutheran Church and in the practice of medicine.

Jacob F. Trexler passed his boyhood on the home farm. He attended the district school, and on leaving the public school attended the Keystone Normal, and later Wyoming Seminary, at Kingston, Pa., finally entering Muhlenburg College, at Allentown. In 1885 he began the study of medicine under Dr. P. W. Wertz, of Long Swamp, and in 1886 entered the University of Pennsylvania, and after three years of arduous study entered Jefferson Medical College, in 1893, from which he graduated with the class of 1894. There was an interim, however, between his leaving the University and his entering Jefferson College, of which he availed himself to travel quite extensively. For a time he was associated incidentally with the celebrated Dr. Agnew, from whom he received considerable assistance in the prosecution of his medical studies.

After graduation Dr. Trexler located in Lancaster, where his ability and skill found immediate recognition and secured for him a sure and remunerative practice. He gives considerable attention to bacteriology, as well as pathology, and he is now connected with St. Joseph's Hospital as a member of the staff, having charge of all examination with the X-ray apparatus. He is a constant and devoted student of his art, and is a member of the County Medical and Pathological Societies, to which he has contributed many valuable essays and reports of his personal experiences.

Besides his extensive medical practice the Doctor finds time to interest himself in industrial pursuits, so common in the great State of Pennsylvania. In partnership with his brother, John Louis Trexler, who individually operated a corn mill in Mertztown, the Doctor has been engaged since 1897 in the stave and lumber business at the same place, under the style of the Trexler Stave & Lumber Company, Limited, with branch plants at Ashfield and Huntingdon, and of this company the Doctor is president. They employ about eighty-four men, and the output is principally distributed throughout the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Dr. Trexler was united in marriage, in 1891, at Farmdale, Lancaster county, with Miss Ella Stoner Moore, daughter of Michael H. and Barbara S. Moore. The Doctor and his wife are members of Trinity Lutheran Church, in the work of which the Doctor has always been earnest and active ever since his confirmation in the faith. He was a member of the executive committee which organized the Lutheran League of America, and for two years was a treasurer of the State Lutheran League. The Doctor is very affable, and has won for himself hosts of friends, and he and his wife are ever welcome in the highest social circles of Lancaster, while his professional reputation is such as any physician might well take pride in, and still not be suspected or accused of vanity—a failing quite foreign to the Doctor's make-up.

AMAZIAH H. HOSTETTER, a very successful and popular hardware and implement dealer at Intercourse, was born in Paradise township, Lancaster county, Sept. 7, 1861, a son of Abram and Lydia A. (Herr) Hostetter. The father was born in 1833 in New Providence, was a farmer, and is now living retired in Paradise township. In his more active years he was quite prominent in local affairs, and long served as school director. He and his wife are members of the Mennonite Church. Abram and Lydia A. Hostetter have had the following children: Letitia married Andrew Harnish, of Strasburg township; Amaziah H. is mentioned below; Isaac, who married a Miss Slaymaker, is a farmer in Paradise township; Jacob is a resident of Strasburg township; Abraham died young.

The parents of Abram Hostetter were David and Catherine (Miller) Hostetter, farming people of Lancaster county. The parents of Mrs. Lydia A. Hostetter were Isaac and Elizabeth Herr, farming people of Lancaster county.

Amaziah H. Hostetter was married Nov. 28, 1883, in Lancaster, to Miss Evaline B. Denlinger. To this union came one child, Mary A. Mrs. Evaline B. Hostetter was born in Paradise township Nov. 13, 1861, and is a sister of Mrs. Henry Hershey.

Amaziah H. Hostetter was reared on the paternal estate, and remained under the parental roof until he reached the age of twenty-three years. For the twelve years ensuing he was engaged in farming, until 1895, in which year he went into his present business, which has become both lucrative and pleasant. His place of business he bought from Abram Kurtz. For some three years he was in partnership with Elmer Hilt, whom he bought out, and has since carried on the business alone. He is a member of the Mennonite Church, and in politics is a Republican.

ALDUS F. NEFF, a truck farmer of East Lampeter township, is one of the energetic and thrifty young farmer citizens of his locality. He was born July 13, 1864, in West Lampeter township, this county, son of Frederick Neff.

Frederick Neff was born in Lancaster county Sept. 7, 1820, received a common-school education, and lived at home until he was about twenty-one years of age. He then learned the carpenter's trade with Peter Baker, of East Lampeter township, and after he had served his time began business for himself, contracting and building, which he followed until his death, Oct. 18, 1884. Mr. Neff was a member of the Lutheran Church. He married for his first wife Miss Joanna Caskey, and they were the parents of eight children: Mary, deceased; Jacob, of Lancaster City; John, deceased; Catherine, wife of Abraham Hoover; Salome, wife of Hosmer Aument; Barbara, deceased; Elam, deceased; and Susanna, deceased, wife of Henry Jones. The mother of these died March 24, 1858, and Mr. Neff married Mrs. Catherine (Meck) Raub, widow of Amos Raub. They became the parents of three children: Amanda, wife of David W. Herr; Amos, who is deceased; and Aldus F.

Aldus F. Neff lived at home with his parents until he was about twenty years of age, when he began farming and trucking for himself. He has continued same up to the present time by preference, although he learned the carpenter's trade with his father. In 1899 he purchased the place where he now resides, and which contains four acres, one of the finest garden spots in Lancaster county. Mr. Neff is public-spirited and active in the affairs of his locality, having served efficiently as collector, three years; judge of election, four years; and inspector, four years. In political sentiment he is a Republican.

On Dec. 30, 1890, Mr. Neff wedded Miss Minnie Weitzel, daughter of George Weitzel, and to this union have been born two children, Earl W. and Catherine E., both at home. Mr. Neff is one of Lancaster county's most progressive young men, fully alive to the best interests of the community in general.

LAFAYETTE HAMILTON. There are many young men and thriving agriculturists in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, but there are few who have reached prominence in two lines at so early an age as Lafayette Hamilton, whose residence and shop are in the village of Spring Garden.

Mr. Hamilton was born in the township of Paradise, May 30, 1860, son of Joseph and Margaret (Hoover) Hamilton, the former of whom was a prosperous farmer, and died near Gap, in Salisbury township, July 3, 1878, at the age of fifty-eight years; his wife died April 4, 1875, when she was forty-five years of age. They were devout members of the Episcopal Church, and were interred in Paradise township. Their family comprised six children, named as follows: Henry H., who is ticket agent for the railroad company at Atglen; Sally, wife of Henry H. Kurtz, a retired farmer of Salisbury township; Lafayette, whose name opens this sketch; Franklin, a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad at Philadelphia; and Edwin and Walter, deceased. The paternal grandparents of Lafayette Hamilton were William and Elizabeth (Miller) Hamilton, and the maternal grandparents were Jacob and Catherine Hoover, of Lancaster county, the former of whom was of Swiss extraction and a prominent farmer.

Lafayette Hamilton resided with his parents until he was nineteen years of age, and then served an apprenticeship of three years at blacksmithing at White Horse, Lancaster county. Later he worked for his brother-in-law, Harry H. Kurtz, for five years, and then settled on his present farm, on which is situated a hotel, which he also owns.

On Jan. 27, 1886, Lafayette Hamilton married, in Spring Garden, Miss Clara A. Worst, and this union has been blessed with two children, Clyde H. and Harry W. Mrs. Clara A. (Worst) Hamilton was born Nov. 10, 1859, on that part of Mr. Hamilton's farm on which the hotel alluded to above is situated, and is a daughter of Peter and Maria B. (Good) Worst, who came from Springville, Salisbury township, and Leacock township, respectively, and were married in 1858. Peter Worst was a prosperous farmer in his earlier life, but tiring of farm labor he built the "Spring Garden Hotel," in 1852, and conducted it successfully for six years. He then relinquished the business solely on account of the death of his wife, and rented out the premises. Mr. Worst next engaged in droving and butchering, but finally returned to farming, at which he continued until the marriage of his daughter, when he retired in favor of his son-in-law. He was the father of two children: Clara A., Mrs. Hamilton; and George B., of St. Louis, Mo. Mrs. Maria B. (Good) Worst was called away in December, 1862, at the age of twenty-five years, and Peter Worst died Jan. 5, 1897, at the age of seventy-four, the remains of both were interred in the private burying-ground of the Worst estate, in Springville. Mr. Worst was quite prominent in his community, was very popular, and served as school director for many years. Henry and Mary (Kurtz) Worst, the paternal grandparents of Mrs. Clara A. Hamilton, were farming people of Lancaster county. The grandfather died in 1884, at the age of eighty-nine years, his wife preceding him to the grave June 22, 1853. Their remains were also buried in the Worst family burying ground. Henry and Mary Worst were members of the Mennonite Church. They reared a family of ten children, as follows: Barbara, deceased wife of John Warner; Peter, deceased; Samuel, a farmer in Salisbury township; Elias, deceased; Mary, deceased wife of Joseph Bear; Elizabeth, unmarried, and living in Springfield; Susannah, wife of Daniel Kurtz, a retired farmer living in Spring Garden; Henry, a merchant in Springville; Leah A., deceased; and Catherine, also deceased. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Hamilton were Cyrus and Lovina (Bear) Good, farming people of considerable prominence in Leacock township.

In politics Mr. Hamilton is a Democrat, but has never been an office seeker. The family ranks among the most respected residents of Salisbury township, and although comparatively young in years Mr. Hamilton enjoys an extended acquaintanceship, of which any man might well be proud.

EVANS. James Evans, the founder of the Evans family in Lancaster county was a native of Ireland, born in 1761. He married a Scottish woman, Margaret Miller, and came to Lancaster county, possibly locating in the vicinity of Lititz. His death occurred in 1805, and his widow lived to the advanced age of ninety-three years. She was buried at Brownstown, Lancaster county, while the remains of her husband lie in Lititz. They had a family of three sons: (1) John, is mentioned below. (2) James, who was a tailor, lived and died in Lancaster county. (3) Robert, who was a minister of the Evangelical Church, spent his life in Lancaster county. In his later years he was an auctioneer. The father of this family was a mason by trade, and helped to build Binkley's Bridge.

John Evans, the eldest child in the above family, was born in August, 1799, and died Oct. 8, 1863. In early life he engaged in business as a butcher, locating in Manheim township, where his active career was spent. A short time before his death he moved to Lancaster City, where he lived retired. He carried on the butcher business for many years, and his establishment has been kept up to the present time. For many years he was an able and successful auctioneer. He was one of the leading citizens of his section. Of a patriotic disposition, at the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the State Militia, notwithstanding his advanced years, and was ready to go to the front. In politics he was a staunch Republican.

John Evans married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Frederick Nagle; her mother was a Hoofnagle. Mrs. Elizabeth Evans died in 1861, when sixty years of age. To them were born the following named children: (1) Maria married Hiram Campbell, and is deceased. (2) Isaac, who was a butcher, died in Lancaster when some seventy years of age. (3) David died when sixty years old. For thirteen years he was superintendent of the Lancaster county schools, for many years was a teacher in the public schools, and was a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College. Later in his active life he was a real-estate dealer in Lancaster. (4) John is a retired farmer and cattle drover of Warwick township. (5) Frederick was a carpenter, and died at the age of fifty-six years. (6) Benjamin, the father of William L. Evans, is mentioned elsewhere. (7) William is an auctioneer at Lititz. (8) Charlotte is the wife of J. K. Stoner, of Lancaster. (10) Amanda is the widow of Samuel R. Myer, of Bareville, Lancaster county. (11) Anna E., unmarried, is a resident of Lancaster.

WILLIAM L. EVANS, one of the leading men of Manheim township, belongs to one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county, and was born in the city of Lancaster Jan. 27, 1863, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Gross) Evans, and grandson of John and Elizabeth Evans. The great-grandparents of William L. Evans came from Ireland.

Benjamin Evans was born on a farm about a half mile east of Neffsville, was reared on the farm, and learned the butcher's trade with his father. Very early in life he entered upon that business, being assisted by his brother-in-law, Hiram Campbell, while in Neffsville. Benjamin Evans had his shop in Lancaster on North Queen street, where he lived at that time. He followed butchering all his active days. About 1871 he purchased a tract of eighty-four acres, to which he added until he owned a farm of 144 acres, just north of Fruitville. There he established a butchering plant, which is now owned and operated by his son, and it is noted as one of the most complete in that part of the county. The slaughtering and dressing of the meats is all done there, and the salesroom is on North Queen street, Lancaster. Benjamin Evans long made his home on the farm, but his last days were spent under the roof of his son, Benjamin, where he died May 1, 1900, when sixty-nine years old. He was a man of genial temper and jovial spirits, and enjoyed the friendship of a large circle. In his death the community lost a valued citizen. For many years he was treasurer of the Dunkard Church, of which he was a member. He was very active in the promotion of the Baptist Brethren Church on Charlotte street, in the city of Lancaster, and was always zealous in its welfare and upbuilding. His widow is still living at the age of seventy-four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Evans were the parents of the following children: Sarah, wife of Jerry Stump, of Bareville; Alfred D., a farmer in Manheim township; Frank, who is engaged in the meat market at Lancaster; Milton, who died when three years old; Ella, who died when seventeen years old; Lilly, wife of J. W. Lausinger, of the Millersville State Normal School; William L.; Benjamin G., a farmer in Manheim township; and one that died in infancy.

William L. Evans, whose name appears at the opening of this article, was reared to the butcher's trade, and received his education in the public school. When a young man he had a printing press, and did job work; he was expert in scroll work, and still retains some fine specimens of his skill in that line which adorn his home. When he had attained his majority, he associated himself with his father and brother in the butcher business, under the name of Benjamin Evans & Sons. In 1898 the father retired, and then the firm name became Benjamin Evans' Sons. For over a hundred years the Evans name has figured in the market annals of Lancaster county. Since the sons have had control they have made some radical changes in the conduct of the business, in both wholesale and retail lines. Their retail business is of large volume, and in the manufacture of sausage and Bologna they have attained a creditable reputation. William Evans has charge of the slaughtering and manufacture, while his brother looks after the store in Lancaster.

Mr. Evans, owns a farm of fifty-four acres where he has a fine home, which he has modernized and made beautiful. He was married Aug. 4, 1885, to Miss Fannie, daughter of Samuel and Fannie (Brubaker) Keller, formerly from Penn township, but now residents of Manheim township. Mrs. Evans was born at Lime Rock, Penn township, Oct. 16, 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Evans have the following children: Samuel B., William Edgar, Florence A. and Paul K. They belong to the Dunkard Church, of the Mountville District, and all stand among the most worthy and respected people of the county.

B. FRANK MUSSER, deputy register of Lancaster county, residing at Mountville, this county, was born Nov. 13, 1864, a son of Martin G. and Mary Ann (Root) Musser.

Martin G. Musser, leaf tobacco merchant, and ex-vice president of the Mountville National Bank, was born near Silver Spring, West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Jan. 19, 1842, a son of Michael and Elizabeth (Gerber) Musser, natives, respectively, of West Hempfield and East Donegal townships, and both of whom died on their farm, near Silver Spring. Martin G. Musser, during the year 1888, purchased the Root Plow Works, located in the borough of Mount Joy, and caused the same to be removed to Mountville, where it was incorporated and became known as the Mountville Manufacturing Co., of which he was elected its first president, serving as such until 1896, when he was elected register of wills of Lancaster county, and served for the term of three years. Mr. Musser was one of the organizers of the Mountville National Bank, and was vice-president until 1901, when he resigned. He has ever been one of the most active and progressive business men of Mountville, and there is no one in the community who has borne a cleaner business character than he. His advice in business matters is invariably sought by the people of the place in which he resides.

On June 9, 1864, Martin G. Musser married Mary Ann Root, and to this union was born the following family: B. Frank; John M., railway mail clerk; Mary E., wife of Iverson A. Witmer; Elizabeth, at home; and Martin E., a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College, formerly a teacher of Latin in the Lebanon High School, then a student one year in the University of Pennsylvania, and now a law student. Mary Ann (Root) Musser was born in East Lampeter township, Lancaster county, March 2, 1840, and died June 12, 1891. She was a daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Frantz) Root, who settled in West Hempfield township in 1848, the father dying in Landisville.

Michael Musser, father of Martin G. Musser, was born Feb. 24, 1815, was a farmer and school director for many years, and died in 1895. His wife was born March 12, 1816, and died in 1857, the remains of both being buried on the old homestead, in West Hempfield township. To Michael Musser and his first wife, Elizabeth Gerber, there was born a large family, as follows: Jacob, born March 28, 1830, is deceased; Benjamin G., born in September, 1838, is a farmer in West Hempfield township; Anna G., born July 18, 1840, became the wife of Henry Kaufman, and died in 1899; Martin G., born Jan. 19, 1842, is mentioned above; Michael was born in February, 1844; Barbara, born April 19, 1846, is married to Daniel D. Forry, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Elizabeth, born in July, 1848, is the wife of George Strickler, a farmer of York county; Fanny, born Sept. 18, 1850, is married to J. H. Nolt, a farmer of West Hempfield township; John, born in January, 1853, is a farmer of East Hempfield township; Andrew, born in March, 1855, died in infancy; and Mary, twin of Andrew, died when she was in her seventh year. The second marriage of Michael Musser was to Fanny Hersh, and to this union have been born two children: Christ H., born June, 1859, a farmer in West Hempfield township, and Henry H., born in July, 1864, who is farming the old homestead.

The paternal grandparents of Martin G. Musser were Martin and Anna (Sechrist) Musser, natives and farming people of West Hempfield township. The maternal grandparents were Jacob and Barbara Gerber, who were also farmers.

B. Frank Musser lived on the home farm until seven years old, when his parents removed to Mountville. Here he attended the district schools until nineteen years of age, and then the business college at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1881, when he began assisting his father in the leaf tobacco business. From 1886 to 1897, he engaged in farming, and also in the sale of farming implements.

B. Frank Musser was married to Nora Yohn, in 1885, and this marriage has been favored with one child, Mary B. Mrs. Nora Musser was born in Mountville, a daughter of Edward and Mary (Baker) Yohn.

WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER LILLER. Among the prominent citizens of Lancaster, particularly conspicuous on account of his official position as Adjutant General of the Spanish-American War Veterans of the United States, is William Christopher Liller, the able editor of The United States Volunteer, the official organ of that association. Aside from official duties, Mr. Liller is a keen and successful man of business, and with ability fills the offices of president and general manager of the Liller Manufacturing Company, and at the same time holds a controlling interest in the Volunteer Publishing Company, an incorporation organized in Delaware.

Christopher Liller, the grandfather of William C., married a sister of Frank Pfeiffer, who for many years was Lancaster's most prominent slater. Mrs. Liller is now deceased, but Mr. Liller is still an esteemed resident of the city.

The parents of William C. Liller were George C. and Anna (Lippold) Liller, the former a well-known manufacturer of toilet articles, and the latter a sister of Charles Lippold, the efficient school tax collector. A family of seven children was born to George C. Liller and his wife: Lottie, who is the wife of George Krantz, of Lancaster; George, who is a soldier in the United States army, stationed at Fort Russell, Wyo.; Henry, Annie, Frederick and Herbert, at school; and William C.

William Christopher Liller was born in Lancaster Sept. 8, 1878, and after receiving a partial education in the public schools of the city attended the University of Tennessee for a time. He then entered the office of Col. H. Frank Eshleman, one of the leading members of the Bar, as a student at law. Mr. Liller was connected with the Lancaster Daily Intelligencer, on which he gained his first knowledge of newspaper work.

So little time has elapsed since our Nation was aroused over the issues of the Spanish-American war that it is only necessary to refer to the thrilling uprising among the youth of the land, ready, willing and anxious to offer their lives for their country, and to make a personal application, in the case of Mr. Liller. With loyal enthusiasm he put aside his books and the certainty of success in his chosen career, and enlisted for service in the 6th United States Cavalry on May 15, 1898, faithfully serving through the Santiago campaign, in the 5th and the 4th Army Corps, until the peace protocol had been signed, when he received an honorable discharge from the army, his papers having the endorsement which reads "service honest and faithful," which his children will preserve with care among their dearest records. While a trooper in the famous 6th Cavalry this young soldier was appointed troop clerk, his many excellent qualities and sterling attributes being recognized, and winning him promotion and the esteem of his superior officers.

Upon his return to civil life Mr. Liller at once set about the organization of the Spanish-American war veterans into a National association similar in intent and purpose to the Grand Army of the Republic, and how well he has succeeded, acting conjointly with other comrades, finds daily illustration in the rapidly swelling ranks of this large and already powerful organization, of which he has the honor to be adjutant general, and acting quartermaster general.

In taking the initiative in forming this new Grand Army Mr. Liller had with him the patriotic sentiment of the country, and he soon interested a number of prominent men in the project, these including such reliable and upright officers as Gen. Joseph Wheeler, Gen. J. P. S. Gobin and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. It required a man of exceptional ability to bring about the solidity of this organization, and that Mr. Miller possessed the necessary attributes is evidenced by its present condition, although he has found it necessary to give time, money and personal attention to it.

During the annual national convention Mr. Liller won many personal friends and admirers, his youth and enthusiasm inspiring all to renewed effort for the success of this laudable enterprise. There are now some 500 camps of Spanish-American War Veterans, scattered through every State and Territory, including our colonial acquisitions, Col. A. L. Hawkins Camp, of Lancaster, having over 125 members on its honorable roll, including such distinguished men as Capt. Hobson of "Merri-mac" fame.

Although the life of a soldier leaves little time for outside work, Mr. Liller kept up his newspaper connection to the extent of contributing some of the most able and succinct war articles published at that time, many of them being so pertinent and interesting that they found their way into the city press, in New York and Philadelphia. His present enterprise is an outgrowth of the organization which it represents, and no more able editor could be found than Mr. Liller. His pen is that of a ready writer, and he has had the satisfaction of noting that a number of his editorial articles have appeared, with approval, in the columns of leading papers in various sections. While the duties of the association are exacting, he is able also to attend to his personal business interests with ability, his position as President of the Volunteer Publishing Company and the affairs of the Liller Manufacturing Company giving him no time to take any active part in politics. However, he finds time for active membership in the Society of the Army of Santiago de Cuba, Order of the American Eagle, United States Volunteer Association (National secretary), Military Order of Foreign Wars, American Flag Association, and Army and Navy Union.

Mr. Liller was married April 2, 1900, to Miss Alice May Kreider, daughter of Jacob Kreider, a retired citizen of Lancaster, and into their happy home have come twin sons, Richard Coryell and Eugene Montgomery, who have the best chance in the world of being trained into loyal and patriotic citizens of a country which their father so proudly served.

WILLIAM HOPKINS, prominently known in the business circles of East Drumore township, where he was born May 23, 1855, son of James M. and Harriet L. (Webb) Hopkins, has made a place for himself among the successful men of Lancaster county.

James Hopkins, his grandfather, was in his time a prominent lawyer in Lancaster. He became the father of four sons and one daughter, and two of the sons, Washington and George, following in the footsteps of their distinguished father, were brilliant members of the legal profession. Anna, the only daughter, married Newton Lightner, also a lawyer. William was a farmer in East Drumore township.

James M. Hopkins, son of James, and father of William, was born in Lancaster March 19, 1811, and lived in East Drumore township, where for many years he carried on the Conaway furnaces, founded by his father, becoming one of the prominent and influential citizens of his section of the county. His death occurred in January, 1896, when he was in his eighty-sixth year. His wife, who was born in 1819 at Pine Grove Forge, this county, passed to her reward in 1900. They were the parents of twelve children, seven of whom are living: (1) Elizabeth O. married James Alexander, a lawyer of Lancaster, and both are deceased. They had four children, Howard, Percy, Mary (who married George S. Washington, of Philadelphia) and James H. (2) Washington W., born in 1838, lives in Port Deposit. By his first wife, Harriet Rogers, he had three children—Louisa, who died young; Edward, a resident of Philadelphia; and Herbert, who died young. By his second marriage to May Loag, were born two children, Christian and Marion. Mr. Hopkins practiced law in Lancaster many years. (3) Laura is the widow of Samuel H. Rutter, of Pottstown, Pa., and lives in Lancaster. (4) Henry C., born in East Drumore, is a real-estate dealer in Lancaster. He married Miss Annie Naumbee, by whom he has four living children, Henry, Annie L., Elizabeth Isabell and Ralph. Elizabeth died young. (5) Louisa died in young womanhood. (6) Robert C. is a banker at Port Deposit, Md. He married Miss Mary Rowland, a daughter of Dr. Rowland, of Cecil county, Md., and four of their children are living, Louisa (the wife of John Matthews), Francis, Mary and Ross. (7) Anna died at the old home in her early womanhood. (8) James was a soldier in the Civil war, and died in hospital. (9) Harriet married Clinton Deaver, of Dayton, Ohio, where he is a college professor. They have four children, Walter, Richard, Mary and Catherine. (10) Newton died at the home of his parents in 1876. (11) Emma married Harry Gardner, and lives in Lancaster. They have one daughter, Harriet L. (12) William is mentioned below.

William Hopkins received his education in the public schools of Lancaster county and at Chambersburg. For twenty-five years he was manager of his father's extensive interests, looking after his grist mill, farms, etc. In December, 1882, he married Miss Mary C., daughter of William and Martha (Rutter) Brooke, and sister of Major Gen. John R. Brooke, now of Governors Island, New York harbor. Both the Rutters and Brookes were prominent in Montgomery county. William Brooke was born near Pottstown, where he was known as Major Brooke, and died at his home in that city in 1873, after an active and useful life. His widow passed to her reward in 1879, leaving one son, the Major General, and two daughters: Caroline, who is the wife of Samuel S. Campbell, and Mary C., Mrs. Hopkins, who was born in Montgomery county, and obtained her education in the Pottstown schools. She is a scholarly lady, of many charms, and enjoys many friends.

After his marriage Mr. Hopkins located on his father's farm in East Drumore, where he has resided to the present time, and made a creditable reputation for himself in agricultural and commercial circles. He owns a large herd of Jersey cattle, which he devotes to his own creamery.

All the members of the Hopkins family are staunch Republicans. William Hopkins has been school director for several years. Both himself and wife belong to the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church, where he is one of the elders.

JAMES G. McSPARRAN. Among the leading citizens of the southern part of Lancaster county, is James G. McSparran, a retired farmer of Fairfield, Drumore township, who is one of the wealthy, intelligent and traveled residents of this section.

Mr. McSparran was born Dec. 19, 1843, in Drumore township, a son of the late John and Isabel (McCullough) McSparran, and a grandson of James McSparran, one of the influential farmers of this part of the county, where he took part in public affairs, and reared a numerous family, eleven of his fifteen children living to maturity, these being: James and Isabel, twins; Grizzell; Eliza; John; Eleanor; Fleming; Thomas; William; Rachel and Margaret. Grandfather McSparran was of sturdy Scotch-Irish ancestry, and came to Lancaster county among the early settlers, purchasing the farm which is still in the possession of the family, being now the property of Thomas McSparran, whose sketch appears in another part of this volume.

John McSparran, the father of James G. McSparran, was born April 28, 1808, and died May 25, 1885. On Jan. 9, 1840, he was united in marriage to Miss Isabel McCullough, who was born Nov. 23, 1815, and died Aug. 29, 1845, a daughter of William McCullough. She also claimed among her ancestors natives of both Ireland and Scotland. The only surviving child of this union was James G., who is the subject of this sketch. John McSparran was an active and ardent Democrat all his life, and was identified with political and religious matters for many years, being considered justly one of the leading citizens of Lancaster county. His rearing had been in the Presbyterian Church, and he never departed from its teachings, living a most estimable life.

James G. McSparran was reared as a farmer boy, and has never lost his deep interest in agricultural matters, for many years operating one of the finest farms in this part of the county. His primary education was conducted in the common schools of Drumore township, and later he became an apt pupil of the Chestnut Level Academy, but to his great love of reading and his extended travels must be attributed in great measure the intellectual attainments which make of him one of the most intelligent and thoroughly educated men of this community. His advantages have been manifold, and he has utilized them all.

The only child of his parents to reach maturity, our subject inherited their considerable property, improving and adorning it, adding other land to his possessions, as years went by, until at present Mr. McSparran is reckoned one of the most substantial men of the township. His farm land includes two valuable properties in Drumore township, and one in Providence township, located near Quarryville. The home farm is situated in Drumore township, near Fairfield, and here is found an ideal country home, surrounded as it is with fine buildings, and supplied with all of the modern appliances and conveniences which add not only to the comfort, but also to the health, of its occupants. Mr. McSparran also owns a valuable store property in Chestnut Level, and in addition to this he possesses personal property aggregating a large amount. He is one of the original stockholders, and is a director of the Union Trust Co., of Lancaster.

On Dec. 29, 1864, James G. McSparran was married to Miss Sarah M. Collins, of Colerain township, who was born on Nov. 13, 1843, a daughter ter of Thomas C. and Grace (McCullough) Collins, of Colerain township. To Mr. and Mrs. Collins were born seven children, as follows: James, a prominent farmer of Colerain township; Hugh M., also a well-known farmer of Colerain township; Mary, deceased; Grace, a resident of Drumore township; Cornelius, deceased; Thomas; and Sarah M., who is the wife of Mr. McSparran. She has, also, the following half brothers and half sisters: Ross C., a resident of Quarryville; Emma G., who is the wife of William Anderson, of Ohio; and Bertha I., who is a teacher in a college at Tarkio, Missouri.

The children who came to bless the marriage of Mr. McSparran and his estimable wife were: Isabella May, born Aug. 12, 1867, was married Jan. 23, 1901, to Charles A. McSparran, secretary and chief bookkeeper in Metcalf's Malleable Iron Co., in Erie, Pa.; Thomas C., born Nov. 13, 1869, died Sept. 27, 1875; Chella Grace, born Sept. 23, 1871, resides at home; John A., born Oct. 22, 1873, a very brilliant young man and fine scholar, is an A. B. graduate of Lafayette College, Pa.; and James O., the youngest, was born March 1, 1877, and resides in Philadelphia.

Perhaps no man in this section has kept up more with public interest and progress, outside of professional or political life, than has Mr. McSparran, for he is a man of wide and extended reading and is a reflective thinker. Although one of the most active members of the Democratic party, loyal to its candidates and principles, he is no office seeker, consenting only to serve in the capacity of school director, having ever had a deep interest in educational matters. His own children have been afforded every possible advantage. Mr. McSparran is a leading member of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church, in which he has long been an elder, and is the interested and efficient Sunday school superintendent. In 1890 Mr. McSparran took a trip through Palestine and the Holy Land, going about two-thirds around the world, fitting himself very thoroughly as a teacher in his beloved Sunday school, where he is most highly appreciated. The past year has been enjoyed by himself and wife in an extended trip through California, the journey homeward being heightened in pleasure by a visit to the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. In every relation of life Mr. McSparran has borne himself in a manly, upright, conscientious manner, and well deserves the high encomiums lavished upon him by his neighbors who have known him through so many years.

HENRY CLAY SHENCK, dealer in second-hand furniture and antiques, located opposite Fulton Opera House, on North Prince street, Lancaster, is a son of the venerable Henry S. Shenck, a sketch of whose life and ancestry appears elsewhere.

Henry Clay Shenck was born at Chickies (where his father then kept hotel), Oct. 24, 1843. He was educated in the public schools of Lancaster, and left the Boys' High School shortly before the graduation of his class to enter the army, enlisting April 20, 1861, in the Jackson Rifles of Lancaster, when the first call for 75,000 men for three months was made, in the war of the Rebellion. This company became a part of the 1st P. V. I. Having been honorably discharged July 27, 1861, by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment, young Shenck re-enlisted, Sept. 16, 1861, this time with the 79th P. V. I., for three years, but was discharged Sept. 3, 1862, at Nashville, by general orders. Next we find him veteranizing, March 24, 1864, for a term of three years, this time with the 9th Pa. Vet. Vol. Cal., to which his brother, A. F. Shenck, belonged, and in which he himself became a corporal. While a member of Company K, 79th Regiment, he was detached for a time as a musician, but after having been mustered out as a musician, in 1862, re-entered the service as a private. Between his second and third enlistments he served, during the Morgan raid, in the Ohio militia. From the time he became Corporal Shenck, in the 9th P. V. V. C., in March, 1864, to the close of the war, it is safe to say that he was engaged in fully one hundred battles and skirmishes, including the siege of Savannah, and other memorable military movements and engagements. The war ended, he was discharged at Lexington, N. C., July 18, 1865, and went to Ohio, following his trade, that of a wheelwright, in that State, until 1875, when he returned to the East, spending seven years in Westchester in the same business. Returning to Lancaster, he became turnkey at the station house, having been appointed to that position by the late D. P. Rosenmiller, then mayor of Lancaster.

In 1886 Mr. Shenck opened the pioneer business in second-hand furniture in the city, starting in the building on North Prince street, where he is still located, and which belonged to the estate of the late Hon. Anthony E. Roberts, ex-member of Congress from this District. Later he purchased the building, as well as the adjoining property on the south, which he occupies as a dwelling. The property used for business purposes has a frontage of seventy-two feet on Prince street, is four stories high, and has seventeen rooms, every one of which is filled with second-hand furniture, much of it antique and therefore very valuable. In fact, Mr. Shenck makes a specialty of antiques, shipping these goods to New York, Illinois, Georgia, California—all over the country. Indeed, so extensive had the business become at the date of this writing (1901) that its originator and owner was preparing plans for an addition of two more floors, and the erection of an electric elevator, his purpose being to conduct a great storage as well as furniture business.

On July 26, 1877, Mr. Shenck was married to Eliza J. Boozer, daughter of Harry Boozer, of Westchester, and to this union came three children, one of whom died in infancy. The survivors are Helen, who is at home; and Henry Sheldon, of the class of 1904, Boys' High School. Mr. Shenck is a member of Post No. 31, G. A. R., of Chester county. Politically he is a Republican, as are all the members of his family; but the only political preferments he ever received were his appointment as turnkey of the city station house, under Mayor Rosenmiller, and his appointment as alderman of the First ward, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Alderman Gundaker. This appointment was made by Gov. Hastings, and Mr. Shenck served for at least seven months. Although exercising not a little political influence in his district, as well as in city and county affairs generally, Mr. Shenck attends strictly to business, and no better evidence of this is needed than is found in the success which has attended him.

H. B. Schenck

JOHN JACKSON. Lancaster county is noted for its successful farmers, and among those who belong to that class is John Jackson, of Little Britain township, who was born Dec. 4, 1854, son of Robert and Eliza (Irwin) Jackson.

Robert Jackson was born in Ireland in 1828, and died in April, 1898. His wife, who was also born in 1828, died in 1893. They came to America while young, and were the parents of eight children, seven of whom grew to maturity: Annie Margaret, wife of Dr. J. S. McNutt, a physician of Philadelphia, Pa.; John; Andrew A., a farmer of Little Britain township (mentioned elsewhere); Robert, a farmer of Little Britain township; Joseph, a farmer of Little Britain township (mentioned elsewhere); Mary, wife of Fred Gregg, a farmer of Drumore township; and Ella, wife of George Pollock, a merchant of Philadelphia, Pa., the youngest of the family now living. Robert Jackson, the father of this family, was a Democrat in politics. He was a man who earned the esteem of his neighbors and labored hard to rear his family well.

John Jackson was reared upon the farm, and attended the district schools. While still a boy he commenced to work his way in life, and he now has one of the best cultivated farms in Lancaster county, consisting of 150 acres of excellent farming land, on which he has a comfortable residence and commodious barn—the pride of the surrounding country. His outbuildings are in excellent condition, and in addition to general farming Mr. Jackson is an extensive dealer in stock, being very successful in all his enterprises.

On Feb. 25, 1880, Mr. Jackson was married to Miss Alice M. Jenkins, a daughter of Isaac and Eliza Jenkins, of Little Britain township. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins had a family of five children: Rebecca, unmarried, of Oak Hill, Pa.; Evan S., deceased; Jacob E., of Fulton township; George P., of Oak Hill; and Alice M., Mrs. Jackson. Elijah Jenkins, Mrs. Jackson's grandfather, was one of the early settlers of Lancaster county.

The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson: Laura E., Annie L., Walter R., Mary R. and John E., all at home. They are a happy, contented home circle, undisturbed as yet by death. Mrs. Jackson and the family attend the Presbyterian Church of Little Britain. In politics Mr. Jackson, like his father before him, is a staunch Democrat. In all the relations of life he has proven himself a worthy, good man, a kind-hearted neighbor, and the respect in which he is held by those who know him is well deserved.

P. HARRY WOHLSEN, one of the well-known young men of Lancaster, was born in that city Oct. 29, 1875, and is a son of William Wohlsen, one of its well-known business men of high standing.

Peter Wohlsen, grandfather of P. Harry, was born in 1824 in Hanover, Germany, and grew to manhood on a farm in that country. He learned the trade of bricklayer, which he followed, and after coming to America, in 1884, he worked with his son William until 1896, since which time he has lived retired. He married Catherine Oelrich, also a native of Hanover, who died in 1895, at the age of seventy-one. She is buried in Zion Lutheran cemetery. Peter and Catherine Wohlsen had children as follows: William, father of P. Harry; Peter N., who is a contractor and builder of Lancaster; Herman F., also a contractor and builder of Lancaster; and Anna, wife of Henry Elsen, of Lancaster.

William Wohlsen was born Dec. 24, 1847, in Hanover, Germany, passed his youth on his father's farm, and when seventeen years of age began to learn the carpenter's trade, which he followed in Germany until his emigration to America, in 1870. On coming to this country he immediately settled in Lancaster, and for a year worked as a contractor and builder, in 1871 purchasing a small planing-mill. He has continued in that business to the present day, enlarging his mill from a one-horse-power concern to one of the largest and best patronized establishments in Lancaster county, giving employment to fifty hands. Meantime Mr. Wohlsen had continued to carry on contracting and building, but he gave up this branch of business in order to give the greater part of his time and attention to his mill interests. Of late he has had another demand on his time, the management of the affairs of the Union Trust Company, organized Oct. 17, 1901, and opened for business March 17, 1902. The company has an authorized capital of $300,000, and a paid capital of $150,000. Mr. Wohlsen is president of the concern, with D. F. Buchmiller as vice-president; S. Z. Evans, secretary and treasurer; and John M. Groff, solicitor.

In 1869 Mr. Wohlsen married Catherine Klenck, a native of Hanover, born in October, 1849, daughter of Henry Klenck, a farmer of Germany, who never came to this country. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wohlsen, Mary married Stewart Griffith, teller of the Union Trust Company; Anna married Henry Behren; P. Harry is mentioned below; William H. is connected with his father's mill; John O. is shipping clerk for his father; Catherine is attending school in Philadelphia; Clarence L. and B. Frank are living at home; Minnie and Emma died when young. In religious connection Mr. Wohlsen is united with the Lutheran Church, and has been a member of the vestry for the past twelve years. Fraternally he holds membership in the I. O. O. F., the Red Men and the Freemasons, in which latter he has reached the Knight Templar degree. His political sympathy is with the Republican party. He was appointed by the court to the board of park commissioners.

P. Harry Wohlsen was reared and educated in his native city, and at an early age commenced working with his father in the planing-mill, in which all his business career has been passed. When a young man he took a course at business college, attending until he was eighteen, at which time he was made superintendent in the mill, a position in which he was retained until January, 1901, when he went into business with his father, having ably demonstrated his ability and fitness.

On Sept. 26, 1901, Mr. Wohlsen was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Shaub, daughter of Samuel C. and Elizabeth Shaub, of Lancaster, where the wedding was celebrated. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, and socially is connected with the Masonic fraternity. His political support is given to the Republican party. As a well-balanced, industrious young man, full of energy and business "go," Mr. Wohlsen holds an enviable place among the younger men in the business circles of Lancaster county.

REV. SANFORD B. LANDIS, a zealous and popular minister of the Mennonite Church, is as yet a young man, in the full vigor of life's prime, having been born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, Aug. 1, 1867. His family is one of the oldest, best known and most esteemed of that bailiwick, and he himself is one of the most popular and respected members of his community. His grandfather, Benjamin Landis, married Mary Buckwalter.

Jacob Landis, father of Sanford B., was born in the township of Upper Leacock in 1840, and followed the vocation of a farmer until twelve years after his marriage, when he removed to Philadelphia and engaged in the business of a commission merchant. He was successful in this venture, and continued in the same line of trade until his death, which occurred Feb. 6, 1890. In 1859 he married Mary Bender, and to this union came three daughters and two sons: Nettie, Emma, Ida, Theodore and Sanford B. All the daughters are married, Nettie to Aaron D. Landis, Emma to Harry L. Sheaffer, and Ida to Abram Landis. Theodore, on reaching manhood, became associated with his father in business, and is still a commission merchant in Philadelphia.

Sanford B. Landis enjoyed in youth only the rather limited educational advantages afforded by the common schools, but he improved them to the utmost. Naturally fond of study, he devoted every spare hour to adding to the store of knowledge obtained at school, and throughout life he has been a constant, thoughtful and critical reader. He is also fond of cultivating the soil, in which vocation he has been exceedingly successful, owning a choice farm in the eastern part of East Lampeter township, which he has highly improved. In 1896 he was chosen and ordained to the Mennonite ministry, and he has since officiated in the Mellinger and Stumptown districts, where his devoted spirit, kindly disposition and broad charity have made him honored by the community, and best loved by those who know him best.

On Jan. 24, 1892, Sanford B. Landis married Miss Nora Landis, daughter of Adam and Lavinia Landis. Three children have been born to them, Edna May, John Ellis and Elma.

BENJAMIN OWEN BRACKBILL (deceased). A man of quiet manners yet forceful in his influence upon the community in which he lived until cut off by an untimely death, was Benjamin Owen Brackbill, a representative of a sterling old Lancaster county family, a life long farmer and a citizen who won the esteem and good will of his many acquaintances. He was born in Paradise township, Lancaster county, Sept. 19, 1848, son of Benjamin and Susan (Howry) Brackbill. He was reared in Paradise township, where members of his father's family still reside, attending the district schools, and in the serenity of agricultural life developing a character of strength and of many lovable traits. He was married in the Mennonite Church of Salisbury township, Nov. 5, 1878, to Miss Anna Martin, whose ancestors were old and prominent pioneers of the county. She was born in Salisbury township Aug. 14, 1853, daughter of Joseph and Mattie (Oberholtzer) Martin, natives, respectively, of Salisbury and Warwick townships, and the granddaughter of Abraham and ——— (Hurst) Martin, prominent farmers of Lancaster county, and of Samuel and Martha Oberholtzer, also farmers of Lancaster county. Abraham Martin, the paternal grandfather, was twice married, his second wife having been Anna Hostetter. Joseph Martin, the father of Mrs. Brackbill, was born in 1822, and was a life long farmer. He died in September, 1900, aged seventy-eight years, and was buried in the old Mennonite cemetery near Farmersville. His wife, Mattie, died in 1869, aged forty-one years, and was buried in Hershey's cemetery. They were devout members of the Mennonite Church. To Joseph and Mattie Martin were born the following children: Elizabeth, who married John Keener, a farmer near Strasburg; Magdalena, who married Elam Landis, and is now deceased; Anna, wife of Mr. Brackbill; Samuel, who resides on the old homestead in Salisbury; Abraham, deceased; Henry, deceased; Isaac, deceased; Joseph, deceased; and David, deceased. Joseph Martin, the father, was twice married, his second wife having been Catherine Oberholtzer, a sister of his first wife. To this second marriage was born one child, Susannah, who died young.

To Benjamin O. and Anna (Martin) Brackbill were born children as follows: Martin, a book-keeper at Lancaster; Edith S.; Abraham B., a student at Millersville State Normal School; Isaac D.; Mary E.; Joseph E.; and Moses A. Benjamin Owen Brackbill settled upon the farm of eighty acres in Salisbury township, which he continued to occupy until his death Sept. 26, 1896. He was buried in the Old Hershey Mennonite Church cemetery in Salisbury township. He was a consistent member of the Mennonite Church, to which faith his surviving family adheres. In politics he was a Republican. Aided by the worthy efforts of his devoted wife he made a success of the farm and was regarded as a prosperous and enterprising agriculturist. His widow survives, and is highly respected for her womanly qualities and her devotion to home and children.

JACOB L. BRISON, of Columbia, is of Irish ancestry. His grandfather, William Brison, came to this country in 1773, settling in Lancaster county. He was a farmer, hale and robust, and lived to the extraordinary age of ninety-four.

William Brison, father of Jacob L., a farmer, was born in Paradise township, as was also his wife, Martha Harsh, whose father, Jacob, was a veterinary surgeon. Mr. and Mrs. William Brison removed from Paradise to Bart township in 1848. There, in 1852, the wife died, at the age of thirty-two. He survived her forty-five years, passing away in 1897, in Strasburg, after passing his eighty-fifth milestone. Both rest in New Holland cemetery. Their seven children were named: Mary E., Jacob L., James, Martha E., Amanda, Louis and Winfield. Mary E. and James are deceased. Martha E. is the wife of Fred Stively, a farmer of Strasburg township. Amanda is unmarried, and lives in Lancaster. Louis is a successful physician of Paradise, and Winfield holds a responsible position in connection with the railroad repair department at Quarryville.

Jacob L. Brison grew up on his father's farm, and in 1876 began life's battle on his own account. Going to Columbia, he worked for three years for the Pennsylvania road as brakeman. He spent three and a half years in the position of fireman, and was then placed in charge of an engine. He is still in the company's service in that capacity, his experience, fidelity and capability standing him in good stead. He is a Republican in politics, and, through his natural intelligence and ready grasp of public questions, has won for himself the sincere esteem of all who know him.

Mr. Brison married, in October, 1869, Susan Huber, of Quarryville, who was born in Providence township March 21, 1850. Her parents were Henry S. and Fanny Barr Huber. Mr. Huber was a farmer, and died in 1887, at the age of sixty-five, his wife passing away in 1856, in her forty-first year. Mrs. Brison was their fourth child. After her mother's death her father married Anna Barr, by whom he was the father of one child, Mary E., who died in childhood. Of the brothers and sisters of Mrs. Brison, Christianna, died in infancy; Anna married Amos Groff, whose biography may be found elsewhere; Elam is a shoemaker in New Providence; Christian is a farmer; Fanny died before reaching womanhood.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Brison has been blessed with a daughter and two sons. Anna, the eldest child, married Willard P. Lindermuth, of York, a railway brakeman. Charles M. is foreman of the Grey Iron Works, and married Mary Spong. William H., the youngest son, lives at home.

JOHN GRADY. Conspicuous among the business men of Marietta, Pa., where he conducts a successful livery business and is identified with much of the commercial and public life of the town, is John Grady, a son of Adam and Catherine (Helwick) Grady, born Nov. 7, 1840.

Adam Grady was a native of Hessen Cassel, Germany, where he married Catherine Helwick, and in 1839 brought his family to America, settling in Marietta, where he lived a busy life as a laborer, always doing his full duty until his death, in 1888, at the age of eighty-one; his faithful wife passed away two months previously, at the age of seventy-nine. Both had been consistent members of the Reformed Church. They reared these children, only two of whom survive: Catherine; John, the subject of this biography; Harry C., who served in the Civil war, and is now in the tobacco business, in Marietta; Anna, who married Christian Troub; and Frederick.

John Grady was reared in Marietta, where he attended school and worked in the surrounding farming region until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he entered the army as a wagon master, being sent first to Harrisburg, later to Hagerstown, Md., and then with his train followed the Army of the Potomac, continuing to be thus engaged until 1863. At this date he enlisted as a private in Co. K, 199th P. V. I., and remained until the close of the war, faithfully serving his country, and was honorably discharged and mustered out, near Richmond, Virginia.

After the close of the war, Mr. Grady returned to his home and took up peaceful pursuits, finally becoming interested in tobacco culture, in which he was eminently successful, and he remained in this business until 1885, when he opened up a first-class livery establishment.

Mr. Grady was first married in 1866, in Marietta, to Miss Mary A. Hartman, and the children born to this union are: Charles A., who married Mary C. Heidler, is a representative of the Pennsylvania Construction Co.; and Tillie A. married Elmer E. Paules, manager of the livery business, in Marietta. The mother of these children was born in Marietta, a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Ockard) Hartman, of Lancaster county, and died in 1888. The second marriage of Mr. Grady was in Maytown, in 1892, to Mrs. Lucinda (Sherbahn) Shafner, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Reiff) Sherbahn, of Maytown, where the former was a brick manufacturer. Mr. Sherbahn died in 1865 at the age of fifty-five, while his wife survived until 1876, and both were interred in the Reformed cemetery in Maytown; the former had lived a consistent life as a member of the M. E. Church, and the latter of the Reformed Church. Their children were: Margaret; Lucinda; Horace, of Nebraska; Abraham, of Michigan; Benjamin, of Ohio; Albert, of Nebraska; Anna, who married Albert Collins, of Danville, Ill.; William, deceased; and John, of Nebraska, almost all of the sons being engaged in the brick business.

The first marriage of Mrs. Grady was to Jeremiah Shafner, a native of Maytown, where he carried on a tailoring business for a number of years, although he was retired from active life at the time of his death.

Mr. Grady has ever been identified with the interests of the village in which he resides. In politics he is an Independent, and efficiently served East Donegal township as supervisor for seven terms, and also one term as tax collector. His fraternal connections are with the O. U. A. M., the M. C., the I. O. R. M., the G. A. R. in all of which organizations he is justly popular, and he is a worthy member of the Reformed Church. In the community, Mr. Grady's standing is high, and he is generally recognized as one of the representative citizens of his town.

DR. DORATHEA JOHANNA LOUISA GRASNICK, widely known among the better people of Lancaster county, has done much to relieve physical suffering in her community. Her maiden name was Paschke, and her parents lived in Berlin, Germany, where she was born. Her grandparents were farmers. Anton Paschke, Dr. Grasnicks' father, has been a locomotive engineer on the Emperor's railway, running out of Berlin, for over forty years, and received a reward from the Emperor at the end of thirty-six years of continuous service on that line. Her only brother, August Paschke, is a machinist; and her only sister is the wife of Karl Schonert, a candelabra manufacturer, formerly of Berlin, but both now living in Lancaster.

Mrs. Grasnicks was educated in private schools in Berlin, and then attended the high school in that grand old city, finally taking special studies in medicine in a Berlin institute, and receiving her diploma. She married Hugo Grasnicks, who is a graduated electrician, and their two sons are: George F., a drug clerk, who married Anna Elizabeth Warner, and lives in Atlantic City; and Erich, a young man of nineteen, who is still pursuing his studies.

Mrs. Grasnicks arrived in America April 12, 1893, coming directly to Lancaster, where she has been practicing her profession with great success. Her success has been marvelous, and her services are much sought for among the ladies of this city, as her treatment of physical ailments to which she devotes her attention is successful far beyond the ordinary. No woman in the city is more respected, and her gentle manners have made her welcome everywhere; while in the sick room she inspires confidence and hope.

Mrs. Grasnicks is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, and is greatly esteemed by a large circle of clients among whom she numbers many of the most prominent ladies of the city.

GUY L. ALEXANDER, M. D., physician to the County Hospital and Insane Asylum at Lancaster, Pa., was born at White Rock, in Little Britain township, Lancaster Co., Pa., Oct. 13, 1871, son of Vincent K. and Harriet E. (Levis) Alexander, natives of Colerain township, Lancaster county, and Cecil county, Md., respectively.

Vincent K. Alexander was born in 1844, and in his early life was a farmer by occupation, but now resides in Lancaster. In politics he was a Republican, and always gave liberally of his time and money toward the support of party issues. He took an active part in local affairs, serving as county committeeman of the lower end of the county; deputy Internal Revenue collector, for four years; was school director in the lower part of the county. His wife was also born in 1844. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church. Three children were born to this union: May Curtis, Norris Day and Guy L. The paternal grandparents, John and Mary (King) Alexander, were of Irish birth, and came to this country in 1814 settling in Lancaster county, Pa. Here the father engaged in the charcoal iron business, and was the pioneer ironmaster of the county for twenty-one years, until his retirement.

Dr. Alexander was reared upon a farm, attending the schools of his district until he was seventeen years of age, when he went west to Omaha, where he was in the employ of the county surveyor for two years. About this time many were going to Portland, Oregon, with the belief that there was plenty of money to be made in that city, and Dr. Alexander was one of those who made the trip. Arriving in the city, he entered the employ of the Evening Telegram, a new paper, as assistant cashier, remaining in that capacity for three years. During all of this time Dr. Alexander had been attracted toward the medical profession, and at the expiration of his three years in Portland he returned to the State of his birth, and entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, being graduated from that institution in the class of 1898. Immediately after graduating Dr. Alexander began practice at the Buck, in Lancaster county, continuing there three years. In 1901 he located in Lancaster, where he opened an office, and accepted the appointment of physician to the County Hospital and Insane Asylum, in which capacity he is showing great ability and skill, treating the unfortunate ones under his care. Although young in his profession, Dr. Alexander is recognized as a physician of ability, and his general practice is steadily increasing. In politics, like his father, Dr. Alexander is a Republican, and is interested in local matters. His religious connections are with the Presbyterian Church, in which body, as in society generally, he is very popular.

JOHN S. BLANK, one of the leading and thoroughly representative citizens of Earl township, Lancaster county, was born in Leacock township July 27, 1844, a son of Jacob and Maria (Stoltzfus) Blank.

John S. Blank was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the public schools. As there was much work to be done on the farm, and the school house a long way from his home, the schooling which Mr. Blank received in his youthful days was limited. He is a good reader, and has been a close observer of the life around him, so that he has the most practical of all educations, that worked out in the great school of life, with experience for a task-master. When he was about twenty-nine years old Mr. Blank began farming operations for himself, locating on a farm in Earl township, which became his by right of ownership in 1871, and where he still keeps his home. It lies about a mile north of New Holland, contains eighty-six acres, and is regarded as one of the fine farms of the county. Here he has made many valuable improvements, and has thoroughly improved and modernized his residence. The appearance of the place indicates thrift and industry, an impression which is strengthened by closer acquaintance with the good people who make their home here. He is one of the successful farmers of the county, and owns two other places in Salisbury township.

Mr. Blank was married in Leacock township, Feb. 24, 1874, to Miss Fannie Renno, a daughter of Jacob and Fannie (Fisher) Renno, born in Leacock township, Aug. 27, 1855. Mr. and Mrs. Blank have the following children: (1) Jacob R., who was born July 14, 1877, married Katie Stoltzfus, and is a farmer in Upper Leacock township, living on a twelve-acre farm belonging to his father; (2) Mary R., born June 8, 1881, is the wife of Ezra Zook, and lives on the old homestead with her father, Mr. Zook farming the land; (3) Fannie R., born Nov. 2, 1884, is at home; (4) Daniel S. was born April 14, 1890. Mr. and Mrs. Blank are thoroughly upright and honorable people, and are highly respected by all who know them. They are members of the Amish Church, and their influence is pronounced for all good and true measures that look to the improvement of the community in which they live.

ISAAC B. GOOD. Many lines of trade are successfully pursued in the thriving little borough of Ephrata, Lancaster county, all of them requiring close attention and energetic methods. Among those who have succeeded admirably on account of his honest and energetic management is Isaac B. Good, who is a manufacturer of cigars and also the proprietor of a shirt manufacturing establishment.

Isaac B. Good was born Jan. 22, 1861, a son of Joseph and Louisa (Warlow) Good, of Pequea township. Joseph Good was a carpenter by trade, following that occupation all his life, and died in 1877, at the age of forty-three. In 1851 he married Louisa Warlow, who survives him, and resides in Philadelphia, and to them were born children as follows: Amos, deceased; Mary, deceased; Susanna, wife of John Hummell, of Philadelphia; Enos, of Farmersville; William, a cigarmaker, of Philadelphia; Isaac B.; George, who died in infancy; Charles, foreman in a cigar shop in Reading, Pa.; Henry, residing in Ephrata; and Albert, a patternmaker in the rolling mills of Reading.

Although Isaac B. Good has made so successful a manufacturer, he was reared on a farm, and remained there until the age of twenty-two, receiving his education in the common schools of his district. Until 1893 he worked as a cigarmaker, and then opened up business for himself in that line, proving his business ability and succeeding so well that in 1894 he entered into the manufacture of shirts. Though his means were very limited at first, by the practice of economy and diligence he has accumulated considerable property, owning three valuable houses and lots in Ephrata, in addition to other possessions.

Mr. Good was married July 14, 1884, to Miss Salinda Bowman, of Ephrata, a daughter of John L. Bowman, of Reading, Pa., and to this union one daughter has come, Katie F., born April 21, 1895. Mrs. Good was born Nov. 27, 1863. In politics Mr. Good is a Democrat, but he is not an office seeker, being occupied with his flourishing business. Possessing the respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens, Mr. Good may be justly regarded as one of the representative business men of Ephrata borough.

PETER Y. FOLTZ, a resident of Terre Hill, Lancaster county, is a worthy representative of an old and honored family in the community in which his industrious and useful life is passing. He was born near Center Church, in East Earl township, March 29, 1853, being a son of Squire Samuel B. and Mary (Yohn) Foltz, both of whom are now living in Terre Hill.

Peter Y. Foltz was reared on the family homestead in Terre Hill, and was afforded his education in the public schools. When he was twenty-one years of age he set himself to learning the carpenter trade in East Earl township under J. W. Horst, and for the ensuing thirteen years was engaged in this work, a part of this time being associated with Mr. Horst as a partner in the building business. The Terre Hill school house stands as a monument to his constructive ability and honest dealing. After thirteen years as a carpenter Mr. Foltz took up teaming in Terre Hill, and has since been engaged in that occupation, all the time employing two teams and part of the time three in his work. The teaming for the village of Terre Hill is substantially done by him, as he makes daily trips between that point and East Earl Station. He owns a farm of twenty-two acres, and devotes himself to its cultivation, also renting additional land, and keeping himself busy all the while. He has done some building for himself in Terre Hill, and owns a comfortable and attractive home in the village. Mr. Foltz is an earnest Republican and an intelligent and thoughtful voter.

Peter Y. Foltz was married, in 1875, to Miss Emma Coleman, a daughter of Abraham and Caroline (Clime) Coleman, and a native of Terre Hill. They have a family of five children: Abraham, at home; Harry, who married Miss Libbie Witmer, and is a resident of Terre Hill, where they have a family of two children, Jacob and James; William, who is a cigarmaker and lives at home; and Samuel and George, at home. Both Peter Y. Foltz and his wife are members of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ, and he is very active in Sunday-school work, being superintendent of the school, as well as class-leader and trustee in the church.

JOSEPH B. KERNER was born in Columbia July 2, 1858, son of John Andrew and Anna Barbara (Keidesch) Kerner, both of whom were for many years residents of Columbia. The father was born in Wittenberg, Germany, in 1813, son of George Kerner, a miller, and emigrated to America with his wife and family in the spring of 1847, settling at Columbia, where he remained until his death, Aug. 30, 1887, at the age of seventy-four years; his wife survived until June, 1895. They were devout and prominent members of the Lutheran Church. John A. Kerner had learned from his father the trade of miller. He followed baking for a time in Columbia, Lancaster county, later entering the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, with which he remained until his death. Joseph B. Kerner was reared in Columbia, receiving a fair common-school education. At the age of twelve years he began an apprenticeship to a confectioner, and followed that trade for ten years. This term of employment was broken by a three-months experience in the United States army, Mr. Kerner's taste leading him to a more active life. After his discharge, at the expiration of three months, he resumed candy making at Columbia for a time, and then began his service on the Pennsylvania railroad. For seventeen years he was employed as brakeman and flagman, in May, 1893, became an extra conductor, and on Sept. 4, 1899, was appointed regular conductor, still retaining that position. He met with an accident Nov. 29, 1899, through which he lost his right arm.

Mr. Kerner married at Columbia, in 1880, Miss Lizzie Brown, who was born in Rapho township Nov. 1, 1862, daughter of Harry and Sarah Ann (Hougendoubler) Brown, and granddaughter of Joseph Brown, of York county, and of Michael and Anna (Grann) Hougendoubler, of Lancaster county; her maternal grandfather was a tinner by trade. Harry Brown, her father, was a carpenter, and in 1867 removed from Newtown, Rapho township, to Columbia, following his trade until 1876, when he became a brakeman on the Pennsylvania road. He was killed on the road at Philadelphia, March 8, 1881, aged forty-four years; his widow still survives. To Harry and Sarah A. Brown were born the following named children: Anna, wife of Harry Baker, a railroad engineer at Harrisburg, Pa.; Simon, a freight conductor, who died Oct. 1, 1899; Lizzie; Isaiah, who died aged eight years; William S., who died in infancy; Harry, who died aged sixteen months; Effie, wife of Charles Miller, a railroad brakeman at Harrisburg; and Edward, deceased.

To Joseph B. and Lizzie (Brown) Kerner was born one child, Catherine A. The wife and mother died June 26, 1899, and the daughter died Nov. 1, 1901, aged nineteen years.

Mr. Kerner was again married, Dec. 25, 1902, to Miss Sara Harper Adams, who was born at New Germantown (Tohoyne township), Perry Co., Pa., Nov. 1, 1874, daughter of Robert C. and Sara (Yhost) Adams. The maternal grandparents, Christian and Fanny (Breneman) Longenecker, were residents of Lancaster county and prominent at an early day in the history of their community.

Martin L. Miller has been twice married, the first time, Sept. 5, 1871, in Lancaster, to Miss Lizzie Conley. WILLIAM OTTERBEIN FRAILEY, proprietor of the East End Pharmacy, at the corner of East King and Shippen streets, Lancaster, is a descendant of a Revolutionary family, whose history is closely connected with that of Pennsylvania.

Leonard Frailey, the first ancestor of the family in America, came from Switzerland in 1750, sailing from Rotterdam on the ship "Royal Union," and landing in Philadelphia. This vessel was commanded by Capt. Nicholson, and carried 253 male passengers. Leonard Frailey settled at Overbrook, on a farm which long remained in the hands of his descendants.

Peter Frailey, great-grandfather of William O., was in his time one of the most prominent men in Berks county, as shown by the records of the State. He was elected a member of the General Assembly in 1797, 1798, 1799, 1800, 1801 and 1802, and became register, recorder and clerk of the Orphans' Court, holding this office from 1802 to 1809. Jacob Frailey, grandfather of William O., was a soldier in the war of 1812. He owned farm lands at one time in Schuylkill county, in which rich deposits of coal were found after he had disposed of the property. He was married to Mary Troyer, and to this union were born ten sons and three daughters, those living at the present time being: Charles R., who is an artistic penman; Jacob; Andrew; and Anne, widow of John Stetter.

For three terms he was city assessor. He died April 9, 1890. He married Frances Steinecke, who was born in Saxony, Germany, and who came to this country with her parents when she was only six years old.

William O. Frailey, son of Henry L., was born in Lancaster, and was educated in the city schools. After he had completed the high school course he became an apprentice to the drug business with W. T. Wiley, with whom he remained four years, and then became a student of the College of Pharmacy, in Philadelphia, from which he was graduated with honor. Returning to Lancaster, the young pharmacist became head clerk for John R. Kauffman, with whom he remained three years, and then opened business for himself at his present location. Three years after he had bought the business he was able to buy the property, and presently enlarged and remodeled the building to fit the needs of a modern and progressive business. It is now one of the handsomest and most desirable drug stands in Lancaster. Not satisfied with the goods belonging to the drug trade, he began manufacturing specialties of his own, notable among them being a Wine of Iron, a syrup of Blood Root, Wild Cherry and Hoarhound, Toothache Drops, a Corn Cure, aromatic essence of Jamaica ginger, Circassian Cream, Cream of Beauty, Chilblain and Prickly Heat remedy, a Vermifuge Syrup, Beef Wine and Iron, Sarsaparilla Compound, a Vegetable Stomach Bitters, Liver Pills, Kidney Pills, Cream of Camphor, Worm Lozenges, Antibilious Powders, Benzoine and Glycerine Lotion, Pearl Dentifrice, Occidental Tooth Powder, Oriental Tooth Powder, a Hair Tonic and an almost endless list of toilet waters. These are of his own compounding, discovery and manufacture, bearing his name. Mr. Frailey also gives special attention to trusses, fitting them to the most difficult cases. His standing in the profession is well attested by the positions he has held and holds in the various organizations: He is secretary of the Lancaster Retail Druggists' Association, and was its delegate to the National Association of Retail Druggists held in Buffalo in 1901, and in Cleveland in 1902, and at the latter meeting he was made chairman of the committee on the form of organization of the National Association. He is also chairman of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania State Pharmaceutical Association, having been elected for two consecutive terms. Notwithstanding these labors as a part of his calling, Mr. Frailey is secretary of the Lancaster Home Mutual Fire Insurance Company, a position to which he succeeded at the death of his father, in 1890; is also secretary of the Washington National Loan & Building Association; and of the Lancaster Real Estate & Improvement Company. Blessed with a fine voice and a great love for music, Mr. Frailey has been associated from an early age with the leading musical organizations in the city, and was a director for a time of the choir of St. Mary's Catholic Church. At the present time he is singing in the choir of the Presbyterian Church, being a member of that church, and he has repeatedly contributed his musical talent for the benefit of worthy charities.

In 1884 Mr. Frailey was married to Miss Elizabeth Fredericke Strobel, daughter of Henry Strobel, a highly respected citizen of Lancaster, who was born in the Tyrol, Austria. Mrs. Frailey is an accomplished church organist, having filled that position at various times in St. Mary's, St. Joseph's and St. Anthony's Catholic churches, and being still engaged at the latter. Mr. and Mrs. Frailey have been blessed with five children, of whom the survivors are: Henry Edward, William O., Jr., and Frances Mary Elizabeth. Virginia Edna and Charles Joseph died in infancy. Mr. Frailey is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Royal Arcanum. Wherever found, he shows himself an earnest and enthusiastic worker, always ready to help others.

ELWOOD C. WARFEL, the genial and popular proprietor of the "Sorrel Horse Hotel," in East Earl township, was born at the "White Horse Hotel," in Salisbury township, this county, Dec. 24, 1856, son of Jacob D. Warfel, auctioneer of New Holland.

Mr. Warfel was eight years of age when the family removed to Intercourse, Lancaster county, where they had their home for four years. The next two years were spent in Leacock township, and a short time later Jacob D. Warfel moved to Salisbury township, still later returning to Leacock township. He spent one year in West Earl township, but again returned to Leacock township, and thence moved to Honeybrook, in Chester county; it was at that place that Elwood C. Warfel cast his first vote. His education had been obtained in the public schools, and at the age of twenty-three he married. Following this event Mr. Warfel engaged in dealing in stock, and later spent three years in the huckster business. In 1885 he first made a success of the hotel business, in Beartown, where he continued to manage an excellent inn for eight years, at the end of that time coming to Fetterville and purchasing the "Sorrel Horse Hotel." Since Mr. Warfel has taken the management of this hostelry it has become one of the best regulated houses of rest and entertainment in the county, its genial and courteous proprietor being noted for his ability to accommodate his guests and provide for their comfortable sojourn with him. When it is remembered how large a proportion of the representatives of many branches of business spend the greater part of their lives far from their own roofs, it can easily be seen how dependent they are, for the comforts of home, on the kindness and care of the hotel-keeper, and how appreciative they become of the efforts of those who look after their safety and interests. Therefore Mr. Warfel has a large and growing patronage.

Mr. Warfel does not confine his energies to looking after his hotel, as he is also engaged in the stock business, and has a tobacco farm. He takes a deep interest in all of the progressive movements in his locality, and may always be counted upon to further all enterprises for the benefit of the community.

Mr. Warfel was married, June 2, 1879, to Miss Rachel L. Brubaker, who was born Oct. 3, 1861, in Caernarvon township, Lancaster county, daughter of Perry and Sarah Brubaker, of Lancaster county. A family of six children has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Warfel: Jacob P., Edward F., James C., Vincent, Flossie L. and Lottie May.

Jacob P. Warfel, the eldest son of Elwood C. Warfel, was primarily educated in the public schools, then became a student in the Millersville Normal School, and still later attended the University of Pennsylvania. After one term of teaching in this county he accepted a position as tracer with the Gimbel Brothers house, in Philadelphia, and is a very bright and promising young man. The family is highly regarded in Lancaster county, and Elwood C. Warfel is one of its worthy representatives.

ISAAC B. ESBENSHADE, one of the older and very highly respected residents of Manheim township, Lancaster county, was born Sept. 15, 1848, on the old homestead north of Eden, in that county, where he was reared to farm life and educated in the public schools. At the age of twenty-five he married, and entered into business for himself. His marriage, which occurred Nov. 26, 1872, was to Miss Harriet Gross, a daughter of Martin Gross, who lived in East Hempfield township, and is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Esbenshade located at once on the farm adjoining the place where they are found to-day. It contained seventy-five acres, and was their home until 1900, when they removed to their present location, one mile north of Lancaster. By thrift and management, as well as industry and character, Mr. Esbenshade has become a wealthy land holder, owning three farms, one containing seventy acres, another seventy-five, and a third fifty-three acres. They adjoin, and are regarded as among the best farms in the county. He also owns a small property along the Oregon pike, in Manheim township. Mr. Esbenshade has improved all three places mentioned, and on the one containing seventy acres erected a fine barn in 1898. A progressive and energetic farmer, he keeps fully abreast of the times.

Mr. and Mrs. Esbenshade are the parents of three children: (1) Martin G., born Dec. 16, 1875, married Miss Kate Zeamer, and is the father of one child, Marie; he lives on the farm adjoining his father's home. (2) Bertha G., born Sept. 5, 1877, is at home. (3) M. Laura G., born April 15, 1881, is at home. Mrs. Esbenshade is a member of the Old Mennonite Church, and all the family are associated with the best people of the community. Mr. Esbenshade is a staunch Republican and takes a deep interest in party affairs.

J. MARTIN SLAYMAKER, M. D., a prominent and successful physician of Salisbury township, and one of its most highly esteemed and substantial men, was born in 1864, in Paradise township, Lancaster county, son of John M. and Elizabeth (Snyder) Slaymaker, natives of Williamstown, Paradise township.

The Slaymaker family is a very old and most highly respected one in Lancaster county, and was founded here by five brothers of the name, who came hither from their home in Strasburg, Germany, after the settlement of this section by William Penn. These brothers each bought 1000 acres of land and a part of this land was contained in the present site of the prosperous town of Williamstown, Paradise township, of which this family hold deed from William Penn.

John M. Slaymaker, the father of our subject, was born in Williamstown, and resided in Paradise township all his life, his death occurring in 1874, when he had reached the age of fifty-eight years. He was interred in the cemetery connected with the Leacock Presbyterian Church, in Paradise township. Mr. Slaymaker was a man of large means and much prominence in his township. As a farmer he was regarded as one of the best in his locality, and he owned three of the finest farms in the township, while as a man of influence in social and political life, he was known beyond his own neighborhood. For a long period he was an active politician, and was attached to the Know Nothing party, but never accepted any political office. His connection with the Underground railway and assistance given to escaping slaves, was never concealed, he being a man who boldly followed his convictions of right. In his earlier days he belonged to the Presbyterian Church, but at the time of his death belonged to the communion of the Episcopal Church. John M. Slaymaker was a son of Mathias and Rebecca (Ferree) Slaymaker, the former of whom was an extensive farmer in Paradise township. These parents died in their old home and lie at rest in the old Presbyterian cemetery in Paradise township.

John M. Slaymaker was married (first) about 1850, to Miss Emma H. Jack, and the daughter born to this union was Emma, who married Silas K. Eshleman, who is a retired farmer of Leaman Place, Pa. Mrs. Slaymaker died soon after the birth of her daughter. Mr. Slaymaker was married (second) in 1856, to Miss Elizabeth Snyder, born in Paradise township. The children born to this union were as follows: Elizabeth, who married Dr. Ira Gabbert, graduate of the Literary College of Missouri, and of Jefferson Medical College, and who is now located at Caldwell, Kans.; Sarah R., who married Charles F. Diller, of Lancaster, founder of the Peerless Emery Wheel Works; James, who died in young manhood from the effects of typhoid fever; Dr. John Martin, our subject; Anna M., who married George W. Himes, a prominent and wealthy resident of Shippensburg, director of one of the banks and connected with many of the industries of that city; Misses Martha J. and Mary M., at home; and Samuel F., who resides with his family in Philadelphia, where he is engaged in a general grocery business.

Dr. John Martin Slaymaker was reared on the old homestead at Williamstown, in Paradise township, until the age of fifteen years. He attended the district schools until that time, and then spent three years as a student at the Lehigh Literary Academy. Resolving to adopt the profession of medicine, at the age of seventeen he came to Lancaster and began his medical reading under Dr. Carpenter, who prepared him for entrance into Jefferson Medical College, from which he graduated when but twenty-two years of age. Dr. Slaymaker located at Gap, and almost immediately acquired a large practice which has continued to increase in volume and importance ever since. He was appointed P. R. R. Surgeon at Gap in 1888. He is one of the most popular as well as successful physicians in this part of the county, and is so fully occupied with the demands of the public, that he finds little leisure for anything else, although he is a large landowner, also, in the township. Dr. Slaymaker is surrounded with the comforts of life and resides in a handsome brick residence which he had built and fitted up in elegant style. Five years after his location in the village, Dr. Slaymaker was joined by his mother and sisters, they leaving the old farm in 1888. The family is one of social prominence in Gap and every member is held in the highest esteem.

Dr. Slaymaker is a stanch Republican, but his professional duties give him no time to accept public office although he is unusually well qualified to do so. He belongs to the county and State medical societies. With his mother and sisters, the Doctor belongs to the Episcopal Church, of which they are liberal supporters.

JACOB B. KELLER. Among the old and honored families who have made Lancaster county what it is, the name of Keller has considerable prominence. The founder of the family in the United States was Jacob Keller, who was born Nov. 14, 1706, and who came to America from Canton Basel, Switzerland, between 1725 and 1730. He purchased, May 7, 1730, a tract of land which now is included in Ephrata township, from John, Thomas and Richard Penn, sons of William Penn. He was a Seventh Day Baptist in religion. His death occurred March 10, 1794, and his remains were buried in Cloister cemetery. His wife, born Feb. 2, 1708, died May 24, 1787. At his death Jacob Keller left three sons, one of whom, Jacob, retained the homestead; Sebastian located in Elizabethtown; and the third in the State of Virginia.

Jacob Keller (2), was born on the old homestead at Springville, Cocalico township, at the head of Trout creek, Feb. 15, 1733, and died Aug. 20, 1804; his wife, Barbara (Landes) Keller, who was born July 3, 1736, died March 18, 1818, and both of them rest in the old homestead cemetery. Of their children, Jacob is mentioned below; Samuel, born May 24, 1763, was a miller at Keller's mill, in Cocalico township, and died Jan. 5, 1848, and John, born Aug. 30, 1766, located near Lititz, and died April 26, 1850.

Jacob Keller (3) was born on the old homestead, Sept. 14, 1761, and died April 12, 1830; his wife, Barbara (Huber) Keller, born in 1764, died in 1794. Her sister, who became his second wife, was born Nov. 13, 1766, and died Dec. 14, 1849. He was the father of five sons and three daughters: (1) John, born Aug. 6, 1784, died July 27, 1875. He married first a Miss Hershberger, and second a Miss Zentmyer, and his children were, Lydia, Salome, John H., Daniel, Jacob H., Leah, Michael, Samuel, Elizabeth, Henry and Mary. (2) Jacob, born Nov. 30, 1786, located at Springville, and died Aug. 14, 1841. He married Elizabeth Shirk, who was born Feb. 23, 1790, and died Feb. 6, 1872. (3) Samuel, born Aug. 7, 1791, died Feb. 27, 1855. His first wife Magdalena Erb, born June 11, 1794, died Oct. 5, 1825. (4) Mary married John Hershberger, and had six children, Lydia, Jacob, Sally, Henry, Susannah and Leah. (5) Barbara married David Erb, at Hammer Creek, and had nine children, Samuel, Reuben, Ephraim, Israel, David, John, Levi, Elizabeth and Sallie. (6) Frederick, born Jan. 5, 1794, married Catharine Gross, had thirteen children, and died March 17, 1879. (7) Susanna, married Joseph Shirk and had ten children, Christiana, Leah, Maria, Sallie, Fianna, Annamahala, Lizzie, Jacob, Joseph and Reuben. (8) George is mentioned below.

George Keller, the father of the immediate subject of this biography, was born Oct. 22, 1799, and died Jan. 15, 1849, aged forty-nine years, two months and twenty-six days. He was twice married; his first wife belonged to the Long family of Landis Valley; his second wife was Christina Brubaker, born Nov. 6, 1802, who died April 17, 1842; both are buried in the old cemetery at Springville. Of the children in the family of George Keller, the eldest son George, born in December, 1823, died at the age of sixty-two, leaving a large family; Jacob B.; Leah, born in 1827, married Jacob S. Wissler, moved to Canton, Ohio, and died, the mother of seven children, Ezra S., Jacob S., Isaac, and four daughters; Susanna married David Mohler, and had ten children; Elias B., born in 1832, married Rebecca Hershberger, and had eleven children; Isaac, born in 1835, became a German Baptist minister, married a Miss Rudy, and had eight children; and Annie, born in 1839, married Aaron Weidman, and lives at Reading, Pennsylvania.

Jacob B. Keller, a worthy representative of this old and established family, was born Oct. 31, 1825, and was the second son of George Keller. Reared on the farm, one of a large family, he early became accustomed to the duties of an agricultural life, and pursued it for a number of years. At school he was an apt pupil, and finished the common school course with credit, and then took up the profession of teaching, but in 1860 he engaged in the milling business, six years later removing to Ephrata where he became a contractor and builder, and also dealt extensively in real estate. A man of more than average intelligence, Mr. Keller has taken a great interest in his family ancestry, of which he has reason to be justly proud, for few, like him, can look back over former generations and find the record so universally in favor of sobriety, uprightness and good citizenship.

On Nov. 6, 1846, Mr. Keller was married to Miss Rebecca Stupp, a daughter of John and Sarah (Eckert) Stupp, of Berks county, Pa., and to this union were born four children: Emma, born Aug. 11, 1847, who married William K. Seltzer, a prominent attorney and justice of the peace, in Ephrata township; Alice, born Sept. 7, 1862, married B. F. Bair, a stock-dealer, in Philadelphia; while Frank and James died in infancy.

Ever since the administration of President Lincoln, Mr. Keller has been an active and ardent Republican, and he exerts a wide influence for his party in his locality. For many years he has been a valued and consistent member of the German Baptist Church, where he is one of the most cheerful supporters of all charitable and benevolent enterprises. Although now living a retired life in his comfortable home in the borough of Ephrata, Mr. Keller has not permitted his intellectual faculties to become rusty, as during the year 1898 he compiled and arranged a neat genealogy of the Keller family in America, which he notes was prepared for his personal satisfaction, but which must have required much study and research, and it is of inestimable value to all who are permitted to bear the honorable name.

SOLOMON H. GOOD, a successful farmer and butcher of Pequea township, and the present auditor of that township, is actively identified with various interests in his section of the county, and is well and favorably known.

Jacob K. Good, his father, was born in Lancaster county about 1815, and followed farming, distilling and milling until his death, which occurred in 1897. He was a Republican in politics, and held the offices of school director and supervisor for some time. He married Miss Mary Havistick, daughter of Jacob Havistick, of Pequea township, and they had a family of eleven children: Joseph, now deceased; Susan, wife of Michael Hess, of Manor township; John, deceased; Elizabeth and Mary, who did not marry; Jacob, of Millersville; Catherine and Barbara, both unmarried; Sarah, widow of William Beshtold; Abraham, deceased; and Solomon H.

Solomon H. Good, whose name introduces this sketch, was born in Pequea township Jan. 21, 1861, and remained at home until he was about twenty-seven years of age. He was educated in the common schools of the county. In 1884 he began the butcher business for himself, and has continued same ever since, together with farming, meeting with well deserved success in both branches. He has recently bought the Amos S. Kreider farm, of seventy-five acres, west of his home place. Like his father, Mr. Good is a Republican in politics, and he now holds the office of auditor, discharging the duties of that office with characteristic fidelity and a regard for the interests of his community.

On Dec. 25, 1887, Mr. Good wedded Miss Elizabeth K. Good, daughter of Benjamin and Susan (Kling) Good, both of Pequea township, and they have one son, Benjamin Harrison.

H. C. HUBER, a prominent farmer of Providence township, was born Dec. 19, 1863, son of Henry and Susan (Charles) Huber, who were natives of Martic township, Lancaster county.

Henry Huber, father of H. C., was born in 1833, and died in 1894. He followed farming all his life in Martic township, where, in 1856, he married Susan Charles. The family is an old one in Martic township, where Grandfather Abraham Huber was a well-known farmer in his day. Their political connection is with the Republican party. In religion they are consistent supporters of the Menonite Church.

On Sept. 17, 1885, H. C. Huber was united in marriage with Miss Mary Eshleman, daughter of Eli and Susan (Mack) Eshleman, who had the following children born to them: Martin Mack, of Martinsville; Daniel, of Drumore; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph G. Huber; Eli, of Providence township; and Lydia, wife of Martin Eshleman, of Pequea township. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Huber, namely: Annie, Anna, and Mary and Harry, twins.

Mr. Huber was reared on the farm, and acquired his education in the public schools of his district. His interest in the schools has caused him to consent to serve as one of the directors in Providence township. He is one of the most highly respected citizens of his locality, and is widely known as a man of good judgment and reliability.

ELMER T. PRIZER, M. D., of Lancaster, has by his skill and magnetic personality, as well as careful attention to his profession, proved himself an ideal and successful follower of Æsculapius.

The Prizers came to America from Germany some time between the years 1720 and 1740, settling in Montgomery county, Pa. Benjamin Prizer, one of the Doctor's ancestors, engaged in the manufacture of flour near Phoenixville, Chester Co., Pa. There John Prizer, father of Dr. Elmer T., was born. He married Harriet Towers, daughter of Michael Towers, a contractor of considerable note, of Spring City, Chester county, and four children were born to this union, one of whom died in infancy. Those living are Della, wife of John Deisher, a furniture dealer in Phoenixville, Pa.; Lura, wife of Henry Wells, in the Pennsylvania railroad service at Phoenixville; and Elmer Towers.

Elmer T. Prizer was born Nov. 24, 1867, near Phoenixville, Chester Co., Pa., and received his education in part at Kimber's Academy, at Kimberton, same county, and in part at the State Normal School in West Chester, afterward taking a course in medicine at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, graduating therefrom in 1896. Immediately after that event the Doctor came to Lancaster, and, opening an office at No. 25 South Prince street (formerly occupied by Judge Hayes), has since enjoyed a lucrative practice, having among his patients many of the representative families of the city and vicinity.

In December, 1896, Dr. Prizer was married to Miss Jessie Butler, daughter of James Butler, a retired iron merchant of near West Chester, and niece of the distinguished Judge Butler. One child, Rachel, has graced this union. Mrs. Prizer is descended from one of the oldest and most prominent Quaker families of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Prizer is identified with the Presbyterian Church. Socially he is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons; of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; of the Knights of Malta; of the Knights of the Mystic Circle; and of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

JACOB L. GARBER. Not only is agriculture the oldest occupation in the world, but it is also the most important, for upon the failure or success of the crops of a nation depends its commercial prestige. Therefore, the calling of a farmer is one of importance and responsibility, and the progressive agriculturist of to-day is adopting every means to increase the value of his acres, and in return reaps large harvests. The latest improved machinery is used; new methods of drainage are adopted, and a regular system of alternation of crops is pursued, so that each acre may bring forth abundantly. Among the farmers of this class is Jacob L. Garber, of East Hempfield township, Lancaster county, who was born June 13, 1857, in East Donegal township, son of Christian S. and Annie (Lindermentt) Garber, who died in 1882 and 1876, respectively.

Christian S. Garber was a native of West Donegal township, but upon his marriage removed to East Donegal township, where he spent the greater portion of his remaining years, engaged in farming. After a useful and successful life, he died, in the respect and esteem of the entire community. To himself and good wife were born seven children:

E. J. Prizer.

Mary Ann, deceased, wife of Amos Hustand; Jacob L., of East Hempfield township; John L., residing in West Donegal township; Eli L., residing in Lititz, engaged in the creamery business; Barbara, wife of John Hess, of Manheim township; Katie, wife of Enos Hess, of Roseville, Lancaster county; and Christian, deceased. The religious connection of the parents was with the Old Mennonite Church.

Jacob L. Garber was reared upon the farm, and received his education in the public schools of his district. When he reached the age of twenty-three the young man resolved to see something of the outside world, and made a trip West, where he remained six months, and upon his return to Lancaster county he married and located upon the farm he now owns, renting it for two years. At the expiration of this time he removed to Penn township and purchased a farm of eighty-six acres, remaining there for seven years. In 1890, the farm he had rented previously coming on the market, he purchased it, and has since carried on general farming, developing the property, which contains ninety-seven acres, until it is one of the finest farms in the county.

In 1881 Mr. Garber married Lizzie Buckwalter, a daughter of Joseph Buckwalter, and eight children have been born to them: Harry B., born July 28, 1882; Annie May, Feb. 5, 1883; Alvin B., Oct. 6, 1885; Joseph B., Feb. 23, 1887; Lizzie, June 27, 1895; Ella and Jacob, twins, May 18, 1897; and Christian, May 7, 1899.

Both Jacob L. Garber and his wife are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church. They are very worthy people, whose popularity in East Hempfield is well deserved, as they possess many admirable qualities, which have made for them hosts of friends.

CHRISTIAN B. MILLER is a grandson of Christian Miller, who was born and reared in Lancaster county, owned a 190-acre farm in Conestoga township, and followed farming all his life. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Elizabeth Kendig, of Strasburg township, and they became the parents of seven children: Abraham, father of Christian B.; Christian K., of Conestoga township; Susan, wife of John Frantz, of Manor; Amos, of Conestoga; Abner, of Conestoga; Martha, wife of John Nestleroth, of Manor; and John, of Conestoga.

Abraham Miller, father of Christian B., was born in Conestoga township, and lived there until he was about twenty-two or twenty-three years old, when he married Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob Buckwalter, of Manor township. Removing to near Millersville, in Manor township, he there engaged in farming until he was sixty years old, when he entered the mercantile business, following same for eight years, after which he retired from active life. Both he and his wife were members of the Old Mennonite Church. He was always a Republican, held the office of school director for a number of years, and was for a long time auditor of the township. Mr. and Mrs. Miller had the following children: Amos B., Jacob B. and Abram B., all of Manor township; Christian B., whose name opens this sketch; and Martha, wife of Abram F. Witmer, of Manor township.

Christian B. Miller was born June 3, 1847, in Manor township, and when he was two years old moved to Conestoga township to live with his grandparents, remaining with them until he was fourteen, when he returned to his father's home in Manor township. He received his education in the public schools. Mr. Miller resided with his parents until he was twenty-one years old, when, on Nov. 10, 1868, he married Miss Lizzie, daughter of Andrew Zercher, of Conestoga township. Soon afterward he began farming for himself, living four years on his uncle's farm in Conestoga, after which he moved to the farm where he has since resided, and which at that time belonged to his father-in-law, Andrew Zercher. He purchased it in 1876, and has since given his entire time to its management. The farm consists of 109 acres, near the center of Conestoga township, one of the best in the neighborhood, and he has recently built one of the finest barns in the vicinity. He is recognized by all as one of the prosperous men of his community.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are the parents of eight children: Myra J., wife of Benjamin F. Kendig, of Manor township; Anna M.; Jacob Z., who was married Jan. 16, 1902, to Ella Wissler, of Manor township, and lives at home; Landis L., who was married Nov. 28, 1901, to Katie Frey, of Manor township, and lives at Creswell; Lizzie B., who was married Nov. 20, 1902, to Ezra E. Wolgemuth, of Mt. Joy township, and resides there; Harry J., who was drowned in a spring on the place, when two years old; and Mary J. and Cora E., at home. Mr. and Mrs. Miller, and three of their children, are members of the River Brethren Church. Mr. Miller was ordained a minister in that faith in 1889, by Rev. Jacob N. Graybill, and since his ordination has officiated at the Pequea Church.

JOHN FLICKINGER is proprietor of the Flickinger Mills, built by John Miller in 1801, and located on Mill creek, in Leacock township, twelve miles from Lancaster. They are operated at the present time by both steam and water power.

Mr. Flickinger was born Sept. 6, 1861, on the place where he is found to-day, son of William and Caroline (Moore) Flickinger, who were married in August, 1852. The father was born in East Cocalico township, this county, and the mother in Berks county. William Flickinger was engaged in the milling business from his early boyhood, and in 1856 located at the Flickinger Mills, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was born Feb. 2, 1828, and died Feb. 26, 1899. His wife was born Nov. 24, 1831, and died April 8, 1885. Both were buried in Roland's cemetery. They were members of the Reformed Church. Mr. and Mrs. Flickinger had the following family: (1) Richard, who died at the age of twenty-four years, was a miller by vocation, and operated his father's mill No. 2, formerly known as Eckert's mill, in Leacock township; he had conducted the mill but one year at the time of his death. (2) Katie married J. D. Bair, formerly a merchant of Leacock township, now a resident of New Holland. (3) John is mentioned below.

To this union have been born W. Gordon and J. Harold. Mr. Evans was a blacksmith, was married in Lancaster county, and settled at Honeybrook, where he died in 1892, at the age of sixty-five; his remains rest in the Honeybrook cemetery. DAVID F. ESHLEMAN, a leading and representative farmer of Manor township, was born in the village of Creswell, that township, April 11, 1860, son of Amos and Mary (Frey) Eshleman. He attended the public schools near his boyhood home, and as his early life was passed upon a farm he earlier became familiar with all the duties which fall to the lot of the agriculturist, and is to-day regarded as one of the most thorough and skillful farmers of his community. At the age of twenty-two years he started out in life for himself as a farmer, and in 1897 purchased his father-in-law's farm, comprising fifty-four acres of land under a high state of cultivation, and well improved. Here Mr. Eshleman is now successfully engaged in general farming. He is a member of the Church of God, and is held in high regard by all who know him.

On Aug. 30, 1885, Mr. Eshleman was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie Shank, and to them have been born six children, namely: Cora, Ada, Harvey, Ira, Irene and Lillie.

Isaac Shank, father of Mrs. Eshleman, was born on a farm in Lancaster county Jan. 16, 1830, and was two years old when with his parents he removed to the farm near Central Manor, in Manor township, where he now resides, having made his home there ever since. With the exception of four years, immediately after his marriage, he followed farming until he sold his place, in 1897, to his son-in-law, Mr. Eshleman. He is one of the good, substantial citizens of his community, and is highly respected and esteemed. In 1860 he married Miss Sarah Frey, who was born Dec. 5, 1839, daughter of Rudolph Frey, and they have become the parents of three children: Sarah, now the wife of John Green, of Manor township; Barbara, wife of Christ Kline, of the same township; and Lizzie, wife of David F. Eshleman, whose name introduces this sketch.

JOHN L. LEAMAN, who is spending the closing years of an exceedingly industrious and earnest life at his home in Leacock township, Lancaster county, where for many years he carried on farming in an enlightened and progressive manner, was born in that township March 28, 1841, a son of John and Mary (Landis) Leaman, of East Lampeter township.

John Leaman, the father, who was a farmer, and died on his farm in 1882, had lived retired during the last thirteen years of the seventy-two which had been given him. He was a man of considerable importance, and was a director of the Lancaster County Bank at the time of his death. His wife, who died in 1848, at the early age of thirty-six years, was buried in Mellinger's Cemetery. They were both members of the Mennonite Church. Born to this union were: (1) A son who died in infancy; (2) Elias, who died in 1892; (3) Esther, deceased wife of Emanuel Denlinger; (5) Tobias, a retired farmer of Leacock township; and (4) John L., whose name appears above. The father was married a second time, Barbara Landis becoming his wife, and the mother of one child, who died in infancy. Benjamin Leaman, the grandfather of John L., was a native of East Lampeter township, and was a farmer in his early life. John Landis, the maternal grandfather of John L. Leaman, was a native of Lancaster county.

John L. Leaman has been twice married, the first time on Dec. 5, 1861, when Anna Hershey became his wife. To this union came one child, Annetta, who died in infancy. Mrs. Anna Leaman, who died in October, 1863, was the daughter of Abraham and Barbara (Eby) Hershey, both of Lancaster county. The second marriage of John L. Leaman occurred Jan. 10, 1873, when he was united in matrimony with Mary Landis. To this union were born: (1) Violetta married Ezra Zimmerman, a farmer in Leacock township, and became the mother of five children—John, who died in early childhood; Willis, Enos, Maurice and Edna, at home. (2) Hershey died in infancy. (3) Landis died in infancy. (4) Celia is the wife of Clayton Groff, and they have three children, Irwin L., Bethel M., and Lester L. (5) Freeland died at the age of six years. Mrs. Mary (Landis) Leaman was born in West Lampeter township Feb. 2, 1845, daughter of David and Barbara (Groff) Landis, of East Lampeter township. Her father, who was a miller, died in 1884, at the age of sixty-eight years. The mother passed away in 1890, at the age of seventy-two years, and was buried in Mellinger's cemetery by the side of her husband. Both were members of the Mennonite Church. They were the parents of the following family: David, a retired farmer of East Lampeter township; Benjamin, who died at the age of twenty-three years; Lavina, the wife of Adam Landis, a retired farmer; Mary wife of our subject; Anna, who married Harry L. Groff, of Strasburg; and Frances, who died when thirteen years old.

John L. Leaman remained with his parents until his marriage, when he began the cultivation of the farm on which he is found at the present writing. In 1876 he put up new buildings, and the place has been greatly improved under his intelligent and industrious tillage. In 1877 he gave up active farming, and is now living retired, sustained by that competence which represents thrift, economy and industry to a marked degree. For six years Mr. Leaman has been town auditor, and he is regarded as one of the leading men of the community. In religion he is a member of the Mennonite Church, and in politics he is a Republican.

Aaron Herr lived with his parents on a farm until his marriage, when he rented a farm in Manor township for a year, and then came to West Hempfield township and purchased his present place of eighty-three acres, on which he has ever since lived, and has so well succeeded in a pecuniary sense that he is about to retire from the activities of business and pass the remainder of his days in quiet leisure. He raises ten acres of tobacco annually, and has been in the dairy business since 1882. Mr. Herr is a Republican in politics, and has been a school director for the past two terms of three years each. Fraternally he is a member of Susquehanna lodge, I. O. O. FRANK MICHAEL, a prominent and successful business citizen of Terrehill, this county, was born at Rothsville, in Warwick township, Oct. 27, 1847, son of Cyrus and Catherine (Wagner) Michael, the former of whom now is a resident of Disston, Lancaster county. He is aged eighty-two years, having been born Oct. 28, 1820.

Cyrus Michael is a son of John and Sally (Foltz) Michael, whose parents came to America from Germany. The father established a shoe shop some two miles north of Rothsville, and there spent the greater part of his life. His death occurred at Farmersville, both he and wife dying there, at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Mary Ann Dillman, he at the age of seventy-two years, she when seventy-six. Both had been consistent and most worthy members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: Charles (deceased) was a farmer; John (deceased) was a farmer in Franklin county; Cyrus is mentioned below; Sallie married Michael Kauffman; Mary Ann married Isaac Dillman.

Cyrus Michael was for many years one of the most extensive farmers of Warwick township, and became a substantial citizen, owning considerable property. His energy took him into many lines—huckstering, the management for some years of a gristmill, and for three years hotel-keeping. In early life he was a member of the Democratic party, but voted for President Lincoln, and ever afterward supported the Republican party. His wife died March 27, 1898, at the age of seventy-two years. They reared a family of six children: Frank;

Charles, unmarried; Salinda, widow of George Shreiner; Rebecca, wife of David Good, of Disston; Priscilla, wife of David Roder, of Terrehill; and Aquilla, who died at the age of four years. The beloved mother of this family was a devout and pious member of the Dunkard Church.

Frank Michael was reared at Rothsville, and obtained his education in the common schools. At the age of twenty-four years he began his independent business career, entering a store in Rothsville in the capacity of clerk, and remaining in that connection for seven years. He was then for a time engaged in the sewing machine business, and later learned the carpenter's trade, in time accepting a position in the box factory of Sol Lessley, for some six years.

In 1885 Mr. Michael embarked in the manufacture of boxes himself, in Terrehill, and has been very successful in that line, now employing six men, and turning out a product that compares favorably with any on the market. At times, when rushed, Mr. Michael employs as many as twenty-two helpers. His establishment is known as the Old Maple Cigar Box Factory. His upright methods of doing business have gained for him the confidence of the trade, and he has been an important factor in the industrial life of Terrehill.

Mr. Michael was married in 1872 to Miss Susan Wechter, a daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Lutz) Wechter. One daughter has been born to this union, Carrie K., who is the wife of Amos B. Eshleman, a cigar manufacturer of Terrehill, and has one daughter, Celesta. They are members of the Trinity United Evangelical Church. All the family are counted among the most highly respected residents of this locality.

CHRISTIAN GUNZENHAUSER, a prominent business man and respected citizen of Lancaster, proprietor of the large bakery at No. 255 West King street, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, July 23, 1857, son of Leonard and Anna (Kauffman) Gunzenhauser.

Leonard Gunzenhauser, the father, was born in Germany, and died there, as did also his wife, the former when Christian was but one year old, and the latter when he was but twelve. They were the parents of six children, five of whom came to America. By trade the father was a miller, and he operated a mill of his own.

After the death of his father Christian Gunzenhauser lived with his mother until orphaned by her death. He lived with his sister two years, and was only fourteen when he came to work out his own future in America. Knowing that many of his countrymen were in Lancaster, he went thither, and for two years did such work as he was able to find, finally entering the bakery of Lawrence Goos, where he continued for two years, thoroughly learning the trade. For several years succeeding he worked as a journeyman for George Goebel, and then went to Philadelphia, working for ten years with different firms, thus learning all methods and all kinds of baking and mixing. He first started in business for himself in Lock Haven, Pa., where he continued for two years, and then went back to Lancaster, where he bought the Goebel bakery, located at No. 231 West King street. He successfully conducted same until 1900, when he purchased his present building, and has continued to prosper. He improved the property and has it now in perfect condition, taking a pride in its clean and sanitary arrangement, by which he can offer to his patrons a high class of healthful and most attractive line of breads, pastries and all kinds of cakes. His sale of bread alone reaches over 25,000 loaves a week. Mr. Gunzenhauser has twelve delivery wagons employed in distributing his goods in various parts of the city and county, and employs some fifty assistants. In addition to his Lancaster store, which is a three-story brick building, he has built a three-story brick building 48x72 feet in dimensions, which he has equipped with the latest improved machinery, in fact, it is considered one of the finest bakeries in the State. Mr. Gunzenhauser has a number of branch stores throughout the county. While no kind of bakery production is neglected in this establishment, a specialty is made of wedding cakes. His equipment and accommodations would do credit to any city.

Mr. Gunzenhauser is connected with various German organizations in Lancaster, and also belongs to the A. & O. K. of M., White Cross Commandery, No. 2; B. P. O. E., No. 134. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics he is independent.

In 1882 Mr. Gunzenhauser married Katie L. Schaefer, who was born in Lancaster, daughter of Christian Schaefer, a well-known notion merchant of West King and Water streets, Lancaster, and a prominent citizen. Four children have been born to this union: Harry (who died at the age of six years), Margaret, Frank and Charles. The successful career of Mr. Gunzenhauser shows the result of industry, energy and economy. He began life with small means, and has won his own way to the confidence of his business associates and the esteem of his community, and is justly regarded as a representative business man of his adopted city.

PETER M. STERN, a general farmer of Mt. Joy township, was born on the old homestead Sept. 19, 1856, son of Christian and Catharine (Moyer) Stern, the former of whom still resides near the old home. This property has been in the possession of this family ever since its purchase from the Penns. these broad acres having become the property of the great-great-grandfather of Peter M. Stern Feb. 3, 1759, and some one of his descendants has held the farm ever since, each generation improving it and making it more and more valuable.

The first of Mr. Stern's ancestors to come to this country was his great-great-grandfather, Johan (or Hannes) Stern, who emigrated hither from Switzerland in 1736. He and his wife, Barbara, had a family of four sons and one daughter, namely: Jacob was the great-grandfather of Peter M. Peter, who moved to Bedford county, Pa., married a Miss Moyer. Joy, Lancaster county; Christian is mentioned farther on; Catharine, widow of Jeremiah Martin, lives at Elizabethtown, this county. Mrs. Catharine Stern was a daughter of Samuel Lehn, who was born Oct. 3, 1771, in the vicinity of Ephrata, this county, and there spent most of his life, dying Jan. 20, 1854. He married Magdelene Shreiner, who died March 4, 1847, aged seventy-five years, seven months, five days.

Christian Stern, father of Peter M., was born March 18, 1828, and still survives, living near the old home, with his second wife; he has been retired from active labor for a long period. He still clings to the speech of his ancestors, never having cared to learn the English tongue. Mr. Stern is a consistent member of the Mennonite Church. His first wife, Catharine Moyer, was born Jan. 31, 1829, in Mt. Joy township, and died Oct. 22, 1878; she was buried in a private burying ground on the old farm. Children as follows were born to this union: Martin, born Nov. 11, 1853, died the same day. Elizabeth, born Dec. 22, 1854, married John Bomberger, a farmer near Lititz. Peter M., born Sept. 19, 1856, is mentioned below. Christian M., born Sept. 6, 1858, lives on the old farm which has been in the family since 1795; he married first Maggie K. Stern, and for his second wife Mary Westenberger.

John Moyer, maternal grandfather of Peter M. Stern, was born Aug. 6, 1790, and died May 2, 1858. His wife, Elizabeth (Meashey), born Feb. 4, 1798, died in May, 1859. They had children as follows: Peter married Betsey Shearer, and both died in Stern was married, in Manheim, Pa., to Miss Anna Mary Groff, and two children have come to this union, Samuel G., who was married Oct. 14, 1902, to Anna Mary Johnson, and Stella M. Until his marriage Peter M. Stern resided with his parents, and then removed to his present farm, which he has operated ever since most successfully. He is generally regarded as one of the most progressive farmers of his neighborhood, and the air of thrift and prosperity which surrounds his place, does much to prove the wisdom of his methods. In politics Mr. Stern is identified with the Prohibition party. In religion he belongs to and generously supports the United Evangelical Church. Mr. Stern justly enjoys the esteem and respect of his neighbors, and is known as a man of honest speech and upright conduct.

Mrs. Stern was born in Mt. Joy township, daughter of Samuel S. and Elizabeth (Newgard) Groff, the former of whom was a native of Ohio, and the latter of Rapho township, Lancaster Co., Pa. Mr. Groff was brought to Lancaster county by his mother when he was but three years old, and all the rest of his life was spent here. He became a skilled carpenter and an excellent farmer. He died in Mt. Joy township, May 8, 1897, at the age of sixty-six years, and Mrs. Groff, who was born in 1838, resides in Milton Grove. The only child born to this marriage was Anna Mary, who became Mrs. Stern.

Frantz Groff, Mrs. Stern's paternal great-great-grandfather, emigrated to America from Switzerland about the year 1736. He died at an advanced age, and is buried near Mastersonville, Lancaster county. His son, Samuel Groff, married Barbara Wolgamuth. He is interred in a private burying ground near Rheems, Lancaster county. Samuel Groff, son of Samuel, and grandfather of Mrs. Stern, was born in Lancaster county. He married Lydia Shaeffer, also a native of this county, born Jan. 20, 1804, who died Aug. 25, 1885. They went to Ashland county, Ohio, where Mr. Groff died, and a railroad now passes through the cemetery where he was buried. The widow returned with her children to Lancaster county.

Jacob Schaeffer, great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Stern through her grandmother, Mrs. Lydia (Shaeffer) Groff, emigrated to America from Switzerland about 1736, and was killed by the Indians somewhere in the neighborhood south of what is now Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa. He had a family of four sons and two daughters, and at the time the father was killed one of the daughters, then about thirteen years of age, was captured by the Redmen. She lived with them seven years, at the end of which time she with some twelve others (taken prisoners at the same time) was returned to the white settlers, and she subsequently married a white man; at the time of her return she was dressed entirely in silk. All of the girls taken by the Indians at that time had dark eyes and black hair.

His eldest son, Peter, was also a soldier on the American side in that conflict, and fought in the battle of Brandywine.

Lorentz Newgard, Mrs. Stern's maternal grandfather, came to America from his native land, Germany, in 1830, when twenty-seven years old. He married Elizabeth Boyer, and they had children: Joseph married Elizabeth Gantz, both are deceased. Elizabeth, Mrs. Samuel S. Groff, was the mother of Mrs. Stern. Kate, who married George Greiner, is living near Mastersonville, this county. Samuel, who still survives, married Maria Stauffer; she died some time ago. The father died in 1875, at the age of seventy-three, and is buried in the Catholic cemetery at Elizabethtown. He was a member of the Catholic Church.

Mr. Hunsecker was born Oct. 26, 1861, at Leaman Place, Paradise township, son of Jacob and Elizabeth J. (Oberly) Hunsecker, natives of Lancaster county. Their present residence is in Paradise township, Mr. Hunsecker being a retired miller, having given up his business in that line in 1884, at which time he located in his present home. From 1865 until 1883 Mr. Hunsecker served his district in the capacity of school director, and took an active interest in both educational and religious matters. He was born in 1827, and his wife in 1836. They both are esteemed members of the Episcopal Church. They had children as follows: Grace, who married Ezra H. Leaman, a box manufacturer in Paradise township; Austin, who died young; and Ellis E.

The paternal grandparents of Ellis E. Hunsecker were Rudolph and Mattie (Longenecker) Hunsecker, natives of Dauphin county, who came first to Columbia and later to Paradise township, where the former carried on milling. On the maternal side he is a grandson of John Oberly, a farmer of Lancaster county.

In 1863 Ellis E. Hunsecker accompanied the rest of the family to Salisbury township, was reared on the farm, and acquired his education in the common schools. When his father retired from activity in the milling business, he took his place, and has since then been the successful operator of both mill and farm. From his childhood he has been familiar with the workings of the mill. The mill with which Mr. Hunsecker is connected is located in Salisbury township, three miles from Gap, on the Newport road, and was erected in 1780 by Christian Hess. Since 1863 the mill has been the property of the Hunsecker family. It is well equipped for business, being fitted with a forty-horse waterpower and modern rollers. Under Mr. Hunsecker's management its patronage has steadily increased, and it is one of the most prosperous industries in this section. Mr. Hunsecker and his family have resided in Gap since November, 1896.

On Aug. 21, 1900, Mr. Hunsecker was appointed justice of the peace, to serve out an unexpired term, and his administration was approved by his election to the office in February, 1901. His interest in educational matters has been active, and from the age of twenty-one years he was connected with the school board, his removal into Gap alone severing this long association. Fraternally he is a Blue Lodge Mason. In politics he has always been a staunch Republican. He was reared in the faith of the Episcopal Church and is one of its consistent members and liberal supporters.

On Sept. 22, 1880, Mr. Hunsecker was united in the bonds of matrimony with Miss S. Vina Skiles, and one son has been born to this union, J. Lloyd. In Gap and the surrounding country Mr. Hunsecker is well known and very highly regarded as an upright and reliable citizen. The family is prominent in social life, and they all enjoy the esteem of the community.

MONROE B. WENGER, proprietor of the "Washington House," at Maytown, Lancaster county, was born in West Earl township, this county, Nov. 8, 1842, son of Jacob G. and Lucy (Bear) Wenger, natives of West Earl and Bareville, Pa., respectively.

Jacob G. Wenger operated the "Akron Hotel" (Lancaster county) from 1850 until April, 1882, when his son, Monroe B., purchased the hostelry, conducting it until 1895. Jacob G., after disposing of the hotel, lived in retirement, in a house adjoining, until his death, which occurred in 1891, at the age of sixty-nine years, his widow surviving until December, 1897, when she passed away at the age of seventy-three. Their remains were interred in the Metzlar Meeting House cemetery, in Earl township, the land for which meeting house and cemetery was donated to the Mennonite congregation by Grandfather Wenger. To Jacob G. Wenger and his wife were born nine children, three of whom died in infancy. Of the survivors, who reached, or nearly reached, mature years, Monroe B. is the eldest: Clayton was a member of the 122d P. V. I., and was shot at Chancellorsville; Zacharias was twice married, and died when fifty years old; Lemon B. was a soldier of the Civil war, was a stenographer and telegraph operator, and died in Illinois; Ambrose, who served in the 17th Pa. Cav. in the Civil war, was a carpenter and contractor, and assisted in rebuilding Chicago, Ill., after the great fire of 1871 (he died in Akron, Pa.); Ellen, deceased, was the wife of Horace Killan, a merchant of Akron, who is also deceased.

Samuel Wenger, the grandfather of Monroe B. Wenger, was a farmer of West Earl township. He married a Miss Groff, who bore him four children, viz.: Isaac, deceased; Henry, a retired farmer of Elkhart, Ind.; John, deceased; and Jacob G., father of Monroe B. Samuel Wenger's wife was called away when a comparatively young woman. He himself survived to a ripe old age, dying in 1880, at the age of ninety-two years.

The Wenger and Groff families were among the early settlers of Lancaster county, Hans Groff, the pioneer on the maternal side, coming from Germany in 1716, and settling in what is now known as Groffdale, Lancaster Co., Pa., about the year 1716. From him have descended all the members of this now distinguished "Pennsylvania-Dutch" family of the name.

On Feb. 15, 1864, Monroe B. Wenger was united in marriage, in Lancaster, with Miss Susan A. Bender, who has borne him the following named children: Clayton F., a barber of Akron, who married Viola Writzel; Elmer, who died July 5, 1888; Minnie C., wife of John Albright, of Akron, a farmer and cigarmaker; Lemon N., a decorator; Jacob B., who is married to Norah H. Shirk, and resides with his father; and John, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Susan A. (Bender) Wenger was born in Lancaster, daughter of John and Mary (Bush) Bender, and died Aug. 21, 1894, at the age of forty-seven years, seven months, seventeen days, her remains being interred at Akron. The second marriage of Mr. Wenger took place Sept. 17, 1898, in Lancaster, to Mary F. Foran, a native of Washington, D. C. To this marriage have come no children.

Monroe B. Wenger was a patriot of the Union army during the Civil war, having enlisted at Harrisburg June 8, 1861, in Co. D, 12th P. V. I., in which he served until June 11, 1864. He fought at Drainesville, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Second Bull Run, Gettysburg, and in the battle of the Wilderness, where he was wounded in the hand. At the first battle of Fredericksburg he lost the third finger of his left hand and was confined in Lincoln Hospital for a month, being sent thence to Philadelphia. After his honorable discharge he came to Lancaster and followed his trade for two years in the locomotive works, and afterward, for a year, was engaged in grading a mile and a quarter of the road. He then ran a construction train on the Reading & Columbia road for two years, and was then promoted to the position of engineer, in which capacity he acted until April 14, 1877. He then worked at his trade until April, 1882, when he returned to his old home and purchased the "Washington House," now one of the most popular hotels in Lancaster county.

Fraternally Mr. Wenger is a member of the I. O. O. F. In religion he is a free thinker, in politics a socialist, and individually he is one of the most popular men in the town of Maytown.

DAVID N. LANDIS, a general farmer of Upper Leacock township, was born in East Lampeter township Dec. 26, 1842, a son of David and Mary (Neff) Landis, natives both of East Lampeter township. Previous to his death in March, 1882, Father Landis lived retired for fourteen years, and was seventy-four at the time of his death. The mother died in 1848, at the age of thirty-five, and both were consistent members of the Mennonite Church, and were buried in Mellinger's cemetery, in East Lampeter township. The children born to the parents of our subject were: John, a retired farmer of East Lampeter township; Christian, a farmer; Moses, a retired farmer of this township; David N., of this sketch; Susan, deceased, who married Isaac L. Rohrer, of Upper Leacock township; and Lizzie, who married Jacob Hostetter, of Lancaster, who occupies the position of turnkey in the prison. All of this family are among the highly respected citizens of this county.

David N. Landis is one of the substantial men of this county. Until he was twenty-one years old he remained assisting his father on the home farm, then removed to Upper Leacock township on a farm, thence, in 1901 to his present farm, being the fortunate owner of three of the most productive and best improved farms in this locality.

The first marriage of David N. Landis occurred on Nov. 23, 1866, in Lancaster, when Hettie Rohrer became his wife. She was born in Upper Leacock township, and died in 1871, at the early age of twenty-seven years, and was interred in the Rohrer burying place. She was a daughter of Isaac and Mattie (Binkley) Rohrer, of Lancaster county. The children of this marriage were: Eleanora, who married Wayne Bare, a farmer of East Lampeter; and Mary M., who married Amos Witmer of East Lampeter. Mr. Landis was married, second, on Dec. 25, 1877, in East Lampeter township, to Catherine Landis, and to this marriage two sons were born, Harry L. and Aaron L.

Mrs. Catherine (Landis) Landis was born in Upper Leacock township on June 16, 1843, a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Hostetter) Landis, natives of East Lampeter and Lancaster townships. Mr. Landis, the father, retired from activity in 1873, having long been a prominent farmer, and he died in January, 1891, at the age of seventy-eight years. The mother died in 1872, at the age of fifty-nine, and both were buried on their old farm, and both of them were leading members of the Mennonite Church. HENRY H. CHARLES, a prosperous and progressive farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, was born Nov. 14, 1859, on his present farm, five miles west of Lancaster City, a son of John and Susan (Herr) Charles. Henry H. Charles was educated in the public schools, and at the age of twenty-one years began operations on his own account by engaging in general farming on his present tract of seventy acres, and about 1885 embarked in the poultry business, beginning in a small way with the Silver Wyandottes, but has since added the Light Brahmas, Banded Plymouth Rocks, Buff Cochins, Rose Comb Brown Leghorns, Buff Orpingtons, Black Wyandottes, and White Plymouth Rocks, his stock comprising the finest and purest strains in the country, and this stock is in demand wherever poultry raising is indulged in either for profit or pleasure. The Henry H. Charles plant is supplied with every modern convenience and contrivance for the profitable raising of poultry, and his incubators will admit of the introduction of 3,000 eggs at one hatching, and the yards, poultry-houses, coops, etc., are perfect in every respect. His general farm is a model in itself, and is conducted on scientific and practical principles.

On Nov. 8, 1880, Henry H. Charles married Miss Lizzie L. Landis, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Landis) Landis, of Landis Valley, and born May 4, 1860. To Mr. and Mrs. Charles have been born nine children, namely: David L., Anna L., Henry L., Benjamin L. (deceased), Lizzie L., Mary L., Alice L., John L., and Laura L. The family are members of the Christian Alliance at Lancaster, of which Rev. Noah Hess is pastor.

PETER REESER. One of the most successful agriculturists residing in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, and now in the prime of life, is Peter Reeser, who was born in East Kaolin, Chester Co., Pa., July 14, 1844, a son of Peter and Catherine (Mast) Reeser, natives, respectively, of Lancaster and Berks counties.

Peter Reeser, the father, was a very successful farmer through life. He removed from Lancaster county to Chester county in the spring of 1844, and settled near the Lancaster line, where he followed his vocation until his death, which occurred Oct. 15, 1856, when he was but forty-eight years old, while his widow lived to be seventy-seven, and died March 17, 1884, their remains being interred in Hershey's Mennonite Church Cemetery in Salisbury. Their parents were Jacob and Barbara (Blank) Reeser and David and Mary (Kurtz) Mast, of Lancaster county. Their own children were four in number, and were as follows: David, who married Mary Sparr, but has since been called away; Jacob, married to Sarah Plank, and now farming in Chester county; Peter, whose name stands at the opening of this biography; and Mary, who is the wife of Chris Hoover.

Peter Reeser, the subject proper of this biographical notice, rented a farm in Salisbury township in 1871, his mother and sister becoming his housekeepers, and thus the household was conducted until December 20, 1879, when Mr. Reeser was united in marriage at White Horse, Salisbury township, with Miss Lizzie Umble, who has borne him two children, Anna M., and John U. Mrs. Lizzie (Umble) Reeser was born in Salisbury township, Jan. 23, 1847, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Kurtz) Umble, natives, respectively, of Salisbury and Upper Leacock townships, who came to the farm on which Mr. Reeser and wife now reside in 1836, and here passed the remainder of their lives, the father dying on Jan. 20, 1892, at the age of seventy-nine years, and the mother in 1853, when forty-one. John Umble was prominent in the community as a farmer and drover, served his fellow-citizens as tax collector, school director and supervisor, and was otherwise recognized as a useful and public-spirited citizen. The remains of this couple were interred in Plank's cemetery in Salisbury township. Their children were two in number, namely, Anna, who died at the age of two years; and Lizzie, who is now Mrs. Peter Reeser. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Reeser were John and Mary (Kurtz) Umble, of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a farmer, and the maternal grandparents were Jacob and Anna (Yoder) Kurtz, of the same county and also farming people.

At his marriage Peter Reeser settled on his present farm of 102 acres, on which he has made many improvements, and the tillage of which has received his constant attention until the present time. He has never frittered away his time in seeking for office, but when called upon to serve his fellow-citizens in any capacity has felt it to be his duty to do so to the best of his ability, and for this reason has for the past seven years filled the position of school director. He and his wife are sincere in their profession of the doctrines of the Evangelical church, of which they are members, and to the maintenance of which they liberally contribute. Mr. Reeser by his industry and good management has acquired a competency, and although still comparatively a young man enjoys a wide spread and well-deserved respect throughout the township. His wife's family are also held in high esteem, and she individually is honored by the entire community for her many amiable qualities and womanly graces and virtues.

JOHN G. MOYER, one of the prominent and representative farmer-citizens of Mt. Joy township, was born in Rapho township, Lancaster county, Aug. 6, 1851, son of Rev. John W. and Mary (Greiner) Moyer, the former of whom was born in Lebanon county, and the latter in Rapho township, Lancaster county.

Rev. John W. Moyer came to Lancaster county in 1849, and for forty years labored faithfully as a minister in the Evangelical Church. Both he and wife died on the farm now occupied by their son John G., in 1898, where they had resided since 1865. The father of our subject died at the age of seventy-nine years and two months. The bereaved widow only survived him five weeks, and they were both buried in Milton Grove cemetery. They had three children, namely: Harriet G., who died Jan. 29, 1900; John G., of this record; and Anna Mary, who died at the age of seven years. The paternal grandfather was David Moyer of Lebanon county, where he died, and the grandmother, whose maiden name was Wolgemuth, passed away at the home of her son Rev. John W., in Rapho township, Lancaster county. The maternal grandfather was John Greiner, a large farmer in Lancaster county, and he and his wife, a member of the Kiser family, were buried on the old Greiner farm, in Rapho township.

John G. Moyer comes of agricultural ancestors, and he has confined his efforts to farming through a very successful life, remaining as his father's assistant until 1890. He then operated a farm in East Donegal township until 1901, when he returned to his present farm, the same upon which he was reared. He has been identified with many of the public improvements in this part of the county, and not only owns considerable stock in the Elizabethtown Turnpike Co., but is one of its directors. For three years he served on the township school board, and is known for his enterprise and public spirit. In politics he is a Republican, and he belongs to the fraternal order of Knights of Malta.

In August, 1874, in Lancaster, Mr. Moyer was married to Miss Hettie Gible, and the four children born to this union are as follows: Hiram, who died young; Aaron, who married Belle Arnold, is a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Miss Mamie is at home, as is also John P. G. The paternal grandfather was Rev. Abraham Gible, who was a farmer and later a preacher in the Old Dunkard Church; his wife's maiden name was Menger. The maternal grandfather was John Grove, the latter name being spelled Groff in Switzerland, where the family originated; his wife belonged to the Bicker family.

DAVID S. BLANK, who resides on his farm just north of New Holland, belongs to one of the oldest and most respected families of Lancaster county. He was born in Salisbury township, Nov. 20, 1841, a son of Jacob, a grandson of John, and a great-grandson of Jacob, who died in 1835. The great-grandmother of David S. Blank died in 1794.

He was a devoted Christian man, a member of the Amish Church, and became well-to-do in the community in which he was highly respected. Joy, Pa., is engaged in its operation, and uses both water power and a gasoline engine. This mill was built by Benjamin Miller, and has been in the Stauffer family about forty years.

Mr. Stauffer was born on the place where he is now living Dec. 24, 1864, a son of Peter H. and Anna (Newcomer) Stauffer, who were married in Lancaster, Jan. 3, 1854. They were born in West Donegal and Rapho townships, respectively, and began their married life in West Donegal, but in the year of their marriage they moved to the mill property, which Mr. Stauffer purchased from his father's estate. Jacob Snyder had been its owner prior to its acquirement by the Stauffer family. Peter H. Stauffer was born Feb. 16, 1827, and now resides with his son Amos N. The mother, who was born in 1830, died in February, 1886, and was buried in the Kraybills cemetery. They were both members of the Mennonite Church. Their children were: Christ, who died at the age of forty-two years, who was married to Elizabeth Bear; Levi is in the engine and implement business in Mt. Joy, Pa.; Elizabeth died young; and Amos N.

The paternal grandparents of Amos N. Stauffer were Jacob and Catherine (Hershey) Stauffer, of Lancaster county. The grandfather died on the old homestead in 1860, at the age of fifty-nine years; and the grandmother in 1875, at the age of seventy-three, both in the faith of the Mennonite Church. AMOS ADAM SHEAFFER, a successful business man of Lancaster, belongs to an old family of the county. His great-grandfather, Martin Sheaffer, and his grandfather, also named Martin, both lived and died in Lancaster county, where they were substantial farmers.

Adam G. Sheaffer, father of Amos A., was a farmer of Ephrata township, and died in April, 1893, at the age of seventy-three years. He married Mary Catherine Fry, daughter of Jacob Fry, a farmer of Ephrata township. His farm was close to Frysville, a village founded by the family. Mr. and Mrs. Adam G. Sheaffer were the parents of eleven children, six of whom are living: Martin, a hotel-keeper at Kinzers; Amos A., whose name appears at the opening of this article; Martha Louisa, wife of Conrad Sheaffer, of Lancaster, who is now living retired; Susan, wife of Cyrus Sheaffer, a farmer of Bareville; Harriet Emma, wife of Jacob Herr, who is living retired at Bareville; and Eliza Missouri, wife of John M. Ranck, a farmer of New Holland. Among the deceased was Jacob F., the distiller, whose "Golden Rod" whisky was widely known.

Amos Adam Sheaffer was born on the old homestead, now known as Hinkletown, Nov. 22, 1861, and was educated in the public schools, which he left when eighteen years of age. For a time he was employed on a farm, and in 1885 became a salesman for his brother Jacob, who had his liquor business at No. 3 North Queen street. There he remained until September, 1889, when he purchased a store. Seven years ago Mr. Sheaffer secured a front room on East King street, and, uniting the two rooms, opened a large and convenient liquor store. It is not unusual for him to wholesale seventy barrels of whisky a month, his leading brands being the "Sheaffer," the "Golden Rod" and the "Club" whiskies. Mr. Sheaffer has the formula of the "Golden Rod," and his copper distilled "Golden Rod" has become even more popular than the original brand.

To them have come three children: Mary May, who is now at school; Benjamin Leon and Amos Paul. His parents were farming people, and remained in Leacock township until 1895, when they removed to Narberth, Montgomery Co., Pa., to live retired, Mr. Caldwell having relinquished active labor in 1898. He was born in 1839, Mrs. Caldwell on May 5, 1845. Both are members of the Presbyterian Church. SAMUEL F. FOLTZ, a deputy collector in the 9th Internal Revenue District, belongs to one of the old families of Lancaster county, whose various representatives for several generations have played an important part in local affairs. He was born in Caernarvon township, Lancaster county, Aug. 3, 1859, and received his education in the public schools. When he was about twenty years old he secured employment in the store of Mr. Wechter, at Terrehill, where he remained about two and a half years. For another year he was engaged in farming, and then set himself to the carpenter's trade, at which he was engaged for a number of years.

In 1885 Mr. Foltz was elected to the office of constable, being also assessor, as the two offices were at that time associated. He filled these positions for five consecutive terms, and while in office was appointed, May 15, 1890, a deputy revenue collector for the 9th District. After four years of work in that position he was ousted by a change of administration. In 1895 he was appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of tax collector, to which, after two years' employment he was elected, continuing therein until September, 1898, when he was again appointed a deputy Revenue collector, in the same district in which he was before engaged. Here he has been retained to the present time, and has a very creditable record as a capable and efficient Revenue official. Mr. Foltz has served several times as a member of the Republican committee, and is recognized as one of the wheel horses of his party in the county.

Mr. Foltz belongs to the A. O. K. of M. C., and to the I. O. O. F., Terrehill Lodge, No. 454. Socially he has made many friends by his frank and endearing qualities.

Mr. Foltz was married, April 23, 1880, to Miss Frances S. Peters, who died in 1891, leaving two children, Lizzie V. and Percy. Mr. Foltz married, for his second wife, Dec. 24, 1893, Miss Mary L. Nelson. She belongs to the Evangelical Church.

HERMAN BOMEISLER GRIFFITHS, manager of Rocky Springs Park, a famous picnic resort near Lancaster, although not a native of Lancaster county, has done so much for the promotion of enjoyment and healthful amusement among the people of the city that they regard him as "one of their very own." For seven years he has had his business there, and in that time has commended himself most favorably to the local public.

James Griffiths, the father of Herman B., settled in Philadelphia, and was one of the early steel engravers in this country. A gentleman of much intelligence and fine physique, he was active and vigorous during a long and useful life, until his last illness, from which his death resulted Jan. 2, 1896. James Griffiths was married in early manhood to Mary Bomeisler, and by her became the father of three sons, William M., Herman B. and James A., all of whom have been amusement caterers for more than twenty years. Among the cities and towns where they have had charge of rinks, parks and other places of attraction are: Atlantic City, Omaha, Meriden, Richmond, Atlanta, Philadelphia, Mt. Gretna, Pa. (where H. B. Griffiths has also been in charge six years), Nishaning Falls, Pa., Wilmington, Sea Isle City, Cape May, Chesapeake Beach, Md., and other places of more or less importance.

Herman B. Griffiths was born in Frankford, this state, Feb. 1, 1854, and was educated in the schools of Montgomery county. At the age of seventeen years he applied himself to the calico printing business in company with his father, at Gloucester, N. J., where he worked four years. On March 4, 1880, he was married to Sarah Emma, daughter of William and Isabella Hillborn, both natives of this State, and Quakers, of English descent. The family was reared in that faith for many generations, and Jesse G. Webster, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Griffiths, was a cousin of Daniel Webster. From this union were born two children, Isabella Hillborn and William Herman. After his marriage Mr. Griffiths began the cultivation of the paternal estate, which is now in the possession of his mother. In the spring of 1896 he took possession of Rocky Springs Park, near Lancaster, on a six years' lease, having an option on the place. This interesting park consists of forty-two acres along the picturesque Conestoga river, the only wooded tract anywhere near the city that can be used for general picnic and park purposes. Two commodious steamers were put on the river by him for the purpose of carrying passengers to and from the Park, and he also built a dance pavilion, a large show pavilion, and a pavilion for the purpose of protecting passengers while waiting for the boat, besides beautifying the place with exquisite flower beds, adding birds and animals to the place, building a large toboggan, a switch back railroad, etc. He introduced electric lights for the densely shaded grounds, replacing the coal oil torches and lamps formerly in use, and the park was so improved in every way that it soon became the great picnic resort of Lancaster, more than one hundred thousand people visting it every season. Their general and generous response to his efforts so pleased Mr. Griffiths that he has already secured ownership of one-third of the Park, and still retains his option on the remainder.

Such has been the career of one who has done so much to give the people of Lancaster a resort where the young and old, rich and poor, can spend a day or an hour in recreation at a trifling cost, and he has certainly proved himself a public benefactor.

GEORGE KINZER HOFFMEIER, who is in business with his brother, Charles Stamm Hoffmeier, under the name of Hoffmeier Brothers, dealers in furniture at No. 40 East King street, Lancaster, is descended from a very old Pennsylvania family. His paternal grandfather, the well-remembered J. L. Hoffmeier, was born in Millersville, Lancaster county. The progenitor of the family in this country came from Germany. J. L. Hoffmeier was for years clerk of the Lancaster county prison, filling that office with rare ability.

Amos K. Hoffmeier, father of the Hoffmeier Brothers, was also a furniture dealer in East King street for many years, and was the inventor of some very excellent devices in furniture. He died in 1894. His widow, Mrs. Mary (Stamm) Hoffmeier, belongs to a very old family and is a sister of Frederick Stamm, who attained considerable fame as an inventor. The surviving children of Mr. and Mrs.

W B Griffiths

Hoffmeier are as follows: George K. and Charles S. constitute the firm noted above. Mary Grace is the wife of Prof. Thaddeus G. Helm, principal of Franklin and Marshall Academy, Lancaster. Herbert Miller is one of the assistant superintendents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Lancaster. Two children have passed away.

George K. Hoffmeier was born in Lancaster Dec. 13, 1861, received his education in the city schools, after which he was employed in his father's establishment for two years, when he became manager of the telephone service in the city and county. This position he held for four years. For three years he had charge of the telephone department of the fire insurance patrol in Philadelphia. In July, 1886 he came back to Lancaster to take a position in his father's store, which he held until 1889, when, in company with his brother Charles, he embarked in his present enterprise.

Mr. Hoffmeier was married, Nov. 14, 1889, to Miss Emma D. Stauffer, a daughter of the late Martin Stauffer, of Gap, who had retired from active business some years before his death. Mr. Hoffmeier belongs to St. Paul's Reformed Church, and to the Artisans. He and his wife live in a charming home at No. 26 Chester street.

CHARLES STAMM HOFFMEIER, of the firm of Hoffmeier Brothers, was born in Lancaster, Aug. 21, 1864. He attended the public schools until he reached the high school, which he left to enter his father's store, which was only a few doors from the magnificent establishment of which he is now one of the proprietors. There he remained until 1889, when the firm of Hoffmeier Brothers became a reality and began the successful business which is still conducted at the present stand. For some years they conducted their business on the second and third floors. After taking possession of the first floor of the building the business seemed to grow to amazing proportions. In 1901 an addition was built—a five-story building, thus giving a depth of 230 feet from East King street; it is one of the finest furniture establishments in the State.

Mr. Hoffmeier was married, May 22, 1889, to Miss Helen N. Bidwell, daughter of the late Solomon Bidwell, an inventor, of Philadelphia. To this union were born Rhea Charlotta and Helen Louise. The very cozy home of the family is at No. 22 Chester street. Mr. Hoffmeier is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church. He is one of the charter members of the Young Republicans. The brothers are energetic and capable men, and no firm in the city enjoys the confidence of the people in a more marked degree.

B. Z. HESS, of Fulton township, is among the best and most favorably known citizens of the vicinity in which he resides. He was born in Pequea township, Lancaster county, April 5, 1858, and is a member of one of the oldest families of the county, being a son of Abraham M. and Annie (Zeigler)

Hess, both natives of Lancaster county. The father is still residing in Pequea township, at the ripe old age of seventy-two years.

Abraham Hess, grandfather of B. Z., was also born in Pequea township. He was the father of six children: Barbara, Elizabeth, Annie, Maria, Susan and Abraham M. The family adhered to the old Dunkard religion, and in politics the men were for the most part Whigs and later Republicans.

Abraham Hess was married (first) in 1850 to a Miss Hess, who, however, bore no relationship to his family before her marriage. They had one child, who died in infancy, the mother soon after following it to the grave. In 1855 Mr. Hess married (second) Miss Anna Zeigler, of an old Lancaster county family, and they had a family of seven children: Conrad is a farmer in Pequea township; B. Z. is mentioned below; Abraham A. is a farmer in Donegal township; Noah is a farmer of Pequea township; Martha is the wife of Parris Engle, of Columbia, Pa.; and Ezra and Elsie died in childhood. Mr. Hess lost his second wife by death, and married (third) Barbara Herr, of Manor township, by whom he has had four children: Annie is the wife of Jacob G. Mann, of Manor township; Enos resides in Virginia; Barbara died in infancy; and Elizabeth remains at home.

B. Z. Hess was reared on the home farm, receiving a common-school education. On May 17, 1882, he married Barbara, daughter of Henry and Susan (Buckwalter) Warfel, of an old family of Lancaster county. Two children have come to Mr. and Mrs. Hess: Susan A., born Nov. 1, 1884, and Barbara, born Oct. 21, 1893, both residing at home. The mother, Mrs. Hess, was born Dec. 8, 1861.

Mr. Hess chose farming for his life vocation, and though he started out in moderate circumstances he is to-day the owner of a fine farm of 231 acres, with first class improvements. Mr. Hess is a Baptist in religious belief, and in politics is a member of the Republican party. He is one of the best known men in the southern part of Lancaster county, and is always associated with any movement whose object is the betterment of the community in which he lives.

GEORGE ARMENT LANE. The immediate ancestors of George Arment Lane were Thomas and Susanna (Graham) Lane, the former of whom passed out of life at the home of his son on March 1, 1884, in the sixty-seventh year of his age. His occupation through a busy life had been that of carpenter and cabinetmaker, which business he followed in Paradise township, where he lived and died respected by all who knew him. His widow still survives, at the age of eighty years, and makes her home with her only child, George Arment Lane. The grandparents of Mr. Lane were Robert and Elizabeth (Arment) Lane, and Edward and Fanny Graham, the latter having been born of Scotch-Irish parents from the North of Ireland, who later settled in Harris-town, Paradise township, this county.

George Arment Lane was born Nov. 5, 1853, in Harristown, and obtained his education in the public schools. His opportunities were limited by lack of means, and at the age of fifteen years he decided that he would adopt teaching as a step in the career marked out for himself. As the law declared that no teacher under the age of seventeen was entitled to remuneration, he was obliged to consider his work in the light of practice, as he received no pay, although he secured a school before he was sixteen years of age. For seven years he followed the profession of teaching, at the same time adding to his own knowledge in preparation for the career he had planned for himself.

In 1876, Mr. Lane came to Lancaster city in order to engage in the study of law. He entered the office of the late Philip D. Baker, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar April 28, 1878. He entered the arena of politics, and was chosen County Solicitor, being elected for a second term, and serving six years in that responsible office, from 1889 to 1894. In 1895 he was elected District Attorney of Lancaster county, his term of office extending through 1896, 1897, 1898. The period during which Mr. Lane was District Attorney of Lancaster county was important in the annals of that county. Many important cases were tried by him. It was during his term of office that Ralph Wireback was convicted of the murder of D. B. Landis and executed, being the first to receive the extreme penalty of the law in this county since 1858. Bertha McConnell was convicted of attempted murder, and served her time; Jerry Green, colored, was convicted of murder in the second degree for killing his half-brother, and was sentenced to twenty years imprisonment; and young Leopold, whose forgeries of the name of a millionaire attracted attention all over the State, was sent to the Huntingdon Reformatory after Mr. Lane had convicted him. These are some of the most noted cases out of nearly three thousand disposed of during his term.

Mr. Lane was elected to the Lancaster School Board from the Sixth ward for six years, during a greater part of this time being chairman of the committee on Finance. This position he resigned when he became District Attorney, the offices being incompatible.

Mr. Lane was married, in 1881, to Miss Annie Fulton, a daughter of James and Rosanna Fulton, of Parkesburg, who was principal of the Parkesburg schools at the time of her marriage. Four children were born to this union, two of whom survive: Anna May, of the class of 1902, Millersville State Normal School, who possesses musical talent, and is a piano pupil of Prof. George Benkert; and James Thomas, a grammar school lad of twelve years, who is also gifted in music, being a violin pupil of Prof. Carl Thorbahn, more extended mention of whom may be found elsewhere.

Mr. Lane is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Lancaster, and was the superintendent of the Sunday-school for nine years. Fraternally he is a member of Herschel Lodge, No. 123, I. O. O. F., and of Lancaster Council, No. 912, Jr. O. U. A. M.

Mr. Lane is a self-made man. He is a genial, kind-hearted gentleman, and his friends in Lancaster county are many, as is evidenced by the support he received when a candidate for political office.

ABRAHAM MYERS. The Myers family, which is now scattered until there are members in almost every State of the Union, originated in Switzerland, from which country came John Myers, who founded the American branch of the family, in the latter part of the eighteenth century. Taking part in the Revolutionary war, he became thoroughly identified with the progress and development of the United States, particularly Pennsylvania, where he found a comfortable home and a warm welcome from the pioneers who were then settling in the forests of Lancaster county. John Myers settled in Eden township, cleared up a tract of wild land and converted it into a fine estate, leaving a good property to his children, who were: Henry, of Eden township; John, of Eden; Frederick; David; Benjamin, who died in young manhood; Sophia, who died unmarried; Betsey, who married John Fickinger; Susan, who married William Pearson, of Eden; Sallie, who married Harry Rowiskey; Mary, who died on the old home place, unmarried; and Jacob, father of Abraham Myers.

Jacob Myers was born in Eden township in March, 1798, and there married Susan McMichael, who was born in 1819. She was a daughter of William and Anna McMichael, the McMichael family being well known in the pioneer annals of the county.

Jacob Myers settled on his father's old homestead after the death of the father, and there lived until his death, in 1879, at the age of eighty years. His twelve children were: Lydia, Malinda, Eliza, and one son died in childhood. Christian, born March 28, 1835, married Miss Ella Pickle, of Lancaster county, and settled on one of his father's farms, where he died in November, 1898, leaving a widow, who resides on the farm with her three children, George, Ada, and Clara. Abraham is mentioned below, Lavina, born at the old home in 1838, is the wife of John Carmahan, of this county, and they reside on his farm in Eden township; their two children are Harry J. and Susan. Benjamin, born in Eden township in 1845, married Mary McElhaney, and they reside on his farm near the old homestead; they have no family. Amanda, born in 1850, is the wife of Wilson W. Jackson, and they reside in Eden township; they have no family. Emeline, born in 1856, is the wife of Sylvester Aulthouse, and they reside on his fine farm in Sadsbury township; their three children are Lydia, Susan and Ruth. Elizabeth, born in 1858, married Lewis Irvin, who resides in Eden township, his farm being located there, and they have three children, Jessie, Charles, and May. Eliza, born in the old homestead, married Christian Mowrer, and they reside on his estate in Colerain township; their four children are Ida, Amanda, John and Chester.

The old homestead was the home of Abraham Myers for some years after his marriage. His education was acquired in the common schools of his district. Reared a farmer boy, he has continued in agricultural pursuits all his life, making farming his life work. On Dec. 22, 1874, he was united in marriage with Miss Jemima C. E. Herr, daughter of John and Margaret (Ralston) Herr, who was born Jan. 11, 1850, in Eden township, received an excellent common-school education, and by a careful mother was thoroughly instructed in housewifely ways. Her family is prominent in the religious annals of the county and State, as well as in business and social circles.

For four years after his marriage, Mr. Myers and his family lived on the old homestead farm, and then he purchased what is locally known as the John Basler farm, in Eden township, where he and family have resided until the present date (some twenty years). Mr. Myers has done much improving here, in the way of rebuilding, remodeling, and fencing, and has now the satisfaction of owning one of the most attractive, valuable and productive farms in a county which is noted for its handsome homes.

The two sons born to Mr. and Mrs. Myers are: (1) John A., born Oct. 1, 1875, received his primary education in the district schools, and later became an ambitious student in the Millersville Normal School, from which great institution he graduated with honor in the class of 1898; during the next year, at the same institution, he took advanced work in languages and higher mathematics, since which time he has followed the profession of teacher during the winter months, being acceptable through the whole county, where he is considered one of the most promising young men of the community. During the summers he engages in carpenter work, and many of the very attractive and convenient buildings on the home farm are testimonials to his skill in that trade, as well as a number of creditable achievements in the machinist's line; he is now employed as a traveling machinist by the Plano Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, Ill. (2) C. William was born at the old home in December, 1878; also attended the district schools in boyhood, and later became a student in the Millersville Normal School. Both sons reflect great credit upon their parents and their home training, and are respected through the community.

In politics Mr. Myers has been a lifelong Democrat, and his sons are no less stanch in their Democracy, believing the principles advanced by that party to be the best for the country. But Mr. Myers is no politician, and invariably refuses to accept office. Brought up in the Lutheran Church, he has never departed from its teachings. He is well and favorably known throughout his part of the county, and well represents the honorable ancestry from which he sprung. His life has been devoted to the farming interests of the community, his early training on the pioneer farm giving him a thorough knowledge of methods of work and the possibilities of different kinds of land. As a neighbor and citizen his sterling character has been recognized, and in the highest degree he enjoys the esteem of his loyalty, his neighbors and business associates uniting in their judgment of him as an honest man and a fit representative of the community.

GEORGE R. HEISEY, attorney at law and certified public accountant, was born in East Donegal township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

Eli Z. and Annie H. (Reich) Heisey, his parents, were natives of East Donegal township. Eli Z. Heisey was a farmer, and followed that calling until his death, April 2, 1893. Annie H. Heisey, his wife, died June 15, 1898. They were the parents of five children: Eleanor, who died in infancy; George R.; Ethelbert R., teller of the First National Bank of Marietta, Pa.; and Jacob Z. and Annie M., both of whom died in infancy. The paternal grandparents were Christian and Martha (Zigler) Heisey, of East Donegal. The maternal grandparents were Dr. George and Mary (Long) Reich.

George R. Heisey was educated at Schuylkill Seminary, Palms National Business College, and Close & Black's School of Shorthand. He followed the profession of public accounting until April, 1901, when he was admitted to the Lancaster Bar, and has since practiced law. He is the managing director of the Pennsylvania State Building & Loan Association of Lancaster, Pa., and a member of the Pennsylvania State Examining Board of Expert Accountants.

In August, 1891, Mr. Heisey was united in marriage at Marietta with Mary A. Steacy, a daughter of George S. Steacy, who is mentioned below. No children have come to this union. Mr. Heisey is a Republican in politics.

GEORGE S. STEACY, father of Mrs. George R. Heisey, was born in Strasburg, Lancaster county, and died in 1874, on his farm in East Donegal township, three miles from Marietta. His parents, John and Sarah Steacy, had eight children, viz.: John, William and Edward, deceased; Sarah, widow of Rev. Mr. Atmore; Grace, Mrs. Connard, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Rev. John Edward; Mary, deceased wife of Rev. Mr. Bishop; and George S.

George S. Steacy was married in Marietta, in 1856, to Miss Margaret A. Stahl, and to this union were born the following named children: Emma, who died young; Mary A., wife of George R. Heisey; William, a carpenter in Fresno, Cal.; and George S., a mechanic in York, Pa. Mrs. Margaret A. (Stahl) Steacy was born in Marietta, daughter of Jacob and Agnes (Park) Stahl, of Lancaster. Jacob Stahl was a lumberman in early and middle life, but lived in retirement in Marietta for many years prior to his death, which took place in 1882, when he was eighty-two years of age; his widow survived until 1890, dying at the age of eighty-seven. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Stahl was an elder for more than thirty-five years. Their four children were George W., deceased; Mary J., widow of A. N. Cassel, of Marietta; Margaret A., widow of George S. Steacy; and Miranda, wife of J. H. Grove, M. D., of Philadelphia. The grandfather of Mrs. Margaret A. Steacy on the paternal side was John Stahl, of Lancaster, and her maternal grandparents were James and Mark (McWicker) Park, also of this county.

Mr. Steacy was an agriculturist all his days in Conoy township; he was injured while threshing, and the accident resulted in his death. He was a good Christian, and highly respected, although not a member of any church organization. In politics he was a Republican.

AMOS E. BURKHOLDER, a prominent young member of the Lancaster Bar, emanates from parentage influential and widely known in social and professional circles. His ancestors, who were of the Mennonite denomination, came to this country several generations ago, and his grandfather, Christian Burkholder, a farmer by occupation, was born in West Earl township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

Ezra Burkholder, father of Amos E., was well-known surveyor, conveyancer, notary public and justice of the peace, and transacted volumes of business of a very important character during his life. He died July 12, 1890. In 1853 he married Annie M. Hoffman, daughter of Christian Hoffman, a merchant of Vogansville, Lancaster county, but originally a farmer, and six children comprised their family, five of whom are living: E. H., a surveyor, conveyancer and justice of the peace, of Farmersville, Pa.; Mary, intermarried with V. C. Sheetz; Amanda, intermarried with Oscar Hackman; Frances, intermarried with Joseph K. Tobias; and Amos E.

Amos E. Burkholder, whose name introduces this sketch, is a native of Pennsylvania, born in May, 1866, in West Earl township, Lancaster county. He received his earlier education at the district and select schools of that locality. Later on he finished his studies at Central Pennsylvania College, from which institution he graduated in 1888. Mr. Burkholder taught school from the fall of 1888 up to 1893, in which year he entered the law offices of John E. Malone, Esq., at Lancaster, Pa. In 1896 he was admitted to practice law, and within the prescribed time became a practitioner in the Supreme and Superior courts. He is located at No. 48 North Duke street, Lancaster.

In 1893 Mr. Burkholder was married to Miss Clara E. Bolster, daughter of George Bolster, marble and granite dealer at Ephrata, Pa. A son, Henry Clay, now five years old, and a daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, now one year old, have been born to them. The family have their home at the old homestead, occupied by Mr. Burkholder's parents, at Farmersville, Pa., which place Mr. Burkholder has greatly enhanced, modernized and beautified, thus affording comfort to his family. He attends faithfully to his practice in the city, good railroad facilities permitting him to be at his office early in the morning and return in the evening.

Mr. Burkholder is a pronounced Republican, but has never sought party preferment. In 1901 he was appointed prison solicitor. In religious faith he is a member of the German Reformed Church. He is a careful and intelligent counselor, entirely devoted to his profession; has built up a fine clientage, and is popular alike inside and outside the circles of the honorable profession of which he is an honored member.

LEVI SHULTZ, one of the progressive, reliable and representative citizens of Strasburg township, who resides one and one-fourth miles north of Martinsville, was born in West Lampeter township Jan. 11, 1846. His parents were John and Elizabeth (Marison) Shultz, well-known residents of that township.

Levi Shultz was reared on the home farm, and received his education in the common schools. Until he was thirty years old he remained assisting his father, and at that time he purchased the farm of thirty-five acres which has been his home ever since. Here he carries on general farming, and he has made many valuable improvements which have increased the value of the place very considerably. All of the surroundings denote the presence of an excellent manager, and his is one of the most comfortable and attractive homes of the neighborhood.

In 1876 Mr. Shultz married Miss Hannah Barge, who was born in Strasburg township Jan. 8, 1853, a daughter of the late Witmer Barge. Mr. and Mrs. Shultz are the parents of four children: Lizzie B., wife of Harry Deiter; and Witmer J., Harry B. and Emma Maud, all residing at home. Mr. Shultz is a man of standing in his locality, and both he and his wife, with the two eldest children, belong to the Mennonite Church, where they are valued for their excellent traits of character and have many friends.

SAMUEL U. STOLTZFUS, who is one of the leading and respected citizens of Earl township, and resides on his farm a mile and a half west of New Holland, was born in Earl township, Lancaster county, Nov. 1, 1851, a son of John and Elizabeth (Umble) Stoltzfus.

John Stoltzfus, now deceased, was born Jan. 13, 1810, a son of Christian and Anna (Blank) Stoltzfus. Leacock was his native township, and there he was reared and educated. Bred to farming, he followed that avocation all his life. After his marriage he came to Earl township, locating near Hinkletown, but later purchased a farm of ninety acres, which lies two miles west of New Holland, and which was his home until his death, March 22, 1897. He was a leading citizen of his day, and a Christian gentleman of high character and broad spirit. For years he was an active minister in the Amish Church, his work being largely in the lower Mill Creek Congregation, where his Christian example and long devotion to his Master made him a host of friends.

John Stoltzfus was twice married, his first wife, Elizabeth Umble, becoming his bride March 7, 1830. She died Oct. 21, 1853, when forty-two years, six months and nine days old. They had the following family: Anna, who was born March 27, 1831, is the widow of Christian Lapp, of Leacock township; Mary, born April 25, 1832, died unmarried; Jacob, born Sept. 22, 1833, is deceased; John (2), born Sept. 11, 1835, lives in Caernarvon township, Lancaster county; Jonas, born May 19, 1839, lives in Caernarvon township; Fannie, born Sept. 17, 1840, married Henry Fisher, a resident of East Lampeter township; Daniel, born Oct. 29, 1841, is a resident of Chester county; Henry, born Jan. 3, 1843, lived in Chester county until his death in December, 1901; Christian, born Aug. 3, 1845, is a resident of Berks county; Amos, born Nov. 20, 1847, lives in Upper Leacock township; Elizabeth, born Feb. 20, 1849, married Joel Fisher, of Lancaster township; and Samuel, born Nov. 1, 1851, is a resident of Earl township. The father married for his second wife, Feb. 5, 1857, Elizabeth Nofsinger, who was born Jan. 16, 1820, by whom he had two children: J. Bena, born July 22, 1859, married John B. Schmucker; and Isaac, born Dec. 15, 1861, lives on the old homestead. The parents of the second Mrs. Stoltzfus were Peter and Jacobine (Swartsentauber) Nofsinger, natives of Illbach, Germany. The mother is still living.

Samuel U. Stoltzfus was reared on the paternal farm, and educated in the public schools. When he was only twelve years old he began working for wages, and at twenty-four began farming on his own account, renting a place of ninety-six acres, which he farmed for ten years. At the end of that time he bought thirty acres, a part of his father's farm, which he improved with buildings, and where he made his home for four years, when he bought an 85-acre farm, where he is still to be found. Here he has also made extensive improvements, and is known as a very successful farmer. On his farm Mr. Stoltzfus has a fine stone quarry, and for several years he has been engaged in quarrying and crushing stone. In 1899 he bought an approved stone crushing machine for the highways, and now gives all his time to a very extensive stone business, which he has worked up in the neighborhood.

In 1874 Mr. Stoltzfus was married to Miss Elizabeth Zook, a daughter of Lydia Zook, who was born near Binkley's Bridge, and to them have come seven children: Lydia, the wife of David Beiler, of Bird-in-Hand; Keuben, who married Miss Sarah Renno, and lives in Leacock township; Fannie, at home, as are the other children, Levi, Mary, Annie and Elmer. Mr. and Mrs. Stoltzfus are members of the Amish Church, and the family are counted among the most worthy and respected citizens of the county.

SIMON SHISSLER, who carries on an extensive retail business as a cigar manufacturer in Lancaster, is one of the most enterprising citizens of that place, both in business and public circles. He has filled numerous positions of trust, with uniform satisfaction to all concerned, and his popularity is the result of faithful service and honest methods in every relation of life.

Mr. Shissler comes of that sturdy German stock to whose characteristic thrift and industry Lancaster county owes its present prosperous condition, and his family has been identified with the county for two hundred years. The Shisslers originally came from Germany, and were devout adherents of the Lutheran Church. John Shissler, grandfather of Simon, was born in Manor township, and died there at a good old age. His wife lived to the age of ninety-eight. Jacob Shissler, father of Simon, was born in Manor township in 1805, and died in Lancaster in 1868. He was a cooper by trade, and built the large distillery near Strasburg. In 1858 he came to Lancaster and took charge of the cooperage owned by Philip Baker, continuing in that employ until his death. Jacob Shissler first married a Miss Miller, by whom he had seven children, five sons and two daughters. Four of the sons served in the Civil war: Jacob was a member of Company I, 79th P. V. I., and met his death while in the service, after fighting bravely for nearly three years. Albert, who belonged to the same company and regiment, was a private; he died in Andersonville prison. Philip and Amos were both members of the 50th Pennsylvania Militia. The former is now a resident of Strasburg, and the latter makes his home near that city. By his second wife, Susan (Snyder), a native of Strasburg, Jacob Shissler had three children: Anna, now Mrs. Binkley, of Philadelphia; Harry, of Lancaster; and Simon, whose name opens this sketch. The mother of these is still living in Lancaster, and though now nearly ninety years of age is vigorous both mentally and physically. She is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church.

Simon Shissler was born April 16, 1856, in Paradise township, this county, and has lived in Lancaster since he was two years old. His education was received in the public schools. He was only thirteen years old at the time of his father's death, and a year later commenced his apprenticeship to the trade he has followed all his life, becoming a practical cigarmaker under the instruction of John Hull, with whom he remained three years. Later he was in the employ of Albright & Bros. and Metzger & Wiley, until 1885, in which year he received his appointment as letter carrier in the post office department. He served thus four years. In June, 1889, Mr. Shissler embarked in business on his own account, at No. 52½ North Queen street, where he has ever since remained, and the store is one of the most popular in Lancaster. He has always made a specialty of the finest grades of goods, employing the best workmen obtainable, and the products of his factory, which is located in the rear of his store, are justly celebrated. Fifteen hands are kept busy constantly. Mr. Shissler's standing among business men is unquestionable.

Mr. Shissler has taken a prominent part in the improvement and progress of the city, and he has assisted acceptably in the local civil administration for a number of years. In 1890 he was elected to the city council from the First ward by a good majority, although he is a Democrat, and the ward and city are conceded to be Republican. In 1892 he was elected president of that body by a large majority, and as such served on the Special Water committee, which in 1892 placed in operation the ten-million gallon pumps. The following year he removed to the Fifth ward, of which he has since been a resident. In the spring of 1900 a vacancy occurred on the school board of the ward, and Mr. Shissler was unanimously chosen to the position. His greatest honor from his fellow citizens, however, was received in the spring of 1898, when he was nominated and elected mayor of Lancaster, serving one term in that office. No more convincing evidence of the high esteem in which he is universally held could be given. Mr. Shissler is an ardent worker in the Democratic party, and has served several years as secretary of the City Democratic committee.

In 1879 Mr. Shissler was married, in Lancaster, to Miss Alice Anderson, a native of Warrenton, Va., whose father, Perry Anderson, was engaged in business in that State, retiring after the war and making his home in Lancaster. Three children have blessed this union, Henry, Walter (deceased) and Clyde. The family have a fine home at No. 119 Charlotte street. Mrs. Shissler is an intelligent woman. In religious connection she is a member of the Duke Street Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Shissler affiliates with Lodge No. 43, F. & A. M.; Emanuel Lodge, No. 1104, I. O. O. F.; the Knights of the Golden Eagle; the Knights of Malta; and the Jr. O. U. A. M.

MARTIN F. WITMER, a native-born citizen and most respected farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, was born April 2, 1850, on the homestead on which he still lives, two miles west of Millersville, son of Christian K. and Susan (Funk) Witmer. He acquired his education in the public schools, and continued to assist his father until 1878, when he began operations on his own account, and is now classed among the leading and most progressive agriculturists of Manor township.

On Dec. 5, 1877, Martin F. Witmer married Elizabeth B. Harnish, who was born on Chestnut Hill April 20, 1854, daughter of Levi and Leah (Butt) Harnish, the former of whom died Feb. 12, 1902, aged eighty-five years, five months, ten days, after an illness of nine weeks. This marriage has been blessed with five children, viz.: Leah H., born April 8, 1880; Alice H., Sept. 28, 1881; Levi H., Jan. 4, 1884; Elizabeth H., March 11, 1886; and Simon H., Aug. 20, 1888 (died Oct. 28, 1893). The family worship at the Mennonite Church, are among the most respected residents of Manor township, and their homestead of sixty acres is a model of neatness and comfort.

Abraham Witmer, grandfather of Martin F. Witmer, was also a native of Manor township. He married Maria Kilhiffer, and by her became the father of four children, namely: Jacob, Abraham, Betsey (who was married to Christian Charles), and Christian K., all of whom lived and died in Manor township.

Christian K. Witmer was born in Manor township June 24, 1819, and was reared a farmer. He first married Susan Funk, who bore him two children, Abraham F. and Martin F., both farmers of Manor township. His second marriage was to Elizabeth M. (Kindig) Doerstter, daughter of John Kindig, and to this union were born three children, namely: Mary, wife of John Krieder; Fannie; and Lizzie, widow of Aaron Newcomer. Elizabeth M. Witmer died Nov. 7, 1900, aged eighty-two years, twenty-two days; she was sick but one day, having had a stroke of paralysis early in the morning. Christian K. Witmer died July 22, 1902, aged eighty-three years, twenty-seven days. The surviving members of the family are all Mennonites, and as the Witmers are among the oldest residents of the township, they are held in very high esteem by their neighbors.

DAVID C. HAUCK. Andrew Hauck, the grandfather of David C., was reared on the line between Bucks and Lancaster counties, and was a laborer in his active years, which were very largely spent in Earl and Salisbury townships. He married Catherine Fiar, and they became the parents of ten children: John, Andrew, William, David, Matthias, Hannah, Barbara, Peggy, Catherine and Mary, all deceased excepting the two last named.

William Hauck, father of David C., was reared to the life of a laborer, and worked among the farmers of Salisbury and Earl townships, owning a small home in the former township. He married Miss Margaret Caffery, a native of Lancaster county, who died about 1890, at the age of sixty-five years. William Hauck died at the age of fifty-six, in 1875. Both were members of the Methodist Church. They were the parents of eight children: Lucetta (deceased) married Jonathan Wallace; David C. is mentioned below; William died at the age of eighteen years; Catherine (deceased) married Moses Wallace; Henry lives in Salisbury township; Margaret married Harry Griffith, of Paradise township; Milton is a resident of Earl township; Diller is also a resident of Earl township.

David C. Hauck was born Feb. 25, 1845, in Earl township, and was educated in the local schools. When he was nine years of age he began working out among the farmers, working for wages until he was twenty-five years of age, when he began farming in Paradise township, near Kinzers, renting a farm of eighty-seven acres for five years. At the expiration of that period he bought twenty acres in Leacock township, of J. D. Warfel, which he sold ten years later, to buy eighty-one acres of Abraham Groff, a farm located in the southeastern part of Earl township, where he has made his home since 1885, and is engaged in general farming. In politics he is a Republican, and he has been supervisor of Leacock township for three years.

In December, 1868, Mr. Hauck married Miss Catherine Sweigart, who was born in Philadelphia, daughter of Barnhart and Julia Ann (Deffenbach) Sweigart, and they have six children: Elizabeth E., wife of Ludwig Pflaumer, a resident of East Earl township; J. H., at home; David F., at home; Ruth Ann; Naomi C.; and Ithamar A. Mr. and Mrs. Hauck are members of the Old Mennonite Church, and are numbered among the worthy and respected people of this county.

JOHN F. BALTHASER is one of the prosperous business citizens of Ephrata, being the proprietor of an extensive meat business, dealing in all kinds of fresh and salted meats, and supplying a large territory, with a constantly increasing patronage.

John F. Balthaser was born July 26, 1863, son of Jacob and Lena (Faust) Balthaser, natives of Berks county, where his grandfather, also named Jacob, was an extensive farmer. The father was born in 1839, and married Lena Faust in 1859, and they reared eight children: Howard, born in 1860; John F., born in 1863; Thomas, born in 1866; Franklin, born in 1868; Sallie, born in 1870, who married Alain Baker; Jacob, born in 1873, who lives in Reading; Emma, born in 1875, who married Harvey Noecker; and William, born in 1880, living at home with his father.

John F. Balthaser has had his own way to make in the world. When nine years of age the family removed to Reading, and there he was employed in a brickyard, receiving forty cents a day for the first year, after which he received one dollar per day. At the age of thirteen, during the panic of 1876, he worked for forty cents a day, walking three miles back and forth daily. He received his pay in scrip which was redeemable only at one store, in goods or in cash, at a discount of twenty per cent. At the age of sixteen he entered the brewing business, remaining at same about one year, and then entered a foundry in Reading to become a finished molder. Later he went to Denver, Pa., where he worked at brickmaking for about one year, and then engaged in the butcher business, making a success of it. But seeking a larger field for his business, he removed to Ephrata, Pa., and took in a partner; the firm failed, and Mr. Balthaser lost all he had. In spite of these drawbacks he started again, and, as he says, having had enough of a partnership business, he first worked for another butcher until he accumulated money enough to buy the first steer in order to start for himself. Ever since, by economy, industry and good management, he has been very successfully engaged in business.

John F. Balthaser was married March 7, 1885, to Miss Mary Baker, a daughter of Isaac and Fannie (Drybread) Baker, of Lancaster county, and six children have been born to this union: Jacob, July 4, 1886; Harry, July 22, 1888; Edna, May 29, 1889; John Jr., March 14, 1891; Maud, Dec. 10, 1893; and Isaac, April 15, 1896.

Mr. Balthaser has gained the confidence of the public by his invariably honest dealing. His possessions number several nice buildings in the borough, and he stands well as a citizen. For many years he has been a stanch Republican, and has been twice elected a member of the Borough Council. He is fraternally connected with the I. O. O. F. and with the Sons of America, and in religion is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church.

GEORGE LEIBLEY, a well-known resident of Lancaster, living at No. 634 East King street, and who has been in the United States Railway Mail Service for many years, belongs to a very old Lancaster county family, his ancestors having lived here for generations. Indeed, no family name in the region has been more familiar than that of Leibley during the past century. Jacob Leibley, father of George, was one of the pioneer butchers of Lancaster. He entered into rest in 1852, aged sixty-nine years, while the mother, who was Charlotte Miller before marriage, and a native of Lancaster, passed away in 1885, aged seventy-nine years.

George Leibley was born Feb. 12, 1843, on the old family home on South Queen street, where all the members of his family were born. After receiving a partial education in the public schools, he left at an early age, to become a printer's apprentice. He had just finished his apprenticeship when, in 1861, he enlisted as private in the 79th Pennsylvania Volunteers, serving over three years. He was detailed from the ranks and made a clerk at Gen. Negley's Division Headquarters, and later was transferred to the commissary department at Gen. George H. Thomas's Headquarters, Army of the Cumberland. His service ended, Mr. Leibley again went to printing, but was soon appointed a route agent on the Pennsylvania railroad. After continuing thus two years he left that service, and soon afterward was appointed clerk in the House of Representatives Post Office, Washington, D. C., serving there for two sessions, having been appointed to that position by Thaddeus Stevens, then member of Congress from this district. In 1889 Mr. Leibley was re-appointed to the United States Mail Service, in which he still remains, running from New York City to Pittsburg.

On May 19, 1866, Mr. Leibley was married to Miss Mary Clara McCarter, daughter of the late Arthur McCarter, of Norristown, Pa., and niece of the late Col. James McCarter, a veteran of the Civil war, and who was a clergyman, having ministered for a time to the people of the First M. E. Church, of Lancaster, the older members of which still hold him in loving remembrance. To Mr. and Mrs. Leibley have come seven children, one of whom died in infancy. Blanche, who was the wife of William D. D. Long, entered into rest June 17, 1898, leaving two children, one a boy babe only a day old, who has ever since been a member of the household of his grandfather, George Leibley. The surviving children are Arthur, who is employed at John Wanamaker's, Philadelphia; Mildred, wife of C. J. Rhen, of the firm of Rhen & Reese, job printers on North Queen street; Katharine, at home; Albert, in the jewel setting department of the Hamilton Watch Factory; and Harold, at school.

Mr. Leibley is a Lutheran in his religious faith, and the only organization to which he belongs is that of the Railway Mail Service Relief Associations. Of genial, generous nature, possessing fine conversational powers, Mr. Leibley is a most companionable gentleman, and the regret is that owing to the responsible duties which call him from home so much of his time his fellow-citizens see so little of him.

WILLIAM C. WHITESIDE. The commercial life of Tayloria, Lancaster county, is well represented by William C. Whiteside, the well-known merchant and justice of the peace, who was born in Colerain township, May 6, 1866, a son of James and Elizabeth (Irwin) Whiteside, also of Colerain township.

James Whiteside was born in November, 1825, and died in 1893, being a son of Robert Whiteside, who came from Ireland to Lancaster county, about one hundred years ago, settling in Colerain township, where he lived and died. He was the father of four children: Samuel, Robert, John and James, all now deceased. About 1857, James married Elizabeth Irwin, a daughter of Peter and Elizabeth Irwin, of Chester county. This marriage was blessed with five children: John W., of Colerain township; J. Charles; Samuel P., of Colerain township, all farmers; William C.; and one now deceased. During his lifetime, James Whiteside was among the highly respected citizens of the township, and at the time of his death, he owned four fine farms.

William C. Whiteside was reared upon his father's farm, and received his education first in the district schools and later in the excellent academy of Colerain township. In 1889, he embarked in a general merchandise business at Tayloria, and has continued in this line with marked success, ever since. He served also as postmaster, until his election as justice of the peace in 1894 necessitated his resignation. He discharged the duties of that office to the entire satisfaction of all. In 1894 he was first appointed justice of the peace, and having been re-elected, still holds that important office. In politics he is a stanch Democrat in his views. In addition to his other interests, Mr. Whiteside owns one-quarter interest in a fine farm of 183 acres, and is regarded as one of the substantial men of the township. The stock carried in his store is thoroughly modern, well selected, and offered at very low prices, while the service is excellent. Knowing the needs of his customers, Mr. Whiteside is able to cater to them, and as a result enjoys a very large patronage.

On Aug. 29, 1888, Mr. Whiteside was married to Miss Jennie R. Taylor, of Little Britain township, a daughter of B. F. and Ruth (Kirk) Taylor, of Britain township, old settlers of this locality. Her grandfather, Joseph C. Taylor, was a farmer and merchant at Tayloria for many years, and the place was named for this estimable gentleman. Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside have had eight children: Violette Ruth, born April 27, 1889; Joseph Taylor, born July 9, 1891; William Clymer, Jr., born Dec. 10, 1893; Edward Craig, born Feb. 6, 1895; Benjamin Franklin, born Nov. 14, 1896; Susanna Jane, born July 20, 1899; Frances Elizabeth, born March 21, 1901, died Sept. 17, 1901; and David Malcolm, born Sept. 6, 1902. Although a young man, Mr. Whiteside has firmly established himself in the confidence of the community, and is regarded as one of the leaders in local affairs. Genial, open-hearted, generous, beloved in his home and esteemed in the community, his success in life is something of which he may well be proud, although it is but the just reward of his honest efforts.

HIRAM L. DETWILER, general farmer and proprietor of a valuable sand pit in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born in York county, Pa., Oct. 6, 1834, and is a son of Christian and Elizabeth (Landis) Detwiler, natives of Lancaster and Chester counties, respectively. In 1837 the parents returned with their children to Lancaster county, settling near Columbia, in West Hempfield township, where the father followed farming the remainder of his life, dying in 1851, when seventy-three years old. The mother survived him until 1890, passing away at the remarkable age of ninety years, a member of the United Brethren Church. Her remains were interred in the Mountville cemetery. To the marriage of Christian and Elizabeth Detwiler were born seven children, namely: Elias, Joseph, Levi, Henry, Jeremiah, Hiram L. and Zachariah, all of whom are deceased with the exception of Hiram L., whose name opens this sketch.

In the city of Lancaster, Pa., in 1859, Hiram L. Detwiler married Elizabeth Kauffman, and to this union were born twelve children, namely: David K., who died at the age of five years, two months, three days; Abraham K., married, and employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Columbia; Mary K., wife of Tobias Shupp, of East

H. L. Detweiler

Hempfield township; Samuel L., married, who is with the railroad company in Lancaster; Elizabeth K., who died young; Daniel K., a machinist in Columbia, married; Isaiah K., at home; Solomon K., married and at home; Horace K., married and at home; Emma K., who died at the age of fourteen years; and Harry K. and Wilson K., at home.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Kauffman) Detwiler was born in West Hempfield township May 28, 1840, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Roop) Kauffman, of the same township, where he was an extensive farmer and tanner, and a very influential citizen, being a director of the Farmers' National Bank of Lancaster, and a leader in the Mennonite Church. Jacob Kauffman died in 1865, at the age of eighty-one years, and his widow died at the same age, in 1881; their remains are buried in the Silver Spring cemetery. To Jacob Kauffman and his wife were born seventeen children, of whom seven reached, or nearly reached, mature age: Susannah, widow of Thomas Carter; David, now deceased; Leah, of Mountville, unmarried; Mary, wife of John Piffer, a farmer at Millersville; Elizabeth, Mrs. Detwiler; Samuel, who died in 1900; and Catherine, who died when a young woman. The remaining ten died in infancy.

Hiram L. Detwiler was only in his seventeenth year when his father died, and from that time has taken care of himself, first working four years on a farm for his brother Joseph, and then working for his brother Henry, until 1859, the year of his marriage. He then rented a farm for two years, after which he purchased his present farm of sixty-eight acres, on which he has a valuable sand pit, as has been intimated. He has recently made some changes in the operation of his sand pit, a corporation having been formed, which continued operations under the name of the Detwiler Sand Company. Mr. Detwiler is also interested to a limited extent in sundry gold and silver mines at Breckenridge, Summit Co., Colo., in partnership with his nephews, but it will require some little time as yet to develop them. In politics Mr. Detwiler is a Democrat.

MICHAEL F. BOWERS is a citizen of Lancaster who has risen from comparative obscurity to a high place in the public esteem. He is extensively engaged in general house painting and decorating, and is identified with some of the most ambitious undertakings in that line in his part of the county.

Mr. Bowers was born in East Lampeter, this county, April 6, 1857, of stanch Teutonic ancestry. His parents, John and Maria M. (Arnold) Bowers, were born in Germany, and emigrated to the United States in 1847. John Bowers settled in Lampeter township, where he engaged in farming for some years, afterward working in the cotton mills of Lancaster. For ten years he was employed by the city, and in 1895, he retired from active life, taking up his residence with his son, Michael F., in 1900. He was born in 1820, and is therefore eighty-two years of age, yet he possesses unimpaired many of his best faculties. He is a Catholic in religious belief, and a member of St. Peter's Society. Mrs. Bowers died in 1874, at the age of forty-nine, and is buried in the cemetery of Zion Lutheran Church, of which she was a member. Mr. and Mrs. Bowers were the parents of the following children: John C., deceased; Margaret, deceased; Frederick, an ice merchant of Lancaster; Conrad A., engineer of the Lancaster city water works; Michael F.; Elizabeth, deceased; Ernest C., a cigar manufacturer of East Petersburg, Pa.; Jacob A.; William, deceased; and Albert, deceased.

Michael F. Bowers was reared on the paternal farm, attending the district schools of his neighborhood. When eighteen years of age he left the home place and lived for a year in Lancaster, where he found employment in a furniture factory and learned the trade of painter. This peaceful occupation was interrupted by his enlistment in the regular United States army for five years, during which service he was stationed on Davids Island, New York harbor, for two years, was assigned later to Co. D, 20th Infantry, Col. E. S. Otis commanding, at Fort Brown, Texas, where he remained for a year, and was then at Fort Dodge, Kans., for six months. At Fort Reno, Indian Territory, Mr. Bowers was discharged in October, 1883. He rose to the rank of first sergeant, an office maintained during the last two years of his service. This military experience was augmented by his service from 1884 to 1887 as captain of Co. C, 8th regiment, P. N. G., from which he resigned to engage in painting for the railroad. He also commanded Lancaster Commandery No. 77, M. B. K. G. E., during the years intervening between 1892 and 1900.

After his five years of service with the United States army Mr. Bowers returned to Lancaster and resumed his association with the furniture company for a couple of years, and for the following seven years was employed as painter by the Pennsylvania Railway Company. In 1891 he started in business for himself as a painter and decorator, and the wisdom of this departure has been repeatedly demonstrated in the meantime, for he has a large patronage, and thoroughly understands the highest tenets of his interesting and constantly improving occupation.

Mr. Bowers married Cecelia M. Dinkleberg, a native of Lancaster, born in August, 1861, daughter of Philip Dinkleberg. Mr. Dinkleberg was born in Germany, as was also his wife, and both came to America when children. He was a prominent contractor in Lancaster, and erected some of the most pretentious buildings there, including the Farmers' National Bank, the Fulton National Bank, Zion Lutheran Church, Trinity chapel, and the steeple of the Presbyterian Church, besides other structures of equal importance in the growth of the city.

To Mr. and Mrs. Bowers have been born three children: Albert G. and Florence C., both attending high school; and Maria M., in the grammar school. Mr. Bowers is associated with the F. & A. M., Lodge

No. 43; the Knights of Pythias, Lodge No. 68; and the K. of G. E., Castle No. 292. In October, 1899, he became a member of the Master House Painters and Decorators Association of Pennsylvania, and is a member of the executive board. In September, 1902, he organized the prominent master painters of his city into a local association, of which he was elected first secretary. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, and politically is an independent Republican.

JOHN H. GAMBER was, like many other old residents of Manor township, Lancaster county, born at the homestead which has been the residence of his family for many generations, and in which both his grandfather and his father first saw the light of day. He is a son of John L. and Fannie D. (Herr) Gamber, and a grandson of Rudolph and Mary (Landis) Gamber. The family are Mennonites in religious faith, and in politics both John H. Gamber and his father have been staunch Republicans.

John L. Gamber was a farmer, as is also his son, John H. His wife, who is a daughter of David S. and Elizabeth (Dentlinger) Herr, survives him, making her home with her son, John. Four children were born to them, of whom John H. is the third; of the others, Alice is the wife of Benjamin Stauffer, of Manor township; Fannie married John S. Heller, a farmer of East Hempfield township; David H. died in boyhood.

John H. Gamber was born Sept. 5, 1866, received a good common-school education, and upon the death of his father succeeded to the management of the home farm. In 1893, in company with John D. Herr, he began buying and packing tobacco, having the same packed near Mountville, and the business has steadily grown and prospered. In 1899 the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Gamber now carrying on the business on his own account. During three years, also, he and Mr. Herr were interested in operating a mill and grain warehouse near Mountville. Mr. Gamber's present tobacco warehouse covers a site of 80 by 36 feet, and is three and a half stories in height. He also has other interests there, being a stockholder and director in the Mountville National Bank, as well as a stockholder in several of the Lancaster banks. His farm embraces nearly ninety acres, and is one of the best managed in the county.

Mr. Gamber has been largely the architect of his own fortune. He is a young man of broad, progressive ideas, keen intelligence, quick perception and tireless energy, and for such men there is no such word as fail.

EMANUEL SHELLY, a general farmer of Rapho township, was born in the same township, Aug. 1, 1844, son of Samuel and Mariah (Ager) Shelly, of Rapho township.

Samuel Shelly, the father, died in 1890, at the age of sixty-seven years, and is buried on his old farm; his widow still resides in the township, where she was born in 1819. Mrs. Shelly is a member of the Brethren in Christ Church, of which denomination Mr. Shelly was also a member during his lifetime. There were born to them the following children: Isaac, a retired farmer living in Rapho township; Samuel A., a farmer of Rapho township; Aaron; Anna; Mariah; and Emanuel.

In October, 1866, at Mt. Joy, Emanuel Shelly was married to Miss Anna Shearer. Her mother died in 1857, at the age of thirty-nine years, while her father still resides on the family farm retired from the active duties of life. There were born to Mr. and Mrs. Shearer the following children: Barbara, deceased wife of Henry Ginder; John W., a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Anna W., wife of Emanuel Shelly; Michael W., a Donegal township farmer; and Lizzie W., wife of Amos Heisey, of Mt. Joy township. Samuel Shearer married Miss Anna Herr for his second wife, and this union resulted in the following named children: Samuel H., a farmer of Mt. Joy; Amos H., a Mt. Joy farmer; Katie H., wife of George Hossler, a farmer at Bellaire, Pa. Mrs. Shelly's paternal grandfather's name was John Shearer, of Lancaster county.

Emanuel Shelly remained at home with his parents, gaining, in the meanwhile, an education in the common schools, until the time of his marriage, when he moved to his present home. He and his family are members of the Brethren in Christ Church, and are prominent in the social circles of the vicinity. Mr. Shelly has been frugal and careful in his habits and business transactions, and as a result has acquired a fine competency. Respected by all who know him, life has many pleasant phases for his contemplation.

THOMAS EVANS SIGLE was born in Upper Leacock township, July 6, 1848, and died Feb. 5, 1898. His remains rest in the cemetery connected with the Leacock Church. He was a son of John and Elizabeth (Evans) Sigle, of Lancaster county.

John Sigle was an undertaker in Upper Leacock township, and is now living in Bird-in-Hand, Pa., where he leads a retired life. He was born in November, 1822, and his second wife is still living. Mr. Sigle came to the farm occupied by his family in February, 1877, moving from a farm in Paradise township. Until his marriage his home was with his parents. After his marriage he worked in a mill near Willowstreet two years, and was at work on a farm in Paradise township two years. At the expiration of that period he settled on the farm where his family is found today, and where his life was spent. Mr. Sigle belonged to the Presbyterian Church. In his politics he was a Democrat. For some three years before his death he bought tobacco in connection with his farming, and was a popular and successful tradesman.

WALTER SCOTT BRENHOLTZ, M. D. Among the well-known citizens of Lancaster is Dr. Walter Scott Brenholtz, a physician and surgeon who, for the past five years, has been established in his comfortable offices at No. 36 East Walnut street, that city.

Dr. Brenholtz requires no ancestral stock to support his claims to eminence, nevertheless he has it. His great-great-grandfather, Frederick Brenholtz, although born in Germany, was an American patriot in the war of the Revolution, giving up his life for his adopted country at the battle of Brandywine.

Great-grandfather John Brenholtz was born in Chester county, where the family had been located, and Henry Brenholtz, the Doctor's grandfather, was a resident of and died in Hughesville, Lycoming county. Isaac John Brenholtz, son of Henry, and father of Dr. Brenholtz, was a native of Hughesville, Pa., where for many years he has been a hardware merchant. He married Miss Fanny Springer, daughter of Christian Springer, of Muncy Valley, in Lycoming county, and two children were born to this union: Miss Anna, at home; and Dr. Walter S., of Lancaster.

Walter Scott Brenholtz was born in Hughesville Nov. 20, 1867, and acquired his preparatory education in the public schools of his district, going then to Gettysburg College; and later to the University of Pennsylvania, from which great institution he graduated in 1892. Dr. Brenholtz began the practice of his profession in Columbia, where he remained five years, and then took a post-graduate course in the Ear, Nose and Throat, at the Polyclinic Hospital, in Philadelphia.

Dr. Brenholtz located in Lancaster Feb. 1, 1898.

He is a member of the Lancaster City and County Medical Societies, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of Columbia, the Lancaster City Pathological Society, and also of the State and American, or National, Medical Societies. In 1893 he was a delegate to the State Medical Society, and in 1897 to the National Medical Society. Dr. Brenholtz enjoys also the distinction of being a member of the medical staff of the General Hospital in Lancaster.

Dr. Brenholtz was married in 1893, to Miss Mary Alta Metzger, a daughter of Dr. G. W. Metzger, of Hughesville, brother of the late distinguished Judge Metzger, of Lycoming county. Three children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Brenholtz, Fanny Rebecca, Anna and Mary Metzger, all bright and unusually attractive little ones.

Religiously Dr. Brenholtz is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, where he is a deacon, and where he is the teacher of the Young Men's Bible class. Socially and professionally he enjoys the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens.

SAMUEL CAMPBELL. It is but natural that Samuel Campbell should choose an active vocation, for he comes of an ancestry who were prominent men and women, and whose lives were filled with public and business achievements. Mr. Campbell is engaged in the livery and feed stable business, operates a mail route, and has engaged extensively in detective work. He is a native of Columbia, where he was born Aug. 25, 1851, son of George K. and Julia (Lloyd) Campbell.

James Campbell, his paternal great-grandfather, was a native of the south of Ireland, emigrated to America, and located in Lancaster county. He married Emma Boggs, of Columbia, and both are buried at Lancaster.

William Campbell, the grandfather of Samuel, was born in 1809. He married Sarah Krumloff, of Norristown, Pa., and in 1836 settled at Columbia, where he followed the business of a merchant tailor until his death, in 1840, at the age of thirty-one years. His wife died in 1848. Their children were: George K.; John, who died young; Mary, who married Samuel Bennett, a railroad engineer, and died in Philadelphia, in 1878; Cyrus, who died young; Reuben, who died young; Emma, wife of Henry Fisher, retired, of Lancaster; and David, a farmer of Lancaster.

George K. Campbell, father of Samuel, was born in Norristown, Pa., Sept. 15, 1828. When eight years of age he came to Columbia with his parents, and remained a resident of that borough until his death. When a youth he acquired a knowledge of the tanner's and currier's trade, and was a little later connected with shipbuilding. But the activity of railroad work attracted him. He was yard engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for forty-seven years, and spent the last year of his life in deserved retirement from active duties. In religious faith he was a member of the United Brethren Church, and in politics a Republican. In November, 1850, Mr. Campbell married Julia Anna Lloyd, who was born at Penn's Grove, near Philadelphia, March 20, 1833, daughter of Capt. John B. and Julia (Bennett) Lloyd. Capt. John B. Lloyd was a sea captain, the son of John and Charlotte (Church) Lloyd, Quakers, of Churchtown, Pa., where they remained through life. Julia Bennett, wife of Capt. John B. Lloyd, was the daughter of John and Rachel (Keller) Bennett, natives of England and Ireland, respectively, who were married in Berks county, Pa. They had emigrated to America at the ages of eighteen and fifteen years, respectively, and John Bennett served in the Revolutionary army under LaFayette. John B. and Julia (Bennett) Lloyd were married in Columbia in 1824, and three months later returned to Philadelphia, the wife's former home. He died in 1877, aged seventy-five years, and she passed away in February, 1857, aged fifty-one years. The children of Capt. John B. and Julia (Bennett) Lloyd were as follows: Elizabeth, wife of David Bird, of Philadelphia; Isaac; Nathan; John; Julia A., Mrs. Campbell; Thomas; James; Charlotte; Rachel; Jacob G.; Mary C.; Charles; and Jane A. All are deceased except Elizabeth, Julia A., James and Jane A. James, who served in the army, is now a carpenter at Philadelphia. Charles was a bugler during the Civil war, and was among the missing.

To George K. and Julia Anna (Lloyd) Campbell were born nine children, namely: Samuel, whose sketch appears below; Melvina, wife of Joseph Cooper, a railroad engineer of Columbia, Pa.; Lloyd James, who died at the age of ten years; Sarah A., who married Dr. Samuel Roberts, a veteran of the Civil war, and who died in 1895; Elizabeth, wife of Tyson Simpson, a railroad conductor of Columbia; Minnie, who married Thomas Bennett, a seaman of Tampa, Fla.; Emma and Maggie, twins, the latter the wife of John F. McGee, a furniture merchant of Columbia, the former the wife of Stephen Baker, a railroad engineer of Columbia; and Ida M., who died young. George K. Campbell, the father, died Dec. 12, 1898, aged seventy years; his widow survives, a resident of Columbia.

Samuel Campbell has always made Columbia his home. Of an active temperament, he has traveled greatly as a dealer in horses, wagons, etc., and also in his extensive detective work, which he has followed for the past twenty years. In 1879 he embarked in the livery business, which he has continued uninterruptedly ever since.

Mr. Campbell married at Columbia, in August, 1870, Caroline Glosser, who was born in Columbia in February, 1852, daughter of Andrew and Sarah Glosser, natives of Germany, who emigrated to America and settled at Columbia. Andrew Glosser was a railroad engineer and was killed while on duty on his engine. To Samuel and Caroline Campbell were born two children: Charles and William. The latter died at the age of one year. Charles married Ada McCann, and to them have been born two daughters, Caroline and Mabel.

Samuel Campbell is a man of much force of character, a good business man, and his integrity is unimpeachable. He has strict regard for his word, and accordingly is very popular and is held in high respect by all who know him, enjoying the complete confidence of his fellow citizens. For the past eighteen years he has served as constable. Prominent in fraternal and social orders, he is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Home Circle Lodge, the National A. I. Co., of New York, etc. In politics he is a Republican, and in religious preference has been a constant attendant of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is remarkably well informed, and has a most excellent library.

DAVID LINCOLN HARNISH, the pioneer paint manufacturer of Lancaster, and one of the pioneer paint dealers of the city, belongs to one of the old and reputable families of Lancaster county. The old sandstone house in which his mother was born, in West Lampeter township, was the home of many generations of his maternal progenitors, and is one of the old and historic buildings of the county, having been frequently selected for illustrations in historical publications.

Michael Harnish, grandfather of David L., was a farmer in Conestoga township. His son, D. W. Harnish, father of David L., is a retired farmer, and is still living, having a cosy and attractive home at No. 131 East Walnut street, Lancaster. D. W. Harnish married Miss Barbara K. Mylin, a daughter of one of the best known farmers of West Lampeter township, and they had six children, four of whom are living: David Lincoln; Michael, a farmer on the old home farm in West Lampeter township; Harry, a traveling salesman for a wholesale shoe house; and Martin, a lawyer, who has associated himself with William R. Harnish.

David L. Harnish was born on the old homestead in West Lampeter in August, 1861, and, receiving his education in the home district, left school at the age of eighteen years, and worked on his father's farm until he was twenty-one. At that time he made a change in his life, becoming a clerk in the store of Marshall & Rengiers, of Lancaster, and later went to Newark, Del., where he had a good position as clerk in a store.

In June, 1885, Mr. Harnish struck out for himself, setting up a paint store in Lancaster, at Nos. 5 and 7 South Queen street. His beginning was modest, and made with misgivings, but there was something attractive in his way of doing business, and his trade quickly outgrew the limited quarters in which he had begun. In 1896 he moved to Centre Square and South Queen street. Meanwhile he had established an extensive paint factory on Charlotte street. The business still continued to prosper and increase, and in October, 1900, Mr. Harnish made a second move, this time to No. 235 North Prince street, which property he purchased, there building a factory and store-room. The dimensions of this building, which is of brick, are 40x145 feet, and it is three stories high. The leading paint which he puts on the market is the "Lancaster Ready-Mixed Paint," which is sold extensively throughout Pennsylvania and the neighboring States. The house carries paints, oils, varnishes, glass, brushes, cement, etc., and so popular are their brushes that they have been shipped as far as New Mexico. The concern is one of the largest and most important of the kind in the State, and Mr. Harnish has the very highest standing in the commercial world.

Mr. Harnish married Miss Elizabeth Brown, daughter of Elias Brown, a retired merchant of Stevens, Lancaster county, who is now living in one of the two handsome houses which he has erected on the Philadelphia turnpike, opposite the Lancaster County Hospital, Mr. Harnish living in the other. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Harnish three children have been born: Raymond B., David Paul and Anna B.

Mr. Harnish has behind him a long line of Menonite ancestors in both maternal and paternal lines, and his relatives, with those of his wife, constitute a very large and influential circle. Mr. Harnish is a Republican politically, but his business and church command all his attention.

JACOB BETZ, a prosperous farmer and quarry owner of the city of Lancaster, was born in Manheim township, Lancaster Co., Pa., Oct. 5, 1856, son of Jacob and Catherine (Meisel) Betz.

JACOB BETZ, SR., the father, now deceased, was a prominent business man of Lancaster, and passed away May 14, 1900. He was born Dec. 4, 1822, in Rheinbairn, Germany, son of Jacob and Magdelina (Huhn) Betz, natives of Dressen, Germany. The grandfather, also named Jacob, died in his native land, and the grandmother came to America about 1846. Jacob Betz, Sr., emigrated to America in 1842, settling in Manheim township, and later removing into the city of Lancaster. At first he was engaged in the dairy business and farming, but soon became interested in quarrying stone and sand for building and furnace purposes, having delivered stone for many years for Mr. Geiger, at the Lancaster furnace, and later for Peacock & Thomas. In 1859 he moved to Lancaster, and he had sand pits on Rockland and Ann streets, which are worked now by his son. He also had a pit in East Lampeter township. For many years he supplied the car shops at Altoona with all the core sand used. In addition to quarrying stone, Mr. Betz also took contracts for hauling it, and during his active business career, was a prominent factor in the commercial life of the city, by his enterprise and industry building up a fine business. In 1881 he moved to Lancaster township, where he remained up to the time of his death, on his farm of thirty acres near City Mill.

In 1889 Mr. Betz retired from business in favor of his son Jacob. Besides his large quarry business Mr. Betz, at the time of his death, was the owner of some forty new houses and a large tract of unimproved land in the Seventh ward, Lancaster; one tract of unimproved land in East Lampeter township; the farm in Lancaster township where he died, and had large amounts invested in bonds, stocks and mortgages. After his retirement Mr. Betz devoted the greater portion of his attention toward the building of houses for investments. During a long and useful life he was a consistent member of Zion Lutheran Church. In political matters he was a Democrat, but never desired nor sought office.

On April 19, 1851, Mr. Betz was married in Lancaster, Pa., to Catherine Meisel, and the following children were born to this union: Peter died at the age of three years; Mary died at the age of eighteen months; Jacob is mentioned below; Catherine married Charles Beidel, of Lancaster; Elizabeth married Mark Keeport, a jeweler of Reading. Mrs. Betz was born at Geltheim, Germany, Aug. 9, 1825, daughter of Nicholas and Barbara (Meiselin) Meisel, of Germany. Nicholas Meisel was a farmer in his native land, where he died in 1830, at the age of thirty years, while his wife died in 1835, at the age of thirty-two. They had two children: Christina, who died at the age of thirty-five years, married Fred Nevis, and he died in New Jersey. Catherine came to America in 1847, making the trip one year after her sister, and taking forty-five days in the journey; she settled in Lancaster. Mrs. Betz is very well preserved, and is cheered by her children's love and devotion after her life of hard work.

Jacob Betz, Jr., was reared upon the farm, receiving an education in the English and German branches at Zion Lutheran Church School. In 1871, he left school (at the age of fourteen years) and commenced to work with his father, whom he assisted on the farm and in the sand and stone business until 1889, when the father, retiring, left all the business to him. He has continued to deliver and ship core sand to many foundries, also building sand and stone, and he is the executor of his father's estate, which he oversees and manages for the heirs. Mr. Betz owns a large number of building lots in Lancaster, on which he has built some twenty new houses, and also has four acres within the city limits.

In March, 1889, Mr. Betz was married, in Lancaster, to Elmira Throne, and the following children have come to their marriage: Jacob, born in December, 1898; Clarence, born in March, 1891; Catherine, born in December, 1892; Luther, born in November, 1894; and Paul, who died in March, 1897. Mrs. Betz was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1856, daughter of Henry and Charlotte (Smith) Throne, the former of whom was a blacksmith of Pennsylvania. In politics Mr. Betz is independent, preferring to vote for the man whom he deems best fitted for the office in question. He and his family are members of the Zion Lutheran Church. Through industry and thrift Mr. Betz has gained a comfortable fortune, and his property is steadily increasing in value on account of its location. Mr. Betz commands the confidence and respect of the entire community, and the success which has attended his efforts is well merited.

ALBERT A. MANNING, the well-known postmaster and merchant of Highville, Lancaster county, was born at that place July 29, 1856, and is a representative of one of the old and highly respected families of the county.

When a lad of possibly fifteen years his great-grandfather, John Manning, a native of England, was sent to sea for the purpose of learning the art of sailing by his father, a man of some prominence and distinction in England. The boy was apprenticed to the captain of a sailing vessel, who proved to be a rascal, for upon reaching the port of Philadelphia he deliberately sold the boy to a farmer until he should attain his majority. He thus became the founder of the Manning family in Lancaster county, Pa., as it was here he was brought and served out his time to his master. After securing his freedom he decided to remain here, and purchased 160 acres of land from William Penn, in Manor township, on the road between Highville and Creswell, which land he cleared, making his home there until his death. Throughout his active business life he engaged in farming, but after arriving at old age he divided his property, giving each of his sons twenty acres. He was almost eighty years of age at the time of his death. He was twice married, and had children by both unions, his family including Joseph, Thomas, Jacob, William and Samuel.

Joseph Manning, a son by the second marriage, and the grandfather of Albert A., was born and reared on the old homestead in Manor township, and to the twenty acres of land given him by his father he added by purchase another twenty acres, making a good farm of forty acres, where he spent his entire life, dying at the age of sixty-four years. He married Verona Kendig, and they had eight children: Mary, deceased wife of Joseph Butt; Elizabeth, deceased wife of George Fry; Christian and John, who both died in Indiana; Fannie, deceased wife of Samuel Fry; Nancy, deceased wife of Henry Breneman; Susannah, who died in childhood; and Martin K., father of Albert A.

Martin K. Manning, the only one of the family now living, was born April 13, 1822, and grew to manhood on the home farm. During the greater part of his life he has followed fence building and post making, and owns a small tract of seven acres of land in Manor township, where he lives. In politics he is a Republican. In 1844 he was married to Catharine Ament, a daughter of George Ament, and of the eight children born to this worthy couple Sarah is now the wife of Cyrus Guntner, of Manor township; Henry and Isaiah both died in infancy; Elias died at the age of nineteen years; Delilah died in infancy; Fannie died in childhood; Catharine died in infancy; and Albert A. completes the family.

Albert A. Manning is indebted to the public schools of Manor township for his educational advantages. He remained on the home farm until he attained his majority, when he was married, April 11, 1878, to Miss Amanda Nicholas, a native of Washington borough, and a daughter of Leonard and Mary (Otstatt) Nicholas. By this union were born six children: Harry N.; Ira, who died in childhood; Titus N. and Bertha, both at home; and Abram and Eleanora, twins, the former at home, the latter deceased.

At the age of eighteen years Mr. Manning commenced learning the carpenter's trade, which he followed for seven years, making his home in Highville. He next engaged in threshing for eleven years, and in 1894 succeeded John Ament in the mercantile business at Highville, where he has since successfully carried on operations along that line. After locating here he was made assistant postmaster, and on the death of his father-in-law, Leonard Nicholas, who was serving as postmaster, Mr. Manning was made acting postmaster, serving as such until McKinley was made President, when he was regularly appointed to the office, in 1897. In connection with his mercantile establishment he handles feed, flour, etc., and receives a liberal share of the public patronage. As a business man he is upright, honorable and energetic, and well merits the success that has attended his efforts. In political sentiment he is a Republican.

HARRY N. MANNING, eldest son of Albert A., assisted his father in the mercantile business from the age of thirteen years until he was twenty-three. He was always a bright boy and was well liked by the patrons. At the age of twenty-three he accepted a position as salesman with the Steinman Hardware Company, in Lancaster city, where he is engaged at the present time. On Dec. 3, 1902, he married Christina Lefever, of Highville, and they will reside in Lancaster city.

ELMER M. BRENNEMAN, a well-known resident of Manheim township, has his home on the family estate, just north of the city of Lancaster, and bears an old and honored name. He was born June 29, 1869, son of Adam B. and Mary M. (Myers) Breneman. His father was a son of Adam Breneman, of Turkey Hill, Manor township, was born and reared in Manor township, and became a farmer, locating after his marriage on the farm where the family still reside. His entire attention was given to farming. He was a man honored and respected by his fellow townsmen, and was called to serve on the school board. He married a daughter of Martin M. Myers, of Manheim township, and they became the parents of two children, Elmer M. and Minerva, the latter deceased in childhood. Adam B. Breneman united with the Menonite Church in 1878, and was a minister in that Church for thirteen years prior to his death, having charge of the Landis Valley Church. He received ordination from the hands of Bishop Christian Baumbarger in 1885. A devout and zealous minister, he was ever ready for the demands his high office made upon him, and was especially interested in missionary work. He died Feb. 17, 1898, at the age of sixty-three years, and his widow is still living.

Elmer M. Breneman was born and reared in the home where he still resides. He attended the public schools until sixteen years of age, after which he entered H. C. Weidler's Business College, for one year. From that time he remained at home until his father died, when he took charge of the family estate. He has already made himself known as one of the spirited and enterprising young men of his township.

Mr. Breneman was married, in 1892, to Miss Lizzie K. Rupp, who was born April 3, 1868, a daughter of David and Sarah (Kurtz) Rupp, of West Earl township, and to this union has come one child, Adam Roy, born June 21, 1898.

HENRY F. BINKLEY, who ranks high as one of the energetic and thorough-going agriculturists of Manor township, Lancaster county, was born on the old homestead where he now resides, June 7, 1845.

The first of the Binkley family in Lancaster county of whom we have any record was his great-grandfather, Henry Binkley, in 1765, whose parents were probably from Germany and the founders of the family in this country. They were buried in the city of Lancaster.

David Binkley, son of Henry, was left an orphan there when quite small, and in early life learned the millwright's trade, becoming one of the best known representatives of that calling in the county, where he erected a large number of mills. In 1799 he purchased the farm now known as the old Binkley homestead, which consists of seventy-one acres of land and is pleasantly situated on the Little Conestoga, midway between Millersville and Safe Harbor. Here he made his home with his family throughout the remainder of his life, and carried on farming in connection with work at his trade. After his retirement from active life the millwright's business was conducted under his supervision by his son Christian, and his son-in-law, John Herr. He was a leader in the Reformed Mennonite Church, was widely and favorably known, and was called upon to administer many estates. He died Nov. 5, 1845, at the age of seventy-six years, nine months and twenty days, and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Yordy, died Sept. 6, 1846, at the age of seventy-seven years, nine months and twenty days. She was a sister of Peter Yordy, a lame man, who owned a farm in the center of what is now known as Lampeter Square, the name of which was derived from Lame Peter, by which epithet he was known. David and Mary (Yordy) Binkley had five children, namely: (1) David married and had two children, but he and his family died young. (2) Zephaniah is mentioned below. (3) Christian, a millwright and farmer, reared a family near Columbia, in Manor township, and died Dec. 24, 1872. (4) Mary wedded John Herr, and died March 20, 1890, at the age of eighty-nine years. (5) Elizabeth married Jonathan Binkley, and moved to Montgomery county, Ohio.

Zephaniah Binkley, father of Henry F., was born on the old homestead, Dec. 2, 1806, and died March 20, 1880, his remains being interred in the family burying ground on that farm. He adopted agriculture as a life work, and never left the farm where he was born. He married Catharine Frey, a daughter of Peter Frey. She was born Sept. 21, 1808, on a farm embraced within the Indiantown tract, in Manor township. She died Jan. 5, 1875. In the family of Zephaniah and Catharine (Frey) Binkley were nine children, namely: David F. is now living with his son-in-law, John N. Herr, in Manor township; an infant son died Aug. 20, 1828; Magdalena, born March 30, 1830, died Feb. 9, 1831; John has been a minister of the United Brethren Church since 1866, and is now a resident of Lebanon county, Pa.; Christian F. is a resident of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county; Peter died Sept. 21, 1871, at the age of twenty-nine years, eleven months and twenty-one days; Henry F. is mentioned below; Mary is the wife of Simon Reese of Lancaster; and Catharine is the wife of Isaac Keepert of Manor township.

Henry F. Binkley, whose name introduces this review, received a good common-school education, and in the spring of 1873 began farming on his own account, in Providence township, and after the death of his father, returned to the old homestead which he still occupies. He is an enterprising and up-to-date farmer, and has met with well-deserved success in his labors. By his ballot he supports the men and measures of the Republican party.

On Oct. 29, 1872, Mr. Binkley was united in marriage with Miss Catherine M. Kreider, who was born in West Lampeter township, April 11, 1846, a daughter of John and Leah (Mayer) Kreider. They have a family of three children; Emma K., born April 4, 1874, now the wife of Thaddeus R. Wiker; Jacob K., born Jan. 4, 1876, at home; and Annie K., born Jan. 14, 1879, also at home.

CHARLES A. LOCHER. The death of Charles A. Locher, March 31, 1892, removed from accustomed haunts in Lancaster an honored and prominent citizen, and one who embodied in his character and attainments the nobility of purpose, untiring zeal, and inherent thrift characteristic of the well born and well reared German. He was born about 1834 in Bavaria, Germany, in which country his father, Jacob Locher, was a well-known merchant, and a devout member of the Reformed Church.

In his native land Charles A. Locher learned something of chemistry, and after his removal to the United States and Lancaster in 1855, secured, through the influence of the druggist, James Smith, a clerical position in the Lancaster County National Bank. At the expiration of ten years, and after the death of Mr. Smith, Mr. Locher assumed charge of his drug store at No. 9 East King street, and continued to guide its affairs with the same discretion and business judgment evinced by its former owner. He possessed more than ordinary intelligence, and a fund of well assimilated knowledge, and a keen insight into human nature suggested an unflinching tact in dealing therewith. He was popular with all classes, and entered heartily and practically into all efforts to improve the general condition of the city, his name being foremost in many projects which else had lost their staunchest support. He was a member of various organizations in the town, and was identified with the Pennsylvania Pharmaceutical Society.

Mrs. Locher was formerly Margaret Parks, niece of James Smith, former proprietor of the Locher drug store. Mrs. Locher lives in a delightful home in one of the fashionable parts of Lancaster. She holds membership in the Lutheran Church, and her daughter Katherine in the Episcopal. Mr. Locher also left a sister, Caroline, the wife of Major Gen. Frederick Faber, of Munich, Bavaria.

EZRA GROFF, a substantial retired farmer of Upper Leacock township, still resides in the locality of his birth, which took place on Dec. 26, 1849, and he was a son of Samuel G. and Lydia (Hershey) Groff, the former of West Earl township and the latter of Upper Leacock township. The father was a merchant and postmaster at Mascot, Pa., operating a store there for twenty-seven years. From 1873 until his death, in 1891, he lived retired from activity, dying in the latter year at the age of eighty-four years, after a useful life. The death of the mother had occurred years before, in 1866, at the age of fifty-seven years. Their last resting place is on the old Hershey homestead. Mr. Groff was one of the wealthy men of the community, owning three large farms, which are now in the possession of his three sons,—Ezra, Rev. Hershey, and Milton. For many years Mr. Groff faithfully served his school district as director, taking a great interest in educational matters in his locality.

The children born to Samuel G. Groff and wife were: Anna, who married Benjamin Wenger of West Earl township; Mary, who died young; Lydia, who married Jacob Greider, a farmer of Upper Leacock township; Martha, who married John Rank, a farmer of Paradise township; Milton, a farmer of Upper Leacock township; Elam, who died at the age of nine years; Rev. Hershey, a farmer and also a German Baptist minister, and Ezra, of this sketch.

The fine old farm upon which Ezra Groff of this sketch has resided so many years, has been his home since he was four years old; he retired from active exertion in its cultivation at the marriage of his daughter, when her husband relieved him of duty.

This is considered one of the finest and most modern farms in this locality, the improvements being in excellent shape. Mr. Groff has always been a progressive and intelligent farmer and thoroughly believes in good machinery and the most scientific ways of cultivation, his fertile and productive fields for many years showing the results of his methods.

Mr. Groff was married on Nov. 28, 1873, in Lancaster to Miss Matilda Leman, and the daughter born to this union was Lizzie L., who married Aaron L. Groff, their one child, Ralph, dying in infancy. Politically Mr. Groff belongs to the Republican party, and both he and family are connected with the Menonite Church, where they are highly esteemed.

JOSEPH DETWILER. Prominent among the substantial and influential farmers of Mt. Joy, now living somewhat retired from active life, is Joseph Detwiler, one of the most esteemed citizens of his part of Lancaster county.

Joseph Detwiler was born April 1, 1820, in West Hempfield township, son of Joseph and Susan (Garber) Detwiler, the former of Lancaster county, and the latter of York county. From Lancaster Joseph Detwiler, Sr., moved to York county in 1825, settling on a farm near Wrightsville, and there engaged in farming. His death occurred April 30, 1870, when he was aged eighty-one; his wife died the previous August, and both were buried in the Wrightsville cemetery. During his long life Mr. Detwiler had been prominent in public affairs, was supervisor, and for the same length of time was the efficient county commissioner, while for a number of years he was the manager of the Wrightsville pike; at his death this latter office was placed in the hands of his son David. Joseph Detwiler, Sr., was an extensive farmer, owning two farms in York county and one in Lancaster county. His political faith was that of the Democratic party, and in this respect his son Joseph follows his esteemed father's example. The children born to Joseph and Susan Detwiler were as follows: David, who was a farmer and was the manager of the Wrightsville pike and a director in the Wrightsville Bank, died in Wrightsville; Joseph is mentioned below; Daniel is a retired banker of Columbia, Pa.; Miss Susan is a resident of York, Pa.; Solomon died in Columbia, where he was the cashier of the First National Bank; Anna, a resident of York, Pa., is the widow of Abraham Heaston, who was a farmer, miller and well-known distiller (the death of Mr. Heaston took a prominent man from this neighborhood).

In his sixth year Joseph Detwiler, whose name introduces this record, accompanied his parents upon the family's removal to York county, and grew up on the farm which adjoins the town of Wrightsville. In 1849 he moved to a farm in Rapho township, this county, located one mile north of Mt. Joy, where he remained until 1877, when he took up his residence in that pleasant town. Mr. Detwiler is a man of large means, owning three large, well stocked farms, two stone quarries, and a lime kiln, which has been operated since 1873, and he also has conducted, in his interest, hay and straw baling and stone crushing. He is also financially interested in the Union National Bank, to which he has given the support of his name as one of its directors, since its organization in 1860.

On Sept. 24, 1844, Mr. Detwiler married Anna Eberly, of Donegal township, and to this marriage the following named children were born: Elmira, who married C. G. Shirk, a retired farmer of Mt. Joy; Susan, who married Adam B. Bear, a retired farmer of Rohrerstown, this county; Emma, widow of Calvin C. Budding, a lime manufacturer of Wrightsville; William B., the capable manager of his father's interests in farming, stone and lime, who also looks after the other real estate owned by Mr. Detwiler; Eva, who is the widow of Hon. H. H. Heise, of Columbia, Pa., whose sad death in a trolley car wreck, near Chickies Park, on Aug. 9, 1896, caused wide-spread regret; and Alice, who married H. H. Meyers, a farmer, and manager of the Farmers' Creamery Company (he also raises gold fish).

Mrs. Anna (Eberly) Detwiler was born in East Donegal township, and died Feb. 12, 1891; she is buried in Mt. Joy cemetery. Her parents were Henry and Anna (Leib) Eberly, of Mt. Joy township, where the former was a farmer, and for many years president of the Union National Bank of Mt. Joy. His death occurred in February, 1876, when he was aged eighty-one, and his wife passed away from earth in 1870, at the age of sixty-six. Both were leading members of the Evangelical Church, and they were interred in Eberly cemetery, which was a part of his estate. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Eberly were: Mary, Anna, Simon, Henry, Christian and Benjamin, all deceased but the last named, who is a hardware merchant in Mt. Joy.

Aside from filling the office of councilman for six years, Mr. Detwiler has refused public office, but he continues to be a busy man, for his active brain will not permit him to entirely lay aside business cares. Possessing much vitality and excellent health, he enjoys overlooking the various lines of work which are performed by younger, but no more capable, instruments. Of his family he has great reason to be proud, all of them occupying honorable positions in the business and social world. He has twelve grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren, who are the delight of his advancing years.

DAVID HERR BARTHOLOMEW, proprietor of the Lancaster Planing Mill Co., and one of the leading business men of Lancaster, has been identified with the industrial interests of that city through his business career, and has been no small factor in the development of many lines of commerce.

Mr. Bartholomew was born Jan. 4, 1848, near Strasburg, Pa., son of Mathew and Hester Ann (Herr) Bartholomew, both of Lancaster county. The father was a millwright and followed that trade all his life, dying at the age of fifty-seven, in 1863. The mother died in 1851, aged thirty-three. They were laid away in Strasburg cemetery. Their children were as follows: Amanda (deceased) was the wife of Robert E. Bunce; Mary C. married (first) Jonathan Holt, and (second) William Fichthorn, of Reading; Benjamin F. lives in Lancaster; John died in infancy, and David H. was the youngest.

David Herr Bartholomew had the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of Lancaster, and at the age of seventeen was prepared to enter upon his apprenticeship to the machinist trade. He was employed in a cotton mill in Lancaster for four years, and then embarked in the saw mill business and became a manufacturer of cigar box lumber, associating himself with his uncle, David B. Bartholomew; this partnership continued until the death of the latter, in 1885, when Mr. Bartholomew engaged in the same line upon his own account, and still continues it, at present individually; formerly there were three members of the firm known as the Lancaster Planing Mill Co., David H. Bartholomew, John W. Holman and Frank Spicer, Jr. The first location was across the street from the present site, but in 1896 Mr. Bartholomew sold that and purchased the valuable property and business which he has so ably managed ever since. The large brick structure now occupied was built by the firm of Wilson & Bradbury, in 1870, and covers two acres of ground. It is well equipped, and the establishment gives employment to forty men, the output being sash, doors, blinds and general mill work.

Mr. Bartholomew is an excellent man of business, and thorough in his management of the large concern with which he has so long been identified. Under his ownership the business has been much enlarged, and is now one of the leading lines of industry in the city. In politics he is a Republican, and fraternally he is connected with the I. O. O. F., K. of P., A. O. U. W. and Royal Arcanum. For eight years he served with usefulness in the city council, his administration being honest and clean. Mr. Bartholomew is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

In 1872, in Lancaster, Mr. Bartholomew married Miss Elizabeth Eckman, born in Lancaster, daughter of Henry and Anna (Hoak) Eckman, the former of whom was for many years a shoemaker in Lancaster county. His father was a well-known resident of the county; he was for many years afflicted with blindness, but it is related of him that so thoroughly did he recall localities that he was able not only to harness his horse himself, but to drive without accident to any part of the county he desired. To Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew have been born the following children: Anna, who died at the age of eight years; David B., who is a carpenter but now is employed by the Pennsylvania Railway Company, married Alice M. Raub; Miss Mary A., at home; Henry M., who married Hannah Hunter, and is an architect in Lancaster; Miss Amy C., Guy C., and Miss Anna E., at home; Elizabeth, who died at the age of six years; Sarah E., at home; John W., who died at the age of six years, and Edith, who died at the age of four years.

JOHN ADLAI CANNON (deceased), of Lancaster, though cut off in the prime of his life, was for a number of years one of the most respected business men in Lancaster, and the establishment which he founded is now being conducted by his widow, who is the only lady embalmer in Lancaster county.

Mr. Cannon was born July 23, 1858, at Wilmington, Del., son of James Cannon, a farmer of Delaware, and came to Lancaster in 1890, locating on West King street. Engaging in business as an undertaker and funeral director, he introduced new methods and features in that line, and as a result of his intelligence and earnest attention to his profession, established a lucrative business. He was a skilled embalmer, a graduate of Clark's College. In 1896 Mr. Cannon bought the grand old dwelling house that had been the home of the late Judge Hayes, at No. 27 South Prince street, and proceeded to remodel it, converting it into two dwelling houses. The porch and entrance which Mr. Cannon built on the portion now occupied by his widow, is one of the handsomest in the city. On Feb. 23, 1897, Mr. Cannon married Miss Amelia Elizabeth Long, further mention of whose family is made below, and two children were born to them: John Paul, now (1903) aged five years; and Mary Amelia, aged three years. Mr. Cannon entered into rest, July 7, 1901, in his forty-fourth year, after a lingering illness, and his widow has bravely taken hold of his business affairs, and endeavors to follow the lines laid down by Mr. Cannon, who always kept abreast with the most advanced methods. The establishment is equipped with the most modern conveniences, telephone, etc.

Taken from life in the midst of his usefulness, no citizen of Lancaster was more deeply regretted or more generally missed. Mr. Cannon was trustee of the St. Vincent de Paul, an association that looks after the poor of the church; a charter member of the Knights of St. Lawrence, of Wilmington, Del.; a member of St. John's, St. Michael's, St. Joseph's, and Leo XIII societies of Lancaster; a member and one of the organizers of Council No. 16, Catholic Benevolent Legion, of Delaware; and in business connection, a member of the State Board of Undertakers, and secretary of the Lancaster County Funeral Directors Association. He was identified with St. Mary's, St. Anthony's and St. Joseph's Catholic Churches, for he contributed to and was in fellowship with all of them, but he was a communicant and active member of St. Mary's, was buried from there, and his remains lie in the beautiful St. Mary's cemetery, near those of the lamented Very Reverend Father Bernard Keenan, who was for more than half a century the beloved priest of St. Mary's.

Frederick G. Long, father of Mrs. Cannon, was long a well-known citizen of Lancaster, and entered into rest in May, 1894, in his seventy-fourth year. He married Miss Mary C. Gegg, of Lancaster, who now makes her home with Mrs. Cannon, and they had twelve children, eight of whom survive, as follows: Louis G., who is a grocer, at Lime and Dauphin streets; Joseph, a tinsmith and plumber, at East Orange and Plum streets; Mary A., wife of John Yeager, a baker of Newark, N. J.; Frank A., a grocer, at East Chestnut and Marshall streets; Amelia Elizabeth, widow of John A. Cannon; Harry A., a salesman in Watt & Shand's New York Store in Lancaster; Albert, a salesman in Wanamaker's, New York City, and Rosa Helen, who makes her home with Mrs. Cannon. No family in the city can boast of members who have led more worthy lives.

MICHAEL P. THOMAS, an engineer in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, was born in Columbia, Lancaster county, April 2, 1855, and is a son of Michael and Catherine (Shillott) Thomas, of Bavaria, Germany, who were married in Lancaster, Pa., in June, 1854.

Michael Thomas, the father, was born June 28, 1828, in Bavaria, Germany, a carpenter by trade, and, in 1852, came to America and settled in Columbia, where he still lives retired from business. His wife was a sister of Frank Shillott, deceased (a sketch of whose life will be found on another page), and died in 1894, when sixty-five years old, devout in the faith of the Catholic Church. Their children, nine in number, were born in the following order: Frank, died in infancy; Michael P. and Ulrich, twins, of whom the former is the subject proper of this sketch, and the latter died when five years and six months old; Kate, in St. Francis Convent; William, who died in infancy; Elizabeth, also in St. Francis Convent; Charles, a car inspector in Lancaster; Mary, wife of John Haller, of Thurlow, Pa., and Frank (2), a brakeman in Columbia. The paternal grandparents, Michael and Elizabeth Thomas, came to Columbia, Pa., in 1855, from Germany. He was a butcher by trade. Michael was their only child. The maternal grandparents were Frank and Victoria Shillott.

Michael P. Thomas at the age of fourteen years began driving a team, and this was his occupation for three years; he next followed boating on the river five years, and then for fourteen months was employed as brakeman by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; he then served as fireman for the same company seven years and six months, when he was promoted to engineer.

On Nov. 20, 1884, at York, Pa., Mr. Thomas married Miss Catherine Elsesser, and to this union have been born nine children, as follows: Anastasia, Elizabeth, Alfreda, William, Francis, Anthony, Damian, Agatha and Cuthbert Joseph, the three last named being deceased. Mrs. Catherine (Elsesser) Thomas was born in York county, Nov. 2, 1863, and is a daughter of John and Barbara (Moser) Elsesser, natives of Bavaria, Germany, and York Co., Pa., respectively. John Elsesser was born in 1837, and his wife in 1835. John came to America in 1847 and for eighteen years conducted a hotel in York county, and is now living in retirement. The children born to John and Barbara Elsesser were named as follows, in order of birth: Mary, married to George Selack, plumber in York county; John, deceased; Catherine; Margaret; wife of John Kaufhold, of Columbia; Albert, George, Charles and Harry, all of York. The family are all pious members of the Catholic Church, to which they contribute liberally of their means in aid of its good work.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Thomas were Conrad and Elizabeth Elsesser, the former of whom died in Germany and the latter in York Co., Pa.; her maternal grandparents, Abraham and Rachel Moser, were natives of Maryland and York Co., Pa., respectively. Both died in York county.

Michael P. Thomas is in religion a true Catholic, and in politics a Democrat. He has led a consistent Christian life, and is greatly respected wherever known.

WILLIAM H. KENNEDY. When it comes to a question of prominence, substantiality and high esteem, no citizen of Lancaster county is more justly representative than William H. Kennedy, of Fulton township. A self-made man, schooled in early years to the hard, practical view of life, by the application of those principles of industry and economy which in every age of the world have been rewarded, William H. Kennedy has also won his measure of success.

The birth of William H. Kennedy was on Dec. 13, 1858, in the township of his present residence, and he was a son of John and Elizabeth (James) Kennedy, both also of Fulton township, where John Kennedy was long known as a farmer and also hotel keeper. John Kennedy came of sturdy Irish ancestry, and in his earlier years was engaged in rafting on the Susquehanna river. In his political convictions, he was always identified with the Democratic party, and is remembered as an honorable man and respected citizen. His marriage was to Elizabeth James, and they had a family of nine children, seven of whom grew to maturity: Mary, who is the wife of W. R. Maxwell, a coach-maker of Fulton township; Hannah, who married William Walker, of Little Britain township; Virginia, who married R. S. Hamilton, of Little Britain township; John O., deceased; William H.; Margaret, who is the wife of J. C. Gorsuch, of Norfolk, Va., and Ida, who is the wife of J. M. Eckert, of Erie, Pennsylvania.

William H. Kennedy had his early rearing on a farm, and until the age of sixteen years, enjoyed the advantages afforded by the public schools. At that age he commenced to learn the cabinet making trade, at Wakefield, Pa., under W. R. Maxwell, but a boyish love of adventure and a desire to see something of the world, led him to remain but a short time here. For a considerable period, Mr. Kennedy traveled over the country, working principally in the various railroad shops, gaining many experiences, but finally he returned to Fulton township where on Jan. 4, 1882, he was united in marriage to Miss Laura Hensel, of Drumore township, and the four children born to this marriage were: John Russell, who is now in college; Henry Clay and Bertha M., at home, the other child having died young. Mrs. Kennedy was a daughter of Edwin F. and Mary J. (Moore) Hensel, who were natives of Maryland.

It was in 1885 that Mr. Kennedy embarked in the patent medicine business, in Harrisburg, Pa., a line of activity for which he seemed to be peculiarly well fitted, for fifteen years prospering in this business. Mr. Kennedy is still the proprietor of a large drug house in Harrisburg, and also of one in Reading, Pa., but he makes his home on his fine farm in Fulton township. This estate, both on account of its extent, its cultivation, its location and extensive and elaborate improvements, is one of the most attractive places in southern Lancaster county. His elegant, modern brick mansion, commodious and substantial barns, his sleek cattle and their comfortable housings, all testify to the excellent management of this ideal country home. Mr. Kennedy devotes his time to his interests here, his drug business in Harrisburg being under the efficient management of his brother-in-law, Philip K. Hensel, the firm name being Kennedy & Co., a house which stands high in commercial circles.

Mr. Kennedy is a staunch Democrat, and is liberal in his religious views, adopting no special creed, but he displays in a high degree the manliness of an excellent citizen, and is the promoter of progress and development in his section, the encourager of benevolent and educational enterprises, and the protector of his home and family.

EBERHART J. LAMPARTER, for many years associated with the commercial activity of the flourishing city of Lancaster, Pa., was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, July 6, 1846, a son of Eberhart and Elizabeth (Help) Lamparter, natives of the same locality.

Eberhart Lamparter, the father, came to America in 1853, and located in Lancaster, where he embarked in the manufacture of glue, and continued in the same line until his death. From a small beginning, he increased his facilities and the capacity of his plant, to meet the demands of his constantly growing trade, until his house ranked among the foremost of its kind in the county. His death occurred in 1869, when he was sixty-one years of age, and his wife survived until 1898, when her death took place at the age of eighty-eight years. This couple, who are buried in Woodward Hill cemetery, were the parents of the following children: George, engaged in manufacturing glue at the old factory; Jacob J., retired glue manufacturer, large landowner and real estate dealer of Lancaster; Elizabeth, unmarried and living in Washington, D. C.; Amelia, deceased at the age of fifty years; Pauline, unmarried and living in Lancaster; Judith, Mrs. Bauer, a widow, of Lancaster; Eberhart J.; Henry, deceased, and Sabina, deceased, married a Mr. Mertz.

Eberhart J. Lamparter of Lancaster, was reared upon a farm, attending the district school, and when eighteen years of age he was employed in a brewery, and engaged in that line for five years, in Lancaster, with Lawrence Knapp. Upon the death of his father, Mr. Lamparter took charge of the glue factory, and managed it for his mother, until her demise, when he purchased the property and is now sole proprietor of the business which is operated under the title of The Conestoga Glue Works. The buildings and grounds cover eleven acres, all located within the city limits, and upon a portion of the old homestead. All modern appliances are used in the conduct of the various processes of the business, and the product has gained a world wide reputation for its excellence. The present flourishing condition of the concern is due to the enterprise and excellent management of Mr. Lamparter.

Mr. Lamparter has never married, but is associated with a number of fraternal organizations, namely: the I. O. O. F., the K. of P., Seven Wise Men, Masonic order, in which he has taken sixteen degrees. His religious connections are with the Trinity Lutheran Church, in which body he takes an active part, and to whose support he is a liberal contributor. In politics, Mr. Lamparter is an Independent, preferring to vote as his conscience dictates, rather than according to party lines, although he has devoted more time to his business than to public affairs. Pleasant in manner, a thorough business man, he has firmly established himself in the confidence of the general public, and numbers many friends among his fellow townsmen.

WILLIAM F. YOHN, a well-known drover of Mountville, Lancaster county, was born in that village Aug. 15, 1865, a son of Edward F. and Mary A. (Baker) Yohn.

Edward F. Yohn was a son of John and Jane (Middleton) Yohn, and was born near Churchtown, Caernarvon township, this county, April 26, 1839. On May 5, 1863, he married Mary A. Baker, and to this union there were born the following children: Elnora, Jan. 23, 1864, married B. F. Mrs. Mary A. (Baker) Yohn was a daughter of Henry Baker, a farmer and blacksmith, and was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Feb. 8, 1841, and died Oct. 19, 1875. The second marriage of Edward F. Yohn occurred June 14, 1881, his bride being Annie B. Johnson, a daughter of Samuel Armstrong, a contractor, and native of Chester county, Pa., who was born in Sadsbury township, that county, Nov. 21, 1839. Edward F. Yohn settled in Mountville at an early age, and engaged in the cattle business, which he carried on very extensively and successfully. He was one of the organizers of the Mountville National Bank, and a director from its organization until his death. He was a public-spirited citizen and charitable, and very well and favorably known for his strict integrity and honesty. In politics he was a stanch Democrat.

William F. Yohn was trained to the cattle business from the time he was old enough to handle a gad, until he was taken into the business by his father as a partner, and since his father's death he has been conducting the business for himself. On April 14, 1897, he married Miss Emma Heise, daughter of B. Frank Heise, residing near Columbia borough, Pa., and to this union have been born two children; Fanny C., April 25, 1898, and Mary Ellen, Nov. 11, 1900. Mrs. Emma (Heise) Yohn was born on the Heise homestead, where her father still resides.

William F. Yohn is, fraternally, an Odd Fellow, and a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. In politics he is a Democrat. He is a member of one of the oldest and best known families in Lancaster county, and for this reason and because of his own intrinsic merits he stands very high in the esteem of the community in which he was born and reared.

JOHN E. SNYDER, an attorney of Lancaster, has attained a large law practice, to which he gives that close personal attention essential to success. He is the son of Edwin E. and Margaret C. Snyder, and grandson of Jacob and Margaret (Erisman) Snyder, residents of Lancaster city. The father, a native of Lancaster, was for many years foreman in the cotton mills at Lancaster, and died in 1886, aged fifty-six years. The mother survives and is still a resident of that place.

John E. Snyder was reared in his native city, and at the completion of his education entered the office of David G. Eshleman as a law student. In 1887 he was admitted to the Bar and located at Lancaster, where he has built up a large law practice. For many years he has been a director of the Northern National Bank of Lancaster. In politics he is a Republican, and for two years, in 1892 and 1893, was city solicitor. He is a member of the F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., and Mechanics. He was married in 1895 at Lancaster to Miss Minnie L. Esbenschade, daughter of Emanuel Herr Esbenschade, of Leaman Place, Lancaster county.

ADAM B. LONG, one of the foremost and most progressive citizens of Lititz, which city he has done much to build up and improve, was born at Neffsville, Manheim township, Feb. 2, 1855, son of Isaac and Sarah (Bear) Long. He was educated in the public schools and at Lititz Academy, and for twelve years after graduating from the last named institution followed the life of a farmer. Coming to Lititz he engaged in the coal and lumber business, and in 1891 became a partner in the firm of Bear & Long.

composed of Albert R. Bear and himself, the concern succeeding Hess & Bear, and the house having been originally founded by William Evans, in the sixties. They carry on an extensive business in lumber for building, as well as in coal and phosphates, and their plant is the largest of its kind outside of Lancaster city. In 1893 he was one of the chief promoters and organizers of the Lititz Water Works, and was made treasurer of the company owning and operating the same, which office he still fills. The following year (1894), with five others, he formed the company which erected the Lititz Electric Light Works, the first plant of this description to be installed in the borough. Not content with being connected with three important enterprises so beneficial to the city of his residence, in 1897 he became prominently identified with the founding of the Keystone Underwear Mill, of Lititz, which has a capacity of turning out two hundred dozen pairs of underwear daily. Of the company owning this establishment Mr. Long is secretary. In the year 1898, with thirteen others, Mr. Long applied for a charter and organized the Independent Telephone Co., of Lancaster county, Pa., which proved successful from a financial point of view, as well as from that of general utility. In 1901 the company sold out the plant to the United Telephone & Telegraph Co., at a good profit to the stockholders. In the spring of 1901 Mr. Long was elected a director of the Lititz National Bank.

As may be readily believed, a citizen of his progressive ideas and energetic nature has acquired not a little popularity. To a broad public spirit he joins a genial, generous temperament, a keen, alert intellect, and an unblemished name. He is, in politics, a life long Republican, and socially, is a member of Lititz Lodge, No. 1050, I. O. O. F.

On Nov. 5, 1877, Mr. Long was married to Mary, a daughter of Jacob H. Miller, of Ephrata, Lancaster county. Four children have been born to them: C. Eugene; Florence V., who died in infancy; Bertha; and Mabelle. Both Mr. and Mrs. Long are members of the Moravian Church.

SAMUEL S. CONNELLY, the popular and efficient agent of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad at White Oak station, belongs to one of the leading families of Penn township, and an old one of Lancaster county.

Grandfather Jacob Connelly lived a long and useful life in this county, following the trade of carpet weaving, and also owned a small farm. He was a pious and godly man, a member of the religious body known as the River Brethren. By his marriage to A. Ritter he became the father of fifteen children, many of whom and their descendants are still residents of Lancaster county: Nancy, deceased; John, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Geib; Jacob, deceased; Benjamin, a resident of Penn township; Catherine, deceased; Samuel, deceased; Joseph, of Rapho township; Henry, father of Samuel S.; Polly, widow of Henry Eby; Rebecca, wife of Samuel Gruber; Michael, deceased; William, deceased; Fannie, wife of Henry Gruber; and Abraham, deceased.

Henry Connelly, father of Samuel S., was born in Penn township in 1826, became a farmer, and followed that occupation until 1886, since which period he has been engaged in the coal business in White Oak. He is a valued member of the Baptist Church, and a man who enjoys the respect of the community. He married Susan Stonerod, and they became the parents of ten children: Benjamin, of Mt. Joy; Lizzie, Susan, John, Henry and Thomas, all deceased; Samuel S.; Jacob, a cigarmaker of Halfville; Catherine, wife of John McAllister; and Joseph, a farmer on the old homestead.

Samuel S. Connelly was born at Mt. Hope, Dec. 7, 1864, and lived at home with his father until he was twenty-seven years of age, acquiring his education in the public schools. Very early in his business career he displayed those qualities which gained for him the confidence of the management of the Pennsylvania & Reading Company, and he was considered the proper man to take charge of White Oak station, an office he has filled with satisfaction to all concerned. In 1895 he was appointed postmaster at that place, and now combines the duties of both offices. In addition he finds time to most efficiently manage his father's coal business, and is one of the most capable young business men of this community.

Mr. Connelly was married to Miss Susan S. Minnich, estimable daughter of Abram and Susan Minnich, and one child has been born to this union, which passed away in infancy. Mr. Connelly is not only devoted to the interests of the great corporation which he represents, but he is public-spirited, and identifies himself with all enterprises which seem to promise to be of benefit to his community.

AMOS M. GREIDER, general farmer, and one of the substantial and respected citizens of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born Sept. 3, 1850, on his present homestead, and is the youngest of the twelve children that crowned the marriage of Christian and Susannah (Miller) Greider, natives, respectively, of West Hempfield and Rapho townships.

Christian Greider engaged in farming until his seventieth year span was reached and passed, when he withdrew from labor, and for twenty years lived in quiet retirement, dying on his farm in 1889, aged ninety years, in the faith of the Mennonite Church, of which both he and his wife were devout members. His wife had passed away on the same farm in 1864, aged fifty-five, and the remains of both are interred in the Mennonite cemetery at Landisville. The twelve children that blessed the marriage of Christian and Susannah Greider were born in the following order: John M. died in Ohio; Christian was married, had one child, and died on the old farm; Benjamin, a lumberman and coal merchant at Mt. Joy, fell and died suddenly; Elizabeth was married to Daniel Mellinger, and died in Virginia; Martha died young; Mary died in infancy; Jacob M. is a retired farmer in West Hempfield township; Susan is the wife of Andrew Garber, whose sketch appears elsewhere; Anna is the widow of Henry Brenneman, of West Hempfield township; Mary was first married to Christian Rohrer, and subsequently to John S. Nissley, a retired farmer at Mt. Joy; Barbara is the wife of Jacob McAllister, a farmer in Pequea township; Amos M. is the gentleman whose name opens this sketch. Three of the sons were school teachers.

Amos M. Greider lived on the home farm until 1874, and then went to Harrisburg, where he was employed about three years in producing malt. Thence he moved to Landisville, this county, and for a year was in the tobacco trade, was next in the same line at Mt. Joy for two years, and then returned to the farm.

On Feb. 18, 1870, in Rapho township, Amos M. Greider married Elizabeth Cassel, and to this union were born the following children: Harry C., who was graduated from the Millersville Normal School, was a school teacher in Manheim borough grammar school, but is now a merchant and resides at Landisville; he married Anna Hershey. B. Frank, general merchant and school teacher at Lancaster Junction, married Minnie Seachrist. Charles A., formerly a school teacher in Rapho township, and now a merchant at Mt. Joy, married Emma Nissley. Howard G., and Christian C. are at home.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Cassel) Greider was born in Rapho township, Oct. 28, 1850, a daughter of Emanuel and Maria (Rohrer) Cassel. Emanuel Cassel was a farmer and school director, but the last ten years of his life were passed in retirement, and he died in Penn township in December, 1899, at the age of eighty years; his wife, born in 1824, is a resident of Landisville, and is, as was her husband, a member of the Mennonite Church. The children of Emanuel and Maria Cassel were nine in number, viz.: Mary, unmarried and living with her mother; Susan, wife of Aaron Kling, a coal merchant at Mt. Joy; Elizabeth, Mrs. Greider; Emanuel, express agent at Lebanon; John, a farmer in Penn township; Hettie, deceased; Emma, wife of John Eby, a farmer in Rapho township; Clara, married to Harry Swarr, a farmer of East Hempfield township; and Harry, farming in Penn township.

Amos M. Greider is in politics a Republican, and has served his fellow citizens as school director for six years. He is highly esteemed throughout the township and county, and he and his estimable wife are upright members of the Mennonite Church.

CHRISTIAN RUDY. The establishment of the Rudy family in Lancaster dates back to the year 1835, when George and Catherine Rudy brought their family across the ocean from Germany. The voyage was made in a sailboat, and lasted one hundred days. Among their children was a son, Martin, who at the time was eleven years of age. Being of an industrious disposition, he took up the problem of self-support at an age when the majority of boys are in school, and during all of his active life he was a hard-working man, finding employment in the foundries, also with the city and in other capacities. In the sixties for about three years he was night watchman of Lancaster, calling out the hours. With advancing years his eyesight failed him, and now, in his blindness and age, he is cared for by his children. His wife Barbara, whom he married after coming to Lancaster, was like himself, a native of Germany. At the time of her death, which occurred in October, 1897, she was seventy-seven years of age. Both were from youth earnest members of Zion Lutheran Church. In their family were five children, namely: Christian; Maggie, who married George Hirsh, a tinsmith of Quarryville, Pa.; Martin, who is employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad; Catherine, Mrs. Calvin Hess, of Lancaster; and Louis, an expert designer, living in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The school days of Christian Rudy came to an end when he was fourteen. Prior to this he had led a care-free existence in his native city of Lancaster, where he was born May 20, 1853. On starting out for himself he secured work in the cotton mills, starting in a very humble position and at the minimum of wages. After five years in the mills he began to learn the baker's trade, serving an apprenticeship of two years, and then working as foreman for Mr. Goos for five years. The inception of his present bakery dates from 1878, when he started an independent business, and began building up the excellent trade he now receives at the hands of the people of Lancaster. In order to meet the demands of his trade, two wagons are in constant use. The fine quality of the bakery goods, as well as the known integrity of the proprietor, contribute to give the establishment a recognized position in the line of its specialty. During the course of his busy life Mr. Rudy has met with his share of reverses and has met with more than one narrow escape, notably at the time of the well-remembered explosion at the cotton mills, when a boiler was blown a distance of one square. He was working in the mills at the time, and narrowly escaped death. While in politics he has never displayed any partisanship, he is a decided Democrat and never fails to vote with his party. In religious connection he is a member of Grace Lutheran Church, in which he has served as deacon six years, and as elder three years, while fraternally he is associated with the Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

The marriage of Christian Rudy and Anna M. Gilgore occurred in Lancaster in 1877. Born of this union were the following children: Charles C., who died Jan. 2, 1881; Walter H., who died Feb. 3, 1882; Bertha L., who married Walter K. Barley, of Lancaster; and Christian C., at home. Mrs. Rudy was born in Lancaster Oct. 29, 1853, a daughter of William and Julia A. (Bruner) Gilgore. Through her father, she traces her lineage to worthy Scotch ancestors, her grandparents, William and Rebecca Gilgore, having been natives of Scotland; while on her mother's side she is of direct German descent, her maternal grandparents having been Jacob and Catherine Bruner, natives of Germany. After a busy life devoted to the occupation of a marble mason, William Gilgore died Aug. 12, 1890, aged sixty-eight years. For some years he was survived by his wife, who died in March, 1901, at the age of seventy-five years. Both were interred in the Lancaster cemetery. Their children were named as follows: Thomas J.; Lydia A.; William, deceased; J. Augustus, a sculptor residing in Lancaster; Anna M., Mrs. Rudy; Louis H., proprietor of a bookstore in Lancaster; John, a member of the police force of that city; George W. and Emma A., both of whom died in childhood; and Francis S., who is a partner of his brother in the book business.

JONAS E. SHANK, a prominent farmer of Lancaster township, belongs to a family well known in Lancaster county, and was born Jan. 30, 1858, on the farm where he now resides.

Grandfather John Shank was born in Lancaster township, where he lived and died, and followed the calling of a farmer. In 1835 he was ordained a minister of the Old Mennonite Church, in which body he was a faithful worker until his death, which occurred Nov. 2, 1857. He married Susanna Harnish, and they had eleven children: Elizabeth, wife of Christian Herr; Jacob, who died unmarried Nov. 6, 1899; Mariah, wife of Michael Wheider, deceased; Andrew H., father of Jonas E.; Jonas H., a farmer of Lancaster township; Martin (deceased), a farmer of Lancaster township; Susan, wife of Abner Miller, of Coestoga township; Barbara, unmarried; Martha, wife of Abram S. Stauffer, of Manheim township; Sarah, unmarried, of Manheim township; and Fannie, wife of John E. Nestleworth, deceased.

Andrew H. Shank, father of Jonas E., was born in Lancaster township, on the old homestead, Nov. 4, 1818. When a young man he commenced farming on the farm now owned by his son Jonas, and continued farming until April, 1882, when he retired and located in Millersville. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and for thirteen years was supervisor of the township. His religious affiliations are with the Old Mennonite Church.

The first wife of Andrew H. Shank was Catherine Harnish, and their marriage occurred Feb. 7, 1843. To them were born three children: Mary Ann, who died at the age of nine years; and Harry (deceased) and Jonas E., twins. Mrs. Shank died Feb. 10, 1890, aged sixty-nine years, three days, and Andrew H. Shank subsequently married Mrs. Elizabeth Shirtzer, widow of Benjamin Shirtzer.

Jonas E. Shank remained at home, working upon the farm, and receiving his education in the schools of the township. When he married he assumed charge of the Shank homestead, and has since devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. His farm, which is one of the finest in the township, consists of eighty-four acres, conveniently located one mile from Lancaster City, on the Lancaster and New Danville pike. The pleasant house, surrounded by shade and fruit trees, flowers and shrubbery, the well cultivated fields, neat fences and substantial outbuildings, all testify to the prosperity and good management of Mr. Shank. In addition to attending to his farming interests he is a director of the Lancaster and New Danville pike, and also a director in the Manor Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

On Oct. 25, 1881, Mr. Shank married Miss Catherine R. Landis, a daughter of Henry and Catherine Landis, of Manheim township (both now deceased), and the liveliness in their home, well-kept garden and many beautiful floral effects on their fine lawn prove that his choice was well made. To Mr. and Mrs. Shank four children have been born: Emma L., attending Prof. Moore's Madame Cotta College; Landis L., attending Wade's Pennsylvania Business College, Philadelphia; Andrew Hilke, who died at the age of five years, nine months, five days; and Walter L., at home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Shank are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and no people are more highly esteemed than they in Lancaster township. Mr. Shank is a man of broad sympathies and public spirit, and he always bears a leading part in all matters calculated to prove of benefit to the community.

DANIEL S. NEFF, a progressive and enterprising agriculturist living near Central Manor, Manor township, was born upon his present farm Sept. 21, 1863, son of Benjamin and Anna (Shenk) Neff, and grandson of Henry and Susanna (Neff) Neff. The father spent his entire life upon that farm, engaged in agricultural pursuits. By his ballot he supported the men and measures of the Republican party, and for eighteen years he efficiently filled the office of school director. In religious belief he was a Mennonite. He was twice married, his first wife being Anna Hostetter, who died in 1854, at the age of twenty-six years, and of the two children born of that union, Cyrus, the elder, is also deceased. Benjamin is a resident of Central Manor. The second wife was Anna Shenk, daughter of Henry Shenk, of Manor township, and to them were born two children: Daniel S. and Anna, the latter the wife of Harry Gamber, of Landisville, Lancaster county. The father died in June, 1880, at the age of fifty-eight years, the mother in 1897, at the age of sixty-five.

Daniel S. Neff grew to manhood on the old homestead and attended the district schools of the neighborhood. He early became familiar with all the duties which fall to the lot of the agriculturist, and on the death of his father took charge of the home place, consisting of seventy-three acres, which he has since successfully operated. He has made many valuable improvements upon the farm, including the erection of a fine brick residence in 1899.

In 1888 Mr. Neff married Miss Annie R. Herr, daughter of Henry and Lizzie Herr, and to them have come two children: Ira H., born in 1889, and Harry C., born in 1893. Since attaining his majority Mr. Neff has been identified with the Republican party, and he has taken an active part in its work, doing all within his power to insure its success. He is progressive and public-spirited, and has capably served as a member of the school board in his district since 1898.

PHILIP AUGUSTUS METZGER, head of the firm of Metzger & Haughman, dry-goods merchants at Nos. 38 and 40 West King street, Lancaster, belongs to one of the very old families of Lancaster county.

Philip Metzger, his first ancestor in this country, came to America from the Palatinate, Germany, in 1749, leaving his beautiful Old World country because of bitter religious persecution. He had three sons—Jacob, Philip and John—and one daughter. Philip A. Metzger, of Lancaster, is the fourth Philip in the direct line of descent, and his son Philip, who died in 1878, when five years old, was the fifth. The commodious old brick dwelling at No. 25 South Queen street, Lancaster, was built by the grandfather of Philip A., and there, in the same room, have been born his father and himself, and two of his children. This home was in the possession of the Metzger family from 1791 to 1891, when it passed into other hands. Philip Metzger (2), according to the records, was the grandfather of Philip A. Metzger, whose father's name was also Philip. The latter married Eliza Wayne Sprigman, a cousin of the late John W. Forney, the well-known journalist, and to this union were born ten children, five of whom are now living: Anna, widow of B. F. Charles; Louisa, widow of I. F. Abele; Margaret, unmarried; George W., of Lancaster; and Philip Augustus.

Philip Augustus Metzger was born in the old homestead in Lancaster, Nov. 27, 1839, and was educated in the public schools of that city, leaving the high school to enter the dry-goods store of R. E. Fahnestock, with whom he remained twenty-six years. At the end of that long period he severed commercial relations with Mr. Fahnestock to enter into business for himself. For more than twenty-two years he has been a merchant in Lancaster, and he and his partner have conducted a most successful business. In the fall of 1886 Mr. Metzger bought the present store, which in former days was the "Golden Lamb Hotel," and in 1887 a large addition was made to the building. They enjoy a very flattering patronage.

Mr. Metzger was married in 1866 to M. Elizabeth, daughter of the late George A. Weaver, a member of one of the old Lancaster county families; her great-grandfather was a captain in the Revolutionary war. To this union were born five children, two of whom are still living: Miss Mary Gertrude is at home; Carrie Louisa is the wife of Charles Emory Long, who is now engaged in the leaf tobacco trade, and they have two children, Elizabeth M. and Philip M.

Mr. Metzger was for more than thirty-five years a member of the Duke Street Methodist Church, and a trustee for about twenty years. When the new church building was erected on the northwest corner of Duke and Walnut streets, in 1891, Mr. Metzger, by his indefatigable energy, zeal and liberal contributions, prevented the cutting out from the plans of the beautiful tower that so fittingly adorns it. In February and March, 1897, he accompanied the popular and beloved pastor, Rev. J. T. Satchell, D. D., on an extensive trip to the Bermudas and the West Indies.

Mr. Metzger is now a member of the First Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Democrat, and time and time again has been nominated by his party in the Second ward for the Select Council. Several times he was strongly urged to become his party's nominee for the position of mayor of Lancaster, but for various reasons felt impelled to decline. Fraternally Mr. Metzger belongs to the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. He is a most genial and charming gentleman. His business integrity is beyond question, and his standing in the business world of Lancaster most enviable.

JOSEPH H. McGLAUGHLIN, one of the leading residents of the town of Mechanicsburg, was born in Horse Hollow, Martic township, Lancaster county, June 11, 1867, a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Henry) McGlaughlin.

Samuel McGlaughlin, one of the leading citizens of Conestoga Center, was born in Providence township Oct. 26, 1834, a son of Joseph and Sarah (Peoples) McGlaughlin. The family records show that Joseph McGlaughlin was born Aug. 12, 1799; his mother's maiden name was Hettie McKorkle. On Dec. 30, 1824, he wedded Sarah Peoples, who was born Oct. 10, 1802.

Samuel McGlaughlin was formerly supervisor, and is now tax collector of Conestoga, his administration being considered one of the best and most judicious the county has ever had. During the Civil war he served as a soldier in Co. E, 79th P. V. I., under Gen. Hambright, and was often in posts of great danger, having charge of some of the transportation. On Oct. 12, 1865, he was married, by Rev. J. J. Strine, to Elizabeth Henry, who was born between Conestoga Center and Rock Hill, Jan. 16, 1843, a daughter of John and Magdalena (Thomas) Henry. (3) Harvey M., of the firm of Diehm & McLaughlin, coachmakers at Honey Brook, Pa., was born in Conestoga township Dec. 13, 1871, and was married Dec. 26, 1900, to Miss Helen Wesley, of Little Britain township. (4) M. Letitia, for some time a school teacher and seamstress, was born in Pequea township Dec. 24, 1873, and on Jan. 26, 1902, was married to Robert A. Erb, and now lives on a farm at Mount Nebo, Pa. (5) John Miles, deceased, was born in Conestoga Center Feb. 26, 1876. (6) Effie N., of Lancaster, was born in Conestoga Center Jan. 23, 1878. (7) Franklin P., stenographer and book-keeper for Follmer, Clogg & Co., umbrella manufacturers at Lancaster, was born Nov. 10, 1881. Both Samuel McGlaughlin and his wife are members of the Old Mennonite Church. John Henry, father of Mrs. Elizabeth (Henry) McGlaughlin, was born Jan. 26, 1804, a son of Michael and Susan (Rathfon) Henry, and was a stone mason and shoemaker by occupation. He married Magdalena Thomas, who was born Jan. 16, 1810, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Keeperts) Thomas.

P. A. Metzger

Joseph H. McGlaughlin was reared on the home farm, and between the ages of ten and fifteen years he assisted neighboring farmers. He then learned the cigarmaker's trade, but only as a means of enabling him to gratify his ambition for a higher education. His inclinations led him to the profession of teacher, and he entered the Millersville State Normal School to prepare himself for that calling. In the fall of 1887 he began his eminently successful career as an instructor, and has continued to teach ever since, sometimes even teaching summer sessions. His work has been appreciated through the county, and he is very popular with both patrons and students. Mr. McGlaughlin has done much in the interest of education in his locality, and his influence has been the means of promoting and instituting a number of needed reforms. He has also during the summer seasons been engaged extensively in trucking. His artistic sense has found expression in highly ornamental penwork, and many specimens of his handiwork have found their way into the possession of his acquaintances, and are now scattered over much of our country.

On March 30, 1893, Mr. McGlaughlin was united in marriage, by Rev. D. W. Gerhard, with Miss Clara W. Weinhold, daughter of Peter G. and Eliza (Weinhold) Weinhold, and this union has been blessed with two children: Elsie Mabel, born in Upper Leacock township Jan. 9, 1894, who died Sept. 3, 1897; and Grace Leona, born Dec. 25, 1895. In religious connection Mr. and Mrs. McGlaughlin are members of Heller's Salem Reformed Church. Mr. McGlaughlin has been prominently identified with the Republican party for many years, and for four years was judge of elections. He is a genial, pleasant citizen, and is well known and highly esteemed.

Peter G. Weinhold, father of Mrs. McGlaughlin, was born in East Cocalico township, between Denver and Muddy Creek, Jan. 5, 1840, a son of Philip Weinhold. He is now a prominent farmer in Upper Leacock township. His wife, Eliza (Weinhold) Weinhold, was born in East Cocalico township April 18, 1848, a daughter of Peter S. and Leah (Yagi) Weinhold, the former of whom, born Dec. 10, 1818, died April 26, 1896; the latter, a daughter of Joseph and Catharine (Loraw) Yagi, born Nov. 25, 1820, died Aug. 13, 1902. To Peter G. and Eliza Weinhold were born children as follows: Henry W., of Reading, a florist in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, was born in East Cocalico Feb. 17, 1867, and on Dec. 24, 1891, was married to Clara A. Ludwig. Frances W., born July 16, 1868, on Nov. 24, 1889, married Henry W. Lutz, a farmer near Heller's Church. Solomon W., a farmer and laborer near Leacock, was born Dec. 19, 1869, and married Adelia R. Espenschied Feb. 25, 1897. Clara W. is the wife of Joseph H. McGlaughlin. Pierce W., born July 25, 1873, died June 4, 1874. Annie E., born Nov. 19, 1876, was married Oct. 12, 1899, to Abram S. Getz, a laborer and farmer of Leacock, Pa. James, a plumber and gas fitter of Reading, Pa., was born Dec. 23, 1878. Minnie, born Dec. 31, 1886, is at home. All the family attend Heller's Salem Reformed Church except the parents, who are members of the Muddy Creek Reformed Church.

Philip Weinhold, the father of Peter G., was born Nov. 19, 1796, son of Peter and Elizabeth (Grill) Weinhold, and on reaching man's estate wedded Elizabeth Kress.

SAMUEL S. STAUFFER, a substantial and well-known farmer of Mt. Joy township, was born April 12, 1867, on his present home farm, which is the old homestead of the Stauffer family, where many of the name have first seen the light in the past.

Mr. Stauffer is a son of Abraham G. and Harriet (Shelley) Stauffer, the former of whom was born in 1842 on the present farm, son of Jacob Stauffer; the mother was born in Rapho township, daughter of Henry Shelley. Abraham G. Stauffer removed in 1891 to Lebanon county, where he is engaged in farming. During his residence in this county he was identified with many of its sound institutions, notably the Elizabethtown National Bank, in which he was a director from its organization until the spring of 1901. His wife was born in December, 1844, and died Dec. 21, 1901, aged fifty-seven years, two days. She was a member of the German Baptist Church, to which her husband also belongs. To Abraham G. Stauffer and his wife were born the following named children: Harry S., who is a stock dealer living in Manheim; Samuel S.; Fanny S., who married Albert Garber, a merchant in Lebanon county; Harriet S. and Jacob S., both of whom died young; Andrew S., who owns a warehouse and is engaged in the fruit business in Palmyra, Pa.; David S., also residing in Palmyra; Katie S., who resided with her parents and died Aug. 22, 1901, aged twenty-four years, fourteen days; Abraham S. and Mamie S., both of whom died young; and Anna S., at home.

Mr. Stauffer was reared on the farm and has passed his whole life there, engaging in farming from his youth. The place is one of the valuable estates which help to make Lancaster county famous as a farming section.

On Nov. 29, 1892, Mr. Stauffer was married, in Manheim, to Miss Amanda B. Graybill, and to this union has been born one daughter, Minnie G. Mrs. Stauffer was born Aug. 12, 1870, in Penn township, daughter of Seth and Fannie (Bentz) Graybill, of Lancaster county. Mr. Graybill was born in 1845, and is now a retired farmer of the village of Pennville, having lived free from business care for the past six years. His wife was born in 1850. Both are valued members of the German Baptist Church. Their children were as follows: Amanda B., wife of Mr. Stauffer; Joseph B., a farmer of Penn township; and Hayden B. and Noah B., both deceased. The family is of Swiss origin, and the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Stauffer was Joseph Graybill, of Lancaster county, who married a Lutz.

Mr. Stauffer is identified with the Republican party, and is one of the progressive and intelligent young men of his locality.

BENJAMIN M. SHENK, one of the highly esteemed retired farmers of Lancaster county, is a worthy representative of one of the oldest families in this locality. This family originated in Switzerland, coming to America about 1730. Michael Shenk was the original settler on the old homestead, and his son, Henry (it is thought) succeeded him. John Shenk, the great-grandfather of Benjamin M., was a son of Henry, and he lived and died in Pequea township. His life was devoted exclusively to farming pursuits and to the ministry of the Old Mennonite Church. The children he left were: Henry; John; Anne, who married a Snively; and Mary, who married a Hostetter.

Henry Shenk, son of Rev. John, became the grandfather of Benjamin M., of this sketch, and he was born in Pequea township, where he tilled the soil. His duty led him in the direction of a religious life, and for four years he was a minister in the Old Mennonite Church, and on June 3, 1843, he was ordained a bishop. For a number of years he was a power in the church, operating in the Conestoga, Millersville, Rohrerstown and Manor districts. His simple, pious life, combined with his ability as a preacher, exerted a great influence for good, few men ever having been more highly esteemed or more dearly beloved. As a fitting close to a life of estimable deeds, he died suddenly, Oct. 22, 1865, aged seventy years, eleven months and twenty days, after giving testimony after a sermon preached by his co-worker, Jacob Brubaker, of Manor District, Rev. Joseph K. Brubaker being also present, in the Stone Meeting House, in Pequea township.

The marriage of Rev. Henry Shenk was to Susanna Huber, and they became the parents of twelve children: John, who died in 1892; Henry, who died Jan. 6, 1854; Michael, who died young;

Tobias, who resides in Manheim township; Mary, deceased; Jacob, of Pequea township; Isaac, twin to Jacob, deceased; Rudolph, of East Drumore township; Samuel, of Pequea township; Susan, the widow of Andrew G. Bower; Benjamin, deceased; and Anna, the wife of Martin Herr, of Pequea township.

John Shenk, father of Benjamin M., was born on the old homestead in Pequea township, Aug. 28, 1816, and lived there until 1842, when he moved to Lancaster township, locating on the farm which Benjamin M. Shenk now owns, giving his whole attention to the cultivation of his land for a number of years. He was, however, an intelligent and public-spirited man, was active in the ranks of the Republican party, filling many of the local offices with great efficiency, notably those of assessor, auditor, school director and supervisor. Mr. Shenk was identified with many of the public enterprises of his locality, and until the time of his death was a director in the Marietta Pike road. As a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church, his life was filled with good and charitable deeds. His reliability was recognized in the demands made upon him in the matter of settling up estates, many trusts being confidently placed in his hands. His marriage was to Miss Magdalena Musser, and they had a family of six children, three of whom died in childhood, the others being: Henry, a farmer in Penn township; Benjamin M., of this sketch; and Susan, wife of Rev. Abram B. Herr. The mother of these children died Aug. 13, 1861, and Mr. Shenk married Mrs. Magdalena Bassler, and he died May 10, 1892.

Benjamin M. Shenk was born on the farm where he now resides, on Aug. 21, 1844, grew up acquainted with all the necessary details of a farmer's life, and after completing the common school course, settled down to a farming life. After his marriage in 1870 he began farming on the home place, which was his by inheritance, and here, until the spring of 1901, he followed agricultural pursuits, becoming one of the most substantial and highly esteemed citizens of this county. For as long a period as seventeen years Mr. Shenk has been a school director, always casting his influence in the direction of progressive educational methods, and has staunchly supported the principles of the Republican party. Mr. Shenk has been identified with a number of the important enterprises of the county, notably the Mutual Insurance Co., having been a director for many years. Many of the complicated estates of this neighborhood have been placed in his hands for adjustment, his fellow-citizens being so well assured of his integrity, ability and uprightness.

The marriage of Mr. Shenk was to Miss Leah G. Charles, and to this union were born five children, two of whom died young, the others being: John C., a farmer of East Hempfield township; Abram C., a farmer on the home place; and Anna C., residing with her parents. Both Mr. and Mrs. Shenk are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and are kind, neighborly and hospitable, and among the very best people of their township.

EDMUND GARDNER was born Nov. 8, 1870, at Colemanville, Lancaster county, where he now resides. He comes from an old Pennsylvania family.

Valentine Gardner, his great-grandfather, lived and died in Martic township, about one and one-half miles from the home of Edmund Gardner. He was a tanner by trade, and carried on that business for some years in connection with farming, carting his leather by team to Philadelphia and Baltimore. His wife's maiden name was Good.

John Gardner, the grandfather, was born in Martic township in 1808, and lived at home until he was about twenty-eight years of age. He was educated in the common schools of the county. At the age of twenty-eight he went to Conestoga township, and engaged in farming, which he continued until 1871, when he retired from the active affairs of life. He married Miss Leah Shenk, of Conestoga township, in 1836, and they were the parents of eleven children, of whom eight died in infancy or early childhood. Those who grew to mature years were: John Wesley, father of Edmund; Leah, wife of Joseph Clark, of Mt. Nebo; and Valentine, who at the age of twenty-one was drowned, in 1871, while skating on the Pequea. Mr. Gardner and his wife were members of the M. E. Church, he being one of the trustees and a steward for about thirty years.

John Wesley Gardner was born in Conestoga township, Feb. 14, 1840, and lived at home until he was twenty-two years old. He received a common-school education. In 1862 he enlisted in Co. C, 122d P. V. I., was mustered into service Aug. 11, 1862, promoted to corporal Jan. 21, 1863, and with his company was mustered out of the service May 15, 1863.

In 1866 John W. Gardner married Miss Henrietta Costello, of Conestoga township, and they became the parents of two children: Florence, who is the wife of H. B. Barr, of Colemanville; and Edmund. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner are members of the M. E. Church, and Mr. Gardner was trustee and steward of the church for a number of years, and was also superintendent of the Sunday-school. He was engaged in merchandising for about thirty years, and retired in 1894, Edmund Gardner, his son, continuing the business to the present time. John W. Gardner is a member of Stewart Post, G. A. R., of Rawlinsville; of the K. of P., at Rawlinsville; and the A. O. K. of M. C., No. 158, of Mt. Nebo.

Edmund Gardner remained at home with his parents, and upon the retirement of his father, in 1894, took charge of the business. During his youth he was educated in the county schools, and supplemented this training with a two-years course at the State Normal School at Millersville. He has given his entire attention to the mercantile business, and has been very successful in it. Politically he is a Republican, and was made postmaster March 30, 1894. He is a member of the Charles M. Howell Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 496, of Millersville; and is also a member of the A. O. K. of M. C., No. 158, Mt. Nebo.

On Aug. 16, 1893, Mr. Gardner was married to Miss Mary, daughter of P. C. Hiller, of Conestoga township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gardner are members of the M. E. Church of Colemanville, and he is one of the trustees. They have four children, namely: J. Harold, Grace, Reba and Clare, all at home.

Although a young man, Mr. Gardner has already gained a permanent standing in the community, and is regarded as a useful, progressive and liberal-minded man in both business and social circles, well deserving the high esteem in which he is held.

MRS. MARY SALENA (PROSSER) BAUMGARDNER, widow of the late Henry Baumgardner, was born about sixty-five years ago in Hartford, Conn., daughter of James L. and Mary (Lillibridge) Prosser, and remained with her parents until her first marriage. James L. Prosser was an extensive farmer, and a horse and cattle dealer of prominence in one of the very wealthiest sections of the United States. Of his family, all are now deceased but Mrs. Baumgardner and her sister, Mrs. Brown, who lives at Lexington, near Boston. The others were: John, who died aged twenty-one; Levi, who amassed wealth in speculation and employed it in charity; Amisa, who died young; and Angeline, who married Park Fellows, formerly of Syracuse, N. Y., now a wealthy resident of San Francisco, Cal. This family is of noble lineage, but Mrs. Baumgardner's proudest boast is that she is the daughter of an honest man.

Mary Salena Prosser first became the wife of Jay Cadwell, who came of an honorable family—people whose word was as good as their bond. His brothers are all deceased, and his sister is still living on the old place a few miles from the city of Hartford, which has been in the family for over two hundred years. After his marriage Mr. Cadwell came to Lancaster county, Pa., and engaged in tobacco culture, which venture proving disastrous he remained only one season. Going to Philadelphia, he opened the first silver-plating establishment there, as a member of the firm of Filley, Mead & Cadwell. His health failing, he was advised to remain in the open air as much as possible, and accordingly returned to Lancaster county, where he commenced to buy stock. He eventually took up the cork manufacturing business, in which he was engaged up to the time of his death, March 24, 1874. His remains rest in Lancaster cemetery. Mr. Cadwell had been successful in business, but ill health and the results of the panic of 1873, together with the fact that he had bet heavily on the election of Horace Greeley, of whom he was a great admirer, left him in debt, and his widow was left with a heavy burden to shoulder. His assets were equal to his liabilities, but the material had to be worked up and put on the market, and she took up the work courageously, and the fact that she had a daughter to be cared for was a wonderful incentive for her to make the effort. Her father and brother came to Lancaster and offered her their assistance, but though they were men of wealth she only expressed her gratitude and persuaded them to return home, saying she felt confident that she would "come out all right," and she did. She managed her husband's plant and business for eight years with great success, only abandoning the business when the establishment was destroyed by fire; but she had previously paid the entire indebtedness, dollar for dollar, and felt that she could afford to retire.

After four years of widowhood Mrs. Cadwell was united in marriage with Henry Baumgardner, a prominent citizen of Lancaster, where he had a successful business career, and both made and lost a great deal of money. He died in May, 1898, and is buried in the Lancaster cemetery.

Notwithstanding her strenuous life, Mrs. Baumgardner is a remarkably bright, active and even youthful lady for her sixty-five years. She was the first subscriber in Lancaster county to Dun's Mercantile Agency. She and all of her connections are of the most prominent and leading citizens, and all are well-to-do in the world. She is a member of the Lancaster Historical Society, and of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary Body, socially prominent and clever, and a woman of engaging manners and of charitable disposition and habits.

Mrs. Baumgardner's daughter, Ida, is the wife of H. C. Moore, and has three children, Samuel, Edith and Mary S. Mr. Moore is a prominent citizen of Trenton, N. J., being president of two traction companies. Mrs. Baumgardner has a niece, Mrs. George Field, living at Newton Center, Massachusetts.

NORMAN M. CHRIST, an enterprising and rapidly rising young farmer of Manor township, was born in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, Feb. 3, 1872, a son of Michael K. Christ, who resides two and one-half miles southwest of Millersville, and is one of the most respected farmers of Manor township.

Michael K. Christ was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Sept. 1, 1850, son of Amos B. Christ, a native of the same township. Michael K., was reared on the home farm, was educated in the district schools, and also attended the State Normal School at Millersville for three terms, in 1868-69-70. He taught in the winters of those years, and in the fall of 1870 located at Masonville. In 1876 he purchased a farm of eight and one-half acres in Manor township, where he has since been engaged in farming. He has also passed considerable time in clerking, and in 1889-90-91-92 was collector of taxes for Manor township; in 1897 he was mercantile appraiser for Lancaster county; in 1898 he was delegate to the Republican State Convention, having previously attended several county conventions. Mr. Christ has acted as administrator of several estates.

Michael K. Christ was married Aug. 17, 1870, to Miss Mary S. Miller, daughter of Christian and Barbara Miller, both of whom are deceased. To this union have been born four children, viz.: Norman M., with whose name this sketch opens; Benjamin M., a veterinary surgeon, at home; Haldy M., a graduate of the Millersville State Normal School, class of 1897, and since a teacher of shorthand and typewriting at home; and Ida V., also at home, a teacher of music.

Norman M. Christ received a sound public-school education, and at the age of twenty years began farming by working out by the day. By saving his earnings he was able, in the fall of 1896, to purchase twenty acres of the Jacob Doerstler farm, one-quarter mile east of Creswell, which place he has greatly improved, having one of the finest little places in the county; he carries on general farming, and also deals in fertilizers.

On June 18, 1891, Norman M. Christ married Miss Sarah Sneath, who was born in Manor township, daughter of William A. Sneath, deceased. To this marriage have been born three children, Blanche, Irene and Walter.

Norman M. Christ is one of the active young Republicans of Manor township, and takes a deep interest in the party's affairs, but although frequently solicited to accept nomination for public office has persistently refused to become a candidate. Mr. and Mrs. Christ are members of the Evangelical Church, and are among the most respected of the residents of Manor township.

WALTER M. ESHLEMAN, proprietor of the "Buck Hotel," in East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in Marticville April 20, 1868, son of Martin and Hattie (McCardee) Eshleman. Martin Eshleman was born in Martic township in 1840, and his wife was born in Conestoga township in 1843.

Henry and Mary Eshleman, the grandparents, were both natives of Lancaster county, and of German parentage. They lived in the Revolutionary period. Henry Eshleman owned much land in this section of the county, and both he and his wife died in Martic, on his old homestead. They had ten children: Henry, who lives in East Drumore township; Samuel, a butcher in Marticville; Calvin, who died at the home of his parents; Maris, a butcher, who died at the old home unmarried; Eli, who died at the old homestead, leaving a widow and nine children, Martin, Jacob, Daniel, George, Eli, Elizabeth (who married Joseph Rankin), Susan (who married Christian Andrews), Mary (who married Henry Hoover) and Lydia (who married Martin Eshleman); Eliza, born in Marticville, who married Jacob Johnson, of Smithville, Lancaster county, and died leaving a family; Susan, who married John G. Good, and is the mother of four children, Elizabeth (wife of George W. Hiney), Mollie (wife of John Plank), Barbara (wife of Samuel Young) and Henry (deceased); Cilinda, deceased, wife of Joseph Hoover; Louisa, wife of Alexander Humphrey, of Lancaster; and Martin.

Martin Eshleman was reared on the old homestead, and was engaged in farming until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he enlisted in the cavalry service of the Union army, and served under Sheridan. At Gettysburg he was seriously wounded, and lay for many hours uncared for on that bloody field. Surviving the perils of the tented field and battle strife he came home, and is now living retired on the old family homestead, with all the comforts that industry and integrity have a right to expect. To him and his good wife have come four sons, all of whom are honorable and prosperous citizens of this county: (1) Harry, born in 1866, married Miss Bertha Shoff, of Martic township, where he is living. He is a supervisor. They have two children, Clyde and Florence. (2) Walter M. is mentioned below. (3) Joseph, born in 1874, married Miss Katie Handle, and is a farmer in Martic township. They have one daughter, Emma. (4) Ezra, born in 1877, lives at home, and is manager of the home farm.

Walter M. Eshleman grew to manhood under the parental roof-tree, and took up farming as his life business. In 1891 he was married to Lizzie, daughter of Simon and Hettie Good. Mrs. Eshleman was born in Providence in 1870, and was educated in the local schools. Mr. and Mrs. Eshleman lived for a time in Martic township, where he was a farmer, and bought and sold stock on an extensive scale, a business he still follows. In 1900 he added to his other labors the cares of hotel-keeping, and has a hotel at the Buck, where he is doing a good business and has a fine patronage. Bessie, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Eshleman, was born Jan. 15, 1892.

Mr. Eshleman and his father are both Republicans. The grandfather was a Whig, and in time became a Republican. Fraternally Walter M. Eshleman belongs to the I. O. O. F. He was reared in the Mennonite faith, his mother being a member of that church.

In 1898 Mr. Eshleman made an extensive western trip, traveling in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, and returned by way of Kentucky and Virginia. Mr. Eshleman is a young man of excellent business qualifications, and is widely known, not only for his abilities as a stockman, but for his very successful management of the "Buck Hotel," which is one of the popular hostleries of the county.

LEVI B. HUBER, one of the progressive and prominent young farmers of Lancaster county, living about a mile southeast of Landis Valley, belongs to an old and honored family, and is a son of David B. Huber, of Fruitville. He was born Jan. 12, 1861, secured his education in the public schools, and, being a man of keen perception and good observation, has become one of the best informed citizens of the county.

When a young man of twenty-two Mr. Huber began on his own account on the place he now occupies, known as Fountain Farm. It comprises sixty-two acres, largely devoted to potato growing. Mr. Huber keeps in touch with the advance of the times, being a reader of and occasional contributor to the agricultural press. He is interested in bees, and has five stands of the Italian variety. He also keeps some 300 hens, improved White Leghorns, and regularly supplies a number of the families in Lancaster with eggs.

Levi B. Huber was married, in November, 1883, to Miss Elizabeth K., daughter of Benjamin R. and Anna S. (Kreider) Stauffer. She was born in East Lampeter township March 3, 1863. To this union have come the following children: Cora S., born Oct. 25, 1885; Anna S., April 14, 1887; Elizabeth S., July 27, 1888; Henry S., Aug. 13, 1889; David S., Dec. 15, 1890; Benjamin S., Feb. 26, 1892; Enos S., July 1, 1896; John S., July 3, 1898; Christian S., Feb. 11, 1894 (died March 17, 1895). Mr. and Mrs. Huber belong to the Mennonite Church, and he is assistant superintendent of the Sabbath-school.

MARIE REBECCA VAN NESS, M. D., not only won distinction in medical circles in Lancaster for her own success as a practitioner, but also as the wife of a distinguished physician and surgeon, Dr. William W. Van Ness, now retired after forty years of active practice. She is the daughter of the late David Saladin, who came to America from Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1831, and settling in Lancaster, engaged in mercantile trade there, having been a storekeeper in Europe. However, he abandoned that business, and became a contracting house painter. Mr. Saladin married Miss Mary Elizabeth Troyer, daughter of the late John Andrew Troyer, of Lancaster, whose ancestors were of Revolutionary fame on both sides. To this union were born five children, only two of whom are living, Marie Rebecca and John F., the latter a wholesale dealer in millinery and silk at Greenville, Ohio.

Marie Rebecca Saladin was born in Lancaster, and received her early education there, finishing her studies at the American Medical College, at St. Louis, from which she was graduated. She has been an earnest searcher after the truth, and made a close study of Christian Science, which she practiced with great success for three years in Denver, Colo., though she subsequently confined herself to medical practice. Dr. Van Ness was the only woman in Lancaster who ever enjoyed the distinction of being medical examiner for an insurance company, holding that position in this section for the Security Medical Life Insurance Company, of Binghamton, N. Y., conducting the examination of lady applicants for insurance. She belongs to the American Medical Association, at Washington, D. C. Dr. Van Ness is as thoroughly versed in literary matters as she is in medicine. Religiously she is a member of the Unitarian denomination. Socially, professionally and religiously she is a model type of womanhood.

Almost forty years ago our subject became the wife of Dr. William Van Ness, who was born and reared on the Hudson. Both his grandfathers came over with Gov. Stuyvesant, when New York was known as New Amsterdam. Dr. William W. Van Ness is a graduate of Columbia College, New York, and is now living retired after an active practice extending over forty years, during twenty of which he was associated with his wife, who practiced with him in New York for that length of time. She practiced ten years in Lancaster. Two children were born to this union, one daughter, now deceased, and one son, Rev. Thomas J. Van Ness, who is pastor of the second oldest church in the city of Boston, an Unitarian Church. He stands at the head of the six most prominent clergymen in that city. Dr. Van Ness may well feel a pride in the work of her husband and son in their respective callings, as well as in her own success in the learned profession of her choice.

SAMUEL L. OBERHOLTZER, one of the well-known citizens and leading farmers of Mt. Joy township, was born on the farm he now occupies July 12, 1859, son of Jacob and Barbara (Lehman) Oberholtzer, natives of the same township, and who were for many years residents of the same farm.

Jacob Oberholtzer, father of Samuel L., was born on the old farm Dec. 31, 1812, son of Samuel and Fanny (Longenecker) Oberholtzer, natives of Dauphin county, who moved to Lancaster county in 1797, locating on this farm, in Mt. Joy township, where their days were passed. They were members of the Mennonite Church. They had the following named children: John, Jacob, Samuel, Peter, Joseph, Christian and Elizabeth. Until 1862 Jacob Oberholtzer farmed on the old homestead, removing then to an adjoining farm. He died after living some time in retirement, Dec. 31, 1897, and was buried in a private burying-ground on his own land. On Oct. 13, 1855, Jacob Oberholtzer married Barbara Lehman, in Lancaster, and they had the following children: Samuel L. is a resident of Mt. Joy township; Jacob L. died at the age of five years; Amanda L. married Daniel B. Brubaker, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Miss Lizzie L. resides with her mother and her sister, Mrs. Brubaker. Mrs. Oberholtzer was born Oct. 6, 1835, in Mt. Joy township, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lehman) Lehman, natives of Lancaster and Dauphin counties, respectively. Daniel Lehman died in Franklin county in 1886, his wife dying in 1846, at the age of forty-two years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lehman were members of the Mennonite Church. They had the following children: Henry is a retired farmer, living in Ohio; Nancy married Peter Witmer, and lives in Dauphin county; Barbara married Jacob Oberholtzer; Polly (deceased) married Christian Gish; Lizzie is the widow of Peter Horst, of Franklin county; Fannie died young; Katie married John Landis, of Franklin county. The second marriage of Mr. Lehman was to Nancy (Shank) Barricks, and they had children as follows: Sarah (deceased) married Henry Bricker; Daniel (deceased) married Annie Shenk; Peter married Annie Zug, and is a farmer in Franklin county; Lydia and Mattie both died young; Susan married Samuel Longenecker, a farmer of Dauphin county; David married Annie Burkholder, and is a farmer in Franklin county. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Jacob Oberholtzer were Peter and Hettie (Hoover) Lehman, and the maternal grandparents were Abraham and Maria Lehman, all of whom died in Lancaster county. Jacob Oberholtzer was a man of large means, and his family is one of the most substantial of the old families who reside in this vicinity and who come from a fine old German ancestry. Although he was not formally connected with any religious body, he lived a Christian life, and was respected wherever he was known.

Samuel L. Oberholtzer was but two years of age when the family moved from the old farm and located on an adjoining one. Here he remained with his parents, attending the district school, and assisting his father in operating the farm until his marriage, when he located on his present farm, the place of his birth, where he has continued ever since. He has been very successful in general farming, and during the past few years has paid considerable attention to poultry raising. As a representative citizen Mr. Oberholtzer has filled various public positions with great efficiency, notably that of township auditor for six years; for a similar length of time he was election inspector. In political belief he is a member of the Republican party. He belongs to the Mennonite Church, in which he was ordained a deacon Dec. 25, 1900.

In November, 1883, occurred the marriage of Samuel L. Oberholtzer and Miss Minerva Weaver, who was born in West Donegal township, and died Feb. 6, 1896, at the age of thirty-two years. She was buried in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. She was a daughter of Henry and Catherine Weaver, natives of Lancaster county, who now live in West Donegal township, where the former is a retired farmer. The two children of this marriage were Katie W. and Walter W., both of whom live at home. The second marriage of Mr. Oberholtzer was to Mrs. Lizzie B. (Lehman) Gantz, of Conewago township, Dauphin Co., Pa., who was born Oct. 1, 1855, in Lebanon county, daughter of Samuel and Caroline N. (Brubaker) Lehman, the former a native of Lebanon county, and the latter of Lancaster county. Mr. Lehman moved to Lancaster county in 1888, and now is a prominent retired farmer, residing in Elizabethtown. He was born in 1831, and his wife was born in 1833. They were married in 1854, and had the following children: Lizzie B., now Mrs. Oberholtzer; Amanda, who married Nathan Brandt, a farmer residing at Fontana, Pa.; Emma, who married Amos Risser, lives in Mt. Joy township; and David, the youngest, a telegraph operator in Lancaster city, who married Emma Shaub. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Oberholtzer were John and Polly (Kinzie) Lehman. Mrs. Oberholtzer was married (first) Oct. 21, 1875, in Lancaster, to John E. Gantz, who was born in Lancaster county July 12, 1854, son of John L. and Anna (Enterline) Gantz, of Lancaster county, and died March 12, 1896. Mr. Gantz was a well-known agriculturist of Dauphin county, and died on his farm. He was interred in Milton Grove cemetery. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gantz, namely: Allen L., who married Anna Longenecker, of Dauphin county, and has two children, Carry and Walter; and Cleveland L. and Tihlman L., both residing with Mr. Oberholtzer.

The Oberholtzers are among the substantial and representative families of Mt. Joy township, well thought of in their neighborhood, and worthy of the kind feeling and respect which surrounds them on every side.

WILLIAM M. MEARIG. Among the citizens of New Holland, Pa., is William M. Mearig, who was born in the village of Mechanicsburg, Lancaster county, Feb. 15, 1868, son of George K. and Caroline (Miller) Mearig, both families being among the old and respected ones of Lancaster county.

George K. Mearig was born in Upper Leacock township and was reared to the trade of miller, but as he could not stand being near the water, he took up butchering. Shortly after his marriage to Caroline Miller he moved to Mechanicsburg, where he died in 1890, at the age of fifty-five years, and he was buried in the Zion Lutheran cemetery. His widow, the mother of our subject, lives in Mechanicsburg. The children born to these parents were: Albert, who died in infancy; Elizabeth, who resides with her mother; and William M., of this sketch.

George Mearig, the grandfather of William M., was a native of Lancaster county, where he married Elizabeth Kolb, and carried on a tailoring business in this town for many years, a well-known and respected man. The maternal grandparents of our subject were Peter and Fanny (Rudy) Miller, both natives of Lancaster county. Mr. Miller was a blacksmith by-trade, but his eyesight failed him, and he lived in retirement in Mechanicsburg during his later years.

William M. Mearig was reared in Mechanicsburg, and was educated in the public schools of this town. For three years after the close of his school days our subject worked as a tinsmith. He then became clerk in a real estate office in Jenkintown, and in Philadelphia, where he worked for about six months. An opportunity offering he accepted a position with the firm of Kuhns & Bowers, wholesale dealers in wood and willow-ware, in Philadelphia, and for some six months was employed as their traveling salesman, but since February, 1889, he has been connected with the house of Lambert & Kirk, one of the drug firms in the city of Philadelphia. Mr. Mearig was almost a continual resident of Mechanicsburg up to the spring of 1902, when he moved to New Holland, Pa., where he now resides. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party, and from 1893 to 1897 he was the postmaster in his native town.

On June 1, 1893, Mr. Mearig was united in marriage to Miss Mary Kohler, in New Holland. Three children have been born to our subject and wife, namely: George, Anna and John F. Mrs. Mearig was born in Trappe, Montgomery Co., Pa., April 9, 1865, a daughter of Rev. John and Louisa (Baum) Kohler, of Union county, Pa. Rev. Mr. Kohler was one of the well-known ministers of the Lutheran Church, and continued his work through a period of fifty years.

JOHN D. HOOD, who resides in Columbia, Lancaster county, is a native of Lewes, Sussex Co., Del., born July 11, 1859, a son of John N. and Jane O. (Wolfe) Hood, whose four children were born in the following order: Hannah M., on the old homestead at Midway, Del.; Amanda B., also on the homestead; John D., of No. 403 Walnut street, Columbia, Pa.; and Thomas W., salesman for the Ross Brothers, sons of ex-Gov. Ross, at Slaford, Del. These children are all married with the exception of Hannah M.

John N. Hood, whose post office is still at Midway, Sussex Co., Del., is a son of John and Hannah (Greene) Hood, and was born near Lewes, Del., March 2, 1817. Two of his uncles, Dr. William Hood, of North Carolina, and Dr. Stephen Greene, of Laurel, Del., were among the most prominent physicians of their day. Among his living relatives are Hon. Judge Joseph Carey, ex-congressman, and Dr. John Carey, both of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Theodore and Davis Carey, of the well-known publishing firm of Carey Bros. & Grevemyer, in Philadelphia, the Careys being his first cousins. The Hood family and the Wolfe family, with which Mr. Hood is allied by marriage, are two of the oldest and most prominent in the State of Delaware, his grandfather, Robert Hood, a gentleman of wealth and intelligence, having come from Pennsylvania.

John Hood, the eldest son of Robert Hood, was also a native of Pennsylvania. He bought, and for many years resided upon, a large and valuable tract of land lying on the coast near Rehoboth City, Sussex Co., Del. In politics he was a Democrat, and in the war of 1812 he served in the defense of his adopted State as captain of a company of volunteers stationed at Lewes. He married Hannah, daughter of Richard Greene, who came from Rhode Island, and settled on the farm which is now the Hood homestead.

John N. Hood was married, in 1855, to Jane Oliver Wolfe, who was born Sept. 5, 1817, a daughter of Daniel and Mary (Ball) Wolfe. The descent of Mrs. John N. Hood is clearly traced to the Ball family of which the mother of Gen. George Washington was a member. Joshua B. Wolfe, brother of Mrs. John N. Hood, was with Gen. Winfield Scott at the taking of the city of Mexico, and was greatly distinguished for bravery throughout the Mexican war. Mrs. John N. Hood, as well as her husband, was an earnest worker in the Presbyterian Church, and the family has always been influential and distinguished. Mrs. Hood died in 1885, at the age of sixty-eight years, and Mr. Hood is now living in retirement.

John D. Hood, whose name opens this biographical sketch, remained on the home farm until 1881, when he went to Dakota, California and Oregon. He passed five years in the West, and during a part of this period carried on a cattle ranch in Clackamas county, Ore. In 1885 he returned home, passed several months in leisure, and the same year began railroading as fireman, from which position he was promoted to an engineer. In 1887 he was transferred from Philadelphia to Columbia, and this has since been his home.

Mr. Hood was united in marriage at Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1889, with Mrs. Kate H. Hershey, a native of Columbia, and to this marriage have been born three children, viz.: John V., Marion B. and Harold W. Mrs. Kate H. Hood is a daughter of Christian and Sarah R. (Hinkle) Hershey, and a granddaughter of Christian and Catherine (Brenner) Hershey. She was first married to Amos Hershey, a locomotive engineer, who died March 19, 1882, at the age of thirty-one years. He was born in Lancaster county, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hertzler) Hershey. To this first marriage were born four children, namely: Daisy; Christian, who married Maud Melville, and resides in Philadelphia; Harry and William, both clerks in Columbia. Mr. and Mrs. Hood are members of the First English Lutheran Church, of Columbia. In politics Mr. Hood is a Democrat, and socially is a member of the B. of L. E. and the Pennsylvania Railroad Relief Association.

Christian Hershey, deceased father of Mrs. Kate H. Hood, was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Feb. 5, 1824. He married Sarah Rebecca Hinkle, in Columbia, and to this union the following named children were born: Mrs. Kate H. Hood; Harry, of Columbia; William, of whom further mention will be made; Sarah E., wife of Clauston Shertzer, a farmer of Washington borough, Lancaster county; and Anna, who died young. The father of this family was a gentleman of wealth and respectability, and was called away Nov. 10, 1899, his remains being interred in Mount Bethel cemetery.

William Hershey, the third child born to Christian and Sarah R. (Hinkle) Hershey, is a native of Columbia, and at the age of twenty-two years began braking for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; a few months later he was made a fireman and filled that position five years, when he was promoted to engineer, and is now considered as one of the most trusty and faithful in the employ of the company. He is still single. He is a Master Mason, also a member of the Commandery and Chapter, and in politics is a Republican.

KIRK JOHNSON is known in Lancaster as a man who has done more probably than any other citizen of the county toward making it possible for a musical instrument to be placed in every home, however humble, in the city. He was born on his father's farm in New Jersey, June 4, 1861, a son of John W. Johnson, a native of Port Republic, New Jersey.

John W. Johnson is now living retired after years of activity on his farm. He devotes much of his time to the church, in which he has been a class-leader and exhorter for sixty-one years. In politics he is a Republican. His wife, Sarah Adams, of New Gretna, N. J., had six brothers, five of whom became Methodist ministers. To John W. Johnson and his wife were born ten children, as follows: Elizabeth, Mrs. B. E. Norris, of Atlantic City, N. J.; William N., superintendent of the American Ice Company, Atlantic City; Bella, Mrs. Kirby, of Atlantic City; Carrie, Mrs. Cramer, of New Gretna, N. J.; Ellwood S., with the American Ice Company; Kirk; Morris L., manager of Kirk Johnson's store at Atlantic City; J. Newton, an attorney in New York City; Virginia May, Mrs. Sommers, of Oceanville, N. J.; and Revilla, deceased. The mother died Jan. 24, 1898.

Kirk Johnson, after trudging across the country six miles to attend district school for a very limited period, was kept at home to help on the farm until he was twenty-one years of age. At that time, with no other capital than that probity which his father and his now sainted mother had so deeply implanted in his breast, he started out to brave the world and hew his own future. He succeeded in securing employment with F. A. North & Co., the noted musical dealers of Philadelphia, and was sent to Paterson, N. J., where a branch house was established by the Philadelphia firm. In 1883 Lancaster was made the objective point for the operations of this company, and here Mr. Johnson opened a branch house, conducting it for two years, when he embarked in business for himself. The beginning was modest, but he kept on and persevered until his place of business, No. 24 West King street, became the center of attraction for all lovers of music. He has thirteen employes, and at his branch store in Atlantic City there are nine. During this long residence in the county of his adoption Mr. Johnson has not only proved an educational force in the world of music, but has been equally forcible and beneficial in the public schools of the township in which he resides. His beautiful home is on the Philadelphia turnpike, just outside the city limits, in the upbuilding of which populous section he was a pioneer. The three handsome suburban cottages which he caused to be erected there formed the nucleus for a number of handsome homes. And as a recognition of his ability and public spirit the people of Lancaster township elected him to membership on the school board, where he has served for six years, and is still in office. Mr. Johnson has taken a lively interest in the erection of the new school building, which was completed in 1900, and which is now pronounced the finest public school building in Lancaster county. In politics Mr. Johnson is a Republican, and in religious views he is a Methodist, as is also his wife. Socially he belongs to Hershel Lodge, No. 134, I. O. O. F., and he is also a member of the O. U. A. M., and the B. P. O. E. Mr. Johnson has taken a leading position in the community as a man of integrity, public spirit and genial character, and his friends are legion.

In March, 1884, Mr. Johnson was united in marriage with Allan M. Tompkins, who was born in Haddonfield, N. J., a daughter of Andrew and Sallie Jane Tompkins. Five children blessed this union, Orville W., Nelson C., George K., Ruth and Kirk Devon.

FREDERICK SAMUEL ENGLE, of the firm of F. S. Engle & Bro., millers, at Engleside, a southern suburb of Lancaster, has his home at No. 142 South Queen street, in one of the seven elegant dwelling-houses which his father, the late Frederick Engle, built.

Frederick Engle was born July 11, 1835, and died Dec. 19, 1899. He was one of the best known citizens of Lancaster, and did much to aid not only in the material improvement of the city, but in that of the suburbs as well. Having bought the old Greaff hotel property, and much other property about Greaff's Landing, Mr. Engle proceeded to improve it, rebuilding the hotel and equipping it after the fashion of the best city hotels, providing electric lights, call bells, etc. He also planted a grove of young trees, now grown to fine proportions, and making the place one of the most delightful resorts in the section. Mr. Engle received a common-school education, and worked in the cotton mills until seventeen years of age, at which time he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a molder. He went to New Orleans, and for about six months in 1857 worked at his trade in that city, then returning to Lancaster, where he pursued his trade until 1861, when he enlisted in the 10th P. V. I., becoming a member of Company E. He served in the three months call, after which he re-enlisted in Company K, 79th P. V. I. He served three years, and participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged. He was mustered out as sergeant after a four-years' service for his country. During the whole time of the Civil war he was never sick or wounded, and made an excellent soldier. Mr. Engle engaged in the bottling business from 1871 until 1897, from which time he lived retired until his death, in 1899.

Mr. Engle married Elizabeth Suter, daughter of Rudolph Suter, who years ago kept a shoe store in East King street. Of this union five children were born, three of whom are living, as follows: Catherine, wife of E. H. Rowley; Lewis Hartman, associated with his brother in the flour-mill business; and Frederick Samuel.

Frederick Samuel Engle, who can boast of ancestors who were patriots in the Revolutionary war, was born in Lancaster Sept. 17, 1871. The public schools afforded him facilities for a good education, and when he left the class-room it was to assist his father in the bottling business. On April 1, 1901, Mr. Engle, associated with his brother, Lewis Hartman Engle, took possession of the well-equipped modern gristmill at Engleside which had been their father's, and which became theirs by inheritance. Here they have built up an excellent business, which is constantly on the increase.

Mr. Engle is a member of Lancaster Aerie, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. His name appears on the membership roll of the Reformed Church, and he takes an active interest in religious work. Politically he is an ardent Republican. Liberal in all things, and of genial, kindly nature, Frederick S. Engle is of the type of men to which his father belonged—whole-souled and deservedly popular.

GILBERT SMITH. The Smith family of Dru-more township has long been one highly esteemed in this locality, and one of its most worthy members is Gilbert Smith, of Liberty Square, a prominent farmer of this neighborhood.

Gilbert Smith was born in this township, Oct. 13, 1851, a son of Preston and Hannah (Carter) Smith, deceased. Their ancestry reaches back to both Scotland and Ireland. Preston Smith was a son of Samuel Smith, who reared four of his five children to maturity, Preston, born in 1816, died March 3, 1883; and Howard, Elizabeth and Samuel, all of whom have also passed out of life.

Preston Smith was united in marriage, Feb. 1, 1844, to Hannah Carter, of Martic township, born in 1821, and died Nov. 5, 1894. She was a daughter of Alexander Carter, of Martic township, and she became the devoted mother of eight children: Edwin, born Jan. 28, 1845, died in 1851; Albert, born May 8, 1846, is a farmer of this township, and he married Harriet Martin; Elmyra, born in 1848, died in 1850; Kersey, born in 1849, died in 1850; Gilbert; Oliver, born in 1853, died in 1864; Clarinda, born Sept. 18, 1855, is the wife of J. Martin Ankrim, of this township; and Nora, who was born Oct. 5, 1863, married George H. Brown, of Little Britain, more extended notice of whom is given in his sketch. During life Preston Smith was a well-known citizen, a Republican in his politics, and a Quaker in his religious belief.

Reared in a pious and intelligent home, Gilbert Smith was equipped with good principles when he started out in life for himself, although his means were limited. His education had been acquired in the common schools, and after leaving his books he started out for himself as a farmer boy. By the exercise of economy, energy and honesty, he gradually accumulated means, until now he owns one of the finest farms of the township, consisting of 118 acres, well cultivated and suitably improved.

On Oct. 8, 1887, Gilbert Smith was married to Elizabeth Rea, of Sadsbury township, a daughter of William and Sarah (Draucker) Rea, of Scotch-Irish and German ancestry. This family was one of the prominent ones in the early settlement of Lancaster county, James Rea, the great-grandfather, a son of an early settler, having located on the farm which is still in the possession of the family. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Horace Rea, born March 11, 1890; and Eugene Carter, born June 13, 1895. Nine children were born to the parents of Mrs. Smith: Amor, a farmer of Bart township; Mary, the wife of Samuel G. Fogle, of this county; Hannah, who resides on the old home place; Philip D., a farmer of this township, whose sketch appears in another part of this volume; Adam F., a farmer of Sadsbury township; Sara A., a teacher in the Lancaster county schools; Elizabeth J., born Feb. 27, 1858; S. William Rea was born March 5, 1811, and died Oct. 14, 1881; his wife was born Aug. 27, 1819, and died Nov. 8, 1889.

While he does not belong to any particular sect, Mr. Smith believes in all moral influences, and follows out in his life the precepts he learned in early years. His wife is a member of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church. In politics Mr. Smith is a staunch Republican and has been active in his party because he thoroughly believes in its principles, but he is no seeker for office.

GEORGE BAIR HERSHEY, M. D. Among the prominent and representative citizens of Gap, Pa., is Dr. George Bair Hershey, who is well known in this locality both as a physician and as an educator. He was born Nov. 28, 1872, in Buyerstown, Lancaster county, son of Josiah and Mary Ann (Hershey) Hershey, of Lancaster county.

Dr. Hershey was reared on the farm and remained with his parents until he was seventeen years old. His primary education was obtained in the common schools, and this was supplemented with one session in Parkesburg Academy and one year of student life, 1890-1891, in the Millersville State Normal School. The young man then engaged in teaching, first in Bareville, where he continued one year, and then went to New Milltown, where he taught two years, going thence to Harmony School, at Gap, where, after one year of teaching he organized the Gap Academy. This institution became very popular with Dr. Hershey as principal, and Ralph Yoder, vice-principal. The first year enrolled sixty-seven pupils, and more applied for admission who could not be accommodated. After teaching through the first two sessions at the Academy, in 1895-1896, Dr. Hershey entered upon the study of medicine, living on the farm with his parents a part of the time. For six months he read under the supervision of Dr. G. W. H. Frew, of Paradise township, and further prepared for entrance to the University of Pennsylvania where he remained four terms, graduating in 1900. During the summer of 1899 Dr. Hershey took a special course of surgical training under the personal supervision of Dr. Joseph Spellissy, at the Pennsylvania Hospital, in Philadelphia. While at college he defrayed his expenses in part by getting out a set of questions on dissecting-room anatomy; by assisting the publisher in the preparation of a manual of Therapeutics, and one on special surgery; and by private tutoring. On Aug. 7th, following his graduation, he located for practice in Gap where he has remained. Dr. Hershey has shown skill and a high order of ability in his profession, and he numbers among his patients many of the leading families of this locality. He has been prominent in Sunday school work, and for one year was local secretary of the Lancaster County Sunday School, and in 1894 was president of the Gap Local Institute. Dr. Hershey belongs to the Old Mennonite Church. In politics he is a Republican and is one of the progressive and public-spirited citizens of Gap.

On Oct. 31, 1900, in Philadelphia, Dr. Hershey was married by Rev. Chas. Mervine, to Miss Anna M. Portner, born in Gap, Pa., daughter of Edward and Elizabeth (Simpson) Portner, the former of whom was born in New York City, son of Henry N. and Marie (Haenchen) Portner. Henry N. Portner was born in Bavaria, Germany, and was a son of Conrad Portner, a native of Switzerland, who died in Bavaria. Henry N. Portner died in Philadelphia, in 1870, at the age of forty-five years, and was buried in that city. In 1830, in Zweibruecken, Germany, Henry N. Portner was married to Marie Haenchen, and in 1832 they came to America where Mr. Portner followed the cabinet-making trade in New York City for five years. In 1837 he removed to Philadelphia. He and wife were members of the German Reformed Church. Their children were: Edward, the father of Mrs. Hershey; and Miss Caroline, of Salisbury township.

In 1873 Edward Portner came with his family to Lancaster county and settled on a farm in Salisbury township. He was an artist by profession, and had for a considerable period been proprietor of a dry-goods store, but when his health failed he removed to the country in the hope that the fresh air and change of occupation would enable him to regain it. However, he died in 1883, at the age of fifty years, and was interred in Bellevue cemetery. In 1870, in Philadelphia, Edward Portner was married to Miss Elizabeth Simpson, who still survives and resides on the farm in Salisbury township. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Portner consisted of these well-known members: Marie, who married Howard M. Scott, a farmer near Sadsburyville, Chester Co., Pa.; Edward J., who is a chemist in Philadelphia; Henry, who is a druggist in Gap; Anna M., the wife of Dr. Hershey; William, who is in the life insurance business in Philadelphia; and Miss Lena, at home.

Dr. and Mrs. Hershey have one child, Margaret Elizabeth, born Jan. 15, 1902.

DAVID L. GARBER, one of the substantial farmers of East Donegal township, was born in this township Aug. 31, 1855, a son of Benjamin and Fianna (Landis) Garber.

Benjamin Garber (or Gerber, as he chose to spell the name) was born in East Donegal township July 11, 1818, and died July 18, 1900, his burial being in Kraybill cemetery. His occupation through life was that of a farmer, and he was a man who took much interest in the affairs of the township, serving most efficiently as supervisor. For twenty-eight years prior to his death, he lived a retired life. He married Fianna Landis, who was born in Manheim township, and who died in October, 1893. Both of these estimable people were members of the Kraybill Church, near which they now rest. The children born to Benjamin and wife were: Israel, Jacob and Barbara, who all died young; Anna, who married Joseph L. Risser, of Mt. Joy township; Benjamin L., a retired farmer on the old homestead in East Donegal township; Fianna, who married Clement K. Brubaker; and David L., of this biography.

The paternal grandparents of David L. Garber were Jacob and Barbara (Miller) Garber, both of whom died on the old farm on which Benjamin now resides. Their children were: Benjamin; Andrew; Barbara, who married John Nissley; Elizabeth, who married Isaac Hershey. All of them have passed away. The maternal grandparents were Benjamin and Anna (Long) Landis, of Lancaster county, and the former was a farmer and miller in Manheim township, where both he and his wife died, having lived Christian lives, as members of the Old Mennonite Church. Their children were: Fianna, deceased; Elizabeth, the widow of John Hess, of Manor township; Maria, deceased, the wife of Levi Getz; Fanny, who married Samuel Hess, deceased; Nancy, who married Samuel Hershey, and resides near Strasburg; Amelia, who married Michael Nolt, deceased; Benjamin, a retired farmer of Lancaster; Henry and Isaac, deceased; Israel, unmarried, an inventor, living retired in Chicago, Ill.; and Daniel, deceased, who was a farmer of Manheim township.

David L. Garber remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-four years of age, employed in agricultural pursuits, and he then took charge of his present farm, which then consisted of 132 acres, to which he has added until now he has under cultivation 154 acres, one of the best farms in this locality. Here Mr. Garber has lived a quiet, industrious life, has voted the Republican ticket and taken a good citizen's interest in public affairs, and has been one of the most highly regarded members of the Mennonite Church.

In October, 1879, Mr. Garber was married to Emma S. Hershey, and two sons have been born to them, Benjamin F. and J. Hoffman. The birth of Mrs. Garber occurred in West Hempfield township, Sept. 26, 1855. Her parents were J. Hoffman and Barbara (Brenneman) Hershey, natives of West Hempfield and of Manor townships, respectively. For many years Mr. Hershey was one of the most prominent farmers of West Hempfield township, and accumulated substance; in middle life he was one of the organizers of the First National Bank, of Manheim, and became its cashier, so continuing until his health failed and he retired from business cares. He survived for twenty years, beloved and esteemed by all. His interest in educational matters was marked, and he served as school director and did much for his locality. His lamented death occurred in West Hempfield township, near Salunga, April 11, 1896, and his remains were reverently interred in the cemetery in Landisville. His presence was missed from the Mennonite Church, where his place was seldom vacant. The mother, who was born Nov. 3, 1824, resides on the old home place.

The family born to Mr. and Mrs. Hershey numbered ten children: Frances, who married Harry M. Mayer, surveyor and conveyancer, and also farmer, of Rohrerstown; Rebecca A., who married Hebron Herr, a retired farmer of Lancaster; Simon A., who resides with his mother; Amos B., who married Rebecca Bones, and died in 1897; Emma S.; Mary E., who married Frank M. Herr, a retired farmer and Mennonite preacher, of West Lampeter township; Martha J., who married Cyrus G. Fry, a farmer of Rapho township; Barbara A., deceased, who married Levi K. Brubaker, a retired farmer of Lititz; J. Hoffman, who died in 1886; and Abraham, who died young.

ENOS B. WEAVER. One of the prominent general farmers and truckers of Upper Leacock township is Enos B. Weaver, who is a native of East Lampeter township, where he was born Dec. 13, 1865, a son of Aaron and Susannah (Houser) Weaver, natives of West Lampeter township.

Aaron Weaver remained in West Lampeter where he was born in 1840, until in the spring of 1864, when he moved to East Lampeter, where he remained until the death of his wife, Sept. 9, 1895, at the age of fifty-four. He then retired and moved to Lancaster. Both he and his wife were long connected with the Mennonite Church. The children born to them were: Enos B., of this sketch; Jacob, who conducts a greenhouse on the old homestead; Lizzie, who married Ephraim H. Stoner, a farmer of Strasburg township; Harry, a farmer of East Lampeter township; Fanny, who married Christ M. Brubaker, a farmer of East Lampeter; Ida, who married Amos R. Landis, of East Lampeter; Anna, who resides with the above named sister; Mary, who resides with her sister, Mrs. Brubaker; and Ella, who lives with her sister, Mrs. Stoner.

After he reached his majority our subject, Enos B. Weaver, went to Oregon, Pa., where he operated a greenhouse, raising flowers and early vegetables for the market, remaining there for two years and then coming to his present location in the spring of 1901. While in Oregon our subject met the estimable and intelligent lady who, in May, 1899, became his wife—Miss Susan S. Shank—and to this union one daughter, Mary S., has been born. Mrs. Weaver was born in Pequea township, this county, a daughter of Jacob R. and Mary S. (Stoner) Shank, the former of whom was born in 1828, and the latter in 1832. Mr. Shank is a retired farmer and both he and wife belong to the Mennonite Church. Their children were: Jacob S., on the old homestead; Mary S., deceased; John S., a hardware clerk in Lancaster; Susan S., the wife of Mr. Weaver. The paternal grandfather was John Shank, of Lancaster county, who was thrice married; the grandmother of Mrs. Weaver was, in her maidenhood, Miss Rush.

Mrs. Weaver began teaching school at the age of seventeen, being so engaged at the time of her marriage; she is a lady of taste, education and refinement. In politics Mr. Weaver is an ardent Republican, and both he and wife are valued members of the Mennonite Church, and highly respected through the neighborhood.

WALTER BAER WEIDLER, M. D., is now located at No. 128 North Duke street, Lancaster, in the offices that for forty-three years were occupied by the late Dr. J. Aug. Ehler.

In the paternal line Dr. Weidler comes from a very old Lancaster county family, his grandfather, Henry Weidler, having been a farmer of Mechanicsburg.

Prof. H. C. Weidler, son of Henry, is the widely known and popular educator, who has graduated so many hundreds from his business college. He married Mary Ann Baer, daughter of William Baer, a farmer of Intercourse, and this union was blessed with the following named children: Alice, wife of Clarence A. Krouse, general manager of the American Fire Insurance Company, Philadelphia; Milton Baer, a clerk in New York City; and Dr. Walter B., of Lancaster.

Mrs. Mary Ann (Baer) Weidler is descended from Conrad Rutter, who went to England from Prussia in 1683, and then emigrated to America, making the voyage to this country in company with Francis Daniel Pastorius, in the ship "America," which landed at Philadelphia Aug. 20, 1683. He was of the original thirteen families who laid out Germantown on Oct. 12, 1683. After some time in Germantown Conrad Rutter located in what is now known as Pittston, where he remained until, in 1716, he came to this county, settling in Leacock. He took up 588 acres of land on a grant from William Penn, and this land was afterward divided among his three sons, one of whom, Joseph, was Dr. Weidler's great-great-grandfather, and whose eldest son, Henry, married Elizabeth Schultze, first cousin of Gov. Schultze, of Pennsylvania. As early as 1729 Conrad Rutter helped found the first Episcopal Church in the eastern part of Lancaster county; and Joseph Rutter, from whom Dr. Weidler is descended, built one of the first schoolhouses in Leacock township.

Walter Baer Weidler, M. D., was born in Mechanicsburg Oct. 14, 1873, and after attending the public schools of his district came to Lancaster, and was graduated from his father's business college, where, for two years after graduation, he was assistant instructor. In October, 1894, he began the study of medicine, in the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in June, 1898. After spending eight months as house surgeon in the Philadelphia Home for the Incurables, and one and one-half years as house surgeon in the Wills Eye Hospital, Philadelphia, Dr. Weidler went to Europe, where he took up the special study of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, pursuing his studies for six months in Vienna, two months in Berlin, and four months in London, returning to his old home in Lancaster on July 9, 1901.

Harry Heise was born on the present homestead, and Mrs. Hannah Heise was born in Marietta, in the same township. The father died in February, 1862, when fifty-eight years old, and the mother died in Columbia, aged sixty-five years, in December, 1877, having resided in that city for seven years prior to her death, and in that city the remains of both parents rest side by side. Hempfield township, a daughter of John and Susan (Frick) Swarr, the former of whom was a school director in East Hempfield, was a farmer by vocation, and for many years prior to his death led a retired life. He died in the Mennonite faith, and his remains were interred in East Petersburg. To John and Susan Swarr were born nine children, namely: Aaron, deceased; Benjamin, a retired farmer of East Hempfield township; Eliza, widow of Henry Hershey, of the same township; Mary A., of Landisville; Susan, widow of Christian Hershey, also of Landisville; Mattie, wife of Daniel Forrey, a farmer at Millersville; Sarah, who married H. G. Bowers, of East Hempfield township; Barbara, wife of Christ Miller, a retired hotel man, of Neffsville; and Fanny, Mrs. Heise.

B. Frank Heise is one of the most progressive, as well as one of the most prominent and popular men of his township. In politics a Republican, he has been auditor of his township for the past seven years, and a school director for six years; was a director of the Columbia Wagon Works for several years; and in 1901 was elected a director of the Central National Bank, of Columbia. As a farmer he has but few equals in the county. Since 1865 the grove on the farm, known as Heise's picnic grounds, has been used as pleasure grounds, having been prepared for that purpose by Mr. Heise, who has erected pavilions, etc., on the premises. The grounds are known all over this part of Lancaster county as the popular resort of the section. Fraternally Mr. Heise is a Freemason, and a Heptasoph, and socially he and his family stand high in the esteem of the community, in which they have so long lived.

JACOB DENLINGER, an old and prominent farmer of Leacock township, Lancaster county, where he is highly respected and esteemed for his many manly and honorable qualities, was born in Paradise township, Oct. 30, 1849, a son of John and Mary (Brubaker) Denlinger, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county.

DANIEL D. GRAUL, one of the best known citizens of the town of Penryn, Pa., traces his ancestry back to Germany, his great-grandfather having come to America from that country.

John Graul, his grandfather, was born in Berks county, and spent his whole life there, for many years working as a laborer in the Reading car repair shops. By trade he was an excellent brickmaker. His marriage was to Anna Prince, and their children, five sons and five daughters, were: Daniel, in the brick business; William, also engaged in the brick business; Henry, a hatter, in Reading; Frederick, a carpenter in car shops, who became the father of Daniel D.; John, a laborer; Emma, the wife of William Nachtrieb; Hettie, the wife of Geat Weidner; Susan, the wife of William Achenbach; Catherine, who died single; and Caroline, who married William Gundry.

Frederick Gaul, son of John, was born in Berks county, in 1839. In early life he learned the carpenter trade and followed this until his death, Jan. 26, 1866. His marriage was to Sophia Greider, and they had a family of four children: Harry, who is associated with Daniel D., in his work; Joseph, who is a boss baker, and is employed at the State Asylum at Wernersville, Berks Co., Pa.; Grant L., who is a cigarmaker of Reading; and Daniel, of this sketch.

Daniel D. Gaul was born in Reading, Pa., Jan. 18, 1862, and was left without a father's care at the early age of five years. Until he was ten years old he went to school, and then went to work in an endeavor to add to the family resources, in the Jacksons Rope Works, at Reading, where he remained until his mother moved with her little family to Lititz, Lancaster county. Here the ambitious and industrious lad soon obtained employment in the Lititz brickyard where he remained for four years, after this going to learn the baker's trade with William Bollinger, remaining for four years, thoroughly learning this business also. For six years Mr. Gaul worked as a journeyman, and in 1887 started into business for himself at Penryn, and so well has he succeeded that he has remained ever since in this pleasant village. By close and careful attention to his business, he has built up a large and constantly increasing trade, his wares taking the place of others previously put upon the market, and relieving many of the cares of the modern housewife.

Mr. Gaul was married to Miss Emma Eaby, a daughter of Henry and Anna Eaby. Fraternally he is connected with the I. O. O. F., No. 657, of Manheim, and the K. of P., No. 253, of Lititz. Mr. Gaul is one of the progressive young business men of this neighborhood, and has won his place in the business world by his own efforts, possessing now not only a fine patronage in his chosen line, but also the respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN BARNETT, of Fairfield Village Green, is a most worthy citizen of Drumore township, where he carries on a successful blacksmith business. He was born in this township July 6, 1857, a son of James and Emily (Ritchie) Barnett; also natives of this township, and of Scotch-Irish ancestry.

James Barnett, the father, reared twelve children, but only six of these grew to maturity: Joseph, a blacksmith of Chestnut Level, married Harriet Shank; James, a railroad conductor, married Margaret Brown, and lives in Renova, Clinton Co., Pa.; Charles, a resident of Conowingo, Md.; Mary, the wife of Clark Bishop, of Chestnut Level; Louisa, of Drumore township; and Benjamin Franklin, of this sketch. James Barnett was born in 1820 and spent his life as a farmer, was prominent in the Methodist Church, and was a Democrat in his political belief. His widow still survives, living in Centerville, Pa., in her seventy-sixth year.

The successful business career of Mr. Barnett should be an inspiration to others who are obliged to submit to the disadvantages of limited means in youth. At the age of fourteen years he went into the blacksmith shop belonging to Mr. Hensel, and remained there for three years, or until he had mastered every detail of this business. Then, without a dollar, he started out courageously for himself, and established a shop in Fairfield, where, by energy, economy and industry, he has earned a most comfortable home and shop, and all the expensive tools necessary to his trade.

Mr. Barnett was united in marriage on April 6, 1883, to Sarah L. Brown, of Drumore township, born Feb. 13, 1855, a daughter of John S. and Sarah (Hellam) Brown, of Eden township. Mr. and Mrs. Brown reared a family of five children: Margaret, who married James Barnett, she now being deceased; Clara, who married Aldus Rineer, of Lancaster; Sarah L., the wife of our subject; William, deceased; and John, of Lancaster. A commingling of English, Scotch and Irish blood was in the Brown ancestry. Both parents have passed away. The two children born to Mr. and Mrs. Barnett are: Scott B., born Nov. 24, 1885; and Elsie, born Feb. 27, 1888, both bright and beautiful, as well as intelligent, children.

Mr. Barnett has been a life-long Democrat, while in religious connection both he and wife attend, and most heartily support, the Methodist Church. Mrs. Barnett has assisted her husband by her housewifely skill, and is much esteemed in the neighborhood. Socially he is connected with the I. O. O. F., where he is valued. Perhaps no family in the village enjoys more thoroughly the high esteem of the community than does that of Benjamin Franklin Barnett.

Joseph G. Rankin was reared on a farm, and obtained his education in the public schools of his district. He proved his loyalty to his country by enlisting in her service in 1864, entering the 203d P. V. I., and participating in a number of severely contested battles, being honorably discharged in July, 1865, with an excellent record. Mr. Rankin has been very successful in carrying out his enterprises. Although he began life for himself with limited means, his industry and business ability have resulted in a very substantial standing in his community. Mr. Rankin owns a fine farm of eighty-eight acres of well improved land, a handsome brick dwelling, and also one of the best paying lime quarries in the township. He has been engaged in the lime business quite extensively.

On Sept. 15, 1873, Mr. Rankin married Miss Elizabeth Eshleman, and a family of fourteen children was born to them, ten of these still surviving: Samuel E.; Susan; Jacob; Henry; Martin; Mary E.; Joseph; Edward; Chester; and George. Catherine, Eli, Lydia and William died young. Mrs. Rankin was born in 1854, and was one of a family of twelve children, the nine survivors being: Martin, Daniel, Elizabeth, Jacob, Susan, George, Eli, Lydia and Mary.

Mr. Rankin is not only an excellent farmer, but he is also a progressive and useful citizen. In 1897 he was elected school director, and still serves, doing all in his power to advance educational matters in his district. He belongs to the Old Mennonite Church. In politics he is a Republican. Mr. Rankin is regarded as one of the leading citizens of the township and is known to be a kind neighbor, and a man who looks well after the welfare of his family and community.

B. Barton Witmer was educated in the schools of Lancaster county, and, when a boy of sixteen years, he commenced work as a journeyman miller, working at that trade for seven years. In December, 1882, he married Miss Katie Anderson, of Lancaster county, and daughter of Robert and Sarah Anderson, old settlers of Lancaster, who were born in Ireland, and moved to this country fifty years ago. Mrs. Witmer was born in Lancaster county in 1863. After marriage Mr. Witmer lived on a farm near Drumore for four years. In 1887 he engaged in a small way as a general merchant and in the produce business, and from a small beginning he has become one of the leading dealers in the place, carrying a large stock of goods. In 1894 he built himself a fine brick house, modern in every respect. From a poor boy Mr. Witmer has become a man of importance in his community. He is well-to-do and prosperous in all his undertakings. He has two children: Sadie O., born Aug. 22, 1884, is a graduate of the High School and a bright young lady; Chester A., born Aug. 22, 1887, is a student in the home schools. In politics Mr. Witmer has always been identified with the Democratic party. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Witmer is a popular man in his town, and well thought of by all who know him.

PHARES K. LANDIS owns and operates a threshing machine in West Donegal township, where he is also engaged in general farming on the old parental homestead. He was born near Neffsville, Lancaster county, July 15, 1865, son of John F. and Magdelina (Keller) Landis, whose personal history forms the subject of an interesting sketch elsewhere.

Phares K. Landis was married Nov. 30, 1886, at the home of the bride in West Donegal township, to Lizzie L. Heisey. This union has been blessed with two children: Simon H., born July 19, 1889; and Lizzie H., born Sept. 12, 1892. Mrs. Lizzie L. Landis was born in West Donegal township, and is a sister of W. L. Heisey, of that township. Her parents, Jacob W. Heisey and Fanny Longenecker, were married in Lancaster, in 1868, by Rev. J. J. Strine; her father lived to be almost ninety years of age.

Phares K. Landis spent his childhood and youth with his parents, and was afforded such educational privileges as their circumstances permitted. An alert and keen-eyed business man, he has made his way in the world, and holds a good position in the judgment of the public. In the spring of 1887 he began cultivating the parental homestead on his own responsibility. For the last twelve years he has operated two steam threshers with marked success. Mr. Landis is a member of the Mennonite Church. He takes no part in political affairs.

ABRAHAM L. LEAMAN, manufacturer of umbrellas and umbrella handles, ex-manufacturer of paints, and owner of one of the finest farms in East Lampeter township, was born in East Lampeter Feb. 16, 1853, and has been a resident of Lancaster since 1889.

Joseph and Mary (Landis) Leaman, his parents, were farming people during their active lives, in Lampeter. They were born Jan. 14, 1828, and Feb. 1, 1825, and died Oct. 8, 1857, and March 31, 1860, respectively. To them were born the following children: Lydia, who died at the age of eighteen; Mary A., who died at the age of nineteen; Benjamin F., who died when twenty-eight years of age; Abraham L.; and Joseph, a retired farmer and ex-merchant of Lancaster. The paternal grandparents were Benjamin and Barbara Leaman, and the maternal grandparents were Abraham and Barbara Landis. Both of Mr. Leaman's grandfathers devoted their lives to farming and stockraising, the latter living on the well-known Landis farm, which has furnished a livelihood to so many bearing the name. The family of Landis is supposed to have originated in Switzerland; at least several generations of the family lived among the mountains and valleys of that country.

The youth of Abraham L. Leaman was spent in a manner not unlike that of the average farm reared boy, yet he was more ambitious than many, and when his duty to the family and home interests terminated when he became of age, he started out on a tour of inspection through Ohio, Missouri and Illinois. Finding no locality that offered inducements superior to his native surroundings, he returned to East Lampeter, and purchased what was known as the Evergreen Dairy Farm, of forty-seven acres, advantageously located on the Conestoga river, within easy access of the city, and now under a high state of cultivation—a vast improvement over its state at the time of purchase, at which time the price was $300 per acre. There is a two and a half story brick house, besides the other well constructed buildings on the farm, and the implements and general appurtenances are of the most advanced kind to be found on the market.

After leaving the active management of his farm to other parties, Mr. Leaman engaged in the manufacture of paint, conducting the Lancaster Paint Works in partnership with D. L. Harnish, in Lancaster, their factory being located at No. 338 North Charlotte street, the store on Center Square, in the old New Era building, formerly the old "Swan Hotel." Mr. Leaman continued thus until October, 1900, when he disposed of the business to S. M. Boyd & Co. He then retired until April, 1902, when he started a manufactory for umbrellas and umbrella handles, with a capital stock of $12,000. This enterprise bids fair to meet with the success which has been characteristic of all Mr. Leaman's business efforts, which have placed him in a substantial position in the community of Lancaster. He was a charter member of the Lancaster Board of Trade, and of the Land & Development Company.

In October, 1881, Mr. Leaman married Anna Rohrer, daughter of Peter and Mary (Wissler) Rohrer, the former a farmer during his active life. He died in March, 1900, at the age of seventy-two, and Mrs. Rohrer, who was born in Clay township in 1836, is now living in Petersburg, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer had the following named children: Anna, Mrs. Leaman; Barbara E., wife of Edward Houser, of York, Pa.; Jacob W., a retired farmer of Petersburg; and P. Bachman, a farmer of East Petersburg. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Leaman were Jacob and Mary (Bachman) Rohrer, the former of whom was a veterinary surgeon known for miles around his home; and her maternal grandparents were Jacob and Barbara Wissler, the former a farmer of Clay township, Lancaster Co., Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Leaman have six children: Mary R., born Dec. 17, 1882; Benjamin Franklin, Dec. 30, 1884; Ada R., Feb. 5, 1887; Anabel R., Sept. 5, 1893; Barbara N., Nov. 5, 1897; and Theodore Roosevelt, Dec. 2, 1901. Mr. Leaman and his family belong to the Presbyterian Church. He is progressive and public-spirited, and takes a keen interest in many affairs outside his direct business. He has the faculty of making and keeping friends, and the advantage of a ready sympathy with all with whom he comes in contact. In political sympathy he is a Republican, but he is no office seeker.

B. WILLIS DENLINGER, who was born Feb. 10, 1867, on the farm in East Lampeter township where he now resides, is one of the younger agriculturists of his section of the county, but is rapidly working his way to the front as a progressive and thrifty man, fully awake to all the requisites of those who would be successful in his line.

Jacob Denlinger, the grandfather of B. Willis, was also a native of Lancaster county. He was a carpenter and builder by trade, but in the latter part of his life followed farming, in East Lampeter. He was a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church. He married Miss Mary Landis, and they were the parents of seven children, namely: Anna, deceased, wife of David Weaver; Martha, wife of Joseph Swartley, of Ohio; John L., deceased; Benjamin L., deceased, who is mentioned below; Jacob, of Ohio; David, of Salunga, Pa.; and Mary, deceased wife of George Wisler.

A. L. Larnou

Benjamin L. Denlinger was born in East Lampeter July 4, 1826. He lived at home until he was twenty-two years of age, in his youth attending the common schools, and began life for himself at farming, continuing same until he retired, in 1881. He died Sept. 26, 1894. Mr. Denlinger married Miss Catharine Harnish, who died Aug. 13, 1901. They became the parents of six children, namely: Susanna, who died in childhood; Jacob H., of East Lampeter; Lettie L., wife of Albert Rowland; Annie C., wife of Amos Hosteter; Mary E., wife of Jacob Weaver; and B. Willis. The parents were both members of the New Mennonite Church.

B. Willis Denlinger remained at home up to the time of his father's death, after which he purchased the old homestead place, and has followed farming almost exclusively. He was educated in the common schools of Lancaster county, and is a credit to the community in which his life has been passed, and to the honorable family to which he belongs. On Dec. 10, 1895, Mr. Denlinger wedded Miss Mary K. Keller, daughter of Isaac Keller, of Lancaster county. This union has been blessed with one child, a daughter, Lettie M.

EDGAR HERR LEVAN, of No. 56 North Duke street, Lancaster, comes from very old Pennsylvania families in both paternal and maternal lines.

The progenitors of this branch of the Levans were three brothers, who came from France to America at the time of the great exodus of French Huguenots on account of religious persecution. These three brothers settled in Berks county, Pa., and from one of them Edgar H. Levan is descended. His grandfather, Isaac Newton Levan, was a hatter, and was the organizer and president of all the building associations of Reading. Edgar M. Levan, our subject's father, was born in Clarkson, Columbiana Co., Ohio, in what was known as the "Western Reserve," on Dec. 25, 1850, was admitted to the Berks county Bar in 1872, and at thirty-three years of age was nominated by the Democrats for district attorney of Berks county. His death, in August, 1890, in the fortieth year of his age, resulted from a railway accident. He was married Dec. 25, 1874, to Miss Ann Elizabeth Herr, sister of Col. D. H. Herr, the widely known patent attorney, who is a lineal descendant of Hans Herr, who came to America and settled in Pennsylvania contemporaneously with William Penn. One child was born to Edgar M. and Ann Elizabeth (Herr) Levan, Edgar Herr.

Edgar H. Levan was born in Reading, Pa., Nov. 19, 1877. After studying in private schools in his native city he came to Lancaster, where he was graduated from the Boys' High School in 1893, taking the third honor. He graduated from the York Collegiate Institute in 1894, and from Franklin and Marshall College in 1898. Some time after his graduation from college Mr. Levan entered as a student at law with C. Reese Eaby, Esq., but gave up his studies to accept a position with the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa. While at Franklin and Marshall College he took an active interest in the College Glee Club, and was its leader for one year. He is a fine pianist and organist, and was for two and a half years organist and choirmaster of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Lancaster. Socially Mr. Levan is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and religiously he is a member of the First Presbyterian Church. The son of a brilliant father, and coming from a sturdy race on his mother's side, his future is certainly full of promise.

MICHAEL F. GABLE. At the tender age of three years Michael F. Gable, now one of the well-known, substantial citizens of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, crossed the ocean with his parents from Germany—their native land—to seek in America the good fortune, which common report had ascribed to citizens of the New World. These parents were Michael and Margaret (Flat) Gable and the long journey was made in the year 1851. The father settled at once on Chestnut Hill, in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, and there passed the remainder of his years, living the life of the industrious vicinity, finding the occupation which brought comparative comfort and ease. He died in 1869, aged seventy years, and his faithful wife passed away in June, 1897, aged seventy-seven years. They were buried in the Catholic cemetery at Columbia. To Michael and Margaret Gable were born the following children: John, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Michael F.; Peter, who died in India; Margaret, wife of Henry Rearick, of West Hempfield township; Barbara, deceased; Mary, wife of Joseph Fonwall, a merchant of Harrisburg; Adam, who died young; and Elizabeth, deceased.

Michael F. Gable was born in Germany Nov. 2, 1847. He was reared in West Hempfield, receiving a good common-school education, but at the age of fifteen he began life in earnest by working on the banks, and on the surrounding farms. He remained at the home of his parents until he was twenty-five years of age.

On Oct. 14, 1873, in Lancaster, Michael F. Gable married Miss Clara E. Johns, who was born in Lancaster township, Nov. 9, 1855, daughter of Eli and Sarah (Goodwin) Johns, granddaughter of John and Eva Johns (natives of Germany and Lancaster county, respectively), and granddaughter on her maternal side of John and Amelia Goodwin, who were old residents of Lancaster county. Eli Johns, her father, fills a soldier's grave, dying in 1864, at the age of thirty-five years, while serving in a Pennsylvania regiment in the Civil war. His widow, who was born in 1831, still survives, a resident of Lancaster county; she is a member of the Mennonite Church.

The family of Eli and Sarah Johns consisted of the following children: Clara E., wife of Michael F. Gable; Elvina, wife of Abiah Wiker, a stone cutter of Witmer; John, who resides with his mother at Milton; Mary, at home; and Sadie, wife of George Brenner, a cigarmaker of Lancaster.

To Michael F. and Clara E. Gable were born a family of eight children, namely: Henry, Sarah A., Michael, Emma, Margaret, Flora, John and Charles. All are at home except Sarah A., the eldest daughter, who has married Daniel Dietz, a tanner, and lives in West Hempfield township.

After his marriage Michael F. Gable spent twelve years on the farm of Abra Mellinger in Manor township. He then moved to his present farm of twenty-eight acres in West Hempfield township, which he purchased in 1892 from Casper Teller, and he has since resided there, engaging in general farming, and by his good judgment and persistent effort winning a creditable success. In politics he is a Democrat. In public affairs he is a careful and patriotic citizen, and his many friends and acquaintances hold him in high respect and esteem.

JACOB DURWARD FOX, the proprietor and owner of the "Eagle Hotel" at Lampeter Square, West Lampeter township, was born near Steelville, in Sadsbury township, Oct. 12, 1858, a son of William and Eliza Lucretia (Williams) Fox. His father died in 1873, at the age of sixty-one years. In early life he was engaged in the butchering business, and was in the mercantile business in Atglen, Chester county, and also at Daleville, in the same county, for a number of years. He sold the store in his later days, and bought a farm of 144 acres near Steelville, which was known as the Gen. Steel farm, and here he lived and died. William Fox was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Kane, and two of her children are now living, Sarah J., the wife of David Siner, of Atglen; and Anna Margaret, the wife of James Philips, of Axford, Chester county. The second Mrs. Fox was Eliza Lucretia Williams, a native of Russellville, Chester county. She is still living at the age of sixty-three years, and is the mother of the following family: Jacob Durward, whose name introduces this article; Samuel Owen, a resident of Foggs Manor, who married Katie McMullen, and is a hard-working and trustworthy man; William Bernard, an engineer of Philadelphia, who married Miss Alice Mahoney; Mahlon George, a farmer, who remains on the old farm, and is married to Miss Adaline Bitter; Phoebe Ella, wife of Henry Eckman, of Daleville, Chester county; and Mary Louisa, wife of Dennis Mahoney, a farmer of Steelville.

Jacob D. Fox was reared on the farm, and had his education in the public schools, and in Chestnut Hill Academy. When he was but a lad of fourteen years of age, he lost his father, and by virtue of the fact that he was the oldest boy, he was called upon to take the lead in the affairs of the farm, and his mother soon put its management into his hands, where it remained. The young man spent a year in Ohio after he had attained his majority, and in 1880 he was married, locating in Steelville, and operating the farm on shares for a year. At the end of that time he established himself on a farm in Bart township, Lancaster county, where he rented a place of ninety acres. This he farmed for a year, and then returned to the home place, remaining until 1893, when he established himself on the Robert Sampson place in Colerain township. The following year Mr. Fox came to West Lampeter, and rented the hotel, which he has since conducted, and his management of which has shown great adaptability. He is a genial and companionable character, makes friends readily, is attentive and courteous to all his patrons, and has won a large circle of personal friends throughout this part of Lancaster county. In December, 1900, he was able to purchase the hotel at a good figure, and is rapidly becoming a successful and well-to-do citizen of the town.

Mr. Fox was married Oct. 27, 1880, to Miss Abbie Ann Bush, who was born May 23, 1860, a daughter of Henry and Sarah Bush, and they have become the parents of the following children: William Henry, born May 15, 1882; Ada Lucretia, born Aug. 21, 1886; and Mary Elizabeth, born July 7, 1889. Mr. Fox is a Democrat, and belongs to the Knights of the Mystic Chain.

DEACON HENRY D. HELLER. Many of the old and prominent families of Lancaster county have occupied the same lands for generations, and have established for themselves reputations for uprightness of life and prosperity in business which are synonyms for their names. Such is the case with the Heller family, of which Deacon Henry D. Heller is a worthy representative.

John Heller, his grandfather, a well-remembered prosperous farmer and large landowner, resided upon the farm which has passed into the possession of the heirs of the late Isaac D. Heller, his grandson. To John Heller and wife were born: John, the father of Deacon Heller; Peter, who lost his life through an accident, at the age of seventeen; Elizabeth, who was twice married, first to a Mr. Rohrer, the second time to Benjamin Leaman; Fanny, who married Abram Brubaker; Mrs. Miller; Mrs. Longenecker; and Mrs. Leaman.

John Heller, Jr., was born Nov. 4, 1808, and through an active life of over fifty years, made a lasting impress upon his family and neighborhood. Of more than usual intelligence, he embraced every educational advantage offered at that time in his locality, and he was always an ardent advocate for higher education. It was a great gratification to him that he was permitted to live to see the free school system firmly established, and his influence was ever given in favor of progress. Mr. Heller was called upon to serve as school director for years, and at the time of his death, which was greatly lamented, he was the wise and efficient director of the poor of the township. On March 18, 1850, he passed from earth, and many were the expressions of sorrow at the loss of a good neighbor, a kind friend, a wise counsellor, and a devoted husband and father.

John Heller, Jr., was married to Annie Denlinger, and their children were: Abram, who married Eliza Landis, and died at the age of thirty-seven, leaving a son and a daughter; Isaac D., who was reared on the farm, and at the time of his death, July 25, 1900, was the owner of the old Heller homestead, in East Lampeter, and was thrice married, first to Barbara Stauffer (from which union three children were born), second, to Maria Landis (from which union one child was born, which died in infancy), and third, to Mary Buchwalter (who bore him two children, both of whom died in infancy); Mary, who married Henry Shreiner, a farmer of Manheim township; Annie, who married Samuel Eby, who lives retired in Upper Leacock township; Lizzie, who married Adam Landis, a retired farmer of Lancaster township; Hettie, who married Benjamin Hess, of Manheim township; John, who died in childhood; Henry D., of this sketch; and B. D., who was born Nov. 3, 1849, and received a good common-school education which was supplemented by study for some time at the Millersville Normal School, and thus prepared, engaged in teaching for three terms, and later married Anna Hess, a daughter of Samuel R. Hess, of Clay township, and the children born of this union are: Samuel, a practicing physician of Lancaster, who is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and who married Miss Emily, a daughter of Judge David McMullan, of Lancaster; Harvey, who is a teacher in the graded school of Oregon, Lancaster county, is a graduate from the Millersville Normal School, and is the present owner of the old homestead; Benjamin, who is a teacher in East Lampeter; Jacob; John; Laura; and Parke. The family are members of the Old Mennonite Church.

Henry D. Heller was reared on the farm, and received excellent educational advantages, fully fitting him for the profession of teacher, but his inclinations, after one term of teaching, led him back to the farm. On Oct. 22, 1867, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Leaman, a daughter of Tobias and Elizabeth (Denlinger) Leaman, the former of whom died in June, 1859, since which time the mother has resided with her daughter. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Heller are: Annie, who married John H. Kreider, a farmer, has two children, Amos and Edna; Amanda, who married Newton G. Herr, has one daughter, Bertha; Lizzie, who married John Roher, has three sons, Harry, Elvin and Enos; Abram, who married Anna Denlinger, has one son, Clarence; Enos; and J. Henry is at home. Immediately after marriage, Mr. Heller took charge of the farm of his deceased brother, Abram, and continued to operate it until in 1873, when he purchased his present farm, located in East Lampeter, consisting of 55 acres. The original dwelling house still stands, but since taking charge of this place, Mr. Heller has been continually making improvements, and it ranks well with any other in the township. In 1891 he purchased a second farm of seventy-five acres in the same township, formerly his grandfather's land. The standing of Deacon Heller is very high in the community where he is recognized as one of the leading men. In October, 1876, under Rev. Benjamin Herr, Henry D. Heller was ordained a deacon, in the Old Mennonite Church, and in that office has served ever since, with faithfulness and fidelity, worthily upholding an old and justly honored name.

ELAM SHEETZ MYERS, a general farmer in East Donegal township, Lancaster county, takes rank with the intelligent and progressive young agriculturists of the present day, and is engaged in the cultivation of the old homestead on which he was born Jan. 20, 1878. He is a son of Christ H. and Anna (Sheetz) Myers, who are mentioned elsewhere.

Elam Sheetz Myers and Emma J. Weiser were united in marriage Nov. 12, 1896, the ceremony being performed at Mt. Joy, Pa. To this union have been born two sons, Earl W. and Lloyd W. Mrs. Emma J. (Weiser) Myers is a charming and attractive young woman, of good judgment and a kindly disposition, and is very popular in her neighborhood. She was born in East Donegal township Jan. 30, 1876, daughter of John E. and Hannah M. (Stumm) Weiser, who were married in York county in 1869. Her parents had the following children: Sarah B., who is living at home unmarried; Emma J., Mrs. Myers; and Catherine, Wilbert, Daisy and Paul, all at home. The father, John E. Weiser, has been a farmer all his days, and has made a substantial place for himself as an industrious and trustworthy man. He came to Lancaster county in 1874, and here has remained to the present time, in 1889 settling on the farm where he is now found. In political sentiment he is a Republican. Mrs. Hannah M. Weiser was born in Lancaster county in 1850, daughter of John and Sarah (Custard) Stumm, who lived in Lancaster county, and moved into York county in 1860. They were farming people.

Elam S. Myers remained with his parents until his marriage, when he settled on his present farm, a small but productive place of forty-three acres, and he is known as a capable and thrifty young farmer. In politics he is a Republican.

OLIVER H. SHENK, proprietor of the only feldspar and flint rock quarries in southeastern Pennsylvania, resides in Manor township, Lancaster county, four miles west of Lancaster city. He was born in this county March 23, 1873, son of Christian K. and Annie (Hiedler) Shenk, and was reared in West Hempfield township, receiving his education in the public schools and the Northwest Secondary School.

On May 10, 1895, Mr. Shenk began business on his own account as a dealer in flint rock and feldspar, and now employs about twenty-five men in his several quarries. His output he disposes of in various States, to manufacturers of porcelain or so-called chinaware, shipping to such concerns as the Standard Flint & Spar Company, of Frenchtown, N. J., the Golden Sons, of Trenton, N. J., the Eureka Flint & Spar Company, of the same city, and the Columbia (Pa.) Flint & Spar Company. His shipments reach eight carloads per week, and his main quarries extend across the line into the States of Maryland and Delaware. In addition to his quarrying business Mr. Shenk handles large quantities of clover seed, in which he has a very remunerative trade. He also does quite a business supplying the Lancaster Trolley Company with poles and ties, which he obtains in central Pennsylvania, principally in Cumberland county.

Mr. Shenk was united in marriage, Nov. 5, 1896, with Miss Lizzie Hostetter, the only child of Ephraim and Mary (Charles) Hostetter and to this union has come one son, born Dec. 22, 1897, who died Aug. 9, 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Shenk are members of the Mennonite Church, and both are active workers in the Sabbath-school. They occupy a modern residence at Kreadyville, one of the most delightful in the county, erected in 1896, and Mr. Shenk is recognized as one of the most enterprising young men in the county of Lancaster.

Ephraim Hostetter, father of Mrs. Shenk, was born in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa., Jan. 7, 1853, was a prosperous and highly respected farmer, and died Dec. 22, 1878, in the faith of the Mennonite Church, leaving his widow with her only child, now Mrs. Oliver H. Shenk.

BENJAMIN B. HARNISH. Much of the fertile farming land of the great State of Pennsylvania is located in Lancaster county, and the well tilled farms are owned and occupied by agriculturists who have made farming a life business, and have succeeded in developing the land to its greatest capacity and in accumulating comfortable fortunes.

Among the resident farmers of East Hempfield township is Benjamin B. Harnish, the eldest son of Levi Harnish, who was born on a farm in West Hempfield township, Jan. 28, 1848, and was there reared a farmer boy, obtaining his education in the district schools of his locality. Until the age of twenty-two he remained at home, but at that time decided to engage in business for himself, selecting the excellent tract of almost fifty-three acres upon which he is located in East Hempfield township, two miles west of Rohrerstown. Upon this place our subject began immediately to make improvements which have resulted in much added value to the land, and have made it yield well, and here he carries on general farming.

In November, 1869, was celebrated the marriage of Benjamin B. Harnish to Martha M. Musselman, a daughter of Christain Musselman, a native of East Hempfield township. To this union have been born children as follows: Ida, who married Henry Sauder, of Landisville; Sarah, who married Grant Noll, of this township; Benjamin, who married Mary Herr, of East Hempfield; Martha M., who married Isaac Seachrist, a miller of West Hempfield; Leah, who married Albert Myers, of Mountville; Fannie, at home; Annie; Maggie; Mary; and Lizzie. This family has been well reared and given Christian teaching and example, the mother and several of the daughters being connected with the Old Mennonite Church, and one of the daughters has become a member of the United Brethren denomination. Benjamin B. Harnish is highly esteemed by his neighbors, and is considered one of the representative citizens of the township where he has lived so long.

THOMAS S. HOOD, for over ten years the freight and passenger agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at New Holland, Lancaster county, was born at Fort Concho, Texas, June 27, 1869, a son of Gen. Charles C. and Louisa (Skinner) Hood, the former a native of Somerset, Perry Co., Ohio, and the latter of Woodstock, Connecticut.

General Hood was born in 1841, and served through the Civil War, where he was twice wounded. His services in the army have been continuous since he entered. He participated in the Spanish-American War and on the Texas frontiers. At Ponce, Porto Rico, he was the military commander, 1898 and 1899, and held a most responsible position. He was appointed by Maj. Gen. Otis as the first military governor in the Philippines, having charge of three large provinces, with headquarters at Aparri, serving three years, 1899-1902. On Oct. 18, 1902, he was appointed a Brigadier General, United States Army. Mrs. Louisa Hood died in St. Louis, May 31, 1875, at the age of thirty years. She was the mother of the following children: Thomas S.; Anita and Sarah, who both died young. General Hood was a second time married, Frances A. Skinner becoming his wife. To this union came the following children: Charles, deceased; Marion, who is making her home with her mother; and Evangeline, who is also at home.

The father of General Hood was Thomas Hood, a lawyer by profession and born in Somerset, Perry Co., Ohio. For many years he held a position at Washington as judge of claims. He had previously served as Judge of County Court at Madison, Wis., and as Senator in the Wisconsin Legislature.

Thomas S. Hood was married April 17, 1901, in Lancaster county, to Catherine Kinzer, a daughter of the late W. W. Kinzer, whose biography may be found on another page. A daughter, Dorothy, was born July 3, 1902, at New Holland.

Mr. Hood was reared in the various forts where his father was stationed, and when old enough began his education in Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and finished at Central High School, Philadelphia, which institution he left in 1887 to take a position with the Pennsylvania Railroad at Devon, Pa., from which he was later removed to Coatesville, to take a place as a clerk in the freight office. He came to New Holland, July 5, 1892, to take the position as freight and passenger agent, where he displayed abilities of a high order, and was regarded as one of the best men in the service of the company. On Aug. 1, 1902, Mr. Hood was further promoted to represent the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in the important position of freight agent in the famous iron manufacturing town of Coatesville, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hood belongs to the Masonic fraternity, and is a member of the Knights Templar Commandery, No. 43, of Lancaster. In his politics he is a Republican.

JACOB J. LAMPARTER. The name of Lamparter in Lancaster was originally connected with the pioneer glue industry of the town, an enterprise still controlled and managed by members of this substantial German-American family. Other avenues of activity have latterly been invaded by those bearing the name, chief among these being Jacob J. Lamparter, retired glue manufacturer, and at present a large land owner, engaged in the real-estate and building business. He was born in the ancestral home in Wurtemberg, Germany, a son of Everhart and Elizabeth (Helt) Lamparter, natives of the same German principality.

Everhart Lamparter came to America in 1853, and located in Lancaster, where he started the glue business, to which he devoted the rest of his life. From a comparatively small beginning he increased the capacity of his manufactory to meet the demand created by his excellent commodity, and thus came to rank among the commercial adjuncts of his locality. He died in 1869, at the age of sixty-one years, and was survived by his wife until 1898, she dying at the age of eighty-eight years; they are buried in Woodward Hill cemetery. They were the parents of the following named children: George, who is engaged in manufacturing glue at the old factory; Jacob J.; Lizette, unmarried and living in Washington, D. C.; Amelia, who died at the age of fifty years; Pauline, unmarried and living in Lancaster; Judith, widow of Eugene Bauer, of Lancaster; Everhart, one of the managers of his father's glue business; Henry, deceased; and Sabina, Mrs. Mertz, deceased.

Jacob J. Lamparter was eleven years of age when the family came to America, and the greater part of his training and education was therefore on American lines. As there were so many children in the family he was obliged to shift for himself, and owing to the limitations of the factory he sought employment elsewhere. At the age of twenty he entered the factory, and remained for nearly thirty-seven years, or until the death of his mother, in 1898, since which time he has bought and sold property, and accomplished considerable building in different parts of the city. He is the owner of ten pieces of property, and is a very successful and wide-awake business man.

By his marriage to Margaretta Arnold Mr. Lamparter became connected with a French and German family, the parents of Mrs. Lamparter being John and Margaret (Eppinger) Arnold, the former, formerly a brewer of Lancaster, now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Lamparter have had children as follows: Harry, who served as a soldier in the Philippines; Everhart, a coach trimmer of Lancaster (married to Gertrude Weidle); Reinholdt, a blacksmith of Easton, Pa.; Walter, who died at the age of twenty-three years; Dorothea; Amelia; Judith; Charles; and Jacob, the five last mentioned living at home. Mr. Lamparter is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Seven Wise Men. In politics he is a Republican. He is prominent in the community, and is recognized as one of its most enterprising, up-to-date and resourceful citizens.

CHRISTIAN GOOD REESE, who is engaged in the brick making business and in the handling of ice in Elizabethtown, is one of the leading brick men of this section, putting on the market yearly more than a million brick, largely used in building and in sewer construction. He was born in Elizabethtown Sept. 10, 1868, a son of Samson D. Reese, whose biography is presented elsewhere.

Christian G. Reese was reared in his native community, and May 12, 1898, was married in Baltimore, Md., to Miss Bertha F. Weirs, by whom he has had two children, Mand W., and Marian M.

Mrs. Bertha F. Reese was born near Baltimore, July 25, 1874, a daughter of Henry and Amanda J. Weirs. Her parents were born in Maryland, where they were married, and they were engaged in farming. Her father, who died in 1896, was seventy-two years old. For many years he was a justice of the peace, and was very successful in all his enterprises. Her mother, who was born in 1836, is now living in Baltimore. She was the mother of the following children: William, a train despatcher, at Baltimore; John, of Sparrows Point, Md.; Thomas, a telegraph operator at Sherwood, Md.; Alfred, deceased; Laura, who married C. W. Shipley, Jr., an engineer on the N. C. Railroad, with a home at Baltimore; and Bertha F., wife of Mr. Reese.

Christian G. Reese remained at home with his parents until he reached the age of twenty years, when he took a position as a bookkeeper with the Miller Fifth Wheel Manufacturing Co., at Elizabethtown, which he held for two years, and then embarked upon his present business career. The brick yard which he is now operating, he purchased from J. C. Keener, and in its management he has attained a very large success, making a name and a standing for himself that bespeaks his integrity, ability and business sense.

Mr. Reese is a member of A. O. K. M. C., and belongs to the Reformed Church. In his politics he is a Republican, and for the past four years has been a member of the board of health. Mr. Reese prepared for that business career in which he has been so successful by taking a full commercial course in the Byrant & Stratton Business College at Buffalo, N. Y., where he went at the age of fifteen years, and from which he was graduated with a high standing. He is one of the leading men of his home town, and is justly regarded as one of the representative citizens of this county.

WILLIAM C. GRUBE, secretary and director of the poor of Lancaster county, was born at Blue Ball, this county, Oct. 10, 1872, son of Martin H. Grube, a prominent citizen of Lancaster county. The children born to Martin H. Grube were William C. and a brother now residing at New Holland, an extensive sketch of whom appears elsewhere.

William C. Grube was reared in the county of his birth, attending the common schools of his district, and later had the advantage of a course at Peck's Business College, and also went to Valentine's Shorthand & Telegraphic School, from which he was graduated in 1893. He accepted his present position March 27th of the same year, since which time he has faithfully and satisfactorily performed his duties, with credit to himself.

On Nov. 14, 1894, Mr. Grube was married, in Blue Ball, to Miss Clara Kurtz, and two children have been born to this union: Helen M. and J. Franklin. Mrs. Grube was born at Blue Ball, Pa., Oct. 19, 1872, daughter of John G. and Anna (Muser) Kurtz. John G. Kurtz is a prominent farmer of East Earl township, Lancaster county, and was graduated from the Normal School at Millersville. In politics he is a Republican, and has held several local offices. Both he and his most estimable wife are earnest members of the Mennonite Church.

Mr. Grube is a member of the F. & A. M., being a Knight Templar, and also holds membership in the B. P. O. E., of which he is esquire. He and Mrs. Grube are members of the Presbyterian Church, in which they are very active, and of which they are liberal supporters. In political matters Mr. Grube is a strong Republican, and is very prominent in local affairs. He is one of the leading young men of the city, enterprising, thrifty, ready to grasp every opportunity offered, not only for the furtherment of his private affairs, but also those calculated to prove beneficial to the city and county, and in his position he has been of great service to the authorities, his judgment and discrimination being exercised to produce the best results to all parties.

MAHLON ERB. One of the well-known as well as most highly esteemed citizens of Mount Nebo, Lancaster county, is Mahlon Erb, a retired farmer of Martic township, who with his estimable wife lives in ease and plenty in this pleasant village, after a life of prudent industry. He was born in Conestoga township, this county, Dec. 13, 1848, son of John and Maria (Whitmer) Erb, both natives of Lancaster county, the former of whom was born in West Lampeter township Aug. 25, 1814, and died Dec. 31, 1894.

Jacob Erb, grandfather of Mahlon, was the founder of the Erb family in Lancaster county. The children of Jacob Erb were: Jacob, Rudolph, John, Samuel, Joseph, David, Rachel, Susan, all of whom lived lives of probity and respectability and many of them left numerous descendants.

John Erb was married Aug. 13, 1840, to Maria Whitmer. Their children, twelve in number, were: Susan, who resides on the home place; Amaziah, deceased; Annie E., deceased; John, deceased; Mahlon; Amanda, deceased; Henry, a merchant in Mount Nebo, Pa.; Mary Jane, who resides on the home place; Emanuel, deceased; Clayton, the farmer on the home estate; Frank, a miller in Martic township; and William W., a successful young farmer of this locality.

Mahlon Erb grew up on the farm, and has always been devoted to an agricultural life. As soon as he had finished his education in the public schools he chose farming as his vocation and has industriously followed the same through many years. On March 26, 1868, Mahlon Erb was united in marriage to Miss Emma Achison, who was a daughter of Cunningham and Anna (Markley) Achison, her birth occurring in Drumore township May 27, 1848. To this marriage have been born five children: Annie, who is the wife of Amos Patton, of Columbia; Oscar, a farmer of Conestoga township, who married Elvina Buckwalter; Mahlon C., farming on the home farm, who married Mary Railing; Robert, who married Letitia McLaughlin, and is farming at Mount Nebo; and Alma, at home.

Mahlon Erb owns a well-cultivated and improved farm of ninety-three acres, and also a smaller farm with comfortable buildings. To younger hands he has resigned the cares of active life. Both he and wife are consistent members of the New Mennonite Church, and throughout the community they are held in high esteem.

ISAAC N. HILDEBRAND conducts one of the largest butchering businesses in Lancaster county, and, though yet a young man, ranks high in commercial circles. He is a grandson of Jacob Hildebrand, who lived and died in Strasburg, this county, but little is known of him by his grandson except that he was quite a politician and held the office of justice of the peace for a number of years.

Jacob Hildebrand, the father of Isaac N., was born in West Lampeter township about 1844, and passed his early life in his native place, receiving his education in the local schools. In 1861 he ran away from home and enlisted in Co. K, 79th P. V. I. He married Miss Fannie Harmon, daughter of Samuel Harmon, of Willowstreet, and they became the parents of seven children: Susan, wife of David Good, of Quarryville; William, of Lampeter township;

Isaac N.; Lillie and John, both of whom died in childhood; Miss Mary, who lives at home; and Jacob, at home.

Isaac N. Hildebrand was born in Willowstreet April 3, 1871, and lived at home with his parents until he was about twenty-two years of age, in the meantime receiving his education in the common schools of the county. On March 18, 1894, he married Miss Lizzie Hoffman, of Hanover, York Co., Pa., and then began life for himself, engaging in the butcher business, which he had learned from his father. He has been very successful, and has built up a thriving business, which has become one of the largest in Lancaster county, and he is regarded by all who have had dealings with him as one of the substantial men of his community. Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrand have had one child, a daughter, who died in infancy.

J. EDWARD SHOMIER. As secretary and treasurer of The Keeley Stove Co., one of the prosperous industries of Columbia, Mr. Shomier leads an active and influential life. He was born at Columbia, July 17, 1868, son of John and Mary (Zellers) Shomier, and grandson of John and Mary Shomier, Wurtemberg, Germany.

John Shomier, when about twenty years of age, migrated with his parents from Germany to Columbia, Pa. About the same time Mary Zellers migrated from the Fatherland to America, and also located at Columbia where her marriage to John Shomier occurred. He died in 1869, at the age of thirty-six years; she survived until 1888, passing away at the age of fifty-eight years. Four children were born to John and Mary (Zellers) Shomier; Anna, deceased; John, deceased; Mary, who married George Tille, manager of Lippincott's Wholesale Grocery House; and J. Edward.

J. Edward Shomier was reared and educated in Columbia, was graduated from the Columbia high school, and soon after his school days ended, began his career in the present factory of The Keeley Stove Co. Six years later he was elected to the office of secretary of the Company, and several years thereafter became also its treasurer, when these two offices were combined under one head. He has been filling these offices uninterruptedly ever since, and as an officer of the company he has been careful, industrious and progressive.

In 1896, at Columbia, Mr. Shomier married Cecelia Westerman, a native of Columbia, daughter of John and Mary Catherine (Metzger) Westerman. Her father was born in Fruitville, Lancaster county, Oct. 26, 1854, son of Leopold and Anna (Wagner) Westerman, and grandson of Mathias Westerman, who about 1850 emigrated with two of his nine children to America and settled in Lancaster county. Leopold Westerman was a carpenter and contractor, and died in Lisbon, Iowa. John Westerman, when a lad of fourteen years, entered the butcher shop of Milton Wike in Columbia, with whom he remained six years. He then started in business for himself, and now owns a large establishment. He is identified with various business interests, and is one of the most prominent public men of Columbia. In politics a Democrat, he was appointed postmaster during President Cleveland's second term, and has filled various local offices. Of his four children, Mrs. Shomier is the second. To Mr. and Mrs. Shomier have been born two children: John and Mary.

Mr. Shomier is a Democrat and is prominent in business, social and political circles. In religious affiliation he is a member of the Lutheran Church. He has prospered in business, and though yet comparatively young in years ranks among the foremost citizens of Columbia. He is a member of the local board of education, having been elected to represent the Fourth ward, which is very largely Republican. Mr. Shomier is assistant secretary of the Columbia Hospital Association, and a member of the board of managers of that institution.

HENRY G. GARBER, the well-known proprietor of Sunrise Farm in Manor township, Lancaster county, two miles west of the city of Lancaster, was born in West Hempfield township, the same county, March 7, 1863, a son of Andrew and Susan (Greider) Garber. He was reared on the old homestead, and the education acquired in the public schools of that locality was supplemented by two terms' attendance at Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa. On leaving school he took up the occupation of farming, conducting the home farm of 120 acres for ten years, and in 1898 located upon his present farm in Manor township, consisting of twenty-nine acres, upon which he has made many improvements, so that it is now one of the most desirable farms of its size in the locality. Mr. Garber is successfully engaged in general farming and dairying. By his ballot he supports the men and measures of the Republican party, and as a public-spirited and progressive citizen gives his influence to all enterprises calculated to prove of public benefit.

On Dec. 15, 1887, Mr. Garber was united in marriage with Miss Frances Leonard, who was born near Millersville, in Manor township, Feb. 18, 1867, and they have become the parents of two sons: Harry, born Oct. 10, 1888; and Charles, born Oct. 19, 1891. The wife and mother is a consistent member of the Trinity Reformed Church.

Abraham Leonard, Mrs. Garber's father, was born in Manor township, Jan. 31, 1833, a son of Abraham and Annie (Rinehart) Leonard, and a grandson of Frederick and Elizabeth (Lutz) Leonard. Soon after his marriage Frederick Leonard left home for the purpose of entering the service in the war of 1812, and what became of him after that is unknown, as all trace of him was lost. He left only one child, Abraham Leonard, grandfather of Mrs. Garber, who was a farmer by occupation and a member of the River Brethren in Christ. He died in May, 1898, at an advanced age, and his wife, who was a native of Lancaster county, died in 1851. In their family were eight children, namely: George, a retired resident of Middletown, Ohio; Abraham, father of Mrs. Garber; Levi, deceased; Frederick, a cigar manufacturer of Mountville, Lancaster county; David, a farmer of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county; John, a farmer of the same township; William and Jacob, both deceased. Mrs. Garber's father was reared and educated in his native township, and at the age of twenty-three began farming for himself and continued to follow that occupation until 1892, when he retired from active labor. He married Miss Fannie Johns, a daughter of John and Eve (Benedict) Johns, and in 1885 he purchased a small tract of land on which they resided until her death, which occurred in August, 1891, when she was fifty-four years of age. Of the four children born to them, the oldest, a son, died in infancy; Aldus married a daughter of John Brown, of Columbia, Pa.; Milton is a resident of Manor township; and Frances is the wife of Henry G. Garber. Mr. Leonard has been a life-long Democrat in politics, and in religious belief is a Lutheran.

ABRAHAM M. ZIMMERMAN, one of the worthy and energetic young business men of New Holland, Lancaster county, the proprietor of The New Holland Machine Works—manufacturing as a specialty the Cob & Feed Mills—comes of German origin, his grandfather, John Zimmerman having founded the family, near Martindale, Pa., where he became a prominent farmer and the father of these children: Susannah, who married Isaac Martin, of Goodville, Pa.; Martin, the father of the subject of this biography; Israel, a farmer near Terre Hill, Pa.; and Mary, of Earl township.

Martin W. Zimmerman, a thrifty farmer of Earl township, married Anna Martin, and they became the parents of eight children: Aaron, an Earl township farmer; Eli, also a farmer of Earl township; Abraham M.; Martha, wife of J. H. Sensenig, a jeweler of New Holland; Adam, a machinist; Martin, a farmer; George, a farmer, and Moses, at home.

Abraham M. Zimmerman was born July 31, 1869, and was reared on the farm, although his natural inclinations were in another direction. His education was acquired in the common schools of Earl township, but as early as fourteen years he decided to become a machinist. By the time he was nineteen years old he started to serve his apprenticeship, and the following three years were spent in Lancaster. In 1895 he came to New Holland, and the same year organized his present flourishing business, starting with a repair shop, working himself, while his brother Adam began to learn the trade. Later, he merged his business into a manufacturing plant, a great demand having been created for his specialty, the New Holland Cob & Feed Mill, and at present the factory is running with full force of twenty-one men in order to fill the orders for these valuable machines and also for his improved gasoline engines. That he has succeeded so well is due to his energy and perseverance, as he began his business career with little financial assistance.

In 1893 Abraham M. Zimmerman was married to Miss Lizzie Martin, a daughter of J. B. Martin, of New Holland, and to this union have been born two children: Annie E., and Ivan M. In his political belief, Mr. Zimmerman is a Republican, and is a consistent and valued member of the Mennonite Church. Possessing all the qualifications for good citizenship, he well represents the best type of resident of Earl township, where he is universally esteemed.

PEARSON E. GRUGER, of the firm of Gruger & Moedinger, South Queen street, Lancaster, dealers in stone work for cemetery and buildings, has been engaged in business in that city for almost forty years.

The family is of Huguenot descent. Peter Gruger, the grandfather of Pearson E., died when his son Adam (Pearson E. Gruger's father) was only ten years old. Adam Gruger was born in Lehigh county, Pa., in June, 1808, and learned the saddler's trade, following it for a number of years. He also engaged in coach trimming. He belonged to the Reformed Church, and was a member of the Mt. Lebanon Lodge of Masons, long since disbanded. He died in February, 1891, at the age of eighty-two years. In 1833 he married Hannah Sallada, a daughter of John and Martha (Vohr) Sallada, who was born in 1815, and died in 1897.

Pearson E. Gruger was born in Stouchsburg, Berks Co., Pa., Oct. 1, 1834, but when a boy came to Lancaster with his parents, and attended the public schools there, finishing his education at the old Franklin College (now Franklin and Marshall College), then located on North Lime street, Lancaster. At seventeen years of age he became apprenticed to marble cutting with Major Charles M. Howell, remaining with him five years. For the next six years he worked in Philadelphia, and then returned to Lancaster, where he has since engaged in business, supplying granite, marble and other stone work for buildings and monumental work. His work is found in some of the notable structures of the city. The business, of which he is the senior proprietor, is located at No. 25 South Queen street, and is a large one; the marble works are located in the rear of the mansion erected by the Metzger family over one hundred years ago.

On May 20, 1858, Mr. Gruger married Rebecca, daughter of the late Philip Metzger, and eight children were born to this union, as follows: Charles, Florence (who died in infancy), Margaret, William, Francis, Walter, Catherine and Harry. Mrs. Gruger died Jan. 9, 1875, aged thirty-eight years. On Dec. 25, 1883, Mr. Gruger married Miss Salome, daughter of the late David Nauman. Mr. and Mrs. Gruger are members of Trinity Reformed Church of Columbia, and for many years Mr. Gruger was an elder. He is active, useful and prominent in everything with which he connects himself. In politics he is an independent Republican. Possessed of more than ordinary intelligence, he is favorably known to every one in the community, and his record in public and private life is irreproachable. Mr. Gruger is a designer and sculptor of some note, and his work has always and everywhere been most favorably received. He is now the oldest active member of his craft in the city, venerable Major Howell having long since retired from active business.

ROBERT K. WOOD. One of the promising young farmers of Little Britain township, who enjoys the confidence and esteem of the citizens of his community, is Robert K. Wood, a representative of one of the leading families of southern Lancaster county. He was born Oct. 6, 1873, a son of Jesse and Maggie (Killough) Wood. His home has always been on the farm owned by Abner Carter, near Wood's chrome mines, and since 1871 operated by his father, Jesse Wood. His education was obtained in the public school at Eastland, the Friends' Normal Institute of Rising Sun, Md., and a three months' course in agriculture at Pennsylvania State College. Since 1897 he has been a member of the school board of Little Britain township, since March, 1899, serving as its secretary. His political affiliations have ever been with the Republican party, and he is a member of the religious society of Friends, to which all of his paternal ancestors have belonged since settling in America.

Robert K. Wood was married, Dec. 18, 1901, to Hanna M., daughter of Robert A. and Lucretia M. (Fisher) Way, of Stormstown, Centre Co., Pennsylvania.

Jesse Wood, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born Feb. 26, 1849, a son of James and Mercy M. (Carter) Wood. He is a prominent and thrifty farmer in Little Britain township, a member of the Society of Friends, and in politics, a Republican. On Dec. 19, 1872, he was married to Maggie Killough, of Fulton township. The only child of this union was Robert K. of this biography.

James Wood, father of Jesse and grandfather of Robert K., was born in Little Britain township, July 17, 1821, and was married Feb. 26, 1845, to Mercy M. Carter, also of Little Britain township. The children of this union were: Alfred, a farmer of Fulton township, whose sketch appears in another part of this volume; Susan, wife of Elwood H. Townsend, whose sketch elsewhere appears in this volume; Jesse; Mary, deceased wife of Davis E. Allen; Lucretia, wife of John W. Smedley, a retired farmer of Chester county; Lewis, a farmer of Little Britain township, mentioned elsewhere; Ida, who died in young womanhood; and James, a farmer of Little Britain, who is also mentioned elsewhere in this volume. James Wood was one of the leading men of the county. Not only was he a successful farmer but he was also a financier and man of affairs, he was president of the Farmers National Bank of Oxford from its incorporation to the time of his death, and at one time was commissioner of Lancaster county. As a member of the Society of Friends his influence was wide spread. Few men in the county took a more intelligent interest in the Republican party than he. He died Aug. 9, 1894.

James Wood was a son of Jesse and Sidney (Yarnell) Wood, of this county. Jesse Wood was a prominent farmer and mill-wright of his day. He was a son of Joseph Wood, a son of Thomas Wood, the founder of this branch of the Wood family in America. In the days of William Penn, Thomas Wood came to America to secure religious freedom, and was an important member of a colony of Quakers who settled near Philadelphia. The peaceful and law-abiding influence of this religious body still pervades the locality, and counts many of the best citizens among the members of the Society of Friends.

About 1760 Joseph Wood came from York county and settled on a farm in West Nottingham township, Chester Co., Pa., now owned by his great-grandson, Jesse Wood, the father of Robert K., of this sketch. Here he raised a family of eight children: Thomas, Joseph, Jesse, Lydia, Elizabeth, David, John and Day, several of whom afterward settled in neighboring parts of Lancaster county. All became agriculturists and this has been the family occupation in every generation.

Maggie K. Wood, the mother of the subject of this sketch, was born Oct. 6, 1849, a daughter of Robert and Sidney (Hoopes) Killough, of Fulton township. Robert Killough was a farmer, and enjoyed the high esteem of the community, serving several years in various township offices. He was born Aug. 12, 1812, a son of John and Margaret (Porter) Killough, and always occupied the farm on which he was born. On Jan. 2, 1845, he married Sidney Hoopes, of Fulton township. The children of this union were John, a hardware merchant of Clinton, Ill.; Mary M., who died Sept. 15, 1885; Maggie, wife of Jesse Wood, and mother of Robert K.; Phianna, wife of Leander O. Wright, a farmer of Fulton township, who now owns and occupies the Killough homestead; Jane E., wife of C. W. Moore, proprietor of Clinton greenhouses, Clinton, Ill., but formerly of Fulton township; Phebe Roberta, living with her sister Phianna; and Elmer E., of Clinton, Ill. Robert Hoopes died Jan. 5, 1886, and his wife, Sidney, on March 1, 1890.

LEWIS BACHMAN. Mr. Bachman was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, on May 15, 1851. Since reaching the age of twenty-three, with the exception of two years spent in farming, he has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. His first service for that corporation was rendered in the capacity of brakeman and he has risen, through the grade of flagman, to be conductor, having been appointed to that position in 1884. He is one of the company's most valued men, bringing to the discharge of his duties a keen intelligence and an unwavering fidelity. He is one of the Knights of Malta, and in political faith, a Democrat.

His father was Samuel S. Bachman, and his mother's maiden name was Ann E., daughter of John Rockey. Samuel S. was the son of George Bachman, who married a Miss Bingham, and spent his life in Lancaster county. He himself was a wheelwright and wagon maker, and a devout member of the M. E. Church, as was also his life. Samuel died in 1864, aged sixty-two years, and his wife, Lewis Bachman's mother, in 1878, shortly before reaching the age of three score. They were the parents of five children, of whom Lewis was the fourth in order of birth. Mary E., deceased, the eldest daughter, married John L. Garner. Delinda is the widow of John M. Pichel, of Bart township. Martin R., the third child, and first son, died in 1875. The youngest child was Uriah, now a Lancaster county farmer.

Mr. Bachman was married, on Jan. 2, 1873, to Martha M. Stauffer, the ceremony being solemnized by Rev. W. O. Owen, at Colerain. She was born in Eden township, on Feb. 6, 1853. Her father was Jacob Stauffer, the son of John and Barbara Stauffer, and her mother, before marriage, was Anna Landis, whose father's name was Peter. Jacob Stauffer was a miller, and died in 1887, having been born in 1817. Mrs. Stauffer died in Jan. 1878, in her sixty-third year. Their children were five in number; Maria, Henry, Barbara, Susan and Martha, the youngest two being twins. Barbara is deceased, and Susan is the wife of Jacob Shelly, of Eden township.

Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bachman. Harry, the eldest, married Lona Budding, and resides in Columbia. Lizzie is the wife of James Miller, of the same place. Charles is a telegraph operator at Hatborough. In April, 1899, he was married to Margaret, daughter of John and Mary Plank, of Lancaster City. The younger children, Amos R., Edwin, Anna, Mary L. and Clara, live at home with their parents.

LEVI H. HAVERSTICK (deceased) was born in Manor township, Sept. 20, 1850, a son of Levi and Catherine (Hostetter) Haverstick. The parents reside in Manor township, but were born and reared in East Donegal township. Their history appears on another page, and the name of J. M. Haverstick, a brother, also appears elsewhere.

Levi H. Haverstick was married Dec. 24, 1875, in Manor township, to Anna B. Miller, by whom he has had the following children: Benjamin M., single, and at home; Lizzie and Marv, both unmarried, and at home; Anna, deceased; Gertrude B., and Lévi H., also at home.

Mrs. Anna B. (Miller) Haverstick was born in Manor township, and is a daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Kauffman) Miller, both of whom were born and reared in Manor township. Her father passed an honorable and useful life on the old home farm until 1890, when he died at the age of seventy years. His remains were interred in a private cemetery on the farm. His widow, who was born in 1826, now resides in Manor township. They were members of the Mennonite Church. Their family was as follows: Barbara, who is dead; Lizzie, deceased, married J. E. Witmer, of York county; Anna B., whose name appears above; Mary, at home, unmarried; Benjamin K., married and living on the home farm.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Anna B. Haverstick were Abraham and Mary Miller; they were farming people of Lancaster county, and stood very high in the community in which they passed their lives. Her maternal grandparents were Benjamin and Anna (Myers) Kauffman, also farming people.

Levi H. Haverstick remained with his parents until his marriage, when he established himself on the farm where his family may still be found. It consists of 118 acres, and has been maintained in a high state of cultivation. With his wife, he belonged to the Mennonite Church, and both were recognized as among the solid and substantial people of the county. In politics he was a Republican, and in his life time was regarded as an influential citizen. The widow has operated the farm, but gives the farm dairy over to the management of her son. They reside near Mt. Joy, and are associated with the best elements of that section of Lancaster county.

JOHN T. WEBER. Among the well-known educators of Lancaster county is John T. Weber, who belongs to one of the oldest and most honored families of this portion of the State of Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Jacob Weber, lived and died in Earl township, where he engaged in farming and also building, being a practical mechanic. Some of the first corn shellers used in Earl township were built by him. Jacob Weber was also a minister in the Old Mennonite Church. His marriage to Miss Esther Musser connected him with another of the old settled families of Lancaster county, and resulted in the birth of eight children: Henry, a farmer in Indiana; John M., a farmer in West Earl township, in this county; Jacob M., a minister of the Mennonite Church; Michael, the late father of John T.; Martha, the wife of Martin Buckwalter; Catherine, the wife of Daniel Buchwalter; Annie and Elizabeth, deceased.

Michael Weber, the father of John T., was born in Earl township, in 1834, and in early life he was a farmer, but later engaged in the manufacture of a kind of condition powder for horses and cattle, a preparation which gained a wide sale. Michael Weber was a man of special intelligence, a great reader, and was particularly interested in the educational advancement of his community. His marriage was to Miss Mary Taylor, their only child being John T., the subject of this sketch.

John T. Weber was born in West Earl township, on Sept. 1, 1858. His boyhood was spent on the farm, his education being acquired in the public schools, which he attended during the winter sessions, making such progress in his studies that at the age of seventeen, he was able to begin teaching. For two years he was engaged at Speedwell, in Elizabeth township, and after that he spent one year in the produce business. For the five succeeding years he was engaged in the tobacco farming business, but at the close of this period he returned to Penn township, teaching one term of school in Elizabeth. Then began a period of teaching in the Fairview school, Penn township, which has extended over seventeen years, the ties between pupils, patrons and instructor being close and mutually productive of good.

Mr. Weber in politics is a Republican and takes an intelligent interest in all public matters. For seventeen years he has served in the office of justice of the peace and has been prominently identified with all of the educational movements in his township. Mr. Weber was the first registry assessor of his township, was a member of the Republican county committee, and is one of the zealous workers in the Lutheran Church in Penryn, and also the superintendent of the Sunday-school.

The marriage of Mr. Weber was to Miss Olivia Biemsderfer, and nine children were born to this union two of whom passed away. The seven survivors are Harvey B., Elizabeth B., Benjamin H., Edgar B., Mamie B., Vera B., and Ruth B., all still under the home roof.

Few men in this part of county have done more for the advancement of education than Mr. Weber. His standard is high and his influence in the direction of progress is felt through the community. The family is highly esteemed and justly considered a representative one of Penn township.

GEORGE CRANE. This distinguished citizen of Lancaster county is widely known and highly esteemed in commercial and financial circles throughout eastern Pennsylvania. His well-appointed home is at Mountville, but his place of business is at Columbia, where he holds the responsible position of treasurer of the Columbia Trust Company. The story of his life forms an integral part of the later financial history of the county and is replete with interest.

Mr. Crane was born Aug. 29, 1849, at Jersey Shore, Lycoming county, the son of Robert Crane. His mother was Elizabeth McClung, a daughter of Jacob M. Strickler. His early education was obtained in the common schools of Jersey Shore and Columbia, his parents removing to the last named place when he was yet a child. In 1868, at the age of nineteen, he began life's battle for himself. His first employment was as baggage master and assistant ticket agent at the Pennsylvania Railroad station. After two years thus spent, he accepted the office of agent for the Adams Express Company between Columbia and Philadelphia. In this responsible position he displayed those qualities of unswerving integrity, sound sense and cool, ready discrimination which have since won for him a respect which is at once undisguised and unlimited on the part of those who know him best. For nineteen years he was paying teller of the First National Bank of Columbia. Resigning this position he removed to Wilkes Barre to accept the agency of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. During his residence at Columbia, Mr. Crane married Mrs. Emily M. Gossler, the widow of Col. Philip Gossler.

The position of agent did not prove congenial to Mr. Crane's tastes, and seeing an opportunity to establish a bank at Mountville, he removed thither from Wilkes Barre within six months. Such was his reputation for quick perception of business opportunities, good judgment and unfailing veracity, that within twenty-four hours he had secured the pledge of $50,000 necessary to put the institution on its feet, and on Nov. 21, 1887, the Mountville National Bank opened its doors for the transaction of business. The institution proved successful from the day of its inception. It paid honestly earned dividends of five per cent, and when Mr. Crane withdrew from the management, after eleven years he left $19,000 in undivided profits. He sundered his connection with the bank, however, to accept his present position with the Columbia Trust Company. Another successful business venture by Mr. Crane was the organization of the Mountville Plow Works. This concern purchased the plant of the Mount Joy Plow Works and removed it to Mountville. The legal title of the corporation is the Mountville Manufacturing Company, and Mr. Crane acted as its treasurer until March 1, 1900, when he resigned the office. He has also been a director in the Susquehanna Rolling Mills for seventeen years.

Mr. Crane is an active member of the Masonic fraternity, of high degree, belonging to the blue lodge, of which for twenty years he has been the chairman of its trustees. When he assumed the management of its affairs he found the lodge with only $150 in the hands of its trustees. To his new duties, however, he brought the business acumen, executive ability and sterling integrity which have been his salient characteristics through life, and at the present time the institution has a comfortable balance in the bank of over $2,300, and a Masonic Temple costing $28,000.

Mr. Crane is a devout, liberal and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, having served for nine years as a trustee and been a deacon for six years. Both these offices he has now resigned. He is a generous contributor to the cause of religion and his private charities, while unostentatious, are numerous. Prior to 1896 he acted with the Democratic party in politics, but in that year voted for the Republican candidates. He is deservedly popular, and his influence throughout the county is potent and far-reaching.

Reference has been made to his marriage with Mrs. Emily Gossler, which occurred Nov. 21, 1878. Mrs. Crane is the daughter of Major Daniel and Sarah Washabaugh, of Bedford, her mother a native of Hagerstown, Md. Her father was an iron founder and a man of wealth and prominence, both social and political. During the Civil war he was attached to the staff of Pennsylvania's great "war governor," Andrew G. Curtin, to which fact he owed his title of major. Mrs. Crane's first husband was Col. Philip, the son of Philip and Catherine Gossler, of Columbia. Philip, Sr., was the son of Jacob Gossler, and was born in Germany, as was also his father. For many years father and son conducted the "Gossler (afterward the "Sun") Hotel" in Columbia.

DAVID W. MOWRER, harness merchant of Quarryville, Lancaster county, was born Sept. 19, 1851, son of Adam and Elizabeth A. (Witmer) Mowrer. He was educated in the public schools of Quarryville, and, in 1870, he began to learn the trade of saddler and harnessmaker with A. R. Wolfersberger, of Quarryville, remaining with him for three years. He then purchased his employer's stock, and has since conducted the business. In 1894 he admitted William Fisher, who had learned the trade with him, into partnership. The business has been very successful and the stock includes a full line of harness, blankets, robes, and all essentials of the trade. While Mr. Mowrer began with limited capital, he has become one of the most prosperous merchants of the borough. He owns an entire block of property on Church street, where his place of business is located.

On Oct. 26, 1875, Mr. Mowrer married Anna L., daughter of Amos and Mary Wade, of Lancaster county. Mrs. Mowrer was born in Drumore township, Dec. 27, 1855. No children have been born to this union. In politics, Mr. Mowrer is a Republican, was one of the first councilmen after the organization of the borough, and still occupies that office. Mr. and Mrs. Mowrer are members of the Reformed Church, and Mr. Mowrer is elder, treasurer and sexton of the church. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Quarryville Cemetery Company. He is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge, of Quarryville, and is regarded as a leading business man of the place, at all times ready to lend a helping hand in aiding any project for the improvement of the town. He has worked his way from a poor boy into a place at once honorable and prominent in the community. He is charitable and is a liberal contributor to the support of the church and other institutions of use and benefit. Both he and his worthy wife have many friends in Quarryville and its vicinity.

Adam Mowrer, the father of David W., is a retired lime burner and farmer of Quarryville, and was born in Eden township, Lancaster county, Aug. 4, 1823. The parents of Adam Mowrer, John and Christina (Barr) Mowrer, were both born in Lancaster county, and John's parents were Adam and Elizabeth Mowrer, who were the founders of the family in Pennsylvania, coming from Germany. The latter couple were the parents of eight children, all of whom were living at the time of the death of the aged pioneers, in 1846. The record is as follows: Katie (now deceased), wife of David Herr; John, father of Adam, who died in 1884, at the age of eighty-six, and whose wife died four years later; David, who settled on a farm in Lancaster county, where he died; Jacob, who is deceased; Julia (deceased), wife of Henry Keen, of Hawkesville, Lancaster county; Margaret (deceased), wife of John Pendleton; Mary (deceased) wife of Eli Keen, of Eden township.

John Mowrer, father of Adam, settled on a farm in Eden township, where he spent the greater part of his life, working the place and burning lime. He died in 1884 and his wife in 1888. This couple were the parents of thirteen children, ten of whom are still living, Jacob, the eldest, having died in Lancaster county in 1898, and left a widow and family still residents of the county; Adam, the father of our subject; Martin, of Lancaster county; David, a resident of Missouri; Benjamin, of Lancaster City; Amos, of Christiana, Lancaster county; Albert, a carpenter, living at Christiana; Samuel, of Lancaster City; Susan, unmarried, living with her brother Albert; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Keen (deceased), of Lancaster county; Mahala, wife of Charles Girfin (deceased), of Lancaster county.

Adam Mowrer was married to Elizabeth Ann, daughter of David and Hannah Witmer, of Bart township, in August, 1846. After their marriage, they moved to East Lampeter township, where Mr. Mowrer worked at farming for three years; then they moved to the village of Quarryville, where he built him a house, and where they have since resided for a period of fifty years, there being only four houses in the place when they moved to it. They are the parents of eight children, two of whom are dead: Laura died in childhood. Benjamin (deceased), born in 1854, married Miss Harriet Reese; they resided in Lancaster city, where the husband died in 1894, leaving a widow and four children, who still reside in Lancaster city. John, born in February, 1847, resides at Coatesville, and has a wife and one daughter, Ida, the wife of Frederick Fisher, of Chester county. Catherine, born in December, 1840, is the wife of James Cummings, residing in Strasburg township; they have three children, Emma, Elizabeth and John. William H., born April 25, 1853, went to Newcomerstown, Ohio, married there, and is an engineer in that city; he has five children, Roy, Myrtle, Frederick, Bessie and Essie. Christiana, born March 4, 1858, is the wife of George Beck, of Colerain, Pa.; they have seven children, Anna, Florence, William, Charles, Harry, Teresse and David. Susan, born in September, 1866, is the wife of Henry Siffner, a business man of Lancaster City; they have no children. Ida, born Nov. 9, 1863, is the wife of John Clov, a business man of Lancaster city; they have no children.

Adam Mowrer is a Republican in politics, but has never sought office at the hands of his party. Both he and his wife are members of the Reformed Church, and during the many years of their residence in Quarryville, have been the instruments of many good deeds and acts of charity. They enjoy the friendship and esteem of all those whose pleasure it is to have been their acquaintances.

SAMUEL S. FAUSNACHT is a retired farmer of Rapho township, and was born in Lebanon county, Pa., Oct. 29, 1847, son of Henry and Mary (Shirk) Fausnacht, of Lebanon county.

Henry Fausnacht, the father, was a farmer until the latter years of his life, when he retired from active duties. He died in 1880, aged sixty years, and his wife followed him in 1889, at the age of sixty-eight years. They are buried at Hershey's Church, Dauphin Co., Pa. The following children were born to this union: Elizabeth (deceased), wife of Levi Brown; Jacob, who died in 1899; Leah, wife of John Bowman, a retired farmer of Lebanon; Fianna (died in 1896), wife of Samuel Kegerise; Henry, a farmer of Lebanon county; Michael, a retired farmer of Lebanon, Pa.; and Eli (deceased), twins; Samuel S. (the subject of this sketch) and Adam S. (farmer of Lebanon county), twins; and George, who died in 1898.

On Sept. 23, 1871, Samuel S. Fausnacht married Miss Susan Baker, of Lebanon county. No children have been born to them. Mrs. Fausnacht was born in Rapho township, Oct. 3, 1841, daughter of John and Ann (Stauffer) Baker, of Rapho township, where both died. The father was a farmer. He died in 1874, at eighty-two years of age, and his wife died in 1891, at the age of eighty-four years. They are buried in the Lutheran Church cemetery in Londonderry township, Chester county. There were born to this union: Catherine, widow of Abraham Stauffer, living with her brother-in-law, Mr. Fausnacht; Mary, widow of John Coble, of Steelton, Pa.; George, a farmer of Conewago, Pa.; Samuel, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; John, a farmer in Lebanon county; Elizabeth, widow of Peter Pickle, of Rapho township; Martin, who died in youth; Solomon, a retired farmer of Salunga, Pa.; Joseph, a jeweler in Lebanon county; Susan, wife of Mr. Fausnacht; Anna, wife of Josiah Fitterer, of Palmyra, Pa.; Caroline, of Lebanon, Pa.; and Sallie, unmarried, living with her brother-in-law, Mr. Fausnacht.

Samuel S. Fausnacht lived at home with his parents until twenty-one years of age, and then began farming on his own account. His efforts have always been well directed, and he has been highly prosperous. He retired from active work in 1900 and since then has taken life easy. He keeps himself well posted on all current events and stands high in his vicinity as a man and neighbor. He and his family are members of the German Baptist Church.

DAVID M. Eshelman, a plumber and steam fitter at Elizabethtown, was born in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, July 20, 1858, and is a son of the Rev. Abraham L. and Anna H. (Martin) Eshelman, both born and bred in Mt. Joy township. The father was a carpenter and cabinet maker in his younger days, and then became a farmer. In 1880 he gave up active farm work, having been ordained as a German Baptist preacher two years previously. He was born Nov. 24, 1830, and died March 20, 1896. His widow died Jan. 5, 1897, and both were buried in the Green Tree Church cemetery. She was sixty years of age at the time of her death, and was the mother of the following children: David M., whose name appears above; Isaac, who died in infancy; Annie, who married Henry Musser, and lives on the old homestead in the township of Mt. Joy.

Isaac Eshelman, grandfather of David M. Eshelman, was born near Colebrook, Lebanon county, April 26, 1794. During his younger years he moved to Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, where he learned the blacksmith's trade and later engaged in farming; he married Barbara Longnecker, also a native of Lebanon county. She was born Nov. 4, 1792, and died March 24, 1861. Her husband died March 8, 1877. Both are buried in the family burial ground, located on the farm which they occupied, situated about two miles southeast of Elizabethtown.

David M. Eshelman was married Nov. 20, 1880, in Londonderry township, Dauphin county, to Annie M. Kieffer, a native of Dauphin county, and a daughter of Rev. Samuel and Catherine (Brinser) Kieffer. Her parents were born in Dauphin county, but moved to Elizabethtown in 1891, and there spent the remainder of their days. Her father was a preacher of the United Zion Brethren Church, and died May 18, 1897, at the age of fifty-eight years, his remains being interred in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. Prior to his ordination as a minister in 1878, he was a farmer. Mrs. Catherine Kieffer is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Eshelman, and has attained the age of sixty-one. Their children are as follows: Daniel B., a horse dealer in Middletown, Pa.; Annie M., who is the wife of David M. Eshelman.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Eshelman was the Rev. Daniel Kieffer, a farmer and a United Zion Brethren preacher, who lived and died on the Kieffer homestead near Hanoverdale, Dauphin county. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Eshelman were Rev. Matthias and Catherine (Heisey) Brinser, both natives of Dauphin county. He was a farmer, a preacher, the founder and first bishop of the United Zion Brethren Church. By a singular coincidence, both Mr. Eshelman and his wife seem to have descended from a family of preachers, for not only were the fathers of both ministers of the gospel, but Mr. Eshelman had three uncles and one grand-uncle of that profession, all of various denominations, while his wife has a record of both grand-fathers, three uncles and one granduncle who were ministers.

Mr. and Mrs. Eshelman remained on the old Eshelman homestead until 1889, when they removed to Elizabethtown, where he secured a position with the firm of A. Buch's Sons, which he has held to the present time, with satisfaction to his employers and credit to himself. Mr. and Mrs. Eshelman are members of the United Zion Brethren Church, and are highly esteemed in the community where their industrious and useful lives are passing. He is a Republican and a man of the utmost integrity.

SAMUEL B. ERB, a prominent business man of Lititz, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born on his father's farm near that borough Nov. 8, 1861, and was educated in the public schools and the Lititz Academy.

Samuel Erb, father of Samuel B., was born in Warwick township, this county, at Erb's Mill, in 1815, and passed his boyhood on the home farm and in his father's mill, in the meantime receiving his education in the public schools. Agriculture was his calling through life and he became a man of great influence and prominence in the community. He was one of the founders of the Lititz National Bank, and one of the directors for about fifteen years. He married Miss Annie Brubaker, who was born in Elizabeth township, Lancaster county, in 1817. To this marriage were born three children, viz.: Elizabeth, deceased; Barbara, wife of Andrew Lane, of Manheim township, and Samuel B. The father of this family died July 5, 1894, and the mother in 1896.

Samuel B. Erb began his business life as a farmer and followed the vocation seventeen years. In 1895 he became identified with the Rome distillery, one mile east of Lititz, and has since operated it. In 1898 he retired from farm life. Mr. Erb was one of the four gentlemen who founded the Keystone Knitting (or underwear) Mills at Lititz, of which he is now the third owner. He was a stockholder and director in the old waterworks company of Lititz, but later became one of the organizers of the new system. He was a director in the Independent Telephone Company of Lancaster county, of which he was one of the founders, and is a director in the Lititz National Bank. He was also one of the founders, directors and principal movers of The J. M. Mast Manufacturing Company, now in operation, located at Lititz, Pa., and formed in 1902; one of the promoters and founders of The Wellington

Mfg. Co. (known as the Mother's Starch Company), located at Lititz, Pa., and organized in 1902, of which he is now half owner; and promoter of the Lititz Bretzel Company, of Lititz, Pa., an industry well worthy of its name. He is certainly one of the most enterprising and public-spirited men in Lititz, and as such enjoys a reputation that is enviable in every particular.

In 1879, Mr. Erb married Miss Ida M. Rupp, a native of Leacock township, Lancaster county, and a daughter of Joseph and Barbara Rupp. This union has been graced with two daughters, May R., and Anna R., now accomplished young ladies and ornaments of the society circles of Lititz.

JOHN P. M. RAUB, a retired hotel man of Quarryville, Lancaster county, was born in Drumore township Dec. 8, 1861. He was reared on his father's farm and received a common-school education. In 1885 he began business for himself, engaging in the butcher's trade, which he followed for about two years, leaving it to enter the livery business; this he continued for nearly three years. In 1890, he was married to Miss Melissa Swisher, daughter of Patrick and Susan Swisher, prominent people of Eden township. Mrs. Raub was born in 1871, and grew to womanhood on her parents' homestead, gaining her education in the common schools of the district. After their marriage, Mr. Raub settled on a rented farm where he lived one year, when he sold out his stock and purchased the "Railroad Hotel" in Quarryville borough, which he successfully conducted for six years. He then sold out to William Armstrong, and bought the "Washington Hotel," in the same borough, which he completely remodeled into one of the best hotels in the neighborhood. He continued in the "Washington Hotel" until 1901, when he sold the place to William Armstrong, the same man who had bought the "Railroad Hotel" from him at an earlier period. Mr. Raub, since his retirement from the "Washington Hotel," has not been actively engaged in the business, in which, during his earlier career, he was so very successful. He has been able to accumulate considerable wealth, which speaks volumes for his judgment and sagacity, as he started in life with small means. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Raub.

In politics Mr. Raub has always been identified with the Old-line Democracy, and has been a member of the borough council for four years. He was reared in the Presbyterian faith. Although yet a young man he has for the last eighteen years been well and favorably known; landlords of this portion of Pennsylvania, and every one who has the pleasure of his acquaintance, speak in terms of the highest praise of him. His name will be a lifelong memory to many who have partaken of feasts at his hospitable board. Mrs. Raub also will be kindly remembered for her courtesy and affable manner by the local as well as by the traveling public.

J. M. P. Raub is the eldest son of Dr. Henry E. Raub, a leading physician of Quarryville, who was born in Martinsville, Pa., Oct. 31, 1830. His parents were John and Mary (Miller) Raub.

John Raub was born in Soudersburg, Lancaster county, in July, 1800, son of Jacob Raub, who was born in Switzerland, emigrated thence to this country, and, after the war of 1812, settled in Lancaster county, where he raised a family of nine children, who afterward settled in different parts of the State. John Raub married Miss Mary Miller in 1823, and located in Martinstown, where he followed the trade of tailor for some time, afterward engaging in mercantile pursuits, which occupied his attention until a few years prior to his death, in 1865. His wife was born in 1800, and died in the family home at Martinsville, in 1853. The couple reared a family of five sons: (1) J. Miller, who was born in 1854, engaged for many years in the lumber trade on the Schuylkill river, and then, moving to Michigan, followed the same business, dying at Big Rapids, Mich., a few years ago. His widow and three children are still residing in Michigan. (2) Dr. John H. was born in Lancaster county, in March, 1828, and after admission to practice, settled in Quarryville, where he continued living until 1856, when he moved to Providence, and practiced there until his death, in 1867. He is survived by two children—Gaylord, of Quarryville, and Lilly S., wife of William Herr, of New Bloomfield, Iowa. (3) S. W. was born in 1832, is now a merchant tailor of Lancaster city, and has a family of five children. (4) Prof. A. M. was born in March, 1840. He received a classical education at various institutions, and was elected superintendent of the Ashland schools, and served in that capacity for some time, afterward filling a similar position in the Kutztown school for a number of years. He was then appointed principal of the Lockhaven Normal School, in which position he served until elected county superintendent of education of Clinton county, Pa., which position he held until 1891, when he was elected president of the Delaware College, at Newark. He still resides in that place, but resigned his position some time ago, and is living a retired life. Considerable of his time, however, is given to literary work, in educational lines, and he is widely known in this connection. He has a wife and six children, two of his sons holding prominent positions in educational work in Boston and Philadelphia. (5) Dr. Henry E. grew to manhood in Lancaster county. After teaching school and clerking in his father's store for a time, he in 1854, took up the study of medicine. In 1856 he was graduated from the Pennsylvania Medical College, and then began practice in Drumore township, afterward coming to Quarryville, where he has resided and followed his profession for the past thirty years. From time to time, he purchased real estate in Quarryville borough and other localities, and owns several well-cultivated farms in the vicinity of his home. In 1861 he married Catherine, daughter of Patterson and Amelia Mordewell, of Columbia, Lancaster county. Mrs. Raub was born in Selins Grove, Pa., in 1832, and is the mother of three children—J. M. P., already referred to in this sketch; Harry M., born in 1864, unmarried, and acting as superintendent of his father's farms; and Dr. R. V. S., who was born in 1872, and educated in the Millersville schools, where he took a special course in languages. He afterward graduated at the Jefferson Medical College, in Philadelphia, and is now practicing in Chester county. He married Miss Lizzie Groff, of Quarryville borough, and to their union one son, Henry E., has been born.

In politics Dr. Henry E. Raub is a Jacksonian Democrat. He has held the office of school director in the borough for many years, was the first burgess of the borough, and filled that position with marked ability. The Doctor was brought up in the Lutheran faith, while his wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of Washington Lodge of Masons, No. 156, and has for many years been a member of the Odd Fellows.

BENJAMIN F. MINICH, a veterinary surgeon of considerable note at Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in that borough April 17, 1858, and is a son of Henry G. and Anna C. (Albright) Minich, of whom a biographical sketch will be found elsewhere.

In 1876, Benjamin F. Minich left Columbia and went to Kent, Ohio, and for four years worked for his brother, N. J. A. Minich, publisher of the Kent Saturday Bulletin; for the following four years he had charge of the printing department of the Railway Speed Recorder Company. In 1884 he went to New York City and took a two-years course in the American Veterinary College, and on graduating returned to Columbia, where he has secured a lucrative practice and achieved an enviable reputation, and where he is engaged in horse breeding, owning several fine stallions.

In October, 1888, Mr. Minich married Miss Anna R. Hinkle, a daughter of Joseph Hinkle, and for eight years a school teacher in Columbia. To this union has been born one child, Mary Jones.

Joseph Hinkle, late retired contractor and builder, was born in Columbia, Dec. 16, 1835, a son of Joseph and Margaret (Fisher) Hinkle, also natives of Columbia. Joseph Hinkle was a farmer in his younger days, was noted as an expert wood-chopper and he and Joseph Maze, who married his (Hinkle's) sister, cleared most of the land on which Columbia is now built. Joseph Hinkle, the father, died in 1866, at the age of eighty-six years. The mother died in 1845, at the age of fifty-five. Both were members of the Lutheran Church, and their remains were interred in Mt. Bethel cemetery. Joseph Hinkle, however, was three times married, and to his first marriage were born four daughters and two sons, viz: David; Patience, who was married to George Fisher; Isaac; Susan M., who was married to a Mr. Lawhead; Elizabeth; Christiann, who was married to Charles Strine—all now deceased. The second marriage was to Margaret Fisher; and to this union were born Sarah, wife of John Haines, retired, of Harrisburg; Joseph; Henry H., who died in Lancaster; Samuel, an ex-soldier and now superintendent of a rolling-mill in Harrisburg, and William, a machinist in Columbia. The third marriage was to Martha Fairs, but to this union no children were born.

On May 16, 1857, Joseph Hinkle, the younger, married, in Columbia, Miss Mary Jones, and to this union the following named children were born: Thomas W., a contractor and builder; Anna, who died young; Anna, married to Benjamin Minich; James L., a contractor and builder in Cleveland, Ohio; Maria J., wife of Henry Albright, a shipping clerk in Columbia. Mrs. Mary (Jones) Hinkle was born in Caernarvonshire, South Wales, March 4, 1833, and is a daughter of John and Anna (Bowen) Jones, the latter of whom died in 1837. The former married again and came to America in 1861; he was a farmer and settled in Wisconsin, in which State he died in 1862, at the age of eighty years. To this marriage there were born eight children, viz.: Henry, who was an officer in the British army, and died in London; John, who died in Pittsburg, Pa.; William, who died in Wheeling, West Va.; David, who was also an officer in the English army and died in London; Thomas, who enlisted in the regular army of the United States and died in this country; Reece, who died in Pittsburg, Pa.; Evan, a farmer in Ohio, and Mary (Mrs. Hinkle). The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Mary Hinkle were farming people and passed their lives in Wales.

Joseph Hinkle attended school about two months each year in boyhood, but from the age of eight until seventeen years he worked hard for his father on the farm; he was then employed in farm teaming for two months with a half-brother, James Riter, then worked three months in a stone quarry, and next served an apprenticeship of two and a half years at stone masonry and bricklaying with Henry Albright; after that he worked at teaming for quarries, foundries, etc., and at bricklaying. He was toll-gate keeper on the Columbia-Chestnut Hill turnpike from 1878 until 1895, and while holding this position did a great deal of contracting and building, erecting about nineteen houses in Columbia, and retiring in the year last mentioned. In politics he was a Republican, and served as chief burgess in 1866 and 1867. Fraternally he was a Red Man. He died Oct. 11, 1902, and now sleeps in Laurel Hill cemetery, near his birthplace.

JACOB F. WISLER, who for a number of years prior to his death lived retired in Columbia, was born in that borough June 6, 1813, son of Lewis and Anna (Forrey) Wisler, natives of Philadelphia and Lancaster county, respectively. The father, who was born in 1780, came to Columbia to engage in the manufacture of brick, and died in Bainbridge, Pa., while on a visit, Sept. 25, 1852; his wife, who was born in 1781, died in 1856. In religion she was a Mennonite. They were married in Columbia, and had a family of ten children, all now deceased, viz.: John, who died March 10, 1863; Michael, who died in February, 1862; Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Philip, who died near Newportville, Bucks Co., Pa., in 1890; Jacob F., whose name opens this paragraph; Mary, deceased, in 1871, who was married to Robert M. Harry, who died in 1885; Samuel, who died in January, 1895; Henry who died May 11, 1901, a retired farmer of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, he and Jacob F. being the last survivors of this large family; Anna, Mrs. Wentz, who died in Virginia in 1870; and Lewis, who died in Kansas, June 26, 1891.

The Wisler family of Columbia, Pa., and vicinity, had for its first progenitor in America, Michael Wisler, who came to this country between 1740 and 1750. His son Michael, who was born in Chester county, Pa., in 1756, in May, 1776, enlisted for service in the Revolutionary war, serving twenty months under Capt. Henry Christ, who commanded a company in Col. Miles' regiment of riflemen; with that command he participated in several engagements, viz.: Flatbush, L. I., where but one-fifth of the Americans escaped; White Plains, N. Y.; Trenton and Princeton, N. J.; and Brandywine and Germantown, Pa. He was twice wounded in these engagements. In January, 1778, he was discharged from the service, at the camp at Valley Forge, on account of disability. Some time afterward he married Sophia Harpel, who was born in Montgomery county in the year 1761. Her name, as shown in the "Tauf Schein," was Sophia Herblin, but has always been known as Harpel among her descendants. In 1794 Michael Wisler volunteered to serve in the army then being sent to the western part of the State, to suppress the Whiskey Rebellion, then disturbing the public peace; when a portion of the army had come to and was crossing the Susquehanna river, at Columbia, then but recently (1788) laid out as a town, he met and conversed with Samuel Wright, owner of the ferry and promoter of the new town, who mentioned that a manufacturer of brick was needed in the promising young community. Mr. Wisler told Mr. Wright that he had acquired a knowledge of the business in Philadelphia, and that after the war was over he would stop at Columbia on his way back to Philadelphia, and look for suitable clay; he did so, and found it on the farm north of town which is now occupied by his descendants, and where brick was made for many years. His son Lewis became the owner of the farm, and was succeeded by his son Henry, who lived there until his death. Michael Wisler died Sept. 14, 1824.

Jacob F. Wisler attended school continuously until eleven years old, and then went to work in the brickyard, and while there employed had school advantages during the winters only until about fifteen and a half years old. He then went to Millersville, Lancaster county, served an apprenticeship of four and a half years at blacksmithing, then worked on the home farm for a while, and later again in the brickyard until 1848. He then rented a blacksmith shop at the railroad yards in Reading, conducting same ten years, and next built a brewery in the same town, which he operated eight years. He then started a brewery on a small scale at his present home, and in 1884 retired from active business. His death, which occurred Feb. 27, 1902, was mourned by the community generally. In politics Mr. Wisler was originally a Democrat, but at the breaking out of the Rebellion became a Republican. He served in the town council.

On April 3, 1842, Jacob F. Wisler was joined in marriage, at Columbia, with Miss Susan Anna Baer, and to this union there were born two children: John B., secretary of the Fairview Milling Company, who married M. Lillie Snyder, of Columbia; and Rebecca B., who died at the age of two years. Mrs. Susan A. (Baer) Wisler was born in York county, Pa., May 30, 1819, and died March 1, 1901. She was a daughter of John and Mary A. (Behmiller) Baer, of York county, who died there. John Baer was a river pilot, and also conducted a gunsmith shop, in which he employed several men. He died in 1841, when forty-five years old, and his wife preceded him to the grave in 1825. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Wisler, Isaac Baer, of Strasburg, Lancaster county, carried on a gun shop in York, Pa., and there died.

JOHN HOCKING was born Oct. 18, 1852, in the parish of St. Germans, in the eastern part of Cornwall, bordering on Devonshire, near the old town of Plymouth. His parents were Samuel and Mary Hocking, and the Hocking family is of a very ancient line as appears by the annals of the various parishes in that part of England, where the different generations of this name were principally engaged in farming and as mechanics.

John Hocking was baptized in the parish church at St. Germans, which belonged to the Church of England. His education was secured at a national school, which at that time was under the control of the Established Church. Following a natural inclination, he went into mining early, and worked in the deep mines of England, where he operated in lead, copper and coal. Interested in the scope of mining, which he found to be very wide, he studied mineralogy and geology, as well as mining machinery. His investigations covered native formations, the nature of the material in which the different formations are found, and the different forms in which they lie. Mr. Hocking felt that greater opportunities and a larger field to work would be found by him on this side of the Atlantic ocean, so at the age of nineteen years he came to America, and located at Nickel Mines in Lancaster county, where he entered the employ of Joseph Wharton, whose works were at that time managed by Charles Doble. The business connection, thus early formed, was unbroken for many years until the closing of the works.

Mr. Hocking was married in the spring of 1875 to the oldest daughter of Charles Doble, and to this marriage were born three boys and two girls. Some years after their marriage they purchased a farm near Georgetown, in Bart township, which was made the family home for fourteen years, Mr. Hocking continuing at the mines, and employing men to carry on the farming, to which his children were reared.

After the closing of the nickel mines, Mr. Hocking, finding that his children's tastes did not run to an agricultural career, put his oldest son in the store at Nickel Mines. He purchased the dwelling, store property and stock of H. Gottschalk, at Kinzers, and opened a mercantile business at that point, with his two sons, Charles and John, April 12, 1896. He was made postmaster of Kinzers and had his two sons for assistants. The enterprise there proved a decided success, and he intended going out of the mining business, and following mercantile pursuits. In 1897, however, he received a letter from J. Jessop, of York, making inquiries about some work in mining which he was carrying on in Maryland. Out of this correspondence grew the Liberty Copper mines, and the opening of this enterprise was managed by Mr. Hocking at a very fair salary. In the meantime he received a letter from Mr. Wharton asking him to superintend the work of developing the old nickel mines of Lancaster county. This work being near his home and his business at Kinzers, he resigned his position at the Maryland works, and engaged with Mr. Wharton, who found by 1899 that the nickel mines were not rich enough to warrant competition with other countries. For a time he worked in Maryland with the people he had been employed by before, but the profits were not enough to warrant the search for gold, and Mr. Hocking was sent to Petersburg, Lancaster county, to develop zinc mines, which were thought to run through that section of the lime stone valley in paying quantities. At the present time, Mr. Hocking is engaged again with J. Jessop & Co., of York, and has made some new developments in the iron ore on Chestnut Hill, Lancaster county, in close proximity to Charles Grubb's mines. The property was owned and operated by the New York Mining Company up to 1876, but then the mines were considered to be exhausted and had been abandoned from that time. Mr. Hocking made careful examinations and found the courses of the ore, which in due time will show and produce large quantities of very rich ore.

For many years Mr. Hocking and his family were associated with the Episcopal Church at Nickel Mines, where he filled all the offices of the vestry, and for many years was one of the wardens.

For twenty-six years he was superintendent of the Sabbath school. Personally, Mr. Hocking is a man of fine character, liberal attainments and a knowledge of mining superior to any other man in Lancaster county. His business methods are beyond question, and he has accumulated a very fair fortune.

ABRAM HERNLEY, a general farmer of Rapho township, resides on the family homestead where he was born, June 22, 1860. He is the son of Peter and Barbara (Hershey) Hernley, who resided for many years on the same place.

Peter Hernley, the father, died June 7, 1892, and is buried in Hernley's Meeting House cemetery. The mother is still living at the age of seventy-five years, on a farm adjoining her son's place. There were born to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hernley the following children: Anna, the wife of Samuel Snaveley, a Rapho township farmer; Mary, widow of Abram Metzler, of Penn township; Lizzie, wife of Henry B. Longenecker, of Penn township, near Limerock, died Sept. 9, 1897; and Abram, the subject of this sketch. Mr. Hernley's paternal grandparents were Peter and Elizabeth (Lehman) Hernley, who resided on the farm owned by their grandson, Abram. Peter Hernley died on the farm. He was a son of Christian Hernley, who, in turn, was the son of the pioneer of the family, Ulrich Horn, or Hernley, who emigrated from Switzerland and landed in Philadelphia Sept. 26, 1737. In 1759 this Ulrich Horn, or Hernley as he was afterwards known, secured from the Penn family patents to 174 acres of the present Hernley homestead. He was a shoemaker by trade, going from house to house, and as he could not always return home by night, his family often stayed alone in their little house. This house was closed by a shutter on the outside, and by aid of a ladder Mrs. Hernley and the children crawled up, drawing the ladder up after them. Thus they would remain through the night, listening to the wolves howling around the hut. Downingtown was the nearest place where the family could secure flour, and they were obliged to carry it all on horseback. He lived and died and is buried on the place which has ever since remained in the possession of the family. It will thus be seen that six generations of Hernleys have at different times owned the broad acres of the homestead, taken up and settled upon by their great-great-grandfather. Abram Hernley's grandparents on his mother's side were Abraham and Annie Hershey, of Lancaster county.

On Oct. 26, 1882, in Lancaster, Abram Hernley married Miss Lizzie Metzler. There have been born to this union the following children: Norah M., Minnie M., Barbara M., Peter M., Lizzie M., Martha M. and Esther M., all living at home with their parents. Mrs. Lizzie (Metzler) Hernley was born on the family homestead in Rapho township Aug. 5, 1862.

Abram Hernley has always lived on his present home, with the exception of ten years which he passed on an adjoining farm. At the time of his marriage he removed to the old place, and has since resided on it. Mr. Hernley is a Republican in politics, but the only office he ever filled was that of school director for a short term. He is thrifty in his habits and devotes his time to personal business affairs and has accumulated a fortune. With his family he is a member of the Mennonite church, and is well regarded in both religious and social circles for his moral character and pleasant ways.

His home farm is located one mile northeast of Farmersville, and consists of sixty-six acres; in addition to this, he owns a farm of seventy acres at Farmersville, a small farm of twenty-one acres in the same vicinity, and one of seventy acres in the neighborhood of Hinkletown. All of these properties are under a high state of cultivation, and have been improved, representing a large amount of money.

Abraham W. Burkholder was married on Jan. 25, 1873, to Miss Katherine Zimmerman, a daughter of Rev. Jacob and Katherine Zimmerman, of West Earl township, and this union has been blessed with these children: Martin, born in 1874, a farmer of West Earl township; Fannie and Katherine died in childhood; Mary, at home; Eli, born in 1882, at home; Abraham, born in 1886, at home; and Jacob, born in 1890, at home.

JOHN N. MUSSER, a representative of one of the old families of East Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in Rapho township, near Mt. Joy, on the old homestead, Aug. 1, 1857, a son of John and Catherine (Nissley) Musser, both now deceased.

John, the father, was a son of Benjamin Musser, and a Miss Miller, while the maternal grandfather was named John Nissley. John Musser, the father of John N. Musser, was born in Conestoga township, and when fifteen moved with the family to East Hempfield township, near Salunga, where he remained until he was married. At that time he removed to Rapho township, and purchased 109 acres of land, and there lived until his retirement to Salunga, at which place his death occurred May 4, 1894, when he was sixty-seven years and twenty-five days old. During his life he was one of the successful farmers of the county, and he and his excellent wife were members of the Old Mennonite Church. The father was one of the active supporters of the church, and was twice a member of the building committee. The death of the mother occurred on Jan. 5, 1892, when she was sixty-four years of age.

John N. Musser worked on his father's farm and received his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. When he was twenty-three, in 1880, he assumed the management of a farm in East Donegal township, belonging to his father, and here he remained for three years. Then he removed to The Junction, in Penn township, and remained there four years, when he located on his present farm, which is pleasantly located just north of Mechanicsville, in East Hempfield township, and consists of thirty-four acres. Mr. Musser also owns the sixty acres adjoining his farm, and all of his property is well cultivated; his improvements are in accordance with the latest ideas with regard to farming. His buildings are in excellent condition and his acres yield him good crops. In addition to his farming interests, Mr. Musser is a director in the Manheim National Bank, and a dealer in tobacco, and is very successful in all his ventures.

On Oct. 19, 1879, Mr. Musser was married to Miss Anna H. Cassel, who was born in Rapho township Dec. 25, 1861, the daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Hernlev) Cassel. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Musser, Minnie C. Mr. Musser and his excellent wife are active members of the Old Mennonite Church, and are most worthy and highly respected people. In all matters of public interest Mr. Musser can always be depended upon to take a leading part, and the success which has followed him through life is well deserved, for he has always been thrifty and hard working.

WILLIAM W. FAIRER, JR., of the firm of Fairer & Son, proprietors of the Columbia (Pa.) Boiler Works, was born in Lancaster city Feb. 10, 1860, and is a son of Thomas and Frances (Myers) Fairer, natives, respectively, of Lancaster city and Manor township, in Lancaster county.

Thomas Fairer was a carpenter by trade, and followed this calling until 1857, when he learned boiler making, at which he worked as journeyman in Lancaster; later he came to Columbia and established the boiler works at present operated by his son, William W., under the original firm name. In addition to boilermaking, the firm did general repairing and also conducted a bicycle store, and these industries are still continued by his son, the father having died March 9, 1894, at the age of sixty-five years. The works occupy a half acre of ground and furnish employment for twenty men.

Mrs. Frances (Myers) Fairer was born in 1835 and now resides in Lancaster. By her marriage to Thomas Fairer she became the mother of eight children, viz: Ida, the widow of Charles Phillips, and a resident of Lancaster; Anna, who died young; William W., whose name opens this biography; Frank, who passed away in childhood; Emma, the wife of Charles Bowman, a jeweler in Lancaster; Margerie, who is married to Harry Gast, a shoe-dealer, also in Lancaster; Myra, living with her mother; and Bessie, who died young.

The paternal grandparents of William W. Fairer were Lanslott and Elizabeth Fairer, of whom the former was a native of England and a shoemaker by trade, and the latter a native of Lancaster, where both ended their days.

William W. Fairer has been twice married. In 1883 at Lancaster he chose for his bride Maggie Schenk, who was born in that city in 1861, and was a daughter of Henry and Mary Schenk. Her father, now deceased, was a jeweler; her mother still lives in Lancaster. Mrs. Maggie Fairer bore her husband two children, Ada and Bessie, and passed away in 1889.

In September, 1890, Mr. Fairer chose for his second companion Miss Ella G. Cornog, and she has borne him one child, W. Atlee. Mrs. Ella G. Fairer was born in Newark, New Castle Co., Del., and is the only child of George and Catherine Cornog.

Mr. Fairer is regarded as one of the most enterprising business men in Columbia, and socially mingles with the best classes of its residents. Fraternally he is a member of the K. of M. and Junior Mechanics, and in politics is a Republican.

H. M. DRYBREAD, a leading citizen of Clay township, was born Dec. 12, 1856, son of Jacob H. and Annie Druckenbrode, the name being changed by the subject of this sketch to its present English spelling.

Jacob Druckenbrode, the grandfather of H. M. Drybread, was an old settler in Clay township, and was the father of nine children: Jacob, Isaac, Benjamin, Jonas, Peter, Nancy, John, Jeremiah and Henry, all deceased. Jacob Druckenbrode, the father, was born in 1829, and died in 1886, and was the father of five children, namely: H. M., of this sketch; Samuel, deceased; Amanda, wife of George Roshorn, of Clay township; Mary, wife of Theodore Yeager, of Lancaster; and Hattie, the wife of George Dommoyer, of Clay township.

Mr. Drybread began life as a poor boy, and it is through his own efforts that he has become possessed of his present fine farm of seventy-two acres, with its comfortable dwelling, and other property. In politics he is a member of the Republican party and at present efficiently fills the position of township auditor and has also served as judge of elections. Although he is now engaged in extensive farming, he is also a miller, and in his earlier years ran a mill in this township. For many years he has been active in religious work and is identified with the Mount Airy Union Sunday School as its superintendent.

Mr. Drybread was married on July 11, 1881, to Miss Amanda Wealand, of Clay township, and two children have been born to this union: Annie, the wife of Cyrus Boyer, of Clay township; and Alice, at home. Mr. Drybread is a man of sterling integrity, and is very highly esteemed in Clay township.

GEORGE E. SIPLE is one of the tried and trusted engineers of the Pennsylvania system, who has been in the employ of the company for more than twenty years. His father was named Jacob Siple, and his mother, whose Christian name was Mary Margaret, was a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Williams) Stuckey, who were originally of Cumberland, but moved thence to Perry county. Jacob Siple was a son of Jacob Siple and Rebecca Shannon, who were born respectively in Lancaster, Pa., and in Maryland. He, Jacob, the grandfather of George E. Siple, was the son of a German immigrant. He was a tailor by trade, but also cultivated a farm. Mr. Siple's father was born Sept. 15, 1828. He resided in the borough of Washington until 1885 when he removed to Columbia. While a resident of Washington he was engaged in tobacco culture. After taking up his residence in Columbia his occupations were various; he still carried on the culture of tobacco, but in addition acted as pilot on the Susquehanna river through the summer, while conducting a cooperage business during the winter months. He is still living, and for the past five years has been employed in grading and otherwise improving the highways of Columbia borough. His wife, Mr.

Siple's mother, died in her fifty-ninth year, in 1886, and is buried in Washington borough. Both she and her husband were members of the Church of God.

George E. Siple is the second child and eldest son of this couple. He was born in the borough of Washington, county of Lancaster, on July 1, 1856. His eldest sister, Anna, is the wife of John D. Lewis, a farmer of Conewago. Another sister, Elizabeth B., is unmarried, and lives with her father. Jacob, a brother, has his home in the far west. Ira is employed in the rolling mills at Columbia. Emma is Mrs. William McCall, of Lancaster. Sarah is unmarried and lives in Columbia. Hetty married William Bard, a railroad engineer, residing in the same town. Rebecca, the youngest of the family, is the wife of Clinton Meshey, a brakeman. Their home is at York.

Mr. Siple was married July 8, 1878, to Miss Annie R. Lenox, of Columbia, whose birthplace was Mt. Joy. Her parents were Richard and Rebecca (Porter) Lenox, of the latter place. Her father was a Union soldier, and died in a Confederate prison during the Civil war. The issue of this marriage was three sons and two daughters: James, Emma, William, George and Lucinda. James, who is a fireman, married Anna Sargent; the other children are unmarried. Mrs. Siple died Nov. 14, 1892, and on Sept. 30, 1897, Mr. Siple married again. His second wife was Mary Stradtman, by whom he is the father of one son, Albert D. The present Mrs. Siple is the daughter of Henry and Wilhelmina Stradtman, both of whom came to America from Germany in early youth, and who were married in Lancaster county. Her father, a carpenter, died in 1892, aged sixty-eight years, and her mother on June 18, 1896, at the age of sixty-two. They were the parents of nine children, their daughter Mary being the eighth. The others, in order of birth, were: Louisa, now Mrs. Fred Brandt, of Lancaster county; Magdalina, the wife of John Weidler; Henry, of Columbia, a shoemaker by trade; Amelia, who married John Herneiser, of Columbia; Susan, who became the wife of Amos Auxer, a Lancaster county farmer; John, whose home is in Lancaster; William, a printer of the same place; and Peter, also a resident of that city.

Until he reached the age of fourteen years young Siple remained at home. He then went to Manor township, where he found work upon a farm. After reaching his twenty-second year he went West, and was engaged for a year in canvassing for books in Missouri. Returning to Columbia, he took charge of a dairy for Silas Purple, and after a year entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Co., as a brakeman. Two years later, he was given the post of fireman, and in Feb., 1892, was promoted to the position of engineer. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of the B. W. H. F., of Pennsylvania; and the Knights of Malta. He is a member of the Church of God, and in politics a Prohibitionist. His intelligence, industry and high moral worth have won for him a large number of friends, as well as the esteem of the community at large.

ELI H. WOLGEMUTH, a general farmer in West Donegal township, was born on a farm which adjoins the one he is now cultivating as his home farm, July 11, 1855, and is a son of Rev. John M. and Hester Hernley Wolgemuth, both of Lancaster county, whose history is fully presented elsewhere under the name of Rev. John M. Wolgemuth. In 1858 his parents came to the farm on which he is now found, and engaged in its cultivation for twenty years.

Eli H. Wolgemuth married Lizzie Hostetter, who was born in Conoy township Jan. 7, 1858, a daughter of Abraham and Fanny (Musser) Hostetter. Her parents were born in West Hempfield township, and now reside in Rapho township, where they are spending their last days in that peace and comfort that belong to the closing period of honest and industrious lives, a certain beautiful law of nature making the closing days of a normal life its loveliest and most attractive.

Eli H. Wolgemuth made his home with his parents, and assisted his father in the care of the paternal acres until that gentleman was obliged by advancing years to give up the farm, and then young Eli took charge of it himself, and has since been engaged in its cultivation, to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. Eli H. Wolgemuth is a Republican, and has filled the position of school director for six years. His father lives in an adjoining house, and both are creditable types of Pennsylvania farmers and churchmen.

CYRUS JOHNSON, a leading farmer of Providence township, was born Jan. 7, 1858, a son of Jacob and Eliza (Eshleman) Johnson, both of whom are now deceased.

Jacob Johnson was born in 1818, in Lancaster county, followed the blacksmith trade through life, and died Jan. 19, 1890, leaving behind him an honorable record as a man of reliability, honesty and industry. He belonged to one of the respected families of Lancaster county, and faithfully followed the teachings of the Dunkard religious faith. In his political sympathy he was a Republican. He married Eliza Eshleman, also of Lancaster county, and they had a family of ten children, their names being as follows: Mary, the wife of Henry Eckerman, of Providence township; Jacob; Henry; Amos; Eliza, who married Henry Heidebaugh, of Quarryville; John and Benjamin, residing in Providence township; Cyrus; Morris, residing in Providence township; and Susan, the wife of Joseph Hall.

Cyrus Johnson grew up to be a farmer, and after he had finished his attendance in the district schools he settled down to an agricultural life. Like many of his neighbors, he began at the bottom of the ladder, and to his industry and frugality may be attributed his present comfortable circumstances. He now is the owner of one of the best farms of the township, comprising eighty-eight acres of fine land, which he has improved with first-class buildings. Although no office seeker, he takes an intelligent interest in public affairs and votes with the Republican party.

Mr. Johnson was married Dec. 29, 1881, and he and his wife, Laura, have had four children, the only survivor being Howard, the eldest. By one of those sad dispensations which sometimes afflict, the three other children passed away from earth within a few days of one another, a scourge of diphtheria being the cause. Neomi, born in 1884, died Jan. 9, 1901, following her sister Ella, born in 1887, who died Jan. 4, 1901, and her brother, Park P., who was born in 1890, and died Jan. 8, 1901. In this sad affliction Mr. and Mrs. Johnson had the deep sympathy of the whole community. They are consistent members of the Church of God, and are known and regarded through their neighborhood with esteem on account of their many kind and neighborly qualities. Mr. Johnson has always taken a deep interest in his locality, and in every way may be regarded as an estimable citizen.

J. ROBERT LONG. Among the leading citizens and prominent farmers of Drumore, is John Robert Long, who was born Sept. 24, 1861, son of H. Harvey Long, deceased, of East Drumore township.

The original settler of the Long family in Pennsylvania was a John Long, an iron maker who came to Lancaster county about 1735 and made the hinges and furnished the iron used in the building of the Presbyterian Church at Chestnut Level, Drumore township, Lancaster county, in the year 1765. The Long family was of Scotch-Irish descent. John Long, grandfather of J. Robert, was married three times; the first wife was Harriet Steele and the following family was born of the union: Ann, Elizabeth, William, Mary, Harvey, Harriet and Robert. Of these the two survivors are Elizabeth, wife of John Jordan, of Philadelphia, and Mary, who married Franklin Sutton, of Lancaster City. For his second wife John Long married Sarah Ross, by whom he had no children. His third wife was Mary Moore, and by this marriage also there were no children. Mr. Long was an iron maker by trade and was one of the leading men of the county, serving as a member of the Legislature several terms, and he died deeply regretted by all.

H. Harvey Long, a leading farmer and citizen of his time, was born Nov. 7, 1821, and died Nov. 3, 1875. He was a farmer in Drumore, now East Drumore, township, and in company with his brother William owned and operated a flour and feed mill, now known as the Groff mill, in East Drumore. In 1858 he was married to Miss Rosannah J. Barnes, from a family of old settlers of Lancaster county. She was born April 1, 1835, and is still residing in Drumore township. To H. Harvey Long and his wife six children were born, of whom J. Robert is our subject; William B., a farmer of East Drumore township, born Oct. 29, 1863; Laura I., born March 14, 1866; Lillie B., born Sept. 26, 1871; and H. Harvey, a farmer of East Drumore, born Feb. 26, 1876.

J. Robert Long was reared on the farm and was educated in the common schools of his neighborhood, with the additional advantage of attending an academy at Chestnut Level. When he attained to mature years he began farming for himself and now possesses a most excellent farm of 230 acres, on which is a fine residence and one of the best barns in Lancaster county. His farm is conducted upon scientific principles, and the results prove that he is one of the progressive farmers of today. All of his property is well improved, fences and outbuildings are in excellent order, and his entire farm speaks well for his industry, management and thrift.

On Dec. 18, 1895, Mr. Long was married to Miss Laura J. Clark, the daughter of A. Scott Clark, of Drumore township, one of the old and highly respected citizens of Lancaster county. Mr. Clark was born Oct. 30, 1815, and died March 8, 1898, deeply lamented by a wide circle of friends. The mother of Mrs. Long, Isabel (Neeper) Clark, was born Nov. 22, 1822, and died Nov. 27, 1897. In religious matters Mr. Clark was a strong Presbyterian, taking an active part in all church work; and politically supported the candidates of the Republican party. Throughout his useful life Mr. Clark was highly respected and was regarded as one of the leading men of his locality. Mr. and Mrs. Clark had, besides Laura J.: Lettie P., wife of James Maxwell, of East Drumore township; Robert W., a physician in active practice in Pittsburg, Pa.; James Lindley, a mining engineer of Northampton, Mass.; Harry Scott, a druggist of Uniontown, Pa.; and Annie Bell, wife of Irwin Cutler, of Drumore township.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Long, Robert Clark, was born on the place now owned by Mr. Long, and was of Irish descent. By his wife, Agnes Scott, he had ten children: Thomas A.; William J.; Elizabeth M., married to Sam Neeper; Margaret, married to James Black; Nancy, married to James Morrison; Mary, married to Franklin Scott; Jane, who became the second wife of Franklin Scott; Robert A.; James; and A. Scott, the father of Mrs. Long.

The political convictions of Mr. Long lead him to be a strong Republican and he devotes his time and energy to insuring the success of his party's candidates. In recognition of his ability and merit, his party has honored him by election to the position of school director for two terms, and he is now serving most acceptably as auditor of the township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Long are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church of Chestnut Level, in which they take an active part, and they are recognized as being among the leading representatives of the old settled families of southern Lancaster county. By honesty, industry and unfailing good management, Mr. Long has attained his present prosperous condition, and his success is most certainly well merited. In public as well as private life Mr. Long discharges the duties assigned him with prompt exactitude and his friends feel that the future before him is bright, anticipating his continued success as a prosperous farmer and patriotic citizen.

WAYNE B. ROHRER. A prominent and highly esteemed resident of Lancaster county, who carries on general farming in Upper Leacock township, is Wayne B. Rohrer, who was born on his present farm Dec. 18, 1851. His parents were Isaac and Martha (Binkley) Rohrer, the latter of whom was born in Manheim township, and the former of whom was a native of Upper Leacock township, where he carried on extensive farming operations until his retirement from activity, in 1874. Then Mr. Rohrer moved to the vicinity of Heller's Church and resided there until his death, in 1898, at the ripe age of eighty-three years. His wife passed away in 1874, at the age of fifty-nine years, and both of them had been among the leading members of the Mennonite Church, and were respected and beloved residents of their neighborhood. They were laid to rest in the old private cemetery on the Rohrer farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer had these children: Barbara, who died at the age of nineteen years; Hattie B., deceased, who was the wife of David N. Landis; Gabriel B., a farmer in Wayne Co., Ohio; Maria B., who married Milton Groff, of Bareville, Pa.; David B., a farmer in this township; Wayne B., the subject of this sketch; Amanda B., deceased; Lemuel B., a farmer in Texas; and Emma E., who married Christian Landis, of Lancaster City.

Wayne B. Rohrer grew up on the home farm and acquired his education in the public schools. His residence has been on the home farm and he has done much in the way of cultivation and improvement. Although his life has been a quiet and uneventful one, he has been much occupied in looking after his large farming and stock interests, in rearing his children to honorable maturity, in advancing the various educational and religious enterprises of his locality and in setting an example of industrious and upright living.

The marriage of Mr. Rohrer was on Nov. 19, 1874, in Lancaster, to Miss Barbara A. Stauffer, and three children were born to this union: Emma, who died at the age of eleven years; Susannah, who married Milton B. Landis; and Christian, who resides at home. Mr. Rohrer has one granddaughter, Esther M.

Mrs. Barbara A. (Stauffer) Rohrer was born at Millcreek, Upper Leacock township, Aug. 8, 1856; she was a daughter of Christian and Susannah (Rutt) Stauffer, the former of whom was born in Pequea township, and the latter in the State of New York. Mr. Stauffer was a farmer for many years, but lived retired for some twenty years prior to his death, his life coming to a close Aug. 15, 1900, at the age of seventy-seven years. His burial was in Stumptown cemetery. He and his family had for many years been consistent members of the Mennonite Church. The death of the mother was on May 5, 1900, at the age of seventy-one, the two parents not suffering a long separation. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer were: Harry, who died at the age of thirty-seven; Christian, a farmer in this township; Barbara, the wife of our subject; Susan, the wife of David Kreider, a farmer of East Lampeter township; Benjamin, a farmer of this township; Israel; Daniel, who was the oldest, died young. By a previous marriage, to Anna Rohrer, one son was born, John R., a farmer of Bart township.

In politics Mr. Rohrer is a stanch Republican and takes much interest in the leading issues of the day. With his family he has for years been a consistent member of the Mennonite Church.

AMOS LEAMAN, a general farmer in Leacock township, where his manly character and industrious habits have won both friends and a very generous share of the goods of this world, was born in Leacock township Feb. 18, 1853, a son of Benjamin and Fanny (Rohrer) Leaman. The father was born in East Lampeter township, and the mother in Strasburg township.

Benjamin Leaman was a farmer, and died June 15, 1892, at the age of seventy-six years, his wife having passed to her reward in 1875, at the age of fifty-six years. They were members of the Mennonite Church, and were buried in Mellinger's cemetery, east of Lancaster. Mr. Leaman retired in 1867, and was school director many years. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Leaman had the following family: Lizzie, married to Henry H. Hershey, of whom a biographical sketch may be found in another place; Benjamin; Catherine; Henry; Fanny, who is dead; Amos; Emma.

Amos Leaman was married in New Holland, in Dec., 1875, to Anna Hershev. To this union was born one child, who died in infancy. Mrs. Leaman, who was born in Leacock township, died Sept. 19, 1877, at the age of twenty-five years, and was buried in the Hershey cemetery. She was a daughter of Peter E. Hershey, and the family history is presented in connection with the sketch of her brother, Henry Hershey.

The second marriage of Amos Leaman occurred in Oct., 1880, when he was married in Byerstown, Pa., by Bishop Isaac Eby, to Lizzie Heller. To this union have come the following children: Cora, Bertha, Ivin, Ira, Walter and Isaac, all of whom are dead; Noah, Nettie and Mary, at home.

Mrs. Lizzie (Heller) Leaman was born in East Lampeter township, and died in July, 1893, at the age of thirty-four years. Her remains rest in the Hershey cemetery. She was a daughter of Isaac G. Heller and a Miss Stauffer, of Lancaster county, both of whom are dead.

Mr. Leaman remained with his parents until his marriage, when he began farming, which has been his occupation to the present time. In 1894 he moved to the farm where he is found to-day, and where he has achieved a decided and commendable success in the tillage of the soil. In his religion he is a member of the Mennonite Church; and in his politics, a Republican.

James Collins was born in Colerain township on April 12, 1830, and is still residing there, a retired farmer. In addition, he also has been a delegate to the State convention several times, and like his father before him, and his sons after him, is a devout member of the Presbyterian Church.

Thomas S. Collins was married to Miss Jennie N. Clark, of Drumore township, on Dec. 25, 1879, she being a daughter of Robert and Matilda (Ankrum) Clark, of Drumore, and was born on Oct. 12, 1857. Seven children have been born of this union: Lottie M. and Ethel E., who are at home; Rachel S., deceased; Robert S.; James Ewing, deceased; Scott E.; Hazel N., the youngest.

Thomas S. Collins was reared upon the farm of his father and received his education in the excellent schools of Lancaster county. After attaining his majority, he decided to follow farming as an occupation and now owns a fine farm of 135 acres of land under a good state of cultivation, and upon which is a fine residence well supplied with modern conveniences. In politics he is a stanch Republican and has served as school director for the past twenty-one years. In addition to his other duties, he has been an auctioneer for many years. HENRY WISLER, in his lifetime a prominent agriculturist and highly esteemed citizen of West Hempfield township, was born on his farm there, which adjoins the city of Columbia, April 12, 1819, son of Lewis and Anna (Forrey) Wisler.

Michael Wisler, his grandfather, served about two years in the Revolutionary war. He was originally a shoemaker by trade. He moved to the farm lately occupied by Henry Wisler in 1798. He was a native of Chester county, and his wife, Sophia (Harpel) Wisler, was born in Montgomery county, this State. Her maiden name, as shown on the "Tauf Schein," was Sophia Herblin, but has always been known as Harpel by her descendants.

Lewis Wisler was born in Philadelphia, Dec. 27, 1780, and was eighteen years of age when, with his parents, he removed to the farm which in time became the home of his son Henry. He died in Bainbridge, Lancaster county, Sept. 25, 1852, and was buried in Laurel Hill cemetery, which was laid out upon his farm. In connection with farming he operated a brickyard for some years, and the business was later conducted by his sons. He served as bridge inspector, and was one of the prominent and influential citizens of his community. He married Anna Forrey, who was born in West Hempfield township May 31, 1781, and died June 11, 1856. In their family were the following children: John, who died March 10, 1863; Michael, who died Feb. 18, 1862; Elizabeth, who died in childhood; Philip, who died near Newportville, Bucks Co., Pa., Jan. 10, 1890, at the age of eighty years; Jacob F., late a retired citizen of Columbia, who died Feb. 27, 1902; Mary, who married Robert M. Mrs. Anna (Forrey) Wisler was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Bixler) Forrey, farming people, the former of whom was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., the latter of Switzerland.

Henry Wisler spent his entire life on the old homestead, and throughout his active business career was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits, making a specialty of dairying. He was a man of good business ability and keen discrimination, and became one of the most prosperous men of his community, so that in his declining years he was surrounded by all the comforts of life. In politics he was independent. He efficiently served as school director in his district for seven years.

In Columbia, Jan. 29, 1845, Mr. Wisler married Miss Sarah B. May, who was born in that city March 11, 1826, daughter of Joseph and Patience (Hinkle) May, of this county. She died Dec. 5, 1854. By that union five children were born, namely: Anna, wife of Joseph H. Zeamer, cashier of the Central Bank of Columbia; Catherine, who died at the age of four and a half years; Mary, who died at the age of twenty-two; and Elizabeth and Sarah, both at home.

Mr. Wisler was again married, in West Hempfield township, Nov. 25, 1858, his second union being with Matilda Hogentogler, by whom he had four children: Henry, who married Anna Hinkle, and assists in the operation of the home farm; and Samuel, Emma B., and Minnie A., all at home. The husband and father entered into rest May 11, 1901, and sleeps in Laurel Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Wisler was born in West Hempfield township Feb. 6, 1839, daughter of Jacob and Ann (Hogentogler) Hogentogler, who spent their lives in that township, the father, who was a mechanic, dying in 1865, aged sixty years; the mother died in 1893, aged eighty-seven. Their remains rest in Laurel Hill cemetery. Religiously they were members of the Reformed Church, and they were most estimable people. In their family were the following children: Mary, deceased wife of Samuel Lockard; John and Sarah, deceased; Joseph; Matilda, now Mrs. Wisler; Henry, who was a farmer on the old homestead, and died Aug. 13, 1901, and was buried in Laurel Hill cemetery; Frank, a machinist of Columbia; and Charlotte, wife of Edward Billett, a mechanic of Columbia. Mrs. Wisler's paternal grandparents were John and Christiana Hogentogler, of West Hempfield township, and her maternal grandparents were John and Mary (Charles) Hogentogler, natives of West Hempfield and Manor townships, respectively.

S. P. MODERWELL, one of the representative farmers of Lancaster county, is also one of its most intelligent and highly esteemed citizens. Mr. Moderwell was born on Jan. 28, 1852, in Columbia, Pa., a son of Adam Patterson and Amelia Moderwell, Adam a native of Lancaster county, and Amelia a native of Selinsgrove.

Grandfather John Moderwell was the father of eight children: Samuel, Robert, Thomas, John, Adam, Eliza, Nancy and Mary J., all of them having passed out of life.

Adam Patterson Moderwell, a son of John, and the father of S. P. Moderwell, of Martic township, was born in 1812, and in 1835 was united in marriage to Amelia Snyder Selin, of Selinsgrove, Snyder county, and to them were born ten children: Catherine, who married Dr. H. E. Raub, of Quarryville, Lancaster county; Samuel S., of Philadelphia; Sarah E., of Columbia; Maggie, deceased; James R. S., deceased; Susan, deceased; John, deceased; Robert, deceased; Mary, the wife of William B. Fasig, of Columbia; and S. P., of Martic.

Mr. Moderwell began his business career at the age of fourteen years, in a printing office, remaining until he was master of the trade, and then entering into partnership with William Hays Grier on the Columbia Herald, later selling his interest to Robert Risk. Then Mr. Moderwell embarked in the job printing business, combining with it book-binding. When he also sold this, he removed to his farm, in Martic township. During his residence in Columbia he was elected to the office of chief burgess, and during Cleveland's last administration was in the government employ. Since coming to his farm, which contains fifty acres of fine land, Mr. Moderwell has given it his entire attention. His elegant, modern residence is probably the finest in this section and here he and his charming and estimable wife delight to show hospitality to their scores of friends.

The marriage of Mr. Moderwell united him with a lady of culture, education and refinement, Miss Nellie J. Haldeman, of Columbia, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary Haldeman, the marriage being celebrated on Feb. 15, 1873. One son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Moderwell, Charles Selin, born on Sept. 18, 1874, who remains with his parents, carrying on farming operations. Like his father, he is a stanch member of the Democratic party, and occupies an enviable place in the community.

Mrs. Moderwell was born on Aug. 8, 1851, and she was reared and educated in Columbia. Her father, Benjamin Haldeman, was born in 1811 and died in 1885, and in 1835 married Mary Ann Sneider; she was born in 1815, and died in 1879. They reared a family of eight children: Sarah J., deceased; Mary A., deceased; Benjamin S., deceased; Ann Elizabeth, deceased; John D., deceased; James B., a Civil war veteran, who has made his home with Mrs. Moderwell for the past nineteen years; Nellie; and Neal Dow, also deceased. The family is of German ancestry.

For several years Mrs. Moderwell was a teacher in the public schools of Columbia and in the county, and is a lady of accomplishments and literary tastes. She cultivates those refining influences which give pleasure to life and in these efforts is ably assisted by both her husband and son. The family is one which is valued highly in the neighborhood and throughout the community.

SAMUEL BARD, JR., a prominent and successful farmer and tobacco packer, residing in Mechanicsburg, Lancaster county, was born on the old homestead in Upper Leacock township, on April 7, 1863, and comes of one of the old and substantial families of the county. His parents were Samuel and Leah (Stuck) Bard, the latter also of a well-known family.

Samuel Bard, the father, now a retired farmer of this township, was born here on Oct. 15, 1816, and was a son of George and Elizabeth (Swope) Bard, residents of Upper Leacock township, although both died in East Lampeter township. Until 1843 Grandfather Bard was a farmer, but having acquired a competency, he retired at that time, dying in 1856, at the age of eighty-four years. The mother died in 1850, at the age of sixty-six, and both these grandparents of our subject were laid to rest in a private cemetery on a part of their old farm. Grandfather Bard was a prominent man in the county and he was entrusted with the office of poor director. Both he and his wife long were members of the Lutheran Church. The children born to this couple were: Margaret, who married David Kurtz; Jacob; Henry; Mary, who married Henry Shreiner; George; Adam; Levi; Samuel, the father of our subject; Elizabeth, who married Henry Forney; Peter, and Abraham, all of this numerous family having passed away with the exception of Samuel Bard. The great-grandparents were George P. and Margaret (Kitzmiller) Bard, farmers of Upper Leacock township.

Samuel Bard, son of George Bard, and the father of Samuel Bard, Jr., was married on Nov. 21, 1843, in Leacock township, to Leah Stuck, and to this union were born: Susannah, who died young; G. Willie, who died at the age of seven; Harry S., who married Amelia East, and lives in Reading, Pa.; Sarah Ann, died in infancy; Milton, who died young; James M., still unmarried, who lives in Reading; Laura F., who married A. B. Bausman, a veterinary surgeon of Millersville; Justice F., a farmer and tobacco packer of Upper Leacock township, who married Alice Miller; Agnes, residing at home; Samuel; and Ida A., residing in the old home. The mother of our subject was born in Cocalico township on Dec. 31, 1824, and died on Feb. 5, 1901, and was reverently laid away by the side of the little children gone before, in the old burial spot, on the family grounds. She was a daughter of George A. and Sarah (Withers) Stuck, of Ephrata township, the former of whom was a well-known farmer. His death occurred in Cocalico township in 1832, at the age of forty; the mother of Mrs. Bard died at the age of eighty-five.

Until 1888 Samuel Bard cultivated the old home farm, but at that date he retired from activity, removing then to his present most comfortable home at Bards Cross Roads on the New Holland and Lancaster turnpike. Mr. Bard has long been an active Republican and anxious to advance the interests of his party, but he has never sought office, serving only in the position of township auditor, filling that office with credit to all concerned. He is held in high esteem through his neighborhood.

Samuel Bard, Jr., of this sketch, is one of the leading men of this section of Lancaster county, both on account of his honorable family and also as a result of his extensive farming interests and tobacco operations. From 1888, when his father retired from the active management of the business of the large farm, the son has conducted it successfully, moving to his present highly cultivated and improved estate in 1900.

The marriage of Mr. Bard connected him with a family which traces an almost unbroken line back to its native Switzerland. The Rohrer's are one of the oldest families of Lancaster county, though they first settled in Montgomery county. The wedding of Samuel Bard, Jr., to Miss Lettie F. Rohrer was in Mechanicsburg, on Dec. 27, 1887, and the children born to this union are: Florence J., Leah E., G. Philip and Margaret F.

Mrs. Lettie F. (Rohrer) Bard was born in East Lampeter township, Lancaster county, on Feb. 7, 1868, and she was a daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Buckwalder) Rohrer, who were prominent farmers of Lancaster county, and also leaders in the tobacco packing business. Father Rohrer died on July 15, 1895, at the age of fifty years, and both father and mother belonged to the Old Mennonite Church. The mother still resides in Lancaster. Mr. Rohrer took a great interest in educational matters and for a long period was a school director. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer were: Witmer B., a clerk in Rossmere, Pa.; Sadie A., who married Luther A. Kunkle, residing in Berwick, Pa.; Lettie, the estimable wife of Mr. Bard; Susie J., Mary and Ida, all of whom reside in Lancaster with their mother. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Bard were Jacob and Mary (Shaffer) Rohrer, the former of whom removed to Greenfield Station after he retired from active work on the farm. He died in 1902 at the age of eighty-one and his wife died in 1885 at the age of sixty-five. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Bard were Benjamin and Susan (Johns) Buckwalder, also farming people of this county. Mrs. Buckwalder died in 1862 at the early age of forty-six, but her husband lived to be eighty-two, dying in 1898.

Mr. Bard of this sketch, like his father, is an ardent Republican and has efficiently served his township as clerk. The family belong to the Lutheran Church and Mr. Bard is one of its leading supporters and constant attendants. His standing before his fellow-citizens proves that he fulfills the duties of life in a manner to commend him to their confidence and respect.

JOHN S. HAMAKER. Prominently identified with the material growth of Mt. Joy, Pa., is the well-known citizen, John S. Hamaker. Mr. Hamaker was born in Conoy township, this county, on June 5, 1854, a son of Abraham and Catherine (Spickler) Hamaker, of Conoy and Mt. Joy townships, respectively.

Abraham Hamaker is a resident of Manheim, Pa.; he was born in Conoy township in 1828, and has followed the occupation of a miller. His wife, who was born in 1827, died in 1897, and the children belonging to this family are: Samuel, a cigar manufacturer, of Manheim; John S., of this sketch; Mary, who married Benjamin Donevan, a wheelwright and an ex-postmaster of Manheim; Amos, who lives retired, in Manheim; Abraham, a cigar manufacturer, of Manheim; William, a carpenter, of Manheim; Emma, who married Warren Druckenmiller, a cigar manufacturer, of Manheim; Frank, an artist, of Williamsport, Pa.; and Kate, deceased. The paternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Bossler) Hamaker, farmers in Lancaster county, while the maternal grandparents were Peter and Mary (Shreiner) Spickler.

John S. Hamaker was reared and educated in his home neighborhood, but early evinced a talent in wood working, and at the age of fifteen prevailed upon his parents to permit him to learn the cabinet-making trade, in Mount Joy, under the capable instruction of Martin Strickler, and in three years was a reliable and careful workman. Until 1878 Mr. Hamaker followed the carpenter trade, and then began his successful career as contractor and builder. This business requires more skill than in former years, as people are becoming more cultivated and more exacting in their demands, but Mr. Hamaker has been prepared for this, and the present beautiful town of Mt. Joy proves the assertion, for the larger number of its stately residences and attractive homes are the work of his brain and hands.

The marriage of Mr. Hamaker was in Mount Joy, to Miss Anna M. Barnhart, who was born in Mount Joy, a daughter of Israel and Lydia (Bear) Barnhart, of York county; the latter has passed away, but the former resides with his son-in-law. Two sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hamaker, William, attending a medical college, and Edgar, at home.

Mr. Haymaker for three years was a school director and has always taken an interest in educational matters. Socially he is connected with the order of Red Men, and with the A. M. U. A., and the Knights of the Golden Eagle. For many years he has been an elder in the religious body known as the Church of God. In politics he is a Republican, and is one of the best citizens of this locality, well representing the building interests of this part of the township. He also is a member of the town council and is the superintendent of the Church of God Sunday School.

Mrs. Worth was born in East Drumore township, and is the daughter of Samuel and Ellen (Hershey) Nissley, both born and bred in this county, and now residing in East Drumore township. Mrs. Worth is a bright and charming young woman, and makes her home the center of many warm and hearty friendships.

Dr. Worth was reared on his parents' farm until he reached the age of eighteen years, and had prepared himself for admission to the State Normal School at Millersville, from which he was graduated in 1893. Immediately he entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1897. For two years he practiced his profession at Unicorn, and in April, 1899 removed to Bainbridge, where his thorough knowledge of his profession and his manly character have commanded a generous recognition, winning him many friends, and building up a good practice.

Dr. Worth belongs to the I. O. O. F., and the Sr. O. U. A. M., where his presence is very welcome and his influence felt. In his politics he is a Republican, and in his religion he is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He is a public-spirited citizen, awake to the best interests of the community in which he has cast his lot.

GEORGE A. SHILLOW, the enterprising young proprietor of a slaughter house and meat market in Columbia, was born in Marietta, Lancaster Co., Pa., Dec. 3, 1869, and is a son of John and Margaret (Zeigler) Shillow, natives of Germany. John Shillow came to Columbia, Pa., in an early day and was proprietor of a meat-market. He lost his wife in 1880, when she was forty-five years old, and his own death took place in January, 1886, at the age of fifty. He had been twice married, first to Margaret Zeigler and secondly to Frances Knapp, of whom mention is made in full on another page. To his first marriage were born seven children in the following order: John, meat-market proprietor in Marietta; Anna, deceased wife of Ernest Manlick; Frank, a speculator in Columbia; George A.; Leonard, a traveling salesman of Lancaster; Margaret, unmarried, in Philadelphia; and Elizabeth, also single, in Columbia.

George A. Shillow lived with his father until the latter's death, and then with his brother John, on the old homestead, until 1894, when he came to Columbia. On June 30, 1892, he married Marinda M. CALVIN R. STRICKLER, the well-known hardware merchant of Columbia, Pa., is a native of York county, this State, born in Hellam township, Nov. 8, 1866, a son of Alfred D. and Elizabeth (Ruby) Strickler. His father is a farmer by occupation and has served as school director in his district for two terms. Calvin R. is the oldest of their children, the others being Edward D., a cigar box manufacturer; and Susan, wife of Morgan E. Gipe, of the firm of Strawinski & Gipe, dry goods merchants of York.

Calvin R. Strickler traces his ancestry back to Jacob Strickler, a native of Switzerland, who, on his emigration to America, located in Hellam township, York county. His son, John Strickler, spent his entire life as an agriculturist upon the old home farm in York county. He married Susan Garber. The next in direct descent were Jacob and Elizabeth (Deitz) Strickler, the grandparents of Calvin R. They, too, lived on the old homestead in York county. The grandfather was a farmer by occupation, and was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Wrightsville, of which he was a director up to the time of his death. Calvin R. Strickler's maternal grandfather was Samuel Ruby, a native of York county, and a son of Peter Ruby, one of the pioneers of the county. There the former made his home throughout life, being engaged in farming and the operation of a mill. He was a shrewd and capable business man, and legal adviser to many. He was one of the leading Democrats of his township and served as surveyor and justice of the peace.

Reared on the home farm, Calvin R. Strickler attended the country schools during the winter until eighteen years of age, the York County Academy, York, Pa., the Millersville State Normal School and the Poughkeepsie Business College, graduating from the latter institution in February, 1885. He then came to Columbia, Pa., where he obtained a position in the First National Bank as messenger, and so capably and satisfactorily did he discharge his duties that he was promoted several times, having served as receiving teller, individual bookkeeper, and paying teller. He is a man of excellent business ability and sound judgment and has met with well-deserved success in his undertakings. He was at one time director and vice-president of the Columbia Electric Light & Power Company, and is at present director and treasurer of the East Columbia Land Company, and treasurer and director of the Columbia Flint Company.

On June 8, 1894, in Lancaster, Pa., Mr. Strickler married Miss Harriet M. Bursk, by whom he has three children, namely: Alford B., Daniel B. and Jacob H. Mrs. Strickler is a native of Lancaster, where her parents, Daniel and Ellen (Widmeyer) Bursk, still reside, her father being the oldest grocer engaged in business in that city. He is an active worker in the Lutheran Church and one of the main instigators of the Young Men's Christian Association, of which he was the first president.

Mr. Strickler is a prominent and active member of the Presbyterian Church of Columbia, in which he is now serving as secretary and trustee. By his ballot, he supports the men and measures of the Republican party and takes a commendable interest in public affairs, giving his support to all enterprises which he believes calculated to prove of public benefit. He is now serving his second term as borough auditor.

HENRY H. KAEGEL, proprietor of the Marietta Rolling Mills, of East Donegal township, located on Big and Little Chickies creeks, is one of the prominent citizens of Lancaster county. Mr. Kaegel was born in Lancaster, Pa., in June, 1857, a son of Adam and Caroline (Herman) Kaegel, natives of Illinois, who came to Lancaster county about 1855, settling there and engaging in milling for a number of years. The death of Adam Kaegel took place in West Hempfield, in 1882, at the age of seventy-five. The mother, aged seventy, resides in Marietta in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Appel. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kaegel connected themselves with the Lutheran Church, many years ago and their lives ever displayed Christian traits. The children born to these estimable people were: Henry H.; John, a miller, in Juniata county; and Mary, who married Harry Appel, of Marietta.

Henry H. Kaegel, of this biography, was educated in the common schools of his district, remaining until the age of nineteen with his father, learning the milling business, and in 1873 he purchased the Big Chickies mill, located in Rapho township, operating this mill for seventeen years, and becoming well and favorably known to the farming district for many miles in the township. Later Mr. Kaegel took charge of his present mill, purchasing it from B. F. Heistand. This plant was erected in 1814, by William Sherrer and is a landmark in the neighborhood, having stood since those early days without mark of decay. It is a valuable property, the power being 60-horse water power, and is well and successfully managed by its competent owner.

In Marietta, Pa., in 1876, Henry H. Kaegel and Susan A. Marley were united in marriage, and to this union have been born: Ella, Elwood, Rebecca, Oliver, and Raymond. RUFUS K. COOPER. Among the prominent and successful business citizens of Mechanicsburg, Pa., is Rufus K. Cooper, who has been prominently identified with many of the local offices during the past few years, but is now the owner and operator of a first-class bakery, supplying a long felt want in this part of the town.

The paternal grandparents of our subject were Isaac and Rebecca (Geyer) Cooper, natives of Berks and Lancaster counties, respectively, and the maternal ancestors bore equally honorable names, being John P. and Catherine (Kinzie) Kraatz, of Lancaster county, where the former was a well-known school teacher.

Rufus K. Cooper was born in Brownstown, in West Earl township, Jan. 13, 1863, a son of Martin G. and Hannah (Kraatz) Cooper, natives of this county, the former of whom was born in West Earl and the latter in Ephrata townships, the birth of the father being on July 21, 1838, and that of the mother, on March 24, 1840. By trade Mr. Cooper is a paper hanger, glazier, grainer and painter. Both he and his wife are members of the Evangelical Association Church. The two children of these parents are Rufus K., and Katie C., who married Charles Swartz, a merchant in Talmadge, Pennsylvania.

On Feb. 3, 1884, Mr. Cooper was united in marriage to Miss Susan L. Kreider, and they have had the following family: Clarence K., Gertie K., Mamie K., Charles R., Lester K., Lottie M. and Mabel H. Mrs. Cooper was born in East Lampeter township, and was a daughter of David L. and Mary (Landis) Kreider, prominent farmers.

The early education of Rufus K. Cooper, of this sketch, was secured in the district schools and later he enjoyed educational advantages at the Central Pennsylvania College, of which he is a graduate, beginning his course there at the age of seventeen years. Following his marriage he engaged in farming, although from the age of thirteen to twenty-one he had assisted his father at painting, thus becoming qualified to follow that trade. His father-in-law desired his assistance on the farm in East Lampeter township and he remained operating it for sixteen years. In the spring of 1901 he came to Mechanicsburg to live, opening up his present prosperous business.

In politics Mr. Cooper has always been an active Republican, and has been of signal use to his party. For two years he was clerk in the recorder's office and assisted materially in the making of the new index. He also made a new index in the Orphans' Court office in 1891, and since then has been at different times assistant clerk in the Orphans' Court office. On Sept. 11, 1901, he was appointed justice of the peace by Gov. Stone, for an unexpired term, and in February, 1902, was elected for a full term ending May 6, 1907.

SIMON CAMERON HEISEY, one of the leading business men of Rheems, Pa., has several distinct lines of action to occupy his attention, and it is not too much to say that each one is thoroughly worked. He is a farmer, carries on a butcher business of no slight proportions, and is one of the High C Lime Manufacturing Company, an institution with a bright future before it. Mr. Heisey resides in West Donegal, where he was born on a farm adjoining the one he makes his home, Feb. 27, 1860, and is a son of Jacob W. Heisey, of whom a full history, both personal and family, is published in another place, to which the reader is referred for full information regarding the family antecedents of the gentleman, whose name introduces this article.

Simon C. Heisey has been married three times, the first time Nov. 8, 1883, when he was united in marriage with Lizzie M. Eyer, at her home in East Donegal township. To them was born one child, Horace E., now at home with his father. Mrs.

Heisey, who died Feb. 11, 1888, at the age of twenty-seven years, and was buried in Reich's cemetery, was a daughter of D. M. Eyer, whose personal history is given on another page.

Mr. Heisey was married to his second wife, Nov. 5, 1889, at her home, when he became the husband of Fanny M. Eyer, a sister of the first Mrs. Heisey. Mrs. Fanny Heisey died Sept. 21, 1892, and was buried in Reich's cemetery.

The third marriage of Mr. Heisey occurred Oct. 10, 1893, when he was married to Anna H. Lindemuth, at her home in East Donegal township. To them have come three children: Mabel, Alice L. and Fanny L. Mrs. Anna H. Heisey was born on the old Lindemuth homestead in East Donegal township, Dec. 2, 1862, and is a daughter of Elias and Mary (Hostetter) Lindemuth, natives of East Donegal and Rapho townships, respectively. Her father, who was in his active days a very prominent man, is now a retired farmer, and is making his home on the farm where he was born in September, 1835. Her mother died in September, 1896, at the age of fifty-nine years. They had the following children: Simon H., Elmira H. and Susan H., all died young; Anna H. is noted above; Mary H. married Jacob Krider, and has her home in Landisville, Pa.; Steven H. is a farmer in East Donegal township; Elias H. is at home; Lizzie H. married Harry L. Heisey, of Rheems, a brother of Simon Cameron; Jacob H. and Monroe H. are at home.

Lindemuth, now makes his home. Mrs. Heisey's maternal grandparents were Jacob and Anna (Stauffer) Hostetter, whose lives were spent in Lancaster county. They were farming people.

Simon C. Heisey remained with his parents until he reached his maturity, when he married and located on the farm where he now lives. Here he engaged in general farming and in the dairy business until 1891, when he gave up his milk interests. He is an enthusiastic breeder of Guernsey cattle, and is a member of the Guernsey Association. In politics, he takes strong Prohibition views and is a good citizen. His personal standing is beyond question and his name fitly goes into the list of the representative men of Lancaster county.

WILLIAM H. BARTON. One of the leading agriculturists and prominent citizens of Lancaster county, residing on and operating the fine old homestead farm, in Upper Leacock township, is William H. Barton, who was born in his present residence: Sept. 28, 1849.

The Barton family is one of the old and honored ones in this part of the county. John Barton came to America from Scotland in 1772, with his brothers, James and Samuel. James settled in the Tuscarora Valley, Samuel in Virginia, and John in Upper Leacock, Lancaster Co., Pa. John Barton, son of John the emigrant, married Isabella Vogan, whose family founded Vogansville, in this county. To this union were born: Margaret, who married Mark Connell; Leah, who married Robert Connell; Rachel, twin sister, who lived single, dying at the age of seventy-nine; Isaac; Samuel; Henry; James; Eliza and William.

Henry Barton, the father of our subject, was born on the farm in Upper Leacock township, and there his whole life of eighty-three years was spent. He was a man of prominence in his community and accumulated large means. His marriage was to Miss Margaret L. Simon, of Philadelphia, and the children of that union were: John C., of New Holland; William H., our subject; and Lizzie, who resides with her mother.

William H. Barton was educated in the common schools, finishing his school life in the Millersville State Normal. In 1880 he took charge of the home farm, consisting of 160 acres, and so continued until his father's death, when it was divided and sold, William H. retaining the original homestead of 100 acres. In politics he is a Democrat.

William H. Barton married Mrs. Nellie Burwell, of Mecklenburg, a great-granddaughter of Gov. Spottswood, of Virginia.

SAMUEL BRUBAKER HARTMAN, M. D., physician and surgeon, and founder of the celebrated Hartman Sanitarium, at Columbus, Ohio, was long associated socially and professionally with the people of Lancaster, Pa. His wife, too, is a daughter of one of the best known citizens of Lancaster, now deceased, and is descended from one of the oldest families in the county. Dr. Hartman's history reads like a romance, and the recital of his struggles and successes should be an incentive to all young men whose only capital in life consists of brains, energy and honest principles.

Henry Hartman, his grandfather, was a prominent farmer, who lived two and one-half miles from Witmer's Bridge. The Brubaker family, of which the Doctor's mother was a member, is well known in the county, and Mrs. Hartman was an aunt of the late George Brubaker, ex-district attorney for Lancaster county, and a great-aunt of the late Judge N. Clay Brubaker.

Dr. Hartman was born two and one-half miles east of Harrisburg, in Dauphin county, April 1, 1830, but he bears his years so lightly that his appearance would suggest to no one such an age. His father, who was a farmer, died when he was a mere child, and his mother was left penniless with eight children—five boys and three girls—looking to her for support. An uncle of these children brought them and their mother to Lancaster county, conveying all their effects in a four-horse wagon. On their arrival the family took possession of a log cabin in Manor township, and the older children were apprenticed. Of this family but three are now living:

S.B. Hartman

Samuel B.; Harriet, widow of Joseph Rutter, of New Holland; and Henry, a retired farmer, eighty-five years of age, residing in East Greenville, Ohio.

After coming to Lancaster county Samuel B. Hartman lived for a time with his uncle, and was then sent to live with John Charles, who became his guardian, the lad having received $150 as a bequest from an aunt. Young Hartman spent some time at Medway, Ohio, attended Farmers College, a literary institution at College Hill, Cincinnati, and then took up the study of medicine, under Dr. Shackelford, at Medway, later attending lectures in the Medical Department of the Western Reserve College, at Cleveland, Ohio. When he was twenty-four he began the practice of his profession at Tippecanoe City, Ohio, where he remained two years, and then entered Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, from which famous school he was graduated in 1857. Following his completion of the course in Philadelphia, he settled in Millersville, Lancaster county, where he practiced his profession for twelve years, and became so forehanded that he thought he might retire from active work, and devote his time to study and research. To his surprise, however, in six months he found himself as penniless as when his father died, having in his open-handed and generous manner given away all his possessions. This indefatigable worker started anew, and after traveling from place to place as a specialist established the Hartman Sanitarium, at Columbus, Ohio, and pressed with all his energy the manufacture and sale of "Peruna," a remedy that has enormous sales all over the United States. The demand for it has become so widespread that a branch house was opened in Montreal, Canada, early in 1901.

Dr. Hartman married Miss Sallie Martzell, whose father came from a family of substantial farmers, but who chose hotelkeeping as a business, and was for an ordinary lifetime the owner and keeper of the "Plow" tavern, on West King street, in Lancaster. To Dr. and Mrs. Hartman have come two children: John Henry, entered into rest while in the graduating class of Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster (his tomb is marked by a life-like and life-sized statue of the deceased student, and is one of the attractive spots in Lancaster cemetery); Maribel is now the wife of F. W. Shoemaker, the advertising manager of the Hartman Sanitarium, and of the "Peruna" remedies, and they have one daughter Maribel. Dr. Hartman is still devoted to the noble profession of which he has so long been a close student, and in which he has done so much to relieve suffering humanity.

WILLIAM T. STRAUSS, a well-known engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Columbia, was born near Bainbridge, Lancaster Co., Pa., Sept. 6, 1845, and is a son of George and Sarah (Talbert) Strauss, who were natives of the same county and the parents of the following named children: Sarah, deceased wife of John Brubaker; Henry, of Indiana;

Margaret, widow of James Zitch, late of Harrisburg, Pa.; Aaron G., deceased; George T., of Williamsport, Pa.; Mary, widow of John Judy, and residing in Middletown, Pa.; William T.; and Cyrus, deceased. George Strauss, the father of this family, was a shoemaker by trade, and died in 1850, at the age of forty-nine years; his widow died in 1858, when forty-eight years old. Both were members of the Lutheran Church, and their remains were interred at Bainbridge.

After the death of his mother, William T. Strauss worked out on farms in his neighborhood until 1863, when he went to Washington, D. C., and there worked in a government blacksmith shop for sixteen months. He then enlisted in Co. G, 203d P. V. I., but was shortly afterward transferred to Co. B, 76th P. V. I. Although he had a part in several skirmishes, he was never in a general engagement, and was mustered out at Raleigh, N. C., in July, 1865, and honorably discharged at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Strauss, after his discharge from the service, returned at once to Washington, D. C., and for a week was employed in the quartermaster's department, and when the government ordered the transfer of 500 six-mule teams to Leavenworth, Kans., Mr. Strauss, who was anxious to go to California, availed himself of the opportunity to accompany the mule teams to the West as far as their destination, going as guardsman, but at Indianapolis orders were received to dispose by sale of 250 of the mule-teams and to take the remainder to Chicago, Ill., where they were sold at auction. Mr. Strauss then returned to Marietta, Pa., and served an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade for three years, after which he was employed for five years as track repairer by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He was then appointed fireman on the Philadelphia division of the road, but three years and four months later was thrown or fell from his engine and had his knee crushed. On his recovery he was made track foreman, in which capacity he served five years, and then resumed his place as fireman, which position he filled from May 15, 1881, to Sept. 19, 1881, when he was promoted to engineer, his present position.

Mr. Strauss has twice married. In Dec. 1867, at Marietta, he wedded Miss Florence Brooks, a daughter of James and Sarah (Foltz) Brooks. James Brooks was a cooper by trade. He and his wife had the following children besides Florence: James B., an iron molder, Walter V., and Matilda, all of Chicago, Ill.; Margaret, deceased. Mrs. Brooks is not living. In 1874 Mr. and Mrs. Strauss settled in Columbia. Here Mrs. Florence Strauss passed from earth at the age of forty-seven years, in 1895, without issue, and her remains were interred at Columbia, Pennsylvania.

The second marriage of Mr. Strauss took place in Lancaster, Dec. 20, 1898, to Mrs. Emma Shirk, who was born in Washington borough, Lancaster Co. Pa., in Dec. 1846, and is a daughter of William and Rebecca (Sounders) Parker, the former of whom was a carpenter and farmer, who died in 1892, at the age of sixty-nine years. He had lost his wife four weeks previously at the age of sixty-eight. To Mr. and Mrs. Parker were born the following children: John, an engineer of Washington, Pa.; Emma, now Mrs. Strauss; Sarah A., deceased; William, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas McAfee, of Rawlinsville, Pa.; Margaret S., deceased; and Francis P., of Washington, Pa. William Shirk, the first husband of Mrs. Emma Strauss, was a son of Matthias Shirk, of Lancaster, and died in 1894, when thirty-six years old. No children were born to him, nor have any been born to Mr. Strauss by either wife.

In religion Mr. Strauss is a Presbyterian, and in politics is a Republican. He is a member of the G. A. R., the K. of P., the A. and I. O. K. of M., the B. of L. E., and F. and A. M., and is greatly esteemed in Columbia for his many personal merits, in which esteem Mrs. Strauss holds an equal share.

On Sept. 21, 1879, in Rapho township, the Rev. Amos M. Sheetz married Miss Fanny Shelley. There has been born to them a daughter named Alice, wife of Daniel E. Wolgemuth, a farmer of Mt. The Rev. Amos M. Sheetz lived with his parents until two years prior to his marriage. He worked for various farmers in the neighborhood until shortly after that event, when he moved onto the old Sheetz homestead and lived there for four years. He then moved to his present residence. On Oct. 9, 1898, he was ordained a minister of the Brethren in Christ Church and since then he has had charge of the Mastersonville church of that faith. CHARLES A. DOBLE, the present genial and popular, as well as capable and successful superintendent of the Nickel Mines properties in Bart township, Lancaster county, was born in that town, in 1859, son of Charles and Barbara (Sandoe) Doble.

Charles Doble, the father, was born in Devonshire, England, in 1826, and came to this country in 1851, to work for the company then owning and operating the nickel mines. The history of this notable industry of Bart township begins in 1730, when it was opened and operated as a copper mine.

In 1852 Mr. Doble discovered that one of the products which they were throwing away as sulphurate of iron was nickel. He demonstrated that it would be more profitable to use this in the manufacture of nickel than to continue mining copper. A company was organized under the name of the Gap Mining Co., for the manufacture of nickel, which business was continued until 1860. The ore was melted in the company's furnaces near the mines. In 1862, after the mines had been closed for a time, Mr. Joseph Wharton, of Philadelphia, secured the control of the enterprise and has operated it almost continuously, ever since. In the manufacture of nickel he has brought many thousand dollars into Lancaster county. At the present time he owns about 800 acres of land, which he has operated on a most extensive scale since the mines became his property. Charles Doble presently became the superintendent of the mines and later still the management of the mines, farms and investments passed under his direction. He continued with Mr. Wharton until 1896, when he retired from his extensive and complicated duties, giving way to his son. The following year he died. In 1902 Mr. Wharton sold part of the above property, including the mines, to the American Nickel Works. Mr. Doble was married in 1852 to Miss Barbara Sandoe, who was born in this county in 1826. Her people were prominent and influential. Mr. Doble was an Episcopalian in religion and a Republican in politics. His widow still resides near the mines at the advanced age of seventy-seven. To them were born five children. (1) Elizabeth, born in Bart township, married John Hocking, a native of England, who came to this country, to work in the Nickel mines. For a number of years they had their home at the mines, but are now residents of Lancaster, where he is in business. They have five children: Charles D., married and located in Lancaster, where he has three children; Mary, at home; John, a clerk; William and Anna, at home. (2) Mary died young. (3) Charles A. is our subject. (4) Harry, born at Nickel Mines, is a farmer in Paradise township. He married Miss Emma Knox and they have had the following children: Charles, Cora, Edgar, Harry, Joseph and Ralph, of whom the last named is deceased. (5) Jennie, born at Nickel Mines, is the widow of George M. Snead, and has her home in Kinzers, Lancaster county. She is the mother of five children: William, Edna, Paul, Walter and Mabel.

Charles A. Doble received his education in the Bart schools, and when a young man, took up the work of engineering for the Nickel mines. For some fifteen years he had the care and management of all the mining machinery used in that enterprise. When his father gave up the position of superintendent, he was at once called upon to fill his place, and has held that office to the present time.

Mr. Doble was married in Nov., 1883, to Hannah J. Williams, of Bart township, the daughter of Thomas and Jane Williams, both of whom were born in England, and came to this country in 1864. They made their home at the Nickel mines community, where the husband and father was employed until his death in 1897. His widow and the following children survive him: Thomas and Robert, born in England; John, Richard, Eliza and Hannah. Mrs. Hannah Doble was born in Bart in 1865. Mr. and Mrs. Doble have three children: James B., born in 1884, a student in Wades Commercial College, of Lancaster; Jennie L., born in 1885; and Bessie V., born in 1887, students in the home schools. Mr. Doble is a Republican. In religion he is a member of the Episcopal Church, and his wife of the Methodist Church. Mr. Doble belongs to the Parksburg Lodge of the I. O. O. F., No. 764, where he is highly esteemed for his character and ability. In his life work his careful management, mechanical ability and absolute integrity have given him a standing with his employers that is beyond question, while his fellow workmen in the mines recognize in him a man well fitted in every way for the responsible position he so ably fills.

SIMEON GUILFORD SUMMY, the popular proprietor of the "Summy House," of Manheim, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in that place, Sept. 2, 1843, a son of Jacob and Martha (Minich) Summy, representatives of old Lancaster county families. The father was reared on a farm near Neffsville, and learned the miller's trade with his father, John Summy, who owned and operated the old Summy Mill, one mile southeast of Sporting Hill, near Lancaster Junction, now known as the Seller's Mill. Jacob Summy succeeded to the business, but after a few years was compelled to give it up on account of his health. He then moved to Manheim, where he conducted the old "Globe Hotel," which has since been destroyed. At the end of two years he removed to Sporting Hill, where he purchased a hotel and thirty-six acres of land, and was engaged in the hotel business there for fifteen years, after which he followed farming for some years, until his retirement from active labor. His last days were spent in Manheim, where he died in 1892, at the age of seventy-eight years, and his wife departed this life in 1898, at the age of eighty-two. Of the twelve children born to them, seven reached maturity, namely: Simeon Guilford; Henry, a butcher and farmer, who died at the age of thirty-two years; Emeline, deceased wife of Edward Hall, of Sporting Hill; Levina, also deceased; Catherine, wife of Jacob Keller, of Bloomsburg, Columbia Co., Pa.; Anna, wife of John Capp, of Martinsburg, Va.; and Jacob, proprietor of the Washington House, of Manheim, who died at the age of thirty-two years.

Simeon G. Summy was reared at Sporting Hill, and attended the local schools. He began his business career as clerk in the store of Noah Zook in Sporting Hill, at the age of eighteen, and remained with him two years, after which he engaged in clerking for John G. Hacker the same length of time and for M. N. Brubaker three years. He then took the management of Martin Grube's store at Chickies and conducted it two years. The following two years were spent in school teaching in Rapho township, Lancaster county.

In 1866 Mr. Summy wedded Miss Mary Balmer, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Singer) Balmer, and by this union three children were born, two of whom are still living. Harry, the elder, is a graduate of the New York Veterinary College and is now engaged in the practice of his profession in Manheim. He married Leah Carpenter and they have one child. Homer, a shoe dealer of Manheim, married Theda Kauffman, and they have one child, Ralph.

After his marriage, Mr. Summy turned his attention to farming and auctioneering, following the former occupation eight years, and still continuing to prosecute the latter calling. In 1877 he purchased the "Black Horse Hotel," in Manheim, which he conducted two years, and then erected his present hotel, which at that time was a two-story structure containing but eight sleeping apartments. As his business has increased, he has added to it until he now has one of the finest blocks in Manheim, containing several good business rooms besides the hotel apartments, which now comprise twenty-eight sleeping rooms. The Masonic Order occupy the hall, and the store rooms below accommodate two mercantile establishments and a barber shop. Being a man thoroughly up-to-date, energetic and enterprising, he conducts his hotel on the most approved modern plan, and is a most genial and obliging landlord. Politically he is a supporter of the Republican party and its principles. As a citizen and business man he stands high in public esteem.

JOHN E. GARBER, a general farmer of West Donegal township, and a man of fine standing in the community where he has passed his life, was born on the old Garber homestead, and is a son of John S. and Susan (Erb) Garber. A sketch of these admirable people, whose long years and useful lives alike command reverence, appears in another place.

John E. Garber was married in Rapho township, in 1887, to Alice Newcomer, and to them were born the following children: Stella N., Paris N., Barbara N., Alice N., Jonas N., Rhoda N. and Christian N., who is dead.

Mrs. Alice (Newcomer) Garber, who was born in Rapho township Nov. 1, 1866, is a daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Wademan) Newcomer. Her father was born in Rapho township, and her mother in East Hempfield township. They are now living in Salunga, Lancaster county, where her father, who was born in 1835, has given up active work. Her mother was born three years later than her husband, and both are members of the Mennonite Church. During the more active part of his life

Jacob Newcomer was school director and supervisor in Rapho township, and was a leading man in his community. Jacob Newcomer and his wife have had the following children: Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Amos W., a farmer in Rapho township; David W., a farmer in Drumore; Fanny W., who married Harry Bear, a farmer in Salunga; Alice W., noted above as the wife of John E. Garber; Levi N., a resident of Rapho township; John W., a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Barbara W., wife of Ira Longenecker, a farmer of East Donegal township; Ezra W., who lives in Mt. Joy, and whose life-story appears on another page.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Alice Garber were Christ and Elizabeth (Nissley) Newcomer, natives of Lancaster county, as were the parents of her mother, David and Elizabeth (Stehman) Wademan.

John E. Garber remained with his parents until 1882, when he began that career as a farmer in which he has proved so successful. In 1887 he moved to the farm where he is found today. Mr. Garber has impressed himself on his community as a man of character and ability, and for seven years has served as auditor of West Donegal township. In his politics he is a Republican, and his influence in the party is by no means slight. In religion both Mr. and Mrs. Garber are members of the Mennonite Church, and their peaceful and well ordered lives cast no discredit upon their faith.

BENJAMIN S. MARTIN, residing one and a half miles southeast of Columbia, in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in West Lampeter township, in the same county, Sept. 26, 1859, and is a son of John and Susan (Shaub) Martin.

Benjamin S. Martin attended the public schools and worked on the home farm in Lampeter township until fifteen years of age, when his parents died, and he had recourse to any kind of labor that would net him an honest dollar; he made his home meanwhile with a brother until his marriage, when he rented a farm near Landis Mill and two years later removed to the old Dambach farm in the north-western part of the township. This farm comprises ninety-five acres, devoted to general farming, market gardening and dairying.

On Nov. 11, 1884, Benjamin S. Martin was united in marriage with Elizabeth H. Dambach, and this union has been crowned with six children, five of whom still survive, viz.: John D., Mary D., Elizabeth D., Susan Alva and Benjamin F.; the deceased child, Amos, was a mere infant at the time of its death. The parents of these children are members of the Mennonite Church, and in politics the father is a Republican. Mr. Martin is one of the broad-minded and progressive men who give vitality and vigor to the community in which they live, and is ever ready to assist with his influence and means every measure designed to promote the public welfare.

Adam Dambach was the founder of the family bearing this name in Manor township, and was the great-grandfather of Mrs. Martin, but was a resident of Conestoga township. In religion he was a Lutheran. His son, also named Adam, was probably born in Conestoga, but came to Manor township and settled at Creswell, was a shoemaker by trade and married Mary Wagoner, to which marriage were born the following named children: Henry, Adam, John, Martin, Joseph, Amos, Benjamin, Eliza and Mary, all members of the Lutheran Church at the time of decease.

Martin Dambach, father of Mrs. Martin, was born in Lancaster Co., Pa., Sept. 21, 1813, and was married Sept. 27, 1835, to Elizabeth Herr, daughter of Abraham and Mary Herr, and born May 26, 1816, in Manor township. The newly married couple lived on the old Herr homestead a short time, whence they moved to Funk's Division, as it was called, and purchased a small farm on which they resided six years; then for one year they rented the Blue Rock farm; next, they returned to Funk's Division for seven years, where they lived on a place adjoining their former home there; and in April, 1857, located on the homestead of 250 acres in north-western Manor township. At that time it was one of the finest farms in the county, but it has since been divided into three separate tracts, which are respectively occupied by his two sons, John and Henry, and by Joseph K. Newcomer, who bought the third part.

In 1870, Martin Dambach purchased and removed to a thirty-acre farm west of Central Manor. On this farm Martin passed the remainder of his life, dying Nov. 12, 1875, in the faith of the Mennonites. His widow died July 19, 1901. To Martin Dambach and wife were born fifteen children, of whom twelve grew to maturity and are still living, viz.; Mary, wife of Christ. Kauffman, of Petersburg, Lancaster county; Susannah, wife of John H. Keagy, of Adams county; John H., also of Petersburg; Fannie, wife of M. D. Kindig, of Manor township; Martin H., residing near Windom; Henry H., living near Columbia; Joseph H., of the same neighborhood; Catherine, wife of Aaron Herr, of West Hempfield township; Amos H., of Columbia City; Adam H., of Pequea township; David H., of Manor township; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin S. Martin, whose name opens this biographical review. The three deceased children of the fifteen born to Martin and Elizabeth (Herr) Dambach were named: Abraham, the second in order of birth, who died at the age of nine months; Elizabeth, the third born, who died when four months old; and Benjamin H., the fourteenth in order of birth, who died in infancy.

WILLIAM AHERNE. The early home of this popular florist and prominent business man, of Columbia, Pa., was on the other side of the Atlantic, for he was born in Midleton, County Cork, Ireland, Aug 8, 1849, a son of Michael and Margaret (Welsh) Aherne, who spent their entire lives at that place, where the father was employed as a gardener. He died there in 1895, at the age of seventy-five years, while the mother survived till 1902. In their family were eight children, namely: John M., now a florist of Mt. Vernon, O.; William; Mary, wife of Peter Heffernan, a plasterer of New York City; Patrick, a member of the United States Cavalry; James, Michael, Edward and Alice, who all died in Ireland.

In his native land William Aherne grew to manhood, and in Dublin, he was married, Aug. 8, 1871, to Miss Mary Brady, who was born in Wexford City, County Wexford, Ireland, Dec. 15, 1849, a daughter of Peter and Margaret (Furlong) Brady, who never left the Emerald Isle. By occupation the father was a maltster. Mrs. Aherne is the oldest of their three children, the others being: Michael, a temperance lecturer and telegraph operator, of Ireland; and John, manager of a dry goods store in Dublin.

Mr. and Mrs. Aherne have a family of which any parents might well be proud. Michael, the oldest, was born in Ireland and is now a resident of Columbia, Pa. For fifteen years he has been a member of the Pennsylvania National Guards and served as sergeant major in Co. C, 4th P. V. I., at Porto Rico during the Spanish-American war. William is a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y. John P. and Robert E., twins, residing at home, were also members of Co. C, 4th P. V. I., and were with the army at Porto Rico, the latter serving as corporal in his company. They are at present employed in Brooklyn, N. Y., as machinists. Mary lives with them as housekeeper. Agnes M. is a trained nurse, now at Ithaca, N. Y. Alice is a trained nurse from the Germantown Hospital, Philadelphia, graduated Nov. 12, 1902. Maggie is at home. Francis and Philip died in childhood.

Under the able direction of his father, William Aherne learned much about the florist business before he was eighteen years of age. He then went to Lakeland, near Middleton, where he spent three years in gardening, and at the end of that time returned home for a few months. Subsequently he was engaged in gardening at London, England, for a few months, and later spent three years in Dublin, Ireland. In 1873 he came to America, and after spending five months working at his trade in Philadelphia, took up his residence in Columbia, Pa., which has since been his home. He was in the employ of S. H. Purple, a florist, for six years, and went upon the railroad as brakeman for the Pennsylvania Company. A year later, however, during the strike, he returned to Mr. Purple's employ, remaining with him a year at this time. For six years he was employed in the railroad round house at Columbia, and also attended to their plants, but since 1890 he has been successfully engaged in the florist business on his own account. He possesses superior skill and ability in his line and has built up an excellent trade. In politics Mr. Aherne is independent, in religious belief is a Catholic, and in his social relations is a member of the Knights of St. Patrick R. C. For many years he was a member of the Pennsylvania National Guards, enlisting as a private, Oct. 16, 1878, in Co. H, 11th Reg., now Co. C, 4th Reg. He was appointed corporal Aug. 3, 1881; sergeant, March 4, 1884; first sergeant, April 6, 1886; and was commissioned 1st lieutenant, Feb. 1, 1891. He was in active service nineteen days during the Homestead riots. Although of foreign birth, America has no more loyal and patriotic citizen than Mr. Aherne, and he merits and receives the confidence and respect of all who know him.

WILLIAM H. EDWARDS, cabinetmaker and undertaker, is one of the leading citizens of New Providence, Lancaster county. He was born in Strasburg township March 2, 1850, son of James D. and Lydia (Rineer) Edwards, of Lancaster county, of Scotch-Irish origin.

James D. Edwards, the father of William H., was born in 1825, and died Jan. 10, 1900; he was a veteran of the Civil war, discharged in Aug., 1865. His father was Daniel Edwards, who had the following children: James D., Jonathan, Thomas, Josiah, Daniel, Amos and Sarah. In 1849 James D. Edwards, who was a successful farmer of Lancaster county, married Miss Lydia Rineer and they had the following children: William H.; H. M., born in 1851; Susan S., born in 1855; Madison, born in 1856; Jesse, born in 1858; Annie, born in 1860; Ellsworth, born in 1861; Thomas, born in 1863; Ella M., born in 1866; Christian, born in 1871; and Nora and Rebecca J., died in childhood. The Edwards family is an old one in Lancaster county and their ancestry can be directly traced to Henry Ferre, who died in Germany and whose widow came to America and bought land in Pennsylvania of William Penn, as early as 1680.

William H. Edwards was the eldest of his father's large family. He was reared on the farm and acquired his education in the common schools. His tastes led him to learn the cabinetmaking trade, which, in connection with undertaking, he has followed ever since. Mr. Edwards came to New Providence March 27, 1868, has proven himself an excellent man of business and is now regarded as one of the substantial citizens of the town, where he owns a handsome and comfortable home and well-appointed shops. In politics he is a Democrat, and zealously works for the success of his party.

On Dec. 26, 1872, Mr. Edwards was married to Miss Mary C. Herr, born Aug. 30, 1852, daughter of Martin and Catherine Herr, of Providence township. Mrs. Edwards is a direct descendant of Hans Herr, who was one of the very first settlers in this county. She was one of a family of six children born to her parents, as follows: Emma, the wife of Harry Smith, of Lancaster; Mary, who became Mrs. Edwards; Elam, a resident of Drumore township; Martin, a resident of Quarryville; Benjamin, a resident of Martic township; and John, a resident of Drumore township. To Mr. and Mrs. Edwards has been born a family of eleven children, William F., who married Annie Heidelbaugh; Catherine L., who married Hugh R. Collins; John E., who married Cora Clarkson; Nance May, deceased; Emma N., who married Diller Reese, Sept. 4, 1902; Minnie B.; Bertha L.; Harry Charles; Josephine M., deceased; and Abraham and James, twins, who died young.

Mr. Edwards and family are regarded with feelings of esteem in their community. They are prominent in social life and reflect credit upon their honorable families which have for so many years been leading ones in Lancaster county. They are members of the United Brethren Church at Refton, Strasburg township, Lancaster county.

JOHN BENDER, one of the prominent citizens and substantial retired farmers of Lancaster county, owns a fine estate in Upper Leacock township, but since 1891 has retired from active operation of it. He was born in this old home Oct. 23, 1861, son of John W. and Anna (Buckwalter) Bender.

John W. Bender was born in Upper Leacock township, Jan. 22, 1833, and died on his late farm Nov. 30, 1877, and was buried in Heller's Reformed churchyard, which sacred ground adjoins the old home farm. He was a son of Kinzer D. Bender, and a brother of Franklin of this township, William K. Bender, of Strasburg, Pa., and Mrs. Jacob Burkholder, of Talmage, Pa. John W. Bender remained with his parents, who were well-known and most highly esteemed residents of the township, until his marriage, and then moved to the farm now in the possession of his family. For eight years he was a school director and was identified with all important educational advancement in his neighborhood. In politics he was ever a stanch Republican, and he was one of the leading members of the Methodist Church. On Nov. 16, 1856, John W. Bender was married, in Lancaster, to Miss Anna W. Buckwalter, and the children born to this union were: John, of this sketch; and Aaron, who after studying in the common schools in 1885 entered Pennington Seminary (N. J.) to fit himself for the ministry, but he died in 1886, aged twenty-three years.

Mrs. Anna W. (Buckwalter) Bender was born in East Lampeter township. She was a daughter of Abraham and Anna (Witmer) Buckwalter, natives of East Lampeter township. Mr. Buckwalter was a well-known farmer who died in 1840 at the age of forty-eight, his widow surviving until 1886, dying at the age of ninety-one. Their burial was in the Mellinger Mennonite cemetery. They had been worthy and consistent members of the Mennonite Church. Their children were: Esther, deceased, who married Joseph Wenger; Benjamin, deceased, who married Susanna Johns; Elizabeth, deceased, who married David Groff; Lydia, who is the widow of Jacob Leaman, of Leacock township; Barbara, who is the widow of Abraham Rohrer, of Manheim township; Abranam, who is a retired farmer of Upper Leacock township; Levi, deceased; and Anna, who is the mother of John Bender, of this sketch.

John Bender was born and reared on the home farm where he has spent all his active life. His education was acquired in the public schools, and Mr. Bender has been identified with the public affairs of his township, having for the past two years been township auditor. Since 1891 he has not engaged actively in operating the farm. The family is one much respected in this neighborhood and Mr. Bender is regarded as one of the thoroughly reliable representative citizens of Upper Leacock. The family have always been members of the Methodist Church, the father being one of the founders of the church of that denomination at Leola, where John Bender, our subject, was superintendent of the Sunday-school for eleven years. He takes a deep interest in music, and has charge of the church choir at Leola. Mr. Bender has at times been urged to take town office but declined.

AARON E. HARTMAN was born in East Lampeter township, Oct. 21, 1856, and is one of its most successful farmers and progressive and public-spirited citizens. His father's name was Henry, like that of his grandfather. A somewhat detailed genealogical sketch of his family is given elsewhere. The maiden name of his grandmother was Hildebrand, and his father, Henry, was her only son, although her marriage was blessed with four children. Henry Hartman, Jr., was born upon his father's home farm, which subsequently became his through inheritance. It adjoined that now owned by his son, Aaron E., and is at present the property of another son, Samuel. The land has been in possession of the family since it was granted to the first American progenitor by William Penn.

Henry Hartman married Elizabeth Eaby. He was the father of six children, of whom Aaron E. is the youngest. The others, in order of birth, were Samuel, Anna, Elizabeth, Kate E. and Henry E. He was a hardworking and successful farmer, and a man noted for his high moral and consistent Christian character. He was a devout member of the Methodist Church, while his wife adhered through life to the Mennonite faith, in which she had been reared. He died in 1879 and she fell asleep in 1895. Both now rest, side by side, in the peaceful Mellinger cemetery, in the hope of a glorious immortality. Some brief mention of their children will be of interest in this connection. Samuel married Catherine Price and lives, as has been said, in the old homestead. Anna is the wife of Samuel K. Landis, of East Petersburg. Elizabeth married

John H. Esbenshade, and is deceased. Henry E. married Nettie Hostetter.

Aaron E. Hartman was educated in the common schools and at the State Normal School, at Millersville. He taught with success for three terms, but ultimately chose the life of a farmer in preference to that of a pedagogue. He has always taken a deep interest in the cause of education, however, and has served three terms as school director. He is regarded by his fellow townsmen as a safe counselor, while his blameless life has commanded their undisguised respect.

In 1881 Mr. Hartman was married to Frances, a daughter of Abram Diffenbaugh. Four children have been born to them: Henry C., Benjamin Franklin, Ellis Blaine and Mabel Priscilla.

WILMER P. BOLTON. The Boltons are among the oldest and most honorable residents of Lancaster county. Evert Bolton, the founder of this estimable and well-known family, came to America from England about 1682 or 1683, and settled at Cheltenham, Pa., and as they were of Quaker faith they were probably with the Penn family, and followed their fortunes and leadings. The descendants are not numerous. This family is distinct from the New England Boltons.

The children born to the original settler were: Eurette, Elizabeth, Hannah, Mary, Samuel, Abel, Sarah, Lydia, Isaac, Rebecca and Margaret. Isaac Bolton, son of the settler, was born in 1697. His family consisted of Margaret, Rachel, Sarah, Rebecca, Jemima, Isaac, Joseph and Eurette. Isaac Bolton (2) was born April 27, 1735, and his son, Isaac Bolton (3), who was the grandfather of Wilmer P. Bolton, was born in Philadelphia in 1771, and married Elizabeth Townsend Nov. 11, 1802. Their children were: Evan, Sarah, Abie, Jason, Elizabeth, Margaret and Isaac, all of whom have passed out of life.

Jason Bolton, the father of Wilmer P., was married to Anna Pennock Sept. 28, 1845. He was born in Philadelphia county July 5, 1814, and died Sept. 28, 1888. His wife was born April 15, 1815, in Chester county, Pa., daughter of Simon and Sarah Pennock. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jason Bolton were but two in number: Wilmer P. and Emily T. The latter was born July 14, 1849, and died July 6, 1897, unmarried. For many years Mr. Bolton was director and for several years superintendent of the schools of Drumore township.

Wilmer P. Bolton is one of the leading farmers and nurserymen of Lancaster county, and for twenty years has been the capable general agent for the Chester County Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was born June 3, 1847. His early studies were pursued in the common schools of his neighborhood, and he later attended both the Millersville Normal School and a business college in Philadelphia. Although Mr. Bolton has been interested in and identified with many other enterprises, he has always made farming his leading interest. His farm and residence are located three-fourths of a mile from the village of Liberty Square, and the property was purchased by his grandfather in 1818. Mr. Bolton owns three farms in Drumore township, all of which are well improved and have excellent buildings.

The marriage of Mr. Bolton on Jan. 1, 1879, to Miss Cassandra S. Cutler, of Drumore township, united him with another of the old and well established families of this county. She was born August 20, 1855, daughter of Alban and Mary (Coats) Cutler, and was one of a family of three children: Horace, who is deceased; Cassandra S.; and Ella, who married Charles Shoemaker, a farmer of Fulton township. Grandfather Jesse Cutler was a prominent and wealthy farmer of his time, in Drumore township, and the family ancestry is given elsewhere. Mr. and Mrs. Bolton had three children: Theodore C., born Nov. 21, 1882; Leslie Isaac, born June 8, 1886; and Edgar J., born Oct. 1, 1888, who died Sept. 21, 1889.

Mr. Bolton is prominent in educational matters in his township, having served as school director for twelve years, and he has carried on the business of conveyancer and surveyor in the county for the last thirty years. His religious connection has ever been with the Society of Friends, and his life has been in consonance with the simplicity of their belief. He has been active in temperance circles, and for several years was district chief templar of Lancaster county. As an honest, upright citizen he has dealt fairly with his fellowmen, and enjoys their esteem and confidence. Since youth Mr. Bolton has been an active Republican, but he has never desired any political preference, his activities and interests lying in the direction of business and educational matters. He is a most worthy representative of his family.

GEORGE G. CULLY. For many years the name of Cully has been an honored one in Lancaster county, the family having been founded here more than 150 years ago, by Thomas Cully, the great-grandfather of George G. Cully of Martic township.

The birth of George G. Cully was on Feb. 15, 1856, and he is a son of William and Susan (Brubaker) Cully, the former of whom was born in this township, in 1830 and died in 1873. In 1850 he was married to Susan Brubaker and they had a family of four children: William, of the city of Lancaster; George G.; Laura, who married William Robinson; and Lennie, who died young. Mrs. Cully still survives and is an esteemed resident of this township. William Cully was a son of George and Mary (Boyd) Cully, respected farming people of this township, living on the old farm upon which Thomas Cully settled so long ago.

George G. Cully grew to manhood on the Martic township farm and attended the public schools of his district. His life has been passed in agricultural lines, his fine farm of 200 acres showing the careful cultivation of an excellent farmer while the pleasant surroundings and handsome dwelling bespeak the thrift and plenty which conduce to make the husbandman the happiest and most fortunate of men.

The marriage of George G. Cully was on Jan. 23, 1878, to Miss Mary G. Striggle, of Martic township, a daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Striggle, her birth being on April 10, 1861. The other members of her family are: Benjamin, Grizzelle, Catherine, Belle, Annie, Edith, John and Michael. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Cully were: George, born July 28, 1879; Annie, born April 3, 1881, died at the age of ten years; Milton, born Jan. 23, 1883, at home; John D., born April 25, 1885; Amy M., born Dec. 29, 1887; Herbert, born June 14, 1892; and Thomas Kirk, born May 31, 1895.

Mr. Cully is a Democrat in political sentiment, and is a man of force of character, known in his community as honest and upright in all his dealings. Although never placing himself before the public in any conspicuous position, Mr. Cully has exerted an influence tending toward the advancement and progress of his section in religious and educational lines. Both he and his excellent and highly esteemed wife are worthy and consistent members of the Bethesda Methodist Church. In his domestic circle, Mr. Cully is respected and beloved and his friends in the neighborhood are counted by many scores.

CHARLES FRANK. Many lines of trade are most successfully prosecuted in East Donegal township, on account of the energy and industry of its citizens, and among those who have been especially prosperous is the well-known carriage and wagon builder at Ramsey's Toll Gate, Charles Frank, a citizen of the highest standing in the community.

The birth of Mr. Frank was in Kinderhook, West Hempfield township, July 7, 1861, a son of Richard and Lena (Beehler) Frank, both of whom came to America from Saxony, Germany, and married in Mountville, Lancaster county. Richard Frank was a son of Frederick and Amelia Frank, natives of Germany, where they passed their lives, the latter a good and worthy woman, the former a man of prominence as a writer and much esteemed by the King of Germany.

Frederick Frank was one of the best educated men in Saxony, writing and speaking five languages, including English. As a boy of fourteen he acted as interpreter for Napoleon in 1812-13. He corresponded for two years with Kreider and Coppenheffer, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., and when his son later came to that place, Kreider said to him: "Your father knows more of the United States law and all other matters of interest here than most of those born here; if he would come to the United States he would be governor." Frederick Frank was a special favorite with the Herzog, or Duke, of Sax Altenburg, and as often as the ruler visited Ronneburg Frank was invited to be his companion, even sitting at the Duke's table. When appointed by the Herzog Ernst to be burgomaster, Frank refused the position for himself but was permitted to select a man in his place. With many opportunities to become a rich man, he did not care to improve them, preferring to work for the good of his fellow men, and he was an adviser for everyone in the place, rich or poor. He was a close friend not only of the Herzog Ernst, but also of his father, Joseph, the preceding Duke. When Frank died, in 1860, the courts, stores and saloons alike were closed, and rich and poor took part in the funeral. The newspaper describing the ceremonies was printed with black edges and every advertisement was omitted. Frederick Frank had fourteen children, eight of whom died when quite young. The survivors were Franz, Herman, Karl, Richard, Mary and Laura. The boys were all weavers by trade.

Richard Frank, father of Charles, was born in 1834. When eight years old, his father, the Ordinance Postmaster, appointed him letter carrier, and for five years he served, the youngest carrier in Germany. In those days many letters contained money, usually silver, and the amount was marked on the outside of the envelope. The receiver was obliged to write his name and the amount of the money in the carrier's book before receiving his letter. Even with these complications not a single mistake occurred while the child was carrier. His sister Emily was a carrier for ten years before him. Aug. 12, 1858, Richard started for America, landing Oct. 1.

After marriage he settled on Chestnut Hill, in West Hempfield township, following a laboring life, although by trade he is a weaver. His wife was born in 1837, and both of them belong to the United Brethren Church. Their children are: Lena, wife of Eli Weaver, living in Ironville, Pa.; Clara, wife of Harry Sillers, living in York, Pa.; Charles, the subject of this biography; Mary, wife of George Breemer, of York, Pa.; Franz, residing in York; Elizabeth, wife of Lewis Resh, of Rapho township; Henry, associated with Charles in business; John, a resident of York; Catherine, wife of Frank Clinton, of York; and Herman, who is a cigar manufacturer.

At the age of twenty-one, Charles Frank, who had been reared on a farm, took up the trade of blacksmith, with Martin Ramsey, and continued as his faithful assistant for four years, becoming a superior workman. At that time he opened up a coach-making business, utilizing the building adjoining the shop in which he had worked so long, and in 1892 engaged his brother Henry with him, since which time the business has prospered exceedingly and is continually extending. The methods adopted by Mr. Frank in the conduct of his business have gained for him the confidence of the public, and no enterprise in East Donegal township is more promising than this. Charles Frank has made an honorable name for himself in East Donegal township and has many friends. In politics he is a Republican, and a worthy member of the United Evangelical Church.

On Dec. 24, 1885, occurred the marriage of Charles Frank and Miss Mary Ramsey, and to this union two children have been born, Harvey and Elizabeth. The birth of Mrs. Frank was in 1865, a daughter of Martin and Elizabeth (Gruver) Ramsey. The father was born in Londonderry township, Dauphin county, in March, 1825, a son of Isaac and Mary (Steinmetz) Ramsey, of Lancaster county. In 1858, in West Donegal township, Martin Ramsey married Elizabeth Gruver and to this union were born: Daniel, deceased; John W., a tobacco salesman of Maytown; Abraham, a produce merchant of Atlantic City; Samuel, a clerk in a clothing store in Lancaster; Mary, the wife of Charles Frank; and Martin, a baker, in Mountville.

Martin Ramsey was reared by his mother and his grandmother Steinmetz, remaining until he had passed his seventeenth year; he then began to learn the blacksmith trade, in West Donegal township, under the supervision of Benjamin Ober, remaining there three and one-half years. Then he went to Dauphin county, working with different people, until 1853, when he opened up a business for himself. In 1843 he had come to this location, but it was ten years later before he built here his comfortable home and commodious shop. Mr. Ramsey is also the efficient keeper of the toll gate on the Maytown and Elizabethtown turnpike, and is one of the consistent members of the religious denomination known as Brethren in Christ.

Henry Frank, a brother of Charles Frank, was born in West Hempfield township Dec. 7, 1869; on Oct. 3, 1893, he was married to Miss Reberta Peck, and to this union two children have been born, Edna and Harry. Reberta (Peck) Frank was born in East Donegal township in May, 1873, a daughter of Nicholas and Malinda (Martin) Peck, the former of whom is an undertaker and veterinary surgeon in Maytown. Until he was eighteen years of age Henry Frank remained with his parents, going then to York, Pa., where he learned the trade of coach-maker, this business being a favorite one in the family, Charles, Henry, John and two of the brothers-in-law being engaged in it. In 1892 Henry came to his present location, engaging with his brother as a wood worker. In politics he votes independently, and is fraternally connected with the O. U. A. M.

DANIEL WEBSTER STYER, M. D., a popular and representative citizen of Churchtown, Lancaster county, was born in Caernarvon township, Sept. 6, 1863, a son of Peter and Elvina (Sweetzer) Styer. Peter Styer is living, but his wife is dead.

Dr. Styer was reared on the parental farm, and educated in the public schools, and in the normal schools at Kutztown and Millersville, and for four years was a teacher in the public schools of Lancaster county. In the meantime he had developed much interest in the healing art, and decided to make that his profession. He did his preliminary reading and studying in the office of Dr. A. H. Kissinger. After taking a special course at the Millersville Normal, he entered Jefferson Medical College, from which he was graduated with high honors. At the Philadelphia Hospital for skin diseases he took a special course; and another at the Pennsylvania School of Anatomy and Surgery, receiving creditable and complimentary diplomas from each of these institutions. With Dr. Styer surgery is specialized, and he is an enthusiastic student of its various branches. At Churchtown he has built up an increasing and lucrative practice, and takes high rank among the practitioners of the healing art in that part of the county. Dr. Styer belongs to the County and State Medical Societies, as well as the American Medical Association, and has attended these various associations as a delegate.

Dr. Styer was married in Feb., 1890, to Miss Annie Cox, a daughter of John and Ellen Cox. Her father is dead. The Doctor and his wife belong to the Lutheran and the Episcopal Churches, respectively, and have many warm and devoted personal friends in the community where they are best known.

THEODORE KISINER, a well-to-do farmer of Fulton township, Lancaster county, residing a half mile southwest of McSparran, where he has a very pleasant home, was born Oct. 19, 1844, son of Jacob and Rebecca (Jenkins) Kisiner.

Jacob Kisiner, grandfather of Theodore, was born in Ireland, of English origin, and lived to the advanced age of ninety-three years. He was a cooper by trade. His family consisted of seven children; Jacob, Jr., David, Washington, Eliza, Reuben, Lydia A. and Ann.

Jacob Kisiner, Jr., born in Lancaster county in 1816, was married in 1843 to Miss Rebecca Jenkins, who was born in this county in 1820. They had seven children as follows: Theodore, the subject of this article; George, a farmer of York Co., Pa.; John W., a miller of Stewartstown, York county; J. Scott and W. Henry, farmers of York county; Sarah J., the wife of William Simmers, of Maryland; Mary, the wife of Reed Almony, of York county. The father of this family died April 26, 1902, the mother, June 6, 1901.

Theodore Kisiner married Miss Landie McAfee, of Fulton township, Oct. 19, 1881, and this marriage was blessed with three children: Emma R., born July 30, 1883; Anna S., born March 15, 1886; and Dora, born Aug. 30, 1889, all residing at home. Mr. Kisiner lost his beloved wife July 3, 1899; she was born Feb. 26, 1855. Mrs. Kisiner was a member of the Society of Friends, and a noble Christian woman, a good wife and a kind and loving mother, and is greatly missed by her family.

Mr. Kisiner started in life very poor, but by hard work has accumulated a competency. In 1863, at the age of nineteen, he enlisted in the cavalry volunteers known as the Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry. He has followed farming since he started out for himself, and now owns a farm of one hundred acres, with a nice residence and first class outbuildings. His home place, near McSparran, consists of eleven acres, with a good house and necessary farm buildings. For many years, besides conducting a farm, he has carried on a commission business with profitable results. His time is now largely occupied in stock feeding.

Mr. Kisiner is not a member of any religious denomination but attends the meetings of the Friends Society. He votes the Republican ticket, has served as road supervisor, and at present is one of the school directors. Mr. Kisiner is a self made man, having acquired what he owns by strict economy and sober habits. He has never had a lawsuit, or trouble with his neighbors, and is universally respected. Being a leading man in his district, his opinion is often sought, and his advice followed in many matters which work for the good of the vicinity.

BENJAMIN F. MARKLEY was born March 23, 1853, in Providence township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

Adam Markley, his grandfather, emigrated from the old country and settled at Strasburg, Lancaster county, where he followed the trade of shoemaker. He was the father of six children: Nancy, wife of Cunningham Atchison, of Lancaster county; John, the father of the subject of this sketch; Jacob, of Buck, Lancaster county; George, also of Buck, Lancaster county; Susan, the wife of Joseph Graver, of Little Britain, Lancaster county; and Margaret, who is the widow of John Duke, of Lancaster City.

John Markley, father of Benjamin F. Markley, was born in Lancaster county, May 31, 1817. He lived at home with his father until quite a young man, during which time he received a good common-school education. He then went to learn the carpenter's trade with a man named Long. He remained at this work about five years when he bought a farm in Providence township and followed farming the balance of his life. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, presided over by the Rev. Mr. Rutter, and was one of its trustees. In politics he always voted with the Republican party.

He then went to work, doing general farm work for ten years.

that time, for nine years farmed on shares for John Gardner. He then bought the farm where he now resides and continues engaged solely in agricultural pursuits. GEORGE H. BROWN. One of the substantial and successful farmers of Little Britain township is George H. Brown, who by his own efforts has climbed up the ladder from the bottom rung and has, in a comparatively few years changed his condition from a youth with little but his brains and hands as capital, to that of one of the leading and solid farmer-citizens of his township.

The Brown family of Little Britain township probably came of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and George H., of this sketch, was a son of John and Eliza (Patton) Brown, most highly respected citizens of the township, and was born on Sept. 1, 1863.

John Brown, the father, was born in this township also, in 1824, and died in 1879. In 1849 he was married to Eliza Patton, who was a daughter of John Patton, of Lancaster county, and she still survives, at the age of eighty years, a member of the family of her son Franklin, of this township. John Brown was a son of Samuel Brown, who was the father of three other children: Jacob; Leutitia, married to Henry Jenkins, and Ellis. The children born to John Brown and wife numbered eleven, those who grew to maturity being: William Henry, who lives in the West; Samuel E., who is a farmer of Britain township; Robert F., who is a blacksmith of Little Britain township; Jacob L., deceased; Alice, who married George Phillips, residing in Kansas; George H.; John, who is a farmer of Drumore township; and Edgar S., died Jan. 21, 1902.

George H. Brown of this biography was reared a farmer boy and attended the district schools. His occupation has been that of farming and through energy and industry, he has been more than usually successful. Mr. Brown now owns a fine, well-improved farm of ninety-one acres in Little Britain township, and also a one-half interest in a farm of 172 acres near White Rock, Pa., in partnership with his brother Ellis.

The marriage of Mr. Brown was celebrated on Nov. 3, 1887, to Miss Nora E. Smith, who was born Oct. 5, 1863, one of a family of four children born to her parents, Preston and Hannah (Carter) Smith, of Drumore township, more extended notice of the family being given in the sketch of Gilbert Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Smith had the following children: Albert A., a farmer of Drumore township; Clarinda, the wife of J. M. Ankrum, of Drumore township, and Nora E., the wife of Mr. Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had children as follows: Edna S., born Dec. 18, 1888; Arthur E., born Sept. 28, 1890; Vera May, born Oct. 13, 1891; Hannah E., born March 28, 1893; Ivan W., born Oct. 20, 1897; Dwight L. M., born April 10, 1900; and Gilbert P., born Oct. 18, 1902.

Mr. Brown is a staunch Republican, and both he and his wife are consistent and valued members of the Presbyterian Church. For the past ten years he has most efficiently served his township as school director and takes a great interest in the educational advancement in his locality. No citizen is more highly esteemed and in every relation of life he bears an honorable part.

JOSEPH J. LONG. Among the highly respected citizens of Drumore township is Joseph J. Long, a farmer and justice of the peace, who was born April 10, 1863, in Drumore township, a son of J. Harrison and Elizabeth (Harner) Long, of Drumore, of Dutch-Irish and German descent, respectively.

J. Harrison Long, now a retired farmer of Drumore, was born July 27, 1836, and is a son of James B. and Catherine (Jefferson) Long of Drumore township. James B. Long was born Oct. 3, 1802, and died Oct. 20, 1873. Five children were born to him: Margaret, the widow of Amos Rutter of Ohio; J. Harrison; Lucinda, the wife of John S. Harner, a farmer of Martic township; George, deceased; Robert Lindley, of Phoenix, Ariz. The last named is superintendent of public instruction and one of the leading citizens of that flourishing city, being a man who is true and sincere to his convictions, with an extended knowledge of business and a broad and liberal mind. For many years he has made his home in the far west and the name of Robert L. Long is identified with the best interests of the place as well as with the workings of the Republican party, of which he is a staunch member.

The great-grandfather, James Long, was born on the old farm now owned by Samuel M. Long, and he was a grandson of the first of that name to settle in Pennsylvania, in 1726. The first settler of the name of Long came from Scotland. By trade he was an iron worker and made the irons and hinges still in use in the Presbyterian church at Chestnut Level, Pa. about 1765 or 1770. From this John Long comes the Long family of Drumore township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

J. Harrison Long was married to Miss Elizabeth S. Harner of Martic township, Nov. 6, 1859, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Slingluff) Harner, of Montgomery Co., Pa.; she was born Oct. 20, 1830, and died Nov. 3, 1892. Two children were born of this union, Joseph J. and Mary C., the latter having been born Dec. 15, 1864, and married to L. Russell Ambler, a farmer of Martic township. J. Harrison Long, the father, is one of the wealthy farmers of Drumore, owning a large farm of 300 acres, all well improved and supplied with good buildings. In politics he is a staunch Republican; he is an earnest member of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church.

Joseph J. Long spent his early days upon the farm of his father and attended the district schools and also the Chestnut Level Academy for two years. For two years more he attended the West Nottingham Academy of Maryland. Returning home, he resumed his farming operations and now owns three excellent farms, all of which are in fine condition and supplied with good buildings. In politics, he is a loyal Republican and has acceptably served the township as school director and township auditor and at present is justice of the peace. Religiously, he is an earnest member of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church.

Joseph J. Long was married to Miss Anna M. McComb, of Drumore township, on Oct. 14, 1891, a young lady of Irish descent and a daughter of William and Matilda (Carrick) McComb. On Feb. 21, 1899, she died without issue, having been a gentle, loving wife and kind Christian woman. As she was born on June 1, 1862, she was still in the prime of life and her loss was deeply felt not only by her family, but also throughout the community where she had made her home.

Joseph J. Long is a man of deep convictions, liberal views and high-minded honesty. Being well-informed upon the leading topics of the day, he is an entertaining conversationalist and has always proven himself a kind neighbor and public-spirited citizen.

HENRY HERSHEY, who has retired from active farming, and is living in Intercourse, Pa., in very comfortable if not affluent circumstances, was born in Leacock township, May 19, 1855, and is a son of Peter E. and Anna (Landis) Hershey, of Leacock and East Lampeter townships, respectively.

Peter E. Hershey is a retired farmer in Leacock township. He was born in Salisbury township, Feb. 1826; his wife was born in East Lampeter township; they are both members of the Mennonite Church. Mr. Hershey was long a school director and township auditor. In his politics he is a Republican. Born to him and his wife were the following: Christian L., who died at the age of eighteen years; Anna, who married Amos Leaman, of Leacock township, and is now dead; Henry; Mary, who married Esaias Denlinger, a farmer of Paradise township; Landis, a farmer in Salisbury township, a deacon of the Mennonite Church.

The paternal grandparents of Henry Hershey were Abraham and Anna (Eby) Hershey, both of Lancaster county.

Henry Hershey was married in December, 1877, in New Holland, Pa., to Christie A. Denlinger, by whom he has had the following children: Anna M., who married Isaac M. Good, a farmer of Leacock township; Noah, who died in infancy; Alice D., who died in infancy; Lloyd.

Mrs. Hershey was born in Paradise township, Feb. 16, 1857, and is a daughter of John and Mary (Brubaker) Denlinger, farmer folk of that township. Her father was school director and supervisor for many years. Both were members of the Mennonite Church. Her father died Feb. 5, 1892, lacking but eight days of being eighty years old. Her mother died Dec. 12, 1893, aged seventy-seven years, nine months and nineteen days. The remains rest in the Hershey Church burying ground in Salisbury township. Mr. and Mrs. Denlinger had the following family: Barbara, a maiden lady of Paradise township; Samuel B., a retired farmer of Paradise township; Lizzie, the widow of Elias Leaman, of Leacock township; Simon, living in Leacock township, married to Anna M. Leaman, who is now dead; Mary, married H. E. Musser, of Paradise township, who is the subject of a sketch on another page; Jacob a farmer of Leacock township; Esaias, a farmer of Paradise township; John, unmarried, a farmer of Paradise township; Tobias, who died in 1898, at the age of forty-three, leaving Lizzie Eby for his widow; Elias, a retired farmer of Salisbury township; Christie A.; Evalin, who married A. H. Hostetter, a merchant at Intercourse, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Henry Hershey were John and Christie A. (Hurst) Denlinger, of Lancaster county. The grandfather was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Hurst.

Henry Hershey lived with his parents until his marriage, and then brought his wife there. They remained there until 1893, when he retired from active farm work, and coming to Intercourse, established a very pleasant home in that charming place. For the last twelve years he has been township auditor, and is a director of the Lancaster Chemical Company. In the Mennonite Fire Insurance Company he is a director and treasurer. In the Mennonite Church he is one of the leading members, and much confidence is expressed in his integrity, ability and general trustworthiness. In politics he is a Republican.

JOHN B. SENGGER gained a firm footing in business circles in his section of Lancaster county, and after his removal to his present location, at Kinzers, built up a thriving trade in his especial line. He was born Nov. 13, 1850, in Caernarvon township, near Churchtown, and on the maternal side comes of stock which has long been identified with the agricultural interests of the county and prominent in the Mennonite Church. Daniel Gehman, his great-grandfather, came from Switzerland, and settled near Adamstown, this county. The grandfather, Christian Gehman, who also lived near Adamstown, was a preacher in the Mennonite Church. He died in March, 1856. He married Barbara Kurtz, who was from near Roland's Church in Earl township, and their family consisted of thirteen children, five sons and eight daughters, Lydia being the mother of Mr. Senger.

Mr. Senger's ancestors on the paternal side also came from Switzerland. His grandfather died when his father was a young child, and the latter was raised as a "bound" boy by Joseph Martin, of Weaverland. He married Lydia Gehman Feb. 2, 1838, and to them were born six sons and two daughters, John B. being the sixth in the family.

John B. Senger was reared to farming, which pursuit he followed up to the age of nineteen years. He received a good common-school education in the public schools of Leacock township, and after he abandoned agriculture, he took up teaching, engaging at that profession until 1889, since when he has been in business. For eight years he ran a portable saw mill, in Chester and Delaware counties, and in 1897 he purchased the coal and lumber yard and warehouse at Kinzers which he conducted till April 1, 1902, when he sold his business. Mr. Senger dealt in grain, feed, flour, coal, lumber, slate, phosphate, salt, and various other commodities in those lines, and also filled orders for sawing oak lumber. Altogether, he commanded a very lucrative patronage in Kinzers and the surrounding country, where his thorough honesty and straightforward methods were recognized and appreciated.

In religion, Mr. Senger follows in the footsteps of his ancestors, uniting with the Mennonite Church, and he has been a devoted Christian worker all his active life. On Jan. 18, 1900, he was ordained to the ministry and since 1902 has devoted his entire time to the work. On Oct. 24, 1872, he was married to Magdalene Rutter, daughter of Jonathan Rutter, of Leacock township.

Henry Gehman, a second cousin of our subject, is a preacher in the same district where his grandfather officiated. Mr. Senger has two first cousins by the name of Witmer, their mother having been a sister of Mrs. Lydia Senger, one in Weaverland, the other in Groffdale, this county; and another, Samuel Gehman, in Juniata Co., Pa., who is a descendant of the first Gehmans that came from Switzerland. These cousins are also ministers.

HENRY K. DILLINGER, the energetic and pushing proprietor of the Sporting Hill Steam Mill, was born in Penn township, Lancaster county, Sept. 27, 1853, a son of Henry B. and Fanny M. (Kauffman) Dillinger. The father was born in East Hempfield township, and the mother in Rapho township.

Henry B. Dillinger operated a water mill in Penn township, and later removed to Milton Grove, where he was engaged in milling until 1856; that year he came to the mill where his son, Henry K., is now established, and here he carried on milling until 1888, when he died at the age of sixty-four years. He and his wife belonged to the Mennonite Church, and his remains rest in the cemetery at Sporting Hill. His widow, who is still living, and is making her home with her son, Henry K., was born June 8, 1832. These were her children: Henry K.; Jacob, who died at the age of twenty-eight; Matilda, who died in infancy; and Susan, deceased at the age of fifteen.

The paternal grandparents of Henry K. Dillinger were Michael and Catherine (Baker) Dillinger, both of whom were born in Lancaster county. They were members of the Lutheran Church, and their remains rest in a cemetery in East Petersburg. The grandfather, who was a weaver by trade, died in East Hempfield township in 1873, at the age of seventy-five. His widow, Catherine, died the following year at the age of seventy-five. They had the following children: Henry B., the father of Henry K. Dillinger; Andrew and Benjamin, all deceased; Michael, a blacksmith at Lancaster; Emanuel, now dead; Fanny, the widow of David Walter, living in Florin, Pa.; Elizabeth, who married Peter Walter, and is dead; Susan, the wife of George Mann, in West Hempfield township; Amos, deceased.

The maternal grandparents of Henry K. Dillinger were Jacob and Catherine (Martin) Kauffman, both of Lancaster county. Mr. Kauffman, who was a distiller, died in Rapho township in 1849, at the age of fifty-four years. His widow, Catherine Kauffman, died in 1875, at the age of seventy-three years. Their remains rest in the cemetery at Sporting Hill. Born to them were the following children: Jacob, Henry and Elizabeth, who married Michael Weidman, who are all dead; Maria, the widow of Joseph Bomberger, living in Cumberland county; Fanny, noted above; Magdalena, who died young.

Henry K. Dillinger was married in November, 1873, in Lancaster, to Kate Leib, by whom he has had one child, Monroe L. Mrs. Dillinger was born in Warwick township, in 1853, a daughter of Christ and Mary (Hernley) Leib, both of Lancaster county. Her father, who is now a retired farmer, has his home in Akron, Pa., where he has attained the ripe old age of eighty-five. Her mother died in 1854. They were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, who married Amos Musselman, and has her home in Sporting Hill; Barbara, the widow of Samuel Hoffman, living in Manor township; Harriet, married to Harry Brown, and residing in Cole-rain township; Anna, who married William Whitcraft, and lives at Reinhold, Pa.; Kate, noted above as Mrs. Dillinger.

Mr. Leib was a second time married, to Matilda Sweigert, by whom he had the following children: Susan, who married Wayne Zell; David; and Adeline, Mrs. Adams. All three live in Akron, Pennsylvania.

Henry K. Dillinger remained at home with his parents, and when a boy of eleven years of age entered his father's mill. At the time of his father's death he was fully able to operate the mill, and at once took charge of it. This was a mill built by Abraham Metz in 1814, and has long been one of the notable landmarks of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Dillinger belong to the Lutheran Church, and their neighborly ways, kindly disposition and modest nature have made for them a host of friends. He is a Republican, and his general intelligence, moral purpose and approved integrity combine to give him much influence in his community.

PHARES D. KEMRER, a cigar manufacturer at Vintage, Lancaster county, was born in that county, in Paradise township, Sept. 13, 1856, a son of Joseph and Susan (Hershour) Kemrer, at that time residents of Harristown. P. D. Kemrer was born in this village, and was educated in the public schools and at the Millersville State Normal School, where he attended three sessions.

Mr. Kemrer was a school teacher in his early manhood, and for six years was engaged in teaching in Lancaster county. Then he turned his attention to the cigar trade, and learned how to make a good cigar. Since 1884 he has been engaged in a cigar factory at Harristown, his post office being Vintage. His goods, which are mostly medium and cheap grades, are sold in the New York markets, and his trade is rapidly growing. Mr. Kemrer owns a farm property of thirty acres, which lies close to the village where he lives, and to the cultivation of this he devotes all the time he can spare from his factory business.

Mr. Kemrer was married in 1889 to Lillie, a daughter of Benjamin and Catherine Kramer, of Paradise, where she was born in 1868. To this union have come four children, Alice, Lloyd, John and Dorothy.

The great-grandfather of Phares D. Kemrer came from Germany and engaged in a distillery, near the city of Lancaster. Much money was lost by him in endorsing for a man whom he supposed to be his friend. His son Joseph, the grandfather of Phares D. Kemrer, was associated with his father in the distillery, and died when about thirty-five. He married Miss Sarah Dunning, and she lived to about seventy years of age. They had five children: Mary, who became the wife of Henry Grubb, of Lampeter township; Elizabeth, married to Jacob Greenawalt, formerly a county commissioner; Frances, married to Jacob Treasure, of Sterling, Ill.; Joseph, the father of Phares D. Kemrer; George, living near Mountville, Lancaster county. The mother of these children was a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church.

Joseph Kemrer was born in Conestoga township, in Lancaster county, Nov. 22, 1824. When only four years old he lost his father, and for the next nine years he lived on the farm of Jacob Weaver. At the age of fifteen he set himself to learning the shoemaker's trade, a business which he followed many years at Harristown after a year at Lampeter.

He put his money into land, buying in small tracts until he had come to own about thirty acres. All this has now come into the possession of his son, Phares D., with the exception of the acre-piece on which he has his home. For several years he kept a shoe store.

Joseph Kemrer was married Sept. 23, 1844, to Miss Susan Hershour, a daughter of James and Hannah Hershour. Mrs. Kemrer was born in 1825, and has become the mother of the following children: Joseph, a shoemaker and trucker at Williamstown; Elizabeth, late wife of Benjamin H. Lintner; Phares D.; Sadie, wife of Edwin Traut, of Christiana; Howard, a shoemaker in Paradise; Clinton, deceased; Frank, residing at home; Annie, the wife of B. Frank Weaver, of Paradise.

J. MARTIN ANKRIM. One of the thrifty and honorable farmers of Drumore township is J. Martin Ankrim, who was born Feb. 25, 1855, a son of S. Martin and Phebe A. (Kyle) Ankrim, of Drumore township, both of whom are deceased.

William Ankrim, the grandfather of J. Martin, of this sketch, was born Oct. 20, 1770, and was of Scotch-Irish ancestry. In 1813 he bought and took possession of the farm which has been in the Ankrim family ever since. His children were: Martha Ann, born Aug. 25, 1806, died May 20, 1880; Samuel M., born Oct. 23, 1808, died Aug. 4, 1880; Nancy H., born Nov. 27, 1812, died June 12, 1888; Margaret, born Oct. 22, 1815, died Dec. 23, 1867. Archibald Ankrim, the great-grandfather of our subject, was one of the first settlers in Lancaster county, and settled on a property adjoining that afterward bought by his son.

S. Martin Ankrim was united in marriage to Phebe Kyle, in January, 1847. She was a daughter of Joseph and Harriet (Morrison) Kyle, of Lancaster county, and the seven children born to this union were as follows: William J., born Nov. 13, 1847, died Sept. 22, 1850; Harriet, born April 6, 1849, died Sept. 21, 1850; William J., born Feb. 24, 1851, residing in Philadelphia; Hannah L., born Dec. 14, 1852, died March 17, 1853; Jennie, born Jan. 4, 1854, living with her brother; J. Martin, born Feb. 25, 1855; Lewis, born Dec. 13, 1857, a practicing physician of Pittsburg, and the youngest of the family. Mrs. Ankrim was born Nov. 5, 1823, and died June 20, 1887.

J. Martin Ankrim, of this sketch, was reared a farmer boy and attended the common schools. When he started out on his business career it was as a poor young man, but the evidences of his success are in the fine farm of 180 acres and his elegant and costly residence, first-class barns and other improvements which make him one of the substantial men of this township. Mr. Ankrim owns his own creamery and does a large and prosperous business in this line in connection with his farming interests.

The marriage of our subject was to Miss Clarinda Smith, on Feb. 24, 1887, a daughter of Preston and Hannah (Carter) Smith, of Drumore township, and they have had a family of six children, namely: Alva M., born April 25, 1889; Joseph E., born Jan. 1, 1891, died April 1, 1891; Howard, born Feb. 28, 1892, died April 7, 1892; Preston S., born May 23, 1893; Lucetta May, born May 1, 1895, died Dec. 19, 1895; and Grace Elizabeth, born Jan. 12, 1898.

The birth of Mrs. Ankrum was in September, 1855, in Drumore township. Her parents, Preston and Hannah (Carter) Smith, were married Feb. 1, 1844, and the former was born Dec. 27, 1816, and died March 3, 1883, while the latter was born Jan. 1, 1823, and died Nov. 8, 1894. They had a family of eight children, four of whom are living, namely: Albert, born May 8, 1846, a farmer of Drumore township, married to Harriet Martin; Gilbert, born Oct. 13, 1851 (see his sketch); Clarinda, the wife of Mr. Ankrum; and Nora Elizabeth, born Oct. 5, 1863, the wife of George H. Brown, of Little Britain township.

Politically Mr. Ankrum is a Democrat, and both he and his wife are among the leading members of the Presbyterian Church. As a farmer he stands high in agricultural circles, while socially and financially he is one of the prominent factors in the life of this community.

ELAM GEIST BOOK, of the village of Refton, in Strasburg township, belongs to one of the old established families of Lancaster county, and is one of the prominent business men of his section, as well as a justice of the peace. He was born on a farm near Strasburg Feb. 8, 1844, a son of John and Anna (Geist) Book, and a grandson of David Book, a well known resident.

John Book was reared in West Lampeter township, but spent the greater part of his life in Strasburg and Providence townships, residing in the latter until he retired from active life, when he removed to Strasburg township, where he died at the age of eighty-four years. His life was largely devoted to farming, although early in life he had learned and practiced the trade of a shoemaker. His first venture in farming was on shares, but about 1843 he purchased a farm of 156 acres in Providence township, where he resided for twenty-two years, and then, having purchased a second farm in Strasburg township, he removed thither, renting the old farm in Providence township to his son. On this farm of twenty-five acres near Strasburg Mr. Book spent his remaining years, and there both he and his beloved wife died. They had a family of nine children: Catherine (deceased) was the wife of Tobias Herr, of Strasburg township; Levi (deceased) was a cigarmaker of Strasburg; David (deceased) was a farmer, and removed to Illinois; Barbara married B. F. Weaver, of Sterling, Ill.; John was a farmer of Drumore township; Mary Ann (deceased) married Aaron Alexander, of Chester county; Daniel (deceased) was a victim of the Civil war, in which he served as a private in the 122d P. V. I.; Elam G.

is mentioned below; Amos is a farmer near Gordonville. All of the children became persons of high esteem in their respective communities. The father was a self-made man, having started out in life with few advantages, but succeeded in becoming one of the solid farmers of the county. Both he and his wife belonged to the religious sect known as the Dunkards.

Elam G. Book, who was reared on the farm; was interested in farm work and attended school, and at the age of eighteen began his public life by engaging to teach school. So well did he satisfy the school directors in Providence township that he was retained for seven terms, or until he took charge of the "Mill Valley Hotel," at the same time serving as assessor. When he closed up his connection with the hotel he removed to Strasburg township and carried on farming for the two following years, and then moved to a place located just north of the borough, where for three years he grew tobacco. In all these lines he showed ability as a man of business. Mr. Book has the honor of being the first citizen of Refton. For two years he was the efficient manager for R. D. Herr, in the coal and lumber business, later entering the employ of James Meck, with whom he continued, in the same line, for five years, finding time during this period to fill the office of assessor of Strasburg township. For two years after leaving the employ of Mr. Meck he was engaged with H. F. Haverstick in the coal and lumber business, this relationship continuing for five years, at the end of which time he formed a partnership with Daniel Herr, known as Pequea D. Herr, in the coal and lumber business. This association lasted until the death of Mr. Herr, at which time Mr. Book took control of the business, which he has since conducted with increasing success. Although he is the principal dealer in lumber, coal, fertilizers, grain, flour and feed, in Refton, he finds time to supervise his fine farm of 156 acres in Providence township.

Mr. Book has been an ardent Republican, and an active worker in the party's ranks. For six years he has been county committeeman and for four years has been township clerk. In 1888 he was elected to the office of justice of the peace, and in the discharge of the duties of that office has given universal satisfaction by his decisions, none of them ever having been reversed. In 1901 Mr. Book was appointed to the office of paster and folder at Harrisburg, which he filled honorably.

In 1867 Mr. Book wedded Miss Eliza Ann Laird, who was born in Rawlinsville, this county, May 6, 1844, daughter of David Laird, and this union has been blessed with seven children: Anna, who married Harry Zittle, a lime burner of Strasburg, and has three children, Alpheus, Catherine and Harry; Emma, who married Irvin Lefever, a farmer of Providence township, and has four children, Agnes, Myrtle, Florence and Elwood; Sherman, a farmer of Providence township, who married Miss Sue V.

Herr, and has three children, Edna, Willis and Clara; Ira, a resident of Providence township, who was educated in the Lancaster Business College, and who married Miss Jennie Gochnauer, and has one child, Bessie; Milo, who was a student of the Pennsylvania Business College, and now resides at home; Myrtle Amelia, at home; and Ida, deceased.

HENRY B. HERR, a prominent farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in East Hempfield township, Aug. 27, 1853, a son of Henry R. and Elizabeth (Brenneman) Herr. They were both born in Manor township, he in 1818 and she in 1822. Henry Herr was in his time one of the leading farmers of Lancaster county. After his marriage he settled in East Hempfield township, where he died on his farm in 1865, when only forty-seven years of age. His widow is still living on the old farm, and notwithstanding her advanced years, is alert and vigorous.

To Henry and Elizabeth Herr were born the following family: (1) Emanuel Herr, born on the old homestead, was a soldier in the Union Army during the Civil war, belonging to one of the Pennsylvania regiments. He served until his enlistment expired, though at one time very ill with typhoid fever. After the war he spent three years in California, when he returned to cultivate the old homestead, afterward buying into a creamery in Chester county. He was very successful in his business. He died in 1897, aged fifty, leaving a widow, who was born Emma Phillips. (2) Jacob Herr, born in 1848, married Miss Lizzie Herr, and for some years lived on a farm in Manor township, later moving onto their own place in Fulton township, where he is living retired. (3) Magdalena Herr, born in 1852, married John Stauffer, of East Hempfield township. (4) Benjamin Herr, born in 1855, married Miss Lizzie Witwer, and purchased a farm in East Drumore township, adjoining that of Henry B. These are his seven children: Maggie; Ida; Benjamin; Ella; Alice, died in March, 1902; Edna; and Amos. (5) Amos Herr, born in 1859, married Miss Emma S. Rosher, June 4, 1902, and has charge of the home farm. (6) Henry B.

Henry B. Herr received a common school education. He rented neighboring farms until his marriage, when he settled in life. His marriage occurred in November, 1879, when Miss Lavina R. Graybill became his wife. She was the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Reist) Graybill, of Penn township, and both natives of Lancaster county. Her father is dead, but her mother is still living on the old home farm with her son John. They had three children: Lavina R., who is Mrs. Henry B. Herr, born in August, 1855; Elizabeth Graybill, who is the widow of David R. Brandt, and lives in Lancaster with her children, Gertrude, Eva and Leon; John Graybill, who is unmarried and lives at home with his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Herr lived on a farm in East

Hempfield township for two years, when he purchased his present home near Unicorn. Here Mr. Herr has erected a handsome residence and a large bank barn, making many other and extensive improvements, and converting his farm into one of the best in Lancaster county. Mr. and Mrs. Herr have two children: Ervin J. Herr, born in February, 1881, single and living at home; Olive Herr, born in December, 1884, a student in the home schools.

Mr. Herr is a Republican, but, though urged by his neighbors, has persistently declined to accept public station. By industry and thrift he has become prosperous, and from a very modest beginning has accumulated a very handsome property. His life has been one of honest toil, and his intelligence and integrity are conceded by all who know him.

LEANDER SHOEMAKER, a prominent farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in Martic township, Feb. 13, 1862, a son of Joseph and Emaline (Lamborn) Shoemaker. Joseph Shoemaker was born in Montgomery county in 1829, and his wife in Martic township in 1831.

Joseph Shoemaker was the son of Jesse and Sarah Shoemaker, both of whom were born in Montgomery county, he in September, 1796, and his wife, Sarah Lukens, in June, 1806. Jesse Shoemaker was a farmer all his married life in Martic township, and with his wife was a member and an active worker in the Friends' Church. Mrs. Shoemaker died in 1872, and he ten years later. They left a family of four living children. The three children who died were Charles, Martha and Enos. Jesse Shoemaker was twice married, his first wife being Sarah Ambler, of Montgomery county, by whom he had one daughter, Hannah, born in 1822 in Montgomery county, who died unmarried in 1895. His second wife bore him seven children, four of whom lived to manhood.

Joseph Shoemaker, born in Montgomery county in 1829, noted above as the father of Leander, had a common school education in Martic township. He worked on the farm until his marriage in 1854 to Miss Emaline Lamborn, a daughter of Smedley and Mary Lamborn. They made their home on a part of his father's old farm for some nine years, when they purchased a farm in West Drumore township, and there his wife died in 1880. After that sad event he lived with his children until 1899, when he died. He was the father of nine children, of whom Cynthia, born February, 1855, died in 1876. Charles, born in March, 1856, married Miss Ella Cutler, and is a farmer near Fulton House, where they have a family of five children,—Ethel, Emaline, Jessie, Arthur and Clifford. Allison Shoemaker, born in April, 1858, went to Wyoming in 1879, where he has since been engaged in cattle raising, owning a large ranch in that state; he is a single man. Lewis Shoemaker, born in 1873, was educated in the high school, and was married to Miss Sarah Bradley; they live in Akron, O., where he is a druggist; they have two children, Mary and Blanche. Edgar Shoemaker, born in 1871, married Alice Reed, and is a farmer, in Fulton township; they have one son, Earnest.

Leander Shoemaker was educated in the home schools, and in the Academy at Chestnut Level. When a young man he became a miller for a time. In February, 1883, he married Miss Leora Kent, the daughter of Garrison and Elizabeth (Shoemaker) Kent, of Chester county. Mrs. Shoemaker was born in 1862, her mother dying one year after her birth. The motherless child was reared by her father's sister, Agnes Kent Bicking. Mrs. Shoemaker was the only child of her parents. Her father married Anna Laflin, of Dover, Del. They moved to Virginia, where he died when Mrs. Shoemaker was eleven years old. She was educated in the public schools, in the Westchester Normal School and Swarthmore College. She was a teacher of much success before her marriage. Mrs. Shoemaker's father had two children by his second marriage, William and Lillian, both living in Philadelphia, where the brother is a trolley-car inspector and the sister is a secretary in a publishing house.

Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker lived a year on his father's farm, when they moved to a farm in Chester county, which they occupied three years. In 1889 Mr. Shoemaker purchased the Showalter farm in East Drumore township, a mile south of Unicorn. This farm has been greatly improved since coming into his hands. He has built a fine residence and greatly improved the appearance of the place. His children are: Lawrence J., born in December, 1884; Mahlon, born in August, 1886; Olive L., born in November, 1888; Raymond K., born in June, 1890; Charles L., born Aug. 20, 1891; Evan L., born April 1, 1896; Lewis E., born in June, 1898; Almus J., born in January, 1900; Sara K., born Oct. 20, 1901. All excepting the younger children are students in the high school. Olive is a pianist of much skill for one of her age.

Mr. Shoemaker is a Republican, and belongs with his family to the Penn Hill Friends' Church.

ANDREW J. ZERCHER, undertaker and formerly merchant of Conestoga Center, Lancaster county, was born in that place Feb. 15, 1857, son of John J. and Maria M. (Mess) Zercher.

Andrew and Elizabeth (Johnson) Zercher, his paternal grandparents, were of German and English ancestry, respectively. Andrew Zercher died when seventy-seven years old, his widow passing away in January, 1901, when almost ninety-two years of age. He was a mechanic and in early life followed the trade of plow-making and wagon-making, later farming. He was a member of the Dunkard Church and a public-spirited man. It was with these worthy people our subject spent his boyhood, and by them he was taught the principles of honesty and uprightness which he has so nobly upheld in his daily life.

John J. Zercher died in 1865, at the early age of thirty years, from typhoid fever, contracted on the battlefield of Gettysburg, which he visited after the battle for purposes of investigation. He had been a teacher in the public schools, and was one of the foremost educators in Lancaster county at the time of his death. He commenced in the public schools and Mt. Joy Academy, where he took a full course, and he also had the advantages of a supplemental course at the State Normal School, Millersville. He was a great reader and deep thinker, and his constant aid was toward the betterment of public school facilities. He was a member of the Dunkard Church and was extremely temperate in his mode of life. His wife survived him, afterward marrying Andrew Eidemiller, of Providence township. A family of six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Zercher: Emanuel H., a resident of Conestoga township and justice of the peace; Phoebe, who died when two years of age; Andrew J., the subject of this sketch; Elizabeth, wife of H. N. Eberly, of Providence township; Elmira, wife of A. J. Winter, of Lancaster; and Abraham, a tinsmith, who died at twenty-five years of age, unmarried.

Andrew J. Zercher was a boy of only seven years at the time of his father's death, and, as already stated, was placed with his paternal grandparents, who lived on a farm north of Conestoga Center, where he worked most of the time until he was sixteen. His education was limited and was obtained principally during the winter months. At this time he began working by the month for pay, and after two years at farm labor he was apprenticed to George D. Brown, of Millersville, to learn the cabinet trade. After serving three years he returned to Conestoga and established himself in business, and has since conducted a cabinet and undertaking establishment. In 1898 Mr. Zercher engaged in the mercantile trade, running it in connection with his already established business. In 1898 he was appointed postmaster of Conestoga Center, and in 1901 he disposed of the mercantile part of his establishment, and has since devoted himself to undertaking and looking after his farm property. Mr. Zercher has always been regarded as a public-spirited, progressive man, ever ready to take part in any affair calculated to enhance the interests of the community in which he resides. He is a leading Republican, and has been elected to office as the candidate of that party. He has represented his district in State conventions three times, and has twice been assessor and once inspector of his district. In 1901 he completed and now occupies the finest home in his village.

On Nov. 1, 1880, Mr. Zercher married Miss Martha A. Bruner, daughter of P. M. and Elizabeth (Ohmet) Bruner, of Conestoga Center. They have two children, Blanche B., at home, and Charles M., a student at the Millersville Normal School. Mr. Zercher is a member of Kishacaquilla Tribe, No. 65, I. O. R. M., in which he has passed all the chairs; Conestoga Lodge, No. 334, I. O. O. F.; Knights of the Mystic Chain, of which he is commander; and of Charles M. Howell Lodge, 496, A. Y. M., of Millersville, Pa. He is a member of the Lancaster County Funeral Directors' Association. He and his family unite with the Reformed Church, Mr. Zercher being an elder and Sunday-school superintendent and taking a great interest in church work. He commands the esteem of the community in which he has his home and has a wide circle of personal friends.

AMOS L. RISSER. Although some sections of the country complain that the younger generation of the agricultural sections are prone to leave the cultivation of the soil to hirelings and find less remunerative careers in the city, Lancaster county has had no cause to complain, for among the most successful farmers are those who have been reared to manhood on the fertile lands where they gladly remain, proud of their independence.

Among those in Ephrata township who have prospered according to their just deserts, is Amos L. Risser, whose fine farm is located about a quarter of a mile north of Lincoln, Pa. Although Mr. Risser began life with limited resources, he has been energetic, careful and industrious, and this has resulted in the accumulation of means and the acquisition of the valuable property upon which he resides.

Grandfather Risser was of German ancestry and was well known in Elizabeth township as a man of substance and respectability, his family consisting of three sons and three daughters: Peter, deceased; Christian; Henry; Katharine, who married Joseph Bucher; Elizabeth, deceased; Fannie, who married Benjamin Stauffer, deceased.

Christian Risser, the father of Amos L., of this biography, was born in 1828, and in 1850 married Katherine Landis, five children being born of this union: Reuben L., a prominent farmer of Clay township; Mary, who married Eli Hess, a farmer of Elizabeth township; Amos L.; Henry L., a farmer of Elizabeth township; and Christian L., on the old homestead, where the father still resides with him. The mother died April 16, 1900, aged sixty-nine years.

Amos L. Risser was born Aug. 1, 1859, and was reared to farm work, acquiring his education in the excellent public schools of the district. Industrious and provident, he soon became able to purchase land and finally secured his present fine farm, where he has made improvements of all kinds. The leaf tobacco business has claimed considerable attention and in this line he has had eminent success.

The marriage of Mr. Risser was on Sept. 26, 1886, to Miss Susan Eberley, a daughter of Michael L. and Louise (Gockley) Eberley, of Clay township, and three children have been born of this union: Lulu, born on Jan. 27, 1889; Kathryn, born Oct. 8, 1891; Helen Edith, born July 9, 1902. Michael Eberley, the father of Mrs. Risser, had five children: Lizzie died at the age of sixteen; Susan, Mrs. Risser; Alice, married to Daniel E. Miller, of Brunner-ville; Lewis, a miller, of Clay Mills; David, a stenographer in Philadelphia.

While a Republican in politics, Mr. Risser has never given much attention to political matters, although he has consented to serve in several positions where he was directly interested, as school director, judge of elections and road supervisor, and in all worked for the good of the community to the best of his ability. An upright, excellent citizen, it is proper that his name should appear in a record of the representative men of Lancaster county.

ABRAM REESE, one of the leading citizens, substantial farmers and representative men of Providence township, was born Feb. 11, 1852, in this township, son of Emanuel and Anna (Elliott) Reese, both deceased.

Emanuel Reese, father of Abram, was a son of Andrew Reese, born in Martic township, Lancaster county, where he married and became the father of nine children, namely: Benjamin; Martin, born in 1800; Jacob; Harry; Nancy, who married Abraham Isenberger; Emanuel; Eliza, who married Jacob Fisher; Abner, who was drowned in the Susquehanna river; and David, a resident of Lancaster City, the only member of that generation of the family still surviving. Emanuel Reese was born March 26, 1816, and died Aug. 19, 1888. He married Miss Anna Elliott, of Martic township, born Nov. 30, 1818, died in 1893. They had a family of eight children, namely: Leah, born May 8, 1840, married to Abraham Mehaffy, of Lancaster, and now a widow; Amanda, born Feb. 15, 1842, residing on the old home place in Providence township; Andrew, born April 1, 1844, a lumber dealer, residing in Jefferson county, Pa.; Hiram, born May 19, 1846, proprietor of a planing mill in Jefferson county; Eli, born March 14, 1848, an engineer on the Galveston & Santa Fe railroad and residing in Galveston; Abram, our subject; Martha J., born Dec. 25, 1854, the wife of John M. Grebinger, a cigar manufacturer in Millersville; and Mary Ann, born July 9, 1857, residing at Willow street, Pennsylvania.

The early life of Abram Reese was passed as a farmer boy and he acquired his education in the public schools of Providence township. At the age of eighteen years, he went to Osceola Mills, Clearfield county, where he was employed in the lumber regions for seven years, and after his return to Providence township he followed contracting and carpentering for the succeeding seven years. Mr. Reese then began farming, although his limited means enabled him to begin only in a small way; but energy, industry and good management soon brought success and at present Mr. Reese is the owner of the fine farm of 109 acres where he lives and upon which he has made many substantial improvements. His comfortable dwelling and commodious barns as well as the general air of thrift which prevails in his surroundings, testify to his continued prosperity, which is justly deserved. In politics, Abram Reese is one of the stanch Republicans of Providence township, and he has served with great efficiency as assistant assessor and for seven years as school director. He also serves as deputy-coroner of Providence township.

Mr. Reese is connected with the following fraternal organizations: Masonic, No. 156, of Quarryville; I. O. O. F., No. 374, of Rawlinsville; Knights of Golden Eagle, of Rawlinsville; K. of P., No. 423, of Rawlinsville.

On Feb. 25, 1880, Mr. Reese was united in marriage with Miss Lila V. Rockey, born April 12, 1855, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Miller) Rockey, of Whiteside Co., Ill., formerly of Bart township, Lancaster county, and this marriage has been blessed with five children: Howard E., born Sept. 6, 1881; Anna L., born March 20, 1883; Leah M., born Dec. 13, 1884; Morris J., born Aug. 17, 1887; and Abraham W., born Sept. 2, 1898. Mrs. Reese was reared in a family of seven children, these being: Lila, Mrs. Reese; Louisa, the wife of John Winters, of McKees Rocks, Pa.; John, of Illinois; Anna, the wife of Salem Campbell, of Fort Dodge, Ia.; George, of Des Moines, Ia.; and Jacob and Harry, of Illinois.

Mr. Reese is one of the leading, progressive and public-spirited citizens of his township and is a man who commands the respect and esteem of all who know him.

HENRY N. MARTIN. The township of West Earl has, in its efficient road supervisor, one of the most highly esteemed of its business citizens. Henry N. Martin was born on April 11, 1853, and was the son of Samuel and Mary (Nolt) Martin, who were of German origin, and were united in marriage about 1843. Their family numbered thirteen children: Jacob, a resident of Ohio; Hattie and Annie, deceased; John, of New Holland; Samuel, of Ohio; Barbara, deceased; Susan; Henry N.; Mary; Juniata; Elias, of this county; Michael, deceased; and Jacob. The grandfather of Henry N., was also the father of a large family, whose names were, Jacob, Samuel, John, Susannah, Mary and Elizabeth. Many of these reared families of their own and the name is a respected one through a large section of country.

Henry N. Martin was reared on a farm and received his education in the district school. His tastes did not induce him to pursue an agricultural life, and he learned the harnessmaker's trade, which he followed some twenty years in West Earl, where he became well and favorably known. Although Mr. Martin has been handicapped to some degree, on account of an accident, in his youth, which necessitated the amputation of his leg, at the knee, he has accumulated a competency and is the owner of two desirable residences in West Earl and three lots in the same town. His close application to business has resulted both in his gaining the confidence of the public, and in successfully preparing for advancing years. For the last five years he has been the very efficient supervisor of the township and is a man who numbers many friends.

The first marriage of Mr. Martin was in 1873, to Miss Mary Cramer, and three children were born of this union: John, of Lancaster county; and Ella and Henry, both of whom died in childhood. Mrs. Martin died in 1884. The second marriage of Mr. Martin was to Miss Cora Shirk, a daughter of Martin and Salinda (Spangler) Shirk, of Ephrata township, on Sept. 13, 1886, and to this union have been born: Martin Harason and Barton Morton, twins, who died in childhood; Bessie, who died in childhood; and Essie, born on Dec. 16, 1893.

In politics, Mr. Martin is a Republican and is one of the most honorable and respected citizens of West Earl township. In his exemplary life he displays those attributes which win him the regard not only of those in the domestic circle, but of the whole township, where he is so well known.

JACOB W. ROYER, M. D., a noted physician and surgeon at Terrehill, Lancaster county, belongs to an old and honored family of this section of the State. He was born in the village and in the house in which he is still living, May 4, 1867, and is a son of Henry S. and Margaret Weaver Royer.

Dr. Royer was reared in Terrehill, and educated in the public schools. In the fall of 1887, he entered the office of Dr. McConnell, of Terrehill, taking up the preparatory study of medicine; two years later he entered Jefferson Medical College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1892. In addition to his general studies he took a course at the Charity Lying-In Hospital in Obstetrics and Female Disorders. After receiving his degree he spent nine months at Oregon, Lancaster county, in the practice of his profession, locating in the spring of 1893 at Terrehill, where he has built up a very flattering practice.

Dr. Royer has been a close student, has attained a high standing in his profession, and enjoys a substantial footing in the community, where he has a large patronage from the best families of this part of Lancaster county. He is a member of the Lancaster County and City Medical Societies, and also of the State Medical Society. Among the Odd Fellows he is very popular, and belongs to Terrehill Lodge, No. 454, Ridgely Encampment, No. 217, the P. O. S. A., the Golden Eagle, A. O. K. M. C. and the American Mechanics.

Dr. Royer was married in 1895 to Miss Vinetta Swarr, a daughter of Jacob and Alice Swarr, of Lititz. To this union have come two children, Erla and Mary. They belong to the Trinity United Evangelical Church, and the Doctor takes a deep interest in Sunday-school work. He teaches the young men's Bible class.

MRS. ELIZABETH LEWIS OWEN. This venerable lady of ripened age, and rich alike in memories and in good works, lives in Columbia in the old homestead in which she was born. Her father, Samuel Bethel Heise, was one of the town's oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, and the story of his life is replete with interest and instruction. He was born near Hagerstown, Md., July 9, 1798. At the age of six years he came to Columbia, and became the adopted son and heir of his uncle, Samuel Bethel. He received an education superior to that vouchsafed to most youths of those days, and his uncle was anxious that he should be trained to his own profession, the law. But young Heise's tastes were mechanical, and in compliance with his own preference, he learned the trade of a cabinet maker. He succeeded well in business, and in addition to a cabinet-making establishment, conducted a sawmill. He was the first to introduce tobacco culture into Lancaster county, importing seed from Cuba as early as 1845, and sowing it regardless of ridicule. Time has vindicated his sagacity. Other ventures, however, such as silk and sugar culture, proved less successful. He was married, in 1819, to Miss Emily B. Lewis, the fruit of the marriage being five daughters. Four of these survived him: Mrs. Anna B. Esseck, of Columbia, since deceased; Mrs. E. L. Owen, the subject of the present sketch; Mrs. Alexander Caldwell, the wife of a well-known banker and public man of Leavenworth, Kan.; and Mrs. Mary B., widow of John A. Wright, of Freeport, Ill. Mrs. Caldwell's baptismal name was Patience, and the child who died before reaching womanhood was christened Margaret. The name Patience was given in honor of Mr. Heise's mother, Patience Bethel, his father's Christian name being Solomon.

Mrs. Heise, nee Emily B. Lewis, the mother of Mrs. Owen, was the daughter of Paschall and Elizabeth (Bowd) Lewis, the former born in Kent Co., Del., and the latter in Lancaster Co., Pa. Mr. Heise died in 1885, having lived nearly four score years and ten. His wife died aged forty-seven. Both were devout and consistent members of the Presbyterian Church.

Reference has been made to Mrs. Owen's residence at the old family homestead; a bit of history in reference thereto will prove of interest, more particularly as it sheds not a little light on the Bethel and Heise genealogies. To recount it intelligently, however, it is necessary to go back to the first settler of Columbia, Samuel Blunston. As early as 1726, he became possessed of 850 acres, and after several years imported brick from England with the view of erecting a more substantial and comfortable home. He died before the arrival of the material, which was subsequently used in Mt. Bethel cemetery. Blunston's property ultimately descended to his two nieces, Sarah and Hannah, both then unmarried. Sarah Blunston married Samuel Bethel, who for many years kept a tavern in Lancaster, on the present site of the "Cross Keys." A son and daughter, Samuel and Mary, were born to them. Mary married Dr. Samuel Boude, an eminent physician and druggist, and became the mother of Gen. Thomas Boude, who achieved distinction in the war of the Revolution. Samuel married a Miss Taylor, a granddaughter of the first John Wright who came to Lancaster. One son, Samuel, was the uncle and adopted father of Mr. Heise, Mrs. Owen's father; while a daughter, Patience, married Solomon Heise, his father by nature. The greater part of the Blunston estate finally came into the possession of Samuel Bethel, the great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Owen. The site of the homestead came to be known as Bethel and later as Heise's Hill. About 1800 Samuel Bethel, the adopted father of Mr. Heise, tore down the greater portion of the old Blunston home and built the present structure.

Mrs. Owen has been twice married. In 1848, at Columbia, she was united to Dr. W. S. McCorkle, of that place. He was a son of Hugh McCorkle, his mother's name before marriage having been Sarah Strickler. Three children blessed this union. The eldest, Emily, is the widow of Dr. J. A. Fitzgerald, a United States Army surgeon, who died while visiting home on leave of absence. Mrs. Fitzgerald's home is in Marietta. Sarah, the second daughter, also married an army officer, Major Case. He is at present assigned to duty in the Philippines, while she remains with her mother. Col. Case's present address is Army Bldg., Whitehall street, New York City. Samuel B., the youngest child and only son, married Miss Mary M. Owen, of Philadelphia, and is at present with his mother, having charge of the management of her estate.

Dr. McCorkle died at the age of fifty-one years, and some years thereafter his widow was united in marriage to the Rev. Dr. Roger Owen, an eminent Presbyterian divine of Philadelphia, who was for half a century a faithful and honored servant of his church. From 1845 to 1851, Dr. Owen was pastor of a church in Columbia, and for thirty years was in charge of a parish at Chestnut Hill, near Philadelphia. He entered into rest in 1890, after passing an honored and useful life of seventy-six years. In 1891 Mrs. Owen returned to Columbia, where she has since resided, esteemed for her many noble traits and beloved for her piety and her unostentatious benevolence. The family is one of the most honored in Lancaster county.

JOHN L. HESS, proprietor of the "New Texas Hotel" at Lyles, Fulton township, is a well-known and popular citizen. He was born Nov. 30, 1862, in Little Britain township and is a son of Jeremiah and Sarah Jane (McCrabb) Hess, who were both natives of Lancaster county.

Jeremiah Hess, the father was of German origin, and his wife was of Irish origin. The former was a son of Abraham Hess, also a native of Lancaster county, who was the father of the following seven children; John B., Jeremiah, Henry, Smith, Sarah, Fanny and Elizabeth, all deceased. Jeremiah Hess was married to Sarah Jane McCrabb in 1843. He was born in 1821 and died in 1887, while his wife was born Jan. 15, 1820, and still survives, in New Texas, Fulton township. They had seven children, namely: Benjamin, a machinist in Iowa; Henry M., Emma C. and Frederick C., deceased; Howard, a farmer of Little Britain township; Mary, deceased; and John L., the subject of this sketch. Jeremiah Hess was a farmer and brickmaker and a first-class citizen. He was a Democrat in politics and an honorable and upright man. A member of the Presbyterian Church, he was a God-fearing man.

John L. Hess was married to Miss Rachel Kyle, of Little Britain, Nov. 10, 1887. She is the daughter of James Kyle, a farmer and blacksmith. Mr. and Mrs. Hess have no children. He was reared on the home farm and received his education in the common schools of Little Britain township. Until the age of thirty years he followed farming as an occupation and then went into the hotel business at Conowingo, Md. He kept a place in that town for two years and then purchased the "New Texas House," his present place, a good property with twenty-one acres of land attached to it. He has lived in New Texas since 1895, and has been very successful in business. The place is kept in Mr. Hess' well known style, and the table is always first class.

Mr. Hess is a Democrat in politics, and an admirer of Jeffersonian doctrines. He attends the Presbyterian Church. He and his wife are among the honored and respected citizens of New Texas, and have a large circle of friends. Mrs. Hess was one of a family of six children: Rebecca, the wife of Henry Hess, of Britain township; Rachel, Mrs. John L. Hess; Laura, the wife of Homer Hackett, of Fulton township; John W. living in Lancaster; Ella L., the wife of Lewis Pusey, of Douglas, Wyoming; and Belle, the wife of John McGuigan, of Oakwood, Maryland.

BENJAMIN F. TRISSLER was born May 20, 1857, in Conestoga township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

Emanuel B. Trissler, his grandfather, was born June 30, 1789, and died Nov. 6, 1849. He emigrated from England to this country, and settled in Lancaster City, where he followed the butchering business. He also owned and operated the stone quarries on the corner of North Queen and James streets. He was the father of the following family: John, an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad; Anna, wife of Christian Hookey, of Lancaster City; Michael, a butcher, of Lancaster City; Harriet, wife of Mr. Stauffer, of Philadelphia; Sophia, wife of William Huppert, a carpenter of Lancaster City; and David, the father of Benjamin F. Trissler.

David Trissler was born in Lancaster City, Aug. 18, 1820, was there educated in the public schools, and was married at the age of eighteen to Miss Sarah Huber, of Lancaster. He then began life for himself, and followed butchering in Lancaster for one year, when he moved to Conestoga. There he engaged in the same business, following it until the time of his death, June 9, 1892. Mr. Trissler was married twice, and by his first wife he had ten children, six of whom died either in infancy or early childhood. Harriet died in childhood, and John, when a young man. Those now living are: Angeline, wife of Maris McMullin, of Chester Co., Pa.; Caroline, wife of Joseph Stokes, of Lancaster county; and William, of Lancaster county. Mr. Trissler's first wife died in 1854, and in 1855 he married Anna, daughter of Philip Harmon, of Conestoga. They became the parents of seven children, the first of whom died in infancy; Benjamin F., our subject; Mary, the wife of Morris Groff, of Conestoga; Adeline, the wife of David Warfel, of Conestoga; David, a resident of Rawlinsville, Martic township; Catherine, the wife of Augustus Barth, of Lancaster; and Charles, living in Conestoga. The father was a member of the I. O. O. F. in Lancaster City, for about forty years. In religion he was a member of the M. E. Church. In early life he belonged to the Democratic party, but later joined the Republican.

Benjamin F. Trissler lived at home with his parents until he was nineteen years old, receiving in the meantime, a good common-school education. At this age he began business for himself, raising tobacco and doing general farm work. This continued for about five years, when he went to work for Morris Groff in the butcher business, and in 1892 he started in the same business for himself, on the place which he now owns and farms and on which he resides. Mr. Trissler has a farm of eighteen acres on the boundary of Conestoga Center, upon which he raises fine fruit of all kinds. In politics, Mr. Trissler is a Republican but he has never sought office, though he is public-spirited and progressive in his ideas and makes a first-class citizen. He is a member of Conestoga I. O. R. M., Kishiquilla Tribe, No. 65, in which he has passed all the chairs; also of A. O. K. of M. C., Mt. Nebo Castle, No. 158. Our subject is very fond of the chase, and has a fine pack of fox hounds.

Mr. Trissler was married Sept. 10, 1876, to Mary, daughter of Jacob Duke, of Conestoga Center. They are the parents of twelve children: Rachel, wife of Noah Boyer, of Conestoga; Harry, of Beaver county, who is employed at railroading; Anna and Maud at home; Ida, at Millersville; Mary, Barbara, Florence, Benjamin, Jr., Martha, and John and Sarah, twins, born May 19, 1901, all at home.

JOSEPH H. ZEAMER. Agriculture contributes more lavishly to the professions and to large business enterprises than does any other vocation. Men who win renown or wealth in their chosen field of activity often owe it largely to the strength of muscle and brain gained by early experience on the farm. An instance of this preparatory work for a most successful career is presented in the life of Joseph H. Zeamer, cashier of the Central National Bank of Columbia, and one of that city's most prosperous and prominent citizens. He is a native of Lancaster county, born near Silver Springs, West Hempfield township, April 3, 1846, son of Henry and Mary (Hogentobler) Zeamer.

Henry Zeamer was born in Brecknock township, Berks county, March 2, 1818, fifth child and third son of Jeremiah and Rachina (Gephart) Zeamer, the former of whom was born Jan. 25, 1778, in Berks county, a son of Johan Heinrich and Catherine Ziener. Zohan Ziener was born Aug. 2, 1743, a son of Jeremiah Ziener, who died in 1795. The family in Berks county all spell the name Ziener, but the branch of Jeremiah, grandfather of our subject, spell it Zeamer, the change probably taking place in some unaccountable way when the family moved to Lancaster county. In 1822 Henry Zeamer accompanied his parents on their removal from Berks county to the vicinity of Churchtown, Lancaster county, where they lived ten years. In 1832 they removed to a farm on the Marietta turnpike in the vicinity of "Wheatland," one mile west of Lancaster, where they remained five years. In 1837 they removed to near Bainbridge, and the following year to a farm on Chestnut Hill in the vicinity of the ore banks, where they lived two years. In the spring of 1840 they went to Cumberland county. Soon afterward Henry Zeamer married and settled in Lancaster county. He was a life-long farmer and one who was remarkably successful. In 1849 he removed from Silver Springs to the Mullison farm, near Columbia, which he purchased and operated until 1857. In that year he removed to the Kinderhoop farm in West Hempfield township, where he remained eight years. Mr. Zeamer next lived three years on the George Heise farm near Columbia, and then two years on the Miller farm near Marietta. Living a retired life for a year, he purchased the John Shirk farm, near the Shirk ore mines, on the Marietta and Lancaster turnpike. He died in West Hempfield township, Feb. 21, 1899, having almost completed his eighty-first year. He had married Mary Hogentobler, daughter of Joseph Hogentobler, a well-known resident of Lancaster county. She died March 10, 1873, aged fifty-five years. To Henry and Mary Zeamer were born two children, Mary, widow of Henry G. Shirk, a farmer, and Joseph H. Henry Zeamer was a stockholder of the First National Bank of Columbia and of the Central National Bank. He was a man of unusually good business judgment and was eminently successful in life.

Until he was twenty-four years of age Joseph H. Zeamer remained on the farm. He attended the district schools to the age of seventeen, then taught seven terms of school, four in West Hempfield, two in Marietta and one at Mt. Joy, teaching during the winter and spending the summer on the farm. The young school teacher's taste was for a business life, and during the spring of 1865 he attended the Quaker City Business College, and was graduated from that institution June 7, 1865. On March 30, 1870, he entered the Columbia Deposit Bank, and on Aug. 15, of the same year, was appointed general bookkeeper of the First National Bank of Columbia, a position which he held until March 6, 1888. He resigned to assume the duties of cashier of the Central National Bank, which had been organized March 5, 1888, and began business May 7, of the same year. Mr. Zeamer has ever since filled that position most efficiently, contributing in a large measure to the success of that institution. He has developed financial abilities of a high order and has been associated with many of the local business enterprises. For the past fourteen years he has been treasurer of the Columbia & Chestnut Hill Turnpike Company. Since its organization in 1895 he has been treasurer of the Fairview Milling Company. For a time he was treasurer of the Loder Brewing Company, and since 1892 he has been secretary and treasurer of the Farmers & Citizens Market Company. The same offices he has filled for the Columbia Land & Improvement Company since its organization in 1893. In politics Mr. Zeamer is a Republican. He has served as school director at Columbia for five years. Among the fraternal orders he is a member of the A. O. M. P.

Mr. Zeamer was married, Dec. 1, 1868, at Lancaster, Pa., to Miss Anna M. Wisler, who was born Sept. 22, 1846, on the old Wisler homestead, adjoining the borough of Columbia, daughter of Henry Wisler, of Columbia. To Mr. and Mrs. Zeamer have been born two children: Harry W., born Nov. 23, 1869, a druggist of Columbia, and Minnie W., born March 15, 1871. Both now reside at home with their parents.

JACOB B. OBERHOLTZER. Among the leading agriculturists and prominent citizens of West Earl township no one is better or more favorably known than Jacob B. Oberholtzer, who resides upon his well cultivated and finely improved farm, of seventy-three acres, located about two miles north of Farmersville.

The Oberholtzer family is of German origin, and Christian Oberholtzer, the grandfather, firmly established this branch in West Earl township, where he became one of the prosperous and influential farmers. His children were: Christian; Henry a resident of Iowa; Annie, who married Henry Myers, of West Earl township; and Hettie, also of West Earl, all of them consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church.

Christian Oberholtzer, the father of Jacob B., is a substantial and highly respected farmer of West Earl township, and a leading member of the Old Mennonite Church. His marriage was in 1862, to Elizabeth Brubaker, and the two sons of this union are: Jacob B., who was born June 15, 1864; and Christian, Jr., who was born March 20, 1870, and is a farmer of Manor township.

Jacob B. Oberholtzer was reared on the farm and received his education in the public schools of West Earl township. His life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits and he has the reputation in the township of being one of the best farmers as well as one of the leading citizens. The land owned by Mr. Oberholtzer shows a fine state of cultivation and is well stocked, the improvements consisting of excellent and commodious barns and a fine brick dwelling.

The happy marriage of Mr. Oberholtzer, in 1884, was to Miss Fianna Martin, the estimable daughter of John and Elizabeth (Weaver) Martin, and this union has been blessed with five children: Lizzie May, born in 1887; Elmer, born in 1889; Ivan, born in 1892; Alta, born in 1894; and Melvin, in 1899. The mother of this interesting and intelligent family was born in 1865, and is a lady noted for her gentle manners and kind deeds, both in her family and through the neighborhood.

Jacob B. Oberholtzer enjoys the esteem of the community, and has taken a great deal of interest in the various measures which have been inaugurated for the benefit of the district, and is one of the efficient school directors of West Earl township. In politics he is a Republican, and is much interested in public affairs, although he does not seek any recognition from the party, and is one of the valued members of the Old Mennonite Church, which claims, among its adherents, some of the best citizens of Lancaster county.

ROSS C. COLLINS. The Collins family, of which Ross C. Collins is a most worthy member, are among the few families who still hold land brought into their possession by ancestors 120 years ago. It has been represented by members prominent in business and educational circles, has scattered over a wide extent of country, and through intermarriage has become connected with many of the leading families of the State.

Thomas Collins, the father of Ross C., was born in Colerain township, this county, in 1796, son of James and Judith (Clarke) Collins, both of whom were born in Lancaster county, where they died, leaving these children, all now are deceased: Elizabeth was the wife of Edward Crawford, of Drumore township; Margaret was the wife of Elijah Morrell, of Drumore; Cornelius, born in this county, was a farmer and was a member of the Legislature for two terms (he left no family, and his wife died prior to his own demise); Thomas was the father of Ross C.

Thomas Collins grew up in Colerain township, and first married Grace McCollough, by whom he had seven children. Later, in 1851, he married Isabella Campbell, daughter of Ross A. and Sarah (Barkley) Campbell, who were both born and reared in this county. Mrs. Collins was born in June, 1824, and still survives. She is the mother of one son and two daughters, of whom Emma is the wife of W. P. Anderson, a farmer of Greene county, Ohio, and Bertha I. is instructor in French and Elocution in Tarkio College, Tarkio, Missouri.

Ross C. Collins, eldest child of Thomas and Isabella Collins, was born in Colerain township Jan. 1, 1854, and received his early education in the district schools of Colerain, taking an academic course at New London, and later entering Iberia College, in Ohio; in 1876 he became a student in the Westminster College, of Pennsylvania. With this thorough preparation he was fully capable of taking charge of and managing the large estate of his father, which he did until the death of the latter, in 1883. Then he purchased the old homestead, this farm having come into the family from William Penn himself, and a part of the original house which was erected by James Collins is still standing, in a good state of preservation, long after its first owner has crumbled into dust. This is one of the historic homes of the locality, filled with relics of an interesting period in the State's history.

Ross C. Collins was married, in 1879, to Miss Mary E. West, the estimable daughter of Clarkson and Isabel (Blair) West, prominent pioneer people, one of the most respected families in Harford county, Md. Mrs. Collins was born in 1855, in Harford county, and received her education in Lancaster county and in Hartford. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Collins: Isabel M., born in Colerain township in 1880, was given exceptional educational advantages, especially in music, for which she displayed remarkable talent, and graduated from the Conservatory of Music, in Baltimore, later adopting the profession of music teaching, which she follows in Cleveland, Ohio. Cassandra B., born in Colerain township in 1882, is a graduate of the high school at Quarryville, class of 1898, and was one of the most valued teachers in the public schools of Lancaster county; she is now in Cleveland, Ohio, on the staff of the Journal. Florence M., born in 1884, is also a graduate of the Quarryville high school, class of 1900; she was for a time a writer on the Cleveland (Ohio) Journal. Ross C., Jr., born on the old homestead in 1884, resides in Pittsburg. Clarkson W., born in 1886, was a skilled mechanic in the Baldwin Locomotive works, in Baltimore, but is now in Pittsburg. Bertha B., born in Colerain township in 1888, is a student in the home schools. All of this family display very remarkable intelligence, each being gifted in a different way. Mr. Collins has taken a just pride in affording them every possible educational advantage.

Following his marriage Mr. Collins settled on the old homestead, where he remained until 1894, at that date removing into Quarryville, where he owned a warehouse. He engaged in partnership with E. B. Fritz, the firm being Fritz & Collins, dealers in hay, straw, etc., and large shippers to Baltimore and other points. This association was continued for five years, and then Mr. Collins sold his interest and embarked in the livery and auctioneering business, in which he is still engaged. In this borough Mr. Collins has purchased what is locally known as the S. M. Hess home, and has made improvements thereon which have made it one of the most desirable residences in the locality.

Politically Mr. Collins has always been identified with the Republican party, and he is an ardent and faithful supporter of their men and measures. His influence in political circles in his vicinity is considerable. Many of the local offices of responsibility have been tendered him, and he has most efficiently served for three years as auditor of the borough. While still a resident of Colerain township he served as justice of the peace for eleven years, with judgment and discretion, and since locating in Quarryville has held the same office for one year. Mr. Collins was reared in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, his father and mother having been among the founders of that church in Colerain township. Mr. and Mrs. Collins are faithful attendants of and liberal contributors to the church, where they are most highly esteemed. For over fifty years the father of Mr. Collins was one of its elders, and all of the educational and benevolent enterprises of this body found in him, as in his son, an ardent and active supporter.

JOHN W. STEPHAN, one of the best-known business men of the borough of Ephrata, is the prosperous proprietor of the Ephrata Planing Mills, and the owner of considerable property in this locality.

Mr. Stephan comes of German ancestry and was born on March 14, 1864, a son of Frederick and Mary (Wertch) Stephan, natives of Wurtemberg, Germany, who came to America about 1854, landing in Philadelphia and coming from there to Lancaster county, where they knew they would find countrymen. Near other German citizens who had founded comfortable homes and become among the best residents of Clay township, Mr. and Mrs. Stephan bought a farm and settled down to an agricultural life, rearing a family of seven children: Charles, deceased; Henry, of Lancaster county; Samuel, of the borough of Ephrata; William, a cigar maker; John W.; Katie, who married Thomas Grand, of Millway; Jacob, who lives at Stevens Station, where he follows the trade of wagon-maker.

John W. Stephan was reared on a farm and received his education in the common schools of Clay township, but his inclinations did not lead him toward an agricultural life. At the age of twenty he began to learn the carpenter trade at Ephrata, under the wise supervision of M. D. Hoover, and this trade he followed successfully for some twelve years, at the end of this period going into the planing mill business; he is now the owner of his mill and a very comfortable dwelling, and has every promise of continued prosperity.

The marriage of Mr. Stephan was on Oct. 30, 1886, to Miss Mary Snader, a daughter of Jonathan and Catherine (Powell) Snader. Mr. Stephan was reared in very limited circumstances and was obliged to make his own way in the world without much assistance, but he possessed energy and determination and has placed himself with the substantial men of the borough. A staunch Republican, he takes an active and intelligent interest in public affairs, and lives an honest and upright life.

HARRY R. BOOKMAN. Like many of the leading citizens of Columbia, Pa., Mr. Bookman is connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He is a native of Lancaster county, born in West Hempfield township, Jan. 19, 1862, and is a son of William H. and Mary (Reitzler) Bookman. The mother was born Oct. 19, 1842.

William H. Bookman was born in York county, Pa., Oct. 15, 1842, and is a son of William and Elizabeth (Moore) Bookman, natives of York and Lancaster counties, respectively, who in 1847 removed to Mountville, Lancaster county, and in 1872 took up their residence in Columbia. William Bookman, the grandfather, was born Dec. 7, 1812, and died Dec. 7, 1896, his last years having been spent in retirement at the home of his son, William H., in Columbia. His wife was born September 17, 1809, and died May 4, 1875. They were members of the M. E. Church, and the parents of the following children: Margaretta and Catherine, who died in childhood; John, a retired stone mason of Columbia; William H., mentioned below; Samuel M., a soldier of the Civil war, who died in Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Mary A., wife of Michael Keach, baggage master at Columbia. Our subject's paternal great-grandfather, John Bookman, was of English extraction.

William H. Bookman, father of Harry R., was reared on a farm. In October, 1861, at Columbia, he enlisted in Co. K, 45th P. V. I., under Capt. Rambo, and re-enlisted at Knoxville, Tenn., in the same company and regiment, Dec. 31, 1863. He participated in the battles of Blaine's Cross Roads, Knoxville, Cold Harbor, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Petersburg and Poplar Grove. During the last named engagement he was taken prisoner, Sept. 30, 1864, and incarcerated at Salisbury, N. C., for five months, at the end of which time he was exchanged and paroled at Fort Fisher. At Annapolis he was granted a sixty-days furlough, as he was entirely unfit for active service, having been nearly starved to death while in prison. When his furlough expired he was discharged on account of disability, at Annapolis, in 1865, and returned home. After spending one year recuperating, he went to Columbia and entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman. A year later he was made flagman, and after serving as such two years was promoted to conductor, in which capacity he was employed until February 26, 1894, when he had a paralytic stroke while on duty at Glen Lock, Pa. He is still a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors, the Improved Order of Red Men, belongs to the M. E. Church, and is identified with the Republican party. On April 13, 1869, at Columbia, he married for his second wife Laura J. Reed, and to them came four children: Charles W., who died in childhood; Emma, deceased wife of Harry Gladfelter; William, a blacksmith of Columbia; and Carrie, wife of Joseph Keasie, a railroad brakeman of Columbia. Our subject's maternal grandparents were Joseph and Barbara (Weller) Reitzler, of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county.

During his minority Harry R. Bookman lived on a farm, and on coming to Columbia, in 1883, commenced work in a coalyard. A few months later, however, he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with which he has since been connected. He was employed on repairs two years and a half, was fireman twelve years, and has since efficiently served as engineer. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Knights of the Maccabees, of the Penn. Voluntary Relief Department, and the United Brethren Church. In politics he is a Republican, and he is one of the most progressive and public-spirited citizens of Columbia.

On Feb. 22, 1881, in Columbia, Mr. Bookman married Miss Sarah A. Murr, and to them were born two children, Ida M., who died in infancy, and Bertha, at home. Mrs. Bookman was born in New Holland, Lancaster Co., Pa., April 4, 1860, a daughter of Jacob and Katie (Rutter) Murr, who died in that place, the former in April, 1880, at the age of fifty-two years, the latter in July, 1860. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Murr four children were born, namely: Samuel, a tinner, living with Mr. Bookman; Harry, a resident of Gordonville, Pa.; Daniel, deceased; Sarah A., now Mrs. Bookman. The father, a carpenter and contractor by occupation, was three times married, his first wife being Maria Smith, by whom he had five children: George, a railroad engineer, of Columbia; Jacob and William, both blacksmiths of that place; Mary, deceased wife of John B. Rogers; and Emma, deceased wife of Salem Smith. Mr. Murr's second wife was the mother of Mrs. Bookman, and the third was Maria Foltz.

Michael Oberlin, the founder of the family in Pennsylvania, and a native of Germany, came early in life to Lancaster county and settled on Conestoga creek, near Hinkletown, and passed his life in farming. His son Jacob, great-grandfather of Howard L. Oberlin, moved from Hinkletown to Donegal, Lancaster county, early in 1800, and was also a farmer. He married a Miss Harter, of this county. Samuel Oberlin, son of Jacob, born in 1795, was first a coachmaker and later a farmer. The maternal grandfather of Luther Oberlin, David Cassel, who married Miss Hernley, was a merchant at Sporting Hill, Lancaster county, for some years, and thence moved to Marietta, where he built a large hotel known as the "St. John's House," which he conducted with phenomenal success for a decade or more. His son, Abraham, was postmaster of Marietta for twenty-five consecutive years.

Luther C. Oberlin passed his youthful days in the carriage factory his father conducted in Marietta, but in the meantime was educated at the Marietta Academy under Hon. J. P. Wickersham, who later became State superintendent of instruction. At the age of twenty years, in 1854, he himself began teaching in Hempfield township and followed the profession in several places until 1892. In 1880 he was appointed a census enumerator and in 1885 was elected justice of the peace, on the Republican ticket, and in this capacity is now serving his fourth term. Yergey, in Columbia, and afterward for a few months worked for him as a journeyman. In 1897 he started in business at the present stand. He also is a member of Lodge No. 80, I. O. O. F., and Artisans Lodge No. 20.

Abraham Burkholder was a son of Christian Burkholder, of Switzerland, who was the pioneer settler of the family in this county.

The marriage of Jacob S. Burkholder took place on Oct. 16, 1856, in Lancaster, to Mary Bender, and six children were born to this union: W. B. is the subject of this sketch. The birth of Mrs. Burkholder was in Earl township, Dec. 25, 1862, and she was a daughter of Daniel and Mary (Burkholder) Eshleman. Until about fifteen years prior to his death Mr. Eshleman was a farmer, but at that age he retired and moved into the village of Ephrata, where his death occurred. He was one of the wealthy and prominent citizens of the county.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Burkholder are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, where they are highly regarded. In politics our subject has been a life-long Republican, and is one of the most esteemed citizens of his township.

ENOS P. HAYES, a prominent farmer of Taylor, Pa., was born Feb. 7, 1855, and was a son of John P. and Elizabeth (Pennell) Hayes, of Little Britain township.

The Hayes family originated in Ireland, the founder of this family in Lancaster county being John Hayes, who left the Emerald Isle in youth, settled in this locality and became a large landowner and respected citizen. William Hayes, son of John, the emigrant, became the grandfather of Enos P. Hayes of this sketch. The other children of John Hayes were Charles and John.

William Hayes was born in 1797, married Jane Ewing and died in 1874. Their children were: John P., Calvin, Jane, James, Washington, Nathaniel, George and Margaret. The family was noted for its devotion to the Presbyterian Church and the Democratic party.

John P. Hayes, son of William, was born Feb. 14, 1822, and died in October, 1899. In 1849, he was married to Elizabeth Pennell, of Britain township, who was a daughter of John and Rebecca (Brown) Pennell, of Britain township. Six children were born to this union, five of whom grew to maturity: James Franklin, who is a druggist, in Philadelphia; Rebecca Jane, who conducts a dress-making establishment in Philadelphia; Enos P., of this sketch; William N., who is also in the drug business, in Philadelphia; Sarah H., who is the widow of Clarence Galbreath, of Oxford, Pa.; and Edward, deceased.

During life John P. Hayes was an industrious and highly esteemed citizen, and faithfully served his township as tax collector and assessor. His widow still survives, and resides in Oxford, Pa., having celebrated her seventy-second birthday on Oct. 15, 1902.

Enos P. Hayes of this sketch was reared on the farm and became thoroughly instructed in farm work, even while obtaining his education in the public schools. By the time he was ready to begin his own career, although with limited means, he had both experience and knowledge sufficient to enable him to succeed in his chosen line, and now he is the owner of one of the best farms in this locality, consisting of 125 acres, and improved with excellent buildings. Energy and industry have enabled Mr. Hayes to reach his present financial position, and his success illustrates, without farther comment, the sure result of properly applied energy.

The first marriage of Mr. Hayes was on Feb. 14, 1886, to Miss Ella King, of Little Britain township, who was a daughter of Marcenas and Isabel (Reath) King, of Britain township, and to this union three sons were born; Howard M., John P., and Marcenas. The death of Mrs. Hayes was in 1892.

On Jan. 16, 1901, Mr. Hayes was united in marriage to Miss E. Laura McLaughlin, of Britain township. (Extended mention of this well-known family will be found in another part of this volume.) They have one son, James McLaughlin Hayes, born Dec. 31, 1901.

Like his forefathers, Mr. Hayes is sincere in his devotion to the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church, and to the principles of the Democratic party. In his community he is known as a man of honor and responsibility, and the old stone house, now the family residence, erected over 100 years ago, offers hospitality to his many sincere friends.

Mrs. Jane (Bingham) Read was twice married, her first husband having been Capt. Patrick Marshall, of Revolutionary fame, who was killed in 1777. John and Ann Eliza (Read) Long were the parents of four children: Margaret J. died young; James Henry, born in August, 1825, died single; Mary I., born in 1832, married Benjamin Cutler; and John G. died young.

Irwin Cutler acquired his education in the public schools of Drumore township, and later took an academic course in the Chestnut Level Academy, of Drumore township. He has been interested in farming ever since, and owns one of the finest properties in this locality, and is one of the leading citizens. For five years he has been school director and for seventeen years was a trustee of the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church; at present he is one of the stockholders in a home telephone company, known as the Southern Telegraph and Telephone Co., of Lancaster county.

On Dec. 18, 1884, Mr. Cutler was married to Miss Annie B. Clark, of Drumore township, who was a daughter of A. Scott and Isabella (Neeper) Clark. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Cutler, but a little girl, Ertha Reifsnnyder, born on Sept. 16, 1880, was taken as their own, when she was quite small. Mr. and Mrs. Cutler are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and the family is one of the honored and leading ones of the county.

The first of the Clark family in America was John Clark, a native of Ireland. Thomas Clark, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Cutler, was born in Drumore township and became the father of the following children: William, born Sept. 4, 1754; Violet, born June 11, 1755; Jean, born on Feb. 25, 1757, married to James Ewing; Margaret, born Jan. 21, 1759, married to David Scott; Mary, born June 10, 1760, married to Mr. Hutchison; John, born June 13, 1762; Abraham, born Aug. 28, 1764; Thomas, born Aug. 22, 1765, went to New York; Elizabeth, born Nov. 11, 1767; Gabriel, born Oct. 12, 1769, a resident of New York; Robert, born April 18, 1772; and Margaret, born Aug. 8, 1774.

BENJAMIN M. HERSHEY, who is the proprietor of two threshing machine outfits, and devotes much of his time in season to their operation, was at one time an active farmer, and now has his home on his farm, which, however, is under the management of a son-in-law.

Mr. Hershey was born in Paradise township, Lancaster county, June 21, 1855, and is a son of Christian and Magdalina (Metzler) Hershey. His father, who was born in Salisbury township, died in Paradise township, in May, 1895, at the venerable age of eighty-four years. For more than twenty years he was a school director, and the utmost confidence was felt in the community both in his personal rectitude and in his business ability, a confidence that often took the expression of committing to him the settlement of important estates, and the administration of considerable trust funds. During his last fifteen years he lived a strictly retired life. Mrs. Magdalina Hershey, who was born in Paradise township in 1820, is still living on the old homestead, as active and as industrious as when younger, and is regarded by her family and the community with much reverent love and esteem as a lady of high character and Christian devotion. She became by her marriage with Mr. Hershey, the mother of the following children: Barbara, who married Elam Brackbill, of Paradise township; Mary, who married C. H. Brackbill, of Kinzers, Pa.; Abraham, of Detroit, Mich.; Benjamin, whose name appears above; Israel, who lives in Lancaster; Magdalina, who is unmarried, and lives at home; Joseph, who is at home, married; Amos, married, and is living at home; Sarah, who is the wife of Levi Wenger, a farmer of Leacock township.

Mr. Hershey was twice married, his first wife having been Barbara Stauffer, by whom he had two children, Isaac, who is dead, and Anna, who is the wife of Samuel Denlinger.

Benjamin M. Hershey was married Dec. 9, 1875, in Lancaster, Pa., to Barbara A. Kreider. To this union have come the following children: John K., who married Emma Sweigart, and is a farmer in Leacock township; Nettie A., who died at the age of nine years, and Cora M., at home, unmarried, twins; Anna M., who married Edwin Good, and lives at home, having one daughter; C. Her father was a farmer, and came to the present home of Mrs. Hershey when a lad of nine years of age. There he spent his life. He became a man of considerable prominence in the community in which he lived and was elected to various township offices. His death occurred in November, 1874, at the early age of forty-nine years. His widow passed to her reward in 1887, at the age of sixty years. Both were buried in the cemetery connected with the Mellinger Church. They were, like the parents of Mr. Hershey, members of the Mennonite Church. To them were born the following children: Abraham, who died in infancy; Barbara, who is Mrs. Hershey, noted above; Anna, who married a Dillinger, and is now dead; Jacob, who died in infancy. For the last five years he has been school director, and is one of the prominent and influential men in his community. In his politics he is a Republican, and in religion both he and his wife are devoted members of the Mennonite Church.

Weideler Business College, in Lancaster, Pa. When he had reached his majority he went to the western part of the country, and spent a year in Abilene, Kans., where he worked in a lumber yard. Returning to his native State, he engaged in the coal and feed business, building in 1885 the mill where he does his work. In 1882 he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and is regarded as one of the most efficient men on their lines.

Mr. Hostetter is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and belongs to Lodge N. 551, and is also a member of the order of K. of G. E. In his politics he is a Republican, and in his religion, a member of the United Brethren Church. HARRY M. HINKLE, the trusty young locomotive engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, of Columbia, was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., Oct. 3, 1862, and is a son of Joseph Hinkle, deceased, whose sketch will be found on another page.

Harry M. Hinkle farmed in West Hempfield township, until eighteen years of age; then he came to Columbia, and at the age of nineteen, began work as a fireman on the railroad, and at the end of nine years and five months was promoted to be engineer. Mr. Hinkle married at Columbia, in 1883, Miss Anna L. Wisler, and to this union has been born one child—Florence W., still at home.

Mrs. Anna L. (Wisler) Hinkle was born in Philadelphia, and is a daughter of Samuel Wisler, a native of Columbia county, and Hannah Immel, born at Kingessing, Philadelphia county. The mother died in Philadelphia in 1892, at the age of forty-six years. The father, who was born July 5, 1843, left Columbia about 1862, and settled in Philadelphia, and in the war of the Rebellion served for some time on guard duty. To Samuel and Hannah Wisler were born six children, to-wit: Anna L. (Mrs. Hinkle); Susie, wife of William Crawford, of Philadelphia, who has four children, Elsie, William, Ethel and Samuel; Fanny, married to Tom Tobin, of the same city, but residing with the father: they have two children, Melva and Thomas G.; Rachel, deceased; Samuel and Garfield, at home. The family are members of the Christian Church.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Hinkle were Michael and Martha (Cressinger) Wisler, and the maternal grandparents were Alexander and Hannah Immel.

Harry M. Hinkle is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen; with his family he is a member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics is a Republican.

David Hinkle, uncle of Harry M. Hinkle, was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., March 13, 1842, a son of Henry and Sarah (McGee) Hinkle, who came to Columbia in 1839, where the father died in 1872, at seventy-four years of age, and she in 1866, aged sixty-one, both members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: John, deceased; Rebecca, deceased wife of Christian Hershey; Isaac, a retired farmer of Wrightsville; Joseph, deceased; William and Charles, deceased; Catherine, wife of William Hardy, a blacksmith in Columbia; and David. The grandfather of David was John, better known as Hans Hinkle, a native of Germany, who came to America at the beginning of the Revolutionary war, in which he served as teamster. After the war he lived on a rented farm in West Hempfield township, on which he toiled until his death in 1840, at eighty years of age. The farm is now within the borough of Columbia. The last ten years of David's life were spent in retirement.

ELI W. DAVIS, a farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born on the farm which he now owns, and which is his home at the present time, March 21, 1851, his parents being Joseph B. and Elizabeth Davis. Both his parents were born in Lancaster county, the father in 1818, and the mother in 1812. She was a daughter of Abner and Barbara (Hess) Davis. Abner Davis was born near Philadelphia, and came of a mingled German and Welsh ancestry. He was born in 1783, and served in the war of 1812. His death occurred in 1863.

Joseph B. Davis, the father of Eli W., was a son of Eli and Catherine (Sellers) Davis. Eli Davis made a home in Sadsbury township, where he lived and died, leaving a family of four children: Eliza died unmarried; Anna married Elisha Harper, and moved to Iowa, where she died; Sarah Davis married James Prentice, who moved to Columbus, Ohio, where she died (they had one son, Alvin Prentice, who now lives in Chicago); and Joseph B. Davis was reared in Chester county, where he became a wheelwright, an occupation he followed at Andrew's Bridge, Colerain township, for some years. He married Elizabeth Davis in 1844; five years later he purchased the farm, which is now the home and property of Eli W., and there he lived the balance of his life. Good substantial buildings were put up by him, and many improvements effected on the farm. He died in December, 1897, his widow following him the following June. They left a son and a daughter. Both father and mother were members of the Presbyterian Church, and were active workers in the church at Union many years. In politics Mr. Davis was a staunch Republican, and though he never sought or aspired to office, was assessor for two years in Colerain township.

Emma Davis, the daughter of this family, was born in 1848, and with her brother received instruction of Thomas Baker, in his private school, and of Prof. Andrews, at the Union High School. For some ten years she was a successful teacher in the county schools. She married John M. Rutter, of Sadsbury township, where they reside on his farm, with their four children: Howard T., Abner Davis, Emile and Bessie.

Eli W. Davis studied at the Baker Private School and in the Union High School under Prof. Andrews, becoming well informed. He remained at home with his parents, and for about ten years was the manager of his father's farm. His father was a confirmed invalid some ten years before his death, and his care fell very largely upon the son, who was tender and devoted to his ailing sire. In May, 1883, he married Miss Mary B. Newcomer, the daughter of Louis R. and Esther (Brosius) Newcomer.

Mr. Newcomer was born in Washington Co., Md., in 1819. His wife, Esther, was born in Chester county, in 1825. They lived in Baltimore, where Mr. Newcomer was superintendent in the post office for thirty-two years. In 1870 he purchased the Mahlon Brosius homestead in Chester county, where they lived until 1900, when they became inmates of the home of Mrs. Davis. They have two sons and a daughter. Mary B. is the wife of Mr. Davis. She was born in Baltimore in 1850, and secured her education in her native city. Howard K. Newcomer was born in Baltimore, in 1852, and is now a resi-

Mr. and Mrs. Davis belong to the Union Presbyterian Church. Mr. Davis votes the Republican ticket. The father was a man of excellent character and his only surviving son does honor to his instruction and rearing.

MICHAEL BECKER, general manager of the Mt. Hope grist, saw and feed mill, farms, furnaces, etc., comprising an area of 2,000 acres in Lebanon and Lancaster counties, was born in October, 1828, four miles from the town of Lebanon, Lebanon county, son of John and Hannah (Brandt) Becker, of Lebanon, and later of Lancaster county.

John Becker, the father, moved from Lebanon to Lancaster county in 1846, and settled in Rapho township, residing there until his demise, in 1875, at the age of sixty-six years. His wife died in 1880, and both are buried in private grounds on the old homestead of his mother. There were born to John Becker the following children: Michael; John B., who was accidentally killed with his wife by a railroad train several years ago; Henry B., who died on the old homestead; Catherine B., wife of Christ Shelley; Anna B., wife of Jacob Fisher; Sarah B., deceased wife of Jere Obetz; and Moses B., a blacksmith, who died at his home near White Oak some time ago.

The grandparents of Michael Becker on his father's side were Nicholas and Catherine (Rudy) Becker, of Lebanon county, where they remained until their demise, Mr. Becker being a veterinary and blacksmith of considerable prominence. The father of Nicholas Becker fought under Gen. Washington, in the Revolutionary war. The family is of Swiss origin. Michael Becker's maternal grandfather was John Brandt, a farmer of Lancaster county, also of Swiss origin.

Michael Becker married Miss Anna Nauman, of Lancaster county, in October, 1855, and to this union were born the following children: John, unmarried, is a dry-goods merchant of Manheim, Pa. Lizzie, wife of Joseph Baker, a hotel-keeper of Lititz, has three children. Maria died at the age of eight years. Henry B. died in infancy. Alfred died in infancy. Michael, who lives at home, acts as assistant to his father; he was married, June 28, 1902, to Carrie B. Weidler, daughter of I. M. Weidler, of Rothsville, where she was born and reared.

Mrs. Michael Becker was born in Rapho township in 1834, daughter of Samuel and Anna (Shelley) Nauman, of Lancaster county. The family is of Swiss descent.

Michael Becker was reared on his father's farm, and remained with his parents until he became of age, meantime attending school under Baron Stigle, who at one time owned the Elizabeth furnace. During vacations and other spare times he worked on the farm. Soon after becoming of age, in company with his brother John, he opened a blacksmith shop in Rapho township, and combined this business with that of hauling for the Grubb family, large employers of the locality. Mr. Becker has worked for the Grubbs almost continuously for the past forty years, first with A. B. Grubb, for twenty-two years, as assistant manager; in 1885, upon the death of Mr. Grubb, he became general manager, and still fills this responsible position.

Mr. Becker is a Republican in politics, and has been postmaster at Mt. Hope since the death of Mr. Grubb, the former occupant of the office for many years. Mr. Becker is careful and painstaking in everything he undertakes, and the result is that nothing he attempts miscarries. His record is one of which any man may well be proud, and his standing in his community is as high as that of any other member.

S. H. BINGEMAN, one of the leading and enterprising citizens of Clay township, a justice of the peace, appointed June 12, 1902, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his brother, H. H. Bingeman, and a well-known cigar manufacturer of that place, was born Oct. 27, 1846, in Ephrata township, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Hacker) Bingeman, both deceased.

Samuel Bingeman, the father of S. H. Bingeman, was a much esteemed citizen of Ephrata township, a shoemaker by trade and a Republican in politics. He became the father of nine children, eight of whom grew to maturity. The record is as follows: Levi, deceased; Daniel, deceased; George H., of St. Joseph, Mo.; Henry H., now deceased, a justice of the peace in Clay township for twenty-five years; Priscilla, widow of Samuel Resser, of Clay township; S. H., our subject; and Elizabeth, wife of William Valentine, of Clay township.

Then he went into the business of cigar manufacturing and for twelve years has been a leader in that line in Clay township, his home and business being located in Hopeland, where he has been postmaster for some time. In politics Mr. Bingeman is a staunch Republican and has taken an active interest in the affairs of his party in this section. For several years he has served as a very efficient school director and is prominent in all enterprises looking toward the development of Clay township. Mr. Bingeman was reared by pious parents in the belief of the United Brethren Church, and both he and his wife are consistent members of the same, in Hopeland, and generous in its support.

On Sept. 23, 1871, Mr. Bingeman was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Ruth, daughter of William and Susannah Ruth, and this marriage has been blessed with two children, namely: Alice, born Dec. 18, 1873, married John G. Donough, of Hopeland, and they have two children, Elmer and Grant; and Harvey M., now postmaster of Hopeland, born Sept. 3, 1874, married Miss Lydia Noll, of Clay township, and they have one son, Milton Dewey, and one daughter, Virgie May.

Mr. Bingeman enjoys the respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens and is justly regarded as one of the reliable representatives and substantial men of Clay township.

WILLIAM R. ROGERS. This well-known and popular citizen of Columbia is one of the Pennsylvania Company's experienced and trusted engineers. He was born in Wrightsville, York county, on Aug. 31, 1858, and is the eldest of five children born to Samuel S. and Sarah (Cohick) Rogers, of that county, his parents having married July 4, 1856. His younger brother, Americus V., conducts a well equipped barber shop in Columbia; his sister, Christina, is the wife of Joseph Archer, a railroad conductor, and lives in Philadelphia. The two younger children, Grant and Byron, died in infancy. Samuel S. Rogers was a gallant Union soldier during the Civil war, a member of the 145th P. V. I., and received a Confederate bullet in his arm. He was a carpenter, and after receiving his discharge, worked at his trade in his native bailiwick. He died at the age of sixty-three years, in 1895. He was the son of an English immigrant, Robert Rogers, who married Elizabeth Sloat, of York county. The father was employed in building the old State road and later in the construction of the Pennsylvania line; he died in 1872. Samuel S. Rogers, the father of William R., was the eldest of their three children, the others being John and Mary A.

As has been already said, the maiden name of the mother of William R. Rogers was Sarah Cohick. Her father, Robert, was a railroad man, and lost his life in an accident on Jan. 16, 1861, having reached the age of forty-eight years. He married Christina Buckin, who first saw the light as it shone upon the crested billows of the Atlantic. Her parents settled at Rohrerstown. Her mother lived to be four score years and died on March 13, 1890. Her younger sisters were Clara (Mrs. Robert Hall), of Columbia; Mahala, the widow of William Allen, of Philadelphia; Anna M., the wife of Elliott Frederick, of the same city; and Amelia, who married David Coleman, the proprietor of a barber shop in Columbia.

At the age of five, in 1863, William R. Rogers came to live with his grandmother in Lancaster county, but returned home after four years. There he remained until his marriage to Miss Eva McClane, which occurred on Sept. 5, 1891. They have had two sons, Grant G. and John F. Mr. Rogers is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; in politics a Republican, and in religious faith, a Lutheran.

Mrs. Rogers is the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Morrison) McClane, of Adams county. Her father was a shoemaker and a justice of the peace, and died in May, 1896, in his eighty-second year. Her mother, who was born in May, 1827, is still living in Manor township. Besides Mrs. Rogers, eight children were born to them: Mary, John, Joseph, Susan, Douglas, Christian, George and Levi. Only three of these are living. Joseph is a resident of Marietta, Pa., and Douglas of Port Royal, in this State. Susan is the wife of Henry Wise, of Petersburg.

CLARENCE B. HERSHEY, a leading business man of Mt. Joy, Pa., who is engaged in the insurance business and is also a justice of the peace and pension agent, was born in Florin, Mt. Joy township, on Nov. 21, 1862, a son of Christian and Fanny (Brenneman) Hershey, of Lancaster county. Christian Hershey was born near Mt. Joy, and carried on a business in carpentering and cabinet-making until his death, in 1876, at the age of sixty-eight. His widow survives and resides in Mt. Joy; she early united with the religious denomination known as Church of God. Clarence B. Hershey, of this biography, was their only child. The second union of Mrs. Hershey was to Frederick Gantz and the two children born of that marriage were: Gertrude, who died in infancy; and Joseph B., a resident of Mt. Joy, now engaged in plumbing. The death of Frederick Gantz took place in 1890. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Hershey were Isaac and Anna, of Lancaster county, and those on the maternal side were Joseph and Nancy (Bossler) Brenneman, also of this county.

Clarence B. Hershey was reared in the village of Florin, where he attended school until he was nine years old, and then accompanied his parents to Mt. Joy, where at the age of fourteen he began to learn the trade of cigar-making. This business he followed for ten years, and then entered a newspaper office and became a typesetter, remaining in the printing business for four years; he is thus equipped with two trades. However, Mr. Hershey has been ambitious and has been very successful in still another line, that of insurance, and now handles both fire and life insurance, representing some of the best known and most substantial companies in the country; he carries on a real estate agency and also deals in typewriters and typewriter supplies. On Feb. 21, 1899, he was made justice of the peace, and since that time has devoted himself very closely to the duties of the office.

On one occasion this position nearly cost him his life. On Oct. 2, 1902, while at the supper table, he was assaulted by a man who had a fancied grievance against him. His assailant had given the justice a bill to collect for him and had been promised its payment on Oct. 4th. Being, however, under the influence of liquor, he imagined that Mr. Hershey had kept the money himself, and so attacked him with a pocket-knife. The culprit was placed under arrest for a preliminary hearing and then committed to prison for trial at court in November, 1902.

Socially, Mr. Hershey is connected with the Foresters of America, in which order he has held many of the offices; and is also a member of the Junior O. U. A. M., and the O. S. B., of Mt. Joy. In politics he is an ardent Republican, and his religious connection is with the Church of God. In every way, Mr. Hershey is a rising young man, and enjoys the esteem and confidence of the citizens of Mt. Joy, who see in him a thoroughly representative citizen.

ANDREW JACKSON. Among the leading and representative citizens of Little Britain township, Lancaster Co., Pa., is Andrew Jackson, who was born in Britain township, on Nov. 4, 1854, a son of Robert and Eliza (Irwin) Jackson, deceased.

Robert Jackson was born in County Armagh, Ireland, in 1828, and died in Britain township, April 8, 1898, having come to America when still a young man. His wife was born in 1830, and died in 1893. They were the parents of eight children: Margaret, second wife of Dr. McNutt, a physician of Philadelphia; John, a thrifty farmer of Britain township (whose sketch appears elsewhere); Andrew; Mary, who died in childhood; Robert, a farmer of Kirk's Mills, Pa.; Mary, wife of Fred Gregg, a farmer of Drumore township; Joseph, one of the leading farmers of Britain township (whose sketch appears elsewhere); Ella, wife of George Pollock, a dry goods merchant. The father, Robert Jackson, was a hard-working, industrious man, and a life-long Democrat.

Andrew Jackson, of this biography, was educated in the district schools and early learned the work of a farmer. All his life, he has tilled the soil, and now is the owner of one of the best farms in Lancaster county, on which he carries on general farming, and also is an extensive stock dealer, being very successful in both vocations. His residence is a fine, two-story brick building, and his stable and outbuildings are thoroughly up-to-date in their arrangements and appointments. Mr. Jackson is a man who believes in the employment of improved machinery in his work, and his well-cultivated acres testify to his practical knowledge of his vocation. As his parents grew older, Mr. Jackson tenderly cared for them, and helped to educate his youngest sister, Ella.

On June 23, 1887, Mr. Jackson was married to Emma Runner, of Little Britain township, a daughter of Samuel and Annie (Pierce) Runner, of Cecil Co., Md. Mrs. Jackson was one of a family of seven children: William, of Britain township; George, of Britain township; Rebecca, wife of J. M. Wilson, a farmer of Little Britain township (whose sketch appears elsewhere); Rachel, wife of Irvin Hill, of Cecil Co., Md.; Taylor, of Britain township; John, of Britain township; and Emma. The Runner family is of English descent and among the old settlers of Lancaster county.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson are: Leiper G., born on May 8, 1888; Anna E., born March 17, 1889; Flora R., born Sept. 10, 1890; William A., born Nov. 27, 1892; Rachel E., born Oct. 27, 1894. Mrs. Jackson was born April 18, 1854, and is a lady of gentle disposition, kind and capable, and much beloved by all who know her.

Mr. Jackson is a strong Democrat and has always taken an active part in local affairs. In 1899, he was the Democratic nominee for sheriff of Lancaster, and ran ahead of his ticket, making a good race, although, the county going Republican, he was not elected. At present he is county committeeman, and is very influential in party councils. Having gained the esteem of his neighbors, Mr. Jackson occupies a position of prominence in the township, and whether in business life, among his political friends, or in his home, he is looked up to and respected by all with whom he comes in contact.

ALBERT R. BEAR, senior member of the well-known lumber firm of Bear & Long, at Lititz, Pa., was born in Upper Leacock township, Lancaster county, Nov. 24, 1850, a son of Grabill and Anna (Reist) Bear. His boyhood and youth were spent partly in his native township and partly in Manheim township, and his education was acquired in the public schools. From 1875 to 1883, he clerked in Harnish & Company's store, Lancaster. In 1883 he made his first business venture as a lumber dealer in Lititz with William C. Evans, under the firm name of Evans & Bear. This connection continued three years, when Mr. Evans retired and was succeeded by John B. Hess, the firm name being changed to Hess & Bear. On the death of Mr. Hess, in 1890, Adam B. Long became associated in business with Mr. Bear, under the style of Bear & Long, by which name the firm is still known. They do the largest business in their line of any company in the city, and Mr. Bear devotes his undivided attention to it.

On Feb. 22, 1877, Mr. Bear was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie Grosh, a native of Manheim township, Lancaster county, and a daughter of Daniel and Sarah Grosh. Two children bless this union, Bessie May and Ruth Agnes.

Mr. Bear is one of the leading and representative men of his borough, is wide-awake and progressive, and affiliates with the Republican party. He is an active member of the Moravian Church and the Y. M. C. A., of Lititz, and is also a member of the WILLIAM SCHLOTT. Coming to America with his parents when a child of only two years, this prominent young farmer of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was reared in Pennsylvania. Having the taste for an active life, he devoted the earlier years of manhood largely to the carpenter's trade. More recently he has adopted an agricultural career and has become one of the leading and successful farmers of Lancaster county.

John Schlott, the father, in his last years a retired farmer at Mountville, Pa., was born in Prussia, Germany, Aug. 8, 1827, the son of Frederick and Anna Mary (Ruse) Schlott. Frederick Schlott entered the army at the age of seventeen years and, after his military service, became a carpenter and farmer in Germany. He died in 1857, aged seventy years, and his wife, born in 1791, survived to the age of sixty-nine years. To Frederick and Anna Mary Schlott were born children as follows: Frederick, who was a shoemaker and is now deceased; Conrad, who died young; Elizabeth, who died young; Elizabeth (2), now deceased, who married Frank Short, of Germany, by whom she had a daughter, whose son is a priest; John; Mary Catherine, who died at the age of twenty-three years; Catherine Margaret, widow of Henry Huth, of Lancaster. John Schlott married in Germany, in 1855, Miss Margaret Moses. He followed farming in the Fatherland and became a large land owner. Selling his property there, he, in 1865, migrated to America and first located in West Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., but later removed to Columbia, and thence to Mountville. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, of Columbia, and in politics was a Democrat. He prospered in America and was the owner of large estates. His death occurred March 24, 1901. Children were born to John and Margaret (Moses) Schlott as follows: Henry, a butcher at Mountville, Pa.; Caroline, wife of Israel Garber, of West Hempfield township; William, a farmer of West Hempfield, a sketch of whom appears below; Minnie, who married Alvin Hershey and is now deceased; Maggie, wife of John Sprout, a molder, of York; Katie, wife of William Lehman, a railroad man, of Columbia; and Lizzie, wife of Daniel W. Sheaffer, for a time agent for the Swift Meat Company, Lancaster, Pa., but now in business for himself, at 416-418 N. Pine street, Lancaster.

William Schlott, son of John and Margaret (Moses) Schlott, was born in Germany, March 3, 1863, and two years later was brought by his parents to America. At the age of sixteen years he began a three-years apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, with John M. Froelick, of Mountville, and at the completion of this term he followed his trade for a period of twelve years. In 1894 he concluded to adopt farming as his vocation and he began his agricultural life on one of his father's farms, in West Hempfield township. His present farm of eighty-five acres he purchased from Abraham Leonard in the spring of 1900.

In 1885 he married in Columbia, Miss Anna W. Cooper, by whom he has two children, Mabel and Maggie. For his second and present wife, he, in 1895, married Miss Katie B. Mellinger, a native of East Donegal township, Lancaster county, daughter of Henry and Fanny (Bucker) Mellinger, now residents of Columbia. Henry Mellinger was born in Lancaster county, Dec. 14, 1837, and is a blacksmith by trade. Fanny, his wife, daughter of Christian Bucker, of Lancaster county, was born Aug. 14, 1838. To Henry and Fanny Mellinger were born five children. Of these, David, Elmer and Harry are deceased; Christ is foreman in the roundhouse at Columbia, and Katie B. is the wife of William Schlott.

In politics William Schlott is a Democrat. He possesses the thrift, industry and other sterling virtues of his fatherland, and with these he has united the progressiveness and adaptability of his adopted country. He is one of the valuable and prominent citizens of Lancaster county, having won an enviable standing in the community in which he has made his home.

EZRA H. BURKHOLDER, justice of the peace, of Farmersville, West Earl township, is one of the most widely known citizens of Lancaster county. The family were among the early settlers of this section, his great-grandfather, Abraham Burkholder, a farmer, being born in the county.

Christian Burkholder, son of Abraham and grandfather of Ezra, was born in what was then known as Earl township, now West Earl township, and there engaged in farming until his death, in 1871, at the age of eighty years.

Ezra Burkholder, son of Christian, was a printer, surveyor and conveyancer, who was born in West Earl township, and who died there, in 1890, aged sixty-three years, respected by all who knew him. At the age of twenty-three he was made deputy registrar of wills under the late George Brubaker, Esq., serving from 1849 to 1851. After leaving the registrar's office, Mr. Burkholder was elected to the office of justice of the peace, of West Earl township. Many public positions were tendered him in the course of his career, which were always refused, as he preferred to serve the people in legal matters at home. He was an expert scrivener and drew up his legal papers with the skill of an attorney. A man of high principles, he was entrusted with the settlement of many estates. He was a director in the Ephrata National Bank, an active spirit in that institution, and always manifested much interest in its success. In his disposition he was charitable, but made no display of his benefactions. He married Miss Magdalena A. Hoffman, daughter of Christian Hoffman, a merchant of Voganville, Earl township. Six children were born of this union, five of whom are living: Ezra H.; Mary, wife of Volney C. Sheets, of Red Run, Brecknock township; Amanda, wife of Oscar Hackman, of Ephrata; Frances, wife of Joseph K. Tobias, of Ephrata; Amos E., of Farmersville; and Christian, who died in infancy.

Ezra H. Burkholder was born in West Earl township, Nov. 4, 1854, and was educated in the public schools of the district. Upon leaving school he entered his father's printing office and soon learned the trade of printer, to which he added the duties of surveyor and conveyancer, so that when his father died, his place was very capably filled by his son, now the widely known justice. With slight intermissions, he has held this office from the age of twenty-one, until the present time. His administration of the law is so correct that he is often consulted on intricate legal problems arising in the neighborhood. The Squire was elected county surveyor some dozen years ago, and has many times been elected a delegate to Republican county and State conventions.

Mr. Burkholder was married to Miss Elizabeth S. Weidler, daughter of Jacob G. Weidler, a well-known farmer of Upper Leacock township, where he still resides. Mr. Burkholder is a member of the Reformed Church, and has been an elder of St. Paul's Reformed Church, of the New Holland charge, for years, and superintendent of the Sunday School for over twenty years. He has often been a delegate from his church to the Reformed Synods. The Squire wields a ready pen, and twice in his life has edited newspapers—The West Earl Banner and The Guiding Star. He is a director and secretary in the Earl Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Lancaster county; a director and secretary, from its organization, of the Old Guard Fire and Storm Insurance Company, headquarters at Lancaster; a director in the People's National Bank of Lancaster, being one of the organizers of that and of the People's Trust Company; and a director of the Lancaster Chemical Company. Besides all these interests, he carries on a business of conveyancer, and handles extensive real estate interests. He is always able, however, to find time to give a friend a pleasant word, and a more kindly man is not to be found anywhere.

RUFUS D. GREYBILL, a highly respected citizen of Talmage, and one of the most prosperous of the county's business men, is proprietor of the Talmage Roller and Flour Mills, located in West Earl township.

Henry B. Greybill, father of R. D., was born in 1825, in Schaefferstown, Lebanon county, and died in 1894, deeply mourned by all who knew him. For many years he was a successful merchant of Talmage, and also proprietor of the Talmage Grist Mills, leaving at his death a valuable estate, all accumulated by his own efforts, as he commenced business life a comparatively poor man, save in ambition and enterprise. In politics he was first a Whig and later a Republican, and in religious faith was a member of the German Baptist Church. In 1850 Henry B. Greybill married Elizabeth R. Deppen, daughter of Samuel Deppen, of Wernersville, Berks county, and four children were born to them: Emma, deceased in childhood; John, a miller in Carlisle, Pa.; Samuel, living retired in Talmage, Lancaster county; and Rufus D., of whom this sketch more particularly relates. The mother of this interesting family is yet living, at the advanced age of seventy-four years, having been born in 1826, highly esteemed and surrounded by hosts of friends.

Rufus D. Greybill received a liberal education at the common schools of Talmage, and secured his business training in his father's store, at the same time learning the milling business. Since 1896 he has successfully conducted, as proprietor, the Talmage Roller and Flour Mills, which have a wide reputation for the excellent quality of their products. In politics he takes little active interest, although as a staunch Republican he never fails to support his party and makes himself felt at the polls. Mr. Greybill has not married. He deserves the high regard in which he is held by the community.

DAVID K. MOHLER eminently deserves classification among the purely self-made men of Lancaster county who have distinguished themselves for their ability to master the opposing forces of life and wrest from fate a large measure of success and an honorable name. He is to-day one of the leading business men of Lancaster.

A native of Lancaster county, Mr. Mohler was born in Ephrata, Oct. 27, 1869, and is a son of David and Susan (Keller) Mohler. He was reared at home until thirteen years of age, when his father died and he started out in life for himself. His education was obtained in the public schools. After working on a farm two years, he devoted six months to cigarmaking, and then worked at the tinsmith's trade for one year in Ephrata. The following four years were spent in Manheim, and at the end of that period he went to Harrisburg, where he remained some six months. Going to Millersburg, Berks Co., Pa., he opened a stove and tinware store, and also carried on a manufacturing department, doing a successful business there for two years and a half. In 1894 he returned to Manheim, and embarked in business as a dealer in stoves, tinware and house furnishing goods and a manufacturer of tinware. He carried a large and well selected stock of goods and furnished employment to two men. In 1896 he became interested in the marble business and manufactured all kinds of monuments. In 1900 he erected a large building to be used as a dwelling, ware room and marble shop.

In the latter part of that same year he sold out his business interests at Manheim, retaining only his real estate, and located at Lancaster, where he now resides. In 1901 Mr. Mohler went to Syracuse, N. Y., to work for the Kelsey Heating Company for the purpose of learning more about their system of heating. At the beginning of 1902 he secured the agency for Lancaster county for the sale of the Kelsey Warm Air Generator, in which capacity he is now exclusively engaged, covering an extensive territory. He is one of the most progressive young business men of the county and is strictly self-made as he started out in life for himself a poor boy, and with no assistance has already accomplished in a business way what it takes most men many long years to do. He is an active member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics in Manheim, and he and his family are among the most worthy and highly respected citizens of that place.

Mr. Mohler was married, in 1892, to Miss Barbara Felker, a native of Rapho township, Lancaster county, and a daughter of Samuel Felker. They now have two children, Irvin and Edna.

CLAYTON ERB, one of the honorable citizens and leading farmers of Martic township, was born on the farm that he now has charge of, on March 17, 1858. His parents were John and Maria (Witmer) Erb, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county, the former being born in West Lampeter on Aug. 25, 1814, and dying on Dec. 31, 1894. His widow still survives and resides on the old home place. She was born on Feb. 2, 1824, and was married to Mr. Erb, Aug. 13, 1840, becoming the beloved mother of a family of twelve children. Some of these have passed out of life, the family names being: Susan, born May 19, 1841, who resides with her mother; Amaziah, born May 6, 1842, died June 19, 1872; Anna E., born April 26, 1844, died May 11, 1866; John, born April 17, 1847, died Dec. 26, 1882; Mahlon, born Dec. 13, 1848, mentioned elsewhere in this volume; Amanda, born Dec. 11, 1851, died Dec. 4, 1852; Henry, born April 15, 1853, a merchant in Martic township; Mary J., born Oct. 8, 1854, residing at home; Emanuel W., born July 25, 1856, died April 21, 1892; Clayton; Frank, born Nov. 13, 1860, a miller in Martic township; and William W., born on Nov. 26, 1863.

Clayton Erb was educated in the public schools and has put his knowledge to good purpose in the successful management of the home farm, which consists of 205 acres. In this work he has taken a deep interest, and, being a progressive and energetic man, has made use of modern methods and machinery with excellent results. His farm is one of the best in this locality and shows the results of the care and attention he has given it. The marriage of Clayton Erb was on June 3, 1884, to Miss Hattie Wissler, a daughter of Elias and Anna Wissler, and to them have been born a family of eleven children, nine of these still surviving: Anna W., born Aug. 25, 1885; John W., born Dec. 8, 1886; Clayton, born Feb. 14, 1888; Edna, born May 2, 1889; Maria, born Dec. 28, 1890; Susan, born May 12, 1892; Esther, born Feb. 28, 1894; Fannie, born Dec. 7, 1895; Elias, born Aug. 14, 1897, died Dec. 17, 1898; Ada, born April 25, 1900; Enos, born May 7, 1902, died May 19, 1902.

Mr. Erb is a man of intelligence, who believes in progress and development, doing at all times his full duty to advance the best interests of his locality. As one of the efficient school directors of his township he looks carefully after the interests of the rising generation, believing that knowledge is power. In politics he is identified with the Republican party, and while liberal in his religious views, he gives his influence at all times in the direction of morality. Not only does he manage his large estate with capability, but in township and county matters, as well as in the domestic circle, he proves himself an important and valued adviser, a thoroughly upright man.

CHARLES G. HANNA, one of the thrifty young farmers of Fulton township, Lancaster county, was born Nov. 9, 1863, and was a son of James A. and Mary C. (Anderson) Hanna, also of this county. The founder of this branch of the family in Pennsylvania was John Hanna, who came in early days from Ireland. James A. Hanna, the father of Charles G., was a son of James and Esther (Ailes) Hanna, whose children, besides James A., were: Rebecca, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Martha, the widow of Daniel Carter, of the State of Washington; Matilda, the wife of Edward Tollinger, of Fulton township; Edith, deceased; Andrew, deceased; and John and Marion, deceased.

This marriage was blessed with four children: Ralph, who died young; Eva, who is the wife of John Moore, of Wilmington, Del.; Charles G., who is our subject; and Mary, who also died in childhood. James A. Hanna was one of the most highly respected citizens of his neighborhood, his upright life reflecting honor upon himself and upon his descendants.

Charles G. Hanna grew to manhood on the farm and received a practical education in agricultural pursuits while attending the district schools. In the management of his fine seventy-acre farm he has put his knowledge to the test, and this has resulted in his gaining the just reputation of being one of the best and most progressive farmers of this part of the county.

The marriage of Mr. Hanna was on Dec. 26, 1899, to Miss Mabel Neff, who was born on Jan. 1, 1881, and who was a daughter of Samuel and Bell Neff, of Fulton township. Her brothers and sisters were: Viola, the wife of William Fagan; Sarah, wife of Clinton Love, of Maryland; Amos; Samuel; Ida; and Lawrence. The only child born to Mr. Hanna and wife is Mary, born Oct. 26, 1900.

Charles G. Hanna is one of the leading young men of this part of the county, and a most worthy representative of a family which has long been prominent in the county. From the time of his great-grandfather, who was a major in command of a militia company in the war of 1812, and his grandfather, who for so long was a justice of the peace and a well-known citizen, to himself, the name has been one of honor in Lancaster county. In politics Mr. Hanna has been a life-long Democrat. His religious connection is with the Primitive Baptists.

BARBARA A. CHARLES belongs to one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county.

Henry Charles, her grandfather, lived and died in Conestoga township, where he spent a lifetime in the cultivation of the soil. In her religious faith she follows the steps of her ancestors and is a faithful and loyal member of the Old Mennonite Church. Conspicuous for her womanly qualities and real worth, she has many friends in the community in which she is passing her quiet and helpful life.

Martin was born in the present home, where she has lived so many years, June 26, 1846, and is a daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Goss) Heisey, both natives of West Donegal township, and all their lives devoted to farming.

Rev. Jacob N. Martin followed farming until 1898, when he retired. In 1885 he was ordained a minister of the Brethren in Christ Church, and is still engaged actively in the work of the pulpit.

Abner H. Martin was married to Fanny H. Zercher in Oct., 1898. Mrs. Martin is the estimable daughter of Jacob Zercher, of East Donegal township, whose personal and family history is given in another place. She was born in East Donegal May 21, 1877, and is a bright and charming young woman.

In 1881 Mr. Martin came with his parents to the farm on which he is now located, and this has been his home ever since. He belongs to the Brethren in Christ, and is an upright and industrious young man, well thought of in the community where he lives.

JOHN HERR KRANTZ, one of the progressive young farmers of Paradise township, was born in West Lampeter township, this county, March 3, 1874, son of John and Fannie (Herr) Krantz.

Mr. Krantz was reared in Strasburg township, where he received his education in the public schools. At the age of twenty-one he began operations on his own account. For three years he worked by the year at farm work, and after his marriage he continued at day work until the spring of 1900, when he purchased his present farm of thirty-seven acres, one of the fertile and well-cultivated farming properties in Paradise township. It is located one and one-quarter miles east of Strasburg borough. Mr. Krantz is engaged in general farming, and is recognized as one of the enterprising and industrious citizens of his township. On Dec. 1, 1897, he married Miss Millie Kachel, who was born in Drumore township Nov. 21, 1878, daughter of Ezra and Mary (May) Kachel. To Mr. and Mrs. Krantz has been born one daughter, Mildred.

In politics Mr. Krantz is a Republican, wide-awake and earnest in public questions, whether local or national, and interested in all matters pertaining to the general welfare. He is well liked for his many sterling qualities, and has many friends and well wishers throughout his own and adjoining townships.

MARTIN K. GROFF, proprietor of the Fairview Roller Mills, of Bart township, Lancaster county, was born in Warwick township, Oct. 10, 1855, son of Martin and Fianna (Kofsroth) Groff.

Martin Groff was born in Lancaster county in 1825; his wife, Fianna (Kofsroth), whom he married in 1852, was born in the same county in 1832. Martin Groff was engaged in the milling business in Warwick township. In 1855 he made a visit to Springfield, Ohio, where he sickened and died, leaving his widow with two children, Susanna and Martin. Susanna married James Carpenter, then of Lancaster, but now living retired in Warwick township, and they have one son Joseph, who is employed in Lancaster. The widowed mother later married Manelius Ressler, of Lancaster county, and they settled in Warwick township, where Mr. Ressler has followed his trade of a blacksmith to the present time. Mrs. Ressler died in November, 1899, leaving four children by her second marriage: Morris, of Lancaster; Tillie, who married Monroe Shriner, of Warwick township; John, living in Rothsville, Lancaster county; and Scott, of Warwick township.

Martin K. Groff was reared in Warwick township, where he attended the local schools. When he was eighteen years old he engaged as a miller's apprentice with Jesse Runk, at Bird-in-Hand. All his life he has been a miller, and for several years was employed at a salary. After his marriage he took charge of a mill at Bird-in-Hand, on his own account, and he remained in this business until the fall of 1884, when he purchased the Cooper mill property at Georgetown. There he is running one of the improved roller mills of the county, and his work attracts much attention. The mill was burned down in March, 1897, but Mr. Groff rebuilt it thoroughly and substantially, putting in the most modern machinery, and making it one of the best roller mills in this section of the State.

In 1877 Mr. Groff was married to Miss Mary Miller, who was born in Lancaster county in 1857, daughter of George and Elizabeth Miller. Her mother's people, the Tregos, are an old and noted family in Lancaster county. To Mr. and Mrs. Groff have come the following children: (1) Harry, born in 1879, is a working miller at Georgetown. (3) George died when one year old. (4) Florence, born in March, 1898, is a bright and winning little maiden.

W. B. Groff

Martin K. Groff has made his way in the world by his own strength and energy. Starting in life as an apprentice boy, he has become one of the solid and substantial citizens and business men of Lancaster county. He is a fine penman, and his mill books are models of expert bookkeeping. Personally he is a man of high principles and clean character, and enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him. Politically he is a Republican, and for twelve years has been township auditor. Mrs. Groff is a member of the Lutheran Church, where her husband attends. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 61, of Paradise township, and is also associated with the American Mechanics at Lancaster city.

AMOS N. LANDIS, one of the progressive and representative young farmer-citizens of Clay township, was born in Manheim township Aug. 3, 1869, son of John D. and Emma (Nolt) Landis, of Landis Valley, in Manheim township.

John D. Landis, the father of Amos N., was born March 6, 1843, married Emma Nolt in 1865, and died Aug. 2, 1878. He was a son of Christian B. Landis, who was the father of these seven children: John D., the father of our subject; Christian, of Lancaster; Benjamin, of Neffsville; Elizabeth, wife of David Rudv, of Neffsville; Susan, wife of Harry Groff; Fanny, who died unmarried; Jacob, of Akron, Pa. Four children were born to John D. Landis and wife, the two survivors being Amos N., of this sketch; and Ella, the wife of Isaac Buchen, of Lincoln. After the death of her husband Mrs. Landis married John Wissler, of Weidmanville.

Amos N. Landis was reared on the farm and attended the public schools of Manheim township. At the age of thirteen years he removed with his mother to Clay township, and here, Dec. 5, 1893, he married Miss Amanda Snyder, daughter of Simon and Fannie (Bucher) Snyder, of Clay township. The children born of this union are: Simon, born Feb. 21, 1895; John, born Aug. 1, 1896; and Lizzie, born Aug. 17, 1901.

Mrs. Landis was born June 17, 1872, and was reared in a family of eight children, namely: Barbara, the wife of John Stoner, of Earl township; Annie, the wife of Jacob Doster, of Ephrata township; Sarah, wife of Lemon Weist, of Clay township; Catherine, the wife of Samuel Stoner, of Ephrata; Amanda; Christian, of Clay township; Lizzie, of Ephrata township; and Lavina, also at home, in Clay township.

Mr. Landis is one of the active and intelligent farmers of Clay and owns a fine farm situated on the pike road between Weidmanville and Clay. In politics he is a staunch Republican, has been a very efficient school director for the past five years, and takes an active interest in all measures looking toward the advancement of education in his locality. He belongs to the Dunkard Church.

Although Mr. Landis belongs to one of the oldest and most honorable families of Lancaster county, he is dependent upon no such support, for he commands the esteem and respect of all, through his personal attributes.

NORMAN F. HERCHELROTH, a prominent and successful farmer citizen of East Donegal township, was born on his present farm on Sept. 13, 1869, a son of John and Mary J. (Paules) Herchelroth, the former of East Donegal, the latter of Lebanon county, Pennsylvania.

John Herchelroth died Aug. 11, 1892, at the age of seventy-four, but his wife survived until March 21, 1900, and both were laid to rest in the Maytown cemetery. They were good and worthy people, consistent members of the Reformed Church. To them were born: Anna, who married Harry Eshleman, of Maytown; Mary, who married George Farmer, of Rawlinsville; Hiram, who married Anna Lehman (deceased), and resides in Bainbridge; Emma, who resides in Philadelphia; John, a professor in a business college in Philadelphia, who married Addie Redmond; Jacob, who married Sophia Shaffer, and is a practicing physician in Philadelphia; and Norman F., the subject of this biography.

On Sept. 19, 1893, Mr. Norman F. Herchelroth was united in marriage to Miss Agnes Rutherford, and to this union one son has been born,—Victor F. Mrs. Herchelroth was born in Bainbridge, this county, in 1871, a daughter of William and Amanda (Rothrock) Rutherford, residents of Elizabethtown, where Mr. Rutherford is a well known stone mason.

Mr. Herchelroth has always lived upon this farm, with the exception of the time spent at school attending the Millersville Academy. Reared on the farm, he thoroughly understands its management and is considered one of the best agriculturists in this locality, the excellent state of his land and the comfortable surroundings giving evidences of thrift and prosperity. In politics he is a Republican, and is one of the substantial and representative citizens of East Donegal.

CHRISTIAN E. BRACKBILL. One of the most skillful, and consequently most successful, young farmers of Salisbury township, Lancaster Co., Pa., is Christian E. Brackbill, who was born on the farm on which he still lives Jan. 13, 1871. His parents, Elam and Barbara (Hershey) Brackbill, are natives of Paradise township, Lancaster county, where they now reside, but they came to Salisbury township in 1870 and remained until the spring of 1892, when they returned to their native township. Elam Brackbill, a general farmer, was born in 1841, and his wife Barbara (Hershey) Brackbill, in 1851. To their marriage have been born eight children in the following order: Christian E., whose name opens this biography; Susan

E., who is married to Daniel Eshleman, a farmer in Leacock township; Magdelina, unmarried; Ida E., wife of John Eshleman, a farmer in Salisbury township; Anna M., wife of John Groff, a farmer also of Leacock township; Harry G., a school teacher, at home; Esther S., also at home; and Elam, deceased. Elam and Barbara (Hershey) Brackbill are members of the Mennonite Church, and for many years Mr. Brackbill was a school director, an office which he filled with marked astuteness. The paternal grandparents of Christian E. Brackbill were Benjamin and Susan Brackbill, and the maternal grandfather was Christian Hershey, who married a Miss Metzler, both of Lancaster county.

Nov. 2, 1893, Christian E. Brackbill was united in marriage with Miss Anna Buckwalter, who has borne him one child, Ellis B. Mrs. Brackbill was born June 14, 1867, in Salisbury township, and is a daughter of Isaac and Magdalina (Hershey) Buckwalter, of whom further mention will soon be made. Immediately after marriage Mr. Brackbill settled down on the farm of 102 acres in Salisbury township and began operations on his own account. As he had been born and reared on the place and was familiar with every feature and phase of its conditions and intimate with the constituents of its soil and its mutations under climatic or thermal influences, his success was assured at the beginning and he has now as profitable a farm as there is of its dimensions in the township.

In politics Mr. Brackbill is a Republican, but has never sought public office; yet he has served one term as school director, by appointment to fill out an unexpired term. He is an attendant at the Mennonite church, of which Mrs. Brackbill is a devout member, and his walk through life is such as to merit the esteem of his numerous warm-hearted friends and that of the general public, which is accorded him in a marked degree.

Isaac Buckwalter, father of Mrs. Christian E. Brackbill, and now living in retirement in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, was born in East Lampeter township Nov. 21, 1837, and is one of the eleven children born to Henry and Barbara (Neff) Buckwalter, the former of whom died in 1861 at the age of fifty-four years, and the latter in 1864, when fifty-six years old, their remains being interred in Mellinger's cemetery in East Lampeter township. The eleven children comprising the Buckwalter family were born in the following order: Mary, living in Soudersburg, the widow of John Downer; Anna, deceased wife of Benjamin Eby; Susan, who was first married to Walter and next to John Denlinger, but who has now passed away; Sarah, deceased wife of Emanuel Denlinger; Hattie, wife of Israel Landis, of East Lampeter township; Lizzie, wife of Daniel Kreider, of the same township; Barbara, wife of Peter Hershey, of Paradise township; Benjamin, deceased; Freeland, of East Earl township; Martin, of Strasburg township; and Isaac, named above. The paternal grandparents of Isaac Buckwalter were named John and Judith Buckwalter and were natives of Lancaster county.

Isaac Buckwalter and Mattie Hershey were joined in matrimony at Lancaster in 1864, and eight children have resulted from this marriage, namely: Anna, now Mrs. C. E. Brackbill; John, still at home; Mary, married to Chris Zimmerman, a farmer in East Earl township, to whom she has borne three children; Barbara, wife of David Sensinick, mother of two children, and residing in Salisbury township; Isaac, Freeland, David and Martha—all four still at home. The mother of this family, Mrs. Mattie (Hershey) Buckwalter, was born in Salisbury township, in Jan., 1845, and is a daughter of John and Mattie (Musser) Hershey.

Mr. Buckwalter at marriage rented his present farm but by leading a frugal and industrious life soon became its owner, and is now one of the wealthiest men in the township. He and his wife are members of the Mennonite church, and in politics Mr. Buckwalter is a Republican.

ABRAHAM B. GROFF, whose residence is near New Holland, Pa., was born in Upper Leacock township Nov. 8, 1860, and is a son of Abraham and Carlotta (Shaeffer) Groff, both of whom are dead. His grandfather, Abraham Groff, resided in Groffdale, Lancaster county.

Abraham B. Groff was reared in Upper Leacock township, where he was educated in the public schools, and at twenty years of age established himself in West Earl township. Two years later he came to Earl township, where he has since made his home. His active life was begun on the farm, and the tillage of the soil has been his life work. In 1886 he purchased the property where he is now living, just south of New Holland, only a quarter of a mile from the borough line. This place comprises twenty-four acres, and is finely improved. He has a handsome residence, a commodious barn, and ample tobacco barns. These substantial improvements have been effected since the land passed into his possession. In 1892 he began dealing in tobacco and farm implements, and is very completely equipped for the trade, large quantities of tobacco passing through his hands. As an implement dealer, his trade is second only to the heaviest dealers in the city of Lancaster. He handles all kinds of implements, making special features of the Advance binders, the Hoover Wagon Company buggies and the Columbia wagons. He has drills, and seeds of all kinds. Mr. Groff has lately built a tobacco warehouse, 32 ft. x 60 ft., of four stories, where he can store 1,500 cases of tobacco; he has also put up an implement warehouse, 48 ft. x 100 ft., two stories high, in New Holland borough, on Railroad avenue, near the Pennsylvania Railroad station. His new headquarters is the largest implement building in Pennsylvania. He enjoys an immense trade, and takes satisfaction in the thought that it represents his own labor. He is a member of the school board of Earl township. Beginning at the very bottom, with nothing but his pluck and energy to carry him through, his success is evident from the fact that he is now among the most prosperous men of the community.

In 1880 he was married to Miss Lizzie Bear, who died in Feb., 1899, at the age of thirty-seven years, leaving four children: Leroy W., Christian M., A. B. Charlie, and Annie C. Mrs. Groff was a member of the Reformed Church. Leroy W. is a teacher in the public schools of Earl township, and had his training for the work at Millersville.

HARRY B. HERR, a resident of Lime Valley, West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, was born on the Herr homestead in Strasburg township, June 21, 1871, and was reared on the farm. His education was secured in the public schools, and his life has passed peacefully, and with but little excitement, in Strasburg and West Lampeter townships, just as the most useful lives are often the most uneventful.

After his marriage Mr. Herr began farming on the home place, where he spent the two ensuing years. In the spring of 1895 he removed to his present place, which consists of a hundred acres. Here he does general farming and gives much attention to the handling and preparation of draft horses for the eastern markets. He buys from western stockmen, and will take only the best bred, so that his name has already become identified with the upper ranges of the market. Mr. Herr is a bright and progressive young man, and by observation, study and close attention, keeps abreast of the times. He is highly regarded in the business community, and has won many friends in the eastern cities, who are glad to tender him any courtesy and attention they can when he comes their way, as he has those personal qualities that arrest attention and command respect.

On Nov. 4, 1896, Mr. Herr was married to Miss Minnie L., a daughter of Henry L. Groff, of Strasburg township, and to them has come one child, Anna Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Herr are both members of the Old Mennonite church, and are highly respected in the community in which their useful and well ordered lives are passing.

CALVIN G. HINKLE, a well-known locomotive fireman, was born on the edge of Columbia borough, in West Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., May 16, 1873, is a son of Joseph and Anna (Mellinger) Hinkle, and still has his home in Columbia. Joseph Hinkle, the father, of whom mention is made in another part of this volume, was a wealthy farmer, but is now deceased.

Calvin G. Hinkle lived with his parents until twenty-two years of age, attending the district school until fifteen years old, then for three years working in the Keeley Stove Works, and at the age of nineteen beginning work as a fireman on the Pennsylvania railroad, a position he has filled up to the present time with credit to himself and satisfaction to the company.

July 3, 1895, Calvin G. Hinkle was joined in matrimony at Lower Windsor, York Co., Pa., with Miss Virgilla P. Heindel, and this union has been blessed with one child, Beatrice. Mrs. Virgilla P. (Heindel) Hinkle, is a native of Lower Windsor, was born March 18, 1877, and is a daughter of John and Mary (Fox) Heindel, who still reside in Lower Windsor. John Heindel was born in 1835, was reared a farmer, is a man of considerable prominence locally, has held many township offices, and at one time was treasurer of York county. At present he is a director of the York County Fire Insurance Company. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are the parents of nine children: George, a clerk in Elgin, Ill.; Laura, wife of William Ensign, of Lower Windsor, Pa.; Samuel, a dentist in Manheim, Pa.; Valetta, wife of Byrd Hinkle, a farmer of York county; Moses, keeper of a grocery and dry-goods store in Wrightsville; Rev. John, a Lutheran minister in Jersey City, N. J.; Charles, with his father on the home farm; Virgilla, now Mrs. Hinkle; and Sadie, also at home.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Hinkle were Henry and Julia Heindel, natives of Germany, who settled in York county, Pa., on the farm now occupied by their son, John. Her maternal grandparents were Samuel and Mary (McFarley) Fox, also farming people of York county.

Calvin G. Hinkle is classed among the representatives of the older and more respected families of Columbia and West Hempfield townships, enjoys the esteem of his fellow firemen, and, with his wife, the respect of the community in which he lives. Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle are members of the Lutheran Church, while he belongs to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and the Relief Corps. In politics he is a Republican.

SAMUEL G. GRAYBILL, a successful warehouse man and dealer in grain, coal and feed in Rheems, Lancaster county, handles along with these leading lines, flour, salt, seed, phosphates, hay and straw, paving stone and tile, and has built up for himself an enviable reputation as a tradesman and an upright and reliable man.

Mr. Graybill was born in Penn township, Lancaster county, Oct. 31, 1872, and is a son of Rev. Reuben S. and Rebecca (Groff) Graybill. They were born in Penn township, where they remained and followed farming until 1896. Since then they have lived a retired life. The father has been a German Baptist preacher since 1886, and is a man much respected by those who know him. Born in 1841, he keeps his health and strength. The mother, who was born in 1846, has reared the following children: Amanda G., the wife of James W. Boyd, a farmer of Penn township; John G., married to Minnie Keller, and a teller in the National Bank at Manheim, Pa.; Nathan G., married to Ella Gible, and a farmer in Penn township; Samuel G., noted at the beginning of this article.

Samuel Graybill, the grandfather of Samuel G., was born in Lancaster county, and came of good old Swiss stock. In early years this branch of the family changed the spelling of the name from Kraybill to Graybill.

The maternal grandfather of Samuel G. Graybill was John Groff, who married a Miss Brubaker. They also were natives of Lancaster county, and were descendants of a Swiss ancestry.

Samuel G. Graybill and Miss Katie Groff, the bright and accomplished daughter of Benjamin G. Groff, were married in Elizabethtown, Pa., in 1896. A biographical sketch of the father of Mrs. Graybill may be found on another page.

Samuel G. Graybill remained at home with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-three years, when in company with his father-in-law, Mr. Groff, he embarked in the lumber, feed and grain business. At the end of four years they dissolved partnership, and Mr. Graybill came to his present stand. Here he has built up a good business, and has many warm and ardent friends throughout the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Graybill are members of the German Baptist Church, and are prominent and wealthy people in the community where they live. In politics he is a Republican, and is counted one of the good citizens of the day. At the present time Mr. and Mrs. Graybill are living in Elizabethtown, while he does business in Rheems.

ABRAHAM W. ROOT, a prominent business citizen of East Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., is the owner and manager of a large nursery business, located one and one-half miles north of East Petersburg, and was born on the home farm, one mile north of this village, on March 7, 1872, a son of Abraham F. Root, of this township.

Benjamin Root was the grandfather of Abraham W. Root, and was a son of Jacob Root, who married a Miss Buckwalter, of an old family of New Holland, Lancaster county. Benjamin was born in 1814, and died in 1887, and was one of a large family nine of whom grew to maturity. Reared on the farm, he always followed that occupation, and quite early in life started out to work for himself, in 1845 removing to East Hempfield township, where he first farmed land on shares, but later purchased a farm of about fifty acres, located between Petersburg and Landisville, this being now owned by Jacob Rober. After disposing of this property Benjamin Root bought some fourteen acres in Mountville, where he lived for a time, but later removed to Landisville, and there he died, being at that time a member of the board of education. He was a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church. His marriage was with Elizabeth Frantz, a daughter of John Frantz, of Lampeter township, born on a farm one mile from Bird-in Hand; her death occurred in Sept., 1863.

Nine children were born of this union: Abraham F., the father of our subject; Israel, a farmer and a dealer in agricultural implements, in Landisville; John, who died at the age of twenty-one; Adam, a resident near Elizabethtown, Pa.; Amos, a teacher in the public schools of Mt. Joy; Simon, a farmer near Elizabethtown; Mary, who married M. G. Musser, of Lancaster, and is deceased; Benjamin, deceased; and an infant, deceased.

The father of these children was a leading and representative man, and was well and favorably known, leaving to his eldest son a name which he could bear and cherish with pride. Abraham F. Root, the father of our subject, was born May 20, 1836, and received his education in the public schools of his neighborhood, and also enjoyed one session at the State Normal School, at Millersville, making his home with his people until he left to form new ties, in 1863. At this time he began farming on shares, according to a prevalent custom, in Mt. Joy township, remaining one year, but in 1864 he purchased his present homestead, in East Hempfield township, consisting of fifty-four acres, located one and one-half miles north of East Petersburg, and here he has one of the very pleasantest homes in this part of the county, the valuable improvements being of substantial character, and the surroundings most attractive. General farming has proved most remunerative to him, and he has taken a deep interest in developing his land to its greatest extent.

Probably Abraham F. Root is one of the largest owners of valuable land in this locality. In 1887 he purchased a farm of twenty acres, situated between his home and Petersburg, which he improved with a complete set of new buildings, and presented this valuable property to his son, S. N. Root, and in 1891 he continued his fatherly kindness by the purchase of forty-four acres lying northwest of his home farm, and presented this to another son, Abraham W. Root. Later, he added a small tract of five acres, lying on the old Lititz road, one mile west of his residence, and upon this property he is busily engaged in the erection of substantial and commodious buildings, and other permanent improvements which will make this in the near future a very desirable place. Not all of his time, however, is occupied in farming or in looking after his real estate holdings, as for a long season he has been a school director, always interested in all educational matters, and he is a stockholder and one of the directors in the Northern Market, of Lancaster City.

On Sept. 13, 1862, Abraham F. Root married Mary Nissley, of East Donegal township, a daughter of Joseph Nissley, and to them have been born three children: Samuel N., a farmer and tobacco dealer; John, who died at the age of seventeen; and Mary, who died at the age of fourteen. The mother of these children died on March 29, 1869, and in January, 1871, he married the widow of Elam Fritz, her maiden name having been Sarah Witmer, the daughter of George Witmer, of New Providence township. To this union has been born a family of four children: Abraham W., farmer and nurseryman; Jacob W., at home on the farm; Emma and Laura, at home. Both Abraham F. Root and wife are members of the Old Mennonite Church, and few there are, in this community, who are better or more favorably known.

Abraham W. Root, the son of the above worthy people, was reared on the farm, and early taught those principles of industry and thrift which he has displayed with such a successful result, in the management of his own business. His mind seemed to have a natural bent toward horticulture, and while but a lad of ten years he began his experiments in fruit growing, and he wisely decided to direct his attention to that field of labor. While storing his mind with all the literature he could find upon the subject, he was not content with this theoretical knowledge, but visited various nurseries both in this and in the State of New York, and in 1893 opened up a small nursery plant which he has increased until he now has some fifteen acres stocked, making a special feature of apple, peach and plum trees; he also carries a good assortment of small fruits, in fact everything that can be found in any first-class nursery, and successfully operates a farm of forty-four acres. His stock is mostly disposed of in this State, for which he employs eight salesmen, and he has just taken his brother, Jacob W. Root, in as partner and is branching out on a much larger scale. A member of the State Horticultural society, he both teaches and learns at its meetings.

The marriage of Abraham W. Root was on Nov. 21, 1895, to Ella Shenk, a daughter of John Shenk, of Manheim township, and to this union have been born two children, Mary and Ira. Both he and his estimable wife are members of the old Mennonite Church, where they enjoy the esteem of a large circle of friends.

LOUIS WEBER, jeweler, watch maker and optician, has lived in Lancaster for almost thirty years, all but one of which he has been identified with the best commercial life of the city.

Louis Weber, Sr., his father, came to this country from Baden, Germany, in 1848, settling in Philadelphia where he still resides. He was a lithograph painter, and was of the pioneers in that trade in this country. His marriage to Lena Gunther was consummated in Philadelphia. From this union were born seven children, three of whom are deceased. The others are: Louis, in Lancaster; Rudolf, of Philadelphia; Lena, wife of P. R. Paynter; and Henry, of Lancaster.

Louis Weber came to Lancaster March 4, 1873, and secured employment for a year with a prominent jewelry house in this city, and then set up for himself in Centre Square, where he remained for six years. Having learned his trade in a first-class establishment in Philadelphia, he was thoroughly equipped, and his reputation as an expert workman soon became extended, bringing him much trade, and compelling his removal to larger quarters, at No. 159½ North Queen street, where he is still found.

In the early days of his career in Lancaster Mr. Weber was united in marriage to Miss Anna L., a daughter of the late Philip Fitzpatrick, who was one of the best known citizens of Lancaster. They have had one child, George R., who learned his father's trade, and then, taking a course in optics in New York, became a graduate optician, and opened optical parlors above his father's store, equipping them with paraphernalia unknown before in this section.

During the long period he has dealt with the Lancaster public, Louis Weber has enjoyed the reputation of being not only skilled in his work, but thoroughly reliable in his business methods, and now has an extended clientage. An intelligent citizen he never obtrudes his opinions and confines himself strictly to his business, always being at his post.

ABRAM SHOEMAKER, one of the highly esteemed citizens and substantial retired farmers of Lancaster county, was born on the farm in Martic township, which he now owns, May 12, 1832, a son of Jesse and Sarah (Lukins) Shoemaker, who were natives of Montgomery county, who located in Lancaster county in 1828.

Grandfather Joseph Shoemaker was of German ancestry, and he reared four children: Abraham, Jesse, Lydia and Charles, all of whom have gone to their reward.

Jesse Shoemaker, a son of Joseph and the father of Abram, was born in 1796, and died in 1883, at the age of eighty-seven years. His first wife was Sarah Ambler, and one daughter, Hannah, now deceased, was the only child of this union. The second wife of Jesse Shoemaker was Sarah Lukins, and to this union six children were born: Joseph, deceased; Enos, deceased; Abram; Martha Ann, deceased; Charles, deceased; and William L., of Fulton township, of whom more extended mention may be found elsewhere.

Abram Shoemaker was reared to agricultural pursuits, and through life has followed farming in all its branches. His industry and energy have been substantially rewarded, as he is now the owner of two of the best farms in this county, his home being in every way one of the most attractive and desirable in his neighborhood. A man of sterling worth, respected and valued by his acquaintances and beloved by his family and friends, he is a citizen who worthily represents the great State in which he was born—a State whose children are never ashamed to confess that they are Pennsylvanians.

Abram Shoemaker married Regina Y. Idall, who was the estimable daughter of William and Mary (Streeper) Idall on Dec. 16, 1858. Three children were born to this marriage: Annie S., who is the widow of Benjamin F. Treas, of Philadelphia; Wilmer G., who died at the age of twenty years; and Mary A., who resides at home. Mrs. Shoemaker was born on Sept. 3, 1838, and is a lady well known as a kind and sympathetic neighbor and as one who in every way sustains the character of a Christian woman.

Abram Shoemaker was educated in the public schools and has always taken an interest in their advancement. In politics he belongs to the Republican party, and is a consistent member of the Society of Friends.

DR. HENRY F. BRENEMAN, the well-known veterinary surgeon, residing near Mt. Joy, in East Donegal township, is a native son of Lancaster county, and he inherited from his father the sympathetic love of dumb animals that was the guiding star to his chosen calling. He was born in Rapho township Sept. 10, 1843, a son of Dr. John and Fanny (Freed) Breneman, natives of Lancaster township, this county, and New Philadelphia, Pa., respectively.

Dr. John Breneman died in Rapho township, in 1877, at the age of sixty-one. He was a farmer by occupation, and also a veterinary surgeon. In all his work he was very successful, and his genial manners won him many friends. He was prominent in public affairs and served as supervisor of his town. He was twice married. His first wife, Fanny Freed, died in 1854, at the early age of thirty-seven. This union resulted in children as follows: Dr. Henry F.; Kate F., widow of Amos Witmer, a farmer near Neffsville, Pa.; Samuel F., a school teacher, now deceased; and Miss Fanny F., of Silver Springs. For his second wife Dr. Breneman married Mrs. Mary (Miller) Stauffer, and by this marriage became the father of Christian, a farmer of Rapho; and Rev. Benjamin, a United Brethren minister at Silver Springs. Mrs. Mary (Stauffer) Breneman was born near Lancaster, of Swiss descent, and died in 1900, aged eighty-two years. She had been married prior to her union with Dr. Breneman, her first husband being John Stauffer. By this marriage she was the mother of five children, namely: John, a farmer, now deceased; Mary and Abraham, both deceased; Henry, of Lancaster; and Jacob, a farmer, now deceased.

Henry F. Breneman remained with his parents until he attained his majority. During these years he had worked on the farm and assisted his father in the care of sick stock. After leaving home he learned the tanner's trade, which he followed twelve years, and then again began the practice of veterinary surgery, which he has since followed. He located in his present place of residence in 1872, and has met with much success in his calling, and has won many friends. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and actively interested in public affairs. In religious belief he adheres to the tenets of the Old Mennonite faith.

On Jan. 9, 1873, Dr. Breneman married Harriet H. Heidler, who has borne him the following children: Ira H., who died at the age of two years; Minnie H., who married Dr. E. W. Newcomer, of Mt. Joy; and Nora H. and Martha H., both at home.

Mrs. Harriet H. (Heidler) Breneman was born in West Hempfield township, June 10, 1849, a daughter of Levi and Martha (Hougendobler) Heidler, now living retired in that township. Levi Heidler was born Aug. 26, 1813, and his wife on April 1, 1820. Both are members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: Anna, deceased wife of Christian Shank; William, a tobacco packer of Ironville, Pa.; Henry, of Faithcure, Cal.; Barbara, at home; Cyrus, in a bakery in Mountville, Pa.; Sarah, wife of Dr. C. A. McCauley, a physician of Petersburg, Pa.; Martha, wife of Christian K. Shank, of West Hempfield township; Harriet H.; Mary, who died young; Samuel, a school teacher in Springfield, Ill.; and Horace, an operator of West Hempfield.

AMOS CHARLES. Among the prominent farmers and successful business men of Lancaster county, who have been identified with prosperous business interests for a number of years, in this vicinity, is Amos Charles, who resides on his finely cultivated farm in East Hempfield township, one mile west of the village of Rohrerstown.

Mr. Charles was born on the old family homestead, in Manor township, Aug. 2, 1849, a son of Christian H. Charles, deceased, the latter of whom was a son of Jacob and Barbara (Herr) Charles, who were the parents of five daughters and two sons. The mother of our subject was Fannie (Forrey) Charles, and both parents were consistent members of the old Mennonite Church.

Amos Charles received a very fair education in the public schools of his district, remaining with his parents until he had reached the age of twenty-one, when he began farming operations for himself, early displaying the good judgment which has since marked his career, and which has been one element of his success. The first tract of land upon which our subject began his independent farming labors was one which adjoined the old homestead, in Manor township, and here he remained until 1884, at which time he removed to his present fine farm of eighty acres, in East Hempfield, and immediately began the improvements and operations which have made of this place one of the most productive in the county. Until 1888 he gave his whole attention to his farming interests, but realizing the desirability of an establishment where the neighboring farmers could more easily obtain the commodities like coal and feed, than by going some distance, he opened up on his farm, yards for the same, and since that time has been actively engaged in this business. Amos Charles is one of the progressive men who never stagnate, their active minds always seeing opportunities for the further enlargement of their business interests, at the same time advancing the commercial prospects of the community.

In 1896 Mr. Charles accepted the opportunity of becoming the owner by lease, of what is well known as the Willow Grove gristmill, in Manor township, located one mile north of Millersville, and this is now most successfully operated by the son of our subject, Amos B. Charles, the mill being well prepared to do all kinds of milling. Amos Charles is one of the stockholders and is also a director in the Fairview Milling Co., of Columbia, Lancaster county, having been one of the founders of the same, an organization well and favorably known throughout the State.

In 1870, Amos Charles was married to Mary A. Bowers, who was born in East Hempfield township July 24, 1851, daughter of Benjamin Bowers, of Manor township, and four children have been born of this union: Amos B., the efficient assistant of his father in the milling business; Willis B., a farmer of Manor township; Christian E., who was graduated with honors from Franklin and Marshall College, June 20, 1900, ranking sixth in a class of thirty-nine, and is now principal of the Bart central high school—a position to which he has been elected a second time; and Clayton B. Both Amos Charles and wife have long been most valued members of the Mennonite Church, in which they were reared by good parents, and our subject is the most efficient superintendent of the Rohrerstown Sabbath school, holding that position for five years. The entire family is respected and esteemed throughout the township.

ENOS D. SHEAFFER. This worthy and respected representative of the agricultural interests of Lancaster county is a resident of Leacock township. Both himself and wife are worthy members of two of the oldest families in the county, whose individual members have always been citizens of the highest character.

Mr. Sheaffer was born Dec. 3, 1856, in the township in which he still resides, son of Bear and Elizabeth (Heller) Shaeffer, and comes of a race of farmers, his father and grandfather before him having cultivated the soil. Bear Sheaffer died in 1873 at the age of forty-five years, and lies buried in the Roland Church burying-ground in Leacock township. His widow resides with her daughter, Mrs. Martha Sharp, and is quite active at the age of seventy-seven years. They were the parents of: Samuel, a farmer of Paradise township; Henry, deceased; Enos D.; Martin, a farmer of Lancaster county; Joseph, a telegraph operator in Lancaster; Catherine, Mrs. Albert Rutter, of Leacock township; Margaret, deceased wife of Freeman Bitzer; Sallie, unmarried; and Martha, widow of Christian Sharp.

Samuel Sheaffer, the paternal grandfather of Enos D., lived and died in Lancaster county. On the maternal side the grandfather was Joseph Heller, also a resident of Lancaster county.

Enos D. Sheaffer was reared on a farm in Lancaster county and received a good common-school education in the district schools of Leacock township. He remained on the farm until 1879, when he set up an establishment of his own at his present home, and where he has since followed the life of an agriculturist most successfully. He is looked upon as one of the most thorough farmers in the county, and his farm has an appearance of thrift and neatness which is an evidence of the distinguishing characteristics of its owner. Mr. and Mrs. Sheaffer are worthy members of the Reformed Church of Leacock township, and are useful members of society in that rural community. In politics Mr. Sheaffer votes for principles promulgated by the Democratic platform.

Mr. Sheaffer was married in 1879 in New Holland, Pa., to Miss Amanda Sprecker, who was born in the "Leopard Hotel," Lancaster, and is a sister of Samuel Sprecker, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Sheaffer are the parents of three children: Louis, Jonathan (who died in 1884) and Anna. A man of fine strength of character, genial and hospitable in disposition, Mr. Sheaffer merits the high esteem in which he is held in Lancaster county.

JOSEPH G. DESCH, who at the time of his death was living retired in Columbia, was for many years actively identified with the business interests of that city, and having acquired a comfortable competence was able to lay aside all business cares and enjoy a well-earned rest.

Mr. Desch was born in Bavaria, Germany, Sept. 10, 1833, son of Philip and Mary H. (Herr) Desch, natives of the same kingdom, who in 1851 emigrated to America and took up their residence in Baltimore, Md., where the father lived retired for ten years. In his native land he had engaged in merchandising. Returning to Germany on a visit, he died in that country in 1870, at the age of seventy-five years, while his wife died in Baltimore, in 1875, at the age of seventy-six. In their family were the following children: John and Peter, who died in Baltimore; Mary, wife of Leo Bruner, a retired merchant and ex-postmaster in Germany; Baldser, a traveling agent of Germany; Anthony, who was killed in the battle of Fredericksburg, during the Civil war; Joseph G., whose name introduces this sketch; Gert-rude, wife of George Smith, a cooper of Baltimore; and George and Margaret, who both died in that city.

Before leaving his native land Joseph G. Desch was employed as a traveling agent with his father. At the age of eighteen years he came to the United States, landing in New York, whence he proceeded to Baltimore, where he spent five years. He then came to Columbia, Pa., where he followed the butcher's trade nine years, and conducted a tavern thirty-six years, during the last six years of which time he also operated a brewery. From 1890 he lived retired, enjoying the fruits of his former toil. Mr. Desch was a member of the German Catholic Church, and an ardent supporter of the Democratic party. Throughout Lancaster county he was widely known and he had a host of warm friends.

In 1858 Mr. Desch was married in Columbia to Miss Caroline Rider, and to them the following children were born: Frederick, who died in 1879; Elizabeth, wife of Edward Bittner, a cigar manufacturer of Columbia; Charles, George and Mary, all of whom died young; Carrie, wife of Henry Glotfelder, who is clerking in Columbia; Cecilia, at home; Jennie, wife of John Payne, a stove molder of Columbia; Joseph A., who married Lillie Granford, and conducts the "Operatic Exchange Hotel," Columbia; August, who married Mabel Eshleman, and is engaged in clerking; and Stella and William, both at home.

Mrs. Desch was born in Columbia Jan. 28, 1840, the only child of Frederick and Elizabeth (Graff) Rider, natives of Germany. The father, who was a carpet weaver by trade, came to the New World when a young man and located in Columbia, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying there in January, 1850, at the age of thirty years. He was a Lutheran in religious belief, while his wife was a member of the Catholic Church. When a child she came to this country with her parents, and continued her residence in Columbia throughout life. She died in 1890, at the age of seventy-four years.

ARTHUR A. JOHNSON, who passed to his reward Feb. 10, 1897, was born in Little Britain township, March 20, 1830, a son of John and Mary Johnson, of that township.

John Johnson was the father of the following family: James; Arthur A.; Elizabeth; Mary, wife of Dr. John W. Zell (see sketch elsewhere in this volume), of Little Britain township; Miss Phoebe, of Fairmount; John, deceased; Franklin, deceased; and Sarah, deceased.

Arthur A. Johnson was one of the leading farmers of the township, and a prominent citizen. In politics he was a staunch Republican, and in religious matters was a regular attendant of the Presbyterian Church. At the time of his death he was in very comfortable circumstances, leaving an estate consisting of his fine farm of 175 acres, all well improved and with excellent buildings. He was a kind neighbor, an honorable citizen and a loving husband and father. His untimely death was mourned by all who knew him, and his family have never recovered from his loss.

On Jan. 11, 1867, Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Margaret Hays, of Little Britain township, a daughter of John and Margaret (Clendennin) Hays, and two children were born of this union: Mary N., born May 28, 1873, died Feb. 14, 1884; and Leeta

H., born May 27, 1879, died June 25, 1898, she being a student at Normal when she was taken ill; her death was a severe blow to her already bereaved mother, and she is remembered as a loving girl, bright, attractive and gentle, a true Christian and a general favorite.

AMOS G. FUNK, a progressive and successful farmer residing on his homestead of sixty-five acres one mile south of Millersville, was born April 25, 1838, on his father's farm in Manor township, and farming has been his life occupation.

Martin M. Funk—a well-known name in Lancaster county—was born on the family homestead near Central Manor, son of Henry Funk, a very prominent citizen of Manor township. Martin M. passed his entire life in agricultural pursuits, and was very successful. Amos G. Funk attended the public schools in his youthful days, and proved an apt scholar. He began his business life by farming on the old homestead for one year, and then settled on his present farm, which is one of the finest of its dimensions in the vicinity of Millersville. About 1892 he succeeded to the original Funk homestead, which contains 102 acres, on which two of his sons at present have their residence. In connection with farming Amos G. Funk has for the past twenty-three years conducted a dairy, supplying Millersville with milk, cream, butter, etc., and together with his cattle and fields has made for himself a comfortable competency.

In 1867 Amos G. Funk married Miss Elizabeth Herr, daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Shenk) Herr, and five children have graced their union, viz: Mattie H., the eldest, died in infancy. He lived to be advanced in years, and died much respected by all who knew him.

Samuel Ruhl, noted above as the father of Harry H., was born and reared in Penn township, where he resided some twelve or thirteen years. From Penn township Mr. Ruhl moved into Manheim township, and spent his last days at Rothsville, where he bought a farm, and died at the age of seventy-six. David Witmer lived on his farm in Bart township for many years, but for a short time before his death had made his home in Quarryville. They had a large family of whom three are still living: John, Lavenia and Herr.

Samuel Witmer was educated in Lancaster county, while residing on his parents' farm, and part of the time clerked in a store owned by his father. In July, 1851, he married Miss Margaret M. Lyle, who was born and raised in Quarryville. She is the estimable daughter of Thomas and Frances (Barr) Lyle, prominent in Lancaster county life. Mrs. Witmer was born in April, 1840, and grew to womanhood in the town of Quarryville, at the old Ark house in the West End of the borough. Thomas Lyle, her father, was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, and was a member of a very old family; he married Frances Barr, daughter of Jacob Barr, of old Puritan stock, and a participator in the Revolutionary war. The family owned over 2,000 acres of ground in and around Quarryville, and became very wealthy land-owners in their day. Thomas Lyle and wife, soon after their marriage, moved to Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Pa., to engage in lumbering, and he was killed soon after while employed at his business. He left a widow and two daughters: Margaret, wife of our subject; and Miss Annie, a scholarly lady, who has been a teacher in the Millersville Normal school for over thirty years.

After Mr. and Mrs. Witmer's marriage they located on the old Witmer farm, adjoining Quarryville borough, and lived there for two years, after which he bought a farm in Colerain township. He resided there until 1898, when he purchased real estate in Quarryville borough, erected a fine house with all modern improvements, and moved into it a short time before his death, which occurred in July, 1900. He was modest and unassuming in manner; and was interested in everything that tended to advance the interests of farming, he himself putting into practice the best methods. His fine farm in Colerain is a monument to his intelligence and industry. Mrs. Witmer is a lady of culture and refinement, and loved by all her friends and neighbors. This lady was a teacher in her younger days, and a proficient one.

His youth was spent in York, Pa., where he was born in 1814, and where he learned the painter's trade as a means of future livelihood. His parents, Joseph and Sarah Taylor, were born in York county, where the father worked at his trade of watchmaking during the whole of his active life. After retiring from business he lived for five years with his son, Samuel, but died at the home of his daughter, in Berryville, Clarke Co., Va. He was a member of the Society of Friends. When his health began to fail his wife undertook to manage the grocery, and the business, so long the pride of her husband, is still carried on by this admirable business woman. Mrs. Taylor was formerly Mary L. Carpenter, born in Lancaster in 1827, a daughter of John and Ellen (Martin) Carpenter. Mr. Taylor was prominent in many lines of activity in Lancaster, and his sane opinions upon public questions received the attention due their practicability and general worth. He was a stanch Republican and filled several offices of a local nature, including that of assessor of the Northwest ward. The Penny family is an old and honored one in this part of the State of Pennsylvania, and traces its ancestry back to the days of William Penny, who came hither from Ireland, and with his two brothers settled in what was then a wilderness in Lancaster county.

Joseph Penny, the son of Hugh Penny, one of the emigrants was the grandfather of John D. Penny, of this sketch, and became a very large landowner. He reared these children: Hugh; James C.; Sarah Ann, who married John Wentz; Margaret, who married William Wentz; Mary J., who married Thomas Wentz; and Harriet, who married Steele Morrison, and is deceased.

James C. Penny, son of Joseph, was born Nov. 2, 1819, and he died May 7, 1885. His wife, Mary Maria Wentz, who was born Sept. 17, 1823, still survives, residing in comfort with her only son, John D. James C. Penny was one of the leading men of his time, and a very successful farmer. He was a stanch Democrat in his political faith, while his religious belief was that of the Presbyterians, and he was long connected with the Chestnut Level Church.

improved with comfortable and commodious dwelling, barns, granaries, etc.; and he is known as one of the best agriculturists of this locality.

On Nov. 16, 1871, Mr. Penny was married to Miss Martha McPherson, of Drumore township, a daughter of James A. (who was the son of James) and Lydia S. (who was the daughter of Dr. James Ankrum) McPherson, these parents being of Scotch-Irish ancestry. She was born May 21, 1850, and was one of a family of eight children, these being: William, who married Rebecca Robinson; Elizabeth, wife of John J. Penny; Lydia J., wife of Israel Penrose; Mary E., deceased, who married John J. Long; Lucinda, wife of John Wentz; Rachel, who died single; Martha M., wife of our subject; and James F., who married Alice Morrison, all of these having passed away, except Mrs. Penny.

To Mr. and Mrs. Penny have been born four daughters: Irena L., at home; Mary M., a graduate of the Millersville State Normal school, in the class of 1896, a highly cultured young lady teacher in the Lancaster schools; Lizzie Grace and Stella Calhoun. Mr. Penny and his family belong to the Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church of Drumore township, in which he has been an elder for sixteen years, is one of the trustees, clerk of the sessions, and the capable and efficient Sunday-school superintendent. With his family Mr. Penny has ever been active in work for his Church, where all are highly esteemed. His political opinions are those of Jeffersonian Democracy. Both Mr. and Mrs. Penny are representatives of old settled families of southern Lancaster county. They are good neighbors and enjoy the esteem of all. Mr. Penny has always been devoted to the welfare of his family as well as to that of his church and community.

SAMUEL K. MILLER, of Columbia, one of the popular conductors in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Sept. 29, 1851, son of Amos and Anna (Kaufman) Miller, natives of Lancaster and Manor townships, respectively.

Amos Miller was born in 1828, and was early initiated in the principles and practices of millwrighting and milling. He was a miller for forty years, although for a time he conducted a hotel in Lancaster. He now resides in Marietta, but his wife passed away in August, 1899, at the age of sixty-nine years, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To Amos and Anna Miller were born six children, in the following order: Samuel K.; Amos K., a puddler in Lancaster; Caroline, wife of Monroe Good, a butcher in Allentown; John, a molder in Marietta; Mary, married to Samuel Klein, also of Marietta, and Westley, a puddler in Columbia.

Samuel K. Miller was reared on a farm until sixteen years of age, and then worked in a gristmill. For one year he was employed in a rolling-mill, and then for five and a half years was a brakeman for the Pennsylvania Railway Company. He was then advanced to the position of flagman, and also served as extra conductor, seven years, after which he was given a permanent position as conductor, which he has most satisfactorily filled for the past fourteen years.

On May 22, 1871, Mr. Miller was united in marriage, at Lancaster, with Emaline Dohner, who was born in White Oak, Lancaster county, Sept. 22, 1854, a daughter of Abraham and Eliza (Dean) Dohner, and to this union have been born three children, viz.: Irwin D., Albert, and Emma, all still under the parental roof. In politics Mr. Miller is a Republican, and fraternally he is a member of the R. Co. Relief.

FREDERICK A. RICKER. Prominently identified with the business of insurance and real estate in Mt. Joy is Frederick A. Ricker, who since 1875 has been an efficient justice of the peace in that town and a leading citizen in every movement of reform and progress.

Mr. Ricker was born Feb. 19, 1832, in Dauphin county, Pa., six miles east of Harrisburg, in the Lebanon valley, a son of Frederick and Catherine (Backenstoe) Ricker, both of whom were natives of Dauphin county, where the former was a prominent farmer. The death of the father occurred in 1878, at the age of eighty-three, the mother surviving until she was eighty-seven, in 1885. Both were consistent members of the Lutheran Church, good and worthy people, who left the world better than they found it. Mr. and Mrs. Ricker had ten children: Levi, David and Alfred, deceased; Elizabeth, who is the widow of John Myers, of Mt. Joy; Catherine, widow of Michael Bann, of Harrisburg; Frederick A.; Louisa and Sarah, deceased; Mary, widow of Rev. Israel Carpenter, of Reading, Pa.; and George, who resides on the old farm in Dauphin county.

The family is of German origin. The paternal grandparents were John and Magdelina Ricker, of Dauphin county, the former of whom was a soldier under Gen. Washington in the Revolutionary war. The maternal grandparents were George and Elizabeth (Hoover) Backenstoe, natives of Dauphin county, where the former conducted a tannery.

Frederick A. Ricker was reared on a farm, and his educational advantages were those of the district school. Until the age of twenty-six he continued at agricultural pursuits. He then came to Mt. Joy and entered the hardware business, changing his line to lumber in 1868, and after some years of prosperity he opened up an insurance and real-estate business, which he has managed ever since. A staunch Republican in politics, he has been active in the ranks of his party, and in 1875 he was appointed justice of the peace, and has been re-elected every succeeding term. For five years Mr. Ricker was a valued member of the council, and he served as school director for six years.

Mr. Ricker was married in January, 1859, in Philadelphia, to Mary A. Hollinger, and to this union have been born: Howard H., a traveling salesman, who married Jennie Carlson, and resides in Minneapolis, Minn.; Seward A., a printer by trade, residing at home; William T., a shoe salesman, at Wilkesbarre; Jacob and Charles, who died young; and Clara H., at home. Mrs. Ricker was born in Mt. Joy township in 1834, a daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Zortman) Hollinger, of Elizabeth township, this county. The former died at the old home where they lived, in Mt. Joy township, at the age of sixty-five, his widow surviving until 1885, when she had reached the age of eighty-one, and dying at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Patterson; she was buried in the beautiful Mt. Joy cemetery. Both parents were consistent members of the Lutheran Church. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hollinger were as follows: Elizabeth, widow of Alexander Patterson, of Mt. Joy; Jacob, a farmer near Paris, Ill.; Eli, who died on the old farm, in 1880; and Mary A. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Ricker were Adam and Barbara Hollinger, the former of whom was a farmer of Lancaster county. Adam was a son of Jacob Hollinger, who came to this county in 1736, and took part in the Revolutionary war. The maternal grandparents, Alexander and Catherine Zortman, came to this county from Germany.

Mr. Ricker is a leading member of the Presbyterian Church, and gives liberally to advance all benevolent enterprises. His business relations have given him high standing in the community as one of the truly representative men of Mt. Joy.

ABRAHAM P. SNADER. The manufacture of fine cigars is one of the flourishing industries of Ephrata, and one of the most successful men engaged in that line is Abraham P. Snader, who was born Jan. 31, 1861, the eldest son of Jonathan and Catherine (Powell) Snader, residents of West Earl township.

Jonathan Snader was a son of John Snader, one of the early settlers of Lancaster county, and was born in 1826. He died in March, 1898. Throughout a long and useful life he was a prominent and highly respected agriculturist, leading an exemplary life, and he was universally lamented in his neighborhood at the time of his decease. In 1859 he married Catherine Powell, and they reared a family of six children: Abraham P.; David, a resident of Akron, Pa.; Mary, who married John Stephan, of Ephrata; Susan, who married David Fasnacht, of Hinkletown; Hettie, who married Noah Weidman, of Akron; and John, also a resident of Akron.

After finishing his course in the common schools of his locality Abraham P. Snader began to learn the cigarmaker's trade, and, although he began with limited means, he was by 1893 prepared to enter the manufacturing business, locating in Ephrata. At present he is the owner of a large factory, and has become one of the most important factors in the industrial life of the borough, giving employment to some sixty hands and turning out as many as 3,000,000 cigars yearly. This has not been accomplished without hard and continuous work, but Mr. Snader is one of the most progressive and energetic of men, and deserves the success which has crowned his efforts.

On Sept. 2, 1884, Mr. Snader was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Killhefner, of Ephrata, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Garber) Killhefner, and four children have come into this household: Katie, born July 23, 1886; Mabel, Nov. 27, 1889; Eugene, Feb. 10, 1895; and Caleb, July 24, 1897.

Politically Mr. Snader is a staunch Republican and very active in the ranks of his party. His standing in the community is of the best, and he is reckoned among the solid men of business, owning his large factory and business. He is erecting an elegant mansion in a choice section of the borough. As a citizen he has taken a deep interest in all matters which his judgment has caused him to consider of benefit to his section, doing his part to further every worthy enterprise. Religiously he is connected with no organization, but believes in a moral life and in acting up to the Golden Rule. Socially he is very popular, his pleasant personality and genial manners making him welcome in every circle.

AMOS F. BRUCE, one of the successful and representative farmers of Providence township, was born Nov. 16, 1856, in that township, son of Amos and Mary (Rhoades) Bruce, both also of Providence township.

Amos Bruce, the father of Amos F., was born Dec. 25, 1822, and died Feb. 12, 1899, a consistent member of the Mennonite Church. He followed farming all his life. In politics he voted with the Republican party. His father was Robert Bruce, of Lancaster county. Eight children were born to Amos Bruce and his wife, five of whom grew to maturity, namely: Thomas M., of Mt. Nebo, Pa.; Harriet S., wife of Amos Hostetter, of Strasburg township; Amos F.; Fannie L., wife of D. K. Siefreid, of Manor township; and B. M., a coach manufacturer of Marticville.

Amos F. Bruce was reared on the farm, receiving his education in the public schools, and has followed agricultural life almost exclusively. He has been intelligently interested in the progress of his community, and by word and example has been a worthy and useful citizen. In politics he is a Republican. With his family he attends the M. E. Church, all being members and liberal contributors to the support of that religious body.

On Oct. 31, 1878, Mr. Bruce married Miss Laura Groff, of Martic township, born Jan. 13, 1860, daughter of F. B. and Maria (Brecknell) Groff, who came to America from England, and of whom the former is now deceased. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bruce, namely: Olivia L., who is the wife of Alfred Thomas, of Pequea township;

Martha C., who after being educated at the Millersville Normal School, became an educator in Providence township; and Earl V., who was a student in the Drexel Institute of Art, in Philadelphia, and a young man of great promise, and who died Aug. 29, 1902.

The Bruce family is a very old one in America and has had many distinguished members. Its representatives in Providence township, Lancaster county, worthily represent it in integrity of life and usefulness to their day and generation.

HUGH DONLEY, who has reached the age of seventy-three years, is one of the substantial and respected residents of Columbia. His life has been one of hard work, but his tireless industry and unquestionable integrity have at once won for him a competence and commanded the esteem of all who know him.

Mr. Donley was born at Agees Furnace, now Robeson, Berks county, Oct. 31, 1829, and was the eldest of eleven children born to James and Catherine (Wike) Donley. The others were Ann, Elizabeth, George, Fanny, Benjamin, Abraham, Daniel R., Louisa, Thomas J. and James. Ann married John Fox, who lost his life during the Civil war, and afterward became the wife of George Martin; she lives in Lebanon. Elizabeth is the widow of George Wolf, of Steelton, and lives with her son at Allentown. George died in 1892. Fanny, whose home is in Lebanon, has been twice married, her first husband being James Garrett, and her second James Peters. James Donley, the father of Hugh, was born Jan. 12, 1804, at Lebanon, and married Catherine Wike, of Berks county. He died April 7, 1885, at the age of eighty-one years, and his wife passed away in February, 1868, after a useful and honored life of threescore. Mr. Donley was a teamster until 1845, and afterward a miner until within five years of his death, when he gave up work to spend his declining years in quiet retirement. He was a Methodist by religious profession, while his wife was a member of the Lutheran communion. His father, Hugh Donley, was a teamster, and married Rachel Ramsey. The parents of Mrs. James Donley were Frederick and Elizabeth (Rager) Wike; grandfather Wike served in the war of 1812 at Baltimore.

Hugh Donley has been twice married. His first wife, whom he wedded in October, 1853, was Emeline Auchenbach, of Lebanon. Her father, Joseph Auchenbach, who was born in 1808, died in July, 1901, in his ninety-third year; her mother's maiden name was Nancy Bleecker. The first wife of Mr. Donley bore him six children: James, Joseph, Simon, Wesley C. B., Anna E. and George. James is a gardener; he married Mary Karney, and resides in Chester county. Joseph married Caroline Gildersleeve; he was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, and lost his life in an accident at Swarr's Siding, his head being severed from his body. Simon is a car inspector at Columbia; he married Anna Stinson. Wesley married Barbara Shaffer; he is a stove molder at Columbia. George is a car inspector at Pottsville; his wife is Bessie Long. The mother of these died in March, 1863, aged twenty-nine; and in May, 1864, Mr. Donley was united to Mrs. Angeline (Gerhardt) Folmer, widow of John Folmer, a coachmaker, who died in 1861, in his twenty-sixth year. He was the only son of John Folmer, Sr., who was also a coachmaker. Mrs. Donley was the third in the family of five children born to Henry H. Gerhardt, whose home was in Lebanon county, and who was a saddler by trade. He died in Lebanon in 1847, before he had reached his thirty-sixth year. Mr. Gerhardt married Sabina Carl, who during the latter years of her life made her home with Mr. Donley, dying in Columbia in 1882, in her sixty-sixth year. Both were members of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Donley's eldest brother, Cornelius C., is a Union veteran, and lives in Lebanon. Another brother, John, also served in the Federal army, and is deceased. Milton, the third brother, also wore the Union uniform through the Civil war; he has his home in Lebanon. Sarah, the youngest of the family, married Isaac Docker; both she and her husband have died.

Mrs. Donley's first marriage was blessed with three children. The eldest, Philip H. Folmer, was reared by his stepfather; he married Bridget Welsh, and is yardmaster in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Co. at Columbia. Frank R., the second son, is a butcher, conducting a profitable business at Columbia; he married Alice Roop. John, the youngest, died in childhood.

By his second marriage Mr. Donley has two children: The eldest, Mary E., married Gordon W. Blakesly, a grocer of Lansing Mich.; the younger, Alex C., died in childhood.

In the spring of 1833 Mr. Donley's father moved to what is now known as the old Colebrook Charcoal Furnace, and there Hugh commenced to attend school. In the spring of 1837 they moved to Cornwall, where he passed the rest of his boyhood. When thirteen he was hired out to David Smith, a farmer, for nine months, and went to school three months during the winter. In the spring of 1844 he hired to Joseph Witmer for nine months, and again went to school three months in the winter. In the spring of 1845 he hired to George Bowman for nine months, and during that year also had three months' winter schooling. The following spring he went to work on the famous Cornwall ore banks, continuing at that until 1849, when he helped to build Anthracite Furnace No. 1. In the spring of 1850 he went to South Annville township, Lebanon county, where he served a two-years apprenticeship to the blacksmith's trade with Mathew Slyrd. In 1852 he entered the employ of John Enck, with whom he worked two years, in the spring of 1854 moving to Cornwall, where he resided until the spring of 1869. He followed his trade for five years altogether, when he began work in an anthracite furnace. Beginning as cinder snapper, he worked as such for nine months, and gradually rose, through the gradations of filler and helper, at each of which positions he worked one year, to be the keeper of a furnace, being engaged thus twelve years. In 1869, coming to Columbia, he was made a night boss. He worked in the Shawnee (for three years and seven months) and in the St. Charles furnaces, filling the position of boss founder at the last named establishment. After twenty years of this laborious work the furnaces shut down, but he was not a man to remain idle. Industry, sobriety and sound judgment had enabled him to accumulate a moderate competence. He embarked in business as a grocer, but after five years disposed of his store and retired to enjoy a well-earned rest. However, he is at present serving as janitor of the Poplar street school in Columbia. Notwithstanding the hard work which has been his daily habit since boyhood, he has found time to cultivate his mind, and is in close touch with public opinion on the leading issues of the day. He has been a stanch Republican since the formation of the party, and in religious belief is a Methodist. He is a member of the Artisans Mutual Protective Association and of the I. O. O. F.
