In December, 1884, Weaver Musselman was married to Miss Anna Martha, a daughter of John G. Kurtz, a resident of East Earl township. To them have come five children: Anna, Alta, Mary, Roy and Etta. Both Weaver Musselman and his wife are worthy and consistent members of the Mennonite Church.

ALFRED WOOD, a farmer of Fulton township, Lancaster county, was born Dec. 3, 1845, son of James and Mercy M. (Carter) Wood, of Little Britain township.

James Wood, his father, was born July 17, 1821, and died Aug. 9, 1894; the mother, who survives him, and still resides in Little Britain township, was born Nov. 29, 1822. James Wood was a son of Jesse Wood, a native of Chester county, Pa., who was born in 1773, and died in 1852. Jesse Wood was first married to Rachel Carter, by whom he had but one son, Day Wood, that lived to manhood. His second marriage was to Sidney Yarnall, and they had one son, James Wood, the father of Alfred. The earlier members of the family were Whigs in politics. They belonged to the Society of Friends.

James Wood was a farmer and prominent citizen, was president of the Farmers National Bank of Oxford for about a quarter of a century, served one term as commissioner of Lancaster county, and also held other important trusts with credit. He married Mercy M., daughter of Jeremiah and Susan (Moore) Carter, of Lancaster county, on Feb. 26, 1845. This marriage was blessed with the following named children: Alfred is mentioned below; Susan, born Oct. 5, 1847, is the wife of Elwood H. Townsend, of Little Britain township; Jesse, born Feb. 26, 1849, is a resident of Little Britain township; Mary, born Sept. 12, 1850, died Dec. 22, 1878 (she was the wife of Davis E. Smedley, of Chester county; Lewis, of Little Britain township, was born Jan. 27, 1854; Ida, born Dec. 24, 1855, died Oct. 19, 1890; James, of Little Britain township, was born Sept. 17, 1860.

Alfred Wood married Elmira King on Jan. 31, 1878. She is the daughter of Thomas P. and Phebe M. King, of Fulton township. The marriage of Alfred and Elmira Wood has been blessed with the following children: Cora, born Feb. 27, 1879, is a graduate of the Millersville State Normal School, class of 1901, and a teacher in the Fulton township public schools; Walter, born Oct. 25, 1880, is at home, engaged in farming; Galen and Helen were born Dec. 27, 1887; and Norman, born Jan. 24, 1891, is the youngest of the family.

Elmira Wood, wife of Alfred, was one of a family of four children, and was born Aug. 26, 1849. Lauretta A. King, born Nov. 20, 1852, died Jan. 7, 1892, was the wife of Samuel J. Kirk. Luella King, born Jan. 22, 1857, is the wife of Lewis Wood, of Little Britain township, a brother of Alfred Wood. The only brother of Elmira Wood, William P. King, was born Sept. 1, 1861, and resides in Fulton township. Her father, Thomas P. King, was born July 19, 1824, and died June 10, 1889; her mother, Phebe M. King, was born Feb. 4, 1827, and died Feb. 5, 1889. The family were members of the Society of Friends.

Alfred Wood is a prominent man in his district and owns one of the finest farms in the township, comprising 120 acres. For several years past, in conjunction with his other duties, he has practiced surveying and also land conveyancing, having a very thorough knowledge of the same. He is also a director of the public schools of his township, actively interested in the advancement of education. He is a Republican in politics. He is an honest, square-dealing man, well thought of in the community, and a leading member of the Society of Friends. Taking a great interest in his family, he is very fond of home ties and society, at the same time being a leader in all public movements tending to the prosperity and advancement of his section.

JACOB M. SAUDER, who now conducts a fine farm of sixty acres in East Donegal township, has been a lifelong farmer of Lancaster county. Farming was also the vocation of his father and grandfather, both natives of Lancaster county. The latter, Jacob Sauder lived and died in Manor township.

Jacob T. Sauder, father of Jacob M., was born on his father's farm in Manor township, and cultivated that place successfully to the close of his life. He married Anna Miller, a native of East Hempfield township, born in January, 1826, who survives him, now making her home in Rohrerstown. Mr. Sauder passed away in June, 1885, at the age of fifty-seven years, and was buried in the Mennonite cemetery at Millersville. He was a member of the Mennonite Church. To Jacob T. and Anna (Miller) Sauder, were born children as follows: John, who died in infancy; Jacob M., our subject proper; Amanda, who died at the age of sixteen years; Isaac, who died at the age of eight years; Amos, who is married and engaged in farming in East Hempfield township; Michael; and Benjamin, who is employed in a tobacco house in Rohrerstown.

Jacob M. Sauder was born Nov. 25, 1852, near Safe Harbor, in Manor township, on the farm which was also his father's birthplace. He obtained his education in the common schools, and was trained to agricultural pursuits from early boyhood. Until his marriage our subject remained with his parents, and he spent the ten years following on two other farms in Manor township, renting five years on each. He then spent three years on a rented farm in East Hempfield township, whence he removed to his present home in East Donegal, which he owns, and where he engages in general farming. The careful training he received under his father's tuition has, backed by intelligent management, brought him success in the conduct of his affairs, and he is in comfortable circumstances as a result of continued and well directed industry. Mr. Sauder has not been particularly active in public matters, although he takes a public-spirited pride in the progress of his community. His political support is given to the Republican party.

In January, 1875, in Lancaster, was celebrated the union of Jacob M. Sauder and Miss Fannie Witmer, who was born in 1855 in Rapho township. Five children have blessed this marriage, namely: Clayton W., who is engaged in farming in Rapho township, was married in November, 1900, to Miss Lillie Myers; Aaron died young; Harry, May and Minnie are at home.

Mrs. Sauder is a daughter of Peter F. and Elizabeth (Eshleman) Witmer, both natives and residents of Manor township, who moved to East Donegal in 1834. The father was a farmer, but lived retired the last twenty-four years of his long life; he died in December, 1896, when within eight days of being eighty-eight years old. His remains were interred in Graybill's Mennonite cemetery. Mrs. Witmer is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Nissley, in Landisville, Pa. She was born April 9, 1811, and is a member of the Mennonite church. Born to this union were Catherine (deceased); Jacob E., a farmer of East Donegal township; Peter, a farmer in Rapho township; Elizabeth, who is living in Landisville, the widow of Joseph Nissley; Jonas, a hotel proprietor in Marietta, Pa.; Anna, married to Jesse Myers, of Carroll county, Md.; Henry, a farmer in East Donegal township; and Fannie, who married Jacob M. Sauder.

He was born in Cecil county, Md., Sept. 28, 1828, and died in Fulton township, Lancaster Co., Pa., March 23, 1896. He was a son of Nathaniel and Phoebe (Enning) Dorsey, natives of Maryland, who were the parents of four children: William A. is a retired farmer of Cecil county, Md.; Oliver is deceased; Samuel is deceased; John is a retired farmer of Drumore township, Lancaster county. The Dorsey family have nearly all been Democrats in politics, and Presbyterian in religious belief.

Samuel Dorsey married Miss Martha Reynolds, a daughter of Elisha and Sophia (Weeks) Reynolds, of Fulton township. The Reynolds family is a pioneer family of Lancaster county, and its members have always enjoyed high repute for sterling worth. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dorsey was blessed with a family of seven children: Sophia, born March 26, 1852, died in childhood; Melissa is also deceased; Mary L., born Aug. 4, 1857, died March 23, 1882; Annie, born Oct. 23,

Mrs. Martha Dorsey, widow of Samuel Dorsey, was born in Lancaster county April 11, 1830. When she and her husband were married they were poor, but by toil and industry they owned, at the time of Mr. Dorsey's death, two fine farms and a nice mill property in Fulton township. Mr. Dorsey became a substantial citizen, and was well liked by his neighbors. For a time he followed the carpenter's trade, and many of the houses in the vicinity were put up by him. Mrs. Dorsey is the only surviving member of her family, her husband and children having gone before. She is comfortably situated in McSparran village, where she enjoys the universal esteem of her neighbors.

ABRAHAM B. KAUFFMAN, a prosperous general farmer and highly respected citizen of Cordelia, West Hempfield township, is a native of that place, and was born May 3, 1840, a son of David and Susan (Bishop) Kauffman, of Lancaster county.

David Kauffman was a teamster, owning his own team, and was chiefly employed in handling ore from the banks or pits to the smelting furnace at Columbia. To his marriage with Susan Bishop were born four children, viz.: Abraham B.; Harry B., who died in 1885; Martha B., wife of John B. Eshleman, of West Hempfield township; and Catherine B., who married Gideon H. Smith, a blacksmith at Silver Spring. David Kauffman was called away in 1847, aged forty-three years. His widow married Michael Kauffman, a brother of David, and to this union were born four children, viz.: David, a stonemason in Cordelia; Jacob, deceased; John, a puddler in the Columbia Rolling mill, but lives at Cordelia; and Sarah, wife of Horace Brookhart, a retired merchant at Columbia. Mrs. Susan Kauffman died in 1873, at the age of fifty-four. She was a member of the United Brethren Church.

Abraham B. Kauffman has himself been twice married—first in 1862, in Cordelia, to Catherine Irwin, a daughter of James and Catherine Irwin, of Lancaster county, and to this marriage was born one child, Effie, who is the wife of Jacob Kindig, a drover at Silver Spring. Mrs. Catherine Kauffman died in 1864, at the age of twenty-four years, and was buried in Columbia. On May 30, 1866, Abraham B. Kauffman chose for his second wife Anna Eisenberger, and to this union have been born thirteen children, viz.: Samuel E., married to Anna Musser and living in Columbia; Elizabeth E., wife of David Hershey, a carpenter, also in Columbia; Harry E., who married Susan Daum, and is a puddler at Columbia, but lives at Cordelia; Edward E., a puddler at Columbia, and married to Mary Berntheitzel; Amos E., a railroad man, at Columbia, and married to Elizabeth Lichty; David E., also of Cordelia, and married to Emma Harry; Franklin E., Abraham E., John E., Horace G., Flora E., Anna E. and Christian M., all seven at home.

Mrs. Anna M. (Eisenberger) Kauffman was born in Kinderhook, West Hempfield township, Dec. 6, 1842, a daughter of Samuel and Anna (Mumma) Eisenberger, the former of whom was a quarryman and died in 1885, at the age of seventy-three years, in the faith of the Reformed Church; the latter had died in 1872, when fifty-nine years old. To their marriage were born eleven children, namely: Abraham, of Reading; Peter, who died young; Margaret M., married to David H. Abraham B. Kauffman began life by handling ore, but also began renting farms in 1868, doing hauling and farming together. He is a Republican, has served as judge of elections, and is now inspector of elections.

CHRISTIAN C. LIPP, who has resided on his present place, in Pequea township, since 1885, was born of German descent, in Conestoga Center, Lancaster county, Jan. 23, 1852.

Christopher Lipp, his grandfather, emigrated from Germany when a young man, and engaged in farming and general work. He wedded Miss Martha Kreider, of Lancaster county, and they became the parents of nine children: Susan, wife of Benjamin Miller, of Providence township; Jacob, of West Lampeter township; Christian, the father of our subject; Mary, deceased; Barbara, deceased; Martha, wife of John May, of Columbia; Benjamin, deceased, who was a resident of Pequea township; Elizabeth, wife of John Krieder, of Martic township; and John, of Lancaster.

Christian Lipp, son of Christopher, was born in Pequea township about 1830. His father dying when he was but twelve years of age, he went to live with Jonas Harnish for a short time, and from there went to live with Thomas Groff, of Providence township. Later he learned the blacksmith trade with William Amet, of Lancaster county, after which, for some years, he worked at his trade for different men. For some years he engaged in well digging, and it is said he dug 100 wells in Lancaster county. He married Miss Mary Charles, of Conestoga Center, and they have had six children: Christian C. (our subject) and Daniel C., twins, the latter a resident of Lampeter township; Benjamin, who died in childhood; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Dagen; Benjamin (2), who lives at home with his father; and Miss Martha, at home. The parents are both members of the United Evangelical Church, and Mr. Lipp was for some time trustee of that church.

Christian C. Lipp remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-four years of age, receiving a common school education. He then married Kate Christ, daughter of Amos Christ, of Manor township, and began life for himself, being employed at general work, and in raising tobacco. In 1885 he purchased the farm where he now resides, and he has since engaged continuously in farming. He has a stand in the Central Market in Lancaster City, where he disposes of the products of his farm every Saturday morning. Mr. Lipp is one of the energetic, progressive residents of his township, and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

Mr. and Mrs. Lipp are both members of the United Evangelical Church at Millersville. They are the parents of seven children, four living and three deceased: Mary Cora, deceased; Susie Alice, at home; Esther Naomi, deceased; Christiana Augusta, Charles Parson and Edna Irene, at home; and Raymond Arthur, deceased.

REV. ABRAHAM M. WITMER. This devoted servant of God is a member of the ministry of the Mennonite Church, whose creed was the faith of his ancestors, as it is of his children. His family is of Swiss origin, but the name of the earliest ancestor who emigrated from Switzerland to America is not known. He settled in Manor township, however, and it was there that his son Jacob, Mr. Witmer's great-grandfather, was born in 1760.

Jacob Witmer was a farmer, and, like most farmers of his day, toiled early and late to cultivate the soil and subdue the rebellious forces of nature. He married Fannie Kauffman, and was the father of three sons and four daughters: John, Abraham, Jacob, Anna, Fannie, Elizabeth and Magdalena. Of the daughters Fannie and Magdalena remained spinsters; Anna married Abraham Herr; and Elizabeth married Henry Stoner; John married Lizzie Martin, of Lancaster county, and later removed to Franklin county, where he met death through falling from the limb of a tree; Jacob was a Lancaster county farmer, and the husband of Elizabeth Ensmann.

Abraham Witmer, the second son of Jacob, was Rev. Mr. Witmer's grandfather, and was also engaged in farming. His death occurred after his fortieth birthday. He married Maria Kilhiffer, who bore him three sons and one daughter: Jacob, Abraham, Christian and Elizabeth. Jacob lived in the old homestead; he married Mary Miller, but their union was without issue. Abraham was the father of Rev. Mr. Witmer, and a more extended story of his life is given in the following paragraph.

Christian died in July, 1902, at the age of eighty; he had been twice married, his first wife, Susan Funk, leaving him with two sons, Abram F. and Martin F.; his second marriage was with Elizabeth Kendig, the issue being three daughters: Mary (Mrs. John G. Kreider), Lizzie (widow of Aaron Newcomer) and Fannie (who lives at home, unmarried). Elizabeth, the only daughter of Abraham (first) became the wife of Christian Charles, of Manor.

Abraham Witmer (2), son of Abraham, was, himself, a minister in the old Mennonite Church, having been ordained in 1849, and he faithfully served his people in a clerical capacity for nearly a third of a century. His labors were chiefly in the churches at Masonville and Habacker. By trade he was a cabinet maker, but after his marriage he began farming, and in 1849 bought a farm of 102 acres in Manor township. This is now owned by Rev. Mr. Witmer, who has added eight acres thereto. In 1875 he gave up active work, and on Oct. 15, 1882, he passed from earth, to enjoy a better estate than the world can give. He married Leah, a daughter of Abraham and Mary (Kaufman) Miller. Their five children were: Maria, Abraham M., Isaac, Mattie and Jacob. Isaac and Jacob died in childhood.

Abraham M. Witmer was born on his father's farm (now owned by S. M. Kaufman), near Central Manor, Nov. 5, 1842. He received a good common school education. On his thirty-second birthday he married, and at once took charge of the home farm. For many years he was a director in the Mennonite Fire Insurance Co., but since ordination to the ministry on Sept. 8, 1892, he has devoted all his time and energy to the service of the Church. His work has been chiefly in the same fields of labor as those cultivated by his father, although while the latter addressed his flocks in German, the son preaches in English. His earnest piety and blameless life have greatly endeared him to the people among whom his lot has been cast, while his broad, Christian spirit, kindly disposition and spotless integrity have won for him the unaffected respect of the community at large. The devotion of such labors in the Lord's vineyard cannot go unrewarded.

The maiden name of his wife was Mary Eshbach, whose father, John, was well known and highly esteemed. She was born Jan. 5, 1853, and died Nov. 15, 1886. Six children were born of their marriage, one died in infancy and the surviving five live at home, unmarried, with their bereaved father. Their names, with dates of their births, are as follows: Fannie E., Jan. 17, 1876; John, March 13, 1877 (died Oct. 14, 1878); Abraham E., April 17, 1879; Benjamin E., March 10, 1881; Annie E., Dec. 13, 1882; and Leah E., Oct. 4, 1884.

HENRY S. ESHELMAN, a retired farmer and a native of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born on a farm adjoining the village of Cordelia Sept. 14, 1826, a son of David and Maria (Summy) Eshelman, who were farming people—the father dying in 1833, at the age of forty-eight years, on the homestead in West Hempfield township, and the mother in Clark county, Ohio, in 1880, when seventy-one years of age.

David and Maria Eshelman had born to them a family of eleven children, namely: Anna, Jacob and Benjamin, deceased; David, a retired farmer in Illinois; John, died in Ohio; Elizabeth, in Carlisle, Ohio, and widow of Joseph Musser; Peter, a retired merchant in Carlisle, Ohio; Martin, a carpenter in Illinois; Henry S., whose name opens this sketch; Maria, deceased wife of Isaac Neiswanger, of Ohio; and Barbara, who is married and is living in Springfield, Ohio.

Henry S. Eshelman lived on the home farm until twenty years of age; and then began an apprenticeship at shoemaking in Manor township, with David Bixler, with whom he worked four years, then returned to his home, worked at the trade until 1857, and then began farming on a small scale, purchasing fourteen acres of his present farm in 1858.

On Aug. 5, 1852, Henry S. Eshelman married, in Lancaster, Miss Hettie Weller, and there have been born to this union ten children, as follows: Mary, wife of Abraham Meisky, of Columbia; Sarah, unmarried and at home; Albert, deceased; Emma, widow of Benjamin Herr, of Columbia; Alice, who died a young lady; Anna, wife of Amos Schuman, farmer of Manor township; Ulysses G., professor of music at home; Aaron, also a professor of music at Lancaster; Elizabeth, wife of James Youtz, a machinist at Mountville; and Martha, twin of Elizabeth, married to Philip Bard, a stonemason in West Hempfield township.

Mrs. Hettie (Weller) Eshelman was born in West Hempfield township April 2, 1833, a daughter of Frederick and Anna (Kuhns) Weller, early settlers of the township. Frederick Weller was a shoemaker and died in the township in 1875, when seventy-five years old, and his widow died in Lancaster in 1882, at the same age. Both were members of the Lutheran church, and to their marriage were born the following children: Mattie, who died in Ohio, the wife of Jacob Binkley; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Frank Piffer; Hettie, now Mrs. Eshelman; Fred, who was killed in an ore bank in West Hempfield township; Anna, widow of William Irwin, of Columbia; Fannie, deceased wife of Henry May; Isaac, an ex-soldier in Dayton, Ohio; and Harriet and Sarah, twins, living in Lancaster.

Henry S. Eshelman is a Republican in politics, is very popular with his party, and has served as assessor one year, supervisor one year, and as register-assessor fifteen years. He is a member of the G. A. R., having been in the military service of the United States, although never in battle. Mr. Eshelman enlisted at Lancaster, in February, 1865, in Co. F, 195th P. V. I., under Capt. John Rutler, for twelve months or during the war, but as the war closed in April, before the regiment reached the part of the front where active hostilities had been going on, Mr. Eshelman was honorably discharged at Washington, D. C., and was mustered out at Philadelphia.

HENRY S. HOTTENSTEIN, a well-known and representative business man of Mt. Joy township, carries on his furniture, cabinetmaking and undertaking business in a well equipped building located on the Manheim road, some two miles from the village of Elizabethtown. There he was born July 17, 1857, son of Benjamin and Susan (Shiffler) Hottenstein, the former of whom was a native of East Petersburg, Lancaster county, and the latter of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania.

Benjamin Hottenstein, the father of Henry S., was a son of Jacob and Catherine (Neece) Hottenstein, of East Petersburg. Jacob Hottenstein was a well-known manufacturer of brushes, spinning-wheels, etc., for many years, his work being considered excellent in every particular. He retired from business after a long career of usefulness, and died in Elizabethtown at a good old age. Benjamin inherited much of his father's skill and also became a manufacturer in wood. He moved to the location previously mentioned in 1855, and prior to his death, in 1893, at the age of sixty-nine years, the firm became Hottenstein & Son, Henry S. being the junior partner. The mother of Henry S. Hottenstein was a daughter of Henry and Catherine Shiffler, natives of Dauphin county, who later lived in Lancaster county; the life of Henry Shiffler ended in Naperville, Ill., where he was engaged in farming. Mrs. Hottenstein died in November, 1896, at the age of seventy-one years, and was interred in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. Henry S. was the only child of his parents.

Henry S. Hottenstein was educated in the common schools of Lancaster county and learned his business with his father, becoming the latter's partner at the age of twenty-four years. Since that time he has conducted a very successful and prosperous furniture and cabinetmaking business. He is one of the best educated undertakers in the township, having been instructed in embalming in Harrisburg. Mr. Hottenstein is a member of the German Baptist Church. In politics he is a stanch Republican.

On Nov. 11, 1880, Mr. Hottenstein was united in marriage with Miss Mary A. Gruver, and two children were born to this union: Amos G. and Sarah A., the latter dying when one day past her third birthday. Mrs. Hottenstein was born Aug. 28, 1863, in Mt. Joy township, died April 7, 1900, and was buried in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. She was a daughter of Christian and Rebecca (Stauffer) Gruver, of Lancaster county, the former of whom for a long period was engaged in the grocery business in Elizabethtown, and had retired but a few months prior to his death, which occurred in March, 1894. Mr. and Mrs. Gruver had a family of four children, namely: Jacob, who died at the age of twenty years; Peter, who is a farmer in Conoy township; Mary A., the late Mrs. Hottenstein; and Sarah, the wife of Oliver T. Leinbaugh, who is in the sewing machine business in Harrisburg.

As a business man of reliability Mr. Hottenstein is highly regarded in his community, and he merits the esteem he enjoys as a first-class citizen.

JOHN SCHOCK, a native of Manor township, was born Oct. 15, 1854, and is a descendant of one of the earliest settlers of the county. The family is of German origin, and a brief record of the American branch is as follows:

Jacob Schock, the founder of the Lancaster family bearing his surname, was from Hessen, Germany, and emigrated to this country about 1750, making his first purchase of land from the United States Government in 1759. This tract, situated in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa., comprised 185 acres in the woods, from which, through untiring industry, he wrought out a comfortable home, as it is a well known fact that he was a poor man on his arrival in the country. Jacob Schock married Esther Grove, who bore him the following named children: Barbara, born Feb. 13, 1746; Anna, Aug. 18, 1747; Elizabeth, Jan. 3, 1749; Fannie, Sept. 20, 1750; Mary, Jan. 25, 1752; Jacob, Aug. 16, 1753; John, Jan. 16, 1756; Magdalena, Oct. 6, 1758; John, March 25, 1761; and Abraham, July 25, 1764. Jacob married a Miss Strickler, from York county. John is next in the line of descent.

John Schock, son of John, was born Nov. 29, 1795, on the old homestead farm in Manor township, which his father willed to him. He married a Miss Seigrist, who died very young, and his second wife was Fannie Kurtz, who was born Sept. 13, 1793, and died in 1857. His death occurred in 1867. They had two children, Jacob and Magdalena, the former of whom will be spoken of in full a little farther on. The latter, born July 11, 1826, died unmarried Nov. 3, 1899, at the age of seventy-three, highly respected.

Jacob Schock, son of John, was born Oct. 17, 1824, and was reared to farming on the old homestead. He married Rebecca Strickler, who was born in York county, Pa., in 1823, and they reared a family of five children, and lost five who died in infancy. The others were as follows: Mary, deceased wife of Tobias Seagrist, of Manor township; Fannie, married to Martin Hostetter, of West Hempfield township; Rebecca, unmarried; John, whose name opens this sketch; and Isaiah, who died at the age of seventeen years. Jacob Schock died in the faith of the Dunkard Church Nov. 22, 1875, and his widow survived until March 22, 1899.

John Schock was reared on the old homestead one mile north of Creswell, and was educated, like most farmer lads, in the district school. On March 27, 1877, he married Mary Musser, who was born in West Hempfield township Dec. 17, 1854, daughter of Martin and Catherine (Hostetter) Musser. To this felicitous union have been born twelve children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Martha, June 1, 1878; Katie, Oct. 2, 1879; Isaiah, Nov. 6, 1881; Rebecca, Aug. 1, 1883; Martin, July 25, 1885 (died in infancy); Jacob, Feb. 27, 1887; Mary May, May 26, 1889; Amelia, Feb. 17, 1891 (died in infancy); Naomi, Sept. 12, 1892; John, June 16, 1894; Elizabeth, Nov. 26, 1896; and Fannie, Aug. 23, 1899. The family, so far as the parents and elder children are concerned, are strict members of the Dunkard Society, to the teachings of which they have faithfully adhered, and they have gained the esteem of all who know them.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HERSH, a general blacksmith in East Donegal township, was born in East Hempfield township Nov. 24, 1858, and is a son of Cyrus and Catharine (Hertzler) Hersh, who were natives of Drumore and Manor townships, respectively. Both died in West Donegal township, where the father was engaged in blacksmithing. He was born Jan. 19, 1832, and died April 3, 1894; the mother, who was born June 26, 1831, died Nov. 1, 1894. They were buried in Graybills Church cemetery, and both had been for years honored and respected members of the Mennonite Church. They had three children: Elam, a machinist at Rheems Station, Pa.; Benjamin F.; and Harry, a painter at Rheems Station.

Cyrus and Elizabeth (Cohic) Hersh, the paternal grandparents of Benjamin F., lived in Pequea township. His maternal grandparents, Jacob and Catharine (Herr) Hertzler, lived in Manor township. All are now deceased, and they are buried in the Millersville and New Danville cemeteries, respectively.

REV. REUBEN S. NOLT. Not only is Lancaster county justly noted for the wonderful fertility of her soil, but also for the superiority of her farmer citizens, many of them being consistent members of the devout religious body known as Mennonites, whose frugality and industry produce the signs of thrift and prosperity shown in their surroundings. Among these worthy people who have for generations exerted a beneficial influence through the county are the representatives of the Nolt family, an exemplary member of which is Rev. Reuben S. Nolt, a leading citizen of Strasburg township.

Reuben S. Nolt was born Feb. 23, 1844, in West Hempfield township, a son of Jonas and Elizabeth (Schrader) Nolt, both of whom have long since passed away, the father when Reuben was but four years of age. At this time he removed to his present farm in Strasburg township, purchasing eighty-six acres of very desirable land, at that location, and here he has since built up a beautiful home, erecting commodious buildings, not only for comfortable residence but also for the proper housing of his fine stock and the yield of his fields. Reuben S. Nolt is a very intelligent agriculturist, and realizes the advantage of good machinery and proper drainage and cultivation of the land, as well as the desirability of giving attention only to the best of stock and cattle.

On Oct. 31, 1876, Reuben S. Nolt was married to Lavinia Herr, a daughter of Abraham and Leah (Mayers) Herr, of West Lampeter township, who was born Nov. 22, 1848. man of worth and sterling traits of character. In his estimable wife he finds a worthy help-mate. Mrs. Nolt belongs to two of the best known and respected of the old pioneer families of the county, her ancestry dating as far back as 1709.

DAVID P. BITNER. During the greater part of his active life David P. Bitner was creditably identified with business enterprises in Lancaster, and his death, March 26, 1901, removed from accustomed haunts a man of most honorable intent, and apt money making capabilities. A native son of Lancaster, he was born Aug. 12, 1843, a son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Porter) Bitner, of Lancaster county. An extended account of the Bitner ancestry may be found in the monograph of Abraham Bitner, a nephew of David P., and a prominent business man of Lancaster.

In his youth Mr. Bitner had fair educational advantages, and in later life it was his pride to read much and to maintain an interest in current events. All things combined to throw him upon his own resources, and to make him, while quite young, the arbiter of his own destiny. He seems to have planned wisely and well, for he left considerable property, and was safely launched in the confidence of the business and social world. In early life he was in the employ of the freight line firm of J. R. Bitner & Bro., and he afterward repaired to Philadelphia and hauled freight for the Pennsylvania railroad. Upon returning to Lancaster he was at one time a member of the freight line firm of C. A. Bitner & Co., afterward dissolved, and he was also a member of the coal firm of Bitner, Sprecker & Coho. Eventually he embarked in an independent coal business, and at the time of his death was known as an extensive dealer in this necessary commodity.

smith by trade, but for the last thirty-three years of his life a railroad engineer. They were consistent members of the Amish Church.

Joseph Kurtz grew up on the farm and attended the public schools, remaining with his father, assisting in agricultural work, until within three years before his marriage. Then he began farming in East Earl township, where he remained for two years, when he came to his present fine farm of 120 acres in Salisbury township. In 1869 Mr. Kurtz began the manufacture of lime, and with three kilns he manufactures 27,000 bushels of lime yearly. The business is well managed and produces a fine income. To the union of John and Mary Stauffer were born the following named children: John M. (deceased), who was married twice, first time to a Hossle, and second to a Greider; Abraham (deceased), who married Miss Kate Nissley; Henry M., of Rossmere, Lancaster county; Anna M.; and Jacob M.

In November, 1878, Jacob M. Stauffer married Miss Ella Young, of Lancaster, and to this union were born: Cyrus Y., Alice Y., Abraham Y., David Y. and Jacob Y. Mrs. Jacob M. Stauffer was born in Mt. Joy township, daughter of Abraham and Susan (Hershey) Young, of that township, where they now reside on a farm. Mr. Young was born in 1833, and Mrs. Young was born in 1832. They are members of the German Baptist Church. For a number of years Mr. Young was a school director. Mr. and Mrs. Young had children as follows: Jacob H., a farmer of Mt. Joy, married Miss Anna Heistand; Clayton H. died in infancy; Ella H. is the widow of Jacob M. Stauffer. Mrs. Stauffer's grandparents on her father's side were John and Susan (Kauffman) Young, and her maternal grandfather was Jacob Hershey, who married a Witmer. All were of Lancaster county.

Jacob M. Stauffer remained with his parents until two years prior to coming of age, after which he worked for different farmers in the neighborhood. After his marriage he engaged in the manufacture of lime for two years, and then took his father-in-law's farm in Mt. Joy township, where he remained four years. He then took the David Hershey farm, in Mt. Joy township, where he remained thirteen years. In April, 1898, he purchased and took charge of the John L. Brandt (formerly Sam Hossler) farm, in Rapho township, where he remained until his death. He was a good Christian man, and an active member of the German Baptist Church. His widow remains on the farm, which is a fine place of ninety-seven acres, managed for her by her sons. They are progressive, and under their efforts the tract is very profitable. The family is well known and respected in the community and none stand higher in the good will of all who know them, than Mrs. Stauffer and her sons and daughters.

JOSEPH G. JAMISON. Among the energetic and representative farmer citizens of Little Britain township, residing in Oak Hill, is Joseph G. Jamison, who carries on a prosperous machinery and implement business in that place, doing business for the Walter A. Wood Harvesting Machine Co. He also manages a small, well kept and finely improved farm, and is one of the successful and reputable citizens of his part of the county.

Mr. Jamison was born in Little Britain township June 7, 1848, son of John and Mary (Gyles) Jamison, of the same township, the latter a daughter of Joseph Gyles, of Chester county. John Jamison was a son of John and Mary Ann (Patton) Jamison, the former of whom was born in Ireland, and was an early settler in Lancaster county. Of their twelve children, nine grew to maturity: Joseph, James, Samuel, John, Adam, William, Isabel, Catherine and Margaret, all of whom have passed away.

John Jamison was born in 1820, and was married in 1842. His wife died in 1866, and he survived until Aug. 5, 1896. Their eleven children were: Robert P., who died during the Civil war; Mary A., who married Allan C. Dance, of Wilmington, Del.; Joseph G.; Laura J. and Florence E., twins, the former of whom married Elwood Young, of Chester county, and the latter of whom married John Ritter, of Westchester, Pa.; Harvey, who lives in Chester county; Estella, who died at the age of fourteen years; and several who died in infancy. John Jamison was a true patriot and loyal citizen, serving faithfully and well in Company D, 178th P. V. I. In politics he was a Republican, and he was an honorable and industrious citizen.

Joseph G. Jamison was reared on the farm, and was educated in the public schools of his district. In his eighteenth year, during the Civil war, he was in the employ of the United States Government at Giesboro Point, Washington, D. C. Fraternally Mr. Jamison is connected with several orders, being a past grand of the I. O. O. F.; sachem of Ocloconee Tribe, No. 324, I. O. R. M.; and a member of the Good Templars. He has also organized a lodge of the Improved Order of Heptasophs, by a commission of the supreme organizer, John W. Cruett, of Baltimore. In political preference he has long been a stanch Republican, and is school director of Little Britain township. He is prominent in business as well as in social and political circles.

On Dec. 9, 1869, Mr. Jamison was married to Miss Hattie Reburn, born Jan. 6, 1849, daughter of Thomas and Jane (Featherman) Reburn, of Chester county. She was one of a family of six children born to her parents, the other members being: Michael, a resident of Fulton township; Nancy Jane, unmarried; Benjamin, of Lancaster; Elizabeth, unmarried; and Jane.

JOHN BENDER, the genial proprietor of the "Eden Hotel," is a representative of an old settled family in Lancaster county.

David Bender, the great-grandfather of John, was born in Upper Leacock township, July 26, 1741, and died April 20, 1824. His wife, Margaret, was born Oct. 1, 1755, and died Sept. 21, 1809. Mr. Bender was one of the founders of that branch of the German Reformed Church which is known as the Heller's Church. He was a successful farmer, and when he died left his two sons, John and George, each a fine farm. He also was the father of five daughters: Catherine, the wife of Joseph Heller; Susan and Sarah, who died unmarried; one who married a Mr. Whideler; and another who married a Mr. Shreiner.

John Bender, son of David and grandfather of John, was born in Upper Leacock township, where he followed farming until his death. Elizabeth Rinzer, his wife, became the mother of eleven children: One that died in infancy; David; Michael; Mariah; George; William; John; Adam; Diller; Joseph; and Widler.

George Bender, the father of John, was born in Upper Leacock township in 1819, and was a life-long farmer. He was married Feb. 10, 1842, to Miss Harriet Johnson, of Maytown, by whom he became the father of the following children: John, whose name introduces this article; Mary C., the wife of Daniel R. Donor; Diller, deceased; Anna E., widow of Samuel Patterson; Carpenter W., of Newhall; George J., of East Dubuque, Iowa; Alice, wife of Milton Groff; and Frances L., wife of David Myers.

John Bender was born March 3, 1843, in Upper Leacock township, where the family had long been established, and where he was reared on the farm. He was educated in the public schools, and when he was about twenty-eight years of age, he began farming for himself in Earl township, where he remained some five years. He was in West Earl township one year, and in 1880 removed to Manheim township, to take charge of a farm for Mr. B. J. McGrann, following farming and teaming for two years. At the end of that time he sold his stock and bought the hotel at Eden, which he conducted for four years. After selling it, he bought it back again in 1889, and continues as its landlord to the present date. A genial and pleasant man he has proved peculiarly successful in his hotel work, which has proved very profitable to him. As a farmer he excelled, and at a plowing contest in the county won a prize of $500 offered for the straightest furrow and the most even plowing. Mr. Bender is a broad-gauge man, and is deeply interested in the public welfare. He bears one of the old and honored names in Lancaster county, and his life has been such as to add to its lustre.

Mr. Bender was married Feb. 27, 1882, to Miss Serena B., a daughter of Jacob and Selma (Bodderf) Longenecker; she was born near Lincoln, Lancaster county, Aug. 19, 1849. They are pleasant and affable people and are among the most worthy and respected citizens of the community. Mr. Bender takes much pride in the memory of his ability as a teamster in the days when he was on the road. He won the "bells," given as a token of being the best driver on the road.

FRANKLIN BOOKS, a noted farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in that township near the Colerain line, Feb. 24, 1840, a son of Samuel and Mary (Reed) Books, both natives of this county.

Samuel Books was born in 1800, a son of Michael and Nancy (Groff) Books, one of the old families of Lancaster county, who reared a large family, all the members of which are dead. He settled on a twenty-five-acre tract, now a part of the Books farm, on which he erected a small house. Gradually he increased the farm by frequent purchases of small amounts of land, until he had come to own one of the large farms of the township. In 1870 he built the house where Franklin Books is now living, and where his wife, Mary Reed, who was about four years his junior, died in February, 1874, preceding him to the Better Land by some five years. Samuel Books and his wife were the parents of sixteen children, twelve of whom were living at the time of their death. We have record of the following: (1) William died unmarried in 1892; (2) Samuel, born in 1832, lives in York county; (3) George, born in 1836, died in childhood; (4) Jacob, born in 1838, is married, and lives in Oxford, Chester county; (5) Franklin is our subject; (6) Benjamin, born in 1842, lives in Indian Territory; (7) Alice, born in 1843, is the widow of William Lewis, of Little Britain, and is the mother of two children; (8) James, born in 1846, is married and has a family in Little Britain, where he is engaged in business as a farmer; (9) Michael and (10) Elizabeth, twins, born in 1848, of whom Michael is a farmer and has a wife and family in Chester county, while Elizabeth is the widow of David Rimer, of Eden township; (11) Ivan, born in 1852, is married and lives in Chester county; (12) Sarah, born in 1854, married Frank Conklin, and died, leaving one son, Lindley; (13) Mary, born in 1857, is the wife of Harry Brooks, of Lancaster, and the mother of Daisy, Warren, Cora and Nellie.

Franklin Books was reared on the home farm, and has remained on the parental home, caring for his parents as long as they lived, and he still holds the farm. When a young man he engaged in teaming and in hauling ore and lime.

In March, 1883, Franklin Books was married to Miss Lizzie J. Suters, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Book) Suters, long established in the county. The father was born in Little Britain, and the mother in Colerain township. They lived on a farm in Colerain township, where Mrs. Franklin Books was born in 1846, having her education in the public school of East Drumore township, where her parents soon established their home, and where they lived and died. Shortly after his marriage, Franklin Books established himself in Chester county, and four years later he bought the old Books farm, on which he is found at this writing.

Franklin Books and his wife are the parents of four children: Harry, born in 1884; Gaylon, born in 1885; Anne, born in 1887; and George C., born in 1890, but who died in infancy. Mr. Books is a Republican, and holds the same political ideas which his father cherished. He and his wife are among the most respected people of this section of Lancaster county, and their generous hospitality is shared by many neighbors and warm friends.

DAVID LEAMAN, one of the old and honored citizens of Lancaster county, has his residence on his farm, one mile southeast of Neffsville. He was born on a farm in West Lampeter township, March 31, 1831, a son of Abraham and Barbara (Buckwalter) Leaman, and has worthily sustained the honor of the name.

Abraham Leaman was the eldest in the family of eight children of Benjamin Leaman. He died when only thirty years of age, but though cut off early in life, gave indication of a strong and virile nature. He married Barbara Buckwalter, a daughter of David Buckwalter, of East Lampeter township, and had five children: David; Benjamin, of Lititz; Miss Catherine, a resident of Lancaster; Maria, deceased wife of Daniel Book, of West Lampeter township; and Samuel, who died in childhood. After the father's death the mother was married to Isaac Powell, by whom she had two children, Eli and Amanda, both residents of Lancaster. The mother died in her eighty-fifth year. She and her husband were members of the Mennonite Church.

David Leaman was reared on the farm in East Lampeter township, and educated in the common schools. When he was twenty-one years of age he entered into business activities for himself, and began farming on the place he now occupies, containing seventy-four acres. Following farming steadily until 1888, he then retired and located in a handsome and attractive house which he had built on the farm adjoining the old family homestead, where he expects to spend his declining days in peace and quiet.

Mr. Leaman was married Oct. 22, 1850, to Elizabeth Landis, a daughter of Abraham and Barbara Landis, born in East Lampeter township, Sept. 27, 1829. This union was blessed with eight children, of whom two are deceased: Barbara, wife of David Rohrer, of Upper Leacock township; Matilda, wife of Ezra Groff, of Lower Leacock township; Abraham, a farmer of Manheim township; Mary Ann, wife of Frank Landis, of East Lampeter; David, who lives in the old homestead and is wedded to Lizzie B. Hess; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Hess, of Oregon; and Benjamin and Ezra, who both died in childhood. Mr. and Mrs. Leaman and their children are members of the Landis Valley Mennonite Church, where Mr. Leaman has been a deacon since 1873.

JOSEPH AIKIN, a resident of Vintage, Lancaster county, was born in County Antrim, near Belfast, Ireland, Dec. 22, 1834, a son of William J. and Margaret (McCormick) Aikin, the former of whom was a carpenter, and lived and died in Ireland, as did also the latter.

Joseph Aikin was reared in his native land, and had his education in the local schools. In 1851 he came to the United States, and located at Williams-town, Lancaster county, where he had an uncle and an aunt living, with whom he made his home. He determined to learn the cabinet-maker's trade, and for the ensuing three years he was engaged in serving the necessary apprenticeship. At the end of that time he went into business for himself as contractor and builder, which he followed until 1899, when he sold out his business to his sons, Joseph and William. In contracting and building he had developed an extensive patronage, and was widely known throughout the eastern part of Lancaster county, as a reliable and capable workman, whose word could be safely taken. In 1879 Mr. Aikin purchased some six acres of land, and the following year erected a very handsome residence, which is still counted among the most attractive and desirable in the village.

On May 25, 1858, Joseph Aikin was married to Miss Sarah W. Walker, a daughter of James and Mary (McFadden) Walker. James Walker, who was a native of County Derry, Ireland, came to this country when a lad of sixteen years, settling in the vicinity of Williamstown, Lancaster county, where he made his home until his death, in 1849, at the age of seventy-seven years. Mary (McFadden) Walker, who was the second wife of James Walker, was born in Lancaster county, and she became the mother of two children: Sarah W., wife of Joseph Aikin, and Anna, who married George Bower, of The Gap, and died in 1900. By his first wife, who was Miss Anna Kane, Mr. Walker had one son, Isaac, who died at Peoria, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Aikin are the parents of five children: (1) James W. married Mary Witwer, and lives at Nine Points, Lancaster county; he is a blacksmith, and holds the office of justice of the peace. (2) William John married Miss Clara Hershey; he is a contractor and builder at Williamstown, where he has taken up his father's business. (3) Anna Mary married Edward Charles, a farmer at Thorndale, Chester county, Pa. (4) Elizabeth is the wife of Amos K. McIlvaine, of Philadelphia. (5) Joseph Leman is in business with his brother, William J.; he is unmarried. All the family belong to the Paradise Presbyterian Church, where Joseph Aikin serves as a trustee.

JAMES M. LONG, one of the leading citizens of Kirks Mills, Little Britain township, was born June 26, 1861, in East Drumore township, a son of Hugh and Rebecca (Pusey) Long, the former of whom is one of the most highly respected of the citizens of that township.

Hugh Long was a son of James Long, and a grandson of John Long, who came from England about 1750, and settled near Chestnut Level. By trade he was an iron worker and some of the iron work which has stood the storms of many years in the Presbyterian Church in Chestnut Level, attests his skill. The children born to Hugh Long and wife numbered three, namely: James M. of this sketch; Annie, who is the wife of Martin Coulter, of Bart township; and Sanders, who manages the home farm.

In his youth James M. Long attended the district schools of his locality, growing up accustomed to farm duties. His choice of career made of him an agriculturist, and although at first his means were limited and there was great need of industry, he conquered all difficulties, and he is now one of the substantial and leading farmers of his neighborhood. His estate comprises one of the valuable and desirable tracts of land in Little Britain township, located within one and one-half miles of Kirks Mills; it contains 192 acres of fine land, improved with excellent buildings of every kind.

On Nov. 28, 1889, Mr. Long was married to Miss Alice C. L. Lanborn, of Drumore township, a daughter of Aquilla B. and Ann (Ambler) Lanborn, born

Feb. 14, 1867. Her parents had a family of three children, the others being William, who was killed by a kick of a horse; and Addie, who resides with Mrs. Long. Mr. Lanborn can trace a long line of ancestry, as far back as the year 1697, when occurred the birth of Robert, in Berkshire, England. Robert had a son Robert, who came to America, and his son George was born in Lancaster county, Pa. George (2), son of George, was born in Chester county Dec. 23, 1763, and his son, Smedley Lanborn, was born June 6, 1807, and became the grandfather of Mrs. Long. Aquilla B. Lanborn was born Feb. 23, 1833, and he resides in the home of his daughter; his wife, born March 25, 1831, died Jan. 11, 1894.

In 1888 Mr. Long removed from East Drumore township and purchased his present farm, and has ever since been prospering in farming and stock-raising. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Long are: Ralph W., born Aug. 30, 1891; Wynona May, born July 19, 1893; Anna M., born Sept. 6, 1895; and Forest, born June 1, 1901. In their pleasant country home, surrounded by their bright and interesting children, Mr. and Mrs. Long realize the best there is in life. Mrs. Long was reared in the Quaker belief, but Mr. Long is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and both of them are among the most highly respected residents of this township, where they have lived so long.

AMOS M. RETTEW, master-painter for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Co., was born in Cordelia, West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, April 20, 1848, and is still a resident of the village.

George Rettew, father of Amos M., and also a native of West Hempfield township, was a teamster by vocation, and also served many years as constable. He died in 1866, aged forty years, and was buried in the Brookhart cemetery in West Hempfield township; his widow died in 1898, when seventy-two years old, and her remains were interred in the United Brethren cemetery, at Cordelia. To the marriage of George Rettew with Elizabeth Mumaw were born nine children, namely: David, who died young; Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Amos M.; George, who died young; Henry, a farmer in West Hempfield township; Adeline, wife of John Eiker, a carpenter in Cordelia; Harriet, unmarried; Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Kidinger, of Stark county, Ohio; and Andrew, who died young.

The paternal grandparents of Amos M. Rettew were David and Mary (Kellar) Rettew, of French extraction, the former a farmer in West Hempfield township, who passed his latter days in retirement and died in Marietta; his wife died in Maytown. The maternal grandparents were Peter and Catherine (Metzgar) Mumaw, the former being a wood-cutter, living in Lancaster.

Amos M. Rettew began making his own livelihood at the age of fourteen years by hauling ore in the banks, and five years later went to work in the smelting furnaces, where he remained four years, when he entered the employ of the R. & C. R. R. Co., as fireman. After two years, he returned to work in the furnaces, and a few years later opened a tavern in Cordelia, which he successfully conducted four years, and then became a painter for the P. & R. R. Co., and was advanced by degrees until, in 1892, he was made foreman—the position he still holds.

In August, 1868, at Lancaster, Amos M. Rettew married Mary Hoffman, and to this union have been born three children, viz.: George, who married Mary Strictmeyer, and is a laborer in Cordelia; Lizzie, deceased wife of Albert Bard, also a laborer in Cordelia; and Frederick H., deceased. Mrs. Mary (Hoffman) Rettew was born in West Hempfield township Dec. 12, 1850, a daughter of Frederick and Magdalena (Snyder) Hoffman, who were born in Germany, but who were married in Lancaster county, Pa., and who died in West Hempfield township—the father in 1889, at the age of seventy-one years, and the mother in 1885, when sixty-seven years old. They were members of the German Lutheran church, and their remains were interred in the Lutheran cemetery in West Hempfield township. Their children, five in number, were as follows: Peter, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad; Mary, wife of Amos M. Rettew; Gertrude, wife of Albert Harthorn, a farmer of Conoy township; Kate, married to George Stubenfall, a carpenter in Philadelphia; and Lena, deceased.

Amos M. Rettew is a member of the P. & R. Relief Association, and in politics is a Republican. He has led an industrious and strictly honorable life, and his present prosperous condition is the result of his integrity and good management, as well as of his unfailing courtesy toward all with whom he had business transactions or social relations.

DAVID H. HARNISH, a substantial farmer and business man of Pequea township, who is quite extensively engaged in the truck gardening branch of agriculture, and who also through the winter seasons is a large slaughterer of hogs for the markets of the country, belongs to that thrifty, frugal class which has given character and standing to Lancaster county.

Mr. Harnish was born in the year 1841, in what was then Conestoga township, but is now Pequea, son of Martin and Fanny (Harnish) Harnish, and the grandson of David Harnish, who was a successful farmer and land owner of this locality. The latter married Lizzie Snively and to them were born children as follows: Jacob, a resident of the City of Lancaster; David, a resident of Stark county, Ohio; Abram, who also moved to Ohio, and who died in that State; Fanny, married to Abner Rohrer, and now deceased; John and Eliza, also now deceased; and Martin.

Martin Harnish, the father of David H., was reared to agricultural pursuits. On reaching mature years he was married to Fanny Harnish, who was born March 11, 1804. They were plain, unassuming country folk, good Christian God-fearing people, who reared their children in that line and to habits of industry and usefulness. They were identified with the Reformed Mennonite Church. They died, the father in 1884, and the mother in 1887, and their remains rest in the cemetery at New Danville. Their children were: Fanny (died in infancy), Lizzie, Annie (deceased wife of John L. Brenneman), Martin and David H.

David H. Harnish was reared on the home farm, and not unlike lads of the general farmer of that period, had only such schooling as the neighboring district schools afforded. These he attended but for a brief period between work in the winter months, for through the seasons of preparation and planting and harvesting he was hard at it in ploughing, sowing and reaping; and in the winter season between the doing of his chores and the riding of horses in tramping out and threshing the grain, he had only intervals at school, and hence meagre educational advantages. He has for years paid considerable attention to gardening, the raising of vegetables, etc., for the city markets. He is largely engaged through the winter slaughtering hogs for market, in which business he is probably the most extensively engaged of any one man, outside of the city, in Lancaster county. In the winter of 1899-1900 he killed between 200 and 300 head. He has been industrious, energetic and frugal, and through his persistency and his tenacity of purpose, has risen to a creditable position among his fellow men. He has been a good manager, and has met with deserved success. He adheres to the religious faith of his forefathers, and is a consistent member of the Reformed Mennonite Church, as are also all members of his family.

On October 31, 1878, David H. Harnish was married to Barbara Eckman, daughter of Isaac and Delilah (Benedict) Eckman, and two children have blessed the union, namely: Noah, who is associated in business with Riley Brothers & Raub, hardware merchants of Lancaster; and Cora.

The ancestors of John K. Rohrer came from Alsace, Germany, and emigrated to this country, settling in Lancaster county in the early days. John Rohrer, the grandfather of our subject, left a family of two children, by his first marriage. Frank, a physician of Philadelphia; Mary; Emily; and Charles, a student in the Philadelphia Medical College. Dr. T. M. Rohrer was reared in Lancaster county. He attended the State Normal school at Millersville, and then entered the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, where he graduated in 1881. He located in the town of Quarryville after graduation, and has since practiced his profession in that town.

In 1890 Dr. Rohrer married Miss Sue E. Hensel, and three children have been born of this union: Mary H., born in 1891; Robert H. and Richard P., twins, born in 1895. Mrs. Rohrer was born in 1863, daughter of George W. (deceased) and Anna M. Hensel, of Quarryville borough. She is a lady of culture and refinement, and is a graduate of Linden Hall Seminary, in Lancaster county. Dr. Rohrer is a Republican in politics, and has been a Burgess and member of the council. The Doctor and wife are members of the Reformed Church. He is a member of the Lancaster County and the State Medical Societies. The Doctor owns and occupies a fine house in the borough, and is one of the well-to-do practitioners of the district. He is a kind-hearted and charitable gentleman, whose hand has always been open to the deserving. He is well-known and universally respected for his merit as a man and a member of society.

WESLEY MILLER, tax collector of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, for the past five years, and a lifelong farmer, is one of the best and most favorably known residents of Silver Spring. He is yet a comparatively young man, but represents one of the old families of Lancaster county. He was born in East Hempfield township Oct. 20, 1857, son of Christian and Catherine (Moul) Miller, natives, respectively, of East Hempfield township, Lancaster county, and of Cumberland county.

Christian Miller, born in June, 1828, followed farming through life and is now a resident of Fulton township, Lancaster Co. His wife, Catherine, was born in April, 1828, daughter of John Moul.

To Christian and Catherine Miller were born the following children: Caron, deceased; Edwin, deceased; Franklin, a farmer of Pequea township; Wesley; John, deceased; Richard, of Fulton township; Hiram, a farmer of Fulton township; Mary, at home; and Susan, wife of Winfield Smith, of Fulton township.

Wesley Miller was reared on the farm, receiving a good common school education, and early applying his energies to agriculture. He married, Sept. 21, 1879, in Mountville, Pa., Miss Mary Leonard, born in Pequea township Sept. 14, 1856, the daughter of Abraham and Barbara (Shawb) Leonard. Her paternal grandparents were Frederick and Elizabeth (Lutz) Leonard, of Manor township, the grandfather serving as a soldier in the war of 1812. Her maternal grandparents were Martin and Catherine (Book) Shawb, prominent farmers of Providence township. Abraham Leonard died May 25, 1898, aged eighty-seven years; his wife died in December, 1875, aged fifty-four years. Both were devout members of the Dunkard church. Their family of four children consisted of Martin, a carpenter of West Hempfield township; Mary, wife of Wesley Miller; Catherine, deceased; and Aaron, a farmer of West Hempfield township. To Wesley and Mary (Leonard) Miller three daughters have been born, of whom Katie, the eldest, and Stella M., the youngest, are at home; and Alice B. is deceased.

In 1899 Mr. Miller retired from active farm life, and is now a resident of Silver Spring. In politics he is a Republican and is one of the leading members of the party in West Hempfield township. He is a member of the Mystic Chain, and in the social and business interests of the township is popular and influential.

CLINTON E. REMSBURG. Among the flourishing industries of the town of Maytown is the bakery business, and a leader in this line is Clinton E. Remsburg, who, since 1894, has there conducted a first-class modern bakery, and is the purveyor through the surrounding country of fine bread, cakes, pies and pretzels, requiring two wagons to supply his customers.

Mr. Remsburg was born in Walkersville, Frederick Co., Md., Jan. 22, 1862, a son of Edward and Sarah (Pacely) Remsburg, the former a native of Maryland, the latter of France. Both parents are residents of Walkersville, where they live retired, and both are valued members of the Reformed Church. To them were born: Cordelia, who married Jacob W. Cramer, a farmer near Walkersville; Lauretta V., widow of John V. Cramer; Americus E., of Fairfax county, Va.; Florence J., the wife of Dr. M. E. Leatherman, an eye and ear specialist of Washington, D. C.; Alice M., wife of Milton Sparr, of Woodsboro, Md.; Charles D., a druggist of Washington, D. C.; and Clinton E.

Although Clinton E. Remsburg has made a success as proprietor and manager of the Excelsior Bakery of Maytown, he was reared on a farm in his native State, where he was educated and remained until he was twenty-two years old. His natural bent was in the direction of a business life, and for two years he was a very successful salesman in the wagon and carriage line, but in 1887 he changed his residence from Walkersville to Marietta, Pa., and for a year was engaged in the leaf tobacco business. Later he saw a better opening in the sign and house painting line, which he followed for five years, coming to Maytown in December, 1894.

Mr. Remsburg has no practical knowledge of the baking business, but he is a capable manager, and understands the needs of the line into which he has entered with such success, hiring the most thorough workmen and using only the very best materials. In this way he has built up a trade second to none outside of the cities of the State, and his patronage is constantly increasing, as he endeavors, in every way, to fulfill every demand and keep abreast of the times, in all kinds of substantial and delicate bakery goods.

Mr. Remsburg was married, Dec. 11, 1884, to Miss Alice G. Brenneman, of Frederick, Md., and to this union have been born the following children: Charles R., Elwood, Walter and Robert, the last named deceased. Mrs. Remsburg was born in East Donegal township May 14, 1863, a daughter of John B. and Fanny (Engle) Brenneman; the family removed to Frederick, Md., in 1865. In 1885 Mr. Brenneman, with his family, returned to East Donegal, in 1891 removing to York, where he is now successfully engaged in the grocery business. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the Church of God. They have had children as follows: Anna, who married Hon. R. M. Neighbors, an official of the Frederick county, Maryland, Orphan Asylum; Lizzie, who married George E. Longenecker, of Philadelphia; Monroe, deceased; Martha, who married William Kellar, foreman in a large mill in Ellicott City, Md.; Rhoda, who married E. E. Grove, of Maytown; Alice G., Mrs. Remsburg; Ella, who married H. B. Picking, of York; Sallie, deceased; Myra, who married George Anthrom, a ticket agent for the Pennsylvania Railway Co.; Harry, deceased; Lotta, who married Harry Kochenwawer, of Lancaster; Mary, who married William Kellar, assistant superintendent of the coal mines at Irwin, Pa.; and Daniel, who assists his father in the store.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Remsburg are leading members of the Reformed Church, and in his political affiliations he is a Republican. Mr. Remsburg occupies a high position in the public esteem, and is universally regarded as one of the substantial and representative citizens of Maytown.

CHRISTIAN H. HOOVER. By both his paternal and maternal lines of ancestry Christian H. Hoover, one of the prosperous and influential citizens of Paradise township, is the representative of one of the oldest family names in Lancaster county. It was originally spelled Huber, and the pioneer forefathers of Christian H. were known by that name. He is a son of Jacob H. and Annie (Huber) Huber.

Christian Huber, his maternal grandfather, was a son of Christian Huber, and was born in Strasburg township, where he passed his entire life as one of the sturdy and prosperous farmers, owner of a property of 141 acres, located two miles south of the borough. He married Miss Annie Shaub, and to them were born the following named children: Henry S., who was a farmer of Providence township; Barbara, who married first Martin Groff and later Samuel Wenger, of Providence township; Fannie, who is still living, unmarried, at the age of eighty-two years, in Strasburg township, with D. E. Groff; Martha, who died unmarried; Maria, wife of Martin Huber, of Willowstreet; Christiana, who married Henry H. Huber, and removed to Illinois; Christian, a farmer, who died in Strasburg township; and Annie, the mother of Christian H. Christian Huber, the father of the above children, lived to the age of almost seventy years, and his wife reached the age of seventy-two. They were faithful and earnest members of the Old Mennonite Church.

Jacob Huber, the paternal grandfather of Christian H., was born in West Lampeter township, near Big Spring, and remained there engaged as a farmer until his death, at the age of forty-five years. He married Mary Herr, and to them were born the following children: Jacob H., father of Christian H.; Martin, of Willowstreet; Henry H., who went West and there died; Eliza, who married Cyrus Zittle, of Lampeter; and Susan, who is living unmarried, in Lancaster, at the age of sixty-eight years.

Jacob H. Hoover, father of Christian H., was born in West Lampeter township May 7, 1822. He was reared in his native township and prior to his marriage removed to Strasburg township, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death. He married Miss Annie Huber, who was born in Strasburg township in 1822. Of their eight children four died in childhood. The survivors are Christian H.; Amos, a farmer of Sterling, Ill.; Fannie, wife of Elias Esbenschade, of Strasburg township; and Elias, of Paradise township. The father died in 1895, at the age of seventy-three years, and the mother on Aug. 12, 1896, aged seventy-four.

Christian H. Hoover was born Nov. 4, 1842, and was reared on the farm. He received his education in the public schools, and when twenty-three years of age began his career as an agriculturist in Strasburg township, where for nine years he farmed on rented property. He then removed to the farm he now owns, which was then the property of Peter Herr, his father-in-law. This farm he continued to operate under lease until 1894, when he purchased the property. It contains ninety-four acres, and is one of the finest farms in Lancaster county. Its improvements, which are among the best, were made by Mr. Hoover, who has amply evinced that he is one of the wide-awake and public-spirited farmers of the county. He does not farm merely as a means of livelihood, nor because that vocation was nearest to him, but because he likes the work, and it is his fondness and interest in agricultural work that account very largely for his marked success.

Mr. Hoover married Miss Martha Herr, who was born March 14, 1839, on the farm they now occupy, daughter of Peter Herr. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover have no children of their own, but have given a home to a nephew, Moris H. Mylin. They are members of the Old Mennonite Church, and their lives, in one of the rich and favored regions of Lancaster county, have been spent in usefulness and value to those about them. They are most highly respected by all who know them.

THE REV. SYDNEY KEY EVANS, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Manheim, and of Hope Church, Mount Hope, is from an old English family, which has achieved much distinction in Theology, Medicine and Law. He was born at Aberavon, South Wales, Oct. 20, 1873, and is the son of William and Elizabeth (Key) Evans. With his parents he came to America in 1885, and settled at Scranton, Pa. After graduating from the Scranton high school, in 1890, he finished his preparation for college at the "School of the Lackawanna," Scranton, and in September, 1891, entered Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. Many prizes in Latin, Greek and English, and other college honors, the presidency of his class, the editorship of his college paper and the College Annual, fell to him. At the college commencement, in June, 1895, he delivered the Latin Salutatory, and received the degree of Bachelor of Arts with special honors in Latin, Greek and English. While at college Mr. Evans was a member of the I. K. A., the second oldest college society in America, and at the end of his junior year his scholarship won him an election to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. In 1898 his Alma Mater conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts.

In September, 1895, Mr. Evans entered the General Theological Seminary, New York, where he pursued his studies with much distinction. At his graduation, in May, 1898, he was one of five in a class of fifty to receive a special degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology. On June 15, 1898, Mr. Evans was ordained to the Diaconate at St. Luke's Church, Altoona, by the Right Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D. D., Bishop of Central Pennsylvania; and on Dec. 18, 1898, at his old parish church, St. Luke's, Scranton, he was ordained to the Priesthood by the same Bishop. On July 1, 1898, he became curate at St. James' Church, Lancaster, but resigned this charge to assume his present rectorship, on Thanksgiving Day, 1898. Under his devoted care there has been a remarkable spiritual and material development in the churches at Manheim and Mount Hope. It was a happy day for Mr. Evans, when, on St. Luke's Day, 1900, Hope Church, Mount Hope, was re-opened after a year spent in enlarging and remodeling the church by the addition of a new Chancel, Vestry and Porch, with a beautiful stone Altar and Pulpit and Font, and many other memorials, at a cost of over ten thousand dollars, the whole expense being borne by Miss Daisy E. B. Grubb, of Lancaster, in memory of her beloved parents, the late Clement and Mary Brooke Grubb. On Christmas Day, 1902, a splendid Baptistery, with three beautiful memorial windows, were unveiled. The Baptistery is also a gift from the same generous friend of the parish, in memory of her parents.

St. Paul's, Manheim, has more than quadrupled its communicant list under its present rector. The parish is now out of debt, has made many improvements, and has secured the ground and a goodly sum of money toward a new and larger church building, which has become a necessity. After such success, and with the outlook so promising, it is not strange that the Rev. Mr. Evans has received numerous calls to other and larger fields, but he has laid them all aside in unselfish devotion to his people. And it goes without saying, that his people are devoted to him.

SOLOMON R. HERR. Prominent among the representative farmers of Lancaster county residing in Upper Leacock township is Solomon R. Herr. A native son of the county, his whole life has been spent here, carrying agricultural pursuits to the highest perfection, and by a life of industry and integrity, reflecting credit upon a very old and honorable name in this part of the State. He was born at Bird-in-Hand, in East Lampeter township, Oct. 4, 1858.

His paternal grandparents were Benjamin R. and Mary (Rank) Herr, farming people of East Lampeter township, while on the maternal side of the family he is a grandson of Solomon and Elizabeth (Hoover) Myers, the former of whom was a native of Upper Leacock, and the latter of Earl township, they, too, being wealthy and prominent farmers.

Jacob R. and Susannah (Myers) Herr, the parents of Solomon R., were natives of Leacock and Upper Leacock townships, the former still residing in his native locality, where he was born March 18, 1828. Since 1891 he has lived retired. The mother of our subject was born Nov. 16, 1828, and died July 24, 1884, her remains now resting in the Myers cemetery in Upper Leacock township. The children born to Jacob R. and Susannah (Myers) Herr were: Benjamin; Solomon R.; Martin, who died in infancy; Jacob M., deceased, who married Anna C. Shaffer, and died April 30, 1888; Daniel, who died in infancy; Samuel M., a farmer in Paradise township; Elizabeth, who died in infancy; and Abraham M., a farmer in East Lampeter township.

Solomon R. Herr was reared on the farm and attended the district schools, assisting his father until his marriage, when he took entire charge of the old homestead farm for one year, removing to another tract in Upper Leacock township, where he remained for three years. In 1893 he removed to his present most valuable, improved and finely cultivated farm where he has continued ever since.

On Jan. 10, 1889, Mr. Herr was married to Miss Lydia A. Landis, a representative of one of the oldest and most substantial families in the county. No children have been born to this union. Mrs. Lydia A. (Landis) Herr was born in Upper Leacock township, May 10, 1856, a daughter of Christian R. and Hettie S. (Landis) Landis, of Upper Leacock township. Mr. Landis retired from active farming operations twenty-five years prior to his death, and he was one of the leading and influential citizens of Lancaster county, being a director in the Lancaster County National Bank; director in the Bridgeport Pike Co.; poor director; and prison inspector. He was one of the substantial and consistent supporters of the Mennonite Church of his township, and was the promoter of many religious and moral enterprises in the county. His burial was in Stumptown. His estimable widow, who was born Nov. 2, 1819, died March 22, 1902. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Landis were: Henry L., who died in 1899, married Mary Sechrist; Abraham L. died Jan. 9, 1842; Amos L. died on the same day and was laid away in the same grave; Reuben L. resides with our subject; Adam L., a farmer of East Lampeter township, married Lavinia Landis; Milton L., a farmer of Upper Leacock township, married first Mattie Becker, and second Lizzie Becker; and Lydia A. is the wife of our subject.

Mr. Herr has always been a Republican in politics. Both he and wife have from youth been members of the Mennonite Church. They are most highly respected people, are esteemed through the neighborhood, and valued in the Mennonite Church.

HENRY B. WOLGEMUTH, who is one of the leading farmers and prominent citizens of Mt. Joy township, belongs particularly to this locality, having been born on his present farm Oct. 21, 1852, and having made it his home during many years. His parents were Henry and Fanny (Brubaker) Wolgemuth, the former of this township, and the latter a native of Rapho township.

Henry Wolgemuth, the father of Henry B., was a farmer in this township for many years, continuing to manage his land until within four years of his death, the latter event occurring on his farm, Dec. 19, 1885, at the age of fifty-nine years, one month and four days. His burial was on his own land, in a private burial place, sacred to the family. His widow, who was born in 1834, resides in Mt. Joy township. Mr. Wolgemuth was a member of the River Brethren Church. Their children were: Henry B., who married Lizzie Witmer, is a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Isaac B. married Sarah Horner, and is a retired farmer at Dallas Center, Iowa; Daniel B. married Maria Shelley, and is a farmer in Rapho township; Eli B. married Amelia Gantz, and is a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Fanny B., Elizabeth B., Abraham B. and Catherine B., died in infancy; and Barbara B. died at the age of eleven years.

The paternal grandparents of our subject were Daniel and Barbara (Witmer) Wolgemuth, the former of whom was born in Lancaster county, Dec. 13, 1778, and died Sept. 13, 1851; the latter was born April 21, 1789, and died April 4, 1866. Both were buried on the old farm where our subject now resides. Grandfather Wolgemuth was a farmer, and both he and family belonged to the River Brethren Church. Their children were as follows: Joseph; Samuel, who married Barbara Sherrer; Henry, who became the father of our subject; Barbara, who married Jacob Engle; Catherine, who married Henry Heisey; and Nancy, who married Abraham Brubaker. On the maternal side the grandfather was Henry Brubaker, a native of Lancaster county, whose wife, a member of the Longenecker family, was born in Dauphin county. Both died near Florin, in Rapho township.

Henry B. Wolgemuth of this sketch, remained in his childhood home with his parents, until he was prepared to found a home of his own. The succeeding five years were spent in operating the farm for himself. He finally left his present farm to his parents and went on an adjoining farm. For seven years he operated a farm in Cumberland county, and after his return to Mt. Joy township, worked on another farm for one year, and then purchased the old farm from his father's estate. Thus Mr. Wolgemuth has had a long and thorough experience, and well deserves his reputation of being one of the leading and reliable agriculturists of the township. He has taken considerable interest in educational matters, and has served very acceptably as school director for six years. In politics he belongs to the Republican party, and he is always well posted on current affairs.

On Sept. 28, 1876, in Harrisburg, Pa., Mr. Wolgemuth was married to Miss Lizzie Witmer, and three children have been born to this union, namely: Abraham W., a farmer in Rapho township, married Emma Ober; and Katie F. and Emily A. are at home. Mrs. Wolgemuth was born May 1, 1856, daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Urich) Witmer, natives of Lancaster county. They moved to Franklin county in 1844, remaining there until 1857, Mrs. Wolgemuth being born there. Later removal was made by the family of Mr. Witmer to Dauphin county, where he died in 1890, at the age of seventy-one years. The mother of Mrs. Wolgemuth died at the latter's home in 1883, at the age of seventy-two years. They were buried in Chambers Hill cemetery, in Dauphin county. Both belonged to the River Brethren Church. The children born to this union were: Fanny C., the widow of Samuel Braham, of Steelton, Pa.; David W., a farmer in Dauphin county; Abraham W., a farmer in Dauphin county; and Elizabeth B.

The Wolgemuth family and its connections are all prominent in both agricultural and financial circles in Lancaster county. They also are noted in all the branches for producing estimable women and men who make reliable, law abiding and useful citizens.

JOHN G. KURTZ, one of the well-known and respected citizens of Lancaster county, who was for many years a resident of East Earl township, and now a resident of Earl township, belongs to one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county. The first of his American ancestors came from Germany.

Joseph Kurtz, his father, was born in Earl township, son of Samuel and Barbara (Showalters) Kurtz, the former a farmer in that township. Joseph Kurtz followed farming, and made a name as a thoroughly successful man. He married Mattie Groff, a descendant of Hans Groff, and a daughter of John Groff, of Earl township. He died in his seventy-ninth year; his wife died in her fifty-first year. They had three children: Maria, who married John Zimmerman, a resident of Earl township; Leah, who died young; and John G. They belonged to the Mennonite Church.

John G. Kurtz was born Aug. 29, 1834, and was reared on the farm of his birth, and his education was received in the public and boarding schools. When he was twenty-three he located in East Earl township for himself, where he owns the old homestead of 120 acres, and followed farming until his retirement in 1883. Always a public-spirited man, he held several of the town offices in his more active days.

John G. Kurtz was married to Annie Musser, a daughter of Henry and Anna (Martin) Musser. Seven children blessed this union: Emma, wife of Barton Z. Martin, of East Earl township; Mary, wife of A. G. Giffen, of Buckhannon, W. Va.; Martha, wife of Weaver Musselman, of Earl township; Martin, a resident of Shillington, Berks county; Lizzie, wife of Samuel High, a resident of Earl township; Clara, wife of W. C. Grube, a resident of Lancaster; and Viola, wife of H. S. Muntzer, of Leola, West Earl township.

WAYNE BARD, who ranks among the prominent and substantial farmer citizens of Upper Leacock township, was born on the farm adjoining his present place of residence, Dec. 15, 1842, son of George and Caroline (Shindle) Bard. He is a brother to George Bard, one of the prominent citizens of the same township.

Until his marriage Mr. Bard remained assisting his father on his farm, removing then to another tract, on which he remained for three years, then removing to Chester county. There he remained six years, occasionally changing his location, and in 1878 he came to his present fine and well improved property.

Mr. Bard was married, in October, 1866, in Lancaster, to Miss Susannah Weidler, and they have had one son, Nathan W., who conducts a mercantile and grocery business in Wilmington, Del.; he married Gertie Diamond, and they have three children, Nathan W., Paul F. and Ruth S. Mrs. Bard was born in Manheim, in August, 1846, daughter of Jacob G. and Margaret (Stoner) Weidler, who live in comfortable retirement in Mechanicsburg.

Mr. Bard has been a lifelong Democrat and upholds the principles of his party, believing they are the best for the country. Both himself and wife are consistent members of the Lutheran Church, where they were highly esteemed.

JOSEPH WOLF. Among the well-known residents and retired business citizens of Lancaster is Joseph Wolf, who for a number of years carried on a large blacksmithing establishment, which enjoyed a large patronage on account of the excellent work turned out and the honest and satisfactory methods employed. Mr. Wolf was born in Baden, Germany, June 9, 1830. His father was a blacksmith by trade, and died in Baden in 1843, at the age of fifty-six years. His widow, Catherine, survived until 1851, dying at the age of sixty years. Both parents were worthy members of the Catholic Church. Their five children were: E., who died in Germany; John, who died in Philadelphia; Shaffear, who died in South America; Catherine, who died in South America; and Joseph, of this sketch.

Joseph Wolf attended school in Germany through childhood, but when only thirteen years old entered his brother's blacksmith shop in order to learn the trade. He worked there as a journeyman until 1850, and then emigrated to America, going, for the first few months, to his brother, John, in Philadelphia. He then found work at his trade, which he followed there for twelve years. After coming to Lancaster, he worked through two years for Mr. Noltz, and then for others, but a little later he started into business for himself and continued so engaged until 1897, at which date he retired from active life. Mr. Wolf was very successful and had a high standing among business men. Fraternally he is connected with the I. O. O. F. He is a constant attendant upon the services of the Reformed Church, and a liberal contributor to its support, although he is not formally connected with it as a member.

In 1858, in Lancaster, Mr. Wolf was married to Miss Barbara Ressler, and the following children were born to this union: John A., who operates his father's business at the old location, being himself a skilled workman; Emma L., Alice A., Kate and Ida E., young ladies at home, the last named being a successful teacher and a talented artist; Mary J., widow of George Harm, residing at home; Barbara E., at home; Joseph M., a blacksmith also, married to Lizzie Shaffer; and Miss Bessie, at home.

Mrs. Wolf was born Dec. 23, 1837, in Baden, Germany, daughter of Martin and Catherine (Holsworth) Ressler, of Baden, where their lives were passed. The former was a farmer and he died in 1850, at the age of fifty-five years, while the latter died in 1843, at the age of thirty-six years. Their children were as follows: Martin, who died in Lancaster; Jacob, who lives in Dauphin county; John, who died in Philadelphia; Mary, widow of George Hulsworth, of Canada; and Barbara, who became the wife of our subject.

Mrs. Wolf and her children belong to the Reformed Church where they are valued and beloved. Mr. Wolf is a fine example of sturdy, well-preserved manhood and his kind manner and friendly neighborliness have made him many warm personal friends. The Wolf home is one of comfort, culture and modern conveniences, and is adorned with specimens of the talented daughter's brush. Socially the family is prominent.

PHILIP STUMPF (deceased) was for many years a prominent builder in the city of Lancaster and surrounding country, where he enjoyed a high reputation both as a tradesman and as an honorable business man, for his interests never suffered from any lack of ability in either respect.

In common with many of the most substantial citizens of this locality, Mr. Stumpf was of German nativity, having been born Oct. 10, 1844, in Hessen-Darmstadt. He was a son of John and Lena (Prees) Stumpf, also natives of the Fatherland, who followed him to the United States in August, 1865, and settled in Laneaster, Lancaster county. There the father died in 1875, at the age of sixty-six years, but the mother is still living in Lancaster, with her son Jacob since 1868, at the advanced age of over ninety, having been born May 30, 1811. She is well preserved, being very active, and possessing a remarkable memory. This worthy couple had children as follows: Adam, who died in Germany; Philip, mentioned below; Mary, deceased wife of Martin Binkley; and Jacob, a successful contractor and builder of Lancaster.

Philip Stumpf passed his early years and received his education in his native land, but he soon decided that his ambition needed another field. On coming to this country, at the age of sixteen years, he made his home in Lancaster, Pa., and was so well satisfied with his location that he passed the remainder of his life there. He gave his entire attention to his trade, that of cabinetmaker, carpenter and builder, and was rewarded by an ample competence, every dollar of which he earned by well directed industry. The frugal habits of his race, coupled with honest work and good management of its returns, insured his success, and, what was of far greater value, secured for him an enviable place in the confidence and esteem of his fellowmen. Mr. Stumpf built St. Joseph's Hospital and many other well-known buildings. He was progressive and displayed this spirit in his work as well as in efforts for advancement in matters of public and private concern.

In 1863, Mr. Stumpf was married in Lancaster,

Pa., to Henrietta Fritsch, and this union was blessed with the following named children: John, who was police patrolman two years, then police sergeant of Lancaster for four years, is now engaged in the hotel business in that city; he married Lizzie Swartz. Mary M. married George Effinger, who is in the hotel business in Lancaster. Charles, who is also in the hotel business in Lancaster, married Mary Utzinger. Miss Rosa lives at home. George has been police sergeant in Lancaster for the past three years, and resides at home. Albert married Florence Pickel; he is engaged in wall paper and decorating business with his brother Philip. Philip is single and at home. Harry, a brick layer in Lancaster, married Mary Burgie. Edward, who lives at home, is a cigarmaker by trade. The family are Catholics in religious belief, and Philip Stumpf, the father, held membership in St. Joseph's Church. He was a fine singer, and was a member of the local Liederkrantz, of which he served as president. His political support was given to the Republican party. His death occurred at the present home of the family in Lancaster, March 15, 1896, and he is buried in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Mrs. Henrietta (Fritsch) Stumpf was born June 26, 1844, in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, daughter of Sebastian and Theresa (Judith) Fritsch, of Hessen-Darmstadt, but who later came to America. Mr. Fritsch was a stone mason by trade. He died in January, 1898, aged eighty years, and his wife, who preceded him to the grave, in 1893, reached the age of seventy-five. They are buried in St. Joseph's cemetery. Their children were: William, deceased; Henrietta, Mrs. Stumpf; Anna, Mrs. John Snyder, of Lancaster; Charles, now deceased; John, a retired resident of Lancaster; Rosa, wife of Jacob Winginder, a baker of Lancaster; George, who carries on a cigar factory in Lancaster; and Frank, deceased.

BENJAMIN F. BLEACHER, in his life-time a prominent and respected farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born Dec. 18, 1842, a son of Benjamin and Mary (Herr) Bleacher. The father settled on the farm in East Drumore township, where Walter Winters now lives, and became one of the prosperous farmers of this section of the county. To him and his wife were born eight children, of whom Benjamin F. was the second. The others are mostly living in the West.

Benjamin F. Bleacher attended the school at Buck when a boy, and in early manhood enlisted in Co. F, 122nd P. V. I., his regiment being assigned to the 3d Brigade, 13th Army Corps. Mr. Bleacher participated in the battles of Clouds Mill, Va., second battle of Bull Run, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. In this last conflict he was wounded by a bayonet in the right leg, and so injured, that he was ordered discharged in February, 1863.

In December, 1865, Mr. Bleacher was married to Miss Ellen E. Graybill, who was born April 15, 1848, in East Drumore township, a daughter of Christian and Mary A. (Young) Graybill. Her father was born in 1808 in Lancaster county, while his wife was born in Northumberland county, the following year. They made their home in East Drumore township, where he lived until his death, in June, 1889. The wife and mother passed to her reward in August, 1879. They left two sons and one daughter: Amos; Samuel, of York county; and Mrs. Bleacher.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bleacher settled on a farm in East Drumore township, which has been the home of the family to the present time. Mr. Bleacher died Feb. 13, 1890, leaving a widow and nine children, as follows: (1) Oliver F., born in September, 1866, located in Philadelphia in his early manhood, where he is engaged in the barber business; he married Jennie Gamber, and they have three children, Ella, Nellie and Mary. (2) Erastus J., born in January, 1868, is now a resident of the city of New York. (4) Benjamin, born in August, 1872, lives in East Drumore township; he married Mary Walton, and is the father of three children, Earl, Ira and Alta. (5) Mary E., born in November, 1874, married Walter Graybill, lives with Mrs. Bleacher, and has one daughter, Ella. (6) Ephraim, born in September, 1876, died when eighteen years old. (7) John, born in September, 1879, is single, and is a typewriter and phonographer, and helps support the family at home. (8) Catherine N., born in April, 1883, married Milton Graybill, and has her home in East Drumore township. (9) Samuel A., born Aug. 7, 1888, is at home.

Mr. Bleacher was always a Republican, and was a devoted member of the Methodist Church at Mount Hope. He was well known, and widely respected for his many good qualities and his excellent character.

AARON B. DEMMY, the leading paper hanger, painter and wall paper merchant of Elizabethtown, is a man of extensive business interests, and in addition to his work just mentioned, he is president of the Elizabethtown Electric Light Co. He was born in Mount Joy township, Lancaster county, Jan. 1, 1850, a son of Christ. and Matilda (Brandt) Demmy, both natives of Lancaster county.

Christ. Demmy was a farmer and a shoemaker, and at one time served his community as tax collector. He and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church, and they died in Mt. Joy township, much respected for their peaceful and industrious lives. They were parents of the following children: Harriet, wife of Emanuel Flowers, of Harrisburg; Fiana, who married, first, Daniel Killian, and after his death Harrison Shultz, a notary public at Elizabethtown; Sarah, wife of William Connely, of Harrisburg; Miss Lavina, a resident of Harrisburg;

The father died in 1883, at the age of seventy-one, and the mother in 1890, at the age of seventy-three; both were buried in the Mt. Tunnel Cemetery. The mother was twice married, her first husband being a Mr. Balmer, to whom she bore one child, Fanny, deceased wife of Abraham Shaffer. John Demmy, the father of Christ. Demmy, and the grandfather of Aaron B., was a life-long resident of Lancaster county.

Aaron B. Demmy was married, in 1877, in Bainbridge, Pa., to Miss Fanny Risser, and three children were born to bless this union: Phares, deceased; Lillie R.; and Ada R. Mrs. Fanny (Risser) Demmy was born in Mt. Joy township Jan. 10, 1854, a daughter of Joseph and Fanny (Nissley) Risser, natives of Lebanon and Lancaster counties, respectively, and both died at their home in Mt. Joy township. Her father was a farmer, and died in December, 1896, at the age of seventy-seven years. The mother died in March, 1882, at the age of sixty-four, and their remains are resting in the cemetery connected with Risser's Church. They were members of the Mennonite Church, and were known as thoroughly honorable and upright people.

Mr. and Mrs. Risser have had the following children: Lizzie, wife of Christian Good, of Conoy township; Levi, who married Amanda Nissley, and is now deceased; Mary, who married Rev. Levi Ebersole, a Mennonite clergyman in Elizabethtown; Anna, who married Levi Longenecker; Fanny; Joseph, a farmer located on the old homestead in Mt. Joy township; Martin, a farmer and minister at Zion's Church; Amanda, wife of Ben Hersch; and Amos, a farmer in Mt. Joy township.

Mrs. Demmy's paternal grandfather was Peter Risser, of Lancaster county, where he passed his entire life. Her maternal grandfather was Martin Nissley, also of Lancaster county, where his life was passed in agricultural pursuits; his wife's maiden name was Hershey.

Aaron B. Demmy remained on the farm with his parents until he reached the age of eighteen years, when he began to learn the painter and paper-hanging trade at Harrisburg. When his apprenticeship of three years was over, he came to Elizabethtown, and embarked in business for himself under very favorable auspices, which have been amply fulfilled by the large and profitable trade he has secured. He and his wife are members of the Mennonite Church, and in his political views he harmonizes with the Democrats. Not very long ago in connection with several wise and conservative investors he bought the Elizabethtown Electric Light Co., of which he was made president, and which has proved an extremely profitable investment.

JONAS L. MINNICH. Among the well-known citizens of East Hempfield township is Jonas L. Minnich, the popular auctioneer of this whole locality, who was born at Landisville, Lancaster county, July 5, 1858, a son of Simon and Elizabeth Brubaker Minnich.

Reared in the village of Landisville, Jonas L. Minnich had the advantages of an excellent education, and as early as seventeen began his business career by engaging in the raising of tobacco, two years later beginning to show ability in the line of an auctioneer. Although he still continues to farm and owns one of the finest places in the neighborhood, containing 120 acres, he has made a reputation for himself through the whole county as a most capable and successful auctioneer, and much of his time is occupied in this calling, for which he is well fitted, being a genial, pleasant man, with a great fund of anecdote, and a pleasant manner. He has no superior in his line in Lancaster county.

Mr. Minnich is one of the progressive and intelligent stockraisers of the county, also, and has devoted much attention to the improvement of the stock of this section. His active participation in the councils of the Republican party has brought him into prominence in the county, where he is regarded as one of the representative men.

Jonas L. Minnich was married on May 4, 1880, to Annie M. Stehman, a daughter of H. H. Stehman, of Millersville, and two children have been born of this union: An infant son, deceased; and Barbara Elizabeth.

ELWOOD H. TOWNSEND. One of the representative farmers of Little Britain township, who owns and operates an estate of 120 acres near Kirks Mills, is Elwood H. Townsend, who is also a worthy representative of one of the old and honored families of southern Pennsylvania. He was born in that township June 19, 1847, a son of Henry and Sarah (Spencer) Townsend, the former of whom was a son of John and Matilda (Paxton) Townsend, and a grandson of Joseph Townsend, one of the early English settlers of Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Henry Townsend was born May 25, 1820, and his only sister was Elizabeth, who married John Bowden. His marriage to Sarah Spencer occurred in 1843, and they reared a family of nine children, namely: Marietta, with whom her mother lives, on the old homestead; Joseph S., who is a farmer in Little Britain township; Elwood H.; John P., who has passed away; J. H., who resides in Oxford, Chester county; Annie E., wife of Cecil Stubbs, a farmer of Little Britain township; William, who lives in Chester county; Sarah G., who resides at home; and Harvey, who has passed away. In politics Henry Townsend was one of the stanch Republicans of this section, and belonged to the religious body of Quakers, a man who was highly esteemed for his upright character. Henry Townsend was a man in whom his fellow-citizens could place implicit confidence, and he faithfully served them as school director and as supervisor. The family is one which is held in high esteem in Pennsylvania, many of its members having become prominent in educational and philanthropic circles.

Elwood H. Townsend was reared on the farm and received his education in the public schools of his neighborhood. His father was an excellent agriculturist, and by example and precept inculcated lessons of industry and frugality, and the result may be seen in their prosperity. At the death of this honored father on July 26, 1897, he left a comfortable competency and large estate, while his children had grown to be respected and substantial members of the community.

On Dec. 31, 1868, Elwood H. Townsend was married to Susan Wood, of Little Britain township, a daughter of James and Mercy M. (Carter) Wood (a more extended notice of the Wood family will be found elsewhere in the sketch of Lewis Wood). Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Townsend, as follows: James M., born May 19, 1870, married Minerva Pyle, of Fulton township, now deceased, and their two children were,—Leroy W. and Jesse W.; Elizabeth, who married Frederick Bicknell, of Fulton township, was born on Aug. 5, 1871; Mercy M., who was born on Nov. 20, 1874, resides at home, as do also Mary E., born Oct. 10, 1878, and Harvey, born Nov. 5, 1883.

Mr. Townsend cultivates 120 acres of fine land, raising the usual products of his locality in the greatest abundance, and showing his excellence as an agriculturist in all departments of that line of business. Like his father he is an ardent Republican, and, while not formally connected with the Society of Friends, has a leaning toward their simple faith. Socially he is connected with the I. O. O. F., No. 324, of Oxford; and with the order of Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 832. Few men in his locality are held in higher esteem.

JOHN S. BRADLEY, a prominent man of Rapho township, was born there July 9, 1847, son of Henry and Esther (Shelley) Bradley.

Henry Bradley, the father, was first a carpenter and weaver, but afterward took up farming, which he continued until he retired from active life, in 1852. He died in 1864, at the age of fifty-eight years, and was buried in Rohrer's private cemetery; Mrs. Bradley died April 22, 1892, at the age of seventy-nine years, and is buried in Erisman's Meeting House cemetery. There were born to this union the following children: Samuel S., of Rapho township; Miss Anna S., of Rapho township; Abraham S., a retired farmer of Rapho township; Henry S., formerly a teacher, and now a tobacco farmer; Mary S., wife of John M. Metzler, of Rapho township; John S., subject of this sketch; Catherine S., wife of Levi W. Nissley, farmer and creamery man of Rapho township; Benjamin, of Rapho township; Fanny S., wife of Samuel M. Cober, of Rapho township; and Barbara and Hettie, both deceased.

On Sept. 12, 1872, in Lancaster, John S. Bradley married Miss Emma S. Ebright, and there have been born to them the following family: Miss Katie E., at home; John E., a farmer of Rapho, who married Miss Mary Buch, and has two children; Henry E., at home; Franklin E., deceased; and Morris E., Emma E. and Levi E., all at home. Mrs. Bradley was born Dec. 11, 1849, in Rapho township, daughter of George and Mary (Stauffer) Ebright, of Lebanon and Lancaster counties, respectively. George Ebright was a school teacher in Lancaster county for many years, and he died at Manheim, Pa., in 1867, at the age of forty-five years; his wife died in 1855, and they are buried in the cemetery at Manheim. Mr. Ebright was a member of the Reformed Church and Mrs. Ebright of the United Brethren Church. To Mr. and Mrs. Ebright were born: Henry, who died at the age of four years; Emma S., wife of John S. Bradley; Maria, who died at the age of two years; Kittie A., who died at the age of three years; Franklin, a resident of Illinois; and Lizzie, who died in infancy. Mrs. Bradley's paternal grandparents were Samuel and Ulda (Hoog) Ebright, of Lebanon county, Pa., and the maternal grandparents were John and Polly (Shank) Stauffer, of Lancaster.

John S. Bradley lived with his mother until his marriage, and in 1873 moved to his present farm, where he has since resided. At the age of seventeen years, after having attended the schools of the county, he began teaching school in connection with his farm duties, and continued this until 1872, when he gave up the profession. In 1879 he was elected assessor of Rapho township, and at every election since, having held the office continuously to the present time. In 1896 he assisted in organizing the Lawn Mutual Fire, Storm and Lightning Insurance Co., and became its secretary, but did not enter upon the duties of the position until Jan. 1, 1897, since which time he has filled the position with marked ability. Mr. Bradley and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church, of which he is steward and a member of the board of trustees. In politics he is a Republican. This gentleman is prominent in business and social circles, and no one stands higher among all classes than he does—an enviable position which he has gained by his strict integrity and affable manners.

JOHN AMMON. Probably the best known man of his years in Salisbury township is John Ammon, a general farmer and ex-proprietor of "Welch Mountain Inn," the uttermost building in the northeastern corner of Lancaster county. He was born in Salisbury township May 28, 1844, a son of John and Catherine (Reeser) Ammon, of that township.

John Ammon, the father, rented the present farm and the hotel alluded to above in 1852 from Squire Robinson and conducted both for three years, when he purchased them, and continued to operate them until 1864, when he retired, transferring them to his sons, John and Herman H., who managed them until 1868, when an elder brother of these, Jacob, took charge and conducted them for three years. The hotel was next rented to various parties who carried it on until 1884, when it was finally closed, and John, the son, settled on the farm. John Ammon, Sr., was a son of John Ammon, a native farmer of Lancaster county, and died Jan. 12, 1884, at the age of fifty-nine years; his widow survived until Oct. 17, 1894, when she expired at the age of eighty—their remains being interred side by side in Pequea cemetery. Their children, nine in number, were as follows: Hiram, deceased; Jacob, a farmer in Chester county; John, the subject proper of this sketch; Elihu D., in the laundry business at Wooster, Ohio; Herman H., a merchant in Compassville, Pa.; William, who died in 1901; Bender, also deceased; Anna N., wife of Jonas Stauffer, a merchant in Reading, Pa.; and Cecelia, wife of Joshua Hoops, a farmer in Chester county.

John Ammon, whose name introduces this biographical notice, was united in matrimony in Salisbury township, in December, 1873, with Miss Emma J. Marple, who has borne him two children, namely: E. Estella, who still has her home under the parental roof; and Hurbert S., who died Dec. 23, 1891, aged five years and seven months. Mrs. Emma J. (Marple) Ammon is a native of Salisbury and a daughter of Benjamin M. and Anna (Stroll) Marple. Benjamin M. Marple was the proprietor of a tannery, which his father had owned before him, and also operated a saw-mill and was a manufacturer of washing machines and fork and rake-handles. He died in 1876, at the age of sixty-three, and his remains rest in Pequea Church cemetery; his widow, who was born Oct. 28, 1822, now finds a home with the surviving children of the nine of whom she was the mother, viz.: Emma J. (Mrs. Ammon); Susan E., wife of Isaac Allison, a resident of Mortonville, Chester county; Edith E., who died in infancy; Serena L., who is married to Samuel Reel, of Coatesville, Pa.; Harriet A., Abel N. and David S., deceased; Esther, wife of John Hammond, of Compassville; and Harriet E., married to Rev. Henry Mower. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Ammon were Abel M. and Harriet (Mevay) Marple, the former of whom was a tanner and farmer in Salisbury township. The Marple family were very prominent people in their day, and the father of Mrs. Ammon left the impress of his strong individuality on his offspring, who even to this day manifest in a marked degree traits of his sterling qualities. The Ammon family have also been very prominent in the county for generations.

John Ammon is held in high esteem throughout Salisbury township, and although very popular with the Democratic party has never sought a public office, yet intimations have been given him to the effect that his acceptance of nomination at various times as a candidate for township positions would be acceptable to his party, as well as to the general public, and he has always turned a deaf ear to such solicitations. Mr. Ammon attends the Honey Brook Methodist Episcopal Church quite regularly, and although not a member contributes liberally towards its support.

HARVEY BRENEMAN LUTZ, one of the younger members of the Lancaster County Bar, with residence in Lancaster, is closely identified with one of the oldest and most noted families of this section of the State.

The first of the name in Pennsylvania was Casper Lutz, a farmer, who came to America in 1738, locating first at Reading, thence soon afterward removing to Muddy Creek, this county. The descent of Harvey B. from Casper Lutz is through John, John (2), Jesse and Joseph K., the two last named being grandfather and father, respectively, of Harvey B. One of the ancestors was a colonel in the Revolution. Grandfather Jesse Lutz was an extensive manufacturer of hats in this county, and during the Civil war he also manufactured guns; he died Jan. 1, 1899, aged ninety-four years. At one time he owned the "Black Horse Hotel" property on North Queen street, Lancaster, a famous old hostelry, well remembered by the older citizens of the city. His wife was a member of the Clan Keith of Scotland, after whom was named the town of Keith in Banffshire.

Joseph K. Lutz, father of Harvey B., in early manhood engaged in mercantile business in Philadelphia, later owning stores in Fritztown, Berks county, and Blainsport, Lancaster county, finally embarking in the hardware trade at Reading, which he successfully carried on for years. He is now living retired at Blainsport. In 1868 he married Miss Frances J. Breneman, daughter of John and Mary Breneman, of Donegal, this county. Mr. Breneman died about 1861; he was a lineal descendant of Melchoir Breneman, who came to America in 1717, settling in this county, where he took up an extensive land grant from the Penns. To Joseph K. and Frances J. (Breneman) Lutz were born two children: Irwin B., a druggist in Denver, this county; and Harvey Breneman, who is fully spoken of below.

Harvey B. Lutz was born June 26, 1872, at Blainsport, Lancaster county, and was educated in part at the schools of his district and in part at Palatinate College (Myerstown, Pa.), Muhlenburg College (Allentown, Pa.), and Lafayette College (Easton, Pa.), from which latter institution he was graduated in 1893. Almost immediately after his graduation Mr. Lutz entered the law office of Charles I. Landis, now one of the judges of the courts of Lancaster county, and was admitted to practice Sept. 18, 1896.

On Oct. 12, 1898, Harvey B. Lutz was married to Miss Mabel O. Russell, daughter of Joseph C. and Teresa Russell, the former of whom is general superintendent of the National Transit Co., more familiarly known as the Standard Pipe Line Co., with offices in Pittsburg and elsewhere, Mr. Russell's chief office being in the Woolworth building, Lancaster. To Mr. and Mrs. Lutz have been born two children, Joseph Russell and Kathryn Teresa. Mr. Lutz, while at college, belonged to the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. Socially he is a member of the Blue Lodge, F. & A. M., of the I. O. O. F., and of the Elks. In politics he is a Republican. The home occupied by the family is an ideal one, pleasantly situated on Marietta avenue, in the western suburbs of the city of Lancaster, and it is noted for the hospitality of its inmates.

Joy township, near Elizabethtown, Pa., Aug. 17, 1847, daughter of Jacob and Fanny (Gibble) Werner, of Rapho township. He continued at this sort of work for twelve years, and then went to his present home, where he began farming, and where he has since remained. It was in 1865 when he first came to Lancaster county from Lebanon county to work at his trade in Mt. Joy township.

He worked awhile at the wagon trade in Rapho township near his present farm before he took to farming, operating a wagon shop of his own for eight years of the twelve that he was in the business. He retired from active work in the spring of 1899.

Mr. Moyer has been a school director for three years, and was a director in Mt. Joy township Fire Insurance Co., for three years. He is well-to-do in worldly goods and has a high standing in his community for integrity, kind heartedness and progressive ideas.

JOSEPH HARNER, one of the leading citizens of Lancaster county, is a man of energetic character, who started out in life with very limited means, but who has lived in such an industrious and provident way, that he now is the fortunate owner of one of the fine farms of Martic township, where he is a representative man.

The birth of Joseph Harner occurred in Montgomery county, Pa., Sept. 24, 1832, the early ancestors of his parents having come from Germany, although both his father and grandfather were natives of Montgomery county, the latter, John Harner, having carried on a blacksmith business there through life. The parents of Joseph Harner were Joseph and Mary (Slingluff) Harner, the former of whom was both a farmer and a lime manufacturer. A family of seven children was born to Joseph Harner and his wife, Mary: John S., who is a retired farmer of Martic township; George, deceased; Samuel, a retired farmer of this township; Mary Ann, who married Thomas Cully, of Martic township; Elizabeth, who married J. Harrison Long, of Drumore township; Joseph; and Jesse, a retired farmer, of Drumore township.

Joseph Harner was reared on a farm and obtained his excellent education in the common schools, and in reading and associating with the world. Although in early life, his means were limited, his ambition was to become an honorable and substantial citizen, and to this end he has faithfully worked, being now so well placed that he can afford to live a life of ease, and to enjoy the results of former industry.

On Dec. 31, 1874, Joseph Harner was married to Miss Rebecca Sides, of Martic township, and one child was born to this union, but it passed away in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Harner have reared an adopted daughter, Emma J., who is now the wife of George Harner, of this township.

Mrs. Harner was born Nov. 17, 1839, one of a family of seven children born to Jacob Sides and wife, of Martic township: Grizzell, who married John Kilgore; Mary, who married Jesse Harner, the brother of Joseph, and is now deceased; Rebecca; Clark; Jacob; James; and Elmyra, who is the wife of Owen Cramer, of this township, the greater number of these having more extended mention elsewhere. Jacob Sides was of Dutch descent, and his wife Rebecca, was of Irish extraction and one of the descendants of the Neil family.

Joseph Harner is a staunch Democrat and actively supports the principles of that party. He has long been a leading member of the Bethesda Methodist Church, to which his wife, adopted daughter and her husband also belong, and they endeavor consistently to practice in their daily life the principles they profess. In the community no residents have a larger circle of warm friends.

GEORGE A. KEMPER. The Kemper family, of which George A. Kemper, the reliable and prosperous hardware merchant of Akron, is a worthy representative, is one of the oldest in Lancaster county. The early records tell that John Henry Kemper, the founder of the family in America, was born in 1696, and sailed from Rotterdam for Philadelphia in the spring of 1738, in the good ship "Nancy," reaching his destination in the fall of that year. He came to Lancaster county and purchased land on the Conestoga creek and near Akron, in West Earl township, and here was born in 1748, his son David, who became the father of Henry Kemper, the great-grandfather of the subject of this biography.

Henry Kemper, his son, was born in 1804, and became the father of Jacob Kemper.

Jacob Kemper, one of the highly respected citizens of the community, was born March 20, 1824, and died April 25, 1899. He was a successful business man and prospered in the tinsmith and printer's trades. Starting in the tinsmith business in 1845, he was the pioneer in that line in this section, and he continued in it until 1880, when his son George took the same shop and added to it general hardware. Jacob Kemper was a justice of the peace for many years, and a notary public, having been appointed first by Gov. Hartranft. He was a member of the Bergstrass Lutheran Church of Ephrata township, of which he was deacon and elder, and for thirty-five years its secretary and treasurer. He was buried at Bergstrass Church. In 1847 Jacob Kemper married Margaret Bentz, daughter of Christian and Sarah (Zartman) Bentz, of Lancaster county. One child, George, was born of this union. Mrs. Kemper, at the age of seventy-four, is still living, making her home with her son.

George A. Kemper was reared in Akron and attended the common schools, supplementing this with a course in the Crittenden Commercial College, of Philadelphia, and he entered business life in the printing office in Akron under his father's supervision. At present he conducts one of the most complete hardware establishments in this vicinity, and finds time to attend to the duties of a notary public.

For some time he served as justice of the peace, and is one of the intelligent and active Republicans who exert a great influence in this neighborhood. He has also found time to study civil engineering and is following that profession in connection with his other work.

On May 16, 1875, Mr. Kemper was married to Miss Martha Hartman, of Lancaster county, who was born Oct. 26, 1849, a daughter of David and Maria Hartman. Enjoying the esteem and high regard of the community, Mr. Kemper well may be classed as one of the representative business men of the prosperous borough of Akron.

JOSEPH BURKHOLDER. Admirably situated but one mile from the flourishing town of Farmersville, the fine farm of Joseph Burkholder attracts the notice of the public on account of the air of neatness, thrift and prosperity which surrounds it. In this pleasant country home Mr. Burkholder has passed many years, and has become one of the respected and leading citizens of West Earl township.

Joseph Burkholder was born on June 8, 1838, a son of Jonas and Catherine (Sowders) Burkholder, the former of whom was one of the substantial farmers of the township and a leading member of the Mennonite Church. Eight children were born to Jonas Burkholder and wife: Isaac, deceased; Susan, who married Abraham Martin, deceased; Jacob, a farmer of West Earl township; Elizabeth, who married Samuel Bucher; Samuel, a farmer of West Earl; Joseph, of this biography; Katherine, who married Isaac Hoover, deceased; and Mary, who became the second wife of Isaac Hoover.

The name of Burkholder is an old and honored one in the agricultural regions of Lancaster county, Abraham Burkholder, father of Jonas and grandfather of Joseph, having been an early settler in this township. His family numbered nine children: Christian, Abraham, John, Samuel, Katherine, Elizabeth, Annie, Mary and Jonas, the greater number of whom married and reared families of their own, who are now among the best citizens of the county.

Joseph Burkholder received his education in the public schools. He was reared to farm life, and following the example of his ancestors, he adopted an agricultural life, which he has most successfully pursued ever since. His farm consists of ninety-two acres of finely improved land, and it also includes a very handsome residence and commodious barns.

On Sept. 17, 1865, occurred the marriage of Joseph Burkholder to Miss Emma Powell, of Leacock township, who was born in 1849. To this happy union have been born eleven children: John, born in 1866, resides near Lancaster; Susan, born in 1867, married Benjamin K. Herr; Eliza, born in 1872, married John B. Rupp; Mary, born in 1873, married Edwin H. Nolt; Levi, born in 1875, resides in Illinois; Ida, born in 1877, married Isaac N. Hoover;

Cora, born in 1879, is at home; Annie, born in 1881, is at home; Katie, born in 1885, is at home; Frank, born in 1887, resides at home; and Ezra, born in 1889, also remains under the home roof. This family has been carefully reared in the Mennonite faith, and its members are among the most highly esteemed in this locality. As a quiet, unassuming and law-abiding citizen, as well as an exemplary man, in every relation of life, Joseph Burkholder may be regarded as a fit representative of the best element of West Earl township.

ANDREW H. KREIDER, a respected and successful farmer of Penn township, is a son of Cornelius and Lydia (Hoerner) Kreider, the former of whom was born in Germany and settled in Lancaster county about 1828. For a short time he was employed in work on the railroad, later at a general line of labor, but finally located in Penn township, and continued to be a farmer until the end of his life, his death occurring in January, 1875. In the German Baptist Church he was a consistent and worthy member, and possessed the esteem of all who knew him. His five children were: Andrew, of this sketch; Susan, the wife of Samuel Graybill; Mary, the widow of Francis Meisky; John, a farmer of Penn township; and Lizzie, the wife of Lem Forney, of Manheim township.

Andrew H. Kreider was born in Penn township, June 26, 1839, and being the eldest son, he remained assisting his father on the home farm until he was twenty-seven years of age. His education was obtained in the common schools of his township, and all his life has been spent in agricultural pursuits. In 1875 he bought the farm which he operates, this being situated about two miles south of Manheim; it contains 160 acres, and is justly regarded as one of the finest in this township. Here Mr. Kreider has made extensive improvements, which have increased its attractiveness and comfort, and have also added materially to its former value.

The marriage of Mr. Kreider was to Miss Hannah M. Kolp, a most estimable lady, a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and to this union were born four children: Mary, who is the wife of H. B. Bucher, of Clay township; Alice, who is the wife of A. G. Kurtz, a farmer of Penn township; Cornelius, who is a farmer on his father's estate; and John, who is at home. Mr. Kreider is not only one of Lancaster county's most respected citizens, but also is one of its best farmers and is so recognized. Both he and Mrs. Kreider have many friends and enjoy dispensing hospitality at their beautiful home.

JOHN HESS. The Hess family is a numerous one in Lancaster county, where it has been known and honored for many years. A worthy representative of this family in Strasburg township is John Hess, who was born on Aug. 16, 1851, a son of Benjamin and Susan (Leaman) Hess.

Benjamin Hess was a son of John and Martha (Musser) Hess, of Providence township, the former of whom was born March 29, 1788, and died Dec. 16, 1842. Benjamin Hess spent his life as a farmer on the old Hess homestead, which is situated between New Providence and Quarryville. His death took place in 1894, his wife, Susan Leaman, surviving until April 1, 1899; both of them had been devout and worthy members of the Old Mennonite Church. Their family consisted of eight children: Emma, who died when but nineteen; Amos, who passed away in childhood; Joseph, a resident of Strasburg, where he is a farmer and horse dealer; John, of this biography; Lydia, who died in childhood; Benjamin, who farms on the old homestead in Providence township; Sue, the wife of Will Conner, of Bart township; and Harry, who was a farmer of Providence township, but died May 15, 1896, in Strasburg township, leaving a widow and one child, Park.

John Hess grew to manhood on the home farm, in his youth attending school and also learning the details necessary for success in an agricultural life. Following his marriage, in October, 1877, he moved upon a farm of seventy-five acres which he had purchased, and for four years he operated it, and then sold it and removed to West Lampeter township, locating one-half mile south of Willowstreet upon a farm of 145 acres. For fourteen years he conducted that farm, but after his purchase of his present farm, which contains 142 acres, located but one-half mile northwest of Refton, he moved upon it and here has successfully engaged in general farming. Mr. Hess has his own ideas about farming, and has been very successful.

The marriage of Mr. Hess gave to him a most estimable companion, Miss Amelia Witmer, a daughter of A. R. Witmer, of Mountville, West Hempfield township, and five children have been added to the home: Minerva, born Oct. 15, 1879; Howard, born Feb. 8, 1882; May, born Aug. 21, 1884; Harry and Maud, twins, born July 21, 1888. In their pleasant home hospitality abounds, and probably no family in the neighborhood possesses the respect of the community in higher degree than that belonging to John Hess.

HENRY H. BOMBERGER, a prosperous farmer-citizen of Warwick township, is a descendant of one of the oldest settlers of Lancaster county. The first of this family came to this country from Baden, Germany, in 1722, and the land of which our subject now owns a part, was bought by the family from the Penns in 1738—this purchase comprising 544 acres.

John Bomberger, the grandfather of our subject, was born on the old place, Nov. 22, 1780. He was a carpenter by trade, and also cabinetmaker, following these trades with farming all his life, dying Nov. 16, 1861. His wife, Anna, was born in 1787, and died Dec. 6, 1861. They were members of the Old Mennonite Church. Their family consisted of children as follows: Christian, deceased, the father of our subject; Jacob, deceased, who was a farmer; Maria, wife of David Doner, of Lebanon county; Anna, wife of Jacob Bollinger, of Lincoln, Pa.; and Elizabeth, wife of Jessé Gible, of Rapho township, this county.

Christian Bomberger was born on the old place, March 5, 1818. His occupation was also that of a furrier, and he followed the same until his death, which occurred Jan. 1, 1898. He married Miss Catherine Hess, who was born in Rothsville in 1819, and died in 1875. Both were members of the Old Mennonite Church, in the ministry of which he was ordained and served thirty-five years. They were the parents of eleven children, one of whom died in infancy; Annie, deceased, was the wife of Christian Bucher; Fannie, deceased, was the wife of David B. Huber; John H. is farming on part of the old homestead; Catherine is the wife of Rev. Henry E. Longenecker, a Mennonite minister; Christian H. lives in Warwick township; Barbara is the wife of Andrew G. Nissley, of Mt. Joy; David H. is a farmer in Elizabeth township; Martha is the wife of Amos B. Brubaker, of Petersburg, Pa.; Amos H. is a miller of Lititz; and Henry H. is our subject.

Henry H. Bomberger was born on the old place Oct. 24, 1863, and here he has resided ever since, having inherited the homestead at his father's death. He has throughout life given his entire attention to farming interests, and is a very extensive tobacco grower. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and is one of the school directors. As one of the successful agriculturists of his community, and a man who has shown his ability and public spirit in various ways, he exerts a marked influence for good in his locality.

On Feb. 10, 1887, Mr. Bomberger was united in marriage with Miss Mary S. Huber, daughter of Abraham and Harriet Huber, and to this union have been born five children, as follows: Mazie H., Abram Z., Hattie H., Paul H. and Lloyd H., all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Bomberger are both members of the old Mennonite Church, and he is superintendent of the Sunday school.

LEVI LANDES. Among the many substantial, retired farmer citizens of Ephrata township, no one possesses in a higher degree the esteem and respect of his neighbors than does Levi Landes, who comes of fine old ancestry, dating back to both Switzerland and to Germany. He was born June 4, 1824, a son of Samuel and Hannah (Mohler) Landes, who were among the wealthiest residents of the township. They reared these children: Lydia, who married Israel Myers, deceased; Nancy, who married George Levan, of Lancaster city; Rebecca, single; Hannah, a resident of Ephrata; Catherine, who married Samuel Harley, of Ephrata; Levi, of this sketch; Simon, who lives in Boston, Mass.; and Samuel, deceased.

Levi Landes was reared on a farm, growing up like many hundreds of other farmer boys, and attended the district schools of Ephrata township. When he started out for himself it was with very limited means, but he has demonstrated the fact that it is possible to accumulate large means honestly and rapidly, by the application of industry and energy. At present Mr. Landes is the fortunate owner of a fine farm in the township, as well as a most comfortable two-story brick residence, and he is able to enjoy the comforts of life earned by his own efforts.

On Dec. 28, 1847, Levi Landes was married to Miss Elizabeth Landes, who was born Feb. 11, 1828, a daughter of Jacob and Magdalena (Wisler) Landes, of Ephrata township, and to this union six children were born: Ezra, born Nov. 6, 1848, died July 16, 1881; Israel, born July 15, 1851, died Sept. 21, 1874; Levi, Jr., born Jan. 1, 1853, resides in Hanover, Pa.; Jacob, born Nov. 7, 1854; Samuel L., born Nov. 14, 1858, resides in Illinois; and Mary Ann, born Aug. 9, 1860, resides with her parents.

Levi Landes has long been one of the leading members of the German Baptist Church, and is everywhere regarded as a man of exemplary Christian character. His connection has always been with the Republican party, and he is regarded as one of the best of citizens. Both he and his beloved wife are passing their declining years in peace and happiness, and they possess the good will of the whole community.

JOHN PENNYPACKER, leaf-tobacco merchant and packer at Mountville, Lancaster county, was born in Conestoga Centre, same county, Sept. 2, 1845, a son of James and Filena (Yentzer) Pennypacker, natives, respectively, of Chester county, Pa., and Conestoga Centre, Lancaster county, but now deceased.

James Pennypacker was a small farmer and school teacher, and also a scrivener, writing deeds, etc., for the people of his neighborhood. He died in Conestoga Centre in 1852, when forty-five years old; his widow died in Mountville in 1896, at the age of eighty-two years. Both were members of the Reformed Church. To their marriage were born the following named children: Mary A., deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Henry Martin, a merchant in Conestoga Centre; Miss Elvina; Frank, retired; Amos, an iron worker of Conestoga Centre; John; Lena, who died young; and James, a stonemason of Lancaster city. The family is of German extraction.

John Pennypacker was reared on a farm until seventeen years old, and then learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed until 1890. In 1870, however, he settled in Mountville, and in 1883 engaged in his present business of dealing in tobacco.

Mr. Pennypacker was joined in marriage in 1869, in Washington borough, Lancaster county, with Martha G. Brady, and to this union have been born the following children, Charles, a school-teacher in York, Pa.; Elvina, wife of Joseph Hoover, a confectioner in Mountville; Philena, who died young; and John B., still at home.

Martha (Brady) Pennypacker was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, in August, 1849, a daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Getz) Brady, natives, respectively, of Hummelstown, Dauphin county and Lancaster county, both of whom died in Manor township. The father, who was born in 1810, died in August, 1875, and the mother, born in 1810, died in 1861. Mr. Brady was a miller. Both were members of the U. B. Church, and they are buried in Stehman cemetery. Besides Mrs. Pennypacker children as follows were born to Charles and Elizabeth (Getz) Brady: Caroline, who was married to Amos Harnish, a coachmaker at Harrisburg; Elizabeth, wife of Chris Frey, a farmer of Manor township; Anna, married to Hiram Wittmer, a farmer in the same township; Mary, deceased wife of Aaron Friday; Barbara, of Indiana, widow of Newton Lewis; and Samuel, of Manor township.

Fraternally John Pennypacker is a member of the I. O. O. F., and politically he is a Republican, under the auspices of which party he served as township tax collector for eight years. He has made his own way through the world, has always been industrious and steady-going; and has so lived as to win the confidence and esteem of all who know him, and there are very few in Mountville who do not. In July, 1864, Mr. Pennypacker enlisted in an independent Lancaster troop, P. V. I., for one hundred days, and was mustered out at Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 29, 1864.

TOBIAS LEAMAN, a retired farmer of Leacock township, Lancaster county, was born Sept. 19, 1844, on the farm where he is to be found at the present time, a son of John and Mary (Landis) Leaman.

John Leaman died in Lampeter township in 1882, at the age of seventy-three years; his wife early passing to her rest, in 1847, at the age of thirty-three years. Both were buried in Mellinger Church cemetery. For some nineteen years before his death the father had lived a retired life. In religion they were members of the Mennonite Church. He had been township auditor, and was highly esteemed in the community where his quiet and useful life had passed. Mr. and Mrs. John Leaman were the parents of the following family: Benjamin was burned to death in infancy; Elias died in 1891; Esther married Emanuel Denlinger, and died in 1861; John L. is a retired farmer, and the subject of a sketch that appears elsewhere; and Tobias.

Tobias Leaman and Elizabeth Denlinger were married in Lancaster, Dec. 13, 1864. To them were born: Ida married Daniel D. Eby, a farmer in Salisbury township, and is the mother of four children; Anna married Phares B. Buckwalter, has five children, and lives on the old farm in Leacock township; Jason died when four years old; Ella married J. Frank Denlinger, a farmer in Salisbury township, and is the mother of one child; Minnie married Sem Eby, a farmer of Paradise township; and Elmer D., who is a telegraph operator, lives at home. Mrs. Tobias Leaman, who was born in Paradise township in 1842, is a sister of John B. Denlinger, whose sketch appears elsewhere.

Mr. Leaman has spent his active life on the old homestead, and is still found on the farm where he was born. In 1881 he built the present comfortable and elegant home in which his family is located. For some years he has given up the active labors of farming, and has come to an old age of peace and comfort, in which he is well circumstanced, and is regarded as one of the solid and leading farmers of this end of Lancaster county.

NOAH G. HESS, a progressive and successful farmer of Rothsville, Lancaster county, is one of the active and intelligent citizens of his neighborhood, and is highly respected by all who know him.

Mr. Hess comes of good pioneer stock of Lancaster county. His grandfather, Henry Hess, was born Jan. 17, 1794, and was a farmer and miller all his life. He was a member of the old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Catherine Huber, and they were the parents of thirteen children, as follows: Jacob, Susanna (wife of Isaac Huber), Catherine, Henry, Esther, Fanny, John, Sem, Martin, Levi H., Annie, Jonas and Cothem.

Levi H. Hess, the father of our subject, was born Jan. 1, 1836. He, too, was a farmer, and followed that occupation until he retired, in 1898. In politics he is a Republican, and he held the office of school director for some time. He is a member of the old Mennonite Church. Mr. Hess married Miss Salinda S. Gross, and to this union were born ten children, namely: Noah G., our subject; Harry G., who died when nine years of age; Martin G., cashier in the Keystone Bank of Manheim; Mary G., wife of Andrew Brubaker; Levi G., a merchant of Springfield, Mass.; Salinda G., at home; Phares G., a teacher, who is a graduate of the Pennsburg School and of Bucknell University; Elam G., attending College at Gettysburg; Ammon G., at Columbia, this county, employed by the Independent Telephone Company; and Jerome G., a teacher, still at home.

Noah G. Hess, whose name opens this sketch, was born in Penn township, Sept. 7, 1861, and received his education in the local public schools. He remained at home until he was twenty years of age, when he began life for himself, farming on his father's place for three years. He then moved to Lititz, where he was engaged at various kinds of work, and he was one of the first to start a creamery there, where he remained four years. At the end of that time he purchased the farm at Rothsville, where he now resides, and where he has given his entire attention to farming. He has one of the finest farms in Warwick township, and makes a specialty of fruits, such as peaches, pears and plums. Mr. Hess has spent a great amount of money in beautifying his place, and the entire surroundings bespeak thrift and enterprise of the owner. In politics he is in sympathy with the Prohibition party, and was one time nominated for poor director.

On Nov. 27, 1884, Mr. Hess married Miss Harriet Becker, and to them has come one child, Carrie B., born Dec. 6, 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Hess are both members of the German Baptist Church.

REV. ABRAHAM Z. HESS. The Hess family enjoys the distinction of being one of the oldest and most respected of the families of the early settlement of Lancaster county. Like many other prominent ones, it originated in the freedom-loving land of Switzerland, and came with a colony of others to that part of Lancaster county, now known as Pequea township. Here Samuel Hess reared a numerous family. In 1734 one of his sons took up 200 acres of land, located one mile east of Lititz—this portion of the county being named Warwick township. A part of this land is owned by Jonas H. Hess, and here is located the old Hess Mennonite Meeting House and the cemetery in connection with it, where many of the family lie at rest.

From these ancestors came Abraham Hess, who married Elizabeth Musser, the former being born in Pequea township, and the latter in Providence township. Abraham was a son of Michael, and all were farming people who lived worthy, quiet, useful lives, and did their part in the conversion of Lancaster county into the home of a rich and contented people. To Abraham and Elizabeth (Musser) Hess was born a family of children, one of these being a son, Abraham M., who became the father of our subject.

Abraham M. Hess was born Feb. 18, 1829, in Pequea township, Lancaster county, and has lived a long and laborious life, well sustaining the name and position of an honest and independent farmer. At present he is living retired from active farming, his years giving him an excellent reason for retirement. Abraham M. Hess has been three-times married. By his first marriage one son was born, Emanuel, who is now deceased. His second marriage was to Anna Zeigler, who died July 3, 1867, at the age of thirty-three years. She with her husband belonged to the Brethren in Christ Church. She was the mother of these children: Conrad, who is engaged in farming on the old homestead; Benjamin, a farmer in Fulton township; Abraham Z., of this sketch; Rev. Noah, a farmer in Pequea township; Esli, deceased; Ezra, deceased; and Mattie, who married Paris Engle, of Columbia, Pa. Mr. Hess' third marriage was to Barbara Herr, by whom he had the following children: Anna, the wife of J. G. Mann, a farmer in Manor township; Enos, a clergyman in the Brethren in Christ church, also a professor in the Pennsylvania State College in Center county, Pa.; and Miss Elizabeth, at home.

The maternal grandfather of Rev. Mr. Hess was Conrad Zeigler, a highly respected resident of the township of East Donegal; his nephew, Dr. Zeigler, of Mt. Joy, Pa., occupies a prominent position.

Rev. Abraham Z. Hess was reared on his parents' farm and when he reached the age of twenty years, married and moved to East Donegal, leasing his father-in-law's farm, which he operated a number of years. Later he bought the property, and has been engaged in its cultivation until the present time. The farm contains eighty-eight acres, and it shows thorough cultivation and most careful management. Mr. Hess took up carpentering in 1888, and has worked in that line also to some extent.

On Dec. 2, 1879, Rev. Mr. Hess was married, in East Donegal, to Elizabeth M. Musser, and to this union have been born these children: Anna M.; Martha M., who died young; Abraham M.; Mary M.; Katie M.; Henry M.; Barbara M. and Benjamin M. Mrs. Hess was born in East Donegal township, daughter of Michael B. and Catherine (Musser) Musser, both residents of East Donegal township.

Mr. Hess is a minister of the Brethren in Christ Church, and is counted one of the strong men of its clergy. Its preachers and pastors are expected to sustain themselves as do other men by the work of their hands, and he is no exception to the rule, an honorable and hard-working man, with high ideals and a sincere devotion to the faith in which he was bred. In 1894 he was ordained a minister, and his subsequent career has justified the action of the church to an unusual degree. An industrious as well as a thrifty man, he works hard at his manual labor, and brings to the pulpit the inspiring enthusiasm of a soul that feels the deep realities of religion.

JOSEPH N. RISSER, a general farmer and also a painter in Mt. Joy township, was born Oct. 15, 1856, son of Joseph and Fanny (Nissley) Risser, the former of whom was born in Lebanon county and the latter in Mt. Joy, Lancaster county.

The father of Mr. Risser moved to the farm which the latter now occupies in 1886, and there he died Dec. 1, 1896. The mother died on her old homestead in January, 1885, aged sixty-three years, the father living to be seventy-five. They were members of the Old Mennonite Church, and were buried in Risser's Meeting House cemetery, in Mt. Joy township. They reared a goodly family, as follows: Elizabeth, who married Christian Good, a farmer in West Donegal township; Mary N., who married Rev. Levi Ebersole, a retired farmer, in Elizabethtown; Levi N., deceased, who married Amanda Nissley, and she now lives in Elizabethtown; Anna N., deceased, wife of Levi Longenecker; Fanny N., who married Aaron Demmy, of Elizabethtown; Joseph N.; Rev. Martin H., a farmer on the old homestead and a preacher in Zion Church, who married Fanny Hosler; Amanda N., who married Benjamin Hersch, of East Donegal township; and Amos N., a farmer of Mt. Joy township, who married Emma Lehman.

Joseph N. Risser came with his father in 1886 to the present farm, which is a well cultivated tract of twenty-two acres, and here he has resided ever since. In politics he is a Republican. He is a consistent member of the German Baptist Church, and one of the most respected men in this locality. In connection with his farming, he follows his trade as painter.

On Oct. 23, 1888, in Mt. Joy, township, Mr. Risser was married to Miss Lizzie S. Stauffer, and four children have been born to this union, namely: James S., Fanny S., Ivan S. and Herman S. Mrs. Risser was born June 20, 1864, in Mt. Joy township, near Milton Grove, where her parents, John G. and Maria W. (Shelly) Stauffer, still reside. Both Mr. and Mrs. Risser have a wide circle of attached friends, and both are most highly esteemed in the community.

JOHN S. WOLF, a well-to-do agriculturist of Warwick township, has passed all his life on the fine farm he owns and occupies, having been born there Sept. 9, 1850, in the house which is still his home.

Mr. Wolf is a member of one of the oldest families of this section, his grandfather, Jacob Wolf, having been born in 1779, in Ephrata township, about a half mile from the place where our subject now resides. He was a farmer and followed that calling exclusively until his death, which occurred in 1823. He married Miss Catherine Landis, and they were the parents of seven children; Samuel, who was a farmer in early life, was Station Agent at Akron, and also a coal and lumber dealer; George, a farmer; Jacob, a miller; Sarah, wife of Daniel Bard; Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Landis; Lydia, wife of Abraham Zook; and Henry.

Henry Wolf, the father of our subject, was born in the old Wolf homestead in Ephrata township Nov. 10, 1820. He was reared to farming, and gave his entire attention to that occupation until his retirement in 1873. He died June 1, 1893. Mr. Wolf was successful in his business affairs, and was a director in the Lincoln Bank for some years. He married Miss Lavina Sheaffer, and they had two children: Elizabeth A., wife of Harry R. Erb, of Warwick township; and John S., whose name opens this sketch.

John S. Wolf was educated in the local common schools and at the State Normal at Millersville. In 1873 he commenced farming on his own account on the place where he was born, and has given his entire attention to agricultural pursuits, in which he has met with the substantial success he has well deserved. He has been a director in the Lincoln National Bank, for the past ten or twelve years, and he is regarded as a reliable business man by all who have had dealings with him. In 1874, Mr. Wolf wedded Miss Lizzie W. Rupp, daughter of Abram and Anna Rupp, and to this union have been born four children: Bertha, who is the wife of Grabill G. Minnich; Henry Arthur, who died May 6, 1901, aged twenty years and nine months; and Anna R. and Mabel R. are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Wolf are both members of the United Evangelical Church, and he is a member of the board of trustees of that congregation. He occupies high place in the esteem of his fellow citizens, and as one of the progressive and public spirited citizens of his locality, is regarded with respect by all who know him.

FRANK A. RIEKER has been a resident of Lancaster for thirty-five years, during which period he has proved his interest in his adopted home in many substantial ways. In building up the industry with which he has for so many years been actively identified; he aided materially in the growth and prosperity of the city, where he has ranked high among the successful business men of his generation.

Mr. Rieker is a native of Germany, born March 10, 1844, in Wurtemberg, and his father, John Rieker, passed his entire life in that country. He was a farmer by occupation. John Rieker married Anna Lechleitner, a native of Wurtemberg, whose father, Jacob Lechleitner, was an Austrian, born in the Tyrol. After his settlement in Wurtemberg, Mr. Lechleitner engaged in the hotel business and farming. Mr. and Mrs. Rieker had eight children who grew to maturity, and seven still survive. Frank A. is the only member of the family that came to America. He lived with his parents up to the age of thirteen years, when he was apprenticed to learn the trade of brewer, working three years with his maternal uncle, a large brewer of Esslingen. For some time following he traveled—as is the custom among journeymen in the Fatherland—visiting different parts of his native land, France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria and other countries. In 1863 Mr. Rieker came to the United States, sailing from Hamburg, and for a year after his arrival in this country, he worked in New York City. His next location was in Philadelphia, where he was employed two years, and in 1867 he was engaged as foreman in Frank's Brewery, in Lancaster, in which position he remained another two years. He was also in the employ of Joseph Wacker, in the same line, for two years, before starting out in business on his own account. For a short period he carried on a brewery in Columbia, Lancaster county, and then returning to Lancaster became a partner in the firm of Sheid, Gertz & Co., who conducted the Lion Brewery. Subsequently, for one year, he rented the plant, in connection with Messrs. Struble & Co., and at the expiration of that time became sole proprietor of what is now known as the Star Brewery, and which he has developed into one of the finest and most complete establishments of the kind in the State. He rebuilt and greatly enlarged the old plant, until its capacity was 12,000 barrels per year. He erected his new brewery on modern principles, and equipped it with every device and improvement known to the business, including up-to-date ice machines, electric plants, etc. The present capacity of the establishment is 45,000 to 50,000 barrels per year, and the sales from 30,000 to 35,000 barrels. The brewery, a building five stories in height, and a block in depth, is located on West King street, First street and Rieker avenue. There are three storage houses, engine and boiler room, in addition to the main building. The principal building was erected in 1892, at a cost of $95,000, and further improvements have been made at an expense of $30,000, the plant now covering an area of one and one-half acres. Employment is given to forty-two.

In the long and successful conduct of the Star Brewery Mr. Rieker accumulated a handsome competency, the result of the practical application of those qualities characteristic of his nationality—perseverance, industry, honesty and thoroughness in every detail. Good judgment and executive ability, combined with an intelligent knowledge of both the commercial and industrial departments of his business, completed an equipment not to be despised, and which has stood the test of long years of competition, in a day when progress must be matched with progress, if one would succeed.

In 1868 Mr. Rieker married Cressentia Harmann, who was born in Lancaster, daughter of John Harmann. Six children have come to this union: Frank J., Annie M. (wife of Robert Ramsgate, a diamond broker of New York City), Mary, Charles, Harry and Ralph. The pleasant family home is at No. 606 King street. Mr. Rieker is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, and fraternally affiliates with the B. P. O. E. He is independent in politics.

Frank J. Rieker, who since 1897 has been manager of the Star Brewery, is one of the most popular young men in Lancaster. He was educated in the common schools and Weidler's Commercial School. On Oct. 19, 1893, he married Katie E. Ganse, of Lancaster, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth E. Ganse. Politically Mr. Rieker is a Democrat, and he is chairman of the Democratic county committee. Socially he belongs to the Elks; the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he is trustee and D. D. G. P.; and to the Knights of Pythias, of which he is also trustee.

Charles Gamberling came to Lancaster county when a young man, was a painter by trade, and was married in Bainbridge. His death there took place in 1880, at the age of eighty-two years, and that of his widow, in 1890, at sixty-nine years of age, both being members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were born and named in the following order:

Barbara, wife of Henry Machin, a farmer in Bainbridge; Susan, widow of Joseph Poulton, of Harrisburg; Philip, Simon and Ella, deceased; and John H.

Philip Gamberling, father of Charles, was born in England, and his family name was in reality Chamberlain, but was changed after his arrival in America. He was a butcher and first settled in Havre de Grace, Md., where he carried on his business until driven off by the French, who fired his home. He then came to Harrisburg, Pa., where he and his wife passed the remainder of their days. Philip Cowder and his wife, maternal grandparents of John H. Gamberling, were natives of Germany; the father was a carpenter by trade, and both he and his wife died in Bainbridge, Pa., of which place they were early settlers.

John H. Gamberling attended school in Bainbridge, Pa., until eighteen years old. He then went to Churchville, Pa., and served one year at coach-making; his employers running out of work, he returned to Bainbridge, finished learning the trade with Henry Faus, and remained with him five years and a half, in all. Mr. Gamberling next went to Mount Wolf, York county, and for eighteen months carried on business on his own account; he next went to Steelton, Dauphin county, and was employed four years as a carpenter by the Steel Company; in 1880 he came to Columbia, served nine months as brakeman on the railroad, then eleven years as fireman and was then promoted to his present position of engineer.

JONATHAN M. WILSON, a prominent farmer of Little Britain township, was born June 22, 1840, and is a son of Needham and Jane (Patterson) Wilson, both of Little Britain township. Grandfather Benjamin Wilson was of English origin and married Anna Sidwell, whose ancestors were Scotch-Irish. They were early settlers in Lancaster county, and consistent members of the Society of Friends.

Needham Wilson, son of Benjamin and father of J. M., of Little Britain township, was born May 15, 1797, and died Sept. 22, 1872, while his wife was born May 10, 1797, married Nov. 26, 1826, and died Sept. 7, 1890, at the age of ninety-four years. Their children were: Dorestus, a farmer, in Chester county; Sidwell, deceased; Silvia A., who married George Bockius, deceased; Dr. Needham, a physician in Philadelphia; and Jonathan M.

Jonathan M. Wilson was born in a log cabin in this township, a relic of pioneer days, and obtained his education in the public schools. His tastes have made him an excellent farmer and his well-cultivated and finely improved estate is one of the most valuable in this locality. His land consists of 100 acres of great fertility, and attractiveness, where a general line of farming is carried on, the most approved methods and machinery being employed.

Mr. Wilson was married Feb. 18, 1869, to Miss Rebecca E. Rummer, of Little Britain township. She was born June 14, 1843, and was one in a family of seven children: William, deceased; Rebecca E., who is Mrs. Wilson; George W., of Little Britain; Rachel, who is the wife of Ervan Hill, of Cecil county, Md.; Taylor, of this township; John R., of Drumore township; and Emma, the wife of Andrew Jackson, whose sketch appears in this volume. Grandfather William Rummer came of Dutch stock, and was one of the old settlers in his part of the county. The parents of Mrs. Wilson were Samuel and Annie M. (Pierce) Rummer, of Cecil county, Md.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were: Sanders, who is a penman, and who lives near Harrisburg, Pa.; Malinda, married; Margaret, residing at home, one of the leading teachers of music in this county, a lady of high attainments, and the graduate of several schools of music; Anna J., a valued teacher in this county, a lady of culture, refinement and education, who graduated from the Millersville Normal School at the age of seventeen; Elnora and Harriet, who died young.

Mr. Wilson is one of the leading citizens of this county, a member of the Democratic party, and one of the supporters of the Little Britain Presbyterian Church, of which he and family are consistent members. This is a very intellectual family and stands high in the esteem of the neighborhood.

A. JACKSON HARRAR, a successful and noted farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in the township where he has passed his useful and industrious life, Oct. 13, 1844, his parents being Miller and Margaret (Galbraith) Harrar.

Miller Harrar was born in Delaware, in April, 1817, and his wife Margaret, in Colerain township, in 1821, a daughter of William Galbraith, a native of Ireland, and a farmer in Colerain township in his later years.

Miller Harrar was the son of Daniel and Margaret (Miller) Harrar, who came into Lancaster county from Montgomery county, after living for a time in Delaware. In 1823 they settled on a farm in Colerain township, their farm now being part of the place occupied by A. Jackson Harrar. They lived and died on the home farm, the father dying in 1865, and his widow in 1868. They had three sons and two daughters. (1) William, who married Isabelle Galbraith, a sister to the mother of A. Jackson Harrar, settled on a farm in Colerain township, where he lived and died, leaving one son, Daniel, who still lives on his father's farm. (2) Daniel married Isabella Harrar, a daughter of Jesse Harrar, and settled on the old Harrar homestead until 1861. That year he bought the old Joseph Harrar farm, adjoining the one on which he had been living. Here he lived until 1893, when he bought a farm in Delaware, where he died leaving a widow and four daughters, who are residents of Chester county. (3) Lydia A., born in Lancaster county, died unmarried some years ago. (4) Margaret J., a young lady, died at the home in Colerain township. (5) Miller.

Miller Harrar received a somewhat limited education in the subscription schools of the time, and remained under the parental roof until he reached maturity. During his youthful days he learned the millwright trade, but he never followed it as a business. In 1843 he married Maggie Galbraith, and located on the old homestead, to which he added very substantial improvements, making this his home until his death, in Feb., 1888. His wife passed to her rest in 1886. They were members of the Baptist Church, and the Harrars were among the founders of the first Baptist Church in Colerain township. They were all Jacksonian Democrats. They were the parents of two sons and a daughter. A. J. was the eldest son. Francis Marion, born in August, 1849, was a student in the home schools, where he received a fair education, and married Miss Abbie Keehn, a daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Keehn, of Drumore township. They moved in with the parents at the old home. After the death of the father, the farm was divided between Marion and A. J. Harrar, the latter keeping the old home for his residence. Marion died in May, 1896, leaving a widow, his son Earnest having died nearly two years before. The widow has since married Thomas Cassidy. Ida, the daughter of Miller Harrar, died in childhood.

A. Jackson Harrar, whose name introduces this article, received the benefits of the district school, and remained at home as long as his parents lived. For several years before his father's death he had the management of the farm in his own hands.

Mr. Harrar was married in Nov., 1867, to Miss Phoebe Lovett, the daughter of Patterson and Mary Lovett, of Lancaster county. Mrs. Harrar was born and reared in East Drumore township, and died at the old Harrar homestead in May, 1888, leaving one son, Ellwood A., who was born in Aug., 1868, and was educated in the home schools. For several years he was bookkeeper in a Philadelphia house. In 1896 he entered the Theological Seminary at Chester, Delaware county, from which he was graduated in 1899. He was given charge of a mission in the Baptist Church, and the same year he was ordained and installed as pastor of the Alpha Baptist Church, of Philadelphia. Miss Lillian Jeffries, who became his wife, was born in Philadelphia. They have one son, Norman Jackson.

A. Jackson Harrar was married to his second wife, Miss Ida Keehn, a daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Keehn, in May, 1889. Mrs. Harrar was born Aug. 9, 1859, and received her education in the Union High School. She became the mother of one child, who died when very young.

Mr. Harrar built a fine house and barn in 1889, and put his farm in good order. He is a fancier of good horse flesh, and has one of the finest horses in Colerain township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Harrar belong to the Baptist Church, where he has been trustee, treasurer and clerk, and an active worker for many years. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, and has been tax collector of Colerain township. Mr. Harrar is agent for the Agricultural Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Lancaster county, and belongs to Lodge No. 544, I. O. O. F., at Kirkwood, in which he has filled all the chairs except that of treasurer. For several years he has filled the chair of financial secretary.

JOSEPH DENNISON, of Columbia, Pa., is one of the most reliable engineers in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company. He was born in Cenoy township, Lancaster county, in a log house, March 13, 1851, and is a son of John and Susan (Brubaker) Dennison, natives of West Donegal and Cenoy townships, respectively, the former of whom died on the home farm in 1893, at the age of sixty-six years, his remains being interred at Falmouth; the latter is still living on the old homestead at seventy-four years of age. The children born to these parents, five in number, were named as follows: Amanda, at home; Joseph; Sidney, at home; Anna, wife of Dr. Frank Hinkle, of Columbia; and John, of Bridgeport, Pa. The paternal grandfather of Joseph Dennison, Andrew, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., but died on his farm in Illinois. The maternal grandparents were David and Rachel (Brooks) Brubaker, the former of whom was an old tax collector of Lancaster county; of the Brubaker family an interesting sketch will be found elsewhere.

Joseph Dennison lived on the parental farm until thirty years of age and then came to Columbia, and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, as fireman, in which capacity he served nine years and four months, when, for his faithfulness and attention to duty, he was promoted to engineer.

Joseph Dennison was united in marriage, in Bainbridge, Lancaster county, Dec. 24, 1872, with Miss Eliza Dohner, who has borne him three children, Norman, Abraham and Clement, the latter deceased. Mrs. Eliza (Dohner) Dennison is also a native of Lancaster county, and was born Aug. 5, 1851, daughter of Abraham and Eliza (Diehm) Dohner, of Penn township. Abraham Dohner was a carpenter in his early manhood, but in his latter years was a farmer in Cenoy township, and died on his farm in February, 1874, when fifty-six years old. Mrs. Eliza (Diehm) Dohner now makes her home with Mr. Dennison at Columbia. She was born Sept. 5, 1820, and is a consistent member of the Reformed Church. Her six children were named, in order of birth, as follows: Eli, who is a farmer in West Hempfield township; Sarah and Anna M., who died young; Eliza, now Mrs. Joseph Dennison; Emaline, wife of Samuel K. Miller, a railroad conductor residing in Columbia; and Priscilla, wife of John H. Gamberling, of the same borough.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Eliza (Dohner) Dennison were born in Lebanon county, Pa., were agricultural people, and early settled in Lancaster county. Her maternal grandparents, John and Sarah (Seidsinger) Diehm, were respectively natives of Lititz, Lancaster county, and Berks county, Pa. John Diehm was a farmer and died on his homestead in Lancaster county in 1873, when seventy-seven years old; his wife had preceded him to the grave in 1867. They were the parents of five children, viz.: Eliza, mother of Mrs. Dennison; Leonard, deceased; Sarah, wife of David Smith, of Penn township; Harry, a retired railroad man of Middletown, Pa.; and Priscilla, deceased wife of Christ Ebersole. Michael and Margaret Seidsinger, maternal great-grandparents, came from Berks to Lancaster county at a very early day.

Joseph Dennison is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. He belongs to the Reformed Church. He is a Democrat in politics, but has never been an office seeker. He has always been attentive to his duties as a railroad man, has won the confidence of his company, and has also gained the unfeigned respect of all his neighbors.

JAMES C. LEISEY, an efficient and popular conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, with his residence at Columbia, was born in Cocalico township, Lancaster county, Feb. 25, 1853. His parents, Frank and Barbara (Zell) Leisey, were also natives of Lancaster county. The former worked at farming in the proper season and at other times at broom-making, and such other work as he could turn his hand to with profit. To his marriage with Miss Zell were born: Martin, a cigar manufacturer at Lititz; James C.; Frank, a mechanic at Lancaster City; Emma, wife of Albert Book, of Neffsville, Pa.; Alice, married to Milton Long, of Lancaster; Sarah, of Akron, Pa.; Reuben, a painter in Witmer, this county; and Allen, a farmer, also of Lancaster county. The paternal grandfather of James C. Leisey was Joseph Leisey, a farmer of Lancaster county, and his maternal grandparents were Nicholas and Barbara (Keel) Zell, of the same county, and also agricultural people of English extraction.

James C. Leisey worked about on farms until fourteen years of age and then learned cigar-making, a trade he followed for eleven years; he was then employed as brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad for a year and a half, when he returned to farming for two years and then again to the railroad until July, 1884; he was next a flagman until March 28, 1898, when he was promoted to his present position as conductor.

May 5, 1879, Mr. Leisey was united in matrimony with Miss Ella Keinard in Lancaster. This marriage has been blessed with ten children, born in the following order: Ira, Minnie, Arabella, Oscar (deceased), Leon, Ferman, Raymond, Ola, May and Dora Ellen, all the survivors still having their home with the parents. Mrs. Ella (Keinard) Leisey was born in York county, Jan. 5, 1858, and is a daughter of Michael and Mary A. CLIFFORD COOK, one of the leading farmers of Little Britain township, was born July 23, 1858, a son of Reuben and Deborah (Brown) Cook, the former of whom was born in Fulton township in 1818, and died on the old home place Feb. 10, 1889. Reuben Cook was a son of William Cook, who was born in Lancaster county, although the family originated in Wales. It has long been one of the most honorable among the old and established families of southern Lancaster county. By marriage it is connected with many of the names well known for many years in this part of the state. The children born to William Cook were: Clarkson; Allen; Mercy, who married Mark Haines; Ruth Ann, who married Warrick Coats; and Reuben, the father of Clifford Cook, of this sketch.

The mother of Mr. Cook was a daughter of Hon. Jeremiah Brown, who was a prominent member of the bar, a judge, a member of Congress and one of the leading citizens of Lancaster county. She was born in Fulton township, in 1822, and still survives and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. R. H. Archer, of Philadelphia. She was married to Reuben Cook about 1839, and the following children were born to them: Kersey, who resides in Jefferson City, Mo.; Howard, deceased, who was a captain in the Union army during the Civil war, and at the time of his death was a prominent physician in Omaha, Neb.; Walter B., who is a bookkeeper at the Broad street station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Philadelphia, and who was for fifteen years in the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad, at Omaha, Neb.; Millard, who spent the greater part of his life in Kansas and Nebraska, but died at the old home, in Sept., 1901; Myron, who is a farmer in Labette county, Kansas; Clifford, of this sketch; Annie M., who is in the employ of Dr. Kelly's private institute, in Baltimore, Md.; and Alice B., who is the wife of R. H. Archer, of Philadelphia. During life Reuben Cook was a very prominent farmer in his locality, and was a man esteemed throughout the community.

The early education of Clifford Cook was acquired in the public schools of his neighborhood, and he grew up on the farm, learning practical agriculture. Although he has now a fine farm, of 150 acres, with a most comfortable residence and one of the most capacious barns in this township, he has been industrious and frugal all his life, and has earned his substantial position in the county. His land under his wise management and careful and intelligent methods, produces abundant crops in all the products of this section.

The marriage of Mr. Cook was on Dec. 2, 1888, to Mrs. Helen E. Mearns, the widow of J. A. Mearns, and the daughter of Joseph T. and Mary A. (Alexander) England, natives of Cecil county, Md. She was born Dec. 2, 1855, and was one of a family of three children, the others being Joseph and Isaac H., both of whom reside in Zion, Md. The children born to Clifford Cook and his wife are: Marian Virginia, born July 30, 1892; and Eugene Maurice, born April 7, 1901. Mrs. England still survives, at the age of seventy-eight years.

Few men in this township have taken a more intelligent interest in its progress than has Clifford Cook. As a leading member of the Republican party, he has most efficiently served in a number of the local offices. For the past six years he has shown his interest in educational matters by serving as school director and through 1882-83-84 he was township auditor. His religious connection is with the Society of Friends, and he enjoys the high esteem of all with whom he comes in contact, whether in public or social life.

E. S. WOLF, a resident of Hopeland, Pa., is a well-known farmer and miller of Clay township, and a leading citizen in this community. He was born June 10, 1863, son of Samuel and Lydia (Stief) Wolf, both deceased.

Samuel Wolf, the father of E. S., was a son of Jeremiah Wolf, a respected farmer and old settler of Clay township. Samuel Wolf married Lydia Stief and they had a family of seven children, namely: Harriet, Louisa, E. S., Salinda, Samuel, deceased, Cassie, and Amelia, deceased.

E. S. Wolf was reared on the farm and attended the common schools of his locality in his youth. For a number of years he carried on farming with success, and by his industry became the owner of valuable land. Recently he sold a farm of 148 acres of land and turned his attention to milling, buying the Eagle Grist Mills, of Hopeland, which he operates, also running a portable saw mill. Mr. Wolf is a man of varied talents and succeeds in almost every business he undertakes. For quite a considerable period he engaged in the manufacture of cigars, but his time and attention are mainly given to his farming and milling at present. He is a staunch supporter of the Republican party, a progressive citizen who takes a great interest in his community, and serves with efficiency on the school board. Mr. Wolf is a member of the United Brethren Church.

In September, 1882, Mr. Wolf was united in marriage with Miss Salinda Druckenbrode, born in 1862, daughter of Jacob Druckenbrode, of Clay township. This marriage has been blessed with seven children, as follows: Alice, born April 18, 1883; Daisy, born June 28, 1890; Samuel, born Sept. 21, 1892; Elva, born Feb. 7, 1896; Bessie, born Oct. 18, 1897; Le Roy, born Dec. 25, 1899; and Irvin, born May 10, 1901.

JOHN F. HEIM was born in Columbia, March 27, 1861, and is one of the town's most respected citizens. For twenty years he has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Company, and in no relation of life has he ever been found derelict. He is the son of George Heim, and an outline of his family history may be found on another page. His boyhood was passed upon a farm, where he remained until twenty years of age, when he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as a brakeman. After a year he was made a fireman and some ten years later was promoted to be engineer. This position he still holds. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers, and is one of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is a consistent and active member and a liberal supporter. In political faith he is a Democrat.

On July 26, 1882, he was married to Miss Lizzie A. Ambrose, of Columbia. The issue of the union has been four children: Edgar F., Clara R. (deceased), Harry C. and Walter M. Mrs. Heim is a daughter of Benjamin A. and Martha (Morrow) Ambrose, and was born June 14, 1857, at York. Her mother died in 1858, but her father is still living. He is a son of parents who emigrated from Ireland early in life, and settled in York county, in this State. The same statement holds good, also, as to her maternal grandparents. Mr. Ambrose was born in 1822. In early life he was a boatman, but is now a farmer. For many years he conducted a mail route. He is a member of the M. E. Church. He has been three times married, Mrs. Heim being the second and youngest child born to the first union. Her elder sister, Anna A., died in childhood. His second wife was Mary Stormer, who also bore him two children, Robert J. (deceased), and Charles, a farmer in York county. His third marriage was to Susan Brown, the issue being a son and two daughters. John A., the eldest child, resides in Lancaster; Ella married Edgar Hate; and Mamie married William Fry, both prosperous York county farmers.

AMOS ZIEGLER. Among the elegant homes and fine farms of Lancaster county, is that of Amos Ziegler, who resides in the village of Rowenna, seven miles from Columbia, Pa., living somewhat retired, but intelligently interested in the public affairs of the country, and through others, conducting operations on a large scale in mica and asbestos mining, in the State of Virginia.

The family of which Amos Ziegler is a worthy representative, is one of the old and important ones of East Donegal township, the founder having established himself here as early as 1782. Amos Ziegler was born May 14, 1851, a son of John and Barbara (Hertzler) Ziegler, the former of whom was one of the leading men of this part of Lancaster county; he was on the board of directors of the First National Bank, of Marietta, with which he was connected for many years. He died in 1894, leaving much property. His religious connection had been with the Dunkard Church, in which he was highly valued. The estimable mother of Mr. Ziegler was born Dec. 4, 1831, and since 1895, has made her home with her son Amos.

The family born to Mr. and Mrs. John Ziegler was as follows: Benjamin, who died in infancy; Jacob H., a successful farmer and owner of a creamery, in Rowenna; and Amos, the subject of this biography. The latter was reared on the home farm and attended the district schools, remaining engaged in farming pursuits until the spring of 1876, when he came to his present place, continuing to operate both farms, although not engaged in active labor himself. Mr. Ziegler, in 1892, laid out the flourishing village of Rowenna, being one of the most enterprising and energetic of men. In association with others, he is prospecting for mica and asbestos in Bedford county, Va., where there is every indication of remarkable results.

The marriage of Amos Ziegler was on Oct. 17, 1876, in East Donegal, to Miss Alice Musser, who was born in Rowenna, a daughter of John and Martha (Berg) Musser, of Donegal township. In May, 1900, Mr. Musser removed to Salem, Va., and now resides with his son, Henry C. From the foundation of the First National Bank, of Marietta, he was one of its officers, serving many years as its president, and was a prominent member of the Dunkard Church in this township. Formerly he was a Republican in politics, but latterly has voted with the Prohibitionists. His children were: Henry C., a farmer of Salem, Va.; Alice; Hiram, deceased; and Eugene, deceased.

Mr. Ziegler has served a number of years as school director and is fraternally connected with the Masonic order, in politics being an Independent. A genial, pleasant man, Mr. Ziegler is an agreeable host, and delights to show his visitors his fine collection of birds, being something of a taxidermist, as well as one of the most intelligent citizens of this part of the county. The stanch old Ziegler family finds in Amos Ziegler, a worthy representative.

DAVID H. MEYERS, late a highly respected farmer of the township of West Donegal, was born in Conoy township, June 29, 1837, and is a son of John and Barbara (Metzgar) Meyers, born in Conoy township and in Dauphin county, respectively. The father died in Conoy township in 1841 at the early age of thirty-one years, having devoted his active life to farming. The mother, who was born in 1815, is still in good health. They were both members of the Lutheran faith, and to them were born three sons, Jacob and John, both of whom died young, and David H., whose name is given above.

Isaac Meyers, the paternal grandfather of David H., was born in Lancaster county, and moved into the far West about 1838. The maternal grandfather of David H. Meyers was David Metzgar, born in Dauphin county, where he lived and died as a farmer.

(3) David S. died in infancy. Mrs. Anna (Shank) Meyers was born in Mt. Joy township, in Feb. 1836, and is a sister of Aaron Shank, of West Donegal township, of whom a sketch appears on another page, where will be found a full history of the Shank family.

David H. Meyers spent the first twenty-two years of his life at home, and then purchased the farm on which he lived until his death, making an enviable record as an honest man and upright citizen. For fifteen years he was school director, and gave much attention to school interests, discharging his duties in this connection with the same conscientious fidelity that marked all his other labors. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a member of the Mennonite Church. He died at his home June 11, 1902, when nearly sixty-five years old.

He was a prominent man in his day and filled many of the most important offices in Lancaster county. He was president of the Lancaster County Bank from the time it was founded, in 1841, until his death, which occurred in 1865. He was one of the Presidential Electors in 1848. He then began life for himself, farming on the place where our subject now resides, and continued thus until his death, which occurred March 9, 1882. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Mary Neff, of East Lampeter township, by whom he had nine children, viz.: Susan (deceased), wife of Isaac L. Runk; Christian, our subject; David, of Leacock township; Moses N., of Leacock township; and Annie N., wife of Michael L. Rohrer. The mother of these children died in 1841, and the father afterward married Miss Rebecca Eckman. To this union were born two children: Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Hostetter; and Martin, who died in childhood.

Christian N. Landis continued to live with his father until the latter's death, and he inherited the farm, which is one of the finest in Lancaster county, comprising 100 acres of most productive land, which Mr. Landis has tilled with steady profit.

In 1866 he married Miss Leamon, daughter of Tobias Leamon, of East Lampeter township, and to this union have been born four children: Mary, wife of Frank K. Lefever; Lizzie L., (deceased) wife of David G. Landis; and Anna L. and David L., both at home. Mr. and Mrs. Landis, with their daughter, are members of the Old Mennonite Church. Our subject has given his entire attention to agricultural pursuits, and he is regarded as one of the intelligent, representative citizens of his section.

HOFFMAN, a noted merchant at Beartown, Lancaster county, was born in East Cocalico, July 7, 1850, and is a son of Henry and Barbara (Beam) Hoffman, natives of Berks county, and Brecknock township, Lancaster county, respectively. The father was reared in Morgantown, Berks county, and when a small boy was taken by his parents to East Cocalico.

Balser Hoffman, the grandfather of Henry B., came from Germany, and was, as is supposed, a very small child at the time of his coming. He was a farmer, and attained an advanced age.

Henry Hoffman, the father of Henry B., learned the trade of weaving, which he followed the most of his life. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, to which his wife also belonged. Henry B. Hoffman was reared in East Cocalico until he reached the age of thirteen years, since which time he has taken care of himself. His career began in farm work, and at the age of seventeen he entered a cigar factory, to learn the art of making cigars. When he was twenty, he learned the carpenter trade, which he followed for some five years; at the end of this period he applied himself to tobacco farming on a tract of seven acres at Beartown. Almost every year he has had some tobacco, though in 1885 he engaged in a mercantile establishment at Beartown, which he has since very successfully conducted. For eight years he has been postmaster at Beartown, where he has resided continuously, with the exception of 1893, when he had a grocery store at Martindale, where he held the position of assistant postmaster.

Mr. Hoffman is a progressive and public-spirited citizen of Beartown, and is ever ready to lend a helping hand to any movement that looks to the public good. One of the leading Republicans of this part of Lancaster county, he has been supervisor of his township for two years. In 1874 he was married to Miss Katie Troop, a daughter of Samuel and Sallie (Miller) Troop. FRANKLIN G. HARPLE, farmer, justice of the peace, surveyor and conveyancer, of Bareville, Pa., is a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Lancaster county. His birth occurred Oct. 2, 1840, in this village, and he was a son of Lewis and Anna M. (Knox) Harple, the former of whom was born in West Prussian Germany, and the latter, in Lancaster City, Pa. Father Harple came to America with his parents when he was but six years of age and settled near Spring Grove, Pa., later moving to Upper Leacock township. For many years Father Harple conducted a distillery for Adam Bare and John Hershey, operating it near Bareville, and in this place he died April 3, 1849, at the age of fifty-six years. The mother died June 13, 1863, both of them being buried in the old cemetery at Heller's Church, now Salem, being members of the Lutheran faith. In politics Mr. Harple was a Democrat.

The family of children born to Lewis and Anna

M. Harple included: Henry, who died in infancy; Henry L., who died at the age of thirty-nine, crushed by the cars at Gordonville, Pa.; Sarah, deceased, who was the wife of Abraham Beerbauer, of Chester county; Lewis E., the trusted messenger of the First National Bank, of Lancaster; Sabrina, who is the widow of Henry W. Kessler, of Burt county, Neb.; Catherine, who was murdered Aug. 9, 1849, while picking blackberries in Upper Leacock township; Samuel, who is a carpenter, located in Erie, Pa.; John, a farmer, of Baltimore county, Md.; Anna Maria, deceased, who married George W. Deitrick; Martin, who died young; Elizabeth, who died young; and Franklin G.

The paternal grandparents of Franklin G. Harple were Ludwig and Anna M. Harple, or Harbill, of Germany, Lutherans who came to America in 1779, settling in Spring Grove, where the former carried on a weaving business until he removed to Upper Leacock township. He died at Lancaster. The maternal grandparents were Robert Knox, born in London, Eng., and Sabrina Stauffer, a daughter of the brave Swiss, Captain Stauffer, who commanded a company in the Battle of Brandywine, and assisted in bringing Hessian prisoners to Lancaster.

Justice Harple acquired a good education in the common schools of his district and passed his boyhood on a small farm consisting of ten acres of land, belonging to his parents. After they were called from earth, he located in his present place, in 1864, engaging in surveying under William Weidman, where he worked until he attained his majority and then returned and purchased the old homestead, farming there until 1873, when he made a trip to Wayne county, Ohio. There he made himself useful, working through the season on the farms and then went on to Erie, Pa., reaching that locality in July, 1873; here he found employment in carpenter work and in bridgebuilding, which kept him occupied until March, 1875, when he returned to Lancaster county.

After his return, Mr. Harple purchased his present home, in 1881, having previously farmed here, and then he began the business of surveying, on his own account, his previous work under Mr. Weidman having taught him all the details. Active in the ranks of the Republican party, he has been called upon to serve in many of the local offices, and has been township auditor, tax collector, deputy coroner and, on Oct. 9, 1881, he was appointed justice of the peace, his former efficient management of public office making this appointment gratifying both to Republicans and to Democrats. This has been proven by re-election ever since.

The marriage of Justice Harple and Miss Sarah L. Keplinger was celebrated on Dec. 9, 1864, in New Holland, and the children born of this union have been: Alfred, who died in infancy; Austin K., who married Sarah Poutz and is in the nursery business in Talmage, Pa.; Alice M., Franklin K. and Charles M., all of whom are at home.

Mrs. Harple was born in Earl township, March 9, 1844, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Bair) Keplinger, of Lancaster county, where they were farming people. The former died on Nov. 3, 1877, aged sixty-eight years and twenty days; the mother died on Jan. 25, 1885, at the age of seventy-three years, six months and fourteen days. They were members of the Reformed Church, good, Christian people. Their children were: David, who lives in Lancaster, Pa.; Barbara, who married Jacob Dierdorf, and lives in Bird-in-Hand, Pa.; Susan, deceased, married to James Neil; Sarah, who is the wife of Justice Harple; Samuel, who went to New Jersey and was not heard from; Emma, late wife of Michael Dissinger, of Leola, Lancaster county; Catherine, who resides unmarried in Philadelphia; and Elmira, who died while young.

Justice Harple enjoys the esteem of the community and is most highly regarded in both legal and business circles.

ISAAC MARTIN, the son of Christian Martin, was born in 1808, and died in 1885. His birth occurred on the Big Springs Farm in Earl township, and he spent his life in that vicinity, where he learned the milling business when a young man. After his marriage he purchased his father's mill property in Earl township, which he operated for a time, and then replaced it with the structure in 1833, which is still standing. There he was engaged in milling for twenty years, and made a reputation as an honorable and upright miller that was widely spread throughout his section of Lancaster county. At the end of that time he rented his mill property and engaged in farming, and was living on his farm at the time of his death. He is remembered as one of the thoroughly successful and reliable men of his community, where he was esteemed not only for his industrious habits, but for his integrity and general good character. He served as a school director, and took an active part in local affairs. In religion he affiliated with the Mennonite Church, and was one of its most devoted members and supporters.

His education was gained in the public school, and when he was twenty-six years of age he was married and went into the milling business on his own account, at the old stand of his father. The mill property was bought by him, and he has since devoted himself to its operation. He does custom work very successfully. A farm of sixty-one acres, which was once the property of his father, has descended to him, and he keeps it in a high state of cultivation. His standing at home is of the very best, and he is known as one of the leading men of the township. His public spirit is pronounced, and he is always ready to assist anything that looks to the public good.

AMOS H. GROFF. One of the representative citizens and a descendant of one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county is Amos Groff, who has retired from an active life and enjoys the results of previous industry, in a pleasant home, located just east of the borough of Strasburg.

Great-grandfather Groff, who bore the name of David, a favorite one in the family, resided in East Lampeter township, as did his son David; the latter died there at the comparatively early age of forty-one years, and soon afterward occurred the death of his wife, five children being left orphans. These were: Benjamin, David, Elizabeth, Martin and Annie. Of these, the last died single; Martin is a resident of Manheim township, near Eden; Elizabeth is the widow of Jacob Erb and resides in Earl township; and David is a resident of East Lampeter township.

Benjamin Groff, the eldest of the family, was born in September, 1814, in East Lampeter township, and was but twelve years old when his parents died. His uncle, Jacob Miller, gave him a welcome to his home in Strasburg township, and there he grew to manhood and then returned to the old homestead in East Lampeter township, which he occupied during his active career. When he retired he erected a home upon the farm where he spent his last years, his death occurring Aug. 14, 1899. His marriage had been to Elizabeth Hoffman, a daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Miller) Hoffman, who was born in Strasburg in 1816 and died in 1854, having borne four children, three of whom survive: John, of West Lampeter township; Benjamin, who resides on the old homestead; and Amos H. The other brother, Jacob, died in July, 1890, leaving a widow and four children, who reside in Upper Leacock township. The second marriage of Benjamin Groff was to Hettie Landis, who still survives, a highly esteemed resident of East Lampeter township. She had two children: Susan, who is the wife of Tobias Leaman, of East Lampeter township; and Franklin, who died at the age of sixteen. Benjamin Groff was well and favorably known, and at death had built up an admirable character which reflects honor on his children.

Ainos H. Groff, of this biography, was born on the old homestead Aug. 10, 1846, and grew up on the farm of his ancestors, receiving his education in the public schools. At the age of twenty-one he started out on his own account and began operating a farm of sixty-two acres, continuing on the same place for seven years; he then purchased a farm of 144 and one-half acres and soon became known as one of the most successful and prosperous agriculturists of the township. Mr. Groff engaged in general farming and also did considerable stock raising, his operations in this line doing much toward the improvement of stock in East Lampeter township. In 1898 he retired and removed to his present home, where all the surroundings are of the most attractive kind.

In 1867 he was united in marriage to Miss Catherine D. Leaman, a daughter of Tobias and Elizabeth (Denlinger) Leaman, who was born in East Lampeter township May 9, 1847, and is the mother of three children: Elizabeth, who is the wife of Homer Weaver, clerking with Clay Miller, of Lancaster, and the mother of three children, Clyde, Ralph and Walter; Benjamin, at home; L. Leaman, residing in Philadelphia, all of them children who reflect credit upon their worthy parents. Lemuel Leaman Groff is a member of the well-known firm of Dittenbaugh & Groff, real estate and insurance agents, of Lancaster City. Both Mr. and Mrs. Groff are members of the Old Mennonite Church and are highly esteemed throughout the neighborhood.

After this last battle Mr. Rice was prostrated with fever, and sent to the Nashville hospital, where he remained until Feb., 1864, when he rejoined his regiment in time to have a hand in the battle of Buzzard's Roost. After this he was transferred to the 78th Regiment, in March, 1864, and started in the Atlanta campaign, but was discharged at Atlanta on account of physical disabilities. MICHAEL S. HANCK (deceased) was born in Manheim township, near Oregon, Feb. 28, 1841, and died June 30, 1888, being a son of George and Anna (Shriner) Hanck.

Mr. Hanck was reared on the farm, and followed farming all his life. To this work he added veterinary surgery, and also dealt in horses very extensively. His father was his instructor in the science of medicine as applied to animals, being well versed in anything that related to a horse. He was a man who made money on a large scale, but his kind heart and generous disposition would not permit him to deny his friends, and in one way and another he lost largely through his confidence in those he called his friends. Mr. Hanck purchased from his father the family estate, which consisted of fifty-one acres, a half mile south of Landisville, and there his widow and son are now found. Considerable stock in the Fruitville turnpike was owned by him, and he was always a broad-minded and public-spirited man. His ability and integrity were shown by his being called upon to settle a number of large estates. His political views were those of the Republican party, and he was an earnest advocate of its principles.

Michael S. Hanck was married to Miss Maria Myers, a daughter of Joseph and Esther (Rohrer) Myers, and a native of Leacock township, where she was born Nov. 13, 1838. To this union were born four children: Jacob M., born Nov. 8, 1866, a horse dealer in Lancaster; Annie, born March 8, 1868, died Feb. 18, 1877; Samuel M., born Oct. 26, 1869, a farmer and horse dealer; Michael, born March 25, 1880, unmarried, and living at home.

Mrs. Maria Hanck, the widow, is living on the homestead with her two youngest children, Michael and Samuel. Both she and her husband were members of the German Baptist Church.

Samuel M. Hanck, the son who remains at home to conduct the farm for his mother, was educated in the common schools, and at the death of his father took charge of the farm. With his brother, Jacob M., he deals in horses, every two weeks buying and shipping from the West to Lancaster county a carload of horses. Some of the best stock in the county has been imported by them from western points. They are both thoroughly skilled in veterinary science as it is applied to the common needs of life, and are alive to the best interests of the community.

Samuel M. Hanck was married Dec. 1, 1898, to Ada, a daughter of Frank and Amanda (Badorf) Bentz, a native of Brunnerville, Warwick township, where she was born July 25, 1878. To this union were born two children, Anna Kathryn, Aug. 2, 1899, and Rhoda Alberta, born Sept. 2, 1902.

THOMAS POTTER FORDNEY, one of the representative citizens of Lancaster county, is a resident of Manheim township, and is a son of William B. and Ellen (Jenkins) Fordney. Both his father and grandfather, William Jenkins, were prominent members of the Lancaster bar. Mr. and Mrs. Fordney were people of more than ordinary character and worth, and enjoyed the respect and confidence of a wide circle of friends.

Thomas P. Fordney was born in the city of Lancaster, on Duke street, Nov. 8, 1840, received his earlier education in the very excellent public schools of that city, and was prepared for Trinity College, at Hartford, Conn., in St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H. Mr. Fordney was married in 1875 to Ida, a daughter of Sarah and Friend Cox. After their marriage they located on a farm near Lancaster, where they still live. Mr. Fordney is fond of agriculture and out-of-door life, and takes especial delight in his dog and gun. In politics Mr. Fordney affiliates with the Democratic party.

Mr. and Mrs. Fordney have the following children: Ellen, who is the wife of William B. Franklin, a merchant, of Philadelphia; Thomas P., a noted free hand artist; Mary; Sara; Alice; William Bush; all being at home except the oldest.

SAMUEL L. BRANDT, who passed away Oct. 10, 1890, was a lifelong resident of East Donegal township, and is remembered as one of the prosperous, intelligent agriculturists of that locality. Son of Christian and Elizabeth (Long) Brandt, he was born Oct. 20, 1841, on the farm where all but four years of his useful life were passed.

The Brandt family is of German origin, our subject's great-great-grandfather, Samuel Brandt, the first of the name to immigrate to the American shore, having been a native of the Palatinate. In 1732 he left Rotterdam, going to London, where he took passage on the ship "Samuel," Hugh Pierce, master. He settled in Rapho township, Lancaster county, and his name appears among those assessed by the officials of that township in their report of 1756, the earliest on record. Besides the landed estate he owned there, he possessed several large farms in Dauphin county (then Londonderry township, Lancaster county), which were occupied by his sons, John and Michael. He engaged in farming in Rapho township up to the time of his death, in 1784. His children were named as follows: Michael, Christian, John, Yost, Anna, Maria, Elizabeth, Esther and Jacob. John Brandt, one of his sons, and the great-grandfather of our subject, after his marriage occupied a farm which lies on the right bank of the Conewago creek, in the township of the same name, Dauphin county, within a mile of the junction of the three counties of Dauphin, Lancaster and Lebanon. This place is now owned by Levi Meckley. After the death of John Brandt his widow, Maria, married a Mr. Dempsy, and lived in Elizabethtown. The children of John Brandt were: Christian, born Nov. 23, 1765; John, Feb. 24, 1767; Barbara, Feb. 11, 1769 (wife of Jacob Longenecker); Samuel, Oct. 9, 1771; and Michael, April 24, 1774. The father died in 1774.

John Brandt, grandfather of Samuel L. Brandt, in 1784, was indentured to George Rutt for three years and eight months to learn the trade of joiner and spinning wheel maker. After he had grown to man's estate, he, with his employer and fellow carpenters, built a number of Swiss barns in the vicinity of Maytown. Among these buildings was one erected for Christian Bucher, one of the wealthiest citizens of Donegal township, who was born March 27, 1742, and died Dec. 27, 1825. The young carpenter, John Brandt, fell in love with Mr. Bucher's third daughter, Frances, born Jan. 18, 1769, and they were married April 26, 1791. Her eldest sister, Anna, married John Taylor, and among her grandchildren was Bayard Taylor, of Chester county, the noted traveler, author and poet. After his marriage Mr. Brandt occupied a farm of 130 acres belonging to his wife's father, and adjoining his homestead, this place being situated about one and a half miles northwest of Maytown. In 1804 he bought the property, and there resided until his death, which occurred Dec. 14, 1842. His widow survived until Sept. 10, 1857. They were the parents of the following named children: Frances, born Jan. 28, 1792, who married James Maginnis, after his death became the wife of Samuel Bossler, and died May 8, 1874; Anna, born Sept. 15, 1793, who first married Joseph Clepper, and after his death, Jacob Holdeman, and died in Bennett, Ill., Jan. 20, 1880; Christian, born Sept. 12, 1795, died Jan. 7, 1870; John, who was born Oct. 7, 1797, married Catherine Hossler, and died Dec. 24, 1854; Joseph, who was born March 20, 1800, married Nancy Nissley, a widow, and died Feb. 12, 1845; Elizabeth, who was born Dec. 21, 1803, married John Hollinger, and died Oct. 5, 1829.

Christian Brandt, the father of our subject, was born on the old Brandt homestead, and resided there throughout his lifetime. In 1827 he married Elizabeth Long, who was born in Lancaster county in 1808, and died in 1889; she was a daughter of Abram Long, who lived near Donegal Springs. Mr. Brandt was a tenant farmer until his father's estate was settled, when in 1858 he became the owner of the old farm. He was a Democrat, but took very little interest in politics. Religiously he was a member of the Mennonite Church, an exemplary christian, and, like his ancestors, was specially noted for his strict integrity, industry and sobriety. He died Jan. 7, 1870, when in his seventy-fifth year. He had eight sons: Jacob, who was born Oct. 11, 1829, and died from the effects of accidental scalding at the age of three years; John L., who was born Jan. 1, 1831, and married Mary Ann Hossler; Abraham, who was born Aug. 19, 1833, married Anna Mary Creider, and died Nov. 11, 1888; Christian, who was born April 19, 1836, married Susannah Rhoads, and died Oct. 7, 1891; David, who was born April 6, 1840, married Maria Hess, and resides in Londonderry township, Dauphin county; Samuel L., born Oct. 20, 1841, and mentioned below; Solomon, born Feb. 8, 1845; and Joseph L., cashier of the Exchange Bank at Marietta.

Samuel L. Brandt, whose name introduces this sketch, received his education in the public schools near his home, and was reared to the vocation of his ancestors. As previously stated, he spent only four years of his life away from the homestead. After his marriage he lived in a rented house, and worked for others for a time, but he finally purchased the home place, and continued in its cultivation up to the time of his death. The farm comprises ninety acres, all in a high state of cultivation, systematically worked, now, as always, with profit for the owner, and cared for with every regard for appearance. On June 15, 1869, Mr. Brandt was married, in Lancaster, Pa., to Miss Maria E. Stauffer, who was born in Jan., 1847, in Lexington, Elizabeth township, the daughter of Henry Stauffer. Eight children were born to this union: (1) Elmer E., who now manages the farm for his widowed mother, married on May 25, 1897, Mary Snyser, a trained nurse, of Philadelphia, who died Nov. 17, 1898, aged twenty-five years, leaving one child, Elmer E., Jr., who lives with his father and grandmother on the old Brandt farm; Mrs. Mary Brandt was buried in Reich's cemetery. (2) Harry S. is deceased. (3) Minerva S. married Ezra Briner, of New Bloomfield, Perry Co., Pa., who is county superintendent of that county. (4) Anna S. and (5) Agnes M. reside in Lancaster. (6) Elizabeth S., (7) Rylie S. and (8) Christian S. are at home. Mrs. Brandt is a member of the Old Mennonite Church, with which our subject also united. He was a Democrat in political affiliations. Mr. Brandt is interred in Reich's Meeting-house cemetery, in East Donegal township.

The Stauffer family, to which Mrs. Brandt belongs, have been residents of Lancaster county from an early day. John Stauffer, her grandfather, was a farmer and butcher by occupation. He died in the southern part of the county. He married Anna Charles, and their son Henry, born in Lancaster county, was the father of Mrs. Brandt. He, too, was a farmer during his active years, but he lived retired for some time prior to his death, making his home in Mt. Joy. Henry Stauffer married Miss Maria Eitnier, who was born in Lancaster county, daughter of John and Maria (Hoffer) Eitnier, natives of Lancaster and Dauphin counties, respectively. He was a tailor by occupation. Henry and Maria Stauffer became the parents of six children: Leah, Mrs. Daniel Shaub, deceased; Henry (deceased), who married Anna Horst; Maria E., Mrs. Brandt; Peter, now residing in Ohio, who married Rebecca Stabler; Samuel, a cabinet maker, of Philadelphia, who married Ella Shireman; and John, who died young. The father of this family died in 1874, at the age of seventy-two, the mother surviving until March 15, 1895, reaching the advanced age of eighty-three years. They are buried in Erisman's cemetery. Both were devout members of the Mennonite Church.

JOHN B. MYERS (originally spelled Mayer), a prosperous agriculturist and substantial citizen of Pequea township, resides on the farm on which he was born, and where his father before him had passed many years in agricultural pursuits.

David Mayer, the grandfather of our subject, was born Sept. 20, 1772, and died Dec. 25, 1847. He was a landowner and resident of Manheim township. His wife, Elizabeth, was born Sept. 25, 1774, and died Oct. 21, 1855. Their union was blessed with three sons and one daughter, the sons being as follows: David, father of our subject; Rev. Martin R., born April 3, 1798, died Oct. 4, 1873; and Benjamin, born June 12, 1812, died June 28, 1849. The remains of the father now rest in the private burying ground of the John Keller Farm. David Mayer was born Jan. 10, 1810, in Manheim township, was reared a farmer and continued so occupied throughout life. He was married when twenty-two years of age to Miss Barbara Burkholder, who was born March 3, 1807. Immediately after their marriage the young couple located on the farm which is now the property and residence of their son, and here they passed the remainder of their lives, he dying Nov. 9, 1881, and she Feb. 14, 1884. They were frugal, industrious people, and were held in high esteem and respect in the community in which they lived. To them were born children as follows: John B., referred to farther on; Amos B., who makes his home with his brother; Ana, died March 3, 1884.

John B. Myers, our subject, was born Sept. 20, 1836, and received such school privileges as were given the sons of the general farmers, attending in the winter season the district school of the neighborhood. Like his father and grandfather, he chose the vocation of farming, and has made it his chief life work. He possesses a good farm of 150 acres, well improved and conveniently located, three miles from the city of Lancaster, in a southerly direction. He has made the raising of crops, and agriculture in general, a study, and through a long lifetime of practical experience has become possessed of much and valuable knowledge pertaining to his calling. In addition to his valuable farm Mr. Myers is the owner of a good mill property situated at the second lock on Conestoga creek, and in connection with farming he operates an extensive mill which is equipped with modern rollers and prepared for chopping purposes. Frugal and industrious through life, and being a good manager and financier, he has prospered and become possessed of a competence. He has been useful in his community, and is regarded by his fellow townsmen as one of their best citizens. His religious connections are with the Mennonite Church, of which he is a trustee. In political sentiment he is a Republican. He is a director and large holder of stock in the Lancaster County Bank.

At the age of twenty-six Mr. Myers was married to Martha B., daughter of Martin and Maria (Brubaker) Herr, and to this union have come children as follows: David; Ada, who married Frank Bausman, and has three children, John, Warren and Martha; Annie, who married David Bausman, and has two children, Edna and David; Martin, who married Elizabeth Snively, and has four children, Mervin, Arthur, Anna and Maud; Elam; and Henry, who married Elizabeth Bollinger. One son, Martin, is actively connected with educational matters.

MICHAEL S. SHUMAN has been a continuous resident of Columbia since 1844. He came to the town as a young mechanic, not yet out of his teens, and the place he has won in the history and development of Columbia marks the attainments of a self-made man. Alert for advancement, possessing an active and capable mind, he parted ways with a daily wage and launched on a long and prosperous business career as a contractor and builder in Columbia, where many of the finest buildings attest his superior workmanship. In later years insurance work has monopolized the time which he has wished to devote to active life, this business having been entered upon more than forty years ago, and followed successfully and persistently ever since.

Mr. Shuman was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Sept. 16, 1825, son of Jacob and Mary (Witman) Shuman, and a descendant of George Shuman, who in 1772 settled in Manor on the upper end of Turkey Hill. Jacob Shuman was born about 1781, and in his youth acquired the tailor's trade, which he followed through life. He died in March, 1837, aged fifty-six years. By his first wife, Mary Witman, his children were: George; Jacob; Daniel; John; Catharine; Henry, of Lafayette, Ind.;

Frederick, of Richmond, Ind.; and Michael S., whose sketch appears herewith. By his second marriage, to Margaret Wisler, Jacob Shuman had five children, namely: Christian, deceased; Andrew, who died in Chicago; Abraham, a mail agent of South Evanston, Ill.; Benjamin, of Iowa, now deceased; and William C., a school teacher of Evanston, Illinois.

Michael S. Shuman was reared on a farm. His mother died while he was an infant, and his childhood was passed at the home of an aunt, Mrs. Strebig, with whom he remained until he reached his seventeenth year. Deciding to learn a trade, he served a year with a millwright, but, the latter retiring from business, he was obliged to look elsewhere for employment. Coming to Columbia in 1844, he served an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade with John Young, and worked faithfully at the trade for a period of twenty-three years. In 1867 Mr. Shuman engaged in the refining of oil, being one of the firm of Truscott & Co., and continued in that business for eighteen years. During a portion of this time they also carried on a milling business which he later conducted alone. In 1885 Mr. Shuman practically retired from the active cares of a business life. However, he has retained his insurance work and now represents at Columbia the Farmers Fire Insurance Co., of York; the Continental of New York; and the Citizens Fire Insurance Co. of Missouri. He has been agent for the York company for the past forty-three years.

Mr. Shuman married at Lancaster, Pa., in 1857, Margaret Lehman, a native of York county, daughter of Daniel Lehman. To Mr. and Mrs. Shuman have been born these children: Mary, wife of Dr. William R. Powell, of Camden, N. J.; Catherine, wife of John R. Bucher, manager of the Columbia Crackerery bakery, Columbia, Pa.; Anna, deceased; George, deceased; Michael, a traveling salesman of Columbia, Pa.; Jane, wife of E. G. Smith, foreman in the Wilson Laundry machine shops at Columbia, Pa.; and John, of Columbia, who married Miss Lotie Menroe.

Mr. Shuman has been called to fill various local offices, and has served as councilman, school director and in other positions of trust and responsibility. He is a member of Susquehanna Lodge, I. O. O. F., and of the Encampment. He has prospered in business, is regarded as a wide-awake and intelligent citizen, and holds the unstinted esteem and respect of all who know him.

Great-grandfather Penrose was of Welsh descent; Grandfather Israel came to this country in

In 1865 Israel Penrose was united in marriage to Lydia J. McPherson, the estimable daughter of James A. and Lydia McPherson; the children of this union died in infancy, the wife also passing out of life in 1869. On Feb. 2, 1875, Israel Penrose was married to Emma J. Rutter, who was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Rutter, natives of Montgomery county. There has been no issue of this union. Mrs. Penrose was one in a family of eight children, Ruth A., Edward, Mary, Thomas, Emma, James, William and Elizabeth. None remain except Mrs. Penrose, who was born June 4, 1840.

Politically Israel Penrose is one of the active supporters of the Republican party, and has served his township as auditor. His religious connection is with the Society of Friends, and he is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of this community. With his amiable and excellent wife he is living a somewhat retired life, in his very pleasant home in Fairfield.

GEORGE HARRY REED. The Lakeland Livery Stables and Cab Company represents the best service in this line which the city of Lancaster has ever enjoyed, and its genial proprietor is George Harry Reed, the only surviving son of the late George K. Reed, one of this city's oldest and best-known bankers.

G. Harry Reed was born on Dec. 7, 1868, a son of the late George K. and Mary (Fetter) Reed, the former of whom passed out of life May 16, 1898, while the latter, a lady of lovely Christian character, resides in this city, one of its best beloved residents. G. Harry Reed received exceptional educational advantages and grew to manhood a self-reliant and respected citizen. Upon completing his studies at Beck's school, in Lititz, he entered the State Normal School, in Millersville. After leaving the latter institution he became associated with his brother, John, in the cigar and tobacco business until the death of his brother, when he opened up the Lakeland service, which he has conducted in a most satisfactory manner for the public and with substantial returns for himself.

The marriage of G. Harry Reed was to Miss Anna Grace Roth, a daughter of Mr. John B. Roth, a retired dry-goods merchant, of this city, and from this union one son has been born, Norman Elwood Reed. The sisters and brother of G. Harry Reed were: Susette Elizabeth and Catherine Hoff, both of whom died in early childhood; and John Fetter, who became prominent in Lancaster in both business and church circles, and who died Jan. 4, 1897.

WILLIAM H. HAMP, SR., now living retired in Gordonville, Pa., was born at Lancaster Dec. 3, 1843, and is a son of Christ and Eliza (Leonard) Hamp. His father was born in Germany, and his mother in Lancaster.

Christ Hamp came to Lancaster with his parents when only six years of age, and for many years carried on a butcher shop in Lancaster, Pa. In 1873 he left the shop, and retired to a ten-acre farm in West Lampeter township, where he died in Oct., 1885, at the age of sixty-six years. His remains were laid to rest in Woodward Hill cemetery. Father and mother were both members of the Lutheran Church. She is still living at Lancaster, at the age of seventy-six years. To them were born: William H.; Kate, who married Prof. Herman Newmeyer, of Harrisburg, Pa.; John, a butcher at Johnstown, Pa.; Emma, who married John Shilling, of Lancaster; Clara, deceased; Oscar, landlord of a hotel at Chambersburg, named "The McKinley;" Anna, with her mother; Ida, wife of Samuel Miller, of Lancaster, Pa.; Walter, deceased.

The paternal grandparents of William H. Hamp were John Hamp and wife, of Gap, Pa., where he was engaged in the butcher business. John Leonard was the grandfather on the mother's side.

William H. Hamp was married Feb. 11, 1866, at Honey Brook, Pa., to Anna E. Smith, who was born in Marcus Hook, Delaware Co., Pa., May 10, 1845, a daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Syfrit) Smith, both of old Chester, Pa. To this union were born: William H., Jr., a butcher in Gordonville, who married Esther L. Yarnall, of Lancaster, and has three children, William H., Charles Y. and Robert S.; and Minnie E., who was married, on June 25, 1902, to William F. Bell, of Philadelphia, engaged in the grocery and provision business. Peter Smith was a farmer and builder, with much ability as a contracting architect. He died in 1847, at the age of thirty-seven years; his widow died Oct. 18, 1885, at the age of seventy-three years. They were members of the Episcopal and Methodist Churches, respectively. He was laid in the burial-ground of the church he built, and she was interred in the Woodward Hill cemetery. To them were born: Robert, who was wounded at Antietam, and died in the Fredericksburg hospital; Peter F., who died in infancy; Peter F., who was killed in the battle of Chancellorsville; Thomas; Anna E.; Fredrick J.; Henrietta and Marietta, twins, now dead, as are all the above, excepting Anna E.

Mr. Hamp was born and reared in Lancaster, where he was bred to the butcher business. In Sept., 1861, he ran away from home, and enlisted in Co. K, 79th P. V. I. His father found him at Pittsburg and brought him home. Aug. 2, 1862, was the date of his second enlistment, when he enlisted in Co. B, Pa. Reserves, serving under Capt. Thomas B. Barton, and Capt. William Bair; he entered for a three years' term, and passed through some of the severest fighting in the war, but returned home unwounded. Mr. Hamp participated in the following battles, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Mine Run, Bristol Station, in all of the battles of the Wilderness, and at Bezaziah Church. After his discharge in June, 1865, he came home and worked for his father until Sept. of the following year, when he went to Philadelphia, to take a position as brakeman and flagman on the Pennsylvania railroad, which he held for nine years, rising to be a conductor on the line. In 1875 he came to Lancaster, and resumed the butcher business, which he carried on until 1897, when he retired.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hamp belong to the Lutheran Church, and he is an active worker in the local post of the G. A. R., where his long and commendable services in the Union Army constitute him a valuable member. In his politics he is a Republican, and is regarded as one of the most substantial and influential citizens of the community.

JOHN H. CARTER, of Liberty Square, Drumore township, is one of the leading and honorable citizens of that township, and carries on a blacksmithing business in the village, where he has been located since 1870. Mr. Carter owns a very comfortable home, his shop and tools, and enjoys the respect and esteem of every citizen.

John H. Carter was born in Martic township, Oct. 21, 1840, and was a son of Alexander and Margaret (Fullerton) Carter, who were natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Alexander Carter was a son of John Carter, a farmer of the township, who became the father of four children; Joseph, William, Alexander and Elizabeth, the latter becoming the wife of Samuel Smith. Great-grandfather Carter also bore the name of John and he was one of the early settlers of southern Lancaster county. Alexander Carter was born in 1796 and died in 1874, his wife having been born about 1800; they were united in marriage in 1820 and had the following children: Hannah, who married Preston Smith; Rebecca, who married Thomas Cummings, of Lancaster City; William W., of Oxford, Pa., a retired merchant; Elizabeth, who died single; Margaret, deceased; Alexander; Franklin, who died at the age of twenty-five years; and John H., of this sketch.

John H. Carter was educated in the public schools of his district and commenced to learn the blacksmith trade at the age of eighteen years, at Liberty Square, under the excellent direction of Jacob Carrigan. When the Civil war broke out and his country needed his services, John H. Carter was not found wanting, his enlistment taking place on Sept. 26, 1861; he entered Co. E, 79th. P. V. I. under Capt. Wickersham, and H. A. Hambright as colonel, the beloved Gen. George H. Thomas being in command of the corps. Mr. Carter's army service took him through the Kentucky campaign against the army of Gen. Bragg, and he was present at the battle of Hoover's Gap, the shelling of Chattanooga, Tullahoma, Tenn., and at Dalton, Ga.; he was also a participant in the battles of Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge, marching then with Sherman on his triumphal course to the sea and was with the other brave and gallant men at the grand review in Washington city, where he was honorably discharged on July 12, 1865. During this long and dangerous campaign he fortunately received but one slight wound.

After nearly four years of service, Mr. Carter returned to peaceful pursuits and took up his trade, first, however, spending some time at Elk View, in Chester county, where he was railroad agent, express agent and postmaster, going thence to Mountville, where he began work at his trade, but in 1870 coming to Liberty Square.

The marriage of Mr. Carter was to Miss Rebecca Fralish, of Mountville, Lancaster county, Dec. 24, 1865, and this marriage has been blessed with two children. Oliver F., who was born Sept. 30, 1866, married Miss Cynthia Tennis, of Drumore township, and they have four children,—Clarence E., Carrie L., Ethel E. and Reba May. Harry Erastus, who was born Aug. 31, 1869, married Miss Annie Blackburn, of York county, and they have three children,—Reba C., William N. and Letta May. Mrs. Carter was born March 29, 1848, one of a family of eleven children, six of whom grew to maturity. We have record of: Elizabeth, the wife of Henry Colm, of Mountville, Pa.; Harry, of Mountville; Fannie, deceased; Annie, wife of William Seitz, of Mountville; and Rebecca, who is Mrs. Carter.

In politics Mr. Carter has been active in the Republican party and has efficiently served as tax collector of his township. Socially he is connected with the G. A. R., Post No. 556, of Rawlinsville. Mr. Carter has been particularly prominent in the Bethesda Methodist Church, where he has been a trustee for some twenty-five years, and for the past sixteen years has been vice-president of the Rawlinsville Camp Meeting Association. Mr. Carter is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of his locality, having an honorable and enviable war record, and still holding his faith in the principles for which he fought. As a citizen, business man or member of social, religious or domestic circles he is truly representative of his part of Lancaster county.

DENNIS SOMMERS. The great traveling public owe a measure of regard to the efficient officials of the trains which enable them to cover so quickly and safely such immense distances, and probably no one holds so responsible a position as does the conductor, who, as his official name signifies, conducts the management and makes possible the passage of the great railroad trains with such safety and rapidity. To be a conductor requires long practice in other railroad work, and the Pennsylvania railroad does not place its patrons in the care of any unskilled or inefficient man. Since 1890, Mr. Dennis Sommers, of Columbia, has been one of the trusted conductors on the Pennsylvania lines.

Dennis Sommers was born in Columbia, in Nov. 1851, a son of Michael and Joanna (O'Neil) Sommers, of Wexford, Ireland, where they were born, reared and married, coming to Columbia in 1851. Michael Sommers entered the service of his adopted country during the Civil war, belonging to Co. K, 5th Pa. Reserves, and lost his life at Petersburg. He served practically through the whole war, dying at the early age of thirty-five years. The children left fatherless were: Dennis; William H., an engineer; and Mary, who married Moses Murphy, an electrician of Schuylkill.

When but a lad of twelve years, Dennis Sommers began to take care of himself, and found his first regular work on the canal. For five years he faithfully followed the tow path during the long, hot, summer days, and in winter there were few jobs of his capacity in the neighborhood that escaped his attention. After leaving the canal, he went into a blast furnace and worked there for two years and later engaged in various lines, always keeping busy, until by 1874, he obtained employment with the Pennsylvania railroad as brakeman, remaining in that position for seven years. Proving his reliability, he was made a flagman and then an extra conductor, in 1890, soon after assuming the duties of a regular conductor, giving at all times efficient service and satisfaction to the road.

The marriage of Mr. Sommers was on Sept. 19, 1876, in Columbia, in St. Peter's Church, to Miss Anna Rourke, and to this union were born two children: Michael H., who died at the age of twenty-two months; and William P., who is at home. The birth of Mrs. Sommers was in County Meath, Ireland, Sept. 16, 1846, a daughter of William and Mary (Markie) Rourke, of Ireland, who came to America in 1847; they settled in Columbia for a few years and then went to Marietta, Pa., where the father was unfortunately killed by a horse, at Musselman Furnace on June 10, 1860. The mother was born March 24, 1825, and now resides in Steelton, Pa. She married a second time, her husband being James Kelley. The children of her first marriage were: Thomas, a retired hotel-keeper of Marietta; Mary (1), and Mary (2), both deceased; Katie, who married John Hanley, of Steelton; James, who lives in Sparrow Point, Pa.; William, a resident of Indiana; and Anna, who is Mrs. Sommers. The children of the second marriage were: Mary, who married Jerry Gorman, of Steelton; Cecelia, who married James Kirby, of Steelton, Pa.; John, a resident of Harrisburg; and Margaret, who is the efficient assistant postmaster, of Steelton.

Mr. Sommers is fraternally connected with the B. of R. C. and K. of St. Patrick; also of P. Relief, in all of which he takes an active interest. Politically Mr. Sommers affiliates with the Democratic party; he is a member of the Catholic Church. His record as an efficient official places him in the regard of the Pennsylvania road, and in Columbia he is looked upon as a worthy and respected citizen.

WALTER H. WINTERS, a noted farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in Providence township, Aug. 6, 1860, his parents being Silas and Catherine (Marks) Winters. Silas Winters was born in Providence township, July 5, 1821; and his wife, Catherine Marks, in York county, May 14, 1821.

Silas Winters was the son of Christopher and Esther (Gochenauer) Winters, both of whom were born in Lancaster county, and came of German parentage. Christopher Winters was located in his early manhood on a farm near Providence, which he cleared from the woods. There his wife died, and he then moved to the West, where he died, leaving two sons and one daughter: Augustus, who settled in Providence township, and died a single man; Hetty, who married William Gontner, and settled in Lancaster, where they both died, leaving two daughters, Catherine, deceased, and Mary: Silas Winters, noted above. Mrs. Catherine (Marks) Winters belonged to one of the very old families of this county.

Silas Winters lived on his farm in Providence, where he had settled after his marriage, working as a cooper, until a few years prior to his death. In June, 1900, he moved to Lancaster, where he lived retired. His wife died on the old homestead in Providence township, in 1895, leaving a family of seven children: Ella M., born in 1844, is a seamstress in Lancaster. Mary A., born in 1845, married Martin Lefever, of Drumore township, and is the mother of seven children: Ida B., Minnie B., Charles A., William B., Walter C., Ella B. and Laura C., who died in early womanhood. Augustus, born in 1849, married Anna Esbenshade, and lives on his farm in East Drumore, where they have four children: Curtis G., Lulu M., Roxie A. and Robert C. Catherine, born in 1850, married Martin Reese, and resides in Lancaster; they have a large family of children; Ward, Harvey, Minnie, John, Clarence, Clements, Edna (deceased), Stella, Clayton, Gordon, Ray and Mary. John F., born in 1855, married Miss Louise Rockey, and lives in McKeesport, Pa., where they have a family of six children, Walter, Mabel, Charles, Anna, Cora, and a baby. Laura, born in 1856, married John A. Rockey, and resides in Atglen, Chester county, where they have a family of six children, Edna, Alma, Silas, Helen, Mary and Walter. Walter H.

Walter H. Winters had his education in the district school, and remained on the family homestead until he was twenty-three, when he began his own business career. In 1882 he was married to Miss Christie G. Kauffman, a daughter of Abraham and Anna M. (Geahr) Kauffman. Mrs. Winters was born in Manor township in Sept., 1857, and is next to the youngest of a family of eleven children. Her education was received in the local school and in the State Normal at Millersville. After their marriage they lived a year on his father's old home in Providence, and then removed to Martic township, where Mr. Winters was engaged in farming for seven years. In 1891 he bought the Bleacher farm in East Drumore township. This farm contains 108 acres and has a large brick house, and a commodious barn, making it one of the finest farms in the township. The place shows signs of improvement at his hands, and is largely devoted to cattle raising, as Mr. Winters owns one of the finest herds of Holstein cattle in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Winters belong to the Reformed church at New Providence. In politics Mr. Winters is a Democrat. He belongs to the Fulton Grange, No. 66.

Walter Winters began life with but small means, and the savings of his wages as a farm hand, judiciously invested brought him results by which he is able to hold, clear of incumbrance, the fine farm which is his present home. He is a born farmer, and of him it may truly be said, "that he has made two blades of grass grow where one grew before." While he and his good wife have no children of their own, their generous hearts and ample means carry sunshine into many other homes.

EDWIN S. STAIR, late a prominent dry-goods merchant of Columbia, was born in York, Pa., and was a son of George S. and Maria (Wall) Stair, natives, respectively, of York and Philadelphia.

George S. Stair was a shoemaker and a man greatly respected wherever known. To his marriage with Miss Wall there were born the following children: Amelia, wife of John Strickler, who is in the iron business at York; George, a carpenter in Harrisburg; William, an ex-soldier; and Edwin S., deceased.

Edwin S. Stair at the age of twelve years entered a dry-goods store in York, being regularly apprenticed to the business. When his time had expired he went to Indianapolis, Ind., there lived several years and then returned to York. A year or two later he came to Columbia and clerked in Henry Fondersmith's dry-goods store and in the store of Mr. Haldeman until 1872, when he embarked in business for himself and had a successful career until the day of his death, August 8, 1898, at the age of fifty-two years.

The marriage of Mr. Stair took place in Columbia, March 22, 1871, to Miss Eunice Wike, and this marriage was graced with five children, viz.: George, who was called away at the age of eighteen; Nellie, who died when five years old; Edwin, Charles and Filbert are still at home with their mother.

Mrs. Eunice (Wike) Stair was born in Columbia, and is a daughter of George and Sarah Wike, and a sister of Milton Wike. Mrs. Stair, her three children and her mother, now constitute the family, and live in quiet retirement, honored and respected by the entire community.

The deceased Mr. Stair was a member of the Order of Artisans, the Heptasophs and the I. O. O. F., lodge and encampment. For some years he was a school director and was recognized generally as a useful citizen, while as a business man his name stood without a flaw or blemish.

J. F. WEAVER, miller, of New Providence, was born Nov. 1, 1861, in Strasburg township, son of Henry K. and Christianna (Hoover) Weaver, of Strasburg township.

Henry K. Weaver, a tailor and farmer, was a son of Samuel Weaver, who died at the age of thirty-three years, leaving four children; Samuel, George, Catherine and Henry, all now deceased. Henry K. was born in 1829 and died in 1891. In 1849 he was married to Christianna Hoover and they had a family of eleven children, ten of whom grew to maturity, as follows: Mary, who lives on the old homestead in Strasburg township; Amos A., a farmer of Strasburg township; Addie the wife of John E. Lantz, of Strasburg township; Hattie, the wife of Jacob C. Weaver, of Strasburg township; Lizzie, living with her sister on the old home place; Melo H., a farmer of Strasburg township; J. F., of this sketch; Samuel A., of Talbot county, Md.; Enos, deceased; and Catherine, deceased. Henry K. Weaver was an honorable, respected citizen, a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church. In political connection he was a Republican.

The early life of Mr. Weaver of this sketch, was passed on the farm, where he remained assisting his father and going to the public school until he was about nineteen years of age, when he went to Paradise township and began to learn the milling business with H. S. Rohrer. After leaving Mr. Rohrer, he ran a mill for Elam B. Trout in the same township and then went to Cecil county, Md., where he took charge of a mill for S. C. Magrow, but later returned to Lancaster county, on account of failing health. After regaining his health, Mr. Weaver rented a mill for three years in Strasburg, and then came to the mill in New Providence, which he now owns. He rented this property for five months, then for one year and then for five years, at the end of this lease, in 1897, purchasing the property, which is one of the most valuable in its line, in the township. Mr. Weaver is now engaged in a general milling and grain business, and his plant is fitted with modern rollers and improvements which enable him to compete with any mill of its size in Lancaster county. In politics Mr. Weaver is a member of the Republican party. He belongs to the Reformed Mennonite Church.

On April 7, 1894, Mr. Weaver was married to Miss Amanda K. Rupp, of West Earl township, born in 1862, daughter of David and Sarah Rupp, the father deceased. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Weaver, Herbert R. and Edwin R. Mr. Weaver stands very high in the esteem of his community, his influence and example being such as to command the respect of his fellow-citizens. A man who has never used tobacco in any form, one who has never used intoxicating drink of any kind, and one whose morality could not permit him to either gamble or make use of profanity, must of necessity exert a beneficial influence in any community. In addition Mr. Weaver is a law-abiding and public spirited citizen, a kind and loving husband and father, and a helpful neighbor, while his pleasant, genial manner wins him friends on every side. He is justly regarded as a leading man in New Providence, where his word is considered at all times as good as his bond.

JOHN L. MINNICH, a farmer of East Dru-more township, Lancaster county, was born in Warwick township, Jan. 31, 1853, son of John and Elizabeth (Longenecker) Minnich, natives of Lancaster county, the father being born Jan. 18, 1818, in War-grandfather of John L., was born in Lancaster county.

John Minnich and his wife were married in 1839, and lived for a time in Warwick township, and they spent three years, then selling out their farm ship; Graybill, at the home in Warwick township; Hiram; Sadie; and Emma. (4) Amanda Minnich, the mother of one daughter, Ellen, who married Rev. Milton Forney, and now has her home on the old Swarr farm in East Hempfield township. (5)

Anna Minnich, born in 1848, is the wife of the Rev. Henry Sonan, who lives in East Hempfield; they have three children: Milton, married, and a

1856, married Jacob B. Neff, of Warwick township, who for a time was a miller in Lancaster county, and then a farmer in Ephrata township, where he died, leaving five children: John; Alice, who is Mrs. Samuel Young; Nathan; Jacob; and Christian. Mrs. Neff married for her second husband, George Shreiner, and has her home in Lititz. (8)
John L., whose name introduces this article.

John L. Minnich was reared and educated in Warwick township, and worked for his father until he was twenty-one. In Oct., 1884, he was married to Miss Barbara Stehman, a daughter of Henry and Barbara Stehman, prominent people in Penn township for many years. Mrs. Minnich was born June 23, 1853. Her youth was passed in Penn township, where she secured her education in the public schools. The young married couple settled on the old homestead in Warwick township, where they remained until 1895, when they purchased the old Barnes homestead adjoining the village of Unicorn, comprising 180 acres, and being one of the most desirable homes in Drumore township. Mr. Minnich has this place well stocked, and is provided with all the needed machinery for its successful operation. He owns many horses and cattle, and is regarded as among the brightest and most progressive farmers of this section of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Minnich have had the following family: Ellen, who died in childhood; Katie, who was born in 1882 and died in young womanhood; Mahlon, born in Jan., 1876, married and residing at home; Harry, born in Dec., 1878, graduated from the College at Brentsville, Va., for a time engaged in business in Lancaster county, and now in business in California, having moved to that State in 1899; Bessie, born in Aug., 1880; Charles, born in April, 1884; Emory, born in May, 1886; Harrison, born Aug. 30, 1888; John, born in Sept., 1892; Stehman, born in Sept., 1894; Amanda, born May 26, 1896. Emory died Oct. 1, 1901; Bessie, and the others following, are all at home.

Mr. Minnich has always been a Republican, and is treasurer of the school board of East Drumore township. He and his wife belong to the German Baptist Church, and he is a deacon and treasurer of the organization at Mechanics' Grove. Rigidly does he adhere to the faith of his fathers, and his honorable life is open to all the world. Modest and retiring, and shrinking from popularity, he lives a true and noble life, and his kind and loving nature stands out plainly to the knowledge of his friends and neighbors.

CHARLES SWARTZ. One of the prominent and prosperous young business men of Talmage is Charles Swartz, who owns and conducts a successful mercantile business, and is well known as an excellent and reliable painter.

Charles Swartz was born on May 12, 1866, and he was the son of Jonathan and Matilda (Weidler) Swartz, of Berks county. Jonathan Swartz was a carpenter by trade, and was the father of nine children: Tillie, the wife of John Hoover, of Lebanon county; Angeline, the wife of John Aich, of Lancaster county; Cecelia, the wife of Samuel Bethel, of Berks county; Lizzie, the wife of Ben. Lemonworth, of Harrisburg; John, a resident of Hummelstown; Frank, a resident of Myerstown; Henry, who went to Indiana, in 1890, and since then has been lost sight of; Charles, of this biography; and Alice, who married John Bender, of the city of New York.

Charles Swartz is a self-made man. Left fatherless at the tender age of six years, and a member of a large family, he was early obliged to face the world. Hiring out to neighboring farmers, he did such work as his strength permitted, and attended school, until he reached the age of fourteen, when he came to Lancaster county. Here he was employed in farm work until the age of twenty-one, when he went to Reading and obtained lucrative employment in the boiler shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Charles Swartz was married on Dec. 24, 1890, to Miss Kate Cooper, of West Earl township, a daughter of Martin Cooper, well known in this locality as an excellent painter. Three children have been born of this marriage: Grace E.; Matilda and Hanna, twins, the latter of whom died in infancy.

After his marriage Mr. Swartz began work for his father-in-law as a painter, and developed a great deal of skill in that line, still carrying it on. In 1898 he opened up a store in Talmage, stocking it with most desirable goods, and offering many attractions to the public, which have been appreciated, as his patronage is large and constantly increasing. The store is under the capable management of Mrs. Swartz, as Mr. Swartz finds his time occupied in his other line.

Mr. Swartz is a Republican in his political faith, an honest, industrious and progressive citizen. As a business man he has established a reputation for integrity, and in the home circle he is much beloved as a model husband and father.

LEVI SENER, a retired farmer residing in Mountville, Lancaster county, Pa., is a native of East Hempfield township, was born Jan. 9, 1839, and is a son of Jacob and Leah (Balmer) Sener, natives of Manor and Manheim townships, respectively, in Lancaster county. Jacob Sener, a farmer and drover, removed from East Hempfield to Lancaster city, in the spring of 1863, there lost his wife, she dying in 1870, aged fifty-five years, a member of the Moravian Church, and there, Nov. 1, 1880, he also was called away, at sixty-nine years of age. The remains of both were interred in the Lancaster cemetery. To Jacob and Leah Sener were born four children, viz.: Anna, still residing in Lancaster and unmarried; Harriet, wife of George Missincup, a horse dealer in Lancaster; Levi, whose name opens this paragraph, and Daniel, a farmer of Lancaster.

The paternal grandparents of Levi Sener were Gottlieb and Elizabeth (Bletz) Sener, the former of whom was a farmer and died in Manor township, Lancaster county; the maternal grandparents, the Balmers, were also farming people and died in Manheim township.

Levi Sener was brought up on the home farm in East Hempfield township. In 1851 his father removed to Lancaster, remaining there four years before returning to the former homestead. In the fall of 1867 Jacob Sener sold his farm, comprising 143 acres, to John McGovern and from that time till he retired to his present home, in 1900, Levi Sener rented the place.

The marriage of Levi Sener took place in Lancaster, Pa., in Dec., 1862, to Lizzie Herr, and to this union were born the following children: Harry, who died at the age of sixteen years; Clara, wife of Hiram Bossler, a painter and tobacco packer of West Hempfield township, to whom have been born three children, Maud S., and two that died in infancy. Mrs. Lizzie (Herr) Sener was born in Providence township in Jan., 1837, and is a daughter of Abraham and Hannah (White) Herr, of New Providence, Lancaster county, both of whom died in Mountville. Abraham Herr was reared a farmer, but became a hotelkeeper and conducted the business at New Providence, Rawlinsville and Marticville, and in 1858 came to Mountville, managed a hotel for four years, and then retired. Abraham lost his wife in 1860, at the age of fifty-five years, and his own death occurred in 1892, at eighty-seven years. He was a member of the M. E. Church. To Abraham Herr and wife were born six children, viz.: Anna, widow of George Tangert, of Mountville; Louvene, widow of Henry McCann, of Reading; Mary, deceased wife of Henry Stone; Lizzie, now Mrs. Levi Sener; Abraham, D. D. S., of Reading; and Martha, deceased wife of Jacob Clair.

Mr. and Mrs. Sener are members of the United Brethren church and in politics Mr. Sener is a Democrat. He has been a hard working and thrifty farmer and well deserves the repose he is now enjoying and which his early industry has won for him.

DAVID E. BINKLEY, a prosperous and progressive farmer of Manor township, was born June 11, 1856, near Safe Harbor, Lancaster Co., Pa., reared to farming on his birthplace and educated in the public schools.

David F. Binkley, father of David E., was born about seventy-two years ago in Manor township, and is still one of the representative and leading citizens of this part of the county. Farming has been his life-long calling, in which success has been his from the beginning. His wife bore the maiden name of Annie Eshleman, is now about sixty-eight years old and has borne her husband eleven children, of whom nine grew to maturity, and were named as follows: Kate, wife of Rudolph Hess; Fannie, now Mrs. James McDevitt; Benjamin, deceased; David E.; Molly, widow of Christ Kupats; Jacob, a druggist of Norfolk, Va.; Aaron, a traveling salesman of Lancaster City; Isaiah, an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Lancaster; and Abraham, a farmer of Neffsville. Two children died in infancy. The parents and the surviving children are conscientious members of the United Brethren Church and contribute liberally of their means to its support.

David E. Binkley until marriage assisted in caring for the old homestead and then located on one of his father's farms in another locality, managing it until 1896; then he purchased 116 acres near Safe Harbor and has ever since been most successfully engaged in general farming, being one of the enterprising and active men of the township and county.

In 1879 David E. Binkley married Miss Annie J. Weidlich, daughter of Gottlieb Weidlich, of Martic township, Lancaster county. To this marriage have been born three children, Howard, Harry and Mary. The family attend the Methodist Church at Safe Harbor and in politics Mr. Binkley is a staunch Republican.

The oldest son, Howard, is married to Miss Annie Cramer, of Columbia, Pa., lives at Harrisburg, Pa., and is in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The daughter, Mary, is married to Prof. Ira T. Warfel, of Conestoga, Pa., who is principal of the schools at Prospect Hill, Lancaster county.

JAMES J. KEYS. One of the successful and thoroughly self-made men of Columbia is James J. Keys, who occupies the important position of yard master for the Pennsylvania Railroad, at this point. The birth of Mr. Keys was on Dec. 1, 1861, in York county, Pa., a son of Thomas and Mary Ann (Doyle) Keys, the former a native of York county and the latter of New York city, the death of both occurring in Columbia, where they located in 1879. Mr. Keys was a laborer and both he and his wife were consistent and beloved members of the Catholic Church. The father lived to be fifty-one years old, dying in May, 1886, while the mother survived until April, 1900, dying at the age of sixty-three. The family born to these parents consisted of: Anna Columbia, who married John Metzler Barney, of Camden, N. J.; James J.; Clark, of Columbia; Mary, who married Edward Boyle, of Columbia; Joseph, of Columbia; Jennie, who lives in Germantown, Pa.; and Agnes, deceased, who was the wife of George Halter.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Keys, of this biography, were Thomas and Anna (McCune) Keys, and those on the maternal side were Dennis and Anna (Hurley) Doyle, of Dublin, Ireland, who came to America in 1817 and settled in New York city, later moving to Wrightsville, Pa., where he was a boatman and locktender on the canal.

When he was but a lad of nine years, Mr. Keys began to display those industrious habits which have succeeded in making him a man of substantial importance at present. His first work after the family settled in Columbia, was to drive horses on the canal, and seven long, hot summers were employed in this manner, and then he went into a stone quarry, the next winter finding him at work in a rolling mill, where three years were profitably passed. Several years more were spent in work in the repair department of the Pennsylvania Railroad; for three months he acted as brakeman, and then was given the position of flagman, which very responsible situation he held for two years. The next nine years were spent as conductor and then he accepted his present position at Columbia as yardmaster for the great Pennsylvania road. Mr. Keys has given the best years of his life in service to this road and that he is highly valued may be seen by his long retention and promotions.

James J. Keys was married on Nov. 22, 1886, in Columbia, to Miss Clara Stein, and to this union have been born children as follows: Mary, Anna, Thomas, Vernard D., George, and John and Frank, twins. Mrs. Keys was born in Birmingham, Pa., on Sept. 8, 1866, a daughter of Frederick and Anna (Cornwall) Stein, of Guggleheim, Germany, who were married in Philadelphia, and after a residence of several years in Lancaster county, died in Columbia, the father, in 1887, at the age of fifty-six, and the mother in 1879, at the age of thirty-five. By trade Mr. Stein was a dyer, but in his latter days conducted a hotel in Columbia for two years. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Stein were Clara; Mary, who died young; Sophia, who married George Kauffman, of Columbia; Francis, who resides with Mr. Keys; and Mary, of Columbia. The parents were members of the Lutheran and Catholic Churches, respectively.

A characteristic of Mr. Keys is that he has never sought out the easy ways of work, all of his employment taking him into vigorous and manly lines, and thus he has become so thoroughly prepared for his present position. Thoroughly in earnest in all that he attempts, he has had a successful career, on account of that thoroughness. In his political sympathies he is a Democrat, and he is a member of several fraternal organizations, and of the Catholic Church. The Pennsylvania Railroad has no more capable or reliable employe, nor has Columbia a more desirable citizen, than James J. Keys.

WILLIAM H. McFALLS. Among the honorable citizens who once were prominent in Providence township, none are recalled with more sincere esteem and respect than William H. McFalls, for many years a well-known contractor and successful farmer. He was born Nov. 23, 1846, in Providence township, a son of Henry and Rachel (McCordle) McFalls, of that town, the family being of Scotch-Irish origin. Five children were born to these parents, as follows: John, Amos, William H., Oram and Mary, all of whom have passed out of life with the exception of Amos, who is an estimable citizen and resident of Lancaster city.

On June 6, 1869, the late William McFalls was united in marriage with Miss Susan Travis, born Jan. 19, 1849, daughter of Washington and Nancy McNarian (Robinson) Travis, the former of whom was a native of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Travis had a family of four children, John, Ella, Joshua and Susan, the survivors being Joshua and Susan. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. McFalls was blessed with six children. Aldus E. is a farmer of Providence township, who married Emma Styre and had two children, Chester, since deceased, and Annie. Ella Naomi is the wife of Aldus Worth, of Lancaster, and has had four children; William E. (deceased), Susan V., Harry C., and Aldus Wesley (deceased). William Wesley commenced business for himself at the age of twenty-three in Providence township, dealing extensively in timber, and at the death of his father purchased the family home, on which he now lives. Cora is deceased; and George and Harry are at home.

William McFalls was reared on the old family homestead now in the possession of Aldus E. and through life found his greatest pleasure in agricultural pursuits, although he was known as a successful contractor and dealer in timber. At the time of his death, March 30, 1899, he was possessed of a large and well improved farm, which had been acquired entirely through his own efforts. He was not only known as a most industrious and capable man, but also as one of the most honorable and upright citizens of his township. In his home circle his death was a sad affliction, his many lovable qualities having endeared him to all with whom he became associated. His interest in the public schools was constant; he there received his own education, and as school director he sought to improve those in his section in every way possible. His political affiliation was always with the Democratic party. The death of William H. McFalls was a distinct loss to Providence township, and he was sincerely lamented. He and his wife were both associated with the Methodist Church.

HARRY M. STAUFFER, postmaster, dealer in coal, lumber and feed at Leola, Pa., was born in New Holland, April 24, 1863, son of David and Anna (Miller) Stauffer, natives of Roseville and Landisville, respectively, who died at Leola, Pennsylvania.

David Stauffer was born in 1825, son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Yottie) Stauffer, of Lancaster county, Pa., and New Jersey, respectively. He was a pump manufacturer, and became quite prominent in public affairs, having been supervisor of Manheim township in 1850. He was a member of the New Mennonite Church. He died Jan. 16, 1894, highly respected by all, and his wife, Anna Miller, born in 1827, died April 5, 1899. She was the daughter of John and Catherine (Eshleman) Miller of Lancaster county, Pa. Her remains rest with those of her husband in the cemetery at Brownstown, West Earl township. To David Stauffer and wife were born: Fanny, who married Graybill Mentzer, ex-clerk in the recorder's office; and Harry M.

During his boyhood days, Mr. Stauffer worked upon his father's farm and learned all the details of that occupation thoroughly. His education was completed at the Lebanon Valley College. On Nov. 7, 1889, in Blue Ball, this county, Mr. Stauffer was married to Lizzie Weaver, and to their happy union have been born; Fanny, Anna M., Claude R., Arleen M. and Elizabeth. For two years he farmed on his own account, but then his attention was turned to his present business of dealing in coal, lumber and feed. In Nov., 1890, he bought the ground where he is now located and established his business, erecting an up-to-date warehouse. Six years later this was superseded by a most complete three-story building, with a capacity of eighteen carloads of grain and feed, all accessible from the lower floor. To this building, besides elevator and grain cleaning machinery, have been added saws, planer and matcher, driven by a fifteen horse-power gasoline engine. In 1891 he received the appointment of postmaster, being generally recognized as the man best fitted for the place. He has built for himself a modern home, heated by hot water and containing the comforts and luxuries of latter-day homes. In 1901 a barn costing $2,000, with ice-house and other shed attachments, was built; and in 1902 he erected a coal packet at a cost of $6,000, with a capacity of 2,000 tons of anthracite coal. The yard contains buildings 20x100 ft. for feed in sacks, salt, etc., and also shed room, 20x760 ft., for lumber. This is considered the most complete country business property of its kind in the State. On Jan. 7, 1901, Mr. Stauffer was made one of the directors of the Conestoga National Bank of Lancaster.

Socially Mr. Stauffer is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Blue Lodge, No. 476, F. & A. M.; Goodwin Council, No. 43; Royal Arch Chapter, No. 43; and Lancaster Commandery No. 13, all of Lancaster. He is also a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle. Politically he is a stanch Republican, and both he and his wife are earnest members of the Methodist Church. Both as a private citizen and a public official, Mr. Stauffer has done his entire duty, and his sterling honesty and uprightness of character have gained for him the unqualified esteem of a large circle of friends.

JOHN P. MUELLER, of the firm of Stump & Mueller, the leading hardware merchants of Marietta, Lancaster county, was born in Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 12, 1866.

John C. and Margaret (Ulrich) Mueller, his parents, were natives of Gross Gerau, in the grand duchy of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. John C. Mueller was a tailor by trade. With his wife and two children he came to America in 1854, settling in Lancaster, Pa., where his wife passed away in June, 1898, when sixty-six years old, and where his own death took place in Sept. of the same year, when he was aged seventy-two years. They were members of Zion's Lutheran Church, and their remains were interred in its cemetery. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. John C. Mueller were; Elizabeth, who was married to Philip Lindeman and died in Lancaster; Rev. George P., a Lutheran clergyman, a resident of Philadelphia and superintendent of the Orphans' Home, who died in Reading while there on business, leaving his widow, Anna C. (Stump) Mueller, with eight children (she is now at Lancaster); Christopher, who died in infancy; Christiana, at home, in Lancaster; Mary and John Henry (a tailor), also at home; and John P.

John P. Mueller attended school in his native city until thirteen years old and was then employed as errand boy by Myers & Rathfon, later receiving promotion to the position of salesman. On March 12, 1891, he came to Marietta and formed his present partnership.

On April 12, 1894, Mr. Mueller was married, in Lancaster, to Miss Anna C. Hess, and to this union have been born three children: Anna M., Rosa E. and John Richard. Mrs. Anna C. (Hess) Mueller was born in Lancaster, daughter of John and Anna (Wittlinger) Hess, natives of Germany, who early came to Lancaster, Pa., where the father for some years conducted the "Swan Hotel" but in his declining years retired and passed the remainder of his life in ease and comfort, dying in 1885. His widow still resides in Lancaster.

Mr. Mueller may well be styled a self-made man, as it is through his own unaided exertions that he has attained his present high position. In addition to his duties in the mercantile work pertaining to his large hardware trade, he finds time to serve as a director in the Marietta Water Company and as auditor of the Building & Loan Association of Marietta. At the last borough election in Marietta Feb. 18, 1902, he was elected school director. In politics he is a Republican and in religion he is a member of Zion's Lutheran Church.

MICHAEL STUMP, senior partner in the popular hardware firm of Stump & Mueller, of Marietta, was born in Baden, Germany, in Jan., 1835, and was brought to America by his parents, Adam and Barbara (Culp) Stump, in 1852. The family located in Marietta, Pa., and here Mrs. Barbara Stump died in 1854, when forty-seven years old, a member of the Lutheran Church. Adam Stump with his son, Jacob C., then went to Ohio, and engaged in farming until within a few years of his death, which took place in 1886, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. The children born to Adam and Barbara Stump numbered four and were named as follows: Michael; Jacob C., a farmer in Ohio; Lovina, widow of Adam Swartzculp, residing in Baltimore, Md.; and Caroline, widow of William Westenhafer, late foreman of the Haldeman quarry. Michael Stump at the age of ten years began plowing on his father's farm, and was held down to this labor until he was fourteen. He then served a three years' apprenticeship at shoemaking, and subsequently worked on a farm, then with brick and stone masons, in fact at anything he could find to do, until 1859, when he came to Marietta and found employment on his present premises. The place was then occupied as a general store, in which dry goods, hardware and other stock were handled. Although the store changed hands several times, the services of Mr. Stump were found to be indispensable, and eventually, in 1891, in partnership with Mr. Mueller, he purchased the stock from S. P. Sterrett & Co., founding the present prosperous firm.

Mr. Stump was married in Lancaster, in 1861, to Miss Leah Hoover, and to this marriage have been born three children, viz.: Anna, widow of Rev. G. P. Mueller, late of Philadelphia; John, deceased; and Rev. Joseph, a Lutheran clergyman in Phillipsburg, New Jersey.

Mrs. Leah (Hoover) Stump was born in Dauphin county, Pa., in 1844, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Conrad) Hoover, the former of whom was a farmer, and died in 1849. To Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were born five children, viz.: Kate, widow of Joseph Eversol, living in Columbia; Leah, Mrs. Stump; Mary, wife of Samuel Schrite, a miller at Mt. Joy; Abraham, in New Mexico; and Elizabeth, wife of John Haas, a railroad man in Marietta. Mrs. Elizabeth Hoover married, for her second husband, Jacob Dyer, also now deceased, and to this union were born three children, viz.: William, a farmer of Ironville; Louisa, wife of Harry Brant, of Mt. Joy; and John a carpenter of Florin. Mrs. Dyer, who was born in 1816, now resides in Florin, Lancaster county.

Mr. Stump is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, of which he has been for years a trustee. In politics he is a Republican. He is a self-made business man, and has reached his present advanced position in mercantile circles entirely through his indefatigable industry and his strict integrity and square dealing. Mr. Stump is a director in the Home Building & Loan Association.

JOHN A. BRIMMER, proprietor of the Pretzel Bakery and one of the leading business men of Lancaster, Pa., was born in Dec., 1861, in Lancaster, Pa., on the premises he now occupies, son of Andrew and Sarah (Ehler) Brimmer, he a native of Germany and she of Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Andrew Brimmer came to the United States in 1838, with his father, John Brimmer, and four brothers, the mother having died in Germany. After arriving in the new country, Andrew Brimmer settled in Lancaster, Pa., and was a cigar maker until 1861, when he embarked in the manufacture of pretzels, which concern is now so ably continued by his son, John A. Andrew Brimmer died Feb. 11, 1900, aged seventy-one years, while his wife passed away in 1885, aged fifty-six, both being buried in Lancaster cemetery. They were members of St. John's Episcopal Church. The following family was born to them: Margaret C., married to A. H. Hammond, a printer of Lancaster; Albenia, who married F. S. Stacey, a saddler of Lancaster; Mary E., wife of O. J. Kindig of Lebanon, Pa.; Emma S., a school teacher of Lancaster; Sarah J., who died in infancy; John A.; James W., who died in Dec., 1901; George E., who died in infancy. The father was a man who commanded the highest respect of all with whom he had either business or social relations, and the mother was a woman of high Christian character, beloved by her family and a large circle of intimate friends.

As soon as he was old enough to enter his father's place of business, John A. Brimmer began to learn the trade of a baker, and later was associated with his father. When the latter died, John A. and his brother James W. assumed charge of the bakery, but in Dec., 1901, James W., too, died, and John A. became the sole proprietor. The Pretzel Bakery is the largest of its kind in this part of the State, the annual output being about fifty-two tons, all of which product finds a ready market, the reputation of this house for the excellence of its goods being widespread. Having devoted his life to the work, Mr. Brimmer understands every detail of it, and gives his personal supervision to every process of manufacture, thus insuring perfection in every particular.

On Sept. 9, 1880, Mr. Brimmer was married to Sarah R. Beitzel, of Lancaster, Pa., and one child has been born of this union, Edith R., a charming young lady, who resides with her parents. Mrs. Brimmer was born June 22, 1859, at Parkesburg, Pa., daughter of Charles and Henretta A. (Bear) Beitzel, natives of York and Lancaster counties, respectively. The father died in Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 30, 1900, aged seventy-one years, but the mother still survives, and lives in Lancaster. By occupation, the father was a tailor, and was very successful in his business, leaving a comfortable amount of property at his death. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Beitzel were as follows: Charles E., pretzel baker of Lancaster; Sarah R.; Mary E., married to Edward S. Jones, a printer of Philadelphia; Martha A., married to Louis Darmstetter, a butcher of Philadelphia; William E., an electrician of Pittsburgh; Ella B., unmarried, who resides with her mother. Mr. and Mrs. Beitzel were consistent members of the Moravian Church, and Mrs. Beitzel is still greatly interested in its good work. During his lifetime, Mr. Beitzel enjoyed the highest respect of a wide circle of business associates, as well as numerous friends. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Brimmer was Benjamin Beitzel, a carpenter of York, Pa. On her mother's side, the grandfather of Mrs. Brimmer was Andrew Bear, of Strasburg township, Lancaster county, Pa., where he was one of the leading men, being a merchant and one-time proprietor of a hotel at the old Pennsylvania station, Lancaster.

Mr. Brimmer is not only a most excellent business man, but he also takes great pleasure in his fraternal connections, belonging to numerous lodges, in which he has held all the chairs and contributed, both of time and money, toward their success, for he is a firm believer in the good effected by these institutions, not only in promoting good fellowship, but also in providing a convenient method of insuring against accident and death. Among the various lodges to which Mr. Brimmer belongs are the K. of P., in which he has been District Deputy for the past fourteen years; I. O. O. F., No. 123; Artisans No. 27, O. M. P.; Aerie No. 84, F. O. O. E.; treasurer of Lancaster County U. R. K. of P.; No. 6 Lancaster Maennerchor and Lancaster Liederkranz. Mr. Brimmer and family are members of St. John's Episcopal Church, in which they take an active part, and all are among the leading people of Lancaster. The political convictions of Mr. Brimmer are Democratic and he takes special interest in the work of that party.

JOHN W. WHITESIDE, a prominent farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in the township where his busy and useful life is passing, Sept. 13, 1858, and is the son of James and Elizabeth (Irwin) Whiteside.

James Whiteside was born in Colerain township, Sept. 23, 1825; and his wife, Aug. 29, 1828, in Chester county, the daughter of Peter and Mary Irwin, who were born in Ireland. They settled in Chester county, where they left a family of five children: John, who is dead; Jane, married to John Pollock, of Downingtown, Chester county; Martha, who married William Mowdy, of Chester county, and is dead; Rebecca, late wife of C. Hammond; Elizabeth, who married James Whiteside.

James Whiteside was a son of James Whiteside, who first settled in Colerain township, being a native of this country, and of Scotch-Irish parentage. The Whitesides were Presbyterians in religion, and were interested in the founding of the first Presbyterian Church in Colerain township. They settled on the farm now owned by Charles Whiteside, where they made improvements on an extensive scale. The grandfather of James Whiteside, Sr., had four sons and one daughter. John, Robert, William, and James, all settled and died in Colerain township, James being the only one to marry and rear a family. The daughter, Tersey, died a maiden lady, aged eighty-two.

James Whiteside, the father of John W., settled on the old homestead, where he made extensive improvements, and where he died in Dec., 1891. His widow passed to her rest in March, 1894. They were consistent members of the Union Presbyterian Church, in which their children were reared. In politics Mr. Whiteside was a leading Democrat, and held local positions during his active years. He left a family of four children; John, Charles, Samuel and William. Charles Whiteside was born April 16, 1860, married Carrie Turner, of Lancaster county, and has his residence on the old homestead. To them were born three children: Mary, Walter and Dora. Samuel Whiteside was born April 12, 1864, and lives at Colerain. His sketch may be found in another place. William Whiteside, born in May, 1866, is a merchant in Little Britain township, and is the father of a numerous family.

John W. Whiteside, whose name introduces this article, was educated in the Union High School, and when a young man, he farmed for his uncle, John Whiteside, at the present home, which he purchased after the death of that good man. Mr. Whiteside was married Feb. 22, 1880, to Mary E., the daughter of Frank and Jane A. (Farr) Jones, both born and reared in Philadelphia, and who settled in West Bradford township, Chester county, where they engaged in farming, and where they both died. Mrs. Whiteside was born in Chester county, in Nov., 1856, and was given such educational advantages as the local schools afforded. After their marriage they settled on the farm, and lived in a stone house, built by Samuel McCommon, and later the property of the uncle, as noted above. To Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside has come one son, James Fred, born in Aug., 1886. He is now a good and promising student in the Union High School. They are members of the Presbyterian Church, at Union. In politics Mr. Whiteside is a Democrat, and has had the office of collector for four years. He has been a member of the board, and has held other official positions.

Mrs. Whiteside has a sister, Mrs. Milton Keech, living in Colerain township. One brother, George Jones, is a business man of Chester county. Benjamin and Chester Jones live in Colorado. Lydia Jones married Joseph Darlington, of Chester county. Maurice Jones, now deceased, was a resident of Chester county, where he died, leaving two daughters: Della, who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside, and Jennie, a resident of Chester county.

John W. Whiteside belongs to an old and prominent family of Colerain township. The Whitesides are good farmers, and their neat and well cultivated places are monuments to their thrift and industry.

JOSEPH A. HALL. This efficient and popular conductor in the service of the Pennsylvania Railway Company was born on a farm some three miles from the town of Oxford, in Chester county, on July 21, 1850. His grandfather was Isaac Hall, a farmer and cooper, and his father, whose name is Isaac A., is also engaged in agricultural pursuits. His mother was Mary A. Newlin, and his parents removed from Chester to Lancaster county in 1855, settling near what is known as the Leaman place, in Paradise township. Isaac A. Hall has been a citizen of prominence, having served as a school director and supervisor for six years. Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. He was born in 1823 and she in 1822. Joseph Hall is the second child and eldest son of his parents. His elder sister, Margaret, married William Kennard, and died in May, 1896. A brother, Franklin, is a successful Lancaster county farmer. Salina, Mrs. Samuel Skeene, lives in Lancaster. Keziah married John Withers of Hanover. Ida is Mrs. Choat Heim, and resides at New Hanover. The two younger daughters, Elizabeth and Lizzie, are also married, the former to Thomas Withers, of Lancaster, and the latter to Aaron Delaney of Dillerville.

Joséph A. Hall grew up on the paternal farm, and not until he reached his twenty-sixth year did he decide to choose another pursuit in life. On Oct. 5, 1876, however, he came to Columbia, to become a brakeman for the Pennsylvania Company. After eight years he was made flagman, and in Oct., 1888, was promoted to be a conductor. That he is well qualified to discharge the arduous and responsible duties of his position is attested by his twelve years of faithful and successful service. He enjoys the well earned confidence of the company and the genuine respect of his fellow townsmen. He belongs to the Order of Railway Conductors, and in politics he is a Republican. All his family belong to the M. E. Church.

In January, 1871, at Bellemonte, he was married to Miss Mary E. Shaub. She was born at Strasburg, on June 7, 1853. Her father was Rudolph Shaub, a blacksmith, and her mother's maiden name was Aument. Both are deceased, Mr. Shaub having passed away at the home of Mr. Hall in 1880. Mary was the youngest child of their marriage, having had three sisters and two brothers older than herself, named Anna, Albert, Josephine, Frank and Nellie. Anna is Mrs. Hildebrand of Harrisburg; Albert is deceased; Josephine married Harry Tarbert, an engineer, and lives in Philadelphia; Frank is married and lives in Philadelphia; and Nellie is unmarried in Lancaster. Mrs. Hall died Dec. 15, 1898, and rests in Mt. Bethel cemetery. Her marriage was blessed with seven daughters and two sons. Anna E., the eldest, is a school teacher, and unmarried. Jennie E. married Owen McCullough, a telegraph operator of Wrightsville. The younger children, Bessie M., Eva R., Mabel G., Harry T., Nellie R., Leon T. and Gladys, live at home.

JAMES DE VEAUX MIFFLIN, a retired druggist, of Columbia, is a native of the borough and was born March 8, 1852, at No. 163 Walnut street, in the mansion now occupied by his brother, Dr. Houston Mifflin.

The parents of James De V. Mifflin were John Houston and Elizabeth (Heise) Mifflin, the former of whom was a portrait painter. After his marriage his attention was diverted to the care of his real estate, most of the property being within the borough of Columbia. John Houston and Elizabeth Mifflin were the parents of the following named children: Bethel, who died at the age of five years; Lloyd, landscape painter, and author of several volumes of poems; Martha, who died young; Houston, a physician and surgeon in Columbia; James De V.; Mary, who died unmarried; and Charles, of New York City. The father of these children died in 1888, at the age of eighty-five years, and the mother in 1854, both in the faith of the Presbyterian Church.

James De V. Mifflin, at the age of twenty, engaged in the coal trade for three years. He then went to California on a prospecting tour, but after a year spent there, he returned to the East and secured a position as superintendent of an industrial plant at Deshler, Ohio. He next went to Philadelphia, where he was engaged in manufacturing for two years. He then went to North Texas, and for a season engaged in sheep-raising, after which, for six years, he was in New Mexico, successfully raising cattle. He then went to Pueblo, Colo., where for six years he was a druggist, and came back to Columbia, Pa., in 1894, to attend to his real estate interests.

In June, 1892, in Silverton, Colo., Mr. Mifflin married Miss Sallie G. Austin, who was born in Old Town, Grayson Co., Va., a daughter of John and Evaline Austin, the former of whom is a planter, the latter deceased. Mr. Mifflin cast his first presidential vote for U. S. Grant, but is now inclined to the silver policy, which is diametrically opposed to that of the Republican party. Mr. Mifflin is a member of the A. O. U. W., and of the W. of W.

PETER DORSHEIMER, Nos. 150 & 152 East King street, Lancaster, is a wholesale and retail dealer in wines and liquors, and imports direct Rhine wine, Holland gin, French brandies and Scotch and Irish whiskies. He has made ten trips to Europe in the interests of his business, purchasing direct from the distilleries the goods he cases. This gives his trade a great advantage, because the public knows he has the genuine article.

Mr. Dorsheimer was born in Hesse Darmstadt July 12, 1840. His father, also Peter Dorsheimer, sailed for America May 5, 1860, landing at New York, July 5. Accompanied by his wife and three children, the elder Dorsheimer went direct to Lancaster county, where he settled on a farm and prospered. Latterly he retired and spent his declining years in Lancaster, where he died at the age of eighty-two. His wife, whose maiden name was Anna M. Jenner, was born in Hesse Darmstadt, the daughter of Phillip Jenner, a highly educated man, for years a manufacturer of clay stoves. His brother, Dr. Edward Jenner, was the famous discoverer of vaccination which has proved such a blessing to mankind. Mrs. Dorsheimer died at the age of seventy-six years. Peter Dorsheimer, the wine and liquor merchant, was educated in his native land, being nineteen years old when he arrived in this country. He first secured work on a farm near Lancaster, but after five years went into the hotel business. He became interested in real estate and built between thirty and forty houses in the city and county, employing as many as one hundred men at times. Mr. Dorsheimer started his wine and liquor business in 1887 and has been very successful in it.

In 1860 Mr. Dorsheimer married in this city, Miss Anna E. Stauffer, who was born at Berne on the Rhine, and from this union twelve children were born, all of whom are living, as is also the mother. The children are Daniel M., a hotel keeper at Parkesburg, Pa.; Frank, a carriage builder at Coatesville, Pa.; Ada, at home; Henry P., a carriage builder at Parkesburg, Pa.; George, a carriage builder at Coatesville, he being in business in the west end, while his brother Frank manufactures vehicles in the east end; John, in the cigar business in Boston; May, wife of William Peterson, manager of freight shipping in New York City; Elizabeth, wife of Charles W. Pennypacker, with the Reading Railroad, at Reading; Benjamin F., associated with his brother, Daniel M., in the hotel business, at Parkesburg; Martin, engaged with his brother Frank in carriage building; Garfield, employed at Slaymaker's lock works, Lancaster; and Arthur, who assists his father in the wine and liquor business. This is surely a remarkable family record, seldom equalled, a family circle complete and unbroken.

All the family attend the St. Paul's Reformed Church. Mr. Dorsheimer is one of the popular men of Lancaster. He belongs to no secret society, and about the only hobby he has is the Lancaster Road Drivers' Association, of which he is a member and in connection with which he was a prominent figure in the great parade given by that association in Lancaster, Wednesday, June 12, 1901. No man in the parade was saluted oftener than Peter Dorsheimer, for no man is better known and liked.

HARRY LANDIS HERSHEY, collector of internal revenue, although a resident of Harrisburg and a native of Dauphin county, is descended from a family who were among the early settlers of Lancaster county, while his wife's father was at one time a merchant of Lancaster. For these reasons, if no other, Mr. Hershey is fairly entitled to representation in the biographical annals of Lancaster county. However, he has another and very substantial claim, in that he fills the most important office in this county, an office that has more to do with the people, in a financial way, than any other. His district includes fifteen counties, Lancaster, York, Dauphin, Adams, Bedford, Blair, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Juanita, Lebanon, Mifflin, Perry and Snyder. His office force consists of twelve clerks, and, besides these, he has thirteen outside deputies (one at Harrisburg and two at York), thirty-three storekeepers and gaugers, and three United States or general gaugers. Mr. Hershey has the distinguished honor of being the internal revenue collector for the biggest cigar manufacturing district in the United States, the output for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, having been 624,844,177 cigars; while the moneys for which Mr. Hershey had to account for that year, amounted to the colossal sum of $3,528,250.39. His term of four years expired June 1, 1902, and was continued after that date by filing a new bond. Collector Hershey is also custodian of the public building at Lancaster, Pa., and as such has made a great many improvements in it. It was during the first term of Collector Hershey, that the great Jacobs-Kending counterfeiting case was discovered and it was largely through his efforts that it was brought to light. For this the Secretary of the Treasury, L. J. Gage, and Commissioner of Internal Revenue G. W. Wilson highly complimented him.

Harry Landis Hershey is descended from one of three brothers who came to Lancaster county from Holland in the early settlement of Pennsylvania. Two of them left Lancaster county, one of these settling in Dauphin county, and there becoming the ancestor of Harry Landis Hershey. Christian Hershey, grandfather of our subject, was born in Dauphin county, where he engaged in farming until his death.

Henry Hershey, son of Christian, died forty-five years ago. He married Nancy Landis, daughter of Christian Landis, a distiller and farmer of Dauphin county, who owned teams and carried freight from Philadelphia to Pittsburg long before the days of railroads. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hershey became the parents of seven children, five of whom are living: (1) Diana, wife of Dr. Thomas G. Fox, a retired physician, ex-Representative of the House of Pennsylvania, and ex-Prothonotary of Dauphin county, of Hummelstown; (2) Christian L. Hershey, a retired farmer of Hummelstown; (3) Elizabeth, who became the wife of the late Dr. I. M. Groff, a practicing physician of Ephrata, and who died at her cottage at Asbury Park, in 1895; (4) A son who died in infancy; (5) Mary A., widow of Witmer C. Ranck, who with her daughter now lives on College avenue, Lancaster; (6) Henrietta, widow of George W. Boyd, a merchant of Harrisburg, Pa.; and (7) Harry L. Hershey, Collector of Internal Revenue.

Harry Landis Hershey was born at Hummelstown, Dauphin county, July 7, 1852, and, after being educated in the public schools of his district and in the Sunnyside Seminary at Hummelstown, went into the grocery and general merchandising business at Hummelstown, remaining at that for eight months. He then left the familiar scenes of his boyhood, and went to Philadelphia where he clerked for two years in the wholesale flour and feed store of Ronk & Bachman (who were Lancaster county people). Before beginning that clerkship, however, Mr. Hershey was graduated from Crittenden's Business College, in Philadelphia. Leaving Philadelphia, he went to Harrisburg, and there clerked in Bergstressen & Boyd's wall-paper store for three years, when the firm failed and Mr. Hershey bought the stock and entered into business for himself. This he continued with much success until he was elected clerk of the orphans and recorder of deeds for Dauphin county. He entered upon the duties of this office Jan. 4, 1891, and, after serving three years, was re-elected. During the last year of Mr. Hershey's term as recorder of deeds, he made application for appointment as Collector of Internal Revenue for this district, receiving the appointment on April 30, 1898, and entering upon the duties of his office May 30, 1898.

In 1880 Mr. Hershey was married to Miss Mary Gertrude Buehler, a daughter of one of the early grocers of Lancaster. Her mother was Ann Locher Buehler, a sister of the late D. P. Locher, founder of the banking house of D. P. Locher & Sons, now known as the Lancaster City Trust Company. Mr. Hershey makes his home in the capital city of the State, but spends three and four days of every week in his office in Lancaster, where he is as popular, personally and politically, as he is in Harrisburg. In the latter city, it will be remembered, a big campaign club was named after him, the Harry L. Hershey Club, an organization that did very effective work in both of the McKinley campaigns, and which came to Lancaster and took part in a monstrous parade in 1896, Mr. Hershey accompanying them to this city. Always active in politics, Mr. Hershey was made chairman of the Republican City Executive Committee, of Harrisburg, for four consecutive years, and, after a lapse, was made chairman of it for two years more. Socially he belongs to no organization, save the Heptasophs, being entirely devoted to the discharge of the responsible duties devolving upon him, for the intelligent performance of which he has received so much well merited praise.

OLIVER B. MILLER. Among the substantial and much respected farmer citizens of Lancaster county, Pa., is Oliver B. Miller, the owner of one of the best farms in Strasburg township. His worthy father, Henry S. Miller, died in 1844, at the age of fifty-two years, in Lancaster city, although he was a native of Philadelphia, where he spent his early life and learned the trade of a shoemaker. His marriage took place in Philadelphia, to Susan Watson, a daughter of Oliver Watson, of Strasburg township, and they reared a family of children: Elizabeth, who married and moved to Illinois; Oliver; John, Tabitha, and Sarah, all deceased. By a previous marriage, the mother had two children, Mary and Lydia Ann Dunkle. Later Henry Miller moved to Lancaster city and engaged in his trade, for a time being associated with Jacob Gable.

Oliver B. Miller was born in Philadelphia, Oct. 19, 1840, but lived in Lancaster city until he was sixteen. On account of limited means, he was compelled to assist in the family support, entering the woolen mills as early as nine years. The educational advantages offered Oliver were very meager, six weeks of attendance at night school covering the whole period, but he did not on this account grow to maturity ignorant; with a desire for knowledge, he took advantage of every opportunity to increase it, read every book within reach, and opened his intelligent mind to all chances for improvement, this resulting in an astonishing amount of general information. That Mr. Miller is an intelligent, well posted man, he owes entirely to his own persistent efforts, by which he overcame many obstacles which would have discouraged one less determined.

At the age of sixteen he left the mills and made his way into the surrounding country, determined to become a farmer and the owner of some of the fertile land of this vicinity. His first efforts were by the month, and during the following five years he was thus constantly employed, and then began to farm on shares, following this plan so advantageously that at the close of nine years he was possessed of sufficient means to purchase the fine farm which he now owns. This consists of eighty-four acres and is located three miles from Strasburg, and here he has successfully carried on general farming. Since locating here he has made many permanent improvements and now has one of the most desirable estates in this locality.

The marriage of Oliver B. Miller was on Dec. 19, 1860, to Elizabeth Lyons, a grand-daughter of Abraham Hoover, of Strasburg township, and to this union have been born six children: Edward C., a farmer on the home place, who married Mary Wolf, of Lancaster city; Frank H., now residing at home, who married Ella Weaver, who died in 1892; Gideon C., who died in 1899, at the age of thirty, a teacher, a graduate of the Millersville Normal School, and for seven years an employe of the government, married to Mary Garber, of Mr. Joy; Mary E., a teacher in the public schools, a graduate of the Millersville Normal School, and also of a college in Columbus, in penmanship and drawing; Ann Elizabeth, who married Enos H. Miller, a farmer of this township; and Park O., who died at the age of nineteen years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller are consistent members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and the family is one of the most respected in the neighborhood. Mr. Miller has taken a great interest in educational matters, and has given his children every possible advantage.

WILLIAM K. GABLE. For twenty-four years Mr. Gable has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, having risen from the position of brakeman to the more responsible post of engineer. In the discharge of these duties he has exhibited the keen intelligence, quick perception and rugged honesty which have characterized him through life. He was born in the township of West Hempfield, Dec. 15, 1852. His father, whose Christian name is Henry, was born in 1827. He is by trade a blacksmith, but ceased active toil many years ago, and is passing life's evening in well earned repose. The name of Mr. Gable's mother before marriage was Marl Cluke. She was born in 1831, and passed away Oct. 4, 1891. Both she and her husband were earnest members of the Reformed Church. They came to Columbia to reside in 1877, and were the parents of four children: William K., Harry H., Anna and Martin. Harry H. is a Pennsylvania Company's flagman and lives in Reading. Anna is the wife of John Kleinfelter, of Cumberland county. Martin is also a railroad man, his home being in Reading.

William K. Gable remained at home until he had passed his thirteenth year, when, a mere boy in point of age, yet full of pluck and grit, he found his way to Chicago, Ill. For a year he attended school there, and for three years worked in a box factory. In 1870 he returned to Lancaster county, finding employment as an apprentice in a blacksmith shop in Mountville, where he remained for three months. From Mountville, he went to Lancaster, where he passed six months. The next eighteen months he spent in Mt. Joy. Having learned the trade he readily found employment in Harrisburg as a journeyman during the three and a half years following. He subsequently found work at his trade at Pittsburg and at other points, but his natural impulse was toward the exciting, perilous (and sometimes underpaid) life of a railroad man. His yearning was gratified in 1876, when he entered the Pennsylvania Company's service as a brakeman. Six months later he was made a fireman; and after riding in the cab for five years and eleven months in that capacity, he was promoted to the position of engineer. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and in politics is a Republican. Both himself and family attend the Lutheran Church.

He married, June 18, 1878, Sally E. Jeffers, who was born at Lancaster, April 3, 1857. Her father, John, was a Union soldier, who sacrificed an arm in his country's service. He died in 1864, in his forty-first year. Mrs. Gable's mother's name before marriage was Catherine Lingars. Mrs. Jeffers survived her husband for five years, and died in 1869, aged forty-two years. Mrs. Gable was their only child. Her mother, however, married again, her second husband being Benjamin Roodman. The issue of the second marriage was one daughter, Anna, who married William Noxtoof, of Lancaster. Twelve children have been born to the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Gable: Albert, Harry, Florence, William, Mattie and Stella (twins), John, Irene, Greda, Edna and Alex (twins), and Howard. Five survive and live at home with their parents: Albert, Harry, Florence, Stella and Howard.

THOMAS H. WENTZ, M. D., a prominent physician of Kirkwood, Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born near Peach Bottom, this county, Feb. 17, 1848, son of John S. and Sarah A. (Penny) Wentz, who were both natives of Lancaster county.

The Wentz family is of German origin. In 1277 is found mention of Wentzenfeld (Wentz's field), near Bingen-on-the-Rhine, which field was entailed to the Bishops of Mayence. In June or July, 1731, four brothers, Beltzer, John, George and Karl, sailed in the ship "Samuel" from the Palatinate, in Germany. Purchasing land on Skippac creek, in the northern part of Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county, they located there and built a church, which still exists, and is known as Wentz's Church. From these four brothers are descended the many of the name in Lancaster county.

John Wentz, great-grandfather of Dr. Wentz, settled in Lancaster county. He had a large family of children.

Joseph and Mary (Smith) Wentz, the Doctor's grandparents, were born in Bucks county. They lived for a time in Chester county, and then moved to a place near McCall's Ferry, where he owned a grist and sawmill. He was prominent and prosperous in his day, and continued to live at that place for many years, serving long as justice of the peace there. Joseph and Mary Wentz had a large family, of whom John S., the father of Dr. Thomas H., was the eldest. Joseph died unmarried. William died in Martic township, where he was a farmer. Isaac died in Illinois. Thomas is still at the old home near McCall's Ferry. Susan A. died unmarried. Sarah married Hugh Penny, who lived and died in Drumore, near the Buck; she is also deceased. Maria is the widow of James Penny, and has her home in Drumore township.

John S. Wentz, the Doctor's father, was born in 1805, in Martic township. He purchased a portion of his father's farm near McCall's Ferry, and devoted his life to its cultivation. His wife died at their home in 1874, at the age of sixty-two, and he passed away at the home of his son, the Doctor, in 1882. Both were consistent and devout members of the Methodist Church. Politically he was active in the Democratic party. Mrs. Wentz belonged to a family of Scotch-Irish extraction, members of which were named in the assessment rolls of Drumore as early as 1756.

To John S. and Sarah A. Wentz were born nine children, of whom Mary Wentz, the eldest, is the widow of William F. L. Morrison, resides at Chestnut Level, and is the mother of two children: Alice, who is the widow of Franklin McPherson; Retta, who died when a young lady.

Joseph Wentz, the first son born to John S. Wentz, was born at Liberty Square, in Lancaster county, married Mary McCreary and settled on a farm at Chestnut Level, Lancaster county. To them were born the following family: Harry E., an undertaker at Atglen; where he is married and stands high in the community; Zella, married to Thomas Ankrum, of Drumore; Myrtle, married to William Witman, of Little Britain; Sadie, wife of Morris Bunting, a resident of Colerain township; Ora, who married Thadeus Dennis, a merchant at Kirkwood, and who is now dead.

Dr. William J. Wentz, the second son, studied at the Millersville State Normal School, and received his professional education in Jefferson Medical College, one of the noted schools of Philadelphia from which he was graduated in 1865. He began his professional career at New Providence, where he is still in the active practice of his profession. His wife Susan Rohrer, belongs to an old and prominent family, and they have six children: Anna Laverta, who married Alfred W. Mayen, of Lancaster; John; Mazee; Emily; Frank, a practicing physician of Philadelphia; Charles, a student of medicine in Philadelphia.

Hugh P. Wentz, the fourth child, was born in Drumore township, where he was reared, married Miss Retta Steel, a native of Lancaster county, and settled at the old homestead, where he died very suddenly in 1898, aged fifty-seven, leaving a wife and three children, Dwight, Edgar, and Blanche.

John Wentz was born at the old homestead, where he was reared to manhood, and married Miss Lucy McPherson. They settled in Martic township, where he is engaged in a mercantile business, at Bethesda. His wife died, leaving him one son, Melville, and he was later married to a lady of Strasburg, by whom he has had four children: Ira, a merchant and a partner with his father; Maud; Emma, and Ida.

Thomas H. Wentz was the sixth child.

Emma Wentz married William C. Boyd, of West Drumore, and both passed away, leaving two children, Clarence, and Letta, who is dead.

Laura Wentz was born at the old homestead, married James McSparran, now of West Drumore, and is the mother of six children, Guy, Walter, Ellwood, Clyde, James and Sarah, who is dead.

Hattie, the youngest daughter of John Wentz, is the widow of John McComb, of Fairfield, Lancaster county, and is the mother of two children, Mabel and Helen.

Dr. Wentz, whose name introduces this article, received his education at the Chestnut Level Academy, and in a private school at Spring Valley under Prof. John Peoples. When a young man he taught school for three years, and in 1871 took up the study of medicine with his brother at New Providence, and the following year he entered the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1874. The same year he began the practice of his profession at Kirkwood, where he has continued for twenty-seven years. He has purchased real estate in the village and put up a very neat and attractive home. He has been very successful, and stands high in his profession.

Dr. Wentz was married Jan. 7, 1879, to Miss Anna Roop, a daughter of Joseph and Mary Roop, and a descendant of an old and prominent family. Mrs. Wentz was born in Lancaster City, Oct. 6, 1860, was educated in the city schools, and is the mother of four children: Alletta M., a graduate of the West Chester State Normal School, class of 1901, and now teaching at Kirkwood; Paul R., a student for two years at Union Academy, for one year at Lowe Institute, Port Deposit, and now at the F. and M. College in Lancaster; Mary G., and Joseph C.

Dr. Wentz is a Democrat; he belongs to Christiana Lodge, No. 417, F. & A. M. Mrs. Wentz, Alletta, Paul and Mary are all members of the Union Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Wentz began for himself at the foot of the ladder of fortune, and has made himself what he is. When he came to Kirkwood, in 1874, he was without financial resources, and had only his own ability and courage to help him. By devotion to his profession, and by living a clean and wholesome life he has built up a profitable practice, and is now known as one of the leading physicians of the county.

HON. FRANCIS BERNARD McCLAIN, member of the Legislature from the city district, is one of the most conspicuous figures in the social, political and business life of Lancaster.

Francis McClain, Sr., his father, came to America from County Londonderry, Ireland, in 1840, and settled in Lancaster in 1841. After working for the McGranns for a time he went into the cattle business in partnership with the late Patrick Kelly. He is now leading a retired life, beloved by all who know him, and carrying his eighty odd years with wonderful vigor, mentally and physically. After locating in Lancaster he married Susan Mulhatten, a daughter of Bernard Mulhatten, whose old home at the corner of North Duke and James streets was for many years one of the landmarks of the town. To this marriage five children were born, four of whom are living, as follows: Francis Bernard, our subject; George Edward, of Philadelphia; Mary Gertrude, wife of James Maloney, in the Pennsylvania Railroad service at Dillerville; and John Charles, superintendent in the Kendig Chocolate Works, Lititz, Pennsylvania.

Francis Bernard McClain was born in this city, April 14, 1864, and after attending the parochial school, entered the High School and was graduated therefrom in 1881. Entering the employ of Levi Sensenig, the extensive live-stock dealer, young McClain was bookkeeper, buyer and salesman until 1890, in which year he went into the cattle trade with George R. Sensenig and Andrew F. Frantz. This continued until 1897, and from that time on Mr. McClain and Mr. Frantz conducted their business together. In 1894, Mr. McClain was elected to the Legislature by the Republicans of the city district, and was re-elected in 1896, and again in 1898; and Nov. 6, 1900, he was triumphantly elected for another term, which gives him more terms than any other man has ever had from the city district. Mr. McClain has made a record in the Legislature of which any man might well feel proud. He was a member of the special committee appointed to investigate the State Treasury of 1897; on the committee to investigate the charges of bribery, in connection with the election for United States Senator; on the Committee on Buildings and Grounds; continuously, during all his terms, on the Committee on Ways and Means; Chairman of the Committee on Municipal Corporations—a committee that has to do with all the legislation affecting municipalities, 1897-99; and Speaker pro tem. of the House in 1897, presiding over all the stormy closing deliberations of that session. In 1901 he was Chairman of the Committee on Corporations; Vice-chairman of the Committee on Appropriations; Floor Leader of the House on the Republican side; and again Speaker pro tem.

In 1888, Mr. McClain was married to Miss Ellen Bernardine O'Neil, granddaughter of the late James McCafferty, for an ordinary life time connected with our cotton-mills; and a grand-niece of the deeply lamented and dearly-beloved Very Reverend Father Bernard Keeman, who was for more than half a century pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, of this city and at the time of his death, the oldest priest in the United States, having passed away at the age of ninety-seven years. One child was born of this union, but entered into rest in infancy. Mr. McClain possesses one of the finest tenor voices ever heard in this community, and he is the tenor soloist in St. Anthony's Catholic choir. He has taken part in innumerable concerts for charitable purposes and has never charged nor accepted the slightest remuneration for services thus rendered, or even for his expenses. A Catholic in faith, he is liberal in his religious views as he is in all other matters, and he never asks whether Protestants or Catholics are to be the beneficiaries when they knock at his door in the name of charity.

ANTHONY G. GREINER, a well-known and highly respected farmer of Mt. Joy township, who now occupies the old homestead farm of his ancestors, was born there May 19, 1853, son of David S. and Anna (Good) Greiner, both of Mt. Joy township.

The parents of Mr. Greiner located on this fine farm in 1852 and for many years David S. Greiner gave his attention to its care and cultivation. For seventeen years prior to his death, however, he took little part in active work. When he passed away June 20, 1900, he had reached his seventy-ninth year and left behind him the record of a kind, useful and benevolent life. The devoted wife survived him but a few months, her death occurring in November, 1900, at the age of seventy-two years. They were laid side by side in Hill Church cemetery, in Lebanon county. Both had been members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were as follows: Anthony G.; Elizabeth, married to Amos H. Brandt, of Rapho township; Anna, deceased; Mary E. married to Aaron Grossman, near Lititz, Pa.; Malinda, married to John L. Rue of Rapho township; and George, who married Emma Filiart, and is a horse dealer.

Anthony G. Greiner was reared on the farm and obtained his education in the district schools. Until he was twenty-five years old he remained on the home farm, and then, for four years, worked by the day at various kinds of employment. He then purchased a small farm in Rapho township, which he operated for two years, and then returned to the present farm. In politics Mr. Greiner is a staunch Republican, and he is regarded as one of the substantial men and useful citizens of his township.

On Nov. 6, 1877, Mr. Greiner was married in Manheim, Pa., to Miss Malinda Ruhle, and three children have been born to this marriage, the eldest, William R., dying in infancy. Two other sons, Aaron R. and Harvey, reside at home. Mrs. Greiner was born March 10, 1857, in Rapho township, daughter of Cyrus and Catherine (Myers) Ruhle, natives of Lancaster county who now reside in Rapho township, engaged in farming. The father was born in 1823, and the mother in 1825, and both are members of the U. B. Church.

Mr. Greiner during an industrious career has accumulated ample means and enjoys the respect of the community, who know him to be a man of integrity and reliability.

EPHRAIM C. GINDER, a general farmer of Mt. Joy township, was born March 28, 1855, in Rapho township, Lancaster county, son of Samuel and Mary (Kapp) Ginder, natives of Lancaster county, who, at the age of over seventy years, still reside on their farm in Mt. Joy township. The mother is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. They were the parents of the following children: Sarah C., who married Morris McAllister, a miller in Mt. Joy township; Ephraim C.; Maria C., who married Thomas Smith, of Lebanon county; Kate C., who married Harry Bennesterfer, of Lebanon, Pa.; and Lizzie C., at home.

The paternal grandfather of Ephraim C. Ginder was Martin Ginder, a farmer of Rapho township, who married a Fishburn. The Ginder family is one of the old and prominent ones, wealthy, and highly regarded as farmers. The founder of the family came to Lancaster county from Germany about 1730, and many of the name can be found among the best and most substantial citizens of Mt. Joy and other townships. The religious connection of the family has been almost altogether with the Lutheran Church.

In 1879, in White Oak, Lancaster county, Ephraim G. Ginder was united in marriage with Miss Susan Baumberger, and three children were born to this union, viz.: Harvey, who died in infancy; and Morris B. and Farris B., two intelligent young men, residing with their parents. Mrs. Ginder was born in 1856, in Lancaster county, and died there in April, 1890. She was buried in Hill Church cemetery. She was a daughter of Cyrus and Elizabeth (Keller) Baumberger, both natives of Lancaster county.

Until his marriage Mr. Ginder lived at home with his parents, beginning at that time to operate his present farm, where he has remained ever since. He is a successful farmer and a much respected citizen. In politics he is a Republican. Like other members of his family, he belongs to the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM J. INGRAM, of Pleasant Grove, Fulton township, Lancaster county, is one of the most substantial citizens of his neighborhood. He was born in Bart township, July 20, 1845, and was educated in the common schools. He is the son of Archibald and Mary (Johnson) Ingram, of Bart township.

Archibald Ingram, Sr., the grandfather of William J., was a native of Lancaster county, of English origin. He was the father of these children: John, born March 1, 1811; Mary, Oct. 15, 1813; Nancy, Oct. 6, 1815; Archibald, Jr., March 10, 1816 (died Dec. 14, 1893); William, March 16, 1818; and Rebecca, born March 20, 1820. Archibald Ingram, the father of William J., married Miss Mary Johnson in 1841, and to this union came a family of five children: George W., born July 15, 1843, deceased; William J.; John M., born Jan. 5, 1848, deceased; Mary Rebecca, born July 30, 1852, unmarried; and Archibald Newton, born Sept. 5, 1856, residing in the West.

William J. Ingram married Miss Martha McElwain, daughter of William McElwain, of Lancaster county, on Dec. 24, 1874. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram have had seven children, as follows: William A., born Sept. 26, 1875; Mary M., born July 24, 1877; Nellie A., born Nov. 17, 1879, all of them at home; Ila L., born July 26, 1883; L. Zaidee, born Oct. 29, 1885; Hattie May, born May 2, 1890; and Josiah Elmer, born Nov. 4, 1893.

Mr. Ingram was reared on the farm and chose that occupation of his own volition. Although poor at the beginning of his career, he has accumulated a sufficiency of worldly goods to keep himself and family in comfort. His farm comprises 104 acres and is well stocked and improved with all modern farm accessories. In politics this gentleman votes the Democratic ticket; in religion he is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Ingram was born Sept. 5, 1854, and was one of an interesting family of six children, the others being Amanda, John B., William E., Josiah E. and Ella R. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram and family have the respect and kindly regard of all their neighbors and are prominent in the social circles of the district.

HENRY FOX was during his life one of the leading business citizens of Gap, Pa., and a man of reliability and integrity. He was born May 28, 1841, in Benhausen, Germany, and passed away at his home in Gap, Pa., Jan. 29, 1895. He was interred in Bellevue cemetery. His parents were Henry and Henrietta (Baker) Fox, both of Germany.

Henry Fox, the father of the late Henry Fox, came to America in 1852, with his family and settled in Paradise township, in Lancaster county, Pa. He was an accomplished musician, but also possessed a talent for mechanics, being able to manufacture many articles. He was an excellent broom-maker and carried on this business to some extent in Paradise township, where the family resided until the death of both parents. Mr. Fox possessed ample means. He died in 1872, at the age of sixty years, his widow surviving until 1886, dying at the age of eighty years. They were members of the Mennonite Church. The children born to this union were as follows: Jacob, a retired farmer of Stroudsburg; Barbara, deceased, who married Lawrence W. Ludwig; Peter, deceased; Henry; Elizabeth, widow of Samuel Etchels, of Lancaster; Mary, deceased; Christian, who is a machinist, painter and photographer in Parkesburg, Pa.; and Uriah is a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, living at Harrisburg.

Mr. Fox was a tailor by trade and this business he followed through life, beginning work on the table at the age of eighteen, in time widening its scope until it embraced all branches of merchant tailoring and clothing. He served his apprenticeship in Williamstown with John Falk, and there he did business on his own account for five years, removing then to Paradise, Pa., where he worked for two years. He was then engaged at various places until 1871, when he returned to Gap, where he found an excellent opportunity for opening up a first-class clothing and tailoring business. Mr. Fox had found just the place he desired and he concentrated his energies on this business to its great success. In 1879, with a careful father's forethought, he obtained possession of an adjoining store, which he fitted up as a restaurant, confectionery and tobacco store, in order to give his children employment and interest, and the excellence of his judgment has been demonstrated by the success which has attended this enterprise. Although the kind and provident father has passed away, the business is in the hands of his children, who have reason to be thankful for his care for their welfare.

Mr. Fox was for a long period a notary public, filling that office for some thirteen years. His political affiliation was with the Democratic party. In religious belief, he was a member of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church. Fraternally he belonged to the Knights of Pythias and the Mystic Chain.

On July 25, 1863, Mr. Fox was united in marriage with Miss Margaret J. Brown, and the family born to this union consisted of the following members: Henrietta, deceased, who married Adrian Stone; Christian, who is a telegraph operator married Catherine Baldwin of Lancaster, and has three children; Mary died in infancy; Samuel M., the Chicago collector of the Philadelphia Press, who married Anna G. Fisher, of Tacony, Pa., and has two children; Harry, at home, an assistant in the business, as are also Lizzie V., Thomas, Annie and Charles B.

Mrs. Margaret J. (Brown) Fox was born in County Derry, Ireland, daughter of Samuel and Margaret J. (Scott) Brown, of County Derry, who came to America in 1850 and settled in Gap, Pa. Mr. Brown was a linen weaver in his native land and followed the business of carpet weaving in his new home. He died in 1867, at the age of sixty-five years, his wife dying in 1878, also aged sixty-five years. They belonged to the Scotch Presbyterian Church, and they were interred in the Bellevue cemetery. Their children were as follows: Joseph, deceased; Robert, who enlisted for service in the Civil war, but never returned home; Sarah, deceased wife of John Patterson; Matilda, late wife of Lincoln Beck; Mary, who married Albert Gray, of West Chester, Pa.; Margaret J., who married Henry Fox; Elizabeth, who married Uriah Fox, a railway conductor at Harrisburg; and William, deceased.

Few women could have more successfully managed the cares of a large business than Mrs. Fox has done ever since the death of her husband. She was appointed notary public in his place and has also filled the duties of that position with excellent judgment. The business established by Mr. Fox is now a large department store filled with an assortment of both ladies' and men's furnishing goods of all kinds, fully up-to-date in every particular, comprising also clothing, while the restaurant continues to be as successfully conducted as formerly. Mrs. Fox with her very capable force is enabled to manage the store, the restaurant, and the cigar, tobacco and confectionery connection without outside assistance, and the same honest methods are employed which brought this business to the notice of the public in its beginning. Patrons are certain to meet with pleasant and careful attention, their wants are studied and in consequence no more popular, first-class establishment can be found in Gap. The family is held in high esteem, the children all having grown up to be thrifty, self-supporting, independent and respected.

ELIAS HERR, now living a life of retirement in his cozy home, No. 23 North Ann street, Lancaster, well deserves the ease and comfort he is enjoying, for he was for thirty years an active farmer.

One of the descendants of Hans Herr, the progenitor of most, if not all, of the Herrs in the United States, Elias Herr can boast of a very ancient, very numerous and very influential relationship in Lancaster county. His grandfather, Abraham Herr, was a farmer of Eden township, and his father, Benjamin Herr, was born on the old homestead in that township. Benjamin Herr removed to Leacock township, near Bird-in-Hand, where, after farming for many years, he retired, continuing to live on the farm, however, until his death, which occurred in 1879; his beloved wife passed away in 1881. Benjamin Herr married Mary Ranck, a daughter of Jacob Ranck, a farmer of Strasburg township, and six sons and two daughters were born of this union, of whom only three are now living: Jacob, a retired farmer of Bird-in-Hand; John, a retired farmer of Bird-in-Hand; and Elias, of Lancaster.

Elias Herr was born on the old homestead in Leacock township, July 12, 1845, and after being educated in the public schools of the district, left school at the age of seventeen years to work on his father's farm, where he remained for nine years. Then he married and located in East Lampeter township, where he rented and worked a farm belonging to his father, afterward purchasing that place which he still owns. Mr. Herr, who is a Republican in politics, served two terms as a member of the board of school directors of East Lampeter township, and he was always among the foremost in advocating all that was advanced and modern in school matters. Religiously he is a member of the Reformed Church, as are also his wife and daughters.

Mr. Herr was married in 1870, to Miss Lydia Groff, daughter of the late Samuel Groff, a farmer of Leacock township. To this union have come two daughters, Mary A. and Maggie G., both of whom are at home and are assisting their mother. Mr. Herr had the good sense to retire at the age of fifty-six years, and spends his time pleasantly, taking especial delight in reading, and occasionally "running out" to his elegant sixty-five-acre farm near Bird-in-Hand, working about the old place just to "keep his hand in."

WINFIELD SCOTT KAUFFMAN, the genial and popular landlord and proprietor of the "Gordonville Hotel," at Gordonville, Leacock township, Lancaster county, was born at Roseville, Manheim township, Jan. 25, 1869, and is a son of Amos H. and Susan (Frey) Kauffman.

Amos H. Kauffman was born in 1846 in Manor township, and for thirteen years was engaged in the hotel business. The most of the time until 1875 he was a farmer, that year taking charge of a hotel at Mt. Joy, which he conducted for a year; for ten years he was a landlord of a popular hotel at Rohrerstown: at Masonville he was engaged in the same business something over a year. At the end of that time he resumed farming in Providence township, where he is still engaged in the cultivation of the soil. He married Susan Frey, who was born in 1847; and they are the parents of the following family: Winfield Scott; Anna May, who died young; George W., deceased; Harry, a farmer in Providence township; Frances, deceased; Ella, wife of Amos Groff, living in Drumore township; and Lilla, unmarried, and at home.

Mr. Kauffman's paternal grandfather, Isaac Kauffman, married a Hess, and they were farming people of Lancaster county; his maternal grandfather was Frederick Frey, also of Lancaster county.

Winfield Scott Kauffman and Laura E. Weiler were married at Quarryville, Pa., in November, 1893, and their union has been blessed by the birth of one child, Laura M.

Mrs. Laura E. Kauffman was born in Caernarvon township, Sept. 28, 1866, and is a daughter of Silas and Rebecca (Lockard) Weiler. Her father was born in Caernarvon township, and was in the hotel business at Quarryville at the time of his death in 1879. Her mother was born in Chester county, and after her husband's death, carried on the hotel until her death in 1898. She was seventy-two years old at her demise, and her husband fifty-six. Both father and mother were members of the Mennonite Church, and were buried in the cemetery connected with the Mennonite Church in Providence. They had the following children: Anna, married to James Jeffers, and now dead; Dora, married to Christ. Trout, and now dead; Heber, in the hotel business at Delta, Pa.; Theodore, a resident of East Earl township; Ida, unmarried, and living in Lancaster, Pa.; Thornton, deceased; Laura E., Mrs. Kauffman; Isaiah, deceased; Maggie, wife of Leaman Bair.

Mrs. Kauffman's paternal grandparents were David and Elizabeth (Beam) Weiler, of German birth. Her mother's parents were Samuel and Sarah Lockard, who were born in Ireland.

Winfield Scott Kauffman was reared in the hotel where he spent the earlier part of his life. When he was sixteen years old he was sent to Millersville Normal, where he spent two years. For a year he was employed on the farm, and then was engaged as a hotel clerk in various places until 1897, when he took charge of the hotel at Safe Harbor, where he remained a year and a half. In April, 1899, he came to his present location, and here he has achieved a decided success. Socially he is connected with the Red Men and with the I. O. O. F., where he has taken the Encampment Degrees, and holds important positions; he is also a member of the Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., and Rebekah Degree, I. O. O. F.; a past officer in the subordinate Lodge and Encampment; and a member of F. O. E. Aerie No. 84. He is a Republican, and is making himself felt as a leading man in the community.

EZRA M. GOOD, who was until recently the popular and affable hotel proprietor at Central Manor, is a native of Lancaster county and was born June 11, 1863. He was reared on the farm of his parents, John J. and Elizabeth (Mylin) Good in Martic township, and was educated in the public schools. At the age of twenty-one years he left the home place and for a year farmed on his own account, and for the next two years was engaged in burning (or making) lime. He then succeeded David G. Good, at Marticville, as hotelkeeper, becoming quite a favorite with the transient as well as permanent population whose circumstances made it convenient to avail themselves of hotel accommodations, and the result to himself was so satisfactory that he retained the management of the hotel fully eight years. Mr. Good then purchased the commodious and well equipped establishment at Central Manor, succeeding Mrs. Brennerman, and this is the oldest and most home-like public house in the county. Mr. Good, however, on securing this hotel, at once set to work at remodeling and improving it in all its parts, making it one of the most attractive resorts in the county, as well as the most comfortable. He set a choice table, and took pains to have the attendants polite and attractive. The sleeping rooms are clean and well furnished, and the weary traveler or exhausted local-business man, if he be so fortunate as to find a lodging within the walls of this house, always secures a sound and refreshing night's rest.

On April 1, 1901, Mr. Good rented the "Central Manor Hotel" and moved to Millersville, Pa., where he bought a home. He also purchased a warehouse and is at present dealing in leaf tobacco, as well as carrying on a business known as the Safe Harbor Sand Co., with works at Safe Harbor and Refton, Pa., whose daily capacity is 300 tons.

Politically Mr. Good is a Republican, and fraternally is a member of Kosciusko Lodge, No. 374, I. O. O. F., and Royal Arcanum, No. 1105.

Mr. Good was united in marriage, in 1885, to Miss Cecelia M. Groff, daughter of Francis B. Groff, and to this marriage have been born three children: Gertrude, born Sept. 15, 1886; Hattie, born Dec. 15, 1891; and Stella, born Nov. 10, 1893.

Mr. Good is looked upon as one of the most progressive men in the county, and in his calling there is not one who equals him in popularity, or is held in higher esteem by the general public.

SAMUEL WILLIAM DILLER, clerk to the county commissioners of Lancaster county, belongs to a family that has for generations been prominent in the business affairs of this community. His grandfather, George Diller, was in his day and generation the most noted auctioneer in Lancaster. His father, Samuel Diller, has long been identified with local industries as a manufacturing coppersmith, and, although in his eighty-first year, still carries on that business. Samuel Diller married Mary Rebecca Kantz, daughter of the late J. F. Kantz, a government contractor, who was the intimate friend of James Buchanan, President of the United States. Five children were born of this union, three of whom survive, as follows: George J., a cigar dealer of Lancaster; Samuel W., our subject; and Charles G., who is assisting his father in the coppersmithing business.

Samuel William Diller was born in Lancaster, Feb. 7, 1863, and received his education in the public schools. He left the high school to work at copersmithing with his father, remaining at that employment until January, 1899, when he was elected chief clerk of the county commissioners for one year, to fill an unexpired term. At the end of that time, by reason of his faithfulness and efficiency, he was re-elected for a term of three years, expiring on the first Monday in January, 1903.

Mr. Diller was married Dec. 11, 1886, to Miss Florence Beard, daughter of the late David F. Beard, of Lancaster. Mrs. Diller entered into rest June 15, 1900, leaving two children: May, who attends the Madame Cotta College; and Samuel W., Jr., also at school. Mr. Diller owns and occupies a comfortable home at No. 137 South Prince street. He is a member of the Artisans, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and the Blue Lodge and the Lodge of Perfection of the Masonic Fraternity. Religiously he is an Episcopalian, belonging to St. John's Episcopal Church. The Dillers have long connected with that denomination, in which some of the family have been prominent clergymen; a first cousin of Samuel W. Diller, Rev. Alonzo P. Diller, was among the victims of the terrible Johnstown flood. An intelligent and painstaking official, Mr. Diller has made hosts of friends as clerk of the county commissioners, a position that brings him in contact with great numbers of the most prominent people, and which calls for qualifications not necessary in performing the duties of an ordinary clerkship. All who have watched the affairs of the Lancaster county commissioners are free to admit, however, that Mr. Diller "is the right man in the right place."

HENRY R. BAIR, of Earl township, Lancaster county, belonged to a family which has been established in the country since about 1707, and worthily sustains an old and honored name. That year three brothers came from Germany, and settled in Earl township, near Ellsworth, or what is now known as Vici. Of these three, Jacob was the ancestor of Henry R. The three brothers took up a large tract of land in the southern part of Earl township, and making a clearing in the forest founded a home which to the present time has never wanted a Bair for an owner. It is said that when the Diffenderfers came into Lancaster county, they had hard fortunes, and Jacob Bair, the great-great-grandfather of Henry R., presented them with a cow, as a donation towards a fresh start in life. The Bair family were sturdy pioneers, honorable and industrious people, and early established a lasting reputation for honesty and integrity.

David Bair, the grandson of Jacob, noted above, is the next in the family line of whom anything definite is known. He and his wife, Barbara, were the grandparents of Henry R. Bair. He was a farmer, and died in 1848, at the age of eighty-one years. To this worthy couple were born nine children; William, Samuel, Martin, Isaac, David, Annie, Elizabeth, Rachel and Susan. This David Bair was a member of the Mennonite Church, and a man of character and standing in his day.

David Bair, noted as the fifth member of the above family of children, was born and reared in the vicinity of Ellsworth, where he spent his life, and died at the age of seventy-five years, in 1880. He kept close to the soil, and was a striking representative of the agricultural interests of Lancaster county. His landed possessions were quite extensive, and he became very prosperous. Magdalina Resh, his wife, was a daughter of Henry Resh, and was born in Leacock township, not far from Bird-in-Hand, on Jan. 21, 1810; she died Jan. 13, 1885. To them were born three children: Annie, who became the wife of Dr. Albright, of Lancaster, and died in 1871; Isaac, a resident of Philadelphia; and Henry R.

Henry R. Bair was born on the farm near Ellsworth, June 25, 1841, and when about twenty-two years of age began farming on the old homestead, where he remained some seven or eight years. About this time he sold out and went west to Darke county, Ohio, where he engaged in milling. After six months he was obliged to give it up on account of malaria, and returned to Lancaster county, to take up for a time the pump making business, putting out many of the "old common sense pumps" that are so numerous still in Lancaster county. For several years he was engaged in the ice business, erecting a large ice plant with a capacity for 1,000 tons. He did a wholesale business, and supplied New Holland and many other local points. His home, put up in 1875, was comfortable and pleasant, in everything indicated thrift and prosperity, and was one of the most attractive in the neighborhood.

Mr. Bair was married Dec. 31, 1864, to Miss Mary Bair, a daughter of John and Caroline (Eckert) Bair, of Upper Leacock township, where her parents lived.

John Bair was a farmer, and was also a drover, doing a large business, and was one of the prominent men of the county in his day. His death occurred in 1892. He was born in 1817. His wife was born Dec. 21, 1820, and died Feb. 7, 1887. They had a family of eight children: Levi, living in Lancaster; Mary, noted above as Mrs. Henry R. Bair; Elmira, the widow of John Royer, having her home in Leacock township; John T., who resides in Earl township; Caroline C., the wife of John Bair, and living in Leacock township; Anna M., the widow of David Kling, residing in Lancaster; George L., deceased; Rufus G., who lives in the West.

The grandparents of Mrs. Bair were George and Magdalina (Shaeffer) Bair. They were members of the Dunkard Church, and were farming people of Upper Leacock township.

Henry R. Bair and his wife had a family of six children who are living, and one who is dead: Elmira, the wife of Diller Honder, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Emma and Caroline, at home; Annie, the wife of Milton Jackson, of Coatesville; Miss Mary, who is a cigarmaker at Philoda, Pa.; Alta R., at home. Mrs. Bair and her daughters belong to the United Brethren Church.

Mr. Bair was a Republican, and served by appointment for one year as a justice of the peace. The old family burying ground in Earl township, near the village of Ellsworth, where the family for many generations have been laid to rest, was incorporated under the name of the Bair Cemetery Association, Henry R. Bair being president, J. D. Bair being secretary, and Aaron H. Bair, treasurer. The fund for the preservation and maintenance of the cemetery, $250.00, was donated by William Bair, an uncle of Henry R. Mr. Bair died Jan. 31, 1902.

MARTIN R. GOOD, a prominent citizen and well-known farmer of Salisbury township, was born in New Holland, Pa., July 16, 1843, son of Michael and Ann M. (Ranck) Good, this family being one of the old and honorable ones of Lancaster county. (More extended mention will be found in another part of this volume.)

Since he was ten years old, Mr. Good has taken care of himself, at that early age beginning to work among the neighboring farmers. He then learned the saddler trade and worked at it in various localities, at intervals, for twenty-five years. He spent one year at the trade in New Milltown, several months at Hinkletown, a few months at Philadelphia and then was at Blue Ball, Pa., where he worked until June, 1863. At this time he enlisted for a three months' service in the army, being discharged seven weeks later, in Reading, having been connected with the 47th P. V. He then went to Washington city and acted as night watchman in the Quartermaster's department for a few months, afterwards returning to Blue Ball, where he lived until Sept. 10, 1864, when he re-enlisted, entering Company K, 199th Regiment, P. V., for a one-year term, and was sent to the army then located near Richmond. He saw some hard service during this time, participating in all the battles of the regiment in the front of Petersburg, Bush River, Rice's Station, Farmville and Appomatox, and was mustered out of service at Richmond, Va., receiving his honorable discharge in July, 1865, at Philadelphia. After his discharge from the army, he went to New Holland, Pa., and for twenty years was engaged in the harness business in that place.

After his marriage, Mr. Good moved near Cambridge and engaged in tobacco culture for one year, moving to his present farm, in the spring of 1887. This valuable property comprises seventy-two acres and he has placed it under fine cultivation, making it not only a comfortable home, but a profit producing piece of property. He is a Republican in his political sympathy, while fraternally he is connected with the K. of P., being a P. C., and with the I. O. O. F., both lodge and encampment in this order, being a P. C. P. in the latter. Although he does not belong to the Reformed Church, he accompanies his wife, who is a member, and is one of the liberal supporters.

On March 9, 1886, at Anselma, in Chester county, Pa., Mr. Good was married to Rebecca E. Davis, and a little daughter Ann M. was born to this union, Oct. 28, 1890; she died in infancy. Mrs. Good was born in Uwchland township, Chester county, daughter of Madison and Ann (March) Davis, of Chester county, the former of whom was a successful farmer, who was born in 1813, and died in 1863. His wife survived until 1890, dying at the age of seventy-three years. They were members of the German Reformed Church. Their children were: Mary A., the widow of Jerome March, who lives with Mr. Good; Amanda, who died in infancy; Lavina, who died in 1899, the wife of Thomas Garber; Emma E., who married Penrose H. Emrey, a dairy farmer of Cambridge, Pa.; Maggie, who died in Kansas, May 12, 1894, the wife of John W. Barrett; Rebecca, the wife of Mr. Good; Ella R., who married John W. Overdorf, a farmer in Chester county, and who died Feb. 3, 1902; and Louis R., who died in 1885.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Good were Roland and Rebecca (Keely) Davis, of Chester county, where Mr. Davis was a farmer. He was of Welsh extraction. On the maternal side, the grandparents were farming people of German extraction, Nicholas and Elizabeth (Emrey) March.

Mr. Good is very well known in his community and enjoys in marked degree the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens. Taking great pride in farming, and being a great reader of modern agricultural literature, he keeps well posted on all the latest topics, as well as experimenting a great deal on his farm. He is well in the front rank of his profession, so much so that his advice and counsel are often sought by his neighbors and friends, who place great confidence in him on all such matters.

JOHN KAUFFMAN WISLER, ex-deputy sheriff of Lancaster county, and now interested in the Lancaster Realty Company, at Nos. 18-22 East Orange street, is one of the best known men in Lancaster.

Mr. Wisler's great-great-grandfather came to America from Germany, so the family is a very old one in this country. His grandfather, John Wisler, who was a farmer of Montgomery county, Pa., long ago entered into rest. Mr. Wisler's father, Jomas Wisler, although now almost eighty years old, is actively engaged at farming in Drumore township, Lancaster county. Jomas Wisler married Fanny Kauffman, daughter of Henry Kauffman, a prominent farmer of Manor township, and eleven children were born to them, of whom seven are living, as follows: Frank, a retired resident of Lancaster; Mary, wife of William Henry, a farmer of Providence township, this county; Jacob, a tobacco farmer of East Hempfield; Rachel, wife of George Shenk, of Lancaster city; Lavina, wife of David Martin, of Ephrata; Salinda, widow of Frederick Shoff, and now keeping house for her venerable father; and John Kauffman.

John Kauffman Wisler was born in Montgomery county, Pa., April 18, 1859, and, his parents having removed to Lancaster county, he was educated in the public schools of East Hempfield township. At the age of thirteen years he left school and went to work on his father's farm, remaining there until he was twenty-eight years old, when he married and went to farming on his own account, in Drumore township. There he remained four years. Tiring of farming, Mr. Wisler came to Lancaster, and, after serving one year as under keeper in the Lancaster county prison, became a deputy sheriff, remaining in that responsible position for six years under Sheriffs Hershey and Myers. We next find him an auctioneer for Moore & Rudey, the real estate dealers; then he became successor to Mr. Rudey, retired, and for a time was a partner of the auctioneer branch of the business. On the formation of the Lancaster Realty Company, Mr. Wisler became interested again in the auctioneering branch of the business, and so remains, having succeeded in building up an immense trade. It is not denied that Mr. Wisler has conducted more sales, during the years he has been in business, than has any other auctioneer in the city in the same period.

Mr. Wisler married Miss Lizzie Blotenberger, daughter of Christian Blotenberger, a prosperous farmer of East Hempfield township, and two children were born of the union, Eva and Chester, both of whom are attending school. Religiously Mr. Wisler is of the New Mennonite Church; socially he belongs to the Jr. O. U. A. M.; politically he is a Republican; and politically, socially and personally, ex-deputy sheriff John K. Wisler is a justly popular man.

SAMUEL G. GENSEMER, who died April 24, 1896, was a pioneer in the modern building improvements of North Queen street, Lancaster. He erected the commodious store and dwelling now in the possession of Mrs. Gensemer, at a time when it took courage to erect such a large and costly building. He was also one of the promoters of the Northern Market, and was at one time an extensive stockholder there. After coming to Lancaster, Mr. Gensemer kept the "Washington Hotel" for three years, and then successfully engaged in the wine and liquor business for thirty-two years. He was very popular in business and social circles, and no man in the community died more lamented.

Mrs. Gensemer was, in her maidenhood, Mary A. Stauffer, daughter of the late Daniel Stauffer, a farmer of Manor township, and his wife, Martha Martin, daughter of Samuel Martin, a farmer of Drumore township, and a member of a long-lived family. Mrs. Stauffer is now eighty-six years of age, one of nine children, seven of whom are living, among these are two pairs of twins, the oldest pair being now eighty-three years old and the youngest two, seventy-three. Mrs. Gensemer's grandfather died at the age of eighty-five years, and her grandmother at the age of eighty-two. In Daniel Stauffer's family was one pair of twins. Mary A. Stauffer was married to Samuel G. Gensemer, in 1862, and their union was blessed with two children: George, who died in infancy; and Emily, the wife of Samuel King, who, for the past nineteen years, has been engaged in the lumber business in Elizabethtown, N. C. Mrs. King entered into rest when her daughter, Emily Gensemer King, was only seventeen days old. From that day to this, Miss Emily has made her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Gensemer, who has shown her all the love and tender care that her now sainted mother could have given; she is in the class of 1903, Girls' High School, Lancaster.

Mrs. Gensemer is an earnest member of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, and being possessed of a gentle, kindly nature, has hosts of friends. She resides in the large and handsome home which her husband built at No. 251 North Queen street.

JOHN SHENBERGER (deceased), through the years of his identification with Columbia, enjoyed the highest respect of his fellow townsmen by reason of his strict integrity and sterling worth. He was an upright and honorable business man and the prosperity that crowned his efforts was certainly well deserved. His devotion to the public welfare also made him a valued factor in public life, and in his death, Columbia was deprived of one of her best citizens.

Mr. Shenberger was born at Margaretta Furnace, York Co., Pa., Nov. 20, 1827, a son of George and Margaret (Poff) Shenberger, of that county, where the father died in 1840, aged about thirty-eight years, the mother in 1893, aged ninety-one years. At the time of her death the latter was living with her son in Columbia, but visiting in York county. The children of the family were: Sarah, widow of Henry Graybel and a resident of Hellam, York county; Mary, wife of Henry Reisinger; Margaret, deceased wife of Benjamin Kaufman; John; Eliza, deceased wife of Adam Goodman; and George, deceased.

The boyhood and youth of John Shenberger were passed on the home farm until fifteen years of age, when he came to Columbia and served an apprenticeship with John Shuman, a cabinetmaker and undertaker. On attaining his majority, he bought out his employer, John Shuman, and began business for himself along those lines, but in 1880 commenced handling carpets and furniture and devoted his attention to those lines and to undertaking until his death.

Mr. Shenberger was three times married, his first wife being Martha Wilson, who died leaving no children. His second wife was Eliza Schroder, a native of York county, who died in 1861, at the age of twenty-seven years. There were three children born of this union, but John died at the age of thirty years, and Mary E. at the age of twelve. The only one now living is William H., who succeeded his father in business, and now conducts a large furniture, undertaking and carpet establishment in Columbia. He is one of the most progressive and prominent business men of the city.

On Nov. 12, 1862, in Middletown, Del., Mr. Shenberger married Miss Anna J. B. Layton, who was born in Newcastle county, in that State, a daughter of Albert and Lydia A. (Straughen) Layton, natives of Salem county, N. J. Her father, who was a prominent farmer, died at the age of fifty-seven years, her mother at the age of sixty-seven. Both were active and faithful members of the M. E. Church. In their family were the following children: Hiram and Rachel, both deceased; Safety, a M. E. minister, who died in a hospital on Staten Island while returning from Mexico; Thomas, a car manufacturer of Wilmington, Del.; Lydia, widow of John Cleaver and a resident of Clayton, Del.; Albert and Nathan, deceased; Margaret E., who spent eight years as a missionary at Calcutta, India, and then returned home, but four years later went to Cawnpore, India, where she died of cholera; and Anna J. B., now Mrs. Shenberger.

Mr. Shenberger died Nov. 12, 1895, and was laid to rest in Mt. Bethel cemetery, Columbia. As a Republican, he took an active interest in political affairs, and served as chief Burgess of Columbia one year. Fraternally he was Master Mason, and also a member of the Artisans and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Encampment. He was an active and prominent member of the M. E. Church of Columbia, and was connected with the official board during his entire relation with the church. His life was manly, his actions sincere, and his example well worthy of emulation. His estimable wife is also an active worker in the church, and has been corresponding secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society for the past seventeen years.

EMANUEL P. HOSTETTER, a successful florist of Manheim, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born on the old homestead about a half mile from that place, Oct. 6, 1856, a son of David and Maria (Piffer) Hostetter, also natives of Lancaster county, and representatives of two of its old families. The former was born on the old homestead near Manheim, the latter near Petersburg. It is supposed that the paternal grandfather, Rev. Jacob Hostetter, was also born on the old homestead, as he was a native of this county, and made his home there throughout life. He was a very ambitious man and very successful. Being a natural mechanic, he made some of his own farm machinery and wagons, also did tailoring and shoemaking, and later in life made baskets, but farming claimed the greater part of his attention. He was a minister of the Mennonite Church many years, and served as bishop in the same. His wife, Elizabeth Miller, was also a native of Lancaster county.

David Hostetter, father of Emanuel P., was educated in the common schools, and during his active business life engaged in farming on the old homestead, where he died in 1885 at the age of sixty-nine years, three months, twenty-two days, his wife in 1898, at the age of seventy-eight years, eleven months and nineteen days. They were devoted to their family and were people of the highest respectability. They had ten children who grew to maturity, namely: Jacob P., now deceased, long engaged in farming near Lancaster Junction, but living a quiet, retired life near Manheim at the time of his death; Lizzie, the wife of Henry N. Eby, of Salunga, Lancaster county; Josiah, deceased, a farmer near Manheim; Abraham, a florist of Manheim; David M., a retired farmer, green house vegetable grower and florist, of Marshalltown, Iowa; Sarah A., a resident of Manheim; Nathan, a farmer living one mile from that place; Emanuel P.; Cephas, a farmer living near Manheim; and Benjamin F., a farmer and truck gardener of Lancaster.

During his boyhood Emanuel P. Hostetter attended the public schools and remained on the home farm until after the death of his father, when he came to Manheim and engaged in the trucking business for several years. In 1890 he commenced cultivating carnations and violets in a small way, erecting two green houses, 50x9 ft., but ere long he found his accommodations were not adequate to meet the demands of his constantly increasing business and he was compelled to enlarge his plant, which is now one of the finest in this section of the State. He has erected additional buildings from time to time, and now has between 70,000 and 75,000 feet of glass in his greenhouses. He raises carnations, violets, sweet peas, mignonette, pansies and vegetable plants, and finds a ready market for his goods in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Lebanon, Reading, Allegheny and Pittsburg. He grows annually as many as 45,000 plants, and devotes his entire time and attention to his business. Although he began as a novice, he has developed into a first class florist. Mr. Hostetter is also a stockholder and director of the Manheim & Lancaster Turnpike, and is a man of marked business and executive ability, energetic and progressive. In his political affiliations he is a Republican, and has efficiently served as a member of the city council.

MICHAEL SCHAIBLEY, a prominent wheelwright and successful business man of Columbia, Pa., was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, Jan. 18, 1845, a son of Conrad and Catherine (Deitz) Schaibley, also natives of Wurtemberg, where the father successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1866, when they came to America and took up their residence in Columbia, Pa., living retired throughout the remainder of his life. He died in 1875, at the age of seventy-five years, his wife in 1868, at the age of eighty-eight, and both were buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery, Columbia. They were earnest members of the Lutheran Church and were held in high regard by all who knew them. Of their twelve children four died in infancy and the others were as follows: Jacob, who died in Lancaster, Pa.; Mary, wife of John J. W. Duttenhofer, who is living retired in that city; Conrad, a farmer of Lancaster county; Catherine, wife of John Pfeffer, a retired resident of Columbia; Sophia, who married first Philip Hagert and second Conrad Myers and died in 1869; Margaret, who married John Metzger and died in Germany; Regina, who married Nicholas Wholes and died in Lancaster, Pa.; and Michael, who is mentioned below.

During his boyhood Michael Schaibley attended the public schools of his native land. Bidding good-bye to home and friends, he came to the New World alone, at the age of fifteen years and located in Columbia, Pa., where he served a three years' apprenticeship to the wagonmaker's trade with J. W. Duttenhofer. In March, 1863, during the dark days of the Civil war, he went to Washington, D. C., and entered the government service as a wagonmaker, and remained there until May 30, 1864, when he was transferred to the division of the army then stationed in front of Petersburg, where he remained until discharged, June 16, 1865. Returning to Columbia, Mr. Schaibley continued to work for Mr. Duttenhofer until April 1, 1867, when he purchased the business and has since carried it on with marked success.

On Feb. 20, 1867, in Columbia, Mr. Schaibley married Miss Dora Stetter, and to them were born five children, namely: William, who died at the age of three years and four months; Charles W., who married Mary E. Elden and is conducting a five and ten cent department store in Waynesboro, Pa.; Harry S., who died in 1880; and Emma R. and Edith M., at home. Mrs. Schaibley was born in the Grand Duchy of Hessen, Germany, June 30, 1849, and was brought to the United States in 1862 by her parents, William and Margaret Stetter, also natives of Germany, who located in Columbia, Pa. The father, who was a shoemaker by trade, died in that city in 1872, at the age of sixty-nine years, but the mother is still living at the age of ninety and now makes her home with Mr. Schaibley. Their children were Hannah, wife of Philip Habel, of Columbia; Elizabeth, wife of Michael Beinhauer, of the same place; Mary, wife of Joseph Grab, of Germany; William, a railroad engineer of Columbia, Pa.; and Dora, wife of Michael Schaibley of this review.

Mr. Schaibley affiliates with the Republican party, is a Lutheran in religious belief, and in his social relations is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge and Encampment, and the Heptasophs. His business interests have been so managed as to win him the confidence of the public and the prosperity which should always attend honorable effort, for he has led an upright and useful life.

JOHN H. BAILEY, one of the prominent engineers in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and a highly esteemed citizen of Columbia, was born June 3, 1857, in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pa., of which county his parents, John H. and Catherine (Albright) Bailey, were also natives. The father was a farmer by occupation and one of the prominent and influential citizens of his community, filling several township offices, such as assessor, tax collector and supervisor. His religious belief was more in accordance with the doctrines of the Baptist Church, while his wife held membership in the M. E. Church. He died in Chester county, June 4, 1871, aged forty-seven years, and she departed this life at Gap, Lancaster county, May 24, 1884, aged fifty-eight. In the family of this worthy couple were six children, all of whom are now deceased, with the exception of John H., the fourth in order of birth. The others were Sarah A., wife of Samuel McDonald; Salinda, who died in infancy; Catherine, wife of Adam Wise; Benjamin F.; and Elizabeth L., wife of George Brown.

Mr. Bailey, whose name introduces this review, was reared on a farm, and at the age of fifteen commenced operating a threshing machine, being thus employed for a few years. In 1879 he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in the humble capacity of water carrier for the trackman, and on his removal to Columbia was given a position as brakeman, serving as such until 1884, when he commenced firing on an engine. On May 9, 1892, he was promoted to engineer, and is today one of the most careful and painstaking engineers on the road.

On March 1, 1881, in Columbia, Mr. Bailey was united in marriage with Miss Ida R. Martin, and to them were born five children, namely: Maud M.; Haslett, deceased; John H., Jr.; James J.; and Charles E., deceased. Mrs. Bailey was born in Newville, Cumberland Co., Pa., Feb. 28, 1859, a daughter of James and Rachel (Guestwite) Martin, also natives of Cumberland county, whence they came to Lancaster county in June, 1859, locating in Columbia, where the father engaged in teaming until killed on the Pennsylvania Railroad Feb. 24, 1880, at the age of forty-eight years. The mother, who was born March 17, 1837, moved to Lancaster, Pa., in May, 1900, and there she now makes her home. Mrs. Bailey is the oldest of their children, the others being Johnson S., a railroad conductor of Columbia; Cora A., who is the widow of John Eys and lives with Mr. and Mrs. Bailey; George B., a railroad conductor of Camden, N. J.; Mary A., wife of Harry Heckinger, of Columbia; James H., a molder of Columbia; Elizabeth C., a silk weaver of Lancaster; Martha E., at home with her mother; and Charles E., a druggist of Philadelphia, Pa. Mrs. Bailey's paternal grandparents, Johnson and Mary (Baker) Martin, were natives of Cumberland and York counties, Pa., respectively, and farming people, while her maternal grandparents, Moses and Elizabeth (Brady) Guestwite, were both natives of Cumberland county.

Faternally Mr. Bailey is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, the Pennsylvania Relief Association, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Independent Order of Heptasophs; and politically he is identified with the Democratic party. He has always been found true to every trust reposed in him, whether public or private and is justly entitled to the high regard in which he is uniformly held.

ISRAEL MANUEL, a prominent conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, whose home is in Columbia, Pa., was born in Silver Springs, Lancaster county, Oct. 28, 1859. His parents, Isaac and Anna (Meiskey) Manuel, were natives of Dauphin and Lancaster counties, respectively, and were married near Silver Springs, where they made their home until 1882 and then removed to Columbia. The father, who was a farmer by occupation and served as constable in West Hempfield township for three years, died Sept. 13, 1884, at the age of sixty-four years, and the mother departed this life Feb. 19, 1892, at the age of sixty, their remains being interred in Mt. Bethel cemetery. She was an earnest member of the Mennonite Church. The children of the family were: Rebecca, wife of William Strebig, of Columbia; Elizabeth, widow of George Fry and a resident of Columbia; Anna, wife of Samuel G. Rooth, of the same place; Israel, the subject of this review; Aaron, a resident of Columbia; Elmer and Clayton, both deceased; Josiah, a railroad brakeman and a resident of Jersey City, N. J.; and Sarah, wife of David Nolte, of Columbia.

Israel Manuel was reared in much the usual manner of farmer boys of his day, and remained on the home farm until 1880, when he came to Columbia and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman, in which capacity he served for two years. During the following two years he was flagman and brakeman, and in 1884 was made regular flagman, serving as such until promoted to conductor in Jan., 1888, since which time he has filled that position in a most creditable and acceptable manner.

At Columbia, in April, 1885, Mr. Manuel married Miss Catherine Witmer, a native of Little Washington, Lancaster county, and a daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Seiple) Witmer, who were also born in Little Washington, and there the father, a miller by trade, died in 1880, at the age of forty-two years. The mother is still living at the age of fifty-eight years, and now makes her home in Columbia. Both held membership in the Church of God. Their children were: Alberta, wife of John English, a railroad engineer of Columbia; Alice, who died at the age of nine years; Catherine, now Mrs. Manuel; William and Harry, both residents of Columbia; George, a machinist of the same place; Esther, wife of Charles Hull, of Columbia; and Lettie. Mrs. Manuel's paternal grandparents were Jacob and Martha (Huber) Witmer, who were born in Lancaster county, and died in the city of Lancaster. The grandfather was a miller by trade. The maternal grandparents, William and Lucy (Olds) Seiple, were also born in Lancaster county and died in Washington, this State. Mr. Seiple was a farmer by occupation.

Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Manuel, namely: Ella, Lucy, Anna, Harry W., Lettie and Helen, all at home; Ralph, Catherine and Raymond, who died in infancy; and Ethel, at home. Mr. Manuel is a member of the Church of God. He belongs to the Pennsylvania Relief Department, and in his political affiliations, is a Republican. He is a man of exemplary habits, commendable purpose and unbending integrity, and in all life's relations merits the confidence so freely accorded him.

SQUIRE S. C. BAER. A career of usefulness as an educator, a manufacturer, a justice and a public spirited citizen, marks the subject of this sketch as one of the important factors in the upbuilding of Quarryville, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he has made his home for many years.

Mr. Baer was born in Mechanicsville, Lancaster county, Dec. 25, 1856. His parents were Henry M. and Fannie (Kauffman) Baer, who were both born in Lancaster county, the former in 1813, and his wife in 1820.

The Baers came of German parentage while the Kauffmans have a Swiss origin. For half a century the father of our subject was well known and popular among travelers who used the old pike between Lancaster and Manheim. It was here he made his home, keeping a hotel and working at his trade, that of blacksmithing, until his death in 1890, his worthy wife having preceded him in 1884. They raised a family of eight children, four of whom are living. Andrew Baer was born in 1841, and married Mary Blontz, of Brickerville, Lancaster county, and settled at Lancaster city, where he was manager of the "Cooper House" until his death in 1879. He left a wife and two sons, Edward and Milton. Malinda Baer was born in 1843, and married John H. Hollinger, of Lancaster city, where they resided at the time of her death in 1898, leaving her husband and two sons. The elder of these, Walter B. Hollinger, is one of the auditors of the Reading Railroad, and resides in Philadelphia. John W. Hollinger is a New York traveling man. Mariah L. Baer was born in 1845, at the old homestead. She is the deceased wife of Amos Minich, who settled near his wife's home on a farm. She left one daughter, Fannie B., of Manheim. Amelia A. Baer was born in 1847, at the old home, where she grew to womanhood, and married Jacob M. Baker, of Lancaster county. They resided at Lititz, where she died in 1894, leaving four children: Florence, a teacher in the public schools of Lancaster county; Joseph, a student in the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, where he is preparing for the ministry; May, a resident of Lititz, and a graduate of the local schools; and Helen, who has remained at home. Henry Baer was born in 1850. He married Miss Mary Lee, who resided in the same county. They live in the town of Manheim. They have one daughter, Nora V., the wife of John S. Matter, a teacher in the Manheim schools. They have two daughters, Edith and Lillian. John F. Baer was born in November, 1852, and married Miss Fannie Gingrich, of Lancaster county. They reside on the old homestead. Two daughters, Leona and Grace blessed this union. Edwin K. Baer was born in 1859, and married Miss Katie Wolf, of Lancaster. They reside at Lancaster City, where for a number of years he manufactured cigars. He is now manager for a Lancaster cigar firm at Lititz, Pa. He has one son, Edwin.

The subject of this sketch, S. C. Baer, grew to manhood at the old home, where he attended the district schools and laid the foundations for a wider and deeper knowledge. Later he spent some time in the Manheim select schools, preparing for the higher branches. Here he developed a taste for teaching and soon decided upon a career as a teacher. In 1875 he attended the State Normal School, at Millersville, and further prepared himself for teaching. For twenty years he has been one of the successful teachers of Lancaster county. Two years of this time he was school director in one of the districts. In 1877 he married Miss Lizzie G. Swarr, the estimable daughter of Jacob and Maria (Groff) Swarr, members of the pioneer and prominent families. Mrs. Baer was born near Lancaster City, in August, 1858, and grew to womanhood in this county, receiving a fair education in the district schools. Mrs. Baer and one brother, Levi G. Swarr, are all that is left of this old family. Our subject first settled in East Drumore township, where he resumed his profession of teaching in the local schools. Eight years of success followed, and in 1885 he purchased real estate in Quarryville, and he erected a good house. Here he resumed teaching, continuing until 1898. In 1892 he was appointed by the Governor of Pennsylvania to fill a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace. In this important capacity he has served the people to the present time, discharging his duties conscientiously and faithfully, in accordance with the letter of the law and with justice to the people. Squire Baer is the father of three children: Charles C. Baer, the eldest, was born in East Drumore township, in 1880. He graduated from the Millersville State Normal School in 1898, being one of the youngest graduates of that school in years. After serving two years as druggist under Dr. Rohrer, of Quarryville, he entered the School of Pharmacy in Philadelphia. Both at home and abroad Mr. Baer has been recognized as a bright and scholarly young man, a worthy son of his father. Annie L. Baer, the second child, was born in December, 1887. She is now a student in the high school, junior class, of Quarryville. Edna M. Baer was born in October, 1892.

Our subject was always identified with the Republicans, his father having been a Whig in the early days of the party. Religiously Squire Baer and his wife have for many years been identified with the Reformed Church of Quarryville, where they have taken an active part in church work, Mr. Baer being an elder, a member of the choir and secretary of the Sunday-school and other church organizations. He is one of Quarryville's foremost citizens in church and school work, and a man honored and respected by his fellow townsmen.

JOHN JACOB SHERTS, who for the third part of a century has been a dealer in groceries and general merchandise in Lancaster, his present place of business being at the corner of East King and Ann streets, comes of an ancestry in this country antedating the Revolutionary war. The first of the name in America were three brothers who came from Germany some time prior to the Revolution, and one of these, by name Jacob, was the grandfather of John Jacob Sherts. A farmer by occupation, he settled on a large tract of land in what was then Paradise township, in the eastern part of Lancaster county. Henry Sherts, son of Jacob, and the father of John J., was also an agriculturist. He married Miss Elizabeth Pickel, of Bart township, daughter of a well-known farmer of that locality, and seven children were born of this union, five of whom are yet living: J. H., a farmer of Strasburg township; Anna, widow of Isaac Esbenshade, a farmer of Paradise township; Miss Elizabeth and Miss Rebecca, both living in the borough of Strasburg; and John Jacob.

John Jacob Sherts, whose name opens this sketch, was born in March, 1845, on the old homestead in Paradise township, Lancaster county, Pa. After attending the public schools and, for a time, the State Normal School at Millersville, in 1863, he entered the Union army. For eight months he served in Co. I, 20th Pa. Cavalry, his brother, J. H. being at the same time in Gen. Stoneman's cavalry corps. Mr. Sherts' horse fell on him, inflicting a painful injury to his right leg, but otherwise he escaped hurt of any kind. On his return from the army he carried on farming for several years in Lampeter township, Lancaster county, and then embarked in a mercantile business in Strasburg, conducting it successfully until 1894, in which year he removed to the city of Lancaster. Here he opened a grocery store at the corner of East King and Plum streets, where he remained until March, 1898, at that time purchasing the Hopkins property (with a dwelling house thereon) at the corner of East King and Ann streets. This he converted into a grocery store and dwelling combined, adding many improvements, and making it one of the most attractive corners in the East end of the city. The ground of this property extended for half a block south, along Ann street, and at the southern end of this tract Mr. Sherts built six of the finest two-story mansard-roofed dwellings in the city, three of which he sold shortly after completion.

On Nov. 17, 1868, Mr. Sherts married Miss Catherine J. Withers, daughter of George Withers, a retired farmer living in Willow street, Lancaster county, who later removed to 27 S. Lime street, Lancaster City. The first of the Withers family in this country was Augustine Wither (as the name was then spelled), two of whose sons served in the war of the Revolution, a third son being employed by the Federal government as a gunsmith. Augustine Wither, who died in 1766, had evidently, judging from records, been in this country a long time prior to his decease, though the exact date of his coming has never been fully determined.

To Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sherts were born five children, one of whom, J. Clarence, died in September, 1895. A brief record of the others is as follows: Elizabeth and Ann C. are graduates from the Girls' High School of Lancaster; G. Howard learned the art of printing, but is now connected with his father's store; and H. H. is a coach trimmer. With the exception of one daughter, who is a Lutheran, the creed of her mother's people, all the family, including the parents, are Presbyterians. Socially Mr. Sherts is affiliated with the F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F., also with Capt. Neff post, G. A. R., and it may be truly said of him that no man in the community ranks higher in all that pertains to good citizenship.

Among the treasured heirlooms of his ancestors Mr. Sherts prizes none more highly than an encyclopedia, a large and copiously illustrated volume printed in the German language in 1560, and brought to this country by one of the three brothers already mentioned. These brothers secured a grant of land from the Penns and one of them served in the war of the Revolution, his sword and pistol being still in the possession of his descendants.

HARRY A. BENNETT, a native of Columbia, Pa., was born May 10, 1857, and is one of the most trustworthy locomotive engineers in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. On another page of this work a full biographical record is given of his parents, Joseph M., and Frances N. Bennett, and it is therefore unnecessary to speak further of them at this point.

Harry A. Bennett, after leaving school in Columbia at the age of fourteen years, went to work for six months in Purple's brickyard, and then clerked for two and a half years in a general store, after which he worked in the Susquehanna Rolling Mill nine months. Dec. 4, 1878, he began braking for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and on Nov. 8, 1879, was made a fireman, in which capacity he faithfully labored until Aug. 16, 1886, when he was promoted to his present responsible position of engineer.

Mr. Bennett was joined in marriage, in Columbia, Feb. 12, 1880, with Miss Mary M. Speckenbach, who was born in Columbia Feb. 2, 1859, and is a daughter of Peter and Margaret (Butt) Speckenbach, natives of Germany, but married in Columbia, Pa. Peter Speckenbach was a laborer, and to his marriage with Margaret Butt there were born six children, as follows: John, deceased; Mary, now Mrs. Bennett; Frederick, Henry, Anna and John, all of Columbia. The father of this family died in 1889, at the age of seventy-two years, and the mother in 1894, when sixty-four years old. The children that have blessed the marriage of Harry A. Bennett and wife are seven in number and are named Joseph F., William E., Fannie L., Frederick P. (deceased), Maggie E., Mary I., and Harry T. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, in the faith of which they rear their children.

In politics Mr. Bennett is a Democrat, and has been a member of the town council for the past two years. He has always been filled with a spirit of enterprise for the good of the public and was one of the original citizens to encourage the people to take the step that resulted in the Columbia Centennial celebration in 1888. He is a member of the I. O. R. M., of the B. of L. F., of the B. of L. E., of the Pennsylvania Relief; he is also a member of the board of managers and a trustee of the P. R. R. Y. M. C. A. He and his family live on their own premises, and enjoy to the full the esteem of all who know them.

LEMON S. LANDIS. One of the most thrifty and successful florists in Pennsylvania is Lemon S. Landis, proprietor of the East End Green Houses, near Lancaster. This popular center of floral supply has a more than local reputation, for the products of its gigantic green houses are shipped for the greater part to Pittsburg, Harrisburg, Philadelphia and New York. In their greatest perfection enormous quantities of roses, violets, carnations and other standard flowers are reared in the three houses, each covered with fifteen thousand feet of glass.

A native of Lancaster county, Pa., Mr. Landis was born at the City Mill Farm, Lancaster township, Feb. 12, 1869, and is a son of Eli and Mary A. (Johns) Landis, and grandson of Abraham Landis, the latter a farmer of Swiss extraction. Eli Landis was also a farmer in Lancaster county, and came to an untimely death through a run away team in 1875, at the age of thirty-eight years. His wife died at the home of her son, Lemon S., in the east end of Lancaster City, April 17, 1900, at the age of fifty-two years. The parents are buried in Meltinger's cemetery. Besides Lemon S., who was the oldest in the family, there were born Minnie, the wife of attorney A. S. Johns, of Lancaster; and Lizzie, the wife of Luther Able.

Lemon S. Landis was reared to an agricultural life, and when thirteen years of age entered the employ of A. D. Rohrer and brother, under whose capable instruction he mastered every detail of the florist business. In 1892 he started a business along the same line on his own responsibility, and two years later entered a partnership with his former employer, Mr. Rohrer. The same year he married Elizabeth Groff, daughter of Harry E. Groff, a well driller. Mr. Groff does a large business in his line, employs six men and drills wells all over the State. Mr. Landis is a Republican in politics, and is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is progressive and enlightened, and adds to a pleasing personality and honest name an exhaustive insight into his delightful and remunerative occupation.

HARRY E. GROFF, justice of the peace and well driller, residing on the outskirts of Lancaster City, was born in Detroit, Mich., Dec. 7, 1849, a son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Griffin) Groff, natives, respectively, of Lancaster county, Pa., and the state of Maine. Abraham Groff left Lancaster when a boy and settled in Detroit, Mich., where he engaged in the drug business until 1872. He then returned to Lancaster and continued his former occupation until three years prior to his death, in 1900, at the age of seventy-six years. His last days were spent with his daughter, Carrie, in comparative retirement, in Wilmington, Del. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Groff came to Lancaster in 1867 and up to 1887 engaged in the carpenter business. He then became interested in well drilling, of which he has made a distinct success, his services being in demand in this and surrounding States. He is a careful, painstaking workman, and understands all there is to know about his business. A Republican in national politics, Mr. Groff was elected justice of the peace in 1890, and has served continuously ever since. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and is one of the upright and reliable members of the community.

JACOB D. HERSHEY, M. D., a young and popular physician and surgeon of Manheim, Pa., is a native of Lancaster county, born in Mountville March 31, 1875, and a son of Jacob R. and Catherine Hershey, of that place. He had good educational advantages, attending first the public schools and later the Millersville Normal. In 1893 he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Martin Ringwalt, and a year later entered the University of Pennsylvania, where he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in the class of 1898. Soon after his graduation Dr. Hershey located in Manheim and opened an office. He now has a well established practice which is constantly increasing, and he is meeting with marked success in his chosen calling.

He is a member of the Lancaster County Medical Society, and the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and also affiliates with the Knights of Malta, Odd Fellows and Free and Accepted Masons. He belongs to the Republican party. Socially he is a whole-souled, genial gentleman who makes many friends, and is held in high regard by all who know him.

The Doctor was married, Nov. 15, 1898, to Miss Elizabeth McBride, a native of Philadelphia, and a daughter of the late J. F. McBride.

EDGAR L. McSPARRAN. The McSparran family is one of the oldest in Lancaster county, and was founded by one James McSparran, who emigrated from the north of Ireland, and with his wife, a representative of the Fleming family, settled near Peach Bottom. He had an enormous family, and his son, James, was born on the old homestead in 1764, married Elenor Neel, daughter of Thomas and Gresall (Penny) Neel, and died March 18, 1827. Mrs. Elenor (Neel) McSparran died Aug. 12, 1841, and was laid to rest beside her husband in the old cemetery near the Presbyterian Church at Chestnut Level, to which all the family are faithful adherents. There were fifteen children born to this union. (1) James and (2) Isabella Fleming (twins), were born May 25, 1801, of whom James married Amelia F. McCollough March 8, 1832, and died May 31, 1863. His widow owned the fine old homestead farm, where she lived with her daughter, Lizzie (since deceased) and son, Thomas, who now owns the place. Isabella married John King April 26, 1827, and died Dec. 14, 1871. Of her daughters, Ellen married B. F. Sides, M. D., and Jeanette married Sanders McCollough. (3) Thomas Neel was born March 6, 1803, and died March 28, 1820. (4) Gresall, born Oct. 31, 1804, married Samuel Morrison June 2, 1831, and died Dec. 31, 1856. (5) Eliza Martha, born Sept. 12, 1806, married James Barnes July 26, 1827, and died Oct. 5, 1853. (6) John, born July 15, 1808. (7) Elenor Jean, born Feb. 15, 1810, was the second wife of James Barnes, and died Sept. 22, 1874. (8) Rachel Neel, born Feb. 4, 1812, died Aug. 28, 1819. (9) Margaret, born Dec. 8, 1813, married William Steele and died May 27, 1866. (10) Samuel, born Nov. 20, 1815, was accidentally shot by his brother, James, Feb. 18, 1837. (11) Fleming McSparran, born Sept. 12, 1817, is mentioned below. (12) Thomas Neel and (13) William, twins, were born Nov. 20, 1820. Thomas married Lydiann Pusey, sister of the wife of Fleming. William married Alice, daughter of James Caldwell, Esq., who lived but a short time after her marriage. He married again, his second wife being Marcilena Williamson. (14) Joseph was born June 26, 1823, and died July 24, 1834. (15) Rachel, born March 7, 1827.

Fleming McSparran was ten years old when his father died, and James Penny, who was appointed his guardian, apprenticed him when he reached the age of sixteen to William Eves, of Chester county, Pa., for two and a half years, to learn "the art, trade and mysteries of tanning." After serving his apprenticeship he worked on the home farm for his brother, James, for some time. About 1838 he went to Illinois, where he was engaged in agriculture for a year. The following year he spent boating on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers from Pittsburg to New Orleans. Traveling from Pittsburg on horseback, he returned to Lancaster county, and with Amer Stubbs, April 4, 1840, entered the business of lumber dealer on the Susquehanna, at Barnes' saw-mill, now known as Benton Station, on the Columbia and Port Deposit Railroad; the firm-name was Stubbs & McSparran. In this business he continued two years, when, suffering from bad health, he sold out to James Barnes. For the near 1842 he was tax collector for his district. The following April, with his brother, Thomas, as partner, he returned to the lumber business at the same place, where he remained until March 15, 1845, when he purchased the store property at Fairfield, and there spent the remainder of his life. While in the lumber business he and Joseph Woodward were contractors for rebuilding the public road around Mitchell's Rock, near Benton. The road had been previously washed away by the ice and high water, but the new contractors were triumphant, and built a road that has borne the floods and battering of ice for years, and still remains an example of honest workmanship thoroughly done. On Dec. 30, 1846, he married Mary E. Pusey, of Puseyville, and opened a store at Fairfield the following spring. A large family was born to them, as follows: Emma Housekeeper, born Oct. 3, 1847; James Mahlon, Dec. 23, 1848; Lydia Ellen, Jan. 21, 1850; Edwin Pusey, April 26, 1851; Samuel Cheyney, Oct. 28, 1852; Mary Alice, Nov. 27, 1854; Ida Elizabeth, April 9, 1856; William Fleming, Dec. 13, 1857; Marion, Sept. 19, 1859; Edgar Lyons (the subject of this biography), June 18, 1861; Isabel King, June 16, 1863; Margaret Steele, May 15, 1866; and Anna Pusey, May 4, 1867. Edwin died Aug. 14, 1867; Mary, May 16, 1855; Margaret, Sept. 10, 1866; and Anna, March 28, 1871. Emma married David Weidley Oct. 2, 1876. James M., a farmer, married Laura H. Wentz Dec. 24, 1879. Samuel C. married Floretta C. Cain Dec. 29, 1880. Fleming McSparran died March 20, 1876, and his wife March 4, 1879, greatly beloved and deeply regretted by the whole community.

Edgar L. McSparran, son of Fleming, is one of the honorable and thrifty citizens of Fulton township. His education was obtained in the public schools, Chestnut Level Academy and the York Collegiate Institute. Later he was graduated from a business college in Philadelphia, after which he clerked for Peter Wright & Sons of the Quaker City for a time, and then entered the employ of W. H. Phelan, of the same place, as foreman in the lumber business. At the end of three years he took a pleasure trip through the West and in 1887 returned to Lancaster county. He located in Goshen, and engaged in the creamery business, in which he continued until Jan., 1902, with marked success. He has purchased a large farm of 225 acres in Dru-more township, and has made other profitable investments.

On Jan. 14, 1891, Mr. McSparran married Harriet A. Hess, a daughter of J. M. and Martha Hess, of an old settled family of German origin. Like his ancestors, Mr. McSparran is a Presbyterian of the old school. Politically he is a Democrat, but has no ambition to hold public office. Fraternally he is a Mason, identified with Washington Lodge, No. 156, Quarryville. He is a man of considerable business ability and is strictly upright in all his dealings, thereby well meriting the high esteem in which he is held.

JACOB KELLEY, a pleasant and popular railroad conductor residing in Columbia, Pa., was born six miles from Middletown, Lancaster county, Jan. 20, 1862, a son of Henry and Mary E. (Eshleman) Kelley. The father was born in the West and was a son of Michael Kelley, who was born in County Clare, Ireland, and died in the West. The latter's wife was an English lady. Henry Kelley came to Lancaster county, Pa., in 1851 and settled near Elizabethtown, where he was employed as repairer by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. His first wife was a Miss Hossler, by whom he had one daughter, Kate, now the wife of William Little, a shoemaker of Marietta, Pa. His second wife, Mary E. Eshleman, was a native of Elizabethtown. She died in March, 1896, at the age of sixty-seven years. She was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church and a most estimable lady. Her children were: Richard, who died in infancy; Elizabeth, who married George Little and died in Feb., 1893; Henry, who died in infancy; John, a butcher, who died April 26, 1889; Jacob, whose name introduces this sketch; and Anna M., wife of Frank Straub, a furnace man of Marietta, Pennsylvania.

Jacob Kelley was only a year old when the family removed to Marietta, where he made his home until 1891, and has since been a resident of Columbia. At the age of thirteen he commenced working in a glass furnace, and after coming to Columbia worked in the rolling mills of that place from April until June, 1891, after which he was employed in a coal yard until he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman, Jan. 17, 1893. Three years later he was made flagman, and at the end of another three years was promoted to conductor, in which capacity he is still with the company, one of its valued and trusted employees.

Mr. Kelley was married, in Marietta, April 20, 1882, to Miss Josie Dowhower, who was born in that city Feb. 15, 1867, a daughter of Jacob and Rosetta (Stape) Dowhower, of Lancaster county, who died in Mt. Joy, the former in May, 1896, aged seventy-three years, the latter in Feb., 1899, aged seventy. Both were earnest members of the Mennonite Church; the father was a blacksmith by occupation. Their children were: Julia Ann, who died in childhood; Harry, a resident of Mt. Joy; Elizabeth, wife of John McCloskey, of Wrightsville, Pa.; Jacob, deceased; Mary, wife of James L. Pell, of Mt. Joy; Susan, wife of Levi Hollinsworth, a school teacher of Dauphin county, Pa.; Frank, living in Nebraska; Emma, wife of George Lannig, of Neb.; Oma, wife of John Eshleman, of Neb.; Josie, now Mrs. Kelley; and Elva, wife of Eli Shickley, of Columbia. To Mr. and Mrs. Kelley were born seven children, namely: Bessie A., Mamie E., William J., Harry H., Horace M. and George, all at home; and Leo, who died young.

Since attaining his majority Mr. Kelley has affiliated with the Democratic party, and takes an active and commendable interest in public affairs. He is a faithful member of the M. E. Church, and an active member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Pennsylvania Relief Association and the Improved Order of Red Men.

AARON BILYEU HASSLER, a member of the Lancaster bar, now occupies the position of county controller.

Mr. Hassler's great-grandmother on his father's side was a daughter of John Waldschmidt, a distinguished Reformed clergyman, a gentleman noted as one of the most earnest and most successful of the pioneer missionaries; and his great-grandfather was one of the Hasslers who removed from Lancaster county to the Cumberland Valley, settling in Franklin county. John Hassler, his grandfather, was a farmer and married Katura Clugston, of Scotch-Irish descent.

Rev. John Waldschmidt Hassler, son of John and Katura Hassler, was born in Franklin county, Pa., was graduated from Pennsylvania or Gettysburg College in 1852, and in 1854 was ordained a Lutheran clergyman. Muhlenberg College conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon him. Rev. Dr. Hassler married Miss Abbie Bilyeu, daughter of Aaron P. Bilyeu, a contracting builder of Philadelphia, and this union has been blessed with five children, three of whom have passed away: Lilly Patton, who died in 1865 in infancy; Luther S., a clerk in the Internal Revenue office, died in 1895, aged thirty-four years; and Helen, who married Rev. H. N. Bassler, a Reformed clergyman of Franklin county, and died in May, 1896. The survivors are: Mary, wife of J. S. Hoffman, a leather dealer of Philadelphia; and Aaron B. Hassler, of Lancaster.

Aaron Bilyeu Hassler was born at Center Square, Montgomery county, April 13, 1860. His early education was acquired in the public schools of New Holland, to which place his father moved when the subject of this sketch was only five years old. He was graduated from Muhlenberg College in 1882, and then taught school for one year in New York City, attending the Columbia Law School while engaged in teaching. Returning to Lancaster county, Mr. Hassler registered as a law student with the late George Nauman, was admitted to practice on June 5, 1885, and was subsequently admitted to the Supreme and Superior Courts. In politics he is a Republican. He served as solicitor to the board of prison inspectors of Lancaster county for two years, and was county solicitor for three and one-half years, resigning from the latter office May 17, 1901, to accept from Gov. Stone the appointment of county controller for Lancaster county, which appointment was for the term ending in the first Monday in January, 1902. He was elected in November, 1901, to a three years' term of that office, succeeding himself in January, 1902. Mr. Hassler belongs to the Young Republicans. He is a member of Lodge 43, F. A. M.; of Lancaster Lodge of B. P. O. Elks, of which he is Past Exalted Ruler; of the Knights of the Golden Eagle; of the Odd Fellows; of the Hamilton Club; the Tucquan Club; the Conestoga Country Club; and of the State Bar Association. At college he was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity. He is also a member of the board of examiners for admission to the Lancaster bar. Mr. Hassler is unmarried, and, with his parents, lives at No. 26 North Lime street.

JOHN ADAM GREER. This distinguished veteran of the Civil war is one of the great intelligent, well-to-do middle class which must always constitute the very backbone of a true and rightly constituted democracy. He is at once a trusted employe of the great Pennsylvania Railroad Company and an honored citizen of the community in which he has lived for many years. Although he has reached the age of three score years he stands erect, strong and vigorous in body, and with undimmed mental faculties.

Mr. Greer is the son of Joseph and Mary (Fogle) Greer, and was born in Bart township Oct. 31, 1840. His father was a native of the same locality, while his mother was born in Manor. The elder Greer was a farmer, and died in 1853, at the age of forty-six; his widow is yet living. John A. was the first born of five children, the others being Mary, Joseph, Susan and Martha. Mary married Hiram Kendig, a successful farmer, now retired from active cares and living in Lancaster. Joseph is deceased. Susan is the wife of B. Frank Althouse, a farmer of Bart; and Martha, whose husband is also a farmer, is Mrs. Franklin Deets, of the same township.

Mr. Greer's paternal grandfather, also Joseph, was born in Ireland, but came to this country in early life, settling in Susquehanna county, Pa., and becoming a farmer. His mother was the daughter of Adam and Susan Fogle, of Germany, likewise immigrants, who settled in Lancaster county. Mr. Fogle was also a farmer and a man who commanded high respect for his many admirable qualities. He was for many years a justice of the peace, and became a large property owner.

John Adam Greer was united in marriage, on Aug. 31, 1866, at Lancaster, to Miss Lillie L. Herring. She was born at Sunflower, in Paradise township, Lancaster county. Her father was John Herring and her mother, Catherine McCoy. He came to Lancaster county in 1828, settling in Paradise township. His wife, Mrs. Greer's mother, was born in Bart township. He was a shoemaker by trade, but in addition to working in his shop was also a schoolmaster. They are both dead, he having passed away in 1888, and she in 1892. Their respective ages were eighty-four and eighty-eight. They were both devout members of the M. E. Church. Mrs. Greer was their fifth child, their offspring having been six in number. The eldest, Elizabeth L., married Michael Freimeyer, of Lancaster county, and is deceased. Sarah J., John and Joseph died either in infancy or early childhood. Margaret, who has also died, married Charles Alt. Mrs. Greer's paternal grandfather was Patrick Herring, a substantial farmer of Morrisville. Her mother's parents were Daniel McCoy and Ruth E. McCrady. Daniel McCoy was born in Ireland and his wife in Scotland; both crossed the ocean at an early age, he when but a boy of sixteen, and both settled in Lancaster county, where they were married, he having become a prosperous farmer.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Greer has been blessed with nine children: Alma Glendora, unmarried and living with her parents; Elsie Britanna, the wife of George S. Deeg, an iron worker; Mary Catharine, the wife of John A. Watson, a Columbia merchant; Joseph, a stove molder of Columbia, who married Elizabeth Freymeyer; Martha E., the wife of Wilson Snyder, a Columbia druggist; John Armor; William Scott; Truman K.; and Adam Humphriss. All the four younger boys are living at home.

John A. Greer was reared upon a farm and acquired his strong vitality and rugged health from the hard toil which farmers' sons have to undergo. At the age of fifteen, however, he found other, and perhaps more laborious, employment in the Gap nickel mine, Lancaster county, Pa., and on Sept. 16, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Co. H, 79th P. V. I., for a period of three years. At the expiration of this term, on Oct. 3, 1864, at Atlanta, Ga., he reenlisted, this time in Co. B, 215th P. V. I. On April 6, 1865, he was promoted to be corporal. He was mustered out July 12, following. He participated in many engagements, and was present at the surrender of Johnston to Sherman. He also took part in the grand review at Washington at the close of the war. While noted for his gallantry in action, he was never wounded; yet his devotion to the cause of his country in the malarial swamps and bayous of the South implanted in his constitution the seeds of rheumatism, from which he yet suffers. He keeps alive the memory of his eventful life during those stirring times, through his membership in Post Relief of the G. A. R.

After receiving his discharge Mr. Greer returned to Columbia. For several years he was employed as a stationary engineer in different posts of trust, and for a time was in the service of the Keystone Bridge Company as a bridge builder. In 1868 he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railway as a brakeman. After three years he was made a flagman, and within five years was promoted to be a conductor. This responsible position he has filled for a quarter of a century, discharging its duties with the same fidelity and gallantry which he laid upon the altar of his country in the gloomy, trying days of our great internecine struggle.

SIMON E. GARBER, a farmer in West Donegal township, whose neat and well-kept place shows the hand of a man who loves his calling and believes in modern and progressive agriculture, was born on the old Garber homestead in West Donegal township Nov. 19, 1863, and is the son of John S. and Susan (Erb) Garber. A sketch of his parents appears on another page, and it contains their history and ancestral data.

Simon E. Garber and Fanny F. Eby were united in marriage in West Hempfield township Nov. 10, 1887, and to them have come the following children: Henry F., Norman E., Susan E., John S., J. Clarence and Monroe E. Mrs. Fanny F. (Eby) Garber was born on the old Eby homestead in West Hempfield township May 31, 1866, and is a daughter of Henry N. Eby, one of the old and prominent citizens of that township. A. F. Eby, of East Donegal township, whose history appears elsewhere, is her brother.

Simon E. Garber remained with his parents until shortly before the completion of his twenty-fourth year, when he was married, and at once located with his wife on the farm where he is found today. Making good use of the opportunities that came to him for an education, he is a bright and brainy young man, and was elected school director in Feb., 1900. In his politics he is a Republican, and in his religion he is a member of the Mennonite Church.

JOSEPH CARRIGAN, one of the highly respected retired farmers of Lancaster county, now a resident of Fairfield, was born in that town, in the house which is now occupied by Mr. N. N. Hensel, on Dec. 6, 1850. Michael Carrigan, the grandfather of Joseph, was a native of Conestoga township, this county, was of Irish origin, and was the father of two sons: Jacob, the father of Joseph, who was born July 15, 1826, and died June 14, 1881; and Amos S., who was a volunteer in an Indiana regiment and died during the Civil war. The maiden name of Grandmother Carrigan was Elizabeth Warfle.

The parents of Joseph Carrigan were Jacob and Ann (McLaughlin) Carrigan, the latter of whom was a daughter of Joseph McLaughlin, of Providence township; she was born Oct. 6, 1825, and died July 13, 1881. Their marriage, which took place in 1848, was blessed with two sons: Enos, who was born July 22, 1849, resides in Drumore township, and married Bertha Penrose, their children being Rena, Leora, Harry, Lester and Grace; the other was the Joseph Carrigan of this sketch. Jacob Carrigan was a blacksmith by trade, and became a man of means, owning at the time of his death one hundred and fifty acres of fine farming land. In his early years he worked very hard, for on account of the death of his father the support of his mother fell upon him. He received but $10 per month while learning his trade, but by close economy and much self-denial he was able to save $300 in the three years, which he used to purchase land, and as this increased in value he sold and bought other land, thus by good management acquiring much more than a competency. During life he adhered to the principles of the Democratic party.

Joseph Carrigan grew up under his father's roof, receiving a good, common school education, and has followed farming all his life. His present farm consists of ninety-five acres of rich land and he also has a comfortable and convenient home in Fairfield.

The marriage of Mr. Carrigan was on Dec. 5, 1878, in Drumore township, to Miss Iowa Ambler, who was a daughter of Edward Ambler, a cabinet-maker of Drumore township. This marriage has been blessed with three children: Kersey, born Nov. 3, 1879, is a graduate of the State Normal school at Millersville, later followed teaching for a time, and has recently accepted a position as book-keeper in the Quarryville National Bank; Lulu, born Aug. 7, 1881, is also a graduate of the Normal School, and is one of the most successful teachers in Lancaster county; M. Murrell, born Oct. 1, 1889, died Oct. 1, 1891.

Mrs. Carrigan was born May 5, 1858, and she was reared in a family of four children: Anson, a farmer of Fulton township; Iowa, who is Mrs. Carrigan; Evan L., who is teller in the Quarryville Bank; and Harry C., who is a merchant of Liberty Square. Mr. and Mrs. Ambler reside near Liberty Square and are among the leading residents of the county.

In politics Mr. Carrigan is a Democrat, while the religious connection of the family has always been with the Methodist Church. Mr. Carrigan is highly esteemed in this neighborhood, where he is known for his many estimable characteristics, and is one of the prominent citizens.

MATTHIAS S. HELFRICH, the genial and hospitable proprietor of "Helfrich's Hotel," at Cordelia, West Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, Jan. 16, 1854, and is a son of Michael and Susan (Van Staten) Helfrich, also natives of Hesse-Darmstadt, where they lived until 1856, when they came to the United States and settled in the neighborhood now known as Cordelia. There, in 1865, the father opened the hotel now operated by his son, Matthias, and conducted it quite successfully until about 1887, when he retired. Mrs. Susan (Van Staten) Helfrich was called away in 1889, in the faith of the Catholic Church, when she was sixty-seven years old, and her mortal remains were interred in the Catholic cemetery in Columbia; Michael survived until March 28, 1897, when he also passed away, at the age of eighty years and twenty days, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, and was buried at Ironville cemetery.

To Michael and Susan (Van Staten) Helfrich were born eight children, namely: Peter, married and farming in Carroll county, Md.; Frederick, a carpenter in Cordelia, Pa.; Matthias S., mentioned at the opening of this brief sketch; George, mining for gold in Alaska; Mary, deceased wife of Emanuel Wells; Elizabeth, wife of F. M. Bard, of Cordelia; Michael, a railroad man in Tacoma, Wash.; and John, a farmer in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Matthias S. Helfrich was reared to his present business and thoroughly understands it, as he had assisted his father from boyhood up to the latter's death, and then purchased the interest of the other heirs. The "Helfrich" is to-day one of the best and most popular hotels in the county, and has a reputation much more than local.

NATHAN EVANS WIKE, who has been conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad since 1873, is one of the most respected citizens of Columbia, and belongs to a family whose members have long commanded the high regard of their fellow citizens in Lancaster county. He was born in Columbia Jan. 26, 1835, son of George and Sarah (Eberlin) Wike.

George Wike was born Jan. 11, 1805, in Columbia, and spent all his life in that township. He learned the trade of cooper, but for many years was a pilot on the Susquehanna river, was employed in his latter days as a slip boss, and finally retired to pass the remainder of his days in ease and comfort. He also engaged in contracting, and built a portion of the Tide-Water Canal from Wrightsville to Havre de Grace. He died in Columbia Dec. 31, 1857, at the age of fifty-two years, a Lutheran in his religious belief, although not a member of any congregation. His widow, who was born Nov. 3, 1806, still survives, and has her residence in Columbia. She is a member of the Episcopal Church. They were married in Columbia April 26, 1827, and the children born to them were fourteen in number, as follows: Susan, who died when five years old; John F. E., who was married, but is now deceased; Milton, spoken of elsewhere in this volume; Ann Jane, of Philadelphia, the widow of Jacob Wall; Nathan E., the subject of this sketch; Emma Frances, who died young; George Washington, married to Mary J. Wagner; Henry M., who was killed in the army; Hannah G., wife of Henry Mullen, of Philadelphia; Samuel F. (a widower), a railroad engineer, in Columbia; Andrew J. and Albert, who died young; Eunice, widow of Edwin Stair, who was a dry-goods merchant of Columbia; and Franklin, who died young.

George Wike, paternal grandfather of Nathan, was a shoemaker by trade, was a native of Germany, and came from Berks county to Lancaster when a young man. * Later he removed to Columbia, where he died at an advanced age. Mrs. Wike was twice married, and had children as follows: George, John, Mary (Mrs. Henry Mathiot), Sarah (Mrs. John Hudders), and Betsey (Mrs. Mullen). Our subject's maternal grandparents, John and Anna (Neil) Ebetlin, were natives of Germany and Lancaster county, respectively. John Eberlin was born in Wonseck, a town in the Margrave der Bysith, in the circle of Franconia, Nov. 25, 1755, and was confirmed in the Lutheran faith. His father, also named John, was a butcher, and also a burgomaster of Wonseck, and his mother bore the maiden name of Margaret Ballach. John, the younger, landed in America June 3, 1777, and on May 4, 1784, married Anna Neil, who was born in Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pa., April 6, 1767, and was a daughter of John and Jean (Mease) Neil. To their union were born the following children: John, born Oct. 15, 1785, died Oct. 20, 1785; Jean, born Sept. 30, 1786; Margaret, born June 14, 1788; and Elizabeth, born April 10, 1790. All the children had their nativity in Columbia, and all, with the exception of one who died in infancy, were married.

Nathan E. Wike remained with his parents up to the age of nineteen, and worked until then with his father, in the butcher business. For the next four and a half years he was employed as fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, after which, until the Civil war broke out, he was in St. Louis, Mo., engaged as a street-car conductor. On July 12, 1861, he enlisted, for three years or during the war, in Co. I, 8th Mo. V. I., under Capt. Hart, and he took part in numerous important engagements, among them the battles at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Vicksburg and Missionary Ridge. At Larkinsville Landing, Ala., on April 4, 1864, Mr. Wike was wounded in the shoulder and side, by minie balls, and he was unfit for duty up to the time of his discharge, in St. Louis, July 12, 1864. The intervening time he spent in three different hospitals, being first taken to a field hospital, and finally to the hospital at Jeffersonville, Ind. After his discharge our subject returned to Columbia, where he was in the recruiting service a few months, and he then went to St. Louis, taking his old position on the street cars for six months. Since then he has made his permanent home in Columbia, and has been continuously in the employ of the Pennsylvania road, the first few months working as switchman. Then for several years he worked as brakeman, and in 1873 he became conductor, in which position he has been retained ever since, most convincing evidence of faithful and satisfactory service. Mr. Wike belongs to the P. R. R. Relief Association, and fraternally unites with the Red Men. His political sympathies are with the Republican party.

On June 18, 1870, Mr. Wike was married in Mount Nebo, Lancaster county, to Miss Elizabeth Gohn, and children as follows have been born to them: George A., a stove molder, of Lansdale, Pa., married to Sarah Welsh; Edwin S., a molder, residing in Columbia, married to Fanny Brubaker; Warren C., Mary L., Elva W., Sarah and Milton died young; Nellie S., Charles M., Nathaniel G., Percival W. and Anna V. are at home; Blanch and Flora died young.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Gohn) Wike was born Dec. 12, 1852, in Columbia, daughter of George and Mary (Strohman) Gohn. Her father first married Nancy Sweeny, by whom he had five children: Daniel, of Columbia, who is a brick manufacturer; James, now deceased; Anna, deceased, who married Jonas Cromwell, of York county, Pa.; Susan, widow of George Snyder, of Columbia; and Mary, deceased, who was the wife of Joseph Hogentogler. Mr. Gohn married, second, Mrs. Mary (Strohman) Glatz, widow of John Glatz, by whom she had five children, all of whom died young. Three children were born to this later union: Elizabeth (Mrs. Wike) and George T., twins, the latter deceased; and Sophia, who died young. For his third wife, Mr. Gohn married Elizabeth Shaffer. No children were born to them.

JOSEPH AMBROSE ULRICH, a prominent citizen of Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he is engaged in the leaf tobacco business, was born in Cornwall, Lebanon Co., Pa., June 20, 1860, son of Sebastin and M. A. Catharine (Eagle) Ulrich, natives of Baden Baden, Germany, and Maytown, Pa., respectively.

Sebastin Ulrich, now a retired farmer of West Donegal township, was born Jan. 20, 1826, son of Anthony and Engleberth (Conrad) Ulrich, of Baden, Germany, where their entire lives were spent, the father dying in 1838, at the age of forty-four, and the mother in 1845, at the age of forty-five. They were the parents of five children: Rosannah, deceased wife of a Mr. Galvarish; Sebastin; Charles, in Germany; Constantine, a farmer of Minnesota; and Barbara, wife of John Walsh, of Wisconsin. Sebastin Ulrich remained with his parents until he had attained the age of seventeen, when he came to America, landing at New Orleans after a voyage lasting forty-six days. He remained in that city for four months, but owing to the outbreak of the yellow fever was obliged at the end of that time to find another location. He accordingly came to Lebanon county, Pa., where he had an uncle residing, and remained in that county until 1867 when he purchased his present fine farm in West Donegal township.

After coming to America, he learned the carpenter's trade, at which he worked until after he had erected the comfortable house on his farm. He has become one of the prominent citizens of his town. In politics he is a Democrat and has held a number of local offices, among them being that of tax collector. In religious belief, he is, as was his father before him, a devout adherent of the Roman Catholic faith. In November, 1854, in Elizabethtown, Pa., Sebastin Ulrich was united in marriage with Catharine Eagle, who was born in East Donegal township in 1832, a daughter of Henry and Ann M. (Felix) Eagle, and to this union have been born children, as follows: Henry, a farmer of Dauphin county, Pa., married to Ella Dougherty; Anthony, a farmer and stock raiser of British Columbia; Mary, wife of J. P. Daugherty, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Joseph Ambrose, of Elizabethtown; Steven F., a cigar box manufacturer; Dr. Sylvester, a successful physician of Elizabethtown; John E., a cigar and liquor merchant of the same town; Anna, now Sr. Mary Joseph, Superior of Saint Patrick's School, in Charleston, S. C.; Catharine, now Sister Serena of St. Joseph's Academy of Tekoa, Wash.; Ida, now Sr. Sylvia, in Holy Cross Hospital, Salt Lake City, Utah; and Jerome, at home with his parents in Elizabethtown.

Joseph Ambrose Ulrich was reared on his father's farm, making that place his home until his marriage. During this time he acquired a thorough knowledge of agriculture under the excellent practical tuition of his father, and at the age of sixteen began to learn the business of packing tobacco. He has ever since continued in the tobacco industry, in 1882 going into the business on his own account, locating in Elizabethtown in the spring of that year. He is very industrious and owes his success to his unceasing toil and careful business methods. He is thoroughly up-to-date and in any measure for the general good of his town, he may be found among the leaders of the movement.

On April 16, 1885, Mr. Ulrich was united in marriage with Miss Louisa Lynch, daughter of James and Mary Lynch, and five children have blessed their union: Sylvester, Mary, James, all living; and William and Ambrose, deceased. In religious connection the family are all communicants of the Catholic Church, and active in its work.

JAMES A. LYNCH, a prominent retired farmer and cattle dealer of Elizabethtown, Pa., was born in Londonderry, Dauphin Co., Pa., July 21, 1838, son of James and Mary A. (Gross) Lynch, of Middletown, of that county.

Dennis and Bridget (Sweeney) Lynch, who founded the family in this country, left County Donegal, Ireland, in 1800, to found a new home on the western shores of the Atlantic ocean. They settled in West Donegal township, Lancaster county, later moving to Dauphin county where they made a permanent home. He followed the distillery business in Ireland and in Dauphin county, Pa., and became a man of means, operating many stills in this section.

James Lynch, son of Dennis and father of James A., was a school teacher in early life, conducting a school of his own until his marriage to Mary A. Gross, daughter of George Gross, a carpenter and cabinet maker of Dauphin county. After his marriage Mr. Lynch took one of his father's farms and operated it in connection with brick making and the hotel business. He became one of the prominent public men of that section and held a number of important offices in the town, serving as justice of the peace for two terms, and school director for several terms. In 1858 he moved to Elizabethtown, where he also conducted a hotel, besides being ticket and freight agent and express messenger until his retirement in 1867. In Elizabethtown, as well as in his former home, he became one of the well known progressive citizens, taking an active part in the political life of the day, and being especially interested in educational questions, serving several terms as school director. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religious belief a Roman Catholic. He died Nov. 1, 1890, aged seventy-nine, and his good wife on Nov. 29, 1893, aged eighty-one; the remains of both rest in the Catholic cemetery in Elizabethtown. Their children were: Mary Ann, widow of William Kirby, a retired drover of Harrisburg, Pa.; James A.; John T., a retired merchant of Harrisburg; Margaret, wife of George Baxstresser, a shoe merchant of Elizabethtown; Catherine, of Elizabethtown; and Louisa, wife of Joseph Ambrose Ulrich, a leaf tobacco merchant of Elizabethtown.

James A. Lynch was reared on his father's farm, where he remained until he attained the age of sixteen years, when he went to Harrisburg and clerked in a grocery store for two years. At the end of that time he returned home and worked on the farm until 1858 when he came to Elizabethtown and operated market cars between there and Philadelphia, continuing in that work for two years, when he engaged in the clothing business for a year, and afterward in the cattle business, making trips as far west as Chicago to purchase his stock. This naturally led him back to farming, and he settled down to agricultural pursuits in West Donegal township, where he continued to make his home for twenty-four years. He met with uniform success in his undertakings, and finally retired to pass the remainder of his life in the enjoyment of his hard earned competency. He rose to important place among the citizens of his town and for a time served as school director, but finding his own affairs engrossed so much of his time that he could not give it the attention he felt it deserved, he resigned. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religion, like all of his family, is a communicant of the Church of Rome.

In February, 1867, Mr. Lynch was married to Miss Louisa Gable, who was born in Lancaster, Pa., in August, 1841, daughter of Jacob and Mariah (Buchas) Gable, the former a tinsmith and prominent man of Lancaster. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lynch, of whom James died in infancy. The others are: Mary A., at home; Ada, wife of James Wittman, a blacksmith, of Elizabethtown; Margaret, Katie and Agnes, all at home.

DAVID K. GOOD, dealer in general merchandise at Disston, Lancaster county, occupies a high place among the young business men of his section. He comes of a family whose members for several generations have been among the respected residents of the county, being a grandson of Franklin Good, who was born in the county, where he lived and died. He was a cooper by trade, and followed same in connection with farming until his death, which occurred in 1876. He married Miss Elizabeth Sengerwalt, and they had one child, Jacob S., who was the father of David K.

Jacob S. Good was born in Lancaster county, and has given his entire attention through life to farming. He married Miss Margaret R. Kiehl, and their family consisted of five children, two of whom died in infancy: Miss Lizzie K. is at home; David K. is mentioned below; Franklin K. is engaged in farming on the old homestead.

David K. Good was born in West Earl township, this county, May 10, 1868, and remained at home until he was nineteen years of age, meantime receiving a good common-school education. Mr. Good clerked two years for J. A. Frynyer, at the same store which he now occupies, and two years later entered the business for himself. He keeps a general line of merchandise, and enjoys a good share of the patronage from the town and the surrounding country. Fair dealing and good business methods have won him success from the start, and have also gained him the good will and respect of all with whom he has come in contact. He was appointed postmaster by John Wanamaker in 1891, and has held the office ever since.

On Sept. 4, 1890, Mr. Good wedded Miss Rebecca Michael, daughter of Cyrus and Katie Michael, and to this union has come one child, Katie Elizabeth, born April 24, 1893.

ERNST ROCHOW, a native of Columbia, Lancaster county, was born June 8, 1868, a brother of Charles Rochow, in whose biography will be found the genealogy of Ernst Rochow. Ernst is the present clerk of the business conducted by Charles, who is a wholesale and retail dealer in rags, tallow, etc., at Columbia.

Ernst Rochow left his home in Columbia, at the age of fourteen years, and went to Chicago, Ill., where from 1882 until 1886 he served an apprenticeship at electrotyping, and then returned to Columbia, where he has since been very ably assisting his brother in his present business.

On May 13, 1890, Ernst Rochow married, in Columbia, Miss Amelia Reller, and to this union have been born three children, viz: Amelia M., July 8, 1891; Oscar O., April 22, 1894, and Edna F., Nov. 14, 1895. Mrs. Amelia (Reller) Rochow was born at Miltonsburg, Monroe Co., Ohio, July 24, 1870, a daughter of Michael and Mary (Deakick) Reller, who were born respectively, Sept. 1, 1826, in Rheinpfalz and April 22, 1833, in Hessen Darmstadt, Germany, but who were married in McKeesport, Pa., and now reside at Miltonsburg, Ohio. Michael Reller is a wheelwright by trade, and manufactures and deals in wagons, plows, buggies, etc., doing a wholesale and retail business. Mr. and Mrs. Reller have had born to them a family of eleven children, namely: Michael, deceased; Charles, a painter in Barnesville, Ohio; Rev. Henry, a clergyman in the German Lutheran Church, at Albany, N. Y., but who at one time had charge for ten years in Columbia, Pa., and during this period his sister Amelia, while on a visit to him, first met her husband, Ernst Rochow; John, a farmer at Smithland, Iowa; Rev. Herman, a minister of the English Lutheran church with a charge at Aspinwall, Pa.; Louis, a grocer at Saltsburg, Pa.; Otelia, deceased; William, manager of five groceries in Chicago, Ill.; Amelia, wife of Mr. Rochow; and Edward and Otto, both deceased. The parents of this family are devout members of the German Lutheran Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Rochow are members of the German Lutheran Church, and in politics Mr. Rochow is a Democrat; he is also a member of the Society of Heptasophs. In social circles Mr. and Mrs. Rochow occupy a very high position, and as a business man, Mr. Rochow is regarded as shrewd and enterprising, but as being strictly upright and of unswerving integrity in all his dealings.

SAMUEL W. RANCK. One of the prominent and successful farmers and stock dealers of Lancaster county, is Samuel W. Ranck, who was born in Upper Leacock township, near Bird-in-Hand, on Oct. 21, 1872, and he was a son of A. M. and Caroline (Wenger) Ranck, of this township.

Samuel W. Ranck attended the district schools of his locality, was reared on the home farm where he remained until the age of twenty-one years, and then entered the employ of Milton Kendig and for seven years was engaged in the business of selling horses and mules, on the road. Then Mr. Ranck rented his present fine farm from his father, and since that date has successfully carried on his former business in his own interest.

On March 24, 1894, Mr. Ranck was married in Akron, Ephrata township, to Frances M. Pfautz, who was born in Warwick township and was a daughter of Hiram G. and Louisa (Reisener) Pfautz, the former a native of Warwick township, and the latter of Lebanon county. Mr. Pfautz was born in 1835, his wife two years later, and until 1900 when he retired from activity, he was a prominent farmer of Warwick township. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Pfautz were: Emma and Mary, deceased; Graybill, a teacher in Rothsville; Alice, who married William Tausnach, a bookkeeper of Lititz, Pa.; Harry, a cigar manufacturer, of Rothsville; and Monroe, a conductor on the Pennsylvania and Reading Railroad.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Ranck were Joseph and Martha (Graybill) Pfautz, farmers of Lancaster county, of Swiss ancestry, while the maternal grandfather was Christian Reisener, who married a Miss Smith; the former came to America from the city of Worms, Germany, when he was young. His father had been a judge and the mayor of that city.

ANDREW BAKER ROTE, proprietor of the A. B. Rote Architectural & Structural Iron Works, Lancaster, has had a phenomenal career as a manufacturer. He is descended from a family who have lived in Lancaster for generations, and his father, William Rote, was a locomotive builder in his younger manhood, and now assists his son (A. B.) in the Architectural Iron Works.

William Rote married Miss Mary A. Hartley, whose people were from Carlisle, Cumberland county. From this union nine children were born, seven of whom are still living.

Andrew Baker Rote was born in Lancaster, Oct. 26, 1871, and was educated in the public schools. At a very early age, he became an apprentice at engraving, then entered a clothing store for a time, next worked at making and engraving umbrella handles, and at the age of fifteen went into the iron business as an errand boy. He was promoted to be draughtsman in the establishment, and at eighteen years became superintendent of the works. Mr. Rote's next move was to start in the iron fence and architectural iron business for himself. This was in 1891, but the business gradually grew into building and structural steel and iron work, and the plant, located on East Chestnut street, soon became too small for the rapidly growing trade. In 1898 Mr. Rote bought the Brady Edge Tool Works at Cherry and Walnut streets, and after enlarging and remodeling the place to his use, carried on his business more extensively than ever. Among the notable structures for which the A. B. Rote works have supplied the iron and steel work are the Lancaster County Insane Asylum, the Woolworth Building and the Woolworth Roof Garden, the new Y. M. C. A. Building, the American Caramel Company Building, the new Science Building of Franklin & Marshall College, the bridge and iron work for the Armstrong Cork Works, all the steel work for the Lancaster Electric Railway, Light and Power Co., all the steel and iron work for the Pennsylvania Railroad freight station at Lancaster, and the grand entrances for St. Mary's and Greenwood cemeteries; and, at the time this sketch was written (Jan., 1903) they had the contracts for the iron and steel work of the annex to the Follmer-Clogg umbrella works, all the fire escapes and iron stairways of "Hotel Wheatland," and the structural steel and iron work for the big annex to the Hamilton Watch Factory, and the fine building which Frank B. Trout is erecting next door to "Hotel Wheatland." These are only a few of Mr. Rote's larger contracts in the vicinity while among his out of town work may be mentioned the beautiful iron entrance at Lititz Springs, and the fence and entrance to the Morrisville Cemetery near Trenton. So vast has this line of work become, indeed, that Mr. Rote has opened a large lot near his works for structural iron work, and has secured a commodious warehouse on Walnut street. As we write, he is engaged on the iron and steel work for the new General Hospital of Columbia, and the new General Hospital of Lancaster, as well as on the grand new entrance for Lancaster cemetery. His career, in brief, has been simply wonderful.

Mr. Rote was married, on April 4, 1893, to Lillie M. Boehringer, a daughter of J. George Boehringer, a well known citizen of Lancaster, and this union has resulted in the birth of two children: Mary Regina, aged eight years, and Andrew Herbert, aged five years. They live in a cosy home at No. 110 S. Ann street, which Mr. Rote purchased early in his married life. Religiously, the family is identified with Trinity Lutheran Church, while socially, Mr. Rote is a member of the Lancaster Board of Trade, the Young Republicans, Odd Fellows, Knights of Malta, American Mechanics, Royal Arcanum, and Artisans. Politically, he is a staunch Republican, and has served the people of the seventh ward for one term in the common council, and has been re-nominated for a second term, for he is as popular politically as he is personally.

... EZRA W. NEWCOMER, V. M. D., is one of the leading veterinary surgeons of his section of Lancaster county, and, though yet a young man, has by his skill won the confidence of his patrons in a degree often attained only after years of successful practice. Mr. Newcomer was born March 31, 1876, in Rapho township, this county, where the family has long resided.

His grandparents, Christ and Catherine (Nissley) Newcomer, were natives of Manor township, and settled on a farm in Rapho township, where they died. Jacob N. Newcomer, the father of our subject, was born July 28, 1835, in Rapho township, where he still resides. He adopted his father's calling, has been a life-long farmer, and owns a fine farm of 104 acres. Mr. Newcomer married Miss Barbara Weidman, who was born May 26, 1838, in Rapho township, daughter of Amos and Barbara (Snively) Weidman, farming people of Lancaster county. Children as follows blessed this union: Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Amos, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; David died March 23, 1902; Fanny, wife of Henry Bear, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Alice, wife of John E. Garber, a farmer of West Donegal township; Levi, unmarried, who lives with his parents; Jacob, a farmer of East Donegal township; John, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Barbara, who died April 10, 1902, wife of Ira Longenecker, a farmer of East Donegal township; and Ezra W., whose name opens this sketch. The parents are members of the Old Mennonite Church. Mr. Newcomer is a Republican politically, and he has served three years as supervisor of his township.

Ezra W. Newcomer remained on the home farm until he was sixteen years of age, meantime receiving a practical education in the local public schools, which he supplemented by one year's attendance at the Millersville State Normal School. He then clerked a year in a drug store in Mt. Joy, spent the following year on his father's farm, and at the end of that time entered the University of Pennsylvania, where he took a three years' course, graduating in June, 1899, with the degree of V. M. D. He has since been located in Mt. Joy, where he has devoted himself to the practice of veterinary surgery, in which he already enjoys a lucrative patronage. Mr. Newcomer bids fair to establish himself among the most respected and substantial citizens of the community, and toward that end he cannot do better than to follow the example of his honored father. He is a Republican politically.

Mr. Newcomer was married in April, 1900, to Miss Minnie Breneman, of East Donegal township, where the wedding took place. Her parents, Henry and Harriet (Heidler) Breneman, natives of Lancaster county, reside in East Donegal; he is a veterinary surgeon.

ABRAHAM E. BINKLEY is one of the bright and progressive young men of the community in which he lives, and belongs to an old honored family of Lancaster county. The respected name which he bears suffers no loss of credit in his industrious and useful life.

Mr. Binkley was born in Manor township, near Safe Harbor, June 7, 1874, and is a son of David and Mary Ann (Eshleman) Binkley, both of Manor township. Reared on the farm, and educated in the public schools, at the age of twenty years he began life for himself, and worked a year in the nursery of his father-in-law, Daniel D. Herr, of Manor township; then removing to a property he had purchased at Neffsville, Manheim township, which contained thirty-four acres. Since then he has bought four acres more, and in 1898 erected a beautiful modern residence, which is a credit to the town. Here is his home, and his attention is devoted to farming and dairying, as he has a milk route in Lancaster. In 1901 he purchased a new threshing outfit and is now threshing, crushing stone, shredding fodder, etc., throughout his community.

Mr. Binkley was married Dec. 5, 1895, to Miss Lizzie H. Herr, a daughter of Daniel D. Herr, the noted nurseryman of Manor township. Mr. and Mrs. Binkley have a family of three children who are living, and have lost one child. Their children are as follows: Anna Mary; Miles Lloyd, who is dead; Howard Melvin; Clarence Ray. Mr. and Mrs. Binkley belong to the Mennonite Church, and are esteemed and respected by all in the community for their many good qualities.

ELDER HENRY B. HOFFER, a general farmer of Rapho township, was born in Penn township Sept. 4, 1857, son of George and Mary (Baumberger) Hoffer, of Penn township.

George Hoffer, the father, died in Rapho township, Jan. 3, 1890, at the age of sixty-three years and is buried in Hershey Meeting House cemetery, Rapho township. During his younger life he worked at the carpenter trade but afterwards bought a farm and resided on it until his death. The widow of George Hoffer was born March 9, 1831, and resides in Manheim, Pa. Both the deceased and his widow were members of the Mennonite Church. They were the parents of the following children: Fanny, wife of Abraham Summy, a Penn township farmer; Allen B., a Rapho township farmer, married to Miss Fanny Hershey; Henry B., the subject of this sketch; Emanuel, a Rapho township farmer; and Cassie, wife of Joseph B. Ginder, a Mt. Joy township farmer.

Mr. Hoffer's paternal grandparents were Emanuel and Barbra Hoffer, of Lancaster county, the family being of Swiss origin. His maternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth Baumberger, of Penn township.

On Oct. 5, 1884, Elder Hoffer was married to Miss Anna Shelley, of Rapho township, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Jacob M. Engle. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoffer. Mrs. Anna (Shelley) Hoffer was born in Rapho township, in 1860 and is the sister of Mrs. A. M. Sheetz, wife of Rev. A. M. Sheetz, of Rapho township.

Mr. Hoffer lived with his parents until the time of his marriage, after which he sought various farm employments in the vicinity. He then rented a farm on shares and conducted it successfully for three years. In 1888 he purchased his present home place and has prospered finely with it. In 1892 Mr. Hoffer was ordained a minister of the Brethren in Christ Church, of which he is a member, and in 1896 he was made an elder. In this church elders have the same jurisdiction that a bishop of the Mennonite Church holds. It is a very honorable and responsible clerical office and is only bestowed on the most capable men of the church. Elder Hoffer has the esteem and confidence of the whole community, irrespective of religious belief, for he is tolerant and fair, in his views on all subjects, secular or otherwise.

WALTER C. HOWRY, for some years a carriage maker and blacksmith at Marietta, Lancaster county, was born in Willow Street village, West Lampeter township, this county, June 18, 1872, son of Rev. Christian K. and Susan (Shroad) Howry, of East and West Lampeter townships, respectively. Christian Howry was a tailor by trade. He was a pious and moral man by nature, and was a Mennonite clergyman for twenty-seven years, dying June, 1900, at the age of seventy-two years, beloved by all who knew him. His widow, who now resides in Lancaster, is about sixty-nine years old. The children born to Rev. Christian K. Howry and his wife were ten in number, and were as follows: Samuel, deceased; Mary, unmarried, who is residing with her mother; Ernest, deceased; Tilly, widow of Hiram Horting, and now married to Jacob Andes, a farmer and fruit-grower of Ephrata; John, deceased; Edward, a truckman, of East Lampeter township; William, a carriage-maker in Shiremanstown, Pa.; Kate, wife of Martin Weaver, a florist of East Lampeter township, Lancaster county; Phebe, wife of Elmer Trout, of Lancaster; and Walter C. The paternal grandparents of Walter C. Howry were Abraham and Elizabeth (Keephart) Howry, farming people, and quite prominent in West Lampeter township.

Walter C. Howry at the age of sixteen years left his home and went to Paradise, Lancaster county, and there served an apprenticeship of four years at the blacksmith's trade with Jacob Winger. His "time" completed, he went to Lancaster City, where he worked seven years for Edward Edgerley. In January, 1900, he came to Marietta and established his blacksmith business, which he conducted very successfully. Late in 1902 he went out of this business to take his present position as foreman in the automobile business at Chester, Delaware county.

In Soudersburg, Nov. 30, 1893, Mr. Howry married Miss Ida M. Andrews, and to this union have been born two children, Reba M. and Aaron D. Mrs. Ida (Andrews) Howry was born in East Lampeter township, in November, 1874, and is a daughter of Christian F. and Mary A. (Dieffenbaugh) Andrews, natives of the same township, where the father, who was a shoemaker, passed away Sept. 3, 1874, at the early age of thirty years. Mrs. Howry was the sole off-spring of these parents. Mrs. Andrews remarried, and is now the wife of Aaron Denlinger, a retired farmer of East Lampeter, but to this union no children have been born.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Howry were Daniel and Catherine (Farrie) Andrews, of Cumberland, and East Lampeter township, Lancaster county; Daniel was a school teacher and farmer, and a son of Peter Andrews, a native of Germany, and a Mennonite preacher. The maternal grandparents were Abraham K., and Fanny (Hess) Dieffenbaugh, of East Lampeter township, the former of whom was a farmer and a son of Harry Dieffenbaugh, of Lancaster county, and whose parents were born in Switzerland.

In politics Mr. Howry is a Republican. He is an expert mechanic and through his accommodating disposition he secured a very large patronage.

DAVID L. GLATTFELTER is a great-great-grandson of Casper Glattfelder, who was a son of Felix Glattfelder and Barbara Gorins, and a grandson of Hans Glattfelder, who for many years held the office of Ammann (the president and sheriff) in the town of Glattfelden, Canton Zurich, Switzerland, in the very early days of the seventeenth century. The family comes remotely from Celtic sources, deriving the name from "Feld der Glatt," a branch of the River Rhine. Prof. Dr. Daendliker, of Zurich, the well-known Swiss historian, says: "We find the name connected with the earliest history of the community, as also of the parish church at Glattfelden. Recent investigation shows that the town of Glattfelden was founded by the ancestors of Casper, where they held important offices." The name is still well represented there.

Casper Glattfelder was born in 1709, at Glattfelden, and in 1843 came with his wife to America. They journeyed down the Rhine to Rotterdam, where they took passage in the "Francis and Elizabeth," and arrived in due time at Philadelphia, where he qualified as a citizen Aug. 30, 1743. [Sec. Archives of Pennsylvania, Vol. 17, 2d Series] Casper Glattfelder settled in Springfield township, York county, which was then a part of Lancaster county, and applied himself to his trade of millwright, which was perhaps the most valuable at that time in the Colonies. Five sons were born to him, and four of these bore arms in the Revolution.

Casper Glattfelder, Jr., the great-grandfather of David L., served in the 5th Company, 7th Battalion, under command of Capt. John Erman and Col. David Kennedy. His three brothers, Michael, Henry and Felix were enrolled in the 6th Company under Capt. George Geiselman. Casper Glattfelder, Jr., was in his lifetime a very extensive real estate owner, and followed farming the greater part of his life. In religion he was a member of the Reformed Church. He was the father of six sons and two daughters.

John Glattfelder, grandfather of David L., was a millwright, and there are mills in this part of Pennsylvania which are still in operation that show the character of his handiwork. To him were born four children, of whom Isaac K., the youngest, was the father of David L.

Isaac K. Glatfelter was born in 1825, and in early life taught school. He took an active part in establishing the free school system. His wife, Sarah Feiser, daughter of Peter Feiser, a much respected farmer, bore him nine children, of whom David L. was the youngest.

David L. Glatfelter was born Feb. 29, 1872. After completing his education he taught school for a time. In 1890 he accepted a position in the Drivers' and Mechanics' National Bank of York, Pa., and in 1892 he was elected a clerk in the First National Bank of Columbia, where he filled the position of discount clerk for a number of years. When the Columbia Trust Company was organized he became its teller, and is still continued in that position, which he ably fills. He is secretary of the Home Building and Loan Association and is variously connected with other local enterprises. Known throughout this part of the county as an enterprising and pushing business man, he is esteemed alike for his manly character, business integrity and genial disposition.

Mr. Glatfelter was married in 1893 to Anna L., a daughter of H. M. Crider, bookseller and publisher of York, Pa. They have three children: David, born in 1895; Frank, 1896; and Sarah, 1899.

MISS MAGGIE E. McCOMMON, a retired lady of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in this township, in Feb., 1853, and is a daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Hays) McCommon.

JOSEPH McCOMMON was born in Colerain township, June 13, 1813, while his wife was born in Little Britain, in June, 1815. She was a daughter of John and Margaret (Clendenin) Hays, and came of a Scotch-Irish parentage.

Joseph McCommon was the son of James and Elizabeth (Patterson) McCommon, who were among the first settlers of Colerain township. He cleared a farm and erected a home where some of his descendants still live. They left a family of five sons and three daughters. (1) Samuel married Isabella Ross, of Chester county; they lived in Colerain township some years, and then moved to Oxford, Chester county, where they died, leaving a family of children: James, of Oxford; Ross, of East Drumore; Petterson, who died in Colerain; Howard, of Marysville, Mo.; Samuel, of Virginia; Leal B., who died in Colerain; Lester R., who lived and died in Virginia; Jemima R., of West Grove, Chester county. (2) James McCommon died unmarried. (3) Robert died in Ohio. (4) John died on the old homestead. (5) Mary married Hugh McConnell, and moved with him to Ohio, where she died. (6) Margaret married Alexander Morrison, and died at their home near Kings Bridge, leaving five children: Rev. James, of Washington; Dr. Joseph, of Marvville, Mo.; Samuel, who died in Missouri; Alexander, of Little Britain; Annie E., widow of E. King, of Little Britain. (7) Eliza McCommon died a maiden lady at Oxford. (8) Joseph was the father of Miss McCommon.

Joseph McCommon grew to manhood on the farm, and was educated in the home schools and the Hopewell Academy, where he received a fine classical training, and for a number of years was a popular and successful teacher. After his marriage he purchased the farm where Miss McCommon lives today. There he died in 1894, his wife having passed to her reward in Dec., 1893. Both Mr. and Mrs. McCommon were active members of the Presbyterian Church, where he was an elder for a number of years. In the building and founding of the present church of that faith in Union, he was actively interested, and always contributed to its support. In politics he was a Democrat, and held local offices during his life. They left one daughter, Maggie.

Miss Maggie E. McCommon received her education in the Union high school, and was a young lady of more than ordinary culture and character. She has always remained at home, and before the death of her parents took charge of the farm, and continued its management. She was a tender, loving and dutiful daughter, and gave her parents every attention in their declining years. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and is greatly esteemed in the community for her many good qualities and characteristics.

JOHN M. YOUNG, of Lancaster, a notable example of a self-made man, was born in Philadelphia, Aug. 11, 1872, son of William L. Young, a native of Philadelphia, whose father came from Hamburg, Germany, to settle in the Quaker City. William L. Young was engaged for twenty-seven years as a horse dealer in Easton, and later in Allentown.

John M. Young received a limited public school education as a boy, and the broader and deeper knowledge which he now enjoys, is the result of his own efforts in his battle with the world. When he reached the age of eleven years, he began his career in life as an errand boy in a store, where he earned a dollar a week and his breakfast, his day's work beginning at five o'clock in the morning. At the age of fourteen years he attended a business college, working for a crockery house before and after his school hours. Completing his course at the end of a year, this industrious youth assisted the management of the school in the night sessions, but worked during the day to earn a little more money. Beginning as an errand and general utility boy in one of the stores of the Grand Union Tea Company, he worked his way up until he became a manager, remaining with this company for twelve years, five of which were spent in Lancaster.

On Sept. 30, 1899, Mr. Young resigned, and in company with George R. and E. R. Heisey, of Marietta, he established the H. Y. H. Tea and Coffee store, at No. 114 North Queen street. In this business William L. Young, mentioned above, took part as an assistant. The business grew so rapidly that inside of a year it was converted into a department tea and coffee store, introducing brands and grades of goods never before offered to the Lancaster public, the firm thus becoming educators and pioneers.

In this departure from old time methods, Mr. Young was cheerfully and gladly sustained by the public. Late in the summer of 1901, after having been in business about two years, the H. Y. H. Tea and Coffee Company closed its affairs, and retired from business. Mr. Young was recalled by the Grand Union Tea and Coffee Company and again became the manager of their Lancaster store, a frontier he had held before with so great credit to himself and with so much satisfaction to the company.

PETER A. KRODEL. Among the prominent and enterprising business citizens of Columbia none are better or more favorably known than Peter A. Krodel, who conducts one of the largest mercantile houses in the city, his line including dry-goods, millinery, cloaks and notions.

Mr. Krodel was born in Columbia, March 29, 1844, son of Conrad and Anna Dorothea (Eller) Krodel, who were born in Bavaria, Germany, Dec. 22, 1794, and July 2, 1800, respectively. In 1812 Conrad Krodel was conscripted, and he served six years in the Prussian army, seeing some hard service until the fall of Napoleon Bonaparte. In 1818 he was honorably discharged, and returned home. Some years later he married. In the fall of 1837 he started for America with his family, landing at New York, Jan. 1, 1838, and arriving at Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., a week later. There he made his home until 1848, when he moved his family to York county, and there engaged in farming until 1865, when he sold out and moved back to Columbia, where he died in 1867. The mother survived until 1876. Both were buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery. During life both father and mother were active and consistent members of the German Lutheran Church, in which they were beloved and respected. Three children were born to them: Margaret, who died in 1856; John J., who died in 1891, in Elizabethtown, where he was well known as a most reliable carpenter and builder; and Peter A.

Peter A. Krodel spent his early years on a farm, but his natural inclination has never been toward an agricultural life. When he was but four years old his parents moved to York county, where he remained until 1862, at which time he engaged with Jacob Sneath, then living at Mountville, to learn the carpenter's trade, at which he continued until 1876. He then opened up a grocery business, successfully conducting the same until 1880, when his energy and enterprise induced him to open up the magnificent store which is an adornment to the town. He carries on a business of which Columbia is proud, and has built up a trade very gratifying to himself. His relations with his customers are such that he has gained their confidence, a feeling which is constantly on the increase.

Mr. Krodel was married in Columbia, in October, 1872, to Miss Emily F. Fischer, and the following named children have been born to this union:

Mary and Della, who died in infancy; Anna, who died at the age of seven; Florence, who died in infancy; Charles, who died at the age of four; and Charles F. and T. Johnson, the latter of whom has been organist of St. Paul's P. E. Church since the age of seventeen, and is an accomplished musician, both on the piano and pipe organ. Charles is a fine violinist, and leader of Krodel Brothers Orchestra; both the boys are bright and intelligent, and are particularly gifted in music.

Mrs. Krodel was born in Columbia, on the same block in which she now lives, daughter of John and Barbara (Siebert) Fischer, of Mecklenburg and Bavaria, Germany, respectively, the former of whom located in Columbia, where he followed his trade of cabinetmaker, polisher and engraver, and was considered a finished workman. His death occurred at the age of fifty-eight, his widow surviving until 1899; she was seventy-three at the time of her death. Mr. Fischer was a man of wealth and prominence in his native country. He was much missed, and was buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery. He and his wife had been connected with the Lutheran Church, in which they were known as worthy and deservedly esteemed people. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Fischer were: Mary, who married Charles F. Fager, of Columbia; Emily F., Mrs. Krodel; Lydia, who died at the age of twenty; and Barbara, who lived to be but two. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Krodel were Ernest and Magdalena (Schroeder) Fischer, of Mecklenburg, Germany, where they lived out their lives, and were people of wealth and prominence; all the relations surviving are there yet and occupy important stations both socially and politically.

Mr. Krodel has been connected with the Masonic fraternity for over thirty years, being a past officer in Chapter, Commandery and Illustrious Order of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine. Although the family are not formally connected with the Lutheran Church, they worship there, and are most generous and willing contributors to all its charities.

CHRISTIAN HERSHEY was in his life time one of the well-known men of Paradise township, where his industrious habits, honest character and genial disposition made him one of the leading farmers of that portion of Lancaster county.

Mr. Hershey was born in Leacock township, May 7, 1813, son of Christian, Sr., and Susie (Hershey) Hershey, and died May 15, 1895. All his earlier years were spent in his parents' home. His first marriage occurred in February, 1837, when Barbara Stauffer became his wife. She became the mother of four children: Susie and Henry, both deceased; Isaac, who died at the age of thirty-two years; and Annie, wife of Samuel Denlinger, of Paradise township. Mrs. Hershey died in 1844, and Christian Hershey was married in 1845 to his second wife, Magdalena Metzler, a daughter of Christian and Nancy (Werner) Metzler; she was born in Conestoga township, Oct. 12, 1824, and is still living. When she was a little girl the family moved into Paradise township, where her life has since been passed. Christian Hershey followed farming until he retired, which he did some years before his death. One of the successful farmers of Lancaster county, he was widely known as an upright and kind-hearted man.

Christian Hershey and his wife Magdalena had the following family: Lizzie, who died at the age of sixteen years; Barbara, wife of Elam Brockhill, of Paradise township; Mary, wife of Christian Brockhill, collector of Paradise township; Abraham, who resides in Detroit, Mich., where he is engaged in the furniture business (he married Martha Cling); Christian, who died in infancy; Benjamin, a retired farmer, living at Gordonville, where he is a member of the school board; Magdalena, at home; Hettie, who died in childhood; Sarah, wife of Levi Wenger, of Gordonville; Israel, a resident of Lancaster, who married Magdalena Eaby; Joseph, who married Magdalena Hershey, and resides at Paradise; and Amos, who married Miss Sarah Groff, and resides in the old home in Paradise township, where he is a tax collector.

Mr. Hershey, his wife, and all their children with the exception of three, joined the Old Mennonite Church. Two of the three belong to the Reformed Mennonite Church, and all are counted among the very best people of this part of Lancaster county. There are thirty-one grandchildren in the family, and are all bright and intelligent young people, giving promise of success and honor in life.

WILLIAM LLOYD JACKSON, a retired farmer of Christiana, is a son of James and Abigail (Rakestraw) Jackson, who were born in Chester county, Pa., and in 1843 settled in Bart township, Lancaster county. The father was a farmer. He died in April, 1881, at the age of seventy-two years, and the mother was seventy-one at the time of her death, in October, 1881. They were members of the Society of Friends, in which the father was a minister for some twenty years. They had the following children: Mary, who married Joseph Brocius, of Chester county, Pa.; Thomas, who died at the age of two years; Eliza, deceased, who married Thomas Baker; Edith, who died young; Lydia, who married James Brinton; William L., whose name appears above; Ellwood, a farmer at Nine Points, Lancaster county; and James J., a farmer in Lancaster county.

William Lloyd Jackson was married March 23, 1865, at the home of the bride, in Sadsbury township, to Lydia Walter. Children as follows were born to this union: Hannah married Charles Maule, a farmer in Sadsbury township, by whom she has three children; James died at the age of nineteen; Mary married John Morris, and lives in Chester county; Elsie married Gilbert Everson, a farmer in Sadsbury township; Jessie Walter is attending the University of Michigan; George Walter is at home. Mrs. Lydia (Walter) Jackson was born in Chester county, daughter of George H. Walter, and sister of B. F. Walter, a leading citizen of Christiana.

William L. Jackson lived with his parents until his marriage, when he began farming in Sadsbury township. Twenty years later he bought the property upon which he now resides. He has led a useful life. He owns three good farms, and is one of the thrifty and provident farmers whose industry and integrity have greatly raised the level of agriculture in Lancaster county. For more than twenty years Mr. Jackson has filled the position of school director, and he has taken a lively interest in every move and enterprise looking to the common good and the welfare of all. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and in politics is a Republican.

John Brubaker, the father, was born in 1800, and died in 1855. He married Martha Sides, of another old family of the county, and they had ten children, nine of whom grew to maturity: George, of Lancaster; Rolandus; Barbara, deceased; John, of Martic township; Susan, wife of Thomas Lebozier, of Martic township; Henry, of Martic township; Benjamin (a twin brother of Henry), who died in 1863, in the army; Martha M., wife of David Kreider of Martic; and Fannie, wife of John Alexander.

Rolandus Brubaker is one of the substantial and highly respected men of Martic township, and his long and honorable life of adherence to duty teaches its own lesson and shows its reward. His early efforts were carried on with very limited means, and when the country needed his services he put aside his own interests and became, in 1863, one of her defenders. He served in the 50th P. V. I., in the Army of the Potomac, and made a fine record as a soldier. Subsequently he became a successful farmer, and he is entitled to his life of ease in retirement from activity, having worked hard to accumulate his ample means. His large, well improved farm contains 223 acres, well stocked.

In 1849 Mr. Brubaker married Miss Jane Steward, who was born in 1829, and died in 1897, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Nelson) Steward, of Lancaster county. Four children came to this union, namely: William, born in 1850, is an engineer, and lives in Cleveland, Ohio; Oscar D., born in 1855, married Miss Dora McGuigeon, of Martic township, and has charge of the old home place; John T., born in 1857, is a blacksmith of Mt. Nebo, and prominent in local politics; Harry C., born in 1868, is a resident of Lancaster.

In politics Mr. Brubaker is a staunch Republican. He has long been a member of the M. E. Church of Mt. Nebo. He is held in the highest esteem in his community as a man of integrity, of charitable impulses, and of exalted Christian character, one who numbers the best in his neighborhood among his warmest personal friends.

GEORGE W. GRESS, a well-known resident of Columbia, Lancaster county, and a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, was born on a farm in Franklin county, Pa., Dec. 18, 1845, son of George and Mary (Thomas) Gress, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in Franklin county, Pennsylvania.

George Gress, the father, was born in 1810, and came to America when a young man with two brothers, one of whom was Adam. George was a shoemaker and farmer. He was married in Franklin county, Pa., and to this union were born nine children, in the following order: John, who died in Salisbury prison, N. C., during the war of the Rebellion; Sarah, deceased wife of Jacob Weiser; Margaret, married to Abram Zimmerman, a farmer of Ironville, Pa.; George W., whose name opens this sketch, Catherine T., of Columbia, widow of Henry C. Long; Peter C., a physician in Atchison, Kans.; Ellen M., unmarried, and a resident of Philadelphia; Matilda, deceased wife of Frederick Stotts; and Hezekiah, of Mechanicsburg. George Gress, the father of this family, passed away in 1885, a member of the German Reformed Church, and his wife died in 1889, when sixty-nine years old.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Gress, also named George, was sixteen years in the German army as cavalryman, was an officer, and died in his native land. The maternal grandparents were Samuel and Sarah (Ballow) Thomas, of Franklin county, Pa., the former of Irish parentage.

George W. Gress, whose name opens this sketch, lived on the home farm until twenty years old, and then worked on a farm in Illinois for two years. Coming east again he worked in a tannery two years, and on Oct. 18, 1870, took up his home in Columbia, entering the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company as brakeman and flagman; he filled these positions ten years, and was then promoted to conductor.

On Nov. 12, 1874, in Lancaster, Mr. Gress married Miss Mary B. Hiestand, and to this marriage have been born five children, viz.: Minnie Kathrynne was married, Jan. 30, 1901, to Daniel Webster Meredith, of New York; Harvey Hiestand enlisted in 1898 in Co. G, 4th United States Infantry, for three years, and served three years in the Philippine Islands, in that command and in Co. G, 21st Infantry, receiving an honorable discharge June 3, 1902; Elizabeth Mae, Anna Mary and Charles W. are at home.

Mrs. Mary B. (Hiestand) Gress was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Oct. 11, 1847, daughter of Jacob D. and Mary (Bruckhart) Hiestand, both of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a prosperous farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Hiestand had three children, namely: Elizabeth, who died young; Mary B., now Mrs. George W. Gress; and Martha B., unmarried, and a resident of Freeport, Ill. Mr. Hiestand died in August, 1849, at the early age of twenty-eight years, and his wife died in November, 1851, aged twenty-six years.

The paternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Gress was a patriot in the war of the Revolution, and her paternal grandparents, John and Susan (Gamber) Hiestand, were farming people in Lancaster county, as were also her maternal grandparents, John and Martha (Kridner) Bruckhart.

Mr. Gress and his family are members of the German Reformed Church, and in politics he is a Republican. Socially the family are held in very high esteem, and each member is individually respected for his or her personal merits.

CHRISTIAN G. CARPENTER, a prosperous cigar manufacturer and farmer of Brunnerville, is descended from an old German family of Lancaster county. His grandfather, who lived and died in the county, was the father of the following named children: Mary, Mrs. Weidner; George, a farmer of Warwick township; Jacob, who was engaged in general work; and Emanuel, the father of Christian G.

Emanuel Carpenter was born in 1812 in Warwick township. He learned the carpenter's trade in early life, and followed it until about 1868, during the remainder of his active life keeping hotel at Brunnerville and Warwick. He died in February, 1896. Mr. Carpenter married Miss Fianna Good, and they became the parents of nine children: Mary, wife of Levi Kemper; Frank, deceased, who kept hotel at Warwick and Brunnerville; Joseph, deceased, who was a carpenter by trade; Samuel, of Kansas, also a carpenter; Christian G.; Rebecca, wife of John B. Graybill; Emanuel, who was employed at general work; Josephine, wife of George Hallacker; and Catherine, who died in infancy.

Christian G. Carpenter was born in Brownstown, Lancaster county, Sept. 11, 1841, and lived at home until he was seventeen years old. He was educated in the common schools of the county. On beginning life for himself he clerked two years for Bare & Hissill, in Oregon, this county, and there, at the call of his country, he enlisted, Sept. 21, 1861, in Co. F, 9th Pa. Cavalry, for three years. He was mustered out of the service in Harrisburg Jan. 5, 1865. After a short vacation he went to work for the Pennsylvania Railway Co., at his trade, in Philadelphia, and continued thus for about twenty years. The next two years he spent in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. In 1893 he moved to his present place of residence, where he has carried on cigar manufacturing and farming, meeting with good success. Mr.

Carpenter is a member of the Artisans Order of Mutual Protection, in Philadelphia. In religious connection he is a member of the M. E. Church, and active in its work, being superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Mr. Carpenter ranks among the best citizens of his locality, and takes high standing in business, social and church circles. He was married to Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Seth and Hannah Buckwalter, of Lancaster county, and to this union have been born two children: Florence May, born Dec. 7, 1867, who lives at home; and Stella Lajune, born Jan. 31, 1875, wife of John M. Reighter, of Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

JOHN KESSLER, a blacksmith and coach-maker at Kinzer's, Lancaster county, was born in Soudersburg, this county, Sept. 5, 1857, a son of David and Mary (Myres) Kessler. The mother, who still survives, is now aged seventy-six years. The father died at the age of sixty-eight years, in 1892, at the home of his son John. David Kessler was born in Lancaster county, and was a son of Leonard Kessler, who came from Germany, was a wheelwright by trade, and carried on that business for years at Soudersburg, finally selling out to his son David (noted above as the father of John), who continued the business for years. Finally selling out, he bought a farm in Salisbury township, containing some eighty acres, not far from Cambridge. To this he added a small tract, and there he made his home as long as he lived. He and his wife belonged to the Presbyterian Church at Pequea, Salisbury township. Mrs. Kessler was born in Berks county, Pa. To Mr. and Mrs. Kessler were born the following family: Lizzie, the wife of Henry Gault, of Cambridge, Amos, a blacksmith, of Cambridge (he married Miss Abbie Obenkirk); John; Dollie, the wife of William Witman, of Mast, Salisbury township; Ida, who married Jacob Fisher, of Chester county, and is deceased; Harry, who went to blacksmithing in 1877, and died in 1878, aged eighteen years; Susie, who died unmarried; and Sallie, who died in infancy.

John Kessler was reared on the farm, and received his education in the public schools. When he was eighteen he began to learn the blacksmith's trade, which he mastered, and then located, in 1879, in Buena Vista, where he carried on his trade for seven years. His second location was at Kinzer's, where he is still engaged in business. There he purchased ground and erected a building for the manufacture of carriages and all kinds of vehicles. He thoroughly understands his trade, and his own work is rated very highly. He has done as much as, or more than, any other man in the town in the way of building up the village, having erected three dwelling houses and a large shop.

John Kessler was married, Dec. 23, 1878, to Miss Mary Skiles, who was reared in the family of Samuel S. Kauffman, of Kinzer's, and to this union have come two daughters, Laura Amanda and Sarah Emma, the latter of whom died in infancy; they also have adopted a son, Charles Fisher. Mr. and Mrs. Kessler are members of the Gap Methodist Church, of which he has served as a trustee for fifteen years. They are associated with the best elements of the community in which they live.

REV. CLEVELAND FRAME, the present pastor of Pequea Presbyterian Church, was ordained in 1897. He was born in Philadelphia, a son of Samuel and Mary (Armstrong) Frame, who still reside in that city, and to whom have been born eight children, as follows: William, who died in infancy; Sadie H., wife of Jacob Sieman, of Wilmington, Del., now deceased; William James, Mary and Samuel, who died in infancy; Rev. Cleveland; Asher, living in Philadelphia; and Elwood T., living at Jenkintown, Pennsylvania.

Rev. Cleveland Frame was educated primarily in the public schools of Philadelphia, which he attended until thirteen years old, and was then employed in a retail dry-goods store for five years, and for two years was employed in a wholesale dry-goods house. He left the mercantile world at the end of that time and prepared for college at Rittenhouse Academy, in Philadelphia, and, in 1890, entered Princeton College, from which he graduated in 1894; he then entered Princeton Theological Seminary, and graduated from there in 1897. During his theological course he also did post-graduate work in Princeton College, and in 1896 had conferred upon him the degree of M. A. In 1896, also, he was licensed to preach by the Philadelphia Presbytery, and in 1897 he was ordained in Lancaster by the Westminster Presbytery and assumed his present charge, which includes the librarianship of the John McAlly Library, in South Hermitage, for which he purchases all the literary matter.

In 1897 Rev. Cleveland Frame was married to Miss Mary Robinson Hunter, who was born in Philadelphia, and is the daughter of Charles and Catherine (Robinson) Hunter. The mother is now deceased and the father resides in Philadelphia. To Mr. and Mrs. Hunter were born five children: Margaret, wife of Rev. Robert H. Kirk, pastor of the Union Church of Colerain township; Andrew, a physician, living at McKeesport, Pa.; Mary R., the wife of Rev. Cleveland Frame; Catherine and Robert J., living in Philadelphia.

MARTIN K. BRUBAKER. In reviewing the prominent and representative men of Mt. Joy the name of Martin K. Brubaker comes to the front, as a successful farmer, tobacco raiser and cider manufacturer, as well as one of the most highly respected citizens of the locality. Through ancestry and marriage Mr. Brubaker is connected with some of the oldest and most honorable families of Lancaster county.

Martin K. Brubaker was born in Warwick township Nov. 11, 1854, son of Jonas and Leah G. (Kellar) Brubaker, the former of whom was a prominent farmer in his township, and served as a school director. He was a consistent member of the Mennonite Church. He died in Warwick township May 10, 1897, at the age of seventy-one years, nine months, eighteen days, his widow only surviving until Dec. 18, 1897, when she passed away at the age of sixty-six years, eight months, twelve days; both were laid to rest in Erb's cemetery, in Warwick township. The children born to these good people were: Nathaniel, a cider manufacturer of Warwick township; Catherine, who died young; Clement, a retired farmer of East Donegal township; Anna, who died young; Martin K.; Elizabeth, who resides on the old homestead; Barbara, who died young; Levy, who resides on the old homestead with his sister; and Jonas, who died young.

None of the retired farmers of Brunnerville, this county, enjoyed more respect than did Joseph and Mary (Bucher) Brubaker, Mr. Brubaker's paternal grandparents. His maternal grandparents, Frederick and Magdalena (Gross) Kellar, were highly esteemed among the farming people in the neighborhood of Lititz.

The life of Mr. Brubaker has been almost entirely devoted to agricultural pursuits. Born and reared on a farm, he remained at home until he was twenty-five years old, and then removed to one of his father's farms, in East Donegal township, where he remained for three years. He then came to Mt. Joy and entered upon the business of tobacco farming, which he pursued for a number of years very successfully. In 1900 he again resumed tobacco farming, and has been very successful in his culture of that plant. In 1887 he engaged in the manufacture of cider on a large scale, placing a very fine article on the market. Since 1883 the family has resided upon the present location, which is one of the most desirable in the neighborhood.

Martin K. Brubaker was married Oct. 30, 1879, on the old farm, to Miss Anna Bear, and the following named children have been born to this union: Irvin B., born March 29, 1881; Nathan B., Oct. 20, 1884; Edwin B., March 4, 1887; Jonas B., June 7, 1889; Samuel B., Aug. 17, 1891; Ruth B., March 18, 1897; and Anna Vesta, June 17, 1901. All are under the parental roof, a happy, united family.

Mrs. Anna (Bear) Brubaker was born in Mt. Joy July 22, 1861, the estimable daughter of Samuel and Anna A. (Lane) Bear, of near Lititz, and of Manheim township, respectively. Samuel Bear came to Mt. Joy in 1857, and followed the trade of milling, dying there in 1866, at the age of thirty. The mother of Mrs. Brubaker died in Manheim township in 1875, at the age of thirty-eight, and both were buried in the township where their last days were passed, the former in Donegal, the latter in Manheim. The mother was a devout and consistent member of the U. B. Church. By her first marriage she had two children: Anna, Mrs. Brubaker, and Frances M., who married Amos R. Nissley, a retired farmer of Florin. Mrs. Bear married for her second husband John Keehler, and became the mother of three children: Alice, who married Milton Landis, a farmer of Hinkletown; Elizabeth, who died young; and John, a farmer of this county. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Brubaker were Gabriel and Anna (Rudy) Bear, of Chester county, the former of whom was a son of Samuel and Barbara (Weaver) Bear. The maternal grandparents were Abraham and Anna (Long) Lane, farming people of Manheim township.

Mr. Brubaker has always taken an intelligent interest in matters of public policy, and has voted with the Republican party, and both he and his wife are among the leading members of the Mennonite Church.

JOHN B. MYLIN, deceased. On Sept. 17, 1899, there passed from life one of the representative men of Lancaster county, a member of the old and honorable family of West Lampeter township. Mr. Mylin was born in the old Mylin homestead in Willowstreet, Nov. 10, 1809, when the nineteenth century was still young, and lived a long and useful life, at the close of which the esteem in which he was held was only equaled by the love and affection he had inspired, not only in his own family, but throughout the community.

John B. Mylin was a son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Barr) Mylin, was reared on the farm, and was the only one of the five sons who clung to the soil. Others went out into the world in search of careers, but he found a congenial life occupation in farming and the raising of stock, and in time became one of the leading agriculturists of the county. His delight was in fine horses, and his finely bred animals were noted for their excellent points. John B. Mylin received his education in the public schools, in which he ever after took a deep interest, and he served on the board of education for a period of twelve years. Of a genial, pleasant disposition, he made many friends, and was known for his generosity and benevolence. His massive frame and agreeable personality made him a noticeable figure among his neighbors, by whom he was affectionately styled "Uncle John." He was a man of strong convictions, and as a Republican he never left any one in doubt as to his party affiliations. Delighting in the best farm, the best cattle and the finest horses in West Lampeter township, John B. Mylin, in 1884, erected one of the finest houses in his section of the country, in the village of Willowstreet, where he lived until his death, at which time he was a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church.

John B. Mylin married Mattie Stehman, the only daughter of Tobias and Mattie Stehman, of Conestoga township, who was born June 26, 1819, and died March 2, 1888. A family of four children survived them: Henry S. married Levinia M. Hoover, and at the time of his death was a farmer; Aldus C. is a farmer on the old homestead in West Lampeter township; Martha E. was married Dec. 7, 1892, to Abraham Lincoln Eshbach; and Amanda C. married Martin Lefever, of West Lampeter township.

ABRAHAM L. ESHBACH was born at Millersville, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Michael and Anna R. (Haverstick) Eshbach, the former of whom died Oct. 1, 1879; the latter, who still survives, is a resident of Lancaster city. The father was born in Millersville, and was reared there and educated in the public schools. Later he adopted farming as his vocation, and became one of the representative agriculturists of his section. He was a lifelong member of the Old Mennonite Church, as was also his wife, and both were noted for their admirable traits of character. Michael Eshbach married Anna R. Haverstick, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rush) Haverstick, and to them were born seven children: Jacob, who is a resident of Lancaster city; Elizabeth, also a resident of that city; Katie, who died in childhood; Teresa, deceased, who was the wife of F. F. Able, and died at the age of forty-seven; John, a farmer of Martic township; Isaac, a farmer of Providence township; and Abraham L.

Abraham L. Eshbach was reared at Millersville and remained with his parents until the age of maturity, when he engaged in farming for himself, locating at Neffsville. There he continued for five years, after which he accepted a position as clerk in a general store in the city of Reading, Pa., where he was engaged for three years. Coming then to Willowstreet, he opened up a general mercantile business, and for four years successfully conducted the same. Two years after his location in that place he was appointed postmaster at Willowstreet, which position he has held continuously ever since 1893. The cares of his office and of the conduct of his large farm induced Mr. Eshbach to dispose of his stock of goods. As the owner of 230 acres of some of the finest land in Lancaster county, and as one of the largest stock and cattle raisers of the locality, he is justly regarded as one of the most substantial citizens of West Lampeter. In April, 1899, he purchased the store property which he occupies, and which is in the best part of the village of Willowstreet, being considered one of the best locations, from a business point of view, in that part of the country. All of his property is kept in good repair, the five complete sets of buildings on the farm receiving careful attention, and the whole estate being conducted in a thrifty and judicious manner.

Like his respected father-in-law, Mr. Eshbach is a staunch Republican, and he has taken an active part in the deliberations of the local wing of his party. The religious connection of both himself and wife is with the Beohms Methodist Episcopal Church at Willowstreet, in which Mr. Eshbach is a trustee, a steward and superintendent of the Sunday-school. His interest in church and educational matters is well known, and he has been a delegate to the M. E. conventions at times, the last one being held in Harrisburg, in 1900. Both Mr. and Mrs. Eshbach are among the most highly respected residents of their part of Lancaster county.

J. MONROE MARKLEY, who is engaged in the butcher business and farming at Lexington, is one of the prosperous and respected residents of that section of Lancaster county. He descends from an old German family of the section, his grandfather, Leonard Markley, having emigrated from Germany and settled in Lancaster county, where he followed farming all his life. He was the father of the following named children: Abraham, the father of J. Monroe; John, deceased, who was a merchant in Ohio; Jacob, a watchmaker of Whiteoak; Isaac, deceased, who was a farmer of Lancaster county; Elizabeth, wife of David Hellman; Mary, wife of Fred Uncle, of Philadelphia; and Catherine, deceased, who was the wife of George Unger.

Abraham Markley was born in Lexington in 1829. He was occupied as a carpet weaver and stonemason, and in the latter part of his life he started butchering, in Lexington, in all these lines meeting with success. He married Miss Annie Markley, daughter of Michael Markley, and they became the parents of two children: Louisa, deceased wife of Harry Eusminger, a painter of Manheim; and J. Monroe, whose name introduces this article.

J. Monroe Markley was born in Lexington Feb. 19, 1854. He remained at home until he was twenty-five years of age, and learned the butcher business. During his boyhood he attended the common schools of the county. On commencing business life for himself he started butchering in the place where he is still located, and has been engaged in that line continuously, as well as in farming. Industry and good management have brought their just rewards, and he has met with deserved success in business.

In October, 1879, Mr. Markley was married to Miss Mary B. Brubaker, daughter of Moses and Mollie Brubaker. This marriage has been blessed with two children: Edwin B., born Aug. 28, 1880; and Harvey B., born March 17, 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Markley are both members of the German Baptist Church.

JOHN H. WARFEL, a resident of East Hempfield township, whose home is at Rohrerstown, Lancaster county, belongs to an old and honored family, and worthily wears a noble name.

John B. Warfel, his father, was born in Conestoga township, where he was reared, and where he spent his life engaged in farming. Jacob Warfel, the grandfather of John H., was a farmer, and a resident of Conestoga township. John B. Warfel owned and conducted a farm of 115 acres, where he died in 1867, at the early age of forty-three years. He married Elizabeth Hess, daughter of Abraham Hess, a minister in the Dunker Church, and she is still living, having her home in Conestoga Center. They had a large family, remarkable for both its numbers and the general intelligence and high character of all its members: (1) Fannie is the wife of Frank Hackman, of Rohrerstown; (2) Lizzie is the wife of George Fry, of Manor township; (3) Hettie is the wife of James Entis, of Rohrerstown; (4) Jacob married Anna Johnson, and lives in Strasburg township; (5) Susan married Abraham Charles, of Manor township, and is deceased; (6) Barbara is deceased; (7) Annie is the wife of Benjamin Kreider, of Rohrerstown; (8) Benjamin married Mary Herr, and is deceased (his widow resides in Millersville); (9) John H. is mentioned below; (10) Emma married Harvey Miller, of East Hempfield township, and is deceased; (11) George married Christie Witmer, and lives in Rohrerstown; (12) Frederick is deceased. The parents of this family were devout members of the Dunker Church.

John H. Warfel was born Aug. 27, 1860, and was reared in Conestoga and Manor townships, where he attended public school until he was sixteen years of age, at which time he started out for himself, being employed for a time at farm labor. In 1881 he began market gardening and fruit raising on the place where he is now located. His fruit culture is very interesting, his work covering such a wide range, being attended with such excellent results. He has extensive greenhouse facilities, and all his operations are thoroughly modern and up-to-date.

Mr. Warfel was married, in February, 1880, to Miss Sonora Peifer, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Manning) Peifer, and to them has come one child, Oscar P., who is at home. They attend the Church of God, of which Mr. Warfel is a member. The family are well regarded and much esteemed by those who know them—their neighbors in the community where they live. Mr. Warfel is a Republican.

ISAAC DILLER EBY, prison inspector for Lancaster county and a general farmer of Salisbury township, is one of the leading men and much respected citizens of his locality. He was born on his present farm May 14, 1863, son of Christian and Margaret (Diller) Eby, of Salisbury township.

Christian Eby was brought by his parents to his son's present farm, at the age of eighteen months, and there made his home through life, his death occurring March 29, 1891, at the age of sixty-seven years, two months, twenty-seven days. He was buried in Hershey's Mennonite cemetery. His widow, born in 1829, still resides on the old homestead. Their children were: Anna, who married Alfred Wanner, a farmer of Salisbury township; Amanda, who married Samuel Reeser, of Salisbury township; Isaac D.; and John N., who married Ida Reeser, and died at the age of twenty-eight years.

Isaac Diller Eby was educated in the common schools of his locality, and has followed an agricultural life almost exclusively. He is well-known in his neighborhood as one of the solid, reliable men and intelligent and upright citizens, and has been somewhat active in politics. His sympathies are with the Republican party. For the past two years Mr. Eby has been the very capable prison inspector of Lancaster county, a position requiring an excellence of judgment and an eye to business details which few men possess to a greater degree than he. For three years he served on the school board, and was active in effecting a number of desirable improvements in his district.

On Oct. 14, 1886, in the Salisbury township Presbyterian parsonage, Mr. Eby was united in marriage to Miss Martha E. Worst, and three children have been born to this union, namely: Chester W., Margie J. and Anna L. Mrs. Martha E. (Worst) Eby was born in Salisbury township, July 25, 1865, daughter of Samuel and Anna (Kurtz) Worst, the former of whom is a retired farmer of Salisbury township. Mrs. Worst died Feb. 8, 1896, at the age of sixty-seven years, and was interred in the Pequea Presbyterian Church cemetery. Both parents were long connected with the Presbyterian Church and most highly esteemed in that religious body. Their children were: Mary, who married J. F. Seldomridge, proprietor of a hotel at White Horse, Pa.; Ida, who married Milton Bair, of West Leacock township; Amanda, who married Milton Hershey, of Leacock township; Barbara; Martha E.; Susan; Frederick; and Laurel. These families and their connections represent some of the best and most substantial people of Lancaster county, citizens noted for intelligence, high moral character and social prominence.

FRANK X. SCHLEGELMILCH, the popular assistant freight and ticket agent of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, at Watts Station, in East Donegal township, Lancaster county, was born at the Station Feb. 2, 1859.

Frank Schlegelmilch, his father, was born in Baden, Germany, Jan. 28, 1828, and was a wagon-maker by trade. After a voyage of sixty-eight days on the ocean he landed in America, in 1846. He first located at Florin, then known as Springville, Lancaster Co., Pa., and in April, 1853, removed to Watts. He was married in Lebanon, Pa., to Miss Elizabeth Hartman, who was born in Berks county, Pa., Aug. 14, 1829. This union was graced with four children, viz.: Rebecca, Michael and Leo, deceased, and Frank X. The father continued active work at wagonmaking until 1882, and then retired to enjoy in peace the competence his industry had won. The paternal grandfather of Frank X. Schlegelmilch, also named Frank, was a distiller, and lived and died in Germany; the maternal grandfather, Michael Hartman, was born in Berks county, removed to Lebanon county, and passed his life in agricultural pursuits.

Frank X. Schlegelmilch at the age of thirteen years began learning his trade in his father's wagon shop, and continued at the business nine years. He next worked at the Vestra furnace for three months, and then, May 2, 1884, entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, as assistant freight and ticket agent—a position he has since filled in the most satisfactory manner.

Mr. Schlegelmilch was united in marriage, in Philadelphia, with Miss Anna Cleary, and this union has been blessed with three children, viz.: Frank X., Elizabeth M. and Anna R. Mrs. Anna (Cleary) Schlegelmilch is a native of Ireland, and is a daughter of James and Eunice Cleary, the former of whom was a farmer by vocation. Both parents died in their native land, in the faith of the Catholic Church, leaving four children: William, who manages a hydraulic crane; James, a machinist; Isabella, wife of Peter Gormley—all of Philadelphia; and Anna, Mrs. Schlegelmilch.

Frank X. Schlegelmilch is a Democrat, in politics, and for three years was town councilman of Marietta, in which borough he resided for nineteen consecutive years, then returning to his native township, in 1898. In religion he is a devout Catholic, freely contributing to the support of his church and aiding it every way in its good work. He is attentive to his duties, and has won for himself the good-will and esteem of his neighbors and of the general public, both in Marietta and at Watts Station.

JOHN D. HERR is one of the enterprising and progressive farmers of Lancaster county, as well as an extensive grower of tobacco. His farm is in Manor township, and his home is located about one mile east of Mountville.

Mr. Herr was born in that township, on a farm once owned by his father. The old family residence is yet regarded as the "homestead," though now occupied by Isaac M. Neff. The family removed to the present residence of John D. Herr when he was a boy of fourteen years. Like most boys of his day and generation Mr. Herr received his early educational training in the common schools of his district. On attaining his majority he assumed the conduct of the farm, bringing to the discharge of this duty, experience, intelligence and fidelity. Through good judgment and hard work he became the owner of 150 acres in Manor township, which in 1894, for family reasons, he divided into two farms, reserving a portion for himself, which he devotes to tobacco culture. He began handling tobacco in 1887, in company with George Derr, and the venture proved a success from the outset. The partnership continued for five years, when John H. Gamber bought the interest of Mr. Derr. The partnership between Messrs. Herr & Gamber lasted about two years, and since then Mr. Herr has conducted the business alone. He has a large, well-built warehouse standing on his farm, where he stores and handles his stock. His business success has been pronounced, and has been due alike to his native capability and his recognized integrity. Mr. Herr also owns two farms in West Hempfield, their acreage aggregating 154 acres, and forty-five acres of woodland in Martic township, as well as property in Mountville. His farm buildings are among the finest in the county, and no one can drive through his land without receiving the impression that the controlling spirit has its origin in conservative thrift, careful attention and farseeing perception. An illustration of his astute management may be readily given. In 1875 he erected a fine barn, which was destroyed by fire in 1897, but within two months it was rebuilt, on a better plan. Nor has he neglected his property in West Hempfield. Active, energetic and farseeing, he is ever on the alert to guard his interests. Genial and generous, he readily makes friends and easily retains them. A man of broad public spirit, he commands the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen. In 1887 he was one of the incorporators of the Mountville National Bank, and has ever since served on the directorate of that institution. In 1890 he was one of the organizers of the Mountville Manufacturing Company, and is still a director of that corporation, in whose councils he has held the office of vice-president for many years. Mr. Herr was one of the organizers of the Mennonite Church in Mountville, and has always been one of the trustees. The present edifice was erected in 1897. The successful career of such a man affords at once a guaranty and a promise to the rising generation.

On Nov. 13, 1873, Mr. Herr married Barbara G. Nissley, who was born July 7, 1855, daughter of John and Barbara Nissley, of Rapho township. Six children have blessed the union: Anna N., born Sept. 7, 1874, is the wife of Amos K. Musser, of West Hempfield. Barbara N., born Oct. 10, 1876, married Christian N. Nissley. Alice N., born Oct. 7, 1878, married John H. Herr, of Lancaster township. Mary N. was born April 14, 1881; Sadie N., Feb. 16, 1883; Fannie N., May 13, 1891. The three younger children are at home. Mrs. Musser and Mrs. Nissley, the two eldest, are, like their father, consistent members of the Mennonite Church.

AMOS B. HARNISH. The stamp of the twentieth century is upon farming operations as well as on the conduct of metropolitan life. The primitive plough, the heavy flail, the awkward scythe, have given place to machinery manipulated by steam; the leanto shed and rail corncrib, to spacious barns and commodious outbuildings; the fences no longer consist of split rails; and instead of great swamps fields of waving grain bear evidence to the efficiency of the present drainage system. Among the progressive farmers of East Hempfield, Lancaster county, is Amos B. Harnish, who was born in West Hempfield township, this county, Nov. 3, 1859, a son of Levi and Leath (Butt) Harnish.

Abraham Harnish, the grandfather of Amos B., was one of the successful farmers of Pequea township, Lancaster county. His home farm was at Willowstreet, in that township, and in addition to that good-sized property, he owned several farms in the vicinity. He married Elizabeth Hoover. In religious belief he was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He lived to the age of seventy-five.

Levi Harnish, the father of Amos B., died Feb. 12, 1902, at the advanced age of eighty-five, having been born Sept. 2, 1816, in Pequea township. Always following farming, he located in West Hempfield when about twenty-seven, and there remained until 1885, when he took up his residence in East Hempfield township. The home farm consisted of 119 acres, which was conducted so successfully that he became a wealthy man, all through his own exertions. Late in life he connected himself with the Old Mennonite Church, of which he remained an honored member until his death. The faithful partner of his joys and sorrows passed away in 1891, at the age of sixty-eight. They had a family of nine children: Benjamin, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Abraham B., a farmer of East Hempfield township; Maggie, wife of George Hellman, of West Hempfield township; Lizzie, wife of Martin Witmer, of Manor township; John B., a farmer of West Hempfield township; Mary, wife of Henry Hattenstein, of East Hempfield township; Amos B.; Leath, wife of Daniel Landis, of East Hempfield township; and Barbara, wife of Benjamin Barr, of West Hempfield township.

Anios B. Harnish was reared upon his father's farm, receiving his education in the excellent schools of the district and during his entire life has followed the calling of a farmer, with the exception of three years, when he bought and packed tobacco. In 1894 he married Miss Elizabeth S. Spangler, daughter of Jacob Spangler, of West Hempfield, and after his marriage removed to Lancaster city, but within a year he returned to his farm in East Hempfield township. In 1895 he was called upon to take charge of his father's large property, and the following year purchased a tract of five acres in the vicinity. To himself and wife have been born two bright little children: Rena, who was taken away when but ten months and twenty-seven days old, and Lloyd S., born June 3, 1897.

Amos B. Harnish is one of the leading young Republicans of his township, and has served for three years upon the county Republican committee. When the Centerville Cemetery Association was incorporated Amos B. Harnish was very active in the organization and was selected as the man best fitted to fill the post of president, which position of trust he still holds. In all the relations of life he has proven himself worthy of the highest esteem, and justifies the confidence his fellow citizens have placed in him. In religious matters both he and his wife are consistent members of the United Brethren Church, and prominent in its good works.

EDWIN H. STAUFFER. Among the flourishing interests of Willowstreet, Lancaster county, is the mercantile business, and its most successful representative is Edwin H. Stauffer, one of the progressive and public-spirited men of the community. He bears a name that has long stood for business integrity in Lancaster county, and is a fit representative of an old and honored family.

Grandfather Isaac Stauffer was reared in Lancaster county, and spent his life there. Early in his business career he conducted a mercantile business in Pennville, where he lived until a short time prior to his death, when he removed to Lancaster city and opened up a coal business with his brother, Henry. His death occurred about a year later. His religious connection was with the German Reformed Church. His family consisted of seven children: William, Samuel, Albert, Delilah, Henry, Amanda, and one that died in early childhood.

Henry Stauffer, son of Isaac, was born at Pennville in 1842, son of Isaac and Catherine (Erb) Stauffer. He was about eight years of age when his parents removed to Lancaster, and one year later his father died, and he went to Adamstown, where he learned the trade of harnessmaker, and remained there some three years. Going then to Reamstown and thence to Reading, he spent three years at the latter place, and then located at Churchtown, Pa., in which village he conducted a business of his own for some three years more. He spent a short time in Ohio, but later returned to Lancaster county, locating first at Chestnut Level, where for eighteen years he was the best workman in the neighborhood. He then came to Willowstreet, and has since been firmly established in that village. In connection with harnessmaking, he also engages in trucking, and for three years was the Republican appointee for deputy coroner.

In 1865 Henry Stauffer married Margie Houston, a daughter of William Houston, born in Williamsport, Pa., and three children came to this union: Edwin H., the principal merchant of Willowstreet; Carrie B.; and John P., who is engaged with his father in harnessmaking.

Edwin H. Stauffer was born in Wooster, Ohio, Sept. 14, 1869, a son of Henry and Margie (Houston) Stauffer, esteemed residents of Willowstreet. He was but eight months old when his parents moved to Lancaster county, and he was reared in Drumore township and educated in the public schools. At the age of seventeen he became a clerk with the firm of George A. Frippie & Co., of Safe Harbor, remaining two years as an employe in their general store, and then went into the butcher business with J. W. Roher, in Willowstreet, for five years. But his tastes lay in the direction of merchandising, and he embraced the opportunity offered by A. L. Eshbach, and for one year was his efficient clerk. In 1893 he succeeded to the business. At that time the stock was worth only $700, but he immediately increased it to more than $12,000 worth, and he has built up a trade second to none in Lancaster county outside of Lancaster city. Mr. Stauffer is possessed of keen business faculty, and his energy, combined with good judgment, and assisted by a pleasant personality and courteous manner, will insure his future success as he yearly extends his business. One much appreciated feature he has introduced, for the enjoyment of his country trade, is that of dispensing ice cream, both wholesale and retail, during the heated term. The line carried by Mr. Stauffer includes almost all articles generally found in a first-class establishment of the kind, necessities and also luxuries, and for the past four seasons he has added farm machinery, for the convenience of his many country patrons.

On May 10, 1894, Edwin H. Stauffer was married to Carrie M. Caddy, a daughter of John R. and Louisa Caddy, and one child, Mildred, has come to this union, born in July, 1896. Socially Mr. Stauffer is a member of the K. of M. and the K. of G. E., in both of these organizations being deservedly popular. A stanch Republican, he has since Aug. 22, 1894, been the efficient deputy postmaster at Willowstreet.

DANIEL S. FISHER, superintendent of the Chestnut Hill Ore Mine, in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, and a resident of Silver Spring, was born at Sarah Furnace, in Harford county, Md., March 12, 1857, son of Anthony W. and Catherine (Schetroupf) Fisher. The parents were natives of Chester county, Pa., and Germany, respectively, the father born Aug. 12, 1819, the mother on Feb. 25, 1828. They came to Lancaster county, Pa., locating in 1868, in New Providence township, whence they removed in 1890 to Drumore township. Anthony W. Fisher is a mechanical engineer by calling, but is now retired from active labor; his last service for many years was with Christopher Geiger, in Lancaster city. He is a Republican in politics, and has served as county committeeman. Mrs. Catherine Fisher is a devout member of the Lutheran Church. To the marriage of Anthony W. and Catherine Fisher have been born seven children, in the following order: Anna M., wife of Peter Snyder, a farmer in Strasburg, Pa.; Josephine, wife of Harvey Smith, a mine superintendent living in Lancaster; Alford, a stationary engineer in New Providence township; Daniel S., whose name introduces this biographical memoir; Rebecca, married to Charles Wittick, a farmer at West Willow, this county; Ida, now Mrs. John Potts, of Eden township; and Clara, wife of David Potts, of Strasburg, this county.

Daniel S. Fisher remained with his parents until twenty-one years old, and then began work on his own account. He had entered a mine at the age of thirteen years, and from that time on followed mining with the exception of five years passed on the railroad, as repairman. Mining continued to be his occupation in Lancaster county until 1892, when he came to West Hempfield township and entered the Chestnut Hill Ore Mine, to the superintendency of which he was promoted in 1896.

On April 2, 1885, Daniel S. Fisher was united in marriage, in Quarryville, Lancaster county, to Miss Anna Potts, who has borne him nine children, in the following order: Eugene, Robert, Paul, Blanche, Lester, Helen, Carrie, Anna and Daniel H., Jr. Mrs. Anna (Potts) Fisher was born in New Providence township Feb. 10, 1867, daughter of Frank and Sarah Potts, of Lancaster county, who now reside in New Providence township, where the father is engaged in carpenter work.

Daniel S. Fisher has reached his present responsible position through his personal merits, industry and devotion to his employers' interests. He began at the foot of the ladder and persistently ascended, rung by rung, until he reached the top, where he now stands, an honored and respected man and citizen. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. O. F., and politically he is a Republican.

JOSEPH B. WEAVER. Prominent among the excellent agriculturists of East Lampeter township is Joseph B. Weaver, a worthy representative of one of the old families of Lancaster county, who still occupies the farm which was the property of his grandfather, Joseph Weaver, this estate originally consisting of 260 acres, but now comprising only 125 acres.

Joseph Weaver became a well-known and influential man in the township, and was the father of a large family, which, by marriage, has become connected with many of the other old and honorable county families. He was first married to Barbara Bear, and to this union were born: Isaac, father of Joseph B.; Ephraim, who died unmarried, at the age of forty-five; Jacob, whose death, at the age of sixteen, was due to an accident; Annie, who became the wife of John Frantz; Mary, who resides in Lancaster; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Christian Witmer, and had one son, John, who became a druggist in Philadelphia, and died at the age of twenty-nine; and Susan, who resides with her sister Mary, in Lancaster. The mother of these children died March 5, 1840. The second marriage of Joseph Weaver was to Esther (Stehman) Brubaker, widow of Samuel Brubaker, and to this union two daughters were born: Barbara, who is the wife of Amos Bowman, of Lampeter Square; and Annie, who is the wife of John Kurtz, of Lancaster. All of the family were born on the old farm now owned by Joseph B. Weaver. Joseph Weaver was an upright man, a minister in the Reformed Mennonite Church, and he and both his wives were interred in the Longenecker burial ground.

Isaac Weaver, the eldest son of Joseph, was born Sept. 20, 1820, on the farm now owned by his son, and died in 1887. His life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He and his wife were members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, in which faith they reared their children. On Oct. 20, 1850, he married Catherine Barr, and the following named children were born to them: Mary A., wife of John F. Girvin, a farmer and miller of Leacock township; Joseph B.; Aaron, Benjamin F. and Milton L., farmers of Manor township; and Elizabeth F., who died March 27, 1897.

Joseph B. Weaver was the eldest son of Isaac and Catherine (Barr) Weaver, and was born Oct. 23, 1853. His educational advantages were meager, but he has supplemented them with observation and reading, and is now regarded as one of the best-informed and most intelligent farmer-citizens of his locality.

In 1876 Mr. Weaver married Lizzie Houser, a daughter of John and Lydia (Lefever) Houser (the former of whom was a farmer), who were the parents of: Christian, deceased; Jacob L., a farmer in West Lampeter township; Kate, the wife of Abram Bachman, a farmer of Lampeter; and Lizzie, Mrs. Weaver. The parents of Mrs. Weaver are buried in the Longenecker Meeting House cemetery. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Weaver: Clara M., Harry M., M. Roy, Ada L. and Anna M.

As a successful farmer Mr. Weaver is known throughout his township. In addition to attending to his agricultural interests he also operated a chopping and saw mill, although these were conducted more for his own convenience than for any other purpose. On April 1, 1902, he purchased and took possession of the C. Musselman property, at Witmer, consisting of a coal, lumber, hay and grain business, and a feed mill. He has also continued to improve that property, adding a chopping mill. Mr. Weaver believes in modern methods and is a most progressive man. His improvements are of the latest description, and his country home is fitted up with the conveniences of a modern city residence, heated by steam, and water is conveyed to all parts of his buildings by means of pipes. Mr. Weaver's religious connection is with the church in which he was reared, and in which his family has long been a leading support. In the community, in all the relations of life, Joseph B. Weaver is considered a truly representative citizen.

HENRY H. SNAVELY is of German descent, both his parents, Christian and Elizabeth (Hartman) Snively, having been born in the Fatherland. They emigrated from Wurtemberg early in the present century, and were married in America. Both were poor, but they were industrious, and little by little, through thrift and good management, they accumulated a competence. The father began life as a farm laborer, and at the time of his death, in 1871, he was the owner of three farms, well situated and well improved. His wife survived him for twenty-seven years, passing away in 1898. Mr. Snively was a Republican in his political creed, and both he and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church. Their marriage was blessed with seven children. The three eldest—Christian, Catherine and John—are deceased. Elizabeth is the wife of Samuel M. Nolt, of Oregon, Lancaster county. Tobias is a farmer, living near Lititz. Henry H. is the sixth in order of birth, and Moses, the youngest, is a farmer of Lititz. Mr. and Mrs. Snively, with those of their children who have died, sleep in Landis Valley.

Henry H. Snively was born in Oregon, Lancaster county, Jan. 1, 1859. His early life was passed much after the fashion of the sons of other farmers of the neighborhood. The common schools gave him the only education which he ever received apart from that obtained in the broad school of experience, but he was ambitious, active and enterprising, and at the age of twenty-one he began farming on his own account. However, he found that life too quiet, and going to Rothsville Station he opened a coal and wood yard, at the same time acting as ticket agent for the Reading & Columbia railroad. From Rothsville he went to Millway, where his duties and line of business were similar. There he remained for more than three years, thence coming to Lititz, where he embarked in the hotel business, in which he was eminently successful, being well qualified for the duties of a landlord by a genial temperament and an intuitive knowledge of human nature. In 1888 he purchased the "Warwick Inn," which hostelry from 1890 until 1901 was under his personal management. He remodeled it throughout, providing accommodation for one hundred guests. In the spring of 1901 Mr. Snively retired from hotel-keeping in order to give his whole attention to his other lines of business, which have been constantly on the increase. In 1900 he commenced the erection of a comfortable modern dwelling in Lititz, the finest in the borough, where he took up his residence in 1901. For the past two years he has dealt heavily in cattle, shipping in stock cattle in the fall, and shipping out fat cattle. He also deals extensively in fancy horses. In the fall of 1901 he established a market in Lititz, where he has succeeded in establishing a lucrative patronage. After coming to Lititz Mr. Snively purchased the race track in the town, which he rechristened the Warwick Driving Park. This he conducted for five years, holding exhibitions for the trial of speed. In 1897 he opened the Warwick Sales Stables, where sales are held every alternate Saturday, and which have proved of no little advantage to the farmers in the surrounding county. Much against his own inclinations he has found himself obliged to fill the role of auctioneer, and the urbanity and honesty with which he discharges this onerous task have added not a little to his established popularity. In 1899 he purchased the Lititz Camp Grounds, where annual camp gatherings are held, and his management of the same has thus far been extremely successful. Mr. Snively is interested in all projects for the public good.

Mr. Snively was married, in 1880, to Miss Lizzie M., daughter of Jonas B. Nolt, and they have one child, Christian. Mr. Snively is one of the most esteemed and honored citizens of Lititz, broad-minded, generous and public-spirited, and has made hosts of friends who admire him for his many amiable traits and respect him for his unassailable integrity.

CHRISTIAN ESHLEMAN. Not only is the State of Pennsylvania pardonably proud of her position in the sisterhood of States, and of the number and variety of her natural resources, but she claims superiority also on account of the class of citizens which forms her agricultural community. Among these the residents of Lancaster county take no obscure place, and one of the most flourishing of its communities may be found in West Lampeter township.

The Eshleman family well represents the farming interests of West Lampeter, its members having been good citizens and industrious and worthy tillers of the soil of Lancaster county for generations. Martin Eshleman, who was the head of the branch of this family now located in West Lampeter, was a native of Providence township, where he became not only a large landowner, but an influential man, both in the affairs of the township, and also in the Old Mennonite Church. He married Elizabeth Groff, and to them came an estimable family of six stalwart sons and seven worthy daughters, who inherited excellent traits from both parents, and became the progenitors of families of their own. These children were: John; Martin; Samuel; David; Jacob; Abraham; Ann, who married Adam Thomas; Elizabeth, who married Jacob Herr, and moved to the West; Maria, who married Martin Hoover and also moved West; Fannie, who married Andrew Reese; Susie, who married David Martin; Katie, who married John Groff; and Barbara, who married Samuel Dieffenbach. The parents lived to a good old age, respected by all who knew them.

Samuel Eshleman, son of Martin, was born in Providence township in 1770, and became a very capable miller, following that vocation in his home township. After his marriage he conducted the plant known as Strohm's mill, later moving to Hummels-town, in Dauphin county, where he conducted a successful milling business for some time. Desiring to retire from this industry, he then moved into Lancaster county again, and purchased a farm in Strasburg township, upon which he remained the balance of his life, passing away at the age of seventy-three. When he could not work on the farm he kept busy teaming to both Wilmington and Philadelphia, as he was a most industrious man, energetic and frugal.

Samuel Eshleman married Anna Martin, who was born in Strasburg township in 1772, daughter of Christian and Anna (Bear) Martin, and died in her eighty-third year. Her ancestors belonged to the oldest families in the State. Two children were born of this marriage: Jacob, who died in his forty-third year, the father of Christian; and Ann, who died March 16, 1902, aged ninety years, ten days. Both Samuel Eshleman and his wife were consistent members of the Reformed Mennonite Church.

Christian Eshleman resides in West Lampeter township, between Lampeter Square and Big Springs, on a small farm which he cultivates himself, his large farm of 136 acres, located in Strasburg township, being occupied by his son. Mr. Eshleman was born in Strasburg township Aug. 10, 1834, a son of Jacob and Barbara (Miller) Eshleman, was reared on the home farm, and was a student in the public schools until the death of his father, at which time he was fifteen years old. Thus early deprived of a father's care and advice, he assumed responsibilities beyond his years, at the age of twenty-one taking entire charge of one of his father's large farms, in Strasburg township, where he followed farming for a number of years. Later he sold that place advantageously, and purchasing another farm in the same township, remained thereon for some years, the time he spent on both these farms aggregating twenty-eight years. In 1885 he purchased the farm upon which he now resides, containing but twelve acres, which is small enough to permit him to operate it comfortably without assistance. His line has been general farming, and he has proved himself a very efficient agriculturist.

Christian Eshleman was married Nov. 13, 1856, to Mary Cassel, who was born in Montgomery county, Pa., and came to Lancaster county with her parents, Samuel H. and Barbara (Hansbery) Cassel, both of whom are deceased. Samuel H. Cassel was born in Montgomery county Oct. 15, 1795, son of John and Elizabeth Cassel, the former of whom died in 1844, the latter in 1838. They were the parents of three children: Abraham, born in 1783, was a farmer of Strasburg; Maria, born in 1785, married Joseph Rittenhouse, a farmer of Montgomery county; and Samuel H. was the father of Mrs. Eshleman. Samuel H. Cassel married Barbara Hansbery, of Montgomery county, and they had the following children: Martin, born in 1820, a coachmaker, died at Witmer; Elizabeth, born in 1821, died eleven years later; Lydia, born in 1825, died at the age of sixty-four; John was born in 1826; Magdalena, born in 1828, died at the age of sixty-one; Samuel, born in 1831, a coachmaker by trade, a resident of Lancaster, was for many years one of the efficient teachers of the county, and now supplies the market with produce; Mary, born April 29, 1833, is the wife of Christian Eshleman; Aaron, born in 1835, is a coach-maker, residing in Witmer, Lancaster county; and Emanuel, born in 1837, is a truck farmer of West Lampeter township. When a young man Samuel H. Cassel, the father, learned the trade of cabinet-maker, and became a fine mechanic, but later in life he followed farming and labored faithfully as a minister in the Reformed Mennonite Church. His advent into Lancaster county was in 1853, and his ministerial labors extended over both Lancaster and Montgomery counties.

A large family was born to Christian and Mary Eshleman: Annie, born Aug. 12, 1857, died March 9, 1881; Franklin, born Dec. 6, 1858, is a farmer of Chester county, and married Grace Hall; Elizabeth, born Sept. 10, 1860, married Benjamin F. Byers, a butcher, of West Lampeter; Samuel, born Jan. 17, 1862, is a farmer of West Lampeter, and married Emma Harnish; Christian, born May 3, 1863, conducts a creamery at Shippensburg, Cumberland Co., Pa., and married Annie Albright, of Chester county; Mary, born Sept. 9, 1864, married Dr. A. J. Shartle, of Millersville, and died in 1889; Eietta was born June 4, 1866; Elam, born Oct. 28, 1868, for the past fifteen years has been one of the efficient teachers in the public schools of the county, having been thoroughly educated in the State Normal School at Millersville and in the Ohio Normal University, and also in Philadelphia (he married Mary Shaw, of Tioga county); John, born March 18, 1870, died in August, of the same year; Barbara, born Feb. 21, 1872, died in 1890; Willis E., born April 13, 1877, is a butcher by trade, and follows that profession in this locality. Christian Eshleman and his wife have reared this large family to be worthy citizens, and in religious faith all are in harmony with the teachings of the Reformed Mennonite Church. They are among the most esteemed residents of West Lampeter township.

KAUFFMAN. The earliest progenitor of the Kauffman family to settle in Lancaster county was Andrew Kauffman. He emigrated from Switzerland during the first half of the eighteenth century and located on a tract of five hundred acres near what is now Central Manor, for which he had obtained a grant. A very considerable portion of this tract yet remains in the possession of his descendants, and ranks with the best farming land in the county. Andrew Kauffman died about 1760. He was a Mennonite, and his descendants have been reared in the same religious faith. He and his wife, Elizabeth, were the parents of six sons and six daughters, viz.: Michael; Andrew; Christian; John; Jacob; Isaac; Anna, wife of Alexander Stockslager; Elizabeth, wife of Christian Myer; Mary, wife of Christian Shenk; Barbara, wife of Michael Shenk; Magdalena, wife of John Correl; and Verronica, wife of Jacob Witmer.

Michael Kauffman, the eldest son of Andrew, and the ancestor of the line we are tracing, passed his days at the paternal homestead. He married a Miss Immel, by whom he had seven sons who grew to maturity, Jacob, Abraham, Isaac, Andrew, Christian, John and Benjamin. Jacob was a miller, and erected what is now known as the Landis mill; he died after attaining the age of eighty-eight years. Abraham removed from Pennsylvania to Maryland, taking up his residence in Baltimore, where he conducted a hotel; he died in his eighty-ninth year. Isaac was a farmer of Manor township, and died in 1825, aged seventy-one years. Andrew, the fourth son, lived in Washington borough; he was a scrivener, and for many years held a commission as justice of the peace. Christian had his residence at the old homestead, and was for a half century an earnest and efficient minister of the Mennonite Church; he died Feb. 11, 1849, after reaching the age of eighty-four. John studied medicine, and was for many years a successful practitioner at Mountville. Benjamin was a farmer; he took a deep interest in public affairs, and commanded the respect of his fellow citizens to such an extent that they chose him to represent them in the Colonial Assembly; he died at the age of forty-five years.

Christian Kauffman, son of Michael, married Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac Kauffman. She was born Jan. 19, 1767, and died April 10, 1832. They had five children, and their eldest son, Benjamin, succeeded to the ownership and occupancy of the homestead, where he died in 1854, in his sixty-second year. Abraham, the second son, was a school teacher, and was held in high regard; for many years he filled the office of township assessor, and he died unmarried, at the age of seventy-two. Isaac, the third in order of birth, was a farmer; like all the members of the family, from one generation to another, he was a Mennonite, and was for many years a deacon in that denomination; he passed away at the ripe old age of eighty-six. Elizabeth, the eldest daughter, married Henry Schopf, of Manor; she died at the age of "three score years and ten." Barbara, the second daughter and fifth child, became the wife of Jacob Newcomer.

Benjamin Kauffman, the eldest son of Christian, was noted for his quiet, unassuming manners, and he seems to have been equally distinguished for a kindly and liberal disposition. He appears, however, to have viewed his "house" very much in the light of a "castle," and to have shut himself up therein after a rather exclusive fashion. He married Anna Myer, whose parents, Samuel and Barbara (Harnish) Myer, were well-known and sincerely respected residents of Conestoga township. To Benjamin Kauffman and his wife were born nine children who reached mature years. A brief mention of each may prove of interest. The eldest (1) Elizabeth, is the widow of Abraham Miller, of Manor township. (2) Leah (deceased) was the wife of George S. Mann, of Millersville. (3) Samuel is a farmer, owning and cultivating fifty-one acres of the original ancestral tract; he married Martha, daughter of Henry and Anna (Hertzler) Mellinger, and is the father of three children, Annie M., Henry M. (mentioned below) and Lizzie M. The mother died in 1879, at the age of forty-eight. (4) Benjamin C. is mentioned below. (5) Christian, born in July, 1835, is a retired farmer, and lives at Letort. He is unmarried. (6) Reuben, who resides in the same place, was born in 1838. He married Esther Hershey, daughter of Joseph and Barbara Hostetter Hershey. (7) Anna did not marry. (8) Abraham M. died leaving a wife and one child. (9) Nathaniel died unmarried.

BENJAMIN C. KAUFFMAN was born Aug. 27, 1833, grew up on the old homestead, and was educated in the common schools, the first "seat of learning" which he attended being the "old log school house" in the school district in which he was born. He was a young man of twenty-two when his father died, in 1854. The management of the homestead at once devolved upon his sturdy young shoulders, and he met the grave responsibility with the same quick perception, the same practical common sense, and the same dauntless courage, with which he has encountered every vicissitude in his latter years. At that time the paternal estate consisted of 123 acres, which is now his property, and through judicious purchase he has increased his holdings to 188 acres. This property he has improved and beautified until it has become one of the most valuable and attractive places in Manor township. He has devoted not a little attention to the propagation and raising of choice varieties of stock, and has been for many years an importer of fine breeds of Jerseys and other breeds of cattle. By this means he has done much toward improving the county's standard of cattle, thereby proving himself a public benefactor. For the last few years he has made a specialty of this branch of farming, and has become a recognized authority on the breeding and raising of stock. He is thoroughly progressive in his ideas on all subjects, and keeps fully abreast of every advance made in his day and generation. His political creed is Democratic, and both he and his family are members of the Old Mennonite Church. On Jan. 20, 1862, Mr. Kauffman married Barbara, daughter of Jacob Hoover and Barbara Shenk. She was born in Lancaster township Aug. 23, 1831. Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman had two daughters and one son, Annie, Ephraim H. and Amelia. The eldest married George W. Mann, of Manor township. Ephraim H., who married Mary Meck, lives upon the old homestead. Amelia is unmarried and lives at home.

HENRY M. KAUFFMAN was born Sept. 21, 1862, and even from youth exhibited those rare gifts of intellect which have so largely contributed to his phenomenal success. Early in life he learned the trade of machinist, and readily qualified himself as an engineer. From early boyhood he exhibited a natural aptitude for mechanical pursuits, and while he is, in large measure, self-educated, he has over and again demonstrated his superior ability in his chosen profession. His early years were passed in farm work, and his first experience in engineering work was obtained in the management of a portable threshing machine. He still owns one of these, but his own energies are exercised in a higher and broader field. He erected his present plant. As a manufacturer of steam fittings for residences he met with success from the outset, and today he commands and controls the very best custom in his line. There is no branch of the work with which he is not familiar, and no detail in any department of his establishment which does not fall under his own personal supervision, from the signing of a contract to the turning of a screw. He employs no foreman whom he does not know to be thoroughly competent, yet over all is the guiding, directing, controlling hand of the master. Apart from his extensive dealings with owners of private dwelling houses he has done excellent work for manufacturing plants. His shop is conceded to be one of the best equipped in the country as regards its facilities for the repair of farm machinery, while he also handles engines, separators, stationary engines, and boilers. He is a Democrat in politics, and has been repeatedly nominated by his party for office. On Dec. 18, 1900, Mr. Kauffman married Miss Mary F. Herr.

ANDREW MELLINGER GARBER, of Salunga, known to almost every man, woman and child in Lancaster county as the "Pillsbury flour man," comes from one of the oldest and most prominent families in that section of the State. His ancestors came to America from Switzerland, and his grandfather was a prominent farmer near Mountville, in West Hempfield township. Reuben Garber, his father, was a farmer and miller, living half a mile from Salunga, in West Hempfield township. He married Susan Mellinger, daughter of Christian Mellinger, a farmer of Manor township, and a representative of an old and influential family. Five children were born of this union, three of whom are living, namely: Reuben, who is a merchant; Christian, a farmer near Mountville; and Andrew Mellinger.

Andrew M. Garber was born on the old homestead at Silver Spring, Feb. 15, 1851, and was educated in the public schools of the district. When seventeen years old he left school and went to Mt. Union, Huntingdon county, where he secured employment at $13 a month, and paid $15 a month board and $1 a month for his laundry. This state of affairs continued for one year, when young Garber, thinking that he had had enough of this "deal," took charge of the establishment, continuing thus until 1867. He then took charge of his father's mill near Salunga, where he built up an extensive trade, and, in addition, became a wholesale dealer in Western grain and mill feed. But his enterprise did not end here, for he became the general selling agent for the Pillsbury flour, and it is in this connection that his name has become most familiar to our people. No man ever worked harder, or more successfully, in building up a trade. The sales of Pillsbury flour have increased every year since Mr. Garber represented the goods in his community, and the business is now an immense one.

Mr. Garber married Miss Minnie Herr, daughter of Daniel B. Herr, a retired resident of Rock Hill, and three children have been born of this union, one of whom died at the age of six months. The survivors are Miss Anna L., who was educated at Darlington Seminary, West Chester; and Andrew H., who was educated at Annville, the Millersville State Normal School, and the Pierce Business College, Philadelphia, and now assists his father in the business. Socially Mr. Garber belongs to the Odd Fellows and the Knights of the Golden Eagle, but he has little time for such matters, devoting himself constantly and ardently to his business. He has spared neither time, labor nor money to bring the Pillsbury flour before the public, and his handsome exhibits at county and State fairs have always been features of those gatherings. It is to his credit, as well as to that of the great flour company which he represents, that he has invariably taken first premium wherever he has exhibited, for the good taste which he displayed in arranging and presenting these goods. This fact, added to his pleasant personality, has assisted him greatly in introducing and popularizing his goods among the citizens of Lancaster county—a county that is noted for its own good flour, and where people are therefore competent to judge of the quality of the goods handled by Mr. Garber.

JOHN B. MILLEYSACK, cigar manufacturer of Lancaster, and member of a family long represented in America, was born in Lancaster in 1856, a son of Jacob and Mary (Milton) Milleysack, natives of Wabank, on the Conestoga, near Lancaster. His paternal grandfather, George Milleysack, was also a native of this county, was a lumberman by occupation, and served during the war of 1812.

When a boy Jacob Milleysack came to Lancaster city with his parents, and in early life he was a contractor and builder. He later turned his attention to the manufacture of tobacco cases for the general trade, but for the six years preceding his death, in 1881, at the age of seventy-two, he was retired from business activity. He served in the Civil war, and took an active part in politics. He worshipped in the Church of God. His wife died in 1881, at the age of sixty-nine, and is buried beside him in Lancaster cemetery. They had the following children: Julia, deceased wife of Franklin Dollar; Elizabeth, deceased wife of James Chilles; George, a soldier in the rebellion, now deceased; Rebecca, who died at the age of sixteen; Augustus, who died in the Civil war; Sarah, wife of John F. Sutter, a groceryman of Lancaster; Samuel, a soldier during the Civil war, now living at Brilliant, Ohio; Andrew, who was accidentally killed when young; Jacob, a soldier of the Civil war, now deceased; and John B.

At the age of sixteen John B. Milleysack learned the cigar-making business, and in 1882 he started an independent business for himself. He has been very successful, and owes his advancement solely to his own thrift and perseverance. In politics a Republican, he has been a school director for many years, and has taken an active interest in local political undertakings. Fraternally he is associated with the Masons, Knights of Malta, I. O. O. F., Artisans, A. O. M. P., and Jr. O. U. A. M.; he has been treasurer of the latter for many years.

In 1879 Mr. Milleysack married Mary J. Sheridan, a native of Lancaster, daughter of John and Catherine (Henry) Sheridan, of Lancaster. Mr. and Mrs. Milleysack are the parents of four children, Bertha I., Mary C., John B., Jr., and M. Alma.

JOHN S. HELLER. Among the highly esteemed and representative citizens of Lancaster county, one who for many years has successfully engaged in agricultural life in the same locality, is John S. Heller. John Heller, his grandfather, was a resident of East Lampeter township, where the father, Isaac D. Heller, was born, and where he died July 25, 1900, at the age of sixty-eight years. Isaac D. Heller married Barbara E. Stauffer, who, at her death, in 1863, aged twenty-seven years, left a family of three children: Elizabeth, deceased, who married Amos Leaman; Annie, who married David H. Kendig, of Reading, Pa.; and John S. Isaac D. Heller married for his second wife Maria Landis, who died without issue, and he then married Mary R. Buckwalter, who bore him one child, Mary, who died in infancy. Mrs. Heller still survives. Isaac D. Heller was a farmer all his life, and was a most worthy citizen, taking a great interest in educational matters in his township and serving efficiently on the school board. A leading member of the Old Mennonite Church, his influence was ever in the direction of temperance and morality. Although no politician in the public acceptance of the term, he voted the Republican ticket, and took an active interest in the success of the party which in his opinion upheld the principles which promised best for the country.

John S. Heller was born Oct. 9, 1861, in the old family homestead, and was educated in the public schools. He remained at home until he had attained his majority, assisting on the farm and being a comfort to the declining years of his parents. In November, 1882, he was married to Fannie H. Gamber, a daughter of John L. and Fannie D. (Herr) Gamber, who was born in Manor township, on the old Gamber homestead. For the eight succeeding years Mr. Heller and his family remained on the old home place, in the spring of 1891 removing to the present farm, in East Hempfield township, one mile west of the city of Lancaster, along the Columbia pike. It is a most desirable location, in one of the most fertile portions of the Keystone State. Upon this place Mr. Heller has expended time, energy and means, making it one of the best tracts of land in the locality. The place comprises eighty acres, upon which general farming is carried on, and the thorough cultivation and fine improvements make it very attractive; its proximity to the thriving city greatly enhances its value.

To John S. Heller and his wife a family of six children has been born, namely: Mary G., Hettie G., John G., Fannie G., Amanda G. and Anna G. Mr. Heller was carefully reared in the faith of the Mennonite Church, which several of his family have also joined. Like his lamented father, he is a staunch Republican, and is one of the most respected and substantial residents of the township.

GEORGE M. ROBINSON. It is not unusual for a mechanic to become a leading member of his community, but there are also those who, through force of character, aided and improved by mechanical training, become indispensable factors in the progress and prosperity of the community itself and its perpetuation by their handiwork. To this class of useful citizens does George M. Robinson, the well-known blacksmith and carriagemaker at White Horse, Pa., belong.

Mr. Robinson was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, March 4, 1850, being the third of the six children born to the marriage of William and Rebecca (Adair) Robinson, namely: John H., born in Salisbury township, Jan. 8, 1847, a blacksmith in Limeville, Pa.; Sarah, wife of Joseph Humphrey, of Philadelphia; George M.; Mary, wife of Christian Fox, of Parkesburg, Pa.; William, a farmer of Harristown, Pa.; and Westley, a merchant now deceased. William Robinson, the father of this family, was also a native of Salisbury township, was a carpenter by trade, and died in March, 1876, when fifty-six years old, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church; his remains were interred in the cemetery of that congregation at Bellevue. The mother, who is likewise a native of Salisbury township, was born there Feb. 2, 1821, and now makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Fox, in Parkesburg. She is a daughter of John and Mary (Orr) Adair, the former of whom was lost in the war of 1812.

At the age of nineteen years George M. Robinson entered the blacksmith shop of his brother John, in Salisbury township, where he served an apprenticeship of three years; he then worked as a journeyman one year, at the end of which time he started in on his own account, in a country district in the same township, and in 1880 came to White Horse.

On Jan. 30, 1873, at Honey Brook, Chester county, George M. Robinson was joined in matrimony with Miss Mary Groff, who was born in Chester county, daughter of Daniel and Rachel (Edwards) Groff, and died July 3, 1898, at the age of forty-five years, the mother of seven children, namely: Rebecca C., who died in infancy; Mary R., wife of Benjamin Spence, a farmer in Salisbury township; Lavinia C., married to Reuben Althouse, a decorator, at White Horse; Lillian, wife of David Spence, of Paradise township; and Ida M., Harry and Westley, at home. The remains of the beloved mother were interred in the Baptist Church cemetery in Salisbury township. On Dec. 25, 1900, Mr. Robinson married for his second wife, Emma J. Templin, who was born in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, May 14, 1852, daughter of James and Sarah Templin.

George M. Robinson is in politics a Republican, and, although he takes an active part in the management of local affairs and is well versed in the details of the movements of his party, he has never yet accepted a public office, although he has frequently been solicited to accept nominations at various times, and for various positions, and has been instrumental on more than one occasion in securing the success of his party at the polls, being individually very popular.

JOHN SMITH. Among the prominent and representative citizens of Christiana was John Smith, who, after a long and successful agricultural life in Lancaster county, lived for a number of years before his death, April 18, 1902, retired. His birth, on June 8, 1811, reaches back almost to the beginning of a century which has accomplished more for the world's progress than any of those which preceded it, and Mr. Smith saw some very wonderful changes in his life of more than ninety years. His parents were Jackson and Esther (Maxwell) Smith, and their residence was near Russellville, in Chester county, where they were prominent and highly respected farmers, leading members in social circles and in the Presbyterian Church. They died in 1855 and 1859, respectively, and both were buried in the cemetery of the Manor Presbyterian Church, in Chester county. The family of children born to Jackson Smith and wife numbered eleven: William; Robert; Joseph; Steward; John; Mary, who died single; Jackson, who died unmarried, a man of wealth; Martha, deceased wife of Isaac Moore; Abraham, who died wealthy, unmarried; Caleb; and Isabella, deceased wife of Jesse Smith. All of the family passed away.

It was not until after his marriage that John Smith became a resident of Lancaster county, having been reared to manhood on his father's estate, in Chester county. For two years succeeding his marriage, he operated a farm in East Lampeter township; moving then into Bart township, he lived for six years in White Hall, and lived one year at Eshleman's Mill. In 1855 he removed to Lancaster, and there engaged in the teaming business, making a specialty of the hauling of flour, and pursued this business for nine years. The two succeeding years were passed on a farm at Nine Points, in Bart township, and after this Mr. Smith retired to his late home in Christiana, where he afterward lived, surrounded by all the care and attention of a most devoted and capable daughter.

In January, 1847, John Smith was married, in Mt. Pleasant, Pa., at the home of the bride, to Miss Barbara Trout. One daughter blessed this union, Miss Lettie, who remained her father's attentive and self-sacrificing companion. Mrs. Smith was born in Mt. Pleasant, Bart township, April 1, 1812, and she died in the late home, on Oct. 8, 1886. She was a devoted member of the Mennonite Church, and she was laid to rest in the Longenecker Mennonite cemetery. Her parents, John and Mary (Free) Trout, were of Lancaster county, where the former was an undertaker, and both were consistent members of the New Mennonite Church. The children born to John and Mary Trout were: Barbara, who wedded John Smith; Anna, who married Benjamin Hand, of Goldsboro, N. C.; Catherine, wife of John Bachman, of Mount Pleasant; John, who died young; Henry, retired, living in Mt. Pleasant; George; John, deceased; Josiah, deceased; Mary, deceased wife of Augustus Miller, of Lancaster; Hannah and Susan, twins, both deceased, the former the wife of John Knighty, and the latter of George Heidlbaugh; and Abraham, deceased.

John Smith for many years was one of the most industrious and energetic men of his time, always performing his duty in any situation in which he found himself. The infirmities of age made some inroads upon a naturally robust constitution, but his eye to the last kindled and a welcome was extended to friends who crossed his hospitable threshold. In his very capable daughter, Miss Lettie Smith, he not only had a devoted child and companion, but a business manager of most excellent judgment and ability. Although Mr. Smith was reared in the Presbyterian Church, his mind leaned in the direction of the New Mennonite Church, his beloved wife having been an exemplar of that quiet, peaceful and unostentatious sect. Mr. Smith was much esteemed in Christiana, and his death was greatly deplored.

JOHN H. SCHENCK, a retired farmer in West Donegal township, is living on the farm where he was born, and which was purchased from William Penn by his great-grandfather, Mathias Blazer, nearly two hundred years ago. The remains of many of his descendants and of the progenitors of John H. Schenck are buried in a private cemetery on the farm.

John H. Schenck was born March 3, 1821, a son of Jacob and Anna (Horst) Schenck. His father was born on the farm and his mother in West Donegal township, and both died on the farm from which Jacob Schenck never removed. He was born April 15, 1791, and died Aug. 15, 1855; his widow died in 1870, and both were buried on the farm. They were members of the Mennonite Church, and had the following children: John H., whose name appears above; Joseph, who died when thirteen years old; Jacob, who died when forty-eight years old; Elizabeth, deceased in infancy; and Abraham, who was killed by a tree limb falling on him.

Joseph and Barbara (Blazer) Schenck, the paternal grandparents of John H., spent their lives on the Schenck homestead. John Schenck, the father of Joseph, came from Switzerland.

Jacob Schenck had the following brothers and sisters: John, who was born in 1781, married Barbara Reitzel; Barbara, born in 1783, died single at the age of twenty-one years; Mathias, born in 1786, lived to be eighty-three years old, and died unmarried; Joseph, born in 1780, died when young; Ephraim, born in 1794, died unmarried at the age of forty-eight; and Elizabeth, born in 1796, married Jacob Eshleman, and died at the age of seventy-seven years.

The maternal grandparents of John H. Schenck were Jacob and Elizabeth (Longenecker) Horst, born in Conoy and West Donegal townships respectively, both ending their days in the last-named community. John Horst, the father of Jacob, came from Switzerland; he had the following children: Jacob, Joseph, John, Martin, Mische, Susan, Barbara and Elizabeth.

John H. Schenck was married March 10, 1845, in Elizabethtown, to Mary Kauffman, by whom he became the father of the following children: Jonathan K., who married Amanda Stacks, and is living at home with his father, following the carpenter trade during the season; Jacob K., who married Mary Ann Ebersole, and lives on a farm in West Donegal township; Christian K., a farmer in West Donegal township, who married Elizabeth Oberholtzer; Elizabeth K., who became the wife of John L. Witmer, a farmer in West Donegal township, and had two children, both of whom are deceased; and Mary K., who died when but a year and one month old.

Mrs. Mary Schenck was born in West Donegal township, May 19, 1822, a daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Good) Kauffman, both born in West Donegal township, and reared to a farming life. The father died in 1871, at the age of eighty-one years; and the mother passed away at the age of seventy-seven years. They were members of the Mennonite Church. Three children were born to them: Mary; Anna, who died young; and Elizabeth, widow of Martin Breneman, who has her home in Mt. Joy borough. John Kauffman, her paternal grandfather, lived in Lancaster county.

Mr. and Mrs. Schenck have spent their married life on the farm where he is found today. They have been industrious, careful, and thrifty, and sustain a deservedly high reputation at home and abroad. Mr. Schenck has filled from time to time local positions of considerable importance; for nine years he was supervisor, and for three years has been assistant assessor. He is a Republican, and has been judge and inspector of elections. Both husband and wife are members of the Mennonite Church. Mr. Schenck has a commanding physique, being over six feet in height, and 200 pounds in weight, and he is quick and active for his years.

JOHN S. STEHMAN, who for many years has ranked as one of the leading agriculturists and progressive men of Lancaster county, has resided on a finely cultivated and improved farm located three miles northwest of Petersburg. This land was originally brought into the family by his grandfather, John Stehman, who purchased it, and then erected the building which is still used as a residence, its stanch timbers and fine workmanship bearing well the strain of wind and weather for more than a hundred years. This residence has been remodeled and converted into one of the most comfortable and attractive of modern dwellings; the days in which it was built were not those of cheap and shiftless labor or of inferior material. The other fine modern buildings which mark this estate as belonging to a capable, careful and successful farmer were all erected by John S. Stehman, the commodious and well appointed barn being built in 1892. Nothing so truly indicates thrift and prosperity as do the improvements on a farm, and in this direction Mr. Stehman has displayed both taste and utility. His beautiful farm land has also been placed under such cultivation that it has been generally conceded to be one of the finest in the rich county of Lancaster.

Grandfather Stehman was a farmer all his life, but only reached the age of forty years. He married a lady named Airhart, and to them were born five children, two sons—John and Henry—and three daughters, none of whom survive.

John Stehman, father of John S., was born on the farm May 4, 1810, and made his home there throughout life, following agriculture, living quietly, and leaving behind him the record of a good citizen. He married Fannie Snavelly, who was born Jan. 23, 1823, a daughter of John Snavelly, and died April 10, 1895. She was the mother of three children: Jacob S., of Mt. Joy; John S.; and Mary Ann, now deceased, the wife of Abraham Summy. The parents were both consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, where for many years their places were never vacant.

John S. Stehman was born Aug. 11, 1848, on the old farm, and was educated in the locality, attending the public schools. He engaged in farming for his father until he was twenty-two years old, at which time he continued the conduct of the place alone, taking the responsibility on himself, and in 1890 became the owner by purchase. He is known throughout the vicinity as one of the most capable and successful farmers of the county, as well as one of its most prosperous and substantial citizens. Aside from the old homestead, he became the owner of several other very valuable pieces of property, one of these being a tract of six acres, adjoining the homestead, which contains a complete set of buildings, but which he sold in 1901. In 1900 he purchased the Martin Peifer farm, which contains 101 acres of finely improved land, and remodeled the barn and house, and his son Elam now cultivates this place. In 1902 Mr. Stehman built himself a home in East Petersburg, equipped with all the latest conveniences, and situated in a very pretty part of the town, where he intends to pass the remainder of his days.

Mr. Stehman was married Oct. 25, 1873, to Annie B. Nissley, daughter of Christian Nissley, of West Hempfield township, and they have become the parents of five children: (1) Emma died at the age of two years. (2) Elam was married Oct. 18, 1900, to Birdie May Garber, daughter of Reuben Garber, and they are the parents of one daughter, Maybeth. (3) John and (4) Anna were twins; the latter died at the age of eight years. (5) Fannie is at home.

Mr. Stehman is justly considered one of the influential men of his township, his influence being always in the direction of improvement, and he is ever in favor of measures which he considers for the public good. Both he and his most estimable wife are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church and faithfully follow its teachings in their lives.

ABRAHAM ESBENSHADE, for many years one of the leading farmers of Lancaster county, who, after a long life of industry, now lives in the enjoyment of former labor, was born and reared in East Lampeter township. His birth was on Oct. 1, 1827, and he was a son of Henry and Catherine Esbenschade, of Lancaster county.

Henry Esbenschade was a son of Peter Esbenschade, who located in Lancaster county at an early day. He was born in Germany, and he married in this country and spent a long and useful life as a farmer. The four children born to Peter Esbenschade were: Henry, who was born in 1803 and died in 1878; Jacob; David and Joseph.

Henry Esbenschade, who was the father of Abraham Esbenschade, married Catherine Bowman, who was born in 1803, and died in 1895. They reared a family of seven children, one child dying in infancy: Martha, deceased; Abraham; Mary Ann, wife of Ephraim Buckwalter, of Paradise township; Kate, wife of Jacob Bochman, deceased; Joseph, of California; and Benjamin and Elizabeth, twins, residents of Lancaster county, all of these being among the most reliable and substantial people of this part of the State. For twenty-five years Henry Esbenschade followed the trade of miller, but his last years were spent in agricultural pursuits.

Abraham Esbenschade grew up on the farm and attended the public schools. When he started out for himself, he possessed limited means, but he was filled with determination to succeed, and very soon his energy and industry brought results. As years passed Mr. Esbensshade continued to accumulate means, and he is now the owner of one of the most valuable estates in the township. This consists of 170 acres of well-cultivated land which Mr. Esbensshade operated for many years, retiring of late years from activity, and leaving the work to younger hands.

The marriage of Mr. Esbensshade was in October, 1852, to Miss Mary Ann Buckwalter, of Leacock township, a daughter of Henry and Susan Buckwalter. To this marriage were born ten children: Annie, the wife of August Winters, of East Drumore township; Catherine, the wife of Walter Chester, a merchant of Camden, N. J.; Henry, a resident also of Camden, N. J.; Elizabeth, of Camden, N. J.; Mary S., of Colerain township; Emma F., the wife of Charles Winters, of Colerain township; Sarah J., of Camden, N. J.; and Henrietta, at home. The others died in infancy.

Mr. Esbensshade is an ardent Republican in political belief, and is a leading member of the Methodist Church. For eleven years he served his township as school director, and has always taken an interest in all matters pertaining to education.

CAPT. HENRY RANSING (deceased) was a son of George Hiram Ransing, who died in Holland, and whose widow came to the United States when Henry was a lad of two years of age. She became the owner of the land between East Orange, Plum, Marion and Center streets, and this land she sold little by little as the march of improvement took its course in that direction.

Henry Ransing was educated in the Lancaster public schools, and at the age of thirteen years entered a cotton mill, where he worked until the breaking out of the Rebellion. At that time he enlisted as a private in Co. G, 79th P. V. I., and at the end of his first term of enlistment, he re-enlisted for the war. He rose rapidly and presently attained the rank of captain. When the company came back in which he first enlisted, he was its captain, though only nine of the original members survived the dangers of war. He was in twenty-seven battles and eighteen skirmishes in the Western Army, but was never wounded, though at the battle of Bentonville his clothing was perforated by sixteen bullets. After the war Capt. Ransing was presented by the members of his company with a magnificent sword, sash, belt and epaulets, the sword bearing this inscription: "Presented to Capt. Ransing by the members of Company G, 79th regiment of Pennsylvania Veteran Volunteer Infantry, as a token of respect and friendship; and for the gallantry displayed in all the battles in which he participated." Capt. Ransing was a member of the Committee on the Monument to the memory of the men of the 79th P. V. I., who fell at Chickamauga.

The war ended, Capt. Ransing became an overseer in the Lancaster Fulton Cotton Mills, where he remained until the factory was partially destroyed by the explosion of the boiler. After this he gave up his position in the mill, on account of the objection of his wife to his being in what she regarded as a dangerous place, though he was in the line of promotion to the superintendency. Capt. Ransing engaged in business, opening a small grocery, which soon assumed large proportions under his close and careful management, soon necessitating the construction of the fine brick building on East Orange street, where for ten years a successful business was carried on. At the end of that time this building and business was converted into a hotel, for which he secured a license, and established the "East End Hotel." After a prolonged absence from the hotel, and a residence in another part of the city, Capt. Ransing finally returned to it, where he died May 19, 1900, deeply regretted far and wide. The following poem was published in the New Era, shortly after his death:

IN MEMORY OF A GALLANT SOLDIER.

We mourn, but we comfort feel,
When of our friend we're thinking,
That when on him Death pressed the seal
He died brave and unshrinking.

He feared not death: Why should he fear?
He who with musket's rattle
And shot and shell and wildest cheer
Feared not the bloody battle!

No mocking yell his soul could quell;
He fought to save the Union;
Stood like a rock while others fell,
Stood firm against disunion.

He rose from private rank to lead
The gallant volunteers,
He rose from merit and with speed,
Rose with his comrade's cheers.

They honored him by act and word,
And to attest their feeling,
They gave to him a handsome sword,
Their deep love thus revealing.

The war was o'er. His sword was sheathed,
And doing good to others,
No gentler, kindlier heart e'er breathed,
Beloved by all his brothers.

For all the world to his kind heart,
Were just like sisters, brothers;
He never failed to do his part,
In lending help to others.

His soul's at rest; his battle's done.
He's done with care and striving;
He left a light like noonday sun
To comfort the surviving.

To danger he was first to go,
None quicker in advancing,
No braver man e'er met a foe,
Than gallant Captain Ransing.

Capt. Ransing was married in 1866, to Rose Roth, who survives him, as does his only son, Henry Edward. The latter was born Sept. 16, 1877, and after securing a partial education in St. Anthony's parochial school, finished his education in Franklin and Marshall College, but was compelled to leave school before graduation that he might assist his father, who became seriously ill three years before his death. Henry E. Ransing has since succeeded to the hotel business. He was married Sept. 20, 1900.

Capt. Ransing was a devout Catholic, having taken his first communion at old St. Mary's Church when twelve years old. In his later years he was associated with St. Anthony's Church. ABRAHAM METZLER is one of the old and highly respected citizens of Lancaster county, and has his home in Paradise township. He was born near Morgantown, March 24, 1822, a son of Christian and Nancy (Werner) Metzler.

Valentine Metzler, the great-grandfather of Abraham, and the founder of the family in Lancaster county, was born in Switzerland, Feb. 14, 1726, and came to this country in his early manhood. In Lancaster county, where he made his home, he was married Nov. 19, 1749, to Anna Wissler, who was born in the county Dec. 9, 1727, and died March 29, 1793, surviving her husband, who died July 24, 1783. The home was on a farm several miles north of the city of Lancaster, and there they reared the following children: Abraham, Jacob, John, Anna, Henry, Christian, Martin and Elizabeth.

Abraham Metzler, noted above, was the grandfather of our subject. He was a farmer living a mile south of Morgantown. All the family have been members of the Mennonite Church.

Christian Metzler, son of Abraham and father of Abraham Metzler, whose name introduces this article, was born March 6, 1791, and died Jan. 7, 1878. His wife, Nancy Werner, was born in 1790, and died Jan. 1, 1867. They had the following family: David; Abraham, who married Susan Eby; Magdalena, who became the wife of Christian Hershey; Elizabeth, who married Joseph Brackbill; Susanna; and Anna, who died unmarried. Mr. Metzler was a man of high character and unblemished reputation, standing well among the leading people of the county, and giving the influence of his life to the uplifting of the community.

Abraham Metzler was born in Conestoga township, and accompanied his parents when nine years old to the farm in Paradise township, where he is found at the present time. Farming was his life work, and he retired about 1878. During the course of his long but uneventful life he has done much to help the community to a higher state, and has exerted a good influence by his quiet life and daily industry. His farm comprises 113 acres, and today he bears himself with remarkable vitality and vigor for a man eighty years of age. All his life he has been associated with the Mennonite Church.

JOHN RODKEY is an honored representative of one of the German families which settled in Lancaster county about a half century ago, for he has reached an enviable position as a business man, and politically has become prominent through the franchises of his fellow citizens. In 1900 he was elected supervisor of West Hempfield township, where he has had his lifelong residence.

Christian and Eva (Resch) Rodkey, his parents, were both natives of Germany. Christian Rodkey was in early life a shoemaker, and in 1853, when about thirty years of age, he migrated to America, coming directly to Lancaster county and settling in West Hempfield township. Soon after his arrival he married Eva Resch, whose father, John Resch, had emigrated from Germany to Lancaster county in 1852. In Lancaster county Christian Rodkey followed farming in connection with his trade of shoemaker. He died in 1864, aged forty-one years, and his wife died in 1878, aged fifty-two. They are buried at Columbia. Both were devout members of the German Lutheran Church. Six children were born to Christian and Eva Rodkey, namely: John, whose sketch appears herewith; Lizzie, wife of Abraham Shenck, a farmer of Manor township; Mary, wife of Harry Lindeman, of Lancaster; Anna, wife of William Merritt, of Philadelphia; George, deceased; and Rosa, wife of Albert Loller, of Lancaster.

John Rodkey, the eldest child, was born in West Hempfield township Feb. 10, 1854. He remained on the home farm carried on by his father until he was about twenty-four years old. On Jan. 27, 1877, at Columbia, he married Miss Mary Frey, a native of West Hempfield township, daughter of Peter and Eleanora Frey, farming people of that township. Six children came to this union, as follows: Christian, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Laura, wife of Edward Moore, a lace weaver of Philadelphia; John, a lace weaver, living at the old homestead; Fred, at home; May, at home; and Anna M., deceased. The wife and mother died in 1891, aged thirty-two years, and for his second wife John Rodkey married, Oct. 11, 1893, at Columbia, Mrs. Amelia (Ulmer) Hinkle, a native of that city, and the widow of Charles H. Hinkle. She is the daughter of Joseph and Mary Gertrude (Hineland) Ulmer, who were married in Wittenberg, Germany, their native land, in 1837, and six years later emigrated with their family to America. Their destination was Ohio. Traveling westward by water, the boat stopped at Columbia over Sunday. There by chance they met a sister of the wife, and were persuaded by her to remain at Columbia. Joseph Ulmer was a shoemaker by trade. After his settlement in Columbia he built and operated the old "Wagner Hotel." It was destroyed by fire, but was rebuilt by Mr. Ulmer, who managed it in all about fourteen years, retiring from the hotel business in 1866, and resuming his old trade of shoemaker. He died at Columbia in 1894, aged eighty-five years. His wife died in 1884, aged seventy-two years. They were earnest, faithful members of the Lutheran Church. A large family blessed the union of Joseph and Mary Gertrude Ulmer, namely: Lizzie, wife of George Cowden, of Pittsburg; Fred, deceased; Mary, who married George Newberry, of Philadelphia; Margaret, deceased; Joseph, deceased; Henry, deceased; Amelia, wife of John Rodkey; Martha, deceased; George, a railroad man of Columbia; Joseph T., deceased; Charles, of Columbia; and Laura, deceased. In 1867 Amelia Ulmer married Charles H. Hinkle, and to them were born five children, James B., Lizzie C., Lotta, Clara and Mary.

After his first marriage John Rodkey rented a farm in West Hempfield township for three years, at the end of that time moving to Columbia and operating the "Farmer's Hotel," known now as the "Hotel Columbia." He then purchased his parents' farm of fourteen acres, which he has brought to a high stage of cultivation. Besides engaging in general farming he is quite an extensive grower of tobacco. He has been eminently successful, and ranks as one of the leading citizens of West Hempfield township. In religious faith Mr. Rodkey is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is prominent in fraternal orders as a member of the Red Men and of the Artisans. In politics he is a staunch Democrat, and he was elected township supervisor in 1900 by a large majority.

EMANUEL M. RESH, a citizen of Leacock township, Lancaster county, has his home farm on a part of the old homestead where he was born Oct. 31, 1851, son of Christian E., and Susanna (Landis) Resh. Reared on the old home place, he attended the local schools and Millersville Normal School, and when he became a young man was married to Miss Anna Landis, an estimable young lady of Lancaster county. This union has been blessed with two daughters, Mabel, born May 6, 1884; and Mary Elizabeth, born Jan. 26, 1888.

Mrs. Anna (Landis) Resh was born in West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Oct. 28, 1855, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Kreider) Landis.

DAVID D. WEAVER, one of the up-to-date and enterprising citizens of East Hempfield township, whose home is a half mile west of Petersburg, was born in Manheim township April 26, 1849, son of David and Annie (Denlinger) Weaver, and descends from a family long established in Lampeter township. The father died in 1887, at the age of seventy-four years, and the mother passed away in March, 1883, at the age of sixty-four years. In early life David Weaver was a carpenter, but at his marriage became a farmer, and owned several places in different parts of the county. He had a family of nine children, four of whom lived to attain maturity: (1) Jacob died in the spring of 1901; he was a truck farmer, and resided on Columbia avenue, Lancaster. David D. Weaver was born in Manheim township, two miles north of Lancaster, was reared on the farm, and was educated in the public school. At twenty-nine he married, and following his marriage engaged in trucking on a farm in Manheim township. Presently he rented a larger tract, and engaged in general farming for some six years. In 1886 he located on the farm where he has since made his home, which comprises fifteen acres, and is devoted to kitchen gardening and fruit growing. In his management of this place he shows that he has made a study of the proper methods of farming, and is progressive and public-spirited to a very unusual degree.

Mr. Weaver was married, Dec. 12, 1878, to Miss Rachel Bair, a daughter of Adam and Martha (McElree) Bair; she is a native of Lancaster, but was reared in West Hempfield township. Mr. and Mrs. Weaver are the parents of three children, Martha Ann, Alice May, and Viola B. They are members of the Reformed Mennonite Church, and move among the better people of the town.

He commenced work on his own account as journeyman for George Miller and Amos Fralick, continuing thus about eleven years, after which he started in business for himself, contracting and building in East Lampeter township. Mr. Eckman has continued to follow his chosen calling up to the present time. He erected the second creamery that was started in Lancaster county, for Bowman & Maver, and many substantial structures in the region testify to his activity and efficiency as a builder. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and at present holds the office of school director.

LEWIS WOOD. The Wood family of Pennsylvania traces an ancestry to Thomas Wood, who was born in Lancashire, England, and came to America in early Colonial days, buying land of William Penn, near Philadelphia. His children were: William, Joseph and Richmond, the last named being born on the passage to the new home. Thomas Wood was a leading member of the Quaker sect, and in his native land had belonged to a family of prominence, his brother, William Wood, being a member of the British Parliament. Since those early days, members of the Wood family have been among the most law-abiding and peaceful, and also loyal, citizens of this great country, representatives of it being now distinguished in many States.

Joseph Wood, son of Thomas, married Catherine Day, Jan. 12, 1769, and their children were: Thomas, Joseph, Jesse, Lydia, Elizabeth, David, John and Day.

Jesse Wood, son of Joseph Wood, was the grandfather of Lewis Wood, of this sketch. By his first marriage he had two sons, John and Day, and by his second marriage, had one son, James, who became the father of Lewis. Grandfather Wood was a successful farmer and an honorable and upright citizen.

James Wood was during life one of the leading citizens of southern Lancaster county. For many years he was the president of the Farmers' National Bank, of Oxford, Pa., and as one of the leading members of the Republican party, he served most efficiently in various township and county offices, being county commissioner at one period. In his domestic life he was one of the kindest and most considerate of men, and closely followed the simple teachings of the Society of Friends. James Wood was born July 17, 1821, and his death occurred Aug. 9, 1894. In 1845, he was united in marriage to Mercy M. Carter, who was born on Nov. 29, 1822, and who still survives in Britain township. This marriage was blessed with eight children: Alfred, who lives in Fulton township, and whose sketch appears elsewhere; Susan, wife of Elwood Townsend, whose sketch also appears elsewhere; Jesse, a resident of this township, mentioned elsewhere; Mary, deceased wife of Davis E. Allen; Lucretia, wife of John W. Smedley, a retired farmer of Oxford; Lewis, subject of this biography; James; and Ida, who died unmarried.

Lewis Wood, of Kirks Mills, Little Britain township, was born Jan. 27, 1854, and was reared to agricultural pursuits. His education was obtained both in the common and the select schools of his locality, and he was thus well prepared to become the progressive and intelligent farmer that he is. His farm comprises 204 acres of very valuable land, upon which he has placed good improvements.

On Jan. 25, 1893, Lewis Wood was married to Luella King, who was born in Fulton township July 22, 1857, a daughter of Thomas P. and Phebe (Preston) King, and was one in a family of four children, the others being: Elmira, who is the wife of Alfred Wood, of whom a sketch is given in another part of this volume; Luretta, deceased wife of Samuel Kirk, of Fulton township; and William P., who is a farmer of Fulton township.

The children born to Lewis and Luella Wood are: Ida P., born May 12, 1894; and Edith A., born Dec. 19, 1896. In politics Lewis Wood is a stanch supporter of the Republican party. Like his ancestors for many generations, he is a consistent member of the Society of Friends. Both he and wife are among the most highly esteemed residents of Little Britain township.

WILLIAM WELCHANS. In December, 1897, a familiar face was missed from the streets of Maytown, and sorrowing neighbors lamented that William Welchans had passed out of life. He was born Aug. 31, 1822, and his life had been spent in Lancaster county, the staunch old region of substantial German settlers whose thrift has done so much to give the great Keystone State its reputation and prosperity.

The paternal grandparents of William Welchans were Joseph and Sabina Welchans, of York county, the family residence being near Wrightsville. Joseph Welchans was a prominent man, long being "Squire," and he was a thorough and enthusiastic musician, taking the long walk to Maytown every two weeks, in order to play the organ for the congregation of the Reformed Church. The worthy parents of the subject of this biography were Joseph and Margaret (Witmer) Welchans, of York and East Donegal townships, respectively, where the former followed the business of farming; he was also a carpenter, but in his latter days lived a rather retired life. To this union was born: William; Ann, who married Jacob Bowers, deceased; Margaret, who married Abraham Geltmacher; Jane, who married William Drebenstadt; and Charlotte (deceased), who married Abraham Sloat. The father died in 1869, at the age of seventy-six, the mother in 1864, aged sixty-eight, both being buried in the Reformed cemetery.

On Nov. 9, 1845, William Welchans married Anna M. Drebenstadt, and to this happy union were born: Clara, who died young; Joseph, a carpenter, in Harrisburg, Pa.; Amra, who married Jefferson Shireman; Samuel, who died in 1889; Barbara, who married Jacob Heisey, a cigar-maker, of Maytown; Anna, who married William Stumm, of Sac City, Iowa; George, a carpenter at home, who married Barbara Hollinger; and May, who married Daniel Stewart, of Lancaster.

The birth of Mrs. Welchans occurred in Maytown, Oct. 10, 1825. She is a daughter of Samuel and Barbara (Poist) Drebenstadt, the former of whom was a weaver by trade, who acceptably filled the office of assessor for the township, and died in 1877, at the age of eighty-one, his wife having passed away in 1870, at the age of sixty-six, and both were buried in the old Lutheran cemetery, having been consistent members of the Lutheran Church. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Drebenstadt were: Anna M.; George, who was drowned at the age of nine years; William, who conducts a butchering business, in Middletown, Pa.; Theodore, who died in youth; Samuel, a cigar-maker in Maytown; Charlotte, who married John Brown, of York, Pa.; Franklin, who died a victim of the prison at Andersonville, during the Civil war; and Horace, who died young.

William Welchans learned the carpenter trade with his father, and learned it thoroughly so that in after years his name was a guaranty for excellence. While a young man he removed from Wrightsville to Maytown, and continued for many years one of the prosperous workmen of that village, accumulating a competency, and enabling his family to pass their days in comfort after he was taken from them. A good man in every condition of life, his memory is cherished by his family and many friends.

Mr. Welchans was a valued member of the Lutheran Church, his wife of the Reformed Church, and in politics he was a Democrat. His wife survives him, and is residing in the old home in Maytown which he built in 1847. Although somewhat of a sufferer from rheumatism, she is a very pleasant and intelligent lady, and remembers many interesting events of the life of herself and husband in this locality when they first made it their home.

ELWOOD M. TOWNSEND, one of the leading business citizens of Smyrna, in Sadsbury township, was born in Christiana, Pa., Feb. 17, 1859, a son of Jacob R. and Susan (Homsher) Townsend, both of whom were natives of Sadsbury township, more extended mention of whom will be found elsewhere in this volume.

Elwood M. Townsend was afforded excellent educational advantages, finishing first the common-school course, and at the age of sixteen entering the Millersville State Normal School, there completing his schooling, but he is one of those intelligent men who continue to learn all their lives. Such men we generally find in the front rank of both professional and business life. Mr. Townsend passed his twentieth and twenty-first years as an educator, and then embarked in the hard wood and lumber business, in Sadsbury township, coming to the town of Smyrna, in 1887. Here, in association with his father, he entered upon a mercantile business, and upon the death of the latter he purchased the other half interest, from the estate, and has had full control ever since, his energetic and business like methods building up a large and constantly increasing trade. Mr. Townsend is also the popular and obliging postmaster of the town.

The marriage of Elwood M. Townsend was in 1887, in intercourse, to Ida E. Diller, and one daughter, Marian D., has been born to this union. Mrs. Townsend was born in Leacock township, a daughter of George and Hannah (Rutter) Diller, both of Lancaster county. The father is deceased, but the mother still resides in Intercourse, where the family is well and favorably known.

Mr. Townsend is fraternally connected with the Masonic order, and has been Past Master of Christiana Lodge, No. 417. In politics, he is a supporter of the Democratic party and exerts considerable influence in his locality. As a business citizen he is of great value to the community, and both he and wife are prominent in social circles.

JACOB MUSSER DENLINGER, now a farmer in Leacock township, Lancaster county, was born on the farm where his active years have passed, Aug. 25, 1853, a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Musser) Denlinger, whose other son, David, born in Leacock township in November, 1857, is now a motorman on the electric railroad. Samuel Denlinger was born in East Lampeter township, March 17, 1830. His wife, Elizabeth Musser, who was born in Leacock township May 25, 1833, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Musser, died April 19, 1872, in her thirty-ninth year, having been an invalid for twenty years.

Jacob Musser Denlinger was married in New Holland, Pa., Nov. 8, 1877, to Miss Anna Musser and there were born to this union, two children, Elizabeth M. and Samuel, Jr.

Mrs. Anna (Musser) Denlinger was born in Paradise township, Dec. 12, 1852, a daughter of John M. and Susannah (Wenger) Musser. Her father, who was born in Earl township, died in Hinkletown, Pa., Aug. 21, 1896, when he was almost sixty-seven years of age. He was a farmer, and during his active and useful life he was called to office as supervisor by the Republican party, to which he was a life-time adherent. Mrs. Susannah (Wenger) Musser, who was born in West Earl township, Jan. 18, 1833, died June 29, 1900. Both she and her husband, who were members of the Mennonite Church, were buried in the cemetery at Groffdale. To John M. Musser and his wife were born the following children: Benjamin W., of Upper Leacock township; Susanna, who married Benjamin Kreider, and is now deceased; John W., a farmer in East Lampeter township; Jacob W., a farmer and miller in West Earl township; Mary, widow of Adam D. Sheaffer, and now living in Earl township; Lizzie, who married Willard Eaby, a merchant at Intercourse, Lancaster county; Magdalena, who married Harry Risser, of Clay township; Henry, a merchant at Hinkletown, Pa.; Martin, a merchant at Ephrata, Pa.; Israel, who died in infancy; and Anna, Mrs. Denlinger. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Denlinger were Henry and Anna (Martin) Musser, both of Lancaster county; and her maternal grandparents, Benjamin and Anna (Erb) Wenger, were also of Lancaster county.

Mr. Denlinger spent the earlier part of his life on the farm where he is found to-day, but in 1880, he moved to another farm in Leacock township, where he spent a year, and was then engaged for some five years in managing a store in Mascot, Upper Leacock township. He returned to his present location at the end of that time, and has continued there to the present time. For some three years Mr. Denlinger filled the position of school director, and he is a public-spirited and capable citizen. In his political relations he is a Republican, and is very highly esteemed in the community where his useful life has been passed.

MRS. SUSAN KURTZ. No record of Ephrata township would be complete without the names of those members of the community whose youth is past, but whose advancing years make them more highly esteemed by those who have known their lives for so many years. Among this class no one more richly deserves the respect of the community than does the lady whose name opens this biography, who is universally regarded as a type of lovely Christian character.

Susan Kurtz was born July 27, 1827, a daughter of Sebastian and Susan (Mishler) Gockley, of Ephrata township. In 1844 she was married to Emanuel Mohler, a son of John Mohler, of Ephrata township, a good and worthy man who lived up to all that he believed to be his duty, was a good citizen, a Democrat in politics, a kind husband and indulgent father. His death occurred May 28, 1866, lamented by all who knew him. To Mr. and Mrs. Mohler were born seven children: John G., born Sept. 7, 1845; Sarah, born Feb. 5, 1847, married Cyrus Miller, of Adamstown; Susan, born April 29, 1849, married Benjamin Keller, of Nebraska; Richard, born Dec. 2, 1850, lives near Grand Rapids, Mich.; Rachel G., born March 17, 1853, married Henry Herchelroth, of Ephrata borough; George E., born Dec. 9, 1854, is deceased; and Elizabeth, born Jan. 7, 1857, married Milton Sproecheer.

The second marriage of our subject was in 1870, to Israel Kurtz, who was born in 1822, and died in 1896. Mr. Kurtz was a most excellent man, a staunch Democrat, and one of the prominent members of the German Baptist Church.

Mrs. Kurtz is most pleasantly located in Ephrata, owning and occupying a comfortable two-story brick dwelling on State street, and possesses ample means to provide for more advanced age. Her life has been full of kind deeds and good works, and her example and influence have ever been in the direction of charity and good will. Everywhere is she known as a most lovable lady, and she has friends wherever she has made acquaintance, who wish that her days may be long in the land and filled with comfort and peace.

ROBERT J. KNOX, a retired farmer at Intercourse, Lancaster county, is enjoying the fruits of a long and industrious career. His venerable years, upright character and kindly disposition command the confidence and respect of the community to a marked degree, and his last years are passing very pleasantly, as should pass the closing period of a noble career.

Mr. Knox was born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, Aug. 18, 1821, a son of August and Martha (Stoner) Knox, both of Leacock township, where his father died in 1842, at the age of sixty-five. His mother died in Chester county, Pa., at the age of ninety-six years. They were both members of the Presbyterian Church, and were buried in the Leacock cemetery. Born to this union were the following children: David, deceased; Robert J.; Samuel, deceased; John, a farmer in Paradise township; Letitia, who married Molton Sample, who was buried Oct. 11, 1902, in Leacock cemetery; and Nathaniel, deceased.

Mr. Knox has been twice married. His first wife, Catherine Beam, was the mother of one child, who died in infancy; his second wife was Mary Ann Diller, who was born in Earl township, in March, 1831, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Besore) Diller, the former of whom was born in Earl township; the latter in Paradise township. Jacob Diller was a farmer, and died in 1881, at the age of seventy-eight years; his wife died in 1870, at the age of sixty-eight years. Jacob and Mary Diller had the following family: Catherine died unmarried; Elizabeth married Harry Graybill, and is deceased; Louisa married John Ranck, who is retired in New Holland, Pa.; Elias, who lives retired in New Holland, married Eliza Ann Graybill; Margaret died young; and Mary Ann is Mrs. Knox.

Robert J. Knox remained with his parents until he was twenty-two years old, when he engaged in farming for himself in Leacock township, his cousin, Martha Dunlap, keeping house for him. After three years of this life he began buying and selling horses, and moved to Salisbury township after his first marriage. There he was engaged in farming until 1887, when he came to Intercourse. No children of their own have come to bless their home, but Mr. and Mrs. Knox have adopted and reared to excellent manhood Willis R. Knox, who was a noted and successful teacher in Lancaster county schools. He is unmarried, and lives at home, being now engaged in selling farm seeds.

MARTIN N. HEISEY is a good representative of the younger generation of Lancaster county farmers, and was born on the old homestead of the Heisey family in West Donegal township, Nov. 28, 1873, a son of David G. and Martha (Nissley) Heisey.

Martin G. Heisey, his grandfather, was born on this farm. He married Magdalena Gochenauer, who was born near Petersburg, Lancaster county, and died in 1871 at the age of sixty-two years. Martin G. Heisey was a farmer and died in 1871, at the age of sixty-five years. They were members of the River Brethren Church, and were laid to rest in a private burying ground adjoining the Heisey farm. The following children were born to them: Joseph G., a retired farmer in Elizabethtown; Elizabeth G., the widow of Henry M. Witmer; Andrew G., a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Henry G. and Martin G., both deceased; David G., the father of Martin N.; and Abraham G., the manager of the laundry at the Axle Works in Elizabethtown.

Henry and Elizabeth (Gish) Heisey, the great-grandparents of Martin N., lived and died on the Heisey homestead.

David G. Heisey is one of the leading citizens of West Donegal township, where he was born Jan. 27, 1850, on the farm where his parents lived and died. He was married, Nov. 28, 1872, in Lancaster, to Martha Nissley, and they became the parents of the following family: Martin N., whose name introduces this article; Harry N., manager of a laundry in Elizabethtown; Elizabeth N.; Lotta N.; Irvin N.; Walter N.; Mary N.; Martha N.; Anna N.; and Ella N. All but the two older children are still under their parents' care and protection.

Mrs. Martha (Nissley) Heisey was born in West Donegal township in 1856, a daughter of Peter and Lizzie (Hoffman) Nissley, both natives of Lancaster county. Her father died in 1867, at the age of forty-five years, and her mother in 1859, at the age of twenty-three years, and they were laid to rest in Mt. Tunnel cemetery in Elizabethtown. They were the parents of the following children: Amanda, widow of Levi Risser, of Elizabethtown; Martha, Mrs. Heisey; Anna, wife of A. J. Heisey, a resident of Elizabethtown. The Nissleys are an old and respected family in and around Elizabethtown, and the history of the Lancaster branch of the family may be found elsewhere under the Nissley name.

David G. Heisey was born, as stated above, on the farm where he is found to-day, and where his home has been made all his life with the exception of a few years prior to his marriage, when he worked out among the neighboring farmers. For twelve years he has been a school director, and his business standing and ability is unquestioned, as is his moral character. A man of the strictest integrity, he is regarded as one of the most upright and altogether reliable men to be found in this township at the present time. In his political relations he is a Republican, and in his religious connections he is a member of the River Baptist Church.

Martin N. Heisey and Anna S. Brinzer were married in Dauphin county, Nov. 28, 1898. Mrs. Heisey was born Nov. 27, 1879, in Dauphin county, a daughter of Rev. Solomon and Lizzie (Sherrer) Brinzer, natives of Dauphin and Lancaster counties, respectively. They now reside in Hillsdale, Dauphin county, where her father is engaged in ministerial life as a preacher of the United Zion Children Church. They were both born in 1848, and have the following children: Harrison S., principal of the Bainbridge school; John S., a farmer and a dairyman in the township of Mt. Joy; Matthew S., a blacksmith, and an inmate of the parental home, as is his sister Kate, who married Allen Demmy; Anna, who is Mrs. Heisey; Martin S.; Amos S., who is with Martin N. Heisey; Ezra, deceased; Ira and Lizzie, with their parents.

The Rev. Matthew Brinzer, born in Dauphin county, was a farmer and a bishop of the United Zion Children faith, being the founder of that denomination and the builder of the church at Hillsdale. He died in 1889, at the age of ninety-three years; and his widow in 1897, at the age of ninety-two years.

Martin N. Heisey remained at home with his parents until his marriage when he settled on his present farm, a choice place of seventy acres, and he is making a good name for himself as an active and pushing young farmer, of unwearied industry and strict integrity. In his politics he is a Republican, and is fast becoming prominent and well-to-do.

GEORGE L. KNOBB, a general farmer of Leacock township, was born in Earl township, Lancaster county, May 8, 1858, a son of George and Harriet (Garber) Knobb. His father was born near Reading, and his mother in Lancaster county. The elder Knobb was a farmer, and died near Reading in 1864, at the age of twenty-five years. His widow survived sixteen years, and died in 1880, at the age of forty years. They had two children: George L.; and a daughter, who has not been heard from since childhood.

George L. Knobb was married in Leacock township, Dec. 24, 1892, to Mary Ann Seldomridge, by whom he has had two children: Mabel F. and Alta C. Mrs. Knobb was born Nov. 2, 1857, a daughter of Jeremiah Seldomridge, whose sketch appears elsewhere.

George L. Knobb remained with his mother until he was four years of age, when he went to live with his grandmother Garber, with whom he remained until he was thirteen years old. At that time he began a career of honest industry on his own account, and for several years he was employed among the neighboring farmers, gradually working himself into his present comfortable circumstances. In 1896 he removed from Buyerstown to the farm where he is found today. Mr. Knobb is a thrifty and up-to-date citizen of the community where his upright life and industrious habits, together with his genial nature and business ability, have won him many friends.

DANIEL T. HESS, carriage builder of Quarryville borough, Lancaster county, was born in Fulton township, March 10, 1853. His parents, William J. and Elizabeth (Brown) Hess were also born in Fulton township, and the family is one of the best known in Lancaster county. The father of William Hess, Jonas Hess, was of German parentage and fought through the Revolutionary war. William J. Hess spent the early portion of his life as a Fulton township farmer. He abandoned farming, and engaged in hotel keeping at Wakefield, Lancaster county, for a number of years. Then, removing to Quarryville, he acquired what is now known as the "Armstrong Hotel," near the railroad station, which he conducted for several years. After managing several other places in the county, he moved to Cecil county, Maryland, where he devoted himself to farming until the time of his death. Mrs. Hess followed him to the grave a few years later. A family of nine children were born to this couple, four of whom died in childhood: Frank, the eldest, married Miss Mary McQuarry, of Colerain township; they settled in Quarryville where he engaged in a mercantile and lime business for a number of years previous to his death. He left a wife and four children who reside in Lancaster. Although cut off in early life, he had made a reputation in the community, and was regarded as one of the best accountants and business men of Lancaster. J. H., another son of William J., was born in Lancaster county, and is now a farmer and business man of Cecil county, Maryland: he married Miss Ella Painter, of Lancaster county, and to them five children have been born: Howard, Grace, Paul, Lawrence and Louisa. George M. was born in Lancaster county in 1856, and married Miss Martha Painter, of the same county, where they still reside. Two children, William and Leon, have been born to them. Harry Hess was born in Lancaster county, and moved to Cecil county, Maryland, where he is still living unmarried.

Daniel T. Hess was reared in Drumore township, and was educated in the district schools. He worked on his father's farm, until the age of fourteen years, when he began to learn the trade of cabinet and carriage maker. He followed work of this kind until 1873, when he married Miss Maggie Myers, of Eden township, daughter of Augustus and Margaret Myers. The family is an old and respected one in the community. Mrs. Hess was born Nov. 17, 1858, and grew to womanhood and was educated in the schools of Lancaster county. After marriage the couple settled in Quarryville, where Mr. Hess has since engaged in the manufacture of vehicles of all classes. He has established a large and lucrative business, and has invested considerable means in real estate in the village. His home, built under his own direction, is one of the very pleasant ones in the place. Six children, four of whom survive, have been born to this couple: Harry, the eldest, was born April 13, 1874, and was educated in the school of the county, graduating from the High school at Quarryville. He afterward took a course in the Lancaster Business College, graduating from that institution in 1896. He married Miss Jeanette McClure, of Lancaster county, and the couple reside in the county, where Mr. Hess is engaged in the mercantile business. They have no children. Laura M. died at the age of two years. Lottie was born in Quarryville, in August, 1881, and was educated in the schools of her native town. Rengier was born in 1885, and died at the age of two years. Emma, born in December, 1888, is a student in the local schools, and Daniel C. was born in 1892.

Daniel T. Hess is a Democrat in politics, and has held a number of borough offices from time to time. The family are members of the Presbyterian Church, and hold a prominent standing in that denomination. Mr. Hess started in life with small means, but by industry and frugal habits has acquired a competency. The family is one of the most respected in the community, and deservedly so. Mrs. Hess takes an active part in church and charitable work, and is a lady of culture and refinement.

REV. HIRAM G. KAUFFMAN, one of the esteemed citizens of Lancaster county, where he is known and beloved for his earnest labors as a minister in the Old Mennonite Church, was born in East Hempfield township, near East Petersburg, on the old Kauffman homestead, March 18, 1869. His education was received in the public schools of his district, and he remained under the parental roof until a short time previous to his marriage, engaging there in agricultural pursuits.

In 1891 he began farming operations for himself on the farm he now occupies, just south of the village of Landisville, a fine tract of seventy acres, well situated and watered, and under an excellent state of cultivation, for while Rev. Kauffman is an energetic worker in the Church, he is also a practical farmer and understands the best methods of managing his land.

At the age of twenty-three he became a member of the Old Mennonite Church and took charge of the Sabbath school, and some two years later was ordained as a minister of the Church, the solemn rite of ordination taking place June 14, 1894, Rev. Jacob Brubaker officiating. He was assigned to the Salunga district, and confines the most of his labors to that vicinity. At the time of his ordination, he was the youngest minister in the county, but he has displayed unusual ability in his work, and has met with the approval of both his people and his brother ministers. Patient, kind and sympathetic, he is ever ready to give time or means to all who need his services, and has been most generous with both, in every service of the Church. His friends are numerous, and he has the confidence and true respect of the whole community.

Rev. Hiram G. Kauffman was married, Nov. 18, 1890, to Fannie K. Cassel, a daughter of John and Adeline (Kridner) Cassel, and one daughter, Dora, was born to this marriage. The life of Rev. Kauffman is passed in doing good works and in performing his duty toward his family, country and Church, and he has had every reason to believe that it finds favor with the Master he so faithfully serves.

JOSEPH PAXON COOPER, for many years in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Co., and late an engineer, with his residence at Columbia, was born three miles north of Parkesburg, Chester Co., Pa., Oct. 6, 1847, on the farm and in the house in which his father was born, and he was accidentally killed on the road Jan. 27, 1901.

Matson Cooper was born in October, 1820, and married Mary A. Miller, also a native of Chester county, born in 1823. To this union were born the following named children: Evan T., of Columbia, and an ex-soldier; James T., a railroad conductor at Harrisburg; Keziah, wife of Harry Roy, of Columbia; Joseph P., whose name opens this sketch; Sally, who married Zachariah Baldwin, of Atlantic City, N. J., and a former mayor; Henrietta, now Mrs. James Boyd; John, a brakeman who was killed on the road in 1896; Timothy, deceased; and Mary, who died young. Mrs. Mary A. (Miller) Cooper died July 1, 1897, at the age of seventy-four, a member of the Society of Friends, and Matson Cooper, also a Quaker, and a retired drover, auctioneer and merchant, came to Columbia in 1889, and made his home with his son, Joseph P.

Joseph Paxton Cooper, at the age of seven years, left the home farm and went to live with William McKnight, a butcher, and during his four years' residence with him gained a very fair knowledge of the butchering business, besides rendering assistance on the farm. His next experience was for two years and nine months with Preston Wickerson in a flour mill, and he then returned to Mr. McKnight, with whom he remained until he was sixteen years old, when he went to Kansas City, Mo. In 1866 he went to Baltimore, Md., and served three months in the State Militia, and in 1867 came to Columbia and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Co. as a brakeman. Five months later he was appointed flagman; after four months' service in this position he was placed in charge of a local freight train as conductor for six months, and then served as fireman about one year and nine months. In June, 1873, he was promoted to engineer, and in that position he gave unqualified satisfaction until his lamented death.

On Jan. 16, 1873, Mr. Cooper married, in Columbia, Miss Amanda U. Campbell, a native of the borough, born July 19, 1855, a daughter of George Campbell, of whom further information may be found in the biography of Samuel Campbell, on another page. To Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Cooper were born the following children, in the following order: George M., a locomotive fireman, who married Nettie Krieder, and became the father of one daughter, Harriet L., was killed on the road March 27, 1899; James T., also a fireman, married Ella Wills, and has one daughter, Alverta U.; John C., who served in Co. C., 4th P. V. I., in Porto Rico, married Hattie Shultz, and is now at home; Evans T., Daisy M., Mary, Joseph M., Lillie, Della, William, Lloyd, Gardner, and Charles and Samuel (twins), all at home.

In politics Mr. Cooper was a Democrat, but was never ambitious of holding office. He was greatly respected for his personal merits, as is his widow, and the children fully share the general esteem of the community.

JACOB R. TOWNSEND (deceased). For many years the late Jacob R. Townsend was well and favorably known through Lancaster county, having been prominently identified with many lines of activity. An excellent farmer, a successful lumber manufacturer and a prosperous merchant, he was brought into contact with very many of his fellow-citizens, all of whom unite in their estimate of him as a man of the most exalted personal honesty and unimpeachable integrity.

Mr. Townsend was born in Sadsbury township, Oct. 25, 1820. His death occurred April 18, 1891, at the age of seventy years, five months and twenty-three days, and he was buried in the cemetery connected with the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, at Gap, Pa. His parents, John and Catherine (Wagner) Townsend, were farming people, the former of whom belonged to the old Quaker family of that name in Bucks county, and the latter of Sadsbury township, where both died, the former on Aug. 27, 1858, at the age of sixty-six years, seven months and three days, and his remains were interred in the Friends cemetery in Sadsbury township. Mother Townsend was born on July 12, 1793, and died on Oct. 7, 1873, at the age of eighty years, three months and five days, and was buried at the Octoraro Presbyterian Church, in Bart township. The children born to John and Catherine Townsend were: Polly R., who married Henry Rea, deceased; John, deceased; Jacob R., deceased; Catherine, widow of Joseph Ressler, of Cochranville, Pa.; George, who died in the West; Amos, who also died in the West; Isaac; Martin, a resident of Iowa; Robert, the principal of the High school, in Reading, Pa.; Susan, deceased, wife of Samuel Virtue, of Bart township; and Samuel, who lives retired at Christiana. The paternal grandparents were of English extraction, and Grandfather John Townsend was a successful and respected farmer and miller well known through Bucks county; his death occurred in Sadsbury township.

Jacob R. Townsend was reared to farming pursuits, and remained an agriculturist until 1846, at which time he embarked in the mercantile business, opening up a general store at the location of his son, in Smyrna. Here he continued until 1850, at that time disposing of his merchandise to Joseph C. Walker & Bro., who continued the business. Mr. Townsend then moved to Christiana, and in that growing town engaged extensively in a warehouse business, including lumber, coal, grain, etc., handling each commodity with excellent results for the succeeding seven years. With his brother-in-law, Theodore Homsher, he had a branch warehouse in Good Hope, in the Cumberland Valley. Tiring of the cares of business, Mr. Townsend returned to the old homestead farm, and began its operation, and also in this connection, managed a sawmill, but in 1873, in association with his son, Howard L., he resumed mercantile operations, buying back his old stand. For the following ten years, Mr. Townsend again became a well-known merchant of Smyrna, with his young partner, and when business changes came, calling his son to other fields, Mr. Townsend took his brother-in-law, Samuel Virtue, as partner, this firm continuing for two years, ending in 1882. At this date Elwood M. Townsend, another son, purchased the interest in the business belonging to Mr. Virtue, and this partnership lasted until the death of Mr. Townsend, in 1891, when Elwood M. purchased his father's interest, and since that time has conducted the business upon the same principles established by his honorable father so many years ago.

Jacob R. Townsend was married on Nov. 1, 1850, in Sadsbury township, to Susan M. Homsher, and the children born to this union were: Howard L., who married Evana Pownall, and has four children, is a shoe merchant in Philadelphia; Ashmer H. died in infancy; Elwood M., who married Ida Diller, and has one child, is postmaster in Smyrna, and his father's successor in the mercantile business there; Elizabeth married Dr. Fred. Baker, a well-known physician of Philadelphia; Ella V., a talented and highly cultured young lady, is the principal of the Fulton High school; and Maris S., who married Bessie Lefever, resides in Smyrna.

The Homsher family of which Mrs. Townsend was a representative, is an old and honored one in Chester county, Pa. It is also well known through Lancaster county, and extended mention is made of this family elsewhere. Mrs. Townsend was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, March 6, 1830, a daughter of John and Mary (Coon) Homsher, natives of Chester county and of Oxford, Pa., and she was a sister to Franklin Homsher, a well-known citizen of Christiana.

Notwithstanding his many business interests, Jacob R. Townsend became prominent in Democratic political circles, and was interested in all progressive and educational movements, serving for a number of years as school director, and encouraging all enterprises looking to the advancement of a higher educational standard. His devotion to his family was only equaled by his adherence to the Presbyterian Church, he being for many years a consistent member and liberal supporter of the Bellevue Church. His estimable widow resided in the home erected by her husband, at Smyrna Cross Roads, until her death, July 31, 1902, and she was universally esteemed throughout the neighborhood.

HENRY L. WENGER, a retired farmer of Rapho township, was born in this township Aug. 19, 1835, a son of Christian and Elizabeth (Lehman) Wenger.

Christian Wenger was a farmer, and died in 1875, at the age of eighty-four years, after having lived a retired life for the thirty years previous. His wife died in 1896, at the age of eighty-two years, and the couple are buried in private grounds on their farm. They were members of the Old Mennonite Church. There were born to them the following children: Joseph, who died at the age of sixty-six years; Abraham, who died at the age of sixty-four years; Peter, a carpenter at Manheim, Pa.; and Henry L. By a former marriage, contracted with a Miss Brubaker, Christian Wenger had one son named John, who recently died at the age of eighty-two years.

Henry L. Wenger has been married twice. In 1854 he wedded Miss Anna Hershey and to this union were born: Christian, a farmer of Penn township, married to a Miss Miller; Lizzie, wife of Henry Greiner, a farmer of Rapho township; and Benjamin, married to Miss Amanda Keener and living on the homestead with his father. Anna (Hershey) Wenger was born in West Hempfield township, and died in 1889, at the age of sixty-nine years. She is buried in Shoemaker's cemetery. She was the daughter of John Hershey, of Lancaster county. On Sept. 24, 1891, Mr. Wenger was married to Miss Emma Long, daughter of Jacob Long, in Manheim, Pa. No children have been born to this union. Mrs. Emma (Long) Wenger was born in Manor township and is the daughter of Jacob and Frances (Mellinger) Long, the former of whom was a farmer. After his death the widowed mother married Jacob Harnish, who enlisted for service in the Civil war, and was taken prisoner after a severe battle with the Confederates. He was confined in Libby Prison, Richmond, and died in February, 1865, at the age of forty years, in consequence of treatment received at that place. His widow died in January, 1898, at the age of seventy years, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Wenger. She was a member of the Methodist Church. Her children, all but Mrs. Wenger born to her second marriage, were: Emma, wife of Mr. Wenger; Lizzie, wife of Preston Reeves, of Omaha, Neb.; William, deceased; David, of Lancaster; Amos, of Lancaster; Clara, deceased; Jennie, wife of Job Wylie, of Lancaster; Alice, wife of Thomas Fisher, of Lancaster; Jacob, of Lancaster; and Henry, of Norristown, Pennsylvania.

The members of the family, including himself, attend the Reformed Church. Mr. Wenger is a solid substantial member of the community, and is well known and respected. He is attached to his home and family, but is also a prominent factor in any movement undertaken for the benefit of the locality in which he lives.

Early in life Jacob J. Brown learned the milling business, and was interested in that during his entire life, dying in Bart township. During the Civil war he was drafted into the service, but circumstances prevented his leaving, and he paid a substitute a sum of $300 to take his place. In his political sympathy he always supported the Republican party, and was a man who was highly esteemed in his locality.

John H. Brown was reared on the farm and obtained his education in the public schools of his township. Until the age of fourteen he remained with his mother, and then assisted in agricultural work among the neighboring farmers, continuing until he took charge of the present farm, this formerly belonging to the late Lindley T. Brown, the esteemed father-in-law of our subject.

On August 3, 1892, John H. Brown was married to Miss Lizzie Brown, the estimable and only daughter of Lindley T. and Margaret (Clinger) Brown, and the children born to this union are: Ralph, Leah and Lela, all of them bright and attractive children. Mrs. John H. Brown was born on the present farm on Newport Pike. Her father, Lindley T. Brown was born in Cecil county, Md., Sept. 1, 1820, and his death occurred on the farm now owned by his son-in-law May 14, 1888. The birth of Mrs. Margaret (Clinger) Brown occurred in East-town township, Chester county, June 8, 1832, and she was a daughter of Henry and Mary A. (Hipple) Clinger, of Chester county, Pa., where Mr. Clinger was a farmer. There he died in 1867, at the age of sixty-eight years, the mother passing away in 1842; both were buried in Pikeland, Chester county. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Clinger were: Anna E., who resides unmarried, at Green Tree, Pa.; Margaret; Martha, deceased, who married Jacob H. Mullen; Mary J., deceased, unmarried; and Sarah M., deceased, who married George H. Detterline. The maternal grandfather of Margaret C. Brown was a soldier Biddle, and their children were: George B., of Philadelphia; Harry R., of Philadelphia; Maria L., who is the widow of John Kunkle; Kate, who married William Armstrong, an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad; and Frank, who is a letter carrier in Philadelphia. Lindley T. Brown was a farmer all his life, coming to Sadsbury township from Little Britain township in 1868. In politics he was a Republican, and he was long a leading member of the Society of Friends, a man of responsibility in his locality. He is buried at Pikeland, Chester Co., Pennsylvania.

John H. Brown is a prominent member of the Republican party, an excellent farmer, and one of the progressive and public-spirited citizens of his community. The family is one of the most highly esteemed in this part of Lancaster county.

MRS. ANNIE SNAVELY, a resident of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, where she commands many friends by her excellent character and genial disposition, was born Nov. 22, 1834, daughter of Joseph and Susanna (Bleacher) Shaub.

John Shaub, her grandfather, was a native of Lancaster county, and of German extraction, as was also his wife, Elizabeth Gochenauer. They settled on government land probably as early as 1809, and they became the parents of sixteen children who settled in York and Lancaster counties.

Joseph Shaub, son of John and father of Mrs. Snavely, was born in Lancaster county in 1805. He married Susanna Bleacher, who was born in Providence township, same county, in 1802. They were married about 1825, and settled on a farm of his father near Hawkesville, Providence township, where they remained until about 1842, when, his father John, having died, Joseph Shaub bought the old homestead, and removed to it, continuing to operate it until 1871, when he retired. He died Aug. 27, 1880, his widow surviving until Jan. 28, 1885. They were both active and devoted members of the Mennonite Church. To them were born seven children: (1) Mary, born in October, 1826, married Isaac Herr, of Pequea township, and died in Lancaster county, four years after her marriage, leaving two children: Alice, wife of Elias Wiggins; and Mary, wife of Edward Aston. (2) Joseph, born in 1829, married Anna Phillips, and settled in East Drumore township, where he died in January, 1891, leaving a widow and a family. (3) Benjamin, born in 1831, married Susan Lefever, settling in Providence township; his wife was killed on the railroad at Belmont, near Learnan Place, leaving a Mrs. Annie (Shaub) Snavely was born in 1834, and received her education in the district school. On Sept. 9, 1858, she was married to Benjamin Groff, of Providence township, who was born in 1815, son of Joseph and Mary Groff. Mr. and Mrs. Groff settled on his farm in Providence township, where they remained until 1861, when they moved to East Drumore township, where he died in 1870, leaving his widow with three children: (1) Mary Groff, born in September, 1859, married John Frank Newsmenger, by whom she has the following children: Benjamin, now a clerk for Barton Witmer, of Quarryville, is married and has one son, Vernon; Jacob G.; Ella S.; Charles; Earl; Harry E.; Frank H.; Amos; and Thomas. To this marriage came one son, John Snavely, born Jan. 1, 1881, who has been a student in the Franklin and Marshall College; in 1900 he entered Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., to prepare for the ministry, and has proved himself so thorough a student that in 1901 he was awarded a first prize. Mr. Snavely was a member of the Mennonite Church, of which Mrs. Snavely has been a member for fifty years.

Mr. Snavely was a Republican, and took an active part in the work of his party. Mrs. Snavely is a lady of intelligence and wide information. She delights in the study of nature as well as of books, and it is a pleasure to meet her in social conversation. She is a lady of genial disposition, and is the center of a delightful circle of friends.

JOHN W. McELHANY. Commercial progress in a town like Quarryville, where the subject of this sketch resides, owes its development to the energy, perseverance and foresight of young men, who during their earlier experience realize the importance of integrity, economy and the smaller details of business. It is the observance of these important factors that have contributed success to Mr.

McElhany as a merchant and as a citizen. Coming from a line of Scotch ancestry, it is but natural that he should inherit some of the practical, sound judgment of the race that has furnished some of the most successful merchants in the world.

John W. McElhany, general merchant of Quarryville, was born in Marticville, Lancaster county, Oct. 15, 1858. His parents are David S. and Sarah (Guiles) McElhany, of Lancaster county. David S. McElhany was born in Chester county, Pa., in November, 1823. His wife was born in Strasburg, Lancaster county, in 1825, a daughter of William Guiles, of an old family of Strasburg, which dates back to Revolutionary time and fame.

David S. McElhany was the son of Samuel McElhany, who was born in Scotland and settled in Chester county on a farm where our subject's father grew to maturity. They raised a large family, some of whom are still living: Lottie, one of the daughters, became the wife of John Ewing, of Philadelphia. Frank is a dentist. David S., our subject's father, was raised in Chester county, where as a young man he engaged in the brick making business. At the age of twenty-two he came to Lancaster county, and settled at Marticville, where he married and continued the manufacture of brick. In addition to his other interests he purchased a track of land near Marticville, where he erected a house and engaged in farming. In 1889 he retired from active life, living at his old homestead. It was in 1896 that his estimable wife, the companion of so many years, died leaving her husband with six children. She was a consistent Christian and a member of the M. E. Church. Their children were: (1) Lizzie McElhany was born at the old home in Lancaster county, in Sept., 1847. She qualified herself for a teacher at the State Normal School, and was for a number of years a successful teacher in the Lancaster county schools. She became the wife of James Douglas, of Washington borough, Lancaster county, a teacher. They now reside in Danville, Pa., where she keeps a millinery store. They have two children, Reno S., who is a rising young attorney in Chicago; and Meda. (2) Sallie was born in 1853, and educated in the home schools. She grew to womanhood and became the wife of Charles Costello, of Lancaster city. They have four children: William, a merchant at Bird-in-Hand, Lancaster county, married Miss Bell Bear, of the same place, and they have two children, Elizabeth and Mary Bell; Valentine, married, is a coach painter of Lancaster city; Lottie is a clerk in Williamson's store in Lancaster city; Rose is a teacher in the Quarryville school. (3) William, born at the old home in 1857, died from sun stroke July 2, 1901. (4) Lottie, born in 1856, has remained single and resides with her father. (5) John W. was the fifth in order of birth. (6) Laura another daughter and the youngest of the family, was born in 1861. She is the wife of George Loflin, of Philadelphia, one of the leading contractors and builders of that city. They have an interesting family of four children.

John W. McElhany was educated in the schools of Marticville. After finishing his course he remained with his father in business until he was twenty-six years of age. In 1884 he engaged in the general merchandising business, in the village of Bird-in-Hand. Here he continued in business for about nine years. In 1895 he purchased the general store of Hensel Lefever & Co., at Quarryville, where he has continued the business up to the present time with success to himself and satisfaction to his trade. As the business stands to-day it represents the success of one man, who began in a small way, and who was willing to win his way by merit and perseverance. The social side of Mr. McElhany's life has also been a success. In 1882 he married Miss Ella Herr, the estimable daughter of Martin and Mariah Herr, members of one of the foremost families in that section. Mrs. McElhany was born in 1858, and was educated in the State Normal school. For a number of years she was recognized as one of the best teachers in the county. This union has been blessed with four children: Clare, born in 1887; Frank, born in 1891; Emma, born in 1896; and Esther, born in May, 1900.

Politically our subject has always been identified with the Republican party, and has held some minor offices. Religiously he and his wife have long been identified with the M. E. Church, in which they both take an active interest, Mr. McElhany being one of the trustees, and steward of the Quarryville Church.

AARON WEAVER. Well known and highly respected throughout West Earl township is Aaron Weaver, one of the substantial farmers, who traces his ancestry to three brothers, who came from Switzerland to America, and located in Lancaster county, probably about 1730. The line of descent went down, through Henry (or Haeny, as his name is sometimes spelled, who died May 11, 1826, aged eighty-nine years and eleven months), Michael (the great-grandfather, who was a farmer of Earl township), to Jacob, the grandfather, who was not only a thrifty farmer, but a well-known minister of the Mennonite faith, and became the father of: Magdalena, deceased; Henry M., of Indiana, deceased; John M., the father of Aaron; Catherine; Jacob M., and Mary, Elizabeth, Michael and Annie, all four of whom have passed away.

John M. Weaver is a prosperous farmer of West Earl township. He married Mary Weaver, and they reared these children: David, deceased; Annie, deceased; Aaron; Jacob, a farmer of Earl; John, deceased; and Mary, who is the wife of John M. Weaver, of Earl township.

Aaron Weaver was born Nov. 9, 1851, and received his education in the common schools of his township. All of his life has been passed in agricultural pursuits, and he has become known as one of the best and most thorough farmers of the township. Although he is now the owner of a well-cultivated farm of forty-one acres, well improved, and owns most comfortable residence and other buildings, life has not always been easy with him. Industry, economy and perseverance have enabled him to accumulate ample means, and he and his wife are able to enjoy the results obtained by earlier self-denial.

On Dec. 10, 1870; Aaron Weaver was married to Miss Elizabeth Seible, born Feb. 19, 1850, a daughter of Leonard and Mary (Mink) Seible, natives of Germany, but residents of West Earl township. To Mr. and Mrs. Weaver have been born: Isaac S., a farmer of Earl township, who married Kate Stoner, of that township; Frank S., a hose manufacturer, of Ephrata, who married Minnie Murr; Mary, who died in childhood; and Annie, who married Daniel Zimmerman, of West Earl township. Mr. Weaver has never taken any active interest in politics, but is inclined in the direction of the Republican party, and both he and wife have been consistent members of the Mennonite Church for more than a quarter of a century. In the community he is known as one of the most upright, generous and kind-hearted of men, and he is esteemed and valued by a large circle of friends.

BARTON WITMAN, who died Aug. 14, 1902, was long a well-known citizen of Caernarvon township.

William Witman, the founder of this family in Caernarvon township, was born in Bucks county, Pa., near the "Plow Tavern," and when a young man, came to Churchtown, to take a position as clerk in the Post Forge. Here he mastered the details of the business, and soon became manager of the Company's office. For twenty-one years he was connected with the establishment, and it was during his connection with it that he bought a farm of sixty acres, fourteen of which were wooded, which became his home after his retirement from the iron works, and here he remained engaged in farming as long as he lived. During these last years he dealt extensively in stock. One of the active Democrats of this section of the county, he filled various local positions in a very satisfactory manner, one of the offices he held being that of assessor. When he died he was about seventy years of age, and he had led an honorable and useful career. His wife, Catherine, was the daughter of Adam Zell, of the east part of the county. She became the mother of nine children: Barton; Ann, who married David Williams, and is deceased; Harvitt, deceased; Margaret, who married Levi DeHaven, and is deceased; Catherine, Susan and Ellen, deceased; William, who lives in Little Britain township; and Edgar, who lives in Little Britain township. William Witman and wife were members of the Episcopal Church.

Barton Witman was born Aug. 23, 1825, and received his education in the public schools. As long as his father lived he remained in his employ, assisting in his farming and in cattle buying enterprises. After the death of the father, Barton took charge of the homestead, which is situated about a mile and a quarter southwest of Churchtown, and devoted his life to its cultivation. Always was he active and progressive, and he kept thoroughly in touch with all modern and advanced ideas.

Mr. Witman was married, Sept. 6, 1872, to Miss Caroline Dempster, a daughter of Robert Dempster, of Philadelphia, Pa., where she was reared. To this union were born two children: Robert, is unmarried, and at home; Catherine married George D. Witmer, a farmer of East Earl township, and they have two children, George Robert and an infant daughter.

Mr. Witman was warden of the Churchtown Episcopal Church, of which he was a member many years. Mrs. Witman was reared a Methodist, and she is one of the highly respected residents of the community in which she lives.

CAPT. MARTIN H. SMITH (deceased) was one of the highly respected residents of Columbia, Lancaster county, and a full record of his life will be found in the biography of Mrs. C. C. Smith, his mother, mentioned elsewhere. He married Miss Mary E. Moore, and to this marriage were born, Mildred M. and Gertrude C. Mrs. Mary E. (Moore) Smith was born in West Hempfield township near Columbia, a daughter of Joseph A. and Sarah (Shay) Moore, natives of West Hempfield township and Marietta, Lancaster county, respectively, and both died on their old homestead, now known as Norwood. Joseph A. Moore, besides being a farmer, was a pressed-brick layer. He died Aug. 26, 1885, at the age of forty-eight, having lost his wife, March 27th of the same year, at the age of forty-four years. They were members of the First English Lutheran Church, and their remains lie interred in the family graveyard on the Norwood estate. Their children, seven in number, were named in the order of birth, as follows: Mary E.; Daniel S., on the old homestead, and also a boss puddler; Christine, wife of Harry Hartman, a painter in Columbia; Ella M., married to Ralph Sweeny, a paper-hanger of the same borough; Armour N., boss puddler in the rolling-mill at Columbia; and Julia A. and Susie L., who both died young. Capt. Martin H. Smith passed away Sept. 5, 1898, honored by all who knew him. He had a fine reputation as a sharp-shooter, and as such secured several prizes in closely contested matches. After his death, a handsomely enameled medal which the Captain had won in several revolver contests was presented to his estimable wife by those who had it in custody, as a token of the esteem for the deceased, and respect for his widow. Mrs. Smith's many good personal qualities and amiable disposition have won for her a host of warm friends. She still conducts the business, under the name of the M. H. Smith Estate, with the Captain's sister, Annie G. Smith, as manager.

JOHN K. ROHRER, an old and highly respected farmer, who is now living with his son John, in Philadelphia, was a retired farmer of Rapho township, Lancaster county. He was born on the farm adjoining the one he lately left, Aug. 3, 1829, a son of John and Susan (Kauffman) Rohrer, also residents on this same farm. The parents were born in Rapho and East Hempfield townships, respectively, and both are now deceased. The father was an active farmer until twenty years prior to his death, in 1874, at the age of seventy-two years. The mother, who died in 1868, at the age of sixty-one years, was buried in Erisman's Meeting House Burying Ground in Rapho township. They had the following children: Mary, widow of Emanuel Cassel, of Penn township; Jacob, who was drowned while fishing in the Ohio river; John K.; Christian, who died in 1888, on the old homestead; David, who died young; and Anna, widow of Andrew Hershey, now making her home with her sister, Mrs. Mary Cassel.

The paternal grandfather of John K. Rohrer was John Rohrer, who had a farm in Rapho township, where he spent his life in the cultivation of the soil. His wife belonged to the Shank family. The maternal grandfather of John K. Rohrer was Christian Kauffman, who was born and who spent his life in Lancaster county.

John K. Rohrer was twice married, his first marriage occurring in June, 1851, in Lancaster county, to Catherine Heistand, by whom he became the father of the following family: Albert, deceased, who married Amanda Ginger, and had two children; Martha, who married Michael Sechrist, a tobacco dealer, at Columbia, Pa.; Susan, wife of Hiram Minnich, of near Lititz. Mrs. Catherine (Heistand) Rohrer was born in East Hempfield township, and passed away in 1856, when only twenty-four years of age. Her remains were interred in Rapho township in a private burying ground. She was a daughter of Christian and Catherine (Heistand) Heistand, who were farming people, both of Lancaster county. Her father died in August, 1880, at the age of eighty-four; her mother entered into rest in March, 1881, when she was aged eighty-two years. Their ashes were interred in Landisville, Pa. They were members of the Mennonite Church. Prior to his death Christian Heistand lived retired for fifteen years. He was the father of the following children: John, who died in California; Christian, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased, who married Henry Hoffman; Anna, who married Christian Long, of Landisville, Pa.; Barbara, wife of Henry Landis, living in Mt. Joy, Pa.; Catherine; Jacob, who was drowned; Abraham, a retired farmer, with his home in Mt. Joy; Samuel, deceased; and Mary. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Catherine Rohrer were John and Anna Heistand. John Heistand was married three times. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Rohrer were Jacob and Barbara (Lehman) Heistand, also of Lancaster county.

In March, 1857, John K. Rohrer was married in Lancaster county, to Mary, a younger sister of his first wife. Born to this union were the following children: John, who was a farmer in Osborn, Ohio; Clinton, who married Fianna Berto, is a farmer in West Hempfield township; Christian, a farmer in Rapho township, who married Lizzie Felker; David, who married Laura Snyder, and is a carpenter in Pekin, Ill.; Frank O., a farmer, who married Irene Hetter; Herman, who married Anna Baker, and is a farmer, and runs a threshing machine, but who resides with his father; Ferris, a farmer in West Hempfield township; Malinda, who married Walter Rutledge, and has her home in Philadelphia; and Mabel, wife of John L. Stewart, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Mary (Heistand) Rohrer was born in East Hempfield township in 1838. She is a good wife and mother, and is beloved for her many excellent qualities.

John K. Rohrer remained at home with his parents until he was somewhat past his majority, when he established himself on a neighboring farm. There he remained until 1853, when he built the brick house which was his home until he joined his son in Philadelphia, and established himself in a manner most satisfactory and creditable to him and his family. Mr. Rohrer is a Republican, and is regarded as a man of character, intelligence and integrity. For some seven years he was a director of the Union National Bank at Mt. Joy, and has exercised a marked influence in the business affairs of this section of the county. His personal integrity is beyond question, and his genial disposition and generous spirit have won him many friends, to whom he is strongly attached.

LEVI RISSER (deceased) was born in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, March 18, 1847, and died in the same township, June 21, 1888, his remains being put to rest in the cemetery connected with Risser's Church.

Joseph and Fanny (Nissley) Risser, his parents, were both natives of Lancaster county. The father died in December, 1896, at the age of seventy-five years; and the mother in 1882, at the age of sixty years. They were members of the Mennonite Church. The following family blessed their home: Levi, whose name appears above; Mary, wife of Levi Ebersole, a retired farmer of Elizabethtown; Joseph, a Mt. Joy township farmer; Anna, deceased, who married Levi Longenecker; Anna, wife of A. Denny, a painter of Elizabethtown; Martin, a Mt. Joy township farmer; Amanda, wife of Benjamin Hersh, a blacksmith in East Donegal, whose biography will be found elsewhere; and Amos, a Mt. Joy township farmer.

The father died on his old home in West Donegal township full of years and honor; the mother passed away in 1859, when only twenty-five years old, leaving behind memories of a devoted wife and a tender mother. Hiram H. Nissley, of Elizabethtown, is a half brother of Mrs. Risser.

Levi Risser was born and bred a farmer, and followed that occupation all his days, his death being caused by his horse while operating a separator. Until his marriage Mr. Risser resided with his parents. When he became the head of a family he established himself on the farm in the township of Mt. Joy where he was living at the time of his early death. Here he had attained an enviable position in the confidence and esteem of the community, and served as school director for some three years. In politics he was a Republican, and with his wife belonged to the Mennonite Church.

Mrs. Risser is a woman of far more than the ordinary character, and in the rearing of her young family has displayed much wisdom and motherly devotion. When her husband died she moved to a small farm near Elizabethtown, where she remained until 1898, when she moved to an adjoining place, just inside the borough lines. Her oldest child was fifteen years of age when she was left a widow, and the character, industry and integrity of her children attest the value of the motherhood that has watched over them so wisely and well.

JACOB S. SEACHRIST, a retired farmer of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born on his present farm Dec. 18, 1844, a son of Michael and Susan (Seitz) Seachrist, natives, respectively, of West Hempfield and Manor townships, and descendants of old and highly respected families of Lancaster county. The sisters of Michael Seachrist were: Catherine Garber, Mary Bowers and Mrs. Martin Musser.

Michael Seachrist was a substantial farmer, a vocation he followed all his life, and he died on his farm, the present homestead of Jacob S., April 15, 1876, at the age of sixty years, and his remains were interred in Silver Spring cemetery; his widow, who was born in the year 1816, now resides with her son, Jacob S. There were born to the marriage of Michael and Susan Seachrist the following family: Miss Anna; Lizzie, deceased; John, deceased; Fanny and Jacob S., both single; Martin, a farmer in East Donegal township, and married to Lizzie Flora; Mary, widow of Henry Mellinger, of Petersburg, this county; and Michael, in the tobacco business at Columbia, Pennsylvania.

"Michael" seemed to be a name inherent to the family of Seachrists, as that was the name of the father of Jacob S. Seachrist, of his paternal grandfather, and of the male progenitor of the head of each family for five generations prior to the grandfather, or in other words, of seven consecutive generations. The first Michael of these seven was the pioneer of the family in West Hempfield township and settled at Silver Spring in 1769. The maternal grandparents of Jacob S. Seachrist were Jacob and Elizabeth Seitz, of whose family mention in full is made in the sketch of C. C. Seitz, to be found elsewhere. To Jacob and Elizabeth Seitz were born the following named children: John, Tobias, Susan (mother of Jacob S. Seachrist), Henry and Fanny (wife of John Smith), all, save Susan, of Cumberland county, Pa.; Leah, who died in 1896, the wife of Joseph Lehman, also deceased; Nancy Doner, now deceased; Benjamin and Jacob, both deceased; and Lizzie, wife of Christian Garber.

Jacob S. Seachrist has a fine farm of 103 acres, but since 1899 has ceased to give it any active attention, having retired from labor to enjoy the remainder of his days in the peace and comfort that his early industry has won for him, and in quiet association with old-time friends. In politics he is a Republican.

HENRY B. LANDIS belongs to one of the old and most honorable county families, his grandfather, Henry Landis, having settled in Upper Leacock township, in Lancaster county, in 1815. In 1836 he purchased the farm where Henry B. now resides and during a long life, devoted his best energies to the development of his land. A quiet, unostentatious man, he was a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Mary Johns, and their only child was Peter J., who in turn, became the father of Henry B.

Peter J. Landis was born in Upper Leacock township, on March 3, 1833, and moved to the old homestead when three years of age. His education was obtained in the public schools of the township, and his life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. Prior to his father's death he took charge of the farm, operating it until his death, Feb. 9, 1899. He married Martha Barr, a daughter of Christian Barr, who still survives him, in her sixty-ninth year. Six children were born to this union: Martha, who died at the age of two years; Christian B., a carpenter of Lancaster city; Annie A., wife of Joseph Leamon, of Lancaster county; Mary E., wife of Benjamin H. Rohrer, of Upper Leacock township; Dr. Eli B., who died in 1899, and who was a practicing physician in Seoul, Corea; and Henry B.

Henry B. Landis was born on the old homestead where he now resides, Oct. 20, 1861, and he remained at home, assisting his father until he was twenty-three years of age, receiving his education in the common schools. He married Miss Mary Groff, of Manheim township, and after marriage he remained engaged in farming for his father, until the death of the latter, and then purchasing twenty acres of the old homestead has continued to operate this ever since. It is located within two and one-half miles of the city of Lancaster, and here the owner has made extensive improvements, carrying on a large dairy also, and disposing of his products in Lancaster. His land is situated in the very garden of the rich lands of the county, and he carries on general farming with success.

Henry B. Landis was reared in the Old Mennonite religious faith, both of his parents being most worthy members of that religious body, and he also is one of its leading members, and is one of the most highly respected men of this locality.

ADAM S. SHAFER. The business interests of the borough of Ephrata, Lancaster county, are in the hands of careful and capable men, who have studied with good results the different lines of trade in which they are engaged. Among those who, since 1888, have contributed to the comfort and convenience of the public in this locality, is Adam S. Shafer, the popular grocer, who is well and favorably known to almost every resident.

Adam S. Shafer was born May 24, 1831, a son of the late Henry and Margaret (Stober) Shafer, both of Lancaster county, but of German descent; the father of Henry Shafer emigrated from Germany in the early days, and served in the Continental army under George Washington. Adam S. was one of six children born to his parents: Isaac, John, Lavina, Henry, Adam S. and Daniel. He was reared on a farm and received his education in the common schools of Ephrata township, and at the age of seventeen decided to learn the trade of shoemaker at Akron. For more than forty years he continued in the shoe business, but upon removal into the borough, in 1888, he opened up a grocery business which has occupied his attention ever since. Mr. Shafer deals in all kinds of staple commodities and strives to please his patrons, with the result that he has built up a fine trade, using only honest methods and dealing fairly by rich and poor. A man of standing and prominence in the Lutheran Church, he also has the esteem of the business community.

On Jan. 10, 1869, Adam S. Shafer was married to Miss Elvina Texter, a daughter of Daniel Texter, of Berks county. To this worthy couple have been born four children, of whom one daughter died in childhood; the others are: Lizzie, who married James Heninger, and has two daughters, Esther and Blanch; Emma, who married John F. Schreck, of Ephrata, and they have four children, Paul, Ralph, John and Lester; and Carrie, who married Jacob Smith, of Philadelphia, and they have one daughter, Pauline.

In politics Mr. Shafer adheres to the old Jeffersonian principles of the Democratic party. Both he and wife are passing their advancing years in comfort, esteemed by all, and conscious that they have lived uprightly and set a good example to their posterity.

PETER R. NISSLEY, a young and prosperous farmer in the township of East Donegal, was born on his present farm Sept. 6, 1863, a son of John K. and Maria (Reist) Nissley. His father was born on the adjoining farm, and his mother in the township of Rapho, and both died on the old homestead.

John K. Nissley was a prominent farmer in his day, and for nineteen years was president of the Mt. Joy Fire Insurance Co. For six years he served as school director. He died in February, 1898, at the age of sixty-four years; his wife died in August, 1891, at the age of fifty-four years. They were both laid to rest in the cemetery connected with the Graybill Church in East Donegal township. They were members of the Mennonite Church, in which he was a trustee, and they were known as good and honest people, kind neighbors, and good citizens. To them were born: Sarah R., who married Clayton Nissley, a farmer in East Donegal township; Maria R., widow of George R. Risser, now living on the old farm; Peter R.; Fannie R., who died at the age of eighteen years.

Peter and Catherine (Kreider) Nissley, the grandparents of Peter R., were both natives of Lancaster county, and the former died in East Donegal township, where he spent sixty-five years. For fifty-three years he was a Mennonite minister, and his death occurred in 1890, when he was aged eighty-seven years. His remains are resting in the Graybill Meeting House cemetery. He was married three times, and had a goodly family of descendants.

John and Mary (Brubaker) Reist, the maternal grandparents of Mr. Nissley, were both natives of Lancaster county, and were farming people all their lives.

Peter R. Nissley was married Nov. 4, 1886, at the home of his wife's parents, to Harriet E. Garber, by whom he has become the father of the following children: Alice G., John G., Maria G., Hiram G., Esther G., Gertrude G. and Simon P. They are all bright and promising children, and give promise of a useful career in the world.

Harriet E. (Garber) Nissley was born in the township of West Donegal, Oct. 24, 1865, a daughter of John S. and Susan (Erb) Garber, both natives of Lancaster county. Her father, who was a farmer and a man of considerable prominence in his day, was a director of the First National Bank at Marietta, and served as a school director for many years.

He died in March, 1888, when he had reached the age of sixty-one years, and his remains were interred in the Bassler Meeting House burying grounds in the township of West Donegal. Her mother, who was born in 1830, is now residing on the old homestead. To John S. and Susan (Erb) Garber were born the following family: Miss Anna E., who is at home with her mother; Henry E., a farmer in West Donegal township; Amos E., farming on the old homestead; John E., a farmer in West Donegal; Miss Katie E., who is at home with her mother; Mary E., deceased; Simon E., a farmer in the township of West Donegal; Harriet E.; and Samuel E., a farmer in East Donegal township. Mrs. Nissley's paternal grandparents were John and Catherine (Secrist) Garber, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county, and are referred to in a sketch elsewhere. Her mother's parents were John and Veronica (Berg) Erb, and are also mentioned in a sketch found elsewhere.

Peter R. Nissley remained with his parents until he had reached the age of twenty-two years, when he began the cultivation and management of the home farm, and here he has remained until the present time. The farm consists of 112 acres, and is one of the best in the township. Mr. Nissley takes a prominent part in commercial and business affairs, and for ten years has been a director of the Mt. Joy Union National Bank. Since the death of his father he has been a director of the Mt. Joy Fire Insurance Co. In his religious connection he is a member of the Old Mennonite Church, and politically he affiliates with the Republican party.

DAVID H. MARTIN. Prominent among the substantial retired farmers of West Earl township, was David H. Martin, a highly esteemed citizen well and favorably known through Lancaster county, who passed away June 14, 1902. He was born in East Earl township, Nov. 3, 1840, a son of David K. and Leah (Hoover) Martin, of East Earl township, where the former was a leading farmer.

For a period of ten years David K. Martin lived a retired life, prior to his death in 1871, at the age of fifty-eight. His wife passed away in 1858, at the age of forty-three. Both were members of the Mennonite Church, and they were interred in Weaverland cemetery, in East Earl township. Their children were: Nancy, deceased, wife of Amos Witmer; John, deceased; Martha, widow of John Witmer, of West Earl township; Leah, who married H. C. Martin, a retired farmer of East Earl township; David H., of this sketch; Joseph, a farmer and preacher in Ephrata township; Israel, a retired farmer of Earl township; Isaac, a farmer of Earl township; Martin, a farmer of East Earl township; Elizabeth, who married Amos Martin, of Salisbury township; Mary, who married John Gamber, of Manheim township; Rev. Amos, a farmer and preacher in Brecknock township; and Levi, who died in infancy.

David H. Martin remained with his parents until his marriage, working on the home farm and assisting the neighbors through the heavy work of haying and harvesting, but after his marriage he began farming on his own account in West Earl township, where he remained for one year, and then moved upon a farm in East Earl township, cultivating that place for five years. At this time he returned to his West Earl township farm where he spent the years until 1899, when he retired from activity and settled upon his late home. During these years Mr. Martin was very busily engaged outside of farming operations, being chosen to settle up both the estates of his father and that of his father-in-law, attending to this tedious business with efficiency.

In politics Mr. Martin was a staunch Republican, and he was honored by his fellow-citizens with offices of trust and responsibility, having served for nine years as township auditor and as school director for a long period. For the last eighteen years he was one of the directors of the Earl Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and for the last fifteen years he held the honorable position of trustee of the Groffdale Meeting House.

On Oct. 29, 1863, Mr. Martin was united in marriage in West Earl township, to Miss Elizabeth Wenger, who was born in West Earl township June 17, 1843, a daughter of Benjamin and Anna (Erb) Wenger, natives of West Earl and Manheim townships. The death of Mr. Wenger occurred on his old homestead, in 1872, at the age of sixty-six years; he had lived without business care for twelve years prior to his death. He was a leading member of the Old Mennonite Church, and for many years was one of its deacons. He was a man of such good understanding that he was continually called upon to settle up estates and to attend to legal business for his neighbors. His wife died in 1879, at the age of sixty-nine years, and both of these worthy and highly esteemed parents lie sleeping in the cemetery at Groffdale. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wenger were: Rev. Emanuel, deceased; Joseph, a retired farmer and preacher of Earl township; Maria, who married Rev. Michael Horst; Susannah, who married John Musser, and died in 1901; Benjamin, a retired miller of West Earl township; Jacob, a retired farmer of Wayne county, Ohio; Michael, a farmer of West Earl township; Anna, who married Isaac Stoner, a retired farmer of Ephrata township; Elizabeth, widow of Mr. Martin; Fanny, deceased; Esther, who married first Martin Weaver, and second, Deacon M. W. Nolt, a retired farmer; and Henry, who died in infancy.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Martin were Rev. Joseph and Maria (Horst) Wenger, of West Earl township, the former of whom was a Mennonite preacher and farmer, who died in 1850, at the age of eighty-four years, at which time he appeared to be a man of much less age. Time had treated him kindly, leaving him almost the vigor of youth, and he possessed the sound teeth of a temperate and abstemious man, this being a very unusual occurrence. The maternal grandparents were Emanuel and Susannah (Landis) Erb, of Lancaster county, the former of whom died in 1861, at the age of seventy-four years.

No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Martin, but several children found a home with them, one child being reared to maturity, and two others being married under their hospitable roof. In the neighborhood, Mr. Martin was esteemed in the highest possible way, and was much beloved, as is his widow, on account of the neighborly kindness extended to those in trouble or sickness. Although Mrs. Martin has no diploma to testify to her merits as a physician, she is able to point to a number of serious cases which have been in her care, and which she succeeded in curing when regular practitioners had given the patients up to die. Her presence carries healing with it, her kind and sympathetic heart giving encouragement and help whenever possible. Although she makes some use of medicine, she has methods of her own by which she rarely fails to give ease from pain.

ABRAHAM ERB. Perhaps one of the most desirable farms in Lancaster county is the well situated and finely cultivated one of seventy-four fertile acres, located just west of East Petersburg, in East Hempfield township, which is owned and operated by Abraham Erb, who has become well known as one of the most successful agriculturists of this locality.

Abraham Erb was born in Lancaster county, Dec. 19, 1856, a son of Daniel B. and Catherine (Hernley) Erb, and a grandson of Jacob Erb, who was born May 30, 1800, on a farm located between Lititz and Manheim, in Warwick township, a son of Daniel and Annie (Baumbarger) Erb.

Jacob Erb was reared on the farm, and he remained a farmer all his life, his death occurring in 1875, in the old home. His wife, Mary (Bucher) Erb, a daughter of Jonas Bucher, was born in Warwick township, in 1808, and died in 1883, both of them having been among the most respected and consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church. Their children were: Eliza, widow of Benjamin Hernley, of near Elizabethtown; Jonas, a retired farmer of Warwick township; Daniel B., father of Abraham; Susan, widow of Benjamin H. Stauffer, of the State of Maryland; Annie, deceased; Catherine, deceased; Jacob B., a farmer of Newton, Kans.; and Elias, who died in childhood.

Daniel B. Erb was born Nov. 26, 1829, and was reared on the old homestead, where he learned to be a good farmer, and he continued to live in Warwick township for a number of years, but in 1872 he removed to Washington county, Maryland, and spent four years on a farm near Hagerstown, when he removed to East Donegal township, Lancaster county, and for the eleven succeeding years was one of the excellent farmers of that locality. He then moved to East Petersburg, where he has since been engaged in the profession of veterinary surgeon, for the past thirty-five years being engaged in this line. Few in the county have had more experience, and he has been unusually successful, and has saved the life of many a valuable animal for the owner. Since 1890 he has given his entire time to his profession, and his services are in constant demand all over the county. For some time he has been the efficient tax collector of the township, and is serving his second term as such.

On Oct. 28, 1851, Daniel B. Erb was married to Catherine Hernley, who was born in Rapho township, May 30, 1832, a daughter of Christian Hernley. They are the parents of five children: Albert, a farmer of Rapho township; Abraham, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Mary; Henry, of Mt. Joy; and Amos, the foreman of a tobacco warehouse at Rohrerstown. Both Daniel B. Erb and wife are worthy members of the Old Mennonite Church, and are among the most respected citizens of the township.

Abraham Erb was reared on the farm and received excellent instruction as his father was so successful an agriculturist, and was educated in the public schools, remaining at home until he had reached his twenty-third year, at which time he began farming operations for himself. Since 1890 he has, in addition to general farming, dealt largely in tobacco, and makes a success of handling the products of the Maryland Fertilizing Company.

Abraham Erb was married Oct. 16, 1879, to Annie G. Herr, a daughter of Daniel H. Herr, who was born in Penn township, and a family of ten children has been born of this union: Elmer, Daniel, Abraham, Katie, Emma, David, Rudy, Annie May, Alice and Mable. The religious connection of the family is with the Old Mennonite Church, where they are highly esteemed. Abraham Erb is a good citizen, and is regarded by the community as a good neighbor, kind friend and one worthy of the highest respect.

BENJAMIN L. LANDIS, who entered into rest Aug. 5, 1902, was a successful farmer of East Lampeter township, and belonging to one of the wealthiest and most prominent, as well as numerous, families of Lancaster county.

John H. Landis, his grandfather, was an extensive farmer in East Lampeter township, and was a leading member of the Old Mennonite Church. His marriage was to a member of the Snively family, another of the old and prominent ones of the county. They reared a large family, its members being now scattered through many parts of the Union.

Abram S. Landis, who was the father of Benjamin L. Landis, was born in East Lampeter township, June 2, 1798, and during life was a large and successful farmer, being also a minister in the Old Mennonite Church. Abram Landis took part in politics to a limited degree, was a Republican, and served as school director and as supervisor in his township for some years. Abram Landis married Barbara B., a daughter of Benjamin (known as Big Ben) Landis, and they were the parents of ten children: John L., deceased, was a farmer of East Lampeter township; Barbara L. was the wife of Henry Musser; Mary Ann was the wife of Joseph Leamon; Anna L. was the wife of John Kreider; Elizabeth L. is the wife of David Leamon; Esther L. is the wife of Benjamin Groff; Susannah L. is unmarried; Abram died at the age of two years; Benjamin L.; and Lydia L. is the wife of John Groff. The mother of this family was born Jan. 31, 1799, and died Aug. 7, 1881.

Benjamin L. Landis was born Nov. 17, 1837, in the house where he resided at his death, and was educated in the public schools, living at home until his marriage, about his twenty-third year, when he began farming for himself on the old homestead.

Benjamin L. Landis was married first to Fannie Bossler, and eight children were born to this union, two of whom died in childhood, the others were: Abram B., a farmer of East Hempfield township; Anna B., who died unmarried; Fannie B., wife of Abram Huber; Hettie B., wife of Elam Buckwalter; Lizzie, who died unmarried; and Benjamin F., at home, unmarried. The mother of this family died Jan. 8, 1890. The second marriage of Mr. Landis was to Mrs. Hettie L. Leamon, and to this union one child was born, May 25, 1896, Bertha K. Landis, a dainty little maid, the pet of the family.

Mr. Landis devoted his entire time to farming on the old homestead, this becoming his property at the time of his father's death. It is located on the Horse Shoe Pike road, two and one-half miles from the city of Lancaster, and contains 101 acres of valuable land, this being one of the most desirable farms of Lancaster county. His death, which was due to a cancer of the stomach, removed from East Lampeter township one of its most highly esteemed citizens. Mr. Landis was a member of the Old Mennonite Church, to which his widow also belongs, and he was one of the most respected and substantial citizens of his township. Few men stood higher than Benjamin Landis in the estimation and respect of his neighbors and friends.

CHARLES B. STEPHAN, a produce and ice merchant in Elizabethtown, Pa., was born in Rust, Baden, Germany, May 27, 1856, a son of Bonifaz and Sophie (Schwartz) Stephan, both natives of Rust. The father was a farmer and dealer in coal and potatoes. In his younger days he owned and operated boats on the Rhine, and from 1864 to 1867 he kept the "Ferry Hotel" at Sasbach on the Rhine, in Baden, where he in connection operated a ferry. He died in his native town in 1877, at the age of fifty-one years. His widow, Sophie Stephan, was a daughter of Johann Schwartz, deceased, also at the time one of the largest land owners of said town. She was born May 15, 1828, and is still living in Rust, Baden. Both parents were born and bred in the Roman Catholic Communion. They had two children: Franziska, who died in infancy; and Charles B.

Samuel Stephan, the paternal grandfather of Charles B., was Mayor of Rust during the Rebellion of 1848, and was a man of more than local importance in his active years. He was a large land owner in Rust, and owned several boats on the lower Rhine. He was the first vesselman that passed through the Rhine Gap, at Bingen, on the lower Rhine, after the part passing the celebrated Mouse Tower was made navigable in 1846, for large ships. Under his term as Mayor the Rust Town Hall was built in 1847. He was also one of the few mayors from the south part of Baden, who attended the dedication of the monument at Riegel, Baden, dedicated by the Grand Duke Leopold in commemoration of the Baden-Leopold Canal, his name being on the monument with others. He was drowned at Sasbach on the Rhine in 1866, while visiting his son Bonifaz, being taken with a paralytic stroke, and falling overboard in the presence of his grandson, Charles B., then a lad of ten years, whose brave, but fruitless efforts to rescue his grandfather were honored by a diploma from the authorities, who bestowed upon him also a cash sum of ten florin. The presentation of the diploma and money was made by the delegated Judge of the District of Breisach am Rhein, in the town Hall of Sasbach, in the presence of the town council and friends in 1866.

Charles B. Stephan was married Sept. 23, 1880, to Miss Anna E. Morck (this name is also spelled by some members of the family Marks), who has borne him the following children: Sophie M., Angelina T., Frances M., Charles M. and George L. Mrs. Anna E. Stephan was born June 26, 1854, in Lancaster, a daughter of Frank and Margaretha (Herzog) Morck, who were married in 1850. Frank Morck was born in 1830, in Kreuznach, Rhenish-Prussia, Germany, and came to this country with his parents as a boy. He is now engaged in trucking. Mrs. Margaretha Morck was born in 1836, in Sandhausen, Baden, Germany. Both Mr. and Mrs. Morck are members of St. Joseph Roman Catholic Church, of Lancaster, Pa. They have the following children: Anna E., Mrs. Stephan; Mary; George, deceased; Peter and Lena, deceased. Andrew Morck, paternal grandfather of Mrs. Stephan, was born in Germany, but came to Lancaster in 1840, and he was one of the founders of the German St. Joseph Roman Catholic Church, of Lancaster.

Charles B. Stephan attended the town school of Rust for five years, and then entered the higher Citizens College at Ettenheim, Baden, where he remained for five years. At the age of sixteen he entered as a clerk in business houses in Freiburg, in Baden, also in Muehlhausen and Strassburg, in Alsace, Germany. In September, 1873, he sailed from Bremen, Germany, on the steamer "King William," and arrived Oct. 31, 1873. During the panic of that fall, he was searching for nearly three months for a position and was finally employed by a Mr. Shloeder, a cigar manufacturer on First Ave., remaining for several months, but he concluded to go to Lancaster, Pa., and there in Feb., 1874, he was welcomed by his aunts, Mrs. Frances (Stephan) Hatter and Mrs. Stefan (Stephan) Hauser. Not finding a suitable position in Lancaster he engaged in selling notions on the road, traveling through Lancaster, Dauphin, York and Lebanon counties, Pa., and parts of Maryland. In 1880, the year he was married, he took charge of a hotel in York, Pa., where he remained for two years, but he determined to return to Lancaster, where he resumed the occupation of a peddler, with a horse and wagon, selling notions, woolen goods, shoes, etc., at the same time trading in poultry, butter and eggs. In 1884 he moved to West Donegal township, where he engaged only in buying poultry, and the next spring he moved to Elizabethtown, locating on Washington street, where he resided until 1887, when he removed to what was formerly the old "Washington Hotel" stand, in the same town, where he remained thirteen years, dealing in produce. In 1890 he built his first ice house and started the first ice delivery for the town. In the fall of 1898 he moved to his present place, where he is eminently successful. His numerous teams make regular weekly gathering trips among about four hundred farms in this section. He is interested in other places in the same line of business, but especially has he made the egg business his leader, and he has gained a reputation in New York and Philadelphia markets. Mr. Stephan has established a branch wholesale and retail house in Atlantic City, N. J., dealing under the assumed name of Anchor Produce Co. Through his energy Elizabethtown turned to be the principal produce shipping point between Harrisburg and Philadelphia. Through his deep interest in advocating and encouraging the egg production, this section got to be the greatest egg-producing section in Pennsylvania. He was the first dressed calf shipper to the New York Market between Harrisburg and Philadelphia, who shipped dressed calves during the hot summer, as well as cold winter—thus beginning an enterprise which has assumed some considerable proportions and has made Elizabethtown its heaviest shipping point.

Mr. Stephan began his career in the most modest way, and his present prosperity has come as the direct result of his unflagging industry and honest and punctual methods.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephan are members of the Roman Catholic church, and are active in the work of St. Peter's Parish at Elizabethtown. Mr. Stephan is also a member of the following Catholic Benevolent Leagues, of Lancaster, Pa.: St. Peter's and St. Michael's Societies, also Father Grothen-mev Council of the Pennsylvania Catholic League, and the Shiller Death Benefit Association. Mr. Stephan is a Democrat in politics. He encouraged the establishing of a branch of the National Building and Loan Association, of Lebanon, Pa., of which he is second Vice President.

DR. ISRAEL A. MILLER, a widely known veterinary surgeon, and now a retired farmer in Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in Elizabeth township, Lancaster county, in October, 1843, his parents being Moses and Margaret (Appel) Miller. They were both born in Lancaster county, and descended from old and prominent families. The father is still living in the home adjoining the farm, in Elizabeth township, but the mother died in the summer of 1902.

Moses Miller was a son of Leonard Miller, and his wife, Eve, who were both natives of Germany. They made a home in Elizabeth township, where Moses was born and reared. They had a large family of children, all of whom have long since passed to the Heavenly land. Moses Miller had a family of five children: Mary A., who married Henry A. Dunmire, of Elizabeth, and died, leaving a family of four children: Lizzie, Annie, Susan and Alice; Caroline, who married John Edwards, and lives in Lancaster county, with a family; Margaret, who married Jacob Jocley, and died, leaving one son, Edward; Emma, who died when a young girl; and Israel A.

Dr. Miller, the youngest member and the only son of the above family, was reared to manhood on the parental estate, and secured such education as the home schools afforded. Until 1875 he was a farmer. That year he took up the study of veterinary surgery, and became very successful in that line. This has been his occupation, aside from farming, up to the present time. In 1881 he bought the William Whitman farm in Colerain township, which has become one of the finest farms in this section of the county under his able management. Here he has a large brick house, a good barn and all the out-buildings needed for the successful conduct of this fine place.

Dr. Miller was married in 1861 to Miss Annie Koehler, who was born in 1845, a daughter of George and Elizabeth Koehler; they were born in Lancaster county of German descent. To this happy union have come seven children: Milton, born in 1862, is living on a rented farm in Bart township; he married Miss Ella Draucker, and they have four children: Benjamin, Calvin, Margaret and Harriet. Ella, born in Lancaster county, married Enos Wiker, of Bart township, and has one daughter, Darthy. William F., born in Elizabeth township, married Miss Lizzie Groff, of East Drumore township, and lives on the Edwards home, near Quarryville; they have two children, Ira and Harry. Ada E., born in Lancaster county, married William Phillips, of Philadelphia, and is the mother of one daughter, Ruth I. James Monroe, born in Elizabeth township married Miss Susan Sharp and they have one daughter, Esther. Anna Mary, born in Elizabeth township, married Robert Montgomery, and has one daughter, Beatrice Irene. Rena Mae, born in Colerain township, is unmarried, and remains at home.

Dr. Miller is a Republican, and was supervisor in Elizabeth township. Reared a Lutheran, he is now an attendant upon the services of the Reformed Church. He has been successful and prosperous through his long and busy life, and commands the confidence and respect of his neighbors to an unusual degree.

SAMUEL S. ESHLEMAN. Few families of Lancaster county are entitled to more extended mention in a representative work than is that of Eshleman. Some members of this large and prominent family may be found in almost every section of the county, and they are usually among the leading and substantial citizens. Samuel S. Eshleman, of Mt. Joy township, is a farmer of prominence there. He was born Oct. 1, 1866, near White Oak, a son of Rev. Daniel M. and Mary (Shank) Eshleman.

Rev. Daniel M. Eshleman was born June 18, 1845, in Penn township, Lancaster county, son of Samuel G. and Mary (Minnich) Eshleman. The father died on the old home place in Penn township, in 1847, at the age of forty-one years, and was buried in the private cemetery of the Minnich family on the latter's old farm. His widow, the grandmother of Samuel S., was born in 1815, and still resides in Mt. Joy township. She is a member of the German Baptist Church, to which religious body her husband also belonged. Their children were: Samuel, a farmer in Penn township; Mary, the widow of Abraham Miller, of Rapho township; and Rev. Daniel M., the well-known minister of the German Baptist Church, a man respected and beloved by all who know him. Mrs. Eshleman married Samuel Sherrer after a few years of widowhood, and one daughter was born to them, who is Anna, the wife of Henry Baker, a farmer of Mt. Joy township. Tracing the family ancestry still farther back we find the paternal grandfather to have been Abraham Eshleman, a farmer of Lancaster county, whose wife was a Kraybill, and on the maternal side the grandparents were Abraham and Maria (Shoemaker) Minnich, also of Lancaster county.

Until he was eight years of age, Daniel M. Eshleman remained with his widowed mother, his father having died when he was two years old. He was then made a member of the family of his uncle, Samuel Minnich, with whom he remained eight years, and he then worked around in the neighborhood for different farmers who were ever ready to employ an industrious and sober youth. For two years succeeding his arrival at maturity, he rented farming land, and after his marriage purchased his present farm where he has continued to reside ever since. In 1895 he was ordained a minister in the German Baptist Church, and since that time has faithfully performed his religious duties, attaching to himself all who come within reach of his convincing instruction. In his earlier years Rev. Eshleman belonged to the Republican party, but does not now take any part in politics. The first marriage of Rev. Daniel M. Eshleman was in October, 1865, in Lancaster, to Mary Shank, and two children were born to this union, namely: Samuel S., of this sketch, and Emma S., who died at the age of nineteen years. Mrs. Eshleman was born in Penn township, and died in 1882, at the age of thirty-six years, her burial being in Green Tree cemetery. She was a daughter of Joseph and Magdalena (Buckwiler) Shank, of Lancaster county. The second marriage of Rev. Daniel M. Eshleman was in November, 1883, in Mt. Joy township to Miss Sarah Eshelman, and four children were born to this union, namely: Salome E., Daniel E., John E., and Sadie E. Mrs. Eshleman was born in July, 1859, in Mt. Joy township, daughter of John and Barbara (Witmer) Eshelman, of Mt. Joy township, the former of whom died in Elizabethtown, in 1898, aged sixty-five years, and was buried in Green Tree cemetery. For six years prior to his death he lived retired. His widow, born in 1838, resides in Elizabethtown. Both long were members of the German Baptist Church. Their children were: Peter, who is a farmer in Dauphin county; Sarah, who married Rev. Mr. Eshleman; Samuel, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Miss Fanny, who resides in Elizabethtown with her mother; Isaac, a school teacher in Elizabethtown; and Mary, who died at the age of twenty-one years. Mrs. Eshleman's paternal grandfather was Isaac Eshelman, of Lancaster county, whose wife's maiden name was Longenecker, and the maternal grandfather was Christian Witmer, of Lancaster, and his wife was a member of the Culp family.

Samuel S. Eshleman was reared on his father's farm and obtained his education in the district schools. When he was about twenty years old he took an enjoyable trip through the West, being from home some nine months. This gave him broader views of life and was considerable of an education in itself. The attractions of the great West, however, did not induce him to make his home there, and upon his return he remained on the home farm with his parents for two more years. He then went into the creamery business which occupied him for some nine years, but in 1900 he located on his present farm which he has been operating ever since. Mr. Eshleman is regarded as a model up-to-date farmer and every evidence of capability is shown in his thrifty and attractive surroundings. He is identified with the Republican party, and in religion he belongs to the German Baptist Church.

The first marriage of Mr. Eshleman was in 1894, in Mt. Joy township, to Miss Clara Myers, and to this union two sons were born, Walter M. and David M. Mrs. Eshleman was born in East Donegal township, and died Feb. 8, 1897, at the early age of nineteen years. She was buried in Green Tree cemetery.

Her parents were David B. and Mary H. (Shoemaker) Myers, of East Donegal township. The second marriage of Mr. Eshleman occurred in May, 1898, in Milton Grove, when Mattie Ginder became his wife. She was born in Mt. Joy township, daughter of John and Sarah (Eby) Ginder, of Lancaster, the former of whom was a farmer in this county, and died in 1893 at the age of sixty-one years. His widow, born in 1840, resides in Mt. Joy township. Their children were: Amos, deceased; Kate, who married Henry Baker, of this township; Barbara, who married Allen Ober, of Mt. Joy township; Jacob, a farmer of East Donegal township; Miss Lizzie; Mattie, who married our subject; Andrew, deceased; Fianna, who married Jacob Miller, of Rapho township; and John, Nathan, Sadie and Henry, at home. Mr. and Mrs. Eshleman have one son, Earl, a bright and attractive child. As a man of reliability and substance, Mr. Eshleman is highly regarded in his locality. He is a kind neighbor, benevolent Christian and first-class citizen.

JACOB T. WHITSON. An esteemed citizen of Oak Hill, Little Britain township, is Jacob T. Whitson, who for many years was prominently identified with the mercantile, lumber, grain and coal interests of Lancaster county, residing at Christiana. He was born in Sadsbury township, Chester county, Oct. 18, 1830, a son of Moses and Elizabeth (Taylor) Whitson, natives of the same county and prominent members of the Society of Friends. His grandfather, Thomas Whitson was of English origin, and was born on Long Island, where he lived a consistent member of the Society of Friends.

Moses Whitson was born Aug. 24, 1798, and he died in 1853. In 1828, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Taylor, who was born in 1805, and who died in 1844. He resided in Sadsbury township, Chester county, and did much legal business there, in the way of surveying, conveyancing and settling up of estates.

Jacob T. Whitson was reared in Sadsbury township, but as stated above he later became a merchant in Christiana. In 1888, he moved into Little Britain township and bought a farm, comprising 245 acres of some of the best land in southern Lancaster county. This property has recently been purchased of him by his son, Charles S.

On March 25, 1863, Jacob T. Whitson was united in marriage to Mary Russell, of Drumore township, and to this union were born four children: Russell T., who is a professor in Peirce's Commercial College, in Philadelphia; Charles S., who is a successful farmer of Little Britain township; Emily, wife of Henry R. Hoopes, a prominent manufacturer of wheels, in Westchester, Pa.; and Horace G.

Mrs. Whitson was a daughter of John N. and Amelia (Kirk) Russell, who were among the early settlers and leading citizens of Drumore township. John N. Russell was born July 3, 1804, and died Dec. 23, 1876. For many years he was identified with the various reformatory and philanthropic enterprises of his section of the State, being a strong anti-slavery man and a tireless worker in the cause of temperance. His efforts brought forth much good, and he was long known as the friend of the poor and oppressed, and was noted for his honesty and truthfulness. John N. Russell was a remarkable man for his times, and many the reforms he advocated are now parts of the laws of the land. In every relation of life he displayed a true Christian character.

Jacob T. Whitson is a member of the Society of Friends. His political sympathy has always been with the Republican party, and his influence has ever been in the direction of education and morality.

Elmer K. Denlinger was reared on the home farm, and remained with his parents until his marriage, after which event he followed farming in Paradise township until 1898. In that year he came to Intercourse to take charge of the creamery plant, where he has remained up to the present time, alert and attentive to anything that concerns the interest of his patrons, or the prosperity of his employers. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion both he and his good wife belong to the Mennonite Church. In the summer of 1901 he put up an extensive feed and grist mill for himself, and has already secured a very profitable patronage.

ISAAC W. HOFFMAN, of Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, is an extensive farmer in that old and populous agricultural region, and also manager, as well as owner, of the Elizabethtown Creamery, one of the model butter making establishments of eastern Pennsylvania. He is also a manufacturer of fine and popular ice cream, which is shipped to all parts of Lancaster and adjoining counties, and in this line alone he carries on a very extensive business. He has within the last few years erected, besides his own dwelling, a number of fine brick houses, which he rents to desirable parties at a very low figure, and as they are very substantial buildings, fitted up with all the modern conveniences they have added very materially to the growth and beauty of the city.

Mr. Hoffman is a great-grandson, on his father's side, of Jacob and Sophia (Dunkle) Hoffman, and a grandson of Jacob, Jr., and Catherine (Keizer) Hoffman. On his mother's side, he is a great-grandson of Christian and Christena (Eshleman) Wolgemuth, and a grandson of Christian, Jr., and Anna (Metzler) Wolgemuth.

Hoffman was born in Rapho township, and his wife in the township of Mt. Joy, Lancaster county. They moved to Elizabethtown in 1890, to spend their few remaining years, and there the father died March 6, 1898; his remains were laid to rest in the Mt. Tunnel cemetery. Both the parents were members of the Dunkard Church. The mother was born Feb. 26, 1824, and she is now residing with her son Isaac W. Jacob and Catherine (Keizer) Hoffman, grandparents of Isaac W., were both life-long residents of Rapho township and were farming people of standing and character in the community in which they lived. Mr. Hoffman lived to be eighty-eight years old, dying April 2, 1889. Mrs. Hoffman was at the time of her death, in 1885, seventy-eight years, ten months and twenty-eight days old. They were both interred at the Green Tree German Baptist Meeting House, in Mt. Joy township. These were their children: John K., deceased; Jacob, also deceased; Samuel K. a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Isaac K., of Dauphin county, Pa.; Nancy, widow of Christ Wolgemuth, of Elizabethtown; Elizabeth, widow of Daniel Witmer, of Elizabethtown; and Catherine, the wife of Levi Kopp, a stone mason of Milton Grove, Pennsylvania.

Christian Wolgemuth, Jr., and his wife Anna Metzler, the maternal grandparents of Isaac W. Hoffman, were farming people of Mt. Joy township, and were well-known throughout that part of the county in which they lived. Mr. Wolgemuth died March 17, 1888, aged eighty-eight years, eleven months, and twenty-nine days. Mrs. Wolgemuth died Nov. 18, 1895, at the age of ninety years, one month and fourteen days. Both are interred at the Cross Roads Church, near Florin, Lancaster county. They were the parents of eight children, three of whom died in infancy, and the others are as follows: the Rev. John, a minister of the River Brethren Church, and a retired farmer in West Donegal township; the Rev. David, also a minister of the River Brethren Church, and a retired farmer; Jane, the widow of Henry Nissley; Mary, the wife of John Kaylor, who is a retired farmer, living at Elizabethtown; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Hoffman.

Isaac W. Hoffman was married Oct. 20, 1870, to Miss Susan Hernley, and by this marriage became the father of one child, Amanda, who is at home unmarried. Mrs. Hoffman was born in the township of Penn, May 16, 1852, the daughter of Benjamin and Eliza (Erb) Hernley. Her father was born in the township of Rapho, and her mother in Cumberland county, Pa. Mr. Hernley died Dec. 6, 1887, at the age of sixty-two, and his widow, who is now making her home with her son, Ephraim, has reached the age of seventy-five years. Mr. and Mrs. Hernley were the parents of three children, Mary, the wife of Christ Longenecker, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Susan; and Ephraim, a farmer, on the old homestead in Mt. Joy township. Mrs. Hoffman's paternal grandparents were Christ and Mary (Hershey) Hernley, farming people of Rapho township; her mother's parents were Jacob and Mary (Bucher) Erb, farming people of Warwick township.

Isaac W. Hoffman remained at home with his parents until he attained the age of nineteen years, when he left home, and began farming for himself on what was known as the old Jacob Hoffman farm, on the cross road leading from the Manheim road to Risser's Mill. After living on this farm one year, Mr. Hoffman purchased it; he stayed there five years, then sold it and bought another farm on the Harrisburg and Lancaster Pike, near Elizabethtown. For eleven years he remained at that place, when he sold it and moved to his present home, where he now conducts a very extensive business in various lines. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman are both members of the Mennonite Church, and always take an active interest in everything pertaining to the general welfare of the community in which they live.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN SAYLOR, Lancaster's leading photographer for many years, is known to the community as an honorable man and a reliable tradesman.

Henry Saylor, his father, was born in 1796, and Elizabeth Derr, his mother, was born in 1804. Their home was at Trappe, Montgomery county. The father, who was a contracting carpenter, met an accidental death, while at work on his own premises, and the papers of that section gave lengthy accounts of the tragic death of one whom they regarded as a most worthy and estimable man. This occurred in 1851, when he was fifty-five years old, Mrs. Saylor dying eight years later, Oct. 12, 1859, at the same age as her husband was when called home.

Benjamin Franklin Saylor was born Feb. 24, 1838, and was educated in the public schools of Montgomery county, and left Trappe for Philadelphia when he was twelve years old. In 1858 he became a student of photography at Ninth and Spring Garden streets. In 1865 he came to Lancaster to take charge of the late Charles Eberman's gallery, which he later purchased. This gallery was on the north side of West King street, and in 1882 he bought the building where his residence and gallery are now found on the south side of the same street. It is one of the fine buildings of the block, and contains two stores besides the gallery and the residence.

Mr. Saylor was married Feb. 23, 1876, to Miss Anna Catherine, a daughter of the late Emanuel Shober, proprietor of stage and mail routes in Lancaster county before the railroad and trolley line. He had a hotel at the corner of North Queen and Orange streets, a popular and familiar establishment with the traveling public. This property is now in the hands of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Shober, who died in 1869, was the owner of two paper mills, one at Eden, and the other at Slackwater. He is known in history as the pioneer paper manufacturer in this section of the country. To Mr. and Mrs. Saylor were born the following children: Paul, who died of diphtheria, aged one year; Benjamin Franklin, Jr., now employed at the freight station of the Pennsylvania railroad; and Carl Frederick, telegraph operator for the Pennsylvania railroad. Mr. Saylor's ancestors were German; their religion was that of the Lutherans, and he and his wife are members of the same church. He has served at various times as vestryman, warden and elder, as well as assisting in the choir for fully thirty years. Ever since his arrival in Lancaster he has served in the Sunday School. Mr. Saylor was among the promoters of Christ and Grace Lutheran Churches, children of Old Trinity, and in the early history of Grace Church, was choirmaster, secretary of the Church Council, and Superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. Saylor is a charter member of the Lambertson Lodge of Masons, and a member of the Council, Chapter and Knights Templars. He became a member of Franklin Lodge, No. 5, I. O. O. F., of Philadelphia, in 1859.

Apart from his devotion to his family and his art, Mr. Saylor finds delight in hunting, and yearly makes hunting excursions with Dr. Miles L. Davis into the wilds in search of health and strength. Mr. Saylor has finely mounted specimens of the deer family in his commodious home, which are trophies of his many hunting expeditions. A bear-skin rug attests his prowess in the pursuit of big game, and his reputation in that line of adventure in this community is favorably regarded by his fellow sportsmen. Mr. Saylor is a fine conversationalist, and his narrations of forest life are as interesting as instructive. His political views are staunchly Republican, first, last and always, though he has never sought or held any position of political complexion, pursuing by preference the various demands of his professional calling, and the duties and privileges of an everyday citizen.

PETER ESBENSHADE, the progenitor of the Esbenschade family in Lancaster county, was of German ancestry, having been born near Bingen on the Rhine. With two brothers he emigrated to America and settled in Lancaster county, where he worked at his trade of shoemaking. Prospering, he purchased a farm in Paradise township, on which he settled, taking up the tilling of the soil. He married Mrs. Elizabeth (Howry) Lefever, and reared a family of four sons, Henry, Jacob, David, and Joseph. Peter Esbenschade was a man of strong character and sturdy honesty, and throughout life commanded the respect and confidence of the people of the community in which he lived. He and his wife are buried in the Strasburg Mennonite burying ground.

Joseph Esbenschade, the youngest son of Peter, was born June 1, 1809. In his youth he attended the public schools, and for a time the high school of his native township. He was a man of tireless energy and resolute purpose. Intelligent to a marked degree, and having made his name synonymous with integrity and honor, he occupied a unique position in the township and in a wider circle. Joseph Esbenschade was markedly averse to speculation, and made the large fortune he possessed by upright legitimate business methods. His kindness to and fondness for animals endeared him to all who came in contact with him. He never sold a horse. Once in his possession, the animal remained his property until its death.

Joseph Esbenschade married Dec. 17, 1839, Elizabeth Cassel, only child of Henry and Barbara Cassel. Mrs. Esbenschade was born Oct. 8, 1820, and died March 30, 1897. Mr. Esbenschade died Jan. 24, 1897, at the ripe old age of eighty-seven years. The remains of both these faithful servants of God repose in the old burying ground at Mellinger's Meeting House, near the old family home, both having been members of the Mennonite Church and attendants at Mellinger's Meeting House. Their children were three in number, namely: Henry C., Eliza A. and Joseph H.

Henry C. Esbenshade was born on the home place, and followed the life of the farm until, on Sept. 3, 1861, he answered his country's call for defenders by enlisting in Battery E, 1st Pa. Artillery. He served as corporal with distinction and marked gallantry for eighteen months, when, his health having been undermined by the privations and hardships of military service, he was granted a furlough that he might return to his home. He never regained his strength, and on April 17, 1863, he answered the final roll-call and was gathered to his fathers. Henry C. Esbenshade never married, and his remains lie buried at the same spot where rest his father and mother.

Eliza A. Esbenshade was married, on Nov. 27, 1874, to George L. Buckwalter, and died Nov. 25, 1878, without children.

Joseph H. Esbenshade was born Dec. 17, 1857, on the home farm, which is now owned by him, and where he resides with his wife and daughters. In common with most boys of his neighborhood he attended the schools of his township, and he proved an apt and studious pupil. In November, 1877, he entered Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., intending to take a full course at that institution, but ill-health caused him to return home, where, when twenty years of age, he assumed the heavy responsibilities of the management of his father's farms. From that time on he devoted himself to the care of his parents, who had been bereft of their other children, and in the shadows of the evening of their lives was the mainstay and comfort of his father and mother. To the conduct of his large farming and business interests Mr. Esbenshade has brought strong native intelligence, sound business sense and a high sense of fidelity to every trust. He is widely known as one of the leading farmers of Lancaster county, following his father's practice of avoiding speculation, and devoting all his energies to straight business and agricultural problems. In January, 1900, Mr. Esbenshade was elected a director in the Lancaster County National Bank, a widely known financial institution, and there his business training serves to make him one of the best known members of the board. Politically Mr. Esbenshade is a Republican; he has never sought office.

On Oct. 27, 1881, Mr. Esbenshade married Miss Mary E. Hess, whose father, Daniel Hess, is a prominent resident of Martinsville, Lancaster county. Two daughters have come to them: Annette, born in 1883; and Eliza, born in 1889.

Widely known in the county, the several members of the Esbenshade family have uniformly stood for solidity, and their broad expanse of acres, all in a high state of cultivation, is pointed out as being made up of model farms.

ADAM V. WALTER, M. D. Among the leading and successful practicing physicians of Lancaster county stands prominent the gentleman whose name here appears. The Doctor is of German descent, and of the third generation of the family in America, his paternal grandfather having come from the Fatherland and settled in Lancaster county, Pa., near the Lebanon county line.

Isaac Walter, father of Dr. A. V., was born Sept. 9, 1845, near Reamstown, Lancaster county, and is now a prominent farmer of Bowmansville, Lancaster county. In 1870 he married Emma Von Neida, who was born Oct. 18, 1852, in Bowmansville, a daughter of Henry and Sarah Von Neida, natives of America, and children as follows were born to them: Adam V., sketch of whom follows; Charles, born Jan. 14, 1873, who is farming the homestead along with his father; and Henry, born Feb. 7, 1879, at present a student at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Adam V. Walter was born March 19, 1871, at Bowmansville, Lancaster Co., Pa., was reared on the home farm and received his education at the common schools and at the Millersville State Normal. At the age of seventeen years he commenced to teach school, and when nineteen years old he entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which institution he graduated with second honors on a thesis written on the practice of medicine, and received a gold medal for merit. In the fall of 1895 he commenced the practice of medicine at Brownstown (now West Earl), Lancaster county, and though yet a young man he has, by his skill and ability, succeeded in securing an enviable position in the profession.

On Oct. 13, 1894, Dr. Walter married Miss Sue Etta Snader, daughter of William D. Snader, a well-known farmer of East Earl township, and one daughter, Luella, born April 13, 1896, has brought another ray of sunshine to the home.

In his political preferences Dr. Walter is a Republican, and in religious belief he and his wife are members of the German Reformed Church. The Doctor is a man of scholarly attainments, broad-minded and progressive in his views, and an intelligent and esteemed gentleman, whose affable and courteous manner has won for him hosts of warm friends among his wide circle of acquaintances.

BENJAMIN GOOD, who has occupied his present fine farm in Pequea township for over thirty-five years, belongs to a family which has been identified with agricultural pursuits in Lancaster county for many years.

Jacob Good, his father, was born in Lancaster county, and lived and died here. He remained at home until he was about thirty years of age, working at distilling and farming. He then began farming for himself in Pequea township, and continued thus until his death. Although he received very limited education, he was quite successful in life, and accumulated quite a large amount of farm property. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. Mr. Good married Miss Maria Gochanaur, of Lancaster county, and they became the parents of twelve children, six sons and six daughters: Christian, of Pequea township; Jacob, of Pequea township; Benjamin, our subject; Simon, of Providence township; Amos, of Lancaster county; Michael, of Pequea township; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Kreider; Mary, deceased wife of Jacob Kreider; Annie, wife of Jacob Harnish; Susan, deceased wife of Martin Eshleman; Martha, wife of John Risell; and Fannie, deceased, wife of Frank Weaver.

Benjamin Good was born July 29, 1834, in Pequea township, and was educated in the local public schools. He lived at home until he reached the age of twenty-five years, and when he began life for himself did general work for two years. He then farmed for two years for Samuel Hess, of Pequea, after which he purchased and moved to the place where he now resides. His integrity and industrious habits have won him universal respect. Mr. Good takes a hearty interest in all that concerns the welfare of his township and county. In religion he is a member of the Old Mennonite Church.

Benjamin Good has been twice married, his first wife being Miss Susan Kling, of Pequea, who died Nov. 18, 1869, the mother of four children, namely: Amaziah; Jacob; Elizabeth K., wife of Solomon H. Good; and Benjamin, deceased. On Aug. 12, 1893, Mr. Good married for his second wife, Annie (Herr) Hiney, widow of Marcus Hiney, and to this union has been born one child, Susan.

OWEN CRAMER. Among the successful and well-known citizens of Bethesda, Pa., is Owen Cramer, who for twenty years has been a reliable painter and carpenter in this locality, as well as the owner and operator of a small farm in Martic township. Mr. Cramer began life with small means, but honest and patient endeavor, combined with industry and ability, have generously rewarded him. He was born Dec. 28, 1849, a son of Samuel and Susan (Bellamy) Cramer.

Samuel Cramer was a farmer of Martic township, born Dec. 5, 1815; he died Aug. 4, 1885. He was a son of John and Mary (Phite) Cramer, natives of Lancaster county but of German parentage. The children of John Cramer were: Christopher, David, Samuel, John, Elizabeth, Anna, Mary, Susan and Abigail, all of these having passed away except Susan and Abigail. To the marriage of Samuel Cramer and Susan Bellamy, in 1841, were born six children: Mary, the wife of Jacob Foltz, of the city of Lancaster; Lewis, of Martic township; Owen; Thonias, also of this township; Regina, the wife of Abraham Isenberger, of Martic township, and Margaret, also a resident of this township.

Owen Cramer grew up on the farm and attended the public schools. His inclinations led him into learning the carpenter's trade in all its branches, and for twenty years he has been a very reliable and highly regarded workman in the line of painting, carpentering and contracting, his skill being always in demand.

Mr. Cramer was married on Dec. 7, 1882, to Miss Elmyra Sides, of Martic township, who was born on Jan. 31, 1844, a daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Neal) Sides. One daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Cramer, Carrie R., born on April 5, 1885. Mrs. Cramer's brothers and sisters were: Grizzell, deceased; Mary, deceased; Clarkson, deceased; James, deceased; Jacob, of Martic township; and Rebecca, the wife of Joseph Harner. The family is one of the old and well-established ones of this county. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cramer are consistent and valued members of Bethesda Methodist Church, to which they contribute generously and are active in its charitable enterprises. In politics Mr. Cramer is a Democrat. In public estimation this family is highly respected as worthy representatives of two of the leading families of Martic township.

ABRAHAM L. HERSHEY, painter and tobacco raiser, who resides at Silver Spring, Lancaster county, was born in Rapho township, in the same county, March 25, 1845, son of Jacob H. and Susan (Long) Hershey, of Rapho and East Hempfield townships, respectively.

Jacob H. Hershey, who now resides in Silver Spring, was born Oct. 4, 1817, and was reared to farming. He was a very public-spirited citizen, in politics was one of the original Abolitionists of the State, and afterward became a Republican. For twenty years he was president of the Penn Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and was a director from 1865. Mrs. Susan (Long) Hershey died in West Hempfield township Oct. 16, 1898, at the age of seventy-seven years, and was buried in Silver Spring cemetery. To this worthy couple were born the following children: Amelia, deceased wife of Rev. L. H. Shenk, a Mennonite clergyman of Rapho township; Washington, ex-member of the State Legislature from Marietta; Abraham L., subject of this review; Webster, a farmer and former teacher of East Hempfield township; Benjamin, farming on the old homestead; Horace, who died in 1864, at the age of sixteen years; and Franklin, who died in infancy.

Abraham L. Hershey was married May 30, 1869, in Lancaster, to Miss Fanny Mellinger, and there have been born to this union the following family: Anna L., deceased wife of Henry Eicker; Minnie M., married to David Baker, a railroad man at Columbia; Salem L., a mail carrier of Philadelphia, married to Florence Huber, of Silver Spring; Bertha C., wife of Samuel Little, foreman in the Lancaster Silk Mill; Florence F., wife of David W.

Newcomer, a railroad fireman of Columbia; Melville E., deceased; and A. Garfield, still under the parental roof. Mrs. Fanny (Mellinger) Hershey was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Aug. 10, 1848, daughter of Martin and Anna (Kauffman) Mellinger, of Manor township, both of whom died in West Hempfield township—the father in 1888, when eighty-eight years old, and the mother in 1876, at the age of seventy-one. Both were members of the Mennonite Church, and the remains of both are interred in the Kahler cemetery. To this couple the following large family were born: John deceased; Magdalena, wife of Jacob Frye, of Hanover, Pa.; Martin and Christ, deceased; David, a farmer in Refton, Lancaster county; Anna, widow of Joseph Hinkle; Elizabeth, wife of Christ Musser, a farmer; Benjamin, deceased; Abraham, baggage master at Columbia; Jacob, deceased; Henry, toll gatekeeper at Silver Spring; and Fanny. Mr. Hershey has ten living grandchildren. One, Fanny M. Eicker is deceased. The others are Leon Paul Eicker (who lives with our subject) and Chester Hershey Eicker, sons of Annie; Salem Leon Baker, Ida M. Baker and Fanny F. Baker, children of Minnie; William E. Hershey and Abraham E. Hershey, sons of Salem; Osmond W. Little and Hershey M. Little, sons of Bertha; and Garfield H. Newcomer, a son of Florence.

Abraham L. Hershey left his home March 7, 1864, and enlisted in Co. D, 2d P. V. C., being transferred to Co. G. He participated in the battle of the Wilderness, Sheridan's raid, Spottsylvania Court House, Cold Harbor, Old Church, and at Charles City Cross Roads was captured by Wade Hampton's cavalry, June 24, 1864, and imprisoned in Libby, Andersonville, Thomasville and elsewhere until 1865, when he was released. On his return home he attended the Millersville Academy several terms, then taught school fourteen terms, and next engaged in the coal business at Silver Spring, where he was appointed by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Co. as ticket and freight agent and telegraph operator from 1872 to 1888, and then began painting, farming, etc.

In politics Abraham L. Hershey is a Republican. He has been elected justice of the peace for three consecutive terms, and has been a member of the school board for the past six years. He is also a notary public. Fraternally he is a member of the G. A. R., the O. U. A. M., A. O. K. of M. C., and I. O. R. M. Both as a business man and as an official Mr. Hershey has won the unfeigned esteem of all his associates and personal acquaintances, and socially his family mingle with the best people of Lancaster county.

HENRY HOFFMAN, manufacturer of shirts and half hose, at Ephrata, Lancaster county, was born March 7, 1847, a son of David and Katherine (Eberly) Hoffman, the former of whom was a highly respected farmer of Brecknock township, a son of Baltzer Hoffman, a farmer also. David Hoffman and wife reared these children: Susan, born in 1840; David, born in 1842; Salinda, born in 1845; Henry, born in 1847; Israel, born in 1849; Samuel, born in 1850; William, born in 1852; Elizabeth, born in 1854, and Kate, born in 1856. David Hoffman was born in 1808, and married Katherine Eberly in 1839.

In early youth Henry Hoffman felt the privations which prevented his attendance at school, as even then he was obliged to look out for himself to a great extent. It redounds all the more to his credit that the years have worked so great a change in his financial position, as it required the exercise of many admirable traits in order to accomplish it, and to retain the esteem of his fellow-citizens, as Mr. Hoffman has done. For a time he worked on a farm, as a day laborer, but always self-respecting, and in the course of time accumulated enough means to enable him to purchase a small farm. This he later sold and bought a still larger one, and still later opened up an ice business, extending his energies to take in a grocery and confectionery, and succeeding so well that in 1893 he was able to build a shirt factory. Possessed of tireless energy, Mr. Hoffman sees business opportunities very quickly, although he is noted for his good judgment also. Into his factory he is putting a number of knitting machines which will increase its usefulness very materially. Mr. Hoffman has added much to the industrial activity of the neighborhood and is justly considered one of its best citizens.

In 1867 Mr. Hoffman was married to Miss Sarah Trago, a daughter of Eli Trago, and both he and his estimable wife possess the respect and esteem of the community.

JOHN H. OSTERTAG. The most successful business men, with few exceptions, are those who in their younger days have by slow and patient steps learned the details of their occupation. Not all good mechanics rise to the possession of an excellent business of their own, but most influential merchants and manufacturers have served long and faithful apprenticeships. John H. Ostertag is one of the most prosperous and highly esteemed citizens of Columbia. He has earned his position, having chosen his field of labor and won its laurels by his own exertions. As a furniture dealer and undertaker he ranks high among the business men of his city, having the finest establishment of its kind in the town, if not in the county.

Mr. Ostertag was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Jan. 5, 1857, son of Andrew and Eva M. (Hettinger) Ostertag. The father, a native of Baden, Germany, is one of those sturdy emigrants whose settlement in America has afforded many examples of sterling citizenship, worthy of emulation. At the age of twenty-five Andrew Ostertag came to the United States and settled in Pennsylvania, purchasing a tract of land in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county. There his capacity for enlightened agricultural labor was quickly demonstrated, and he attained to the possession of a most admirable estate, operating same until 1894, when he retired and moved to Columbia. In politics he is a Democrat; in religion he holds stanchly to the Lutheran faith—the faith of his forefathers. To him and his wife were born four children, of whom two survive. John H. and Andrew M., a younger brother. The latter is a cabinet-maker by trade, and is foreman in the furniture establishment of his brother.

The boyhood of John H. Ostertag was very much like that of most farmer boys of his time and place. There was upon the farm an abundance of hard work awaiting the industrious, and John H. was not lacking in application. His education he received in the district schools, and at the age of fifteen years he began to work out on farms at $10 per month. A little later he entered the Chestnut Hill ore mines, where he worked for $1 per day until he was eighteen years old. The advantages of a trade impressed themselves upon the ambitious mind of the young and willing laborer, and he accordingly began an apprenticeship at the trade of cabinetmaking, at which he continued faithfully three and one-half years. For a short time he returned to farming, but in weighing the advantages and prospects the trade won, and he resumed work as a cabinetmaker at Littlestown. He received good wages, and had the prudence to save a portion of them, with such good results that in January, 1882, at the age of twenty-five years, he was enabled to establish himself in business as a furniture dealer and undertaker in Columbia. This business he carefully nurtured and extended until he owned and managed one of the best equipped and most extensive houses in his line in the city, later adding a full line of carpets, and taking orders for cabinetmaking.

In 1882 Mr. Ostertag married Mary Westerman, and their family consists of six children: Charles A., Harry C., Celia A., John W., Mary M. and William R. Mr. Ostertag and his family are active members of the Lutheran Church, of which for many years he has been a liberal supporter. In politics he is an ardent Democrat, especially in State and National affairs. He is particularly prominent in fraternal societies, holding membership in Lodge No. 286, F. & A. M., Columbia, of which he is past master; Corinthian Chapter, No. 224, R. A. M., of which he is past high priest; Cyrene Commandery, No. 34, K.T., of which he is past commander; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; and Harrisburg Consistory, 32 degree. He also affiliates with Lodge No. 20, of the Artisans Order of Mutual Protection. Mr. Ostertag takes special interest in everything pertaining to the Masonic fraternity, and is an authority on all its various organizations.

In business connection Mr. Ostertag is identified with the Funeral Directors Association, having served as president of the Pennsylvania State Organization two years, and is a prominent member of the Retail Merchants Association of Columbia, having served as president thereof. He is also a member of the board of managers of the Columbia Hospital, and has served one term as president of the board. As a parliamentarian Mr. Ostertag is conceded to be without a superior in the town, and has an equally high reputation as a debater. His character is above reproach, his inherent integrity and energy of purpose winning for him an enviable position among the business men of Lancaster county.

ABRAHAM Z. WITMER, who carries on general farming on the old family homestead, in Mt. Joy township, is a well-known and highly esteemed citizen. He was born on an adjoining farm, May 5, 1849, son of John B. Witmer and brother of D. Z. Witmer, of Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

Although Mr. Witmer was not born on his present farm, he has spent the greater part of his life here, being but two years old when his father located upon it, and he lived here until his marriage at the age of twenty-two years. With his young wife he removed to a property in Rapho township, upon which they lived for two years, and then returned to Mt. Joy township. Mr. Witmer then located upon a farm near Anchor, and remained there fifteen years, and then spent one year in West Donegal township. In 1884 he returned to the old farm, and since then has turned his attention to its successful operation. In politics Mr. Witmer is a Republican. He is a member in the German Baptist Church, and one of its most liberal supporters.

On Oct. 9, 1870, Mr. Witmer was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie G. Nissley, and to this union were born three children, namely: Hiram N., a farmer, who married Amanda P. Reist, and their little family consists of Stella, Earl, Anna and Mary; Anna N., who married John L. Heisey, a merchant in Elizabethtown, and their children are, Abraham, Samuel and Ferris; and Miss Sadie N., at home.

Mrs. Witmer was born April 11, 1853, in West Donegal township, daughter of John H. and Anna (Gish) Nissley, of Mt. Joy and Rapho townships, respectively. The former was a farmer who died at his home in West Donegal township, Oct. 6, 1867, at the age of forty-six years, and was buried in Chiques Hill cemetery. The mother of Mrs. Witmer was born May 21, 1831, and resides with her only daughter, Mrs. Witmer. The family is an old and honorable one in Lancaster county, on both the paternal and maternal sides. The maternal great-grandparents were Abraham and Anna (Eshleman) Gish, of Lancaster county. The grandparents were Jacob and Maria (Hollinger) Gish, of Rapho and West Hempfield townships, respectively. Grandfather Gish died Dec. 1, 1872, aged seventy-two years, eleven months and sixteen days. Grandmother Gish followed him Feb. 19, 1888, aged eighty-three years, eleven months and twenty-seven days, and their remains lie in Chiques Hill cemetery. They were members of the German Baptist Church. Their children were: Abraham, who died at the age of fifty-one, unmarried; Isaac, deceased, who married Elizabeth Witmer, sister of our subject; Barbara, who died in infancy; Anna, who married John H. Nissley; George, deceased, who married Elizabeth Dohner; Catherine, deceased, who married Samuel L. Groff; Jacob, an undertaker, in Omaha, who died in 1878; Mary, who married Henry Swartz, a pump manufacturer in Manheim; and Elias, who is in the undertaking business in Omaha.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Witmer were Henry and Elizabeth (Hershey) Nissley, of Mt. Joy and Penn townships, respectively. They died in West Donegal township, but were buried in Mt. Joy township. Their children were: Henry A., Christian A., Isaac H. and David H., all deceased; Abraham H., a retired farmer of Mt. Joy township; Mary H., deceased wife of Abraham Risser; Elizabeth A., widow of Jacob Shank, of Dauphin county; and John H., the father of Mrs. Witmer.

STEPHEN JONES. When a youth of seventeen Stephen Jones, now a prosperous and prominent agriculturist of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, left the farm of his parents in York county and began for himself a career in the adjoining county to the East. It is remarkable that he has ever since been located on the same farm, the fertile and well tilled property he now owns, and that the three successive stages of farm laborer, tenant and owner mark his progress. For four years, or until he attained his majority, he worked on the farm. Then, in 1880, he leased the property, continuing as a tenant for three years, at the expiration of which period he purchased the place, which he has ever since continued to cultivate most successfully.

Stephen Jones is of Scottish extraction. His great-grandfather, Robert Jones, emigrated from Scotland and settled in Trenton, N. J. Thence Robert, son of the emigrant, and the grandfather of Stephen, moved to York county, where he and his wife Catherine reared a family and engaged through life in farming.

Henry Jones, son of Robert and father of Stephen, was born in York county about 1818, and was there a lifelong farmer. He married Elizabeth Houseal, who was born about 1822, daughter of John and Catherine Houseal, residents of York county, where the father followed the vocation of hatter. Henry Jones died in February, 1900, aged eighty-two years, his wife passing away in 1889, aged sixty-eight years. She was a member of the Evangelical Church. To Henry and Elizabeth Jones were born the following children: Henry, who died in infancy; John, who died young; Elizabeth, who died young; Maggie, wife of Henry Puff, a farmer of York county; Amanda, widow of John Fowler, of Lancaster county; Robert, a farmer of York county; Ellen, wife of Benjamin Woods, of York county; Sarah, wife of Jacob Howard, a farmer of York county; Stephen, whose name appears above; David, of York; Mary, wife of Peter Elfiner, a farmer of York county; and James, a farmer and painter of York county.

Stephen Jones was born in York county May 15, 1859, and received a good common-school education in his native locality, but as he started out in life for himself comparatively early his education has been mainly of a practical character, won by experience and observation. For his first wife Stephen Jones married, in 1881, in West Hempfield township, Miss Emma Sterline, who was born in New York City. One child blessed this union, Mary S., now at home. The wife and mother died in October, 1897, and for his second wife Stephen Jones married, Feb. 21, 1899, Miss Elizabeth Wittel, a native of Lancaster county, a daughter of John and Susan (Gallagher) Wittel. In politics Mr. Jones is a Democrat. He is prominent in fraternal circles as a member of the Knights of Malta, Patriotic Order Sons of America, and the Mystic Chain. He is a substantial citizen of his section of Lancaster county, and stands high in the estimation of his many friends and acquaintances.

DANIEL H. MELLINGER, a well known and highly respected farmer residing near Central Manor, Lancaster county, was born Dec. 21, 1844, near Safe Harbor, this county, son of Dr. Henry and Anna (Hertzler) Mellinger. He was reared a farmer, and was educated in the public schools. On Feb. 25, 1883, Daniel H. Mellinger married Catherine Musser, and in March following they settled on the farm of twenty-nine and one-half acres which they now occupy, and on which Mr. Mellinger had been living about two years prior to his marriage, with his brother and sister. However, he is now sole owner of the farm, and has added twenty and one-half acres to the original tract.

To the marriage of Daniel H. and Catherine (Musser) Mellinger have been born six children, of whom Anna died June 23, 1891, at the age of seven years, five months, three days; Susan M., was born April 13, 1886; John M., July 2, 1888; Henry M., Nov. 13, 1891; Daniel M., Aug. 7, 1894; and Elmer M., March 28, 1898. The parents are members of the River Brethren Church.

Mrs. Mellinger's father and mother, John and Susan (Stoner) Musser, died, respectively, in 1875, at fifty-six years of age, and in January, 1864, at the age of forty-four years. The father was a farmer of Mountville, West Hempfield township, and died in the faith of the River Brethren Church, respected by all who knew him. The Musser family consisted of nine children, viz: Abraham and Isaac, deceased; Annie, deceased, wife of Christian Seagrist; Christian, residing near Columbia; Amos, deceased; Jacob, a farmer near Mountville; John, also a farmer near the same place; Susan, of Manor township; and Catherine, Mrs. Mellinger.

EUSEBIUS K. HERSHEY, a prominent and successful agriculturist of Manor township, is a representative of an old and honored family of Lancaster county.

Abraham Hershey, his grandfather, was born near the city of Lancaster, and about 1800 located on a farm one-half mile from Creswell, where his children were born. He was a man of considerable note, being a great singer and a minister of the United Brethren Church, and one of the chief promoters of the church in this county. For many years church services were held in his own home, which was large, having been erected by him with that end in view. He was widely known, and was often called upon to conduct funerals many miles from his home. He was a great student of current and historical events, being well posted on events in this country and also on foreign affairs. He was noted for his good works, and was particularly active in helping new arrivals in Lancaster county. He was prominently identified with the common-school movement which culminated in the adoption of the common-school law in 1834. He was an intimate friend of Gov. Ritner, being frequently a guest of the family, and when the Act of 1834 was attacked in 1836, and pressure brought on Gov. Ritner to veto the new bill drawn by W. H. Burrowes, Mr. Hershey urged his friend, the Governor, with all his persuasive eloquence, to sign the bill which gave to rich and poor alike that priceless heritage—a chance to get a common-school education. It was the political death of Ritner, but he always thereafter held his plain old friend in the highest esteem for aiding him, by his counsel, to stand firm for a measure which was so bitterly opposed, yet gave the Governor lasting fame.

Abraham Hershey wedded Mary Herr, and to them were born twelve children, as follows: Elizabeth, born in 1802, never married; Barbara, born in 1804, married Daniel Peifer, a minister of the United Brethren Church; Mary, born in 1805, married John Hertzler; Anna, born in 1808, married D. W. Witmer, of Mountville; Abraham, born in 1810, married Martha Martin; Christian, born in 1813, was lost track of; David, born in 1815, died young; Esther, born in 1816, died young; John, born in 1818, married Barbara Peters; David (2), born in 1820, married (first) Anna Derstler and (second) Lizzie Kauffman; Jacob, born in 1824, is mentioned below; and Catherine, born in 1825, married (first) H. Zell, (second) H. Stoner, and (third) H. Powers.

Jacob Hershey, father of Eusebius K., was educated in public and subscription schools, and on starting out in life for himself adopted the calling to which he had been reared, that of farming. After the death of his father, which occurred when he was sixteen years of age, he opened the home farm for his mother, and later bought the place, which he continued to carry on until 1882, since which time he has had his home with his son Eusebius. They have a fine farm of thirty-two acres, one mile north of Creswell, in Manor township, which denotes the care that has been lavished upon it. The father is a strong supporter of the Republican party, and is a man highly respected and esteemed by all who know him. He married Miss Fannie Kauffman, a daughter of Henry and Fannie Kanffman.

Eusebius K. Hershey, the only child of Jacob and Fannie (Kauffman) Hershey, was born July 1, 1851, and during his boyhood and youth pursued his studies in the common schools. He also attended a normal college one winter, and at the age of twenty years taught one term of school, since which time he has devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits. He is a practical mechanic, and has done some difficult work in that line, being often called upon by his neighbors to repair their watches, clocks, and farm machinery.

On Jan. 18, 1875, Mr. Hershey was united in marriage with Miss Amanda Livesy, a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Shuman) Livesy, and to them have been born two sons, Elam L. and Harry L. The former graduated in pharmacy and chemistry at the Valparaiso (Ind.) Normal School, and was selected by the dean of that institution to conduct a pharmacy in Valparaiso, Ind., for a time, but is now chemist for Sherman, Willoughby & Co., miners, and Pilling, Crane & Co., whose mines and furnaces are at Port Henry, New York.

Mr. Hershey is a fluent writer and has contributed to the local journals since 1871. He has served as agent for the Northern Mutual Insurance Company, of Lancaster county, since 1885, and in May, 1899, was elected a director of the same. He has been a member of the county Republican committee, was registrar, assessor one year, census enumerator in 1880, and is now serving his second term on the school board. His official duties have always been discharged with a promptness and fidelity worthy of commendation.

GEORGE SMITH, tobacconist and railroad engineer, of Columbia, was born in Paradise township, Lancaster county, Aug. 5, 1844, son of Charles Peter and Anna (Johnson) Smith, natives of Ireland and Lancaster county, respectively. Charles Peter Smith was a child when brought to America by his parents. He was a potter by trade. To his marriage with Anna Johnson were born two children, Margaret (widow of Franklin Faguery) and George. The father died comparatively young, in 1846, but the mother survived until 1894, passing away at the age of eighty-two years. The maternal grandfather of George Smith came from Scotland during the Revolutionary war and joined the American army.

George Smith was reared on a farm until sixteen years of age, and then for two years worked in a quarry in Paradise township. He then enlisted, at Lancaster, in Co. I, 22d P. V. I., for nine months, and at the expiration of his term was discharged at Lancaster. He re-enlisted for three years, in Co. M, 20th Pa. Cav., under Capt. Lewis Y. Evans, and participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Piedmont, Lynchburg, Sailors Creek and Appomattox, but escaped uninjured, save by a few slight scratches. He received a second honorable discharge and was finally mustered out at Philadelphia in 1865.

On his return to Paradise township Mr. Smith was employed until 1870 as track repairer by the Pennsylvania Railway Company, and was then transferred to Lancaster. After being employed three years as fireman he was promoted to engineer, in 1873, and in 1877 came to Columbia, as engineer. In 1893 he engaged in the tobacco trade as a side business.

Mr. Smith was joined in marriage, in 1866, at Lancaster, with Miss Martha M. Shaub, and this union has been blessed with children as follows: Luther C., a railroad flagman in Columbia, who married Rebecca Henderson; Clarissa, who died at the age of eight years; Jacob, who died young; Katie M. and George W., at home; William, who died at an early age; and Harry E., a printer, who served with Co. C, 4th P. V. I., in Porto Rico, and is now at home. George Smith, the father, is an honored member of the G. A. R. In politics he is a Democrat, and he and wife are respected members of the Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Martha M. Smith was born in Drumore township, Lancaster county, in May, 1843, daughter of Christian and Clarissa (Griffs) Shaub, natives of Lancaster county and Massachusetts, respectively, who had a family of six children, viz: Anna M., widow of Thomas West, Jacob, a retired railroad man, and John, all of Lancaster; Lizzie, wife of Jacob Johnson, of Osborne, Kans.; Martha M., now Mrs. George Smith; and Clarissa, deceased. LEMON C. WOLF takes a prominent position among the leading business men of West Earl, being a very successful tobacco farmer and cigar manufacturer, and also the principal confectioner of his section, making a specialty of ice cream, both wholesale and retail. Mr. Wolf is a man of property and is considered one of the substantial and representative citizens of his locality. The family is of German origin, and is one of the oldest in the section.

Jacob Wolf, the grandfather of Lemon C., was a miller by trade, and built the mill known in the locality as the Wenger mill, at Brownstown. He was the father of three sons: Rudy; John W., postmaster at West Earl; and Jacob, deceased.

Rudy Wolf was born in 1821, and died in 1883. He was a miller by trade, and a well-known resident of the township. In 1842 he married Elmyra Cooper, who was a daughter of George Cooper, of Ephrata township, and four children were born of this union: Lemon C.; Frank, born in 1858, who died at the age of eighteen; Louise, born in 1860, wife of Monroe Balmer, of West Earl; and Jacob, born in 1862, who resides in Reading, Pennsylvania.

Lemon C. Wolf was born Oct. 13, 1856, and his youthful years were spent around the mill. When he was eight years of age he was hired out to a neighboring farmer, and did farm chores and went to school, but when he reached the age of seventeen he commenced to learn the carpenter's trade, and for two years was engaged in that line. However, he returned to farming, has been very successful in tobacco culture, and is interested at present also in the manufacture of cigars.

Lemon C. Wolf was married, in 1878, to Miss Hannah Meade, a daughter of Patrick Meade, of Sinking Spring, who was born in 1858. A fine family of twelve children has come to Mr. and Wolf: Schuyler F., born Sept. 25, 1878, died June 8, 1882; Rudy M., born Nov. 10, 1880, resides at home; Lemon M., born April 21, 1882, lives at home; Landis M., born Oct. 19, 1883, died Sept. 4, 1889; Elmyra M., was born Dec. 19, 1885; Georgie M., born July 9, 1887, died Aug. 25, 1889; Callie was born Sept. 7, 1889; Mamie was born March 2, 1891; William McKinley was born Oct. 29, 1893; Charles, born June 18, 1895, died in 1896; Cora was born July 16, 1898; and Lena Victoria, born Sept. 15, 1900, died Oct. 29, 1900.

Politically Mr. Wolf is a staunch Republican, and he has efficiently served as inspector of elections, and was assessor of West Earl for eight years. His means are now ample, although he was obliged to commence life with no start except health and energy, and he has been able to care comfortably for his large family, to which he is a most devoted father. Among the possessions of Mr. Wolf are his attractive residence, a large three-story house and hall, in the town, besides other property in Brownstown, while his business is in a most prosperous condition, owing to his honest and upright methods of dealing with the public. Mr. Wolf is a highly respected citizen, and is a man of exemplary life and a thorough gentleman.

CHARLES F. FAGER, a skillful and trusted locomotive engineer at Columbia, Pa., was born in Mill Creek, Montgomery county, this State, Sept. 15, 1836, a son of Daniel F. and Wilhelmina (Ibach) Fager, of Reading, but who both died in Philadelphia, the father March 8, 1856, at the age of forty-eight years, and the mother in June, 1856, at the same age, and both in the faith of the Lutheran Church.

In his earlier days Daniel F. Fager was a paper-maker, but from 1841 until 1856 was an engineer on the old State road. To his marriage with Miss Ibach the following-named children were born: Margaret, wife of William H. Lochard, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Atlantic City, N. Jackson, a deceased carriage-painter; Emma, deceased wife of Lewis Smith, a farmer; Edward, a railroad engineer at Harrisburg; George, a railroad engineer in Columbia, and Daniel, similarly employed in Philadelphia. The paternal grandfather of Charles F. Fager (who spelled his name Feger), came from Germany, settled near Reading, where he operated the first paper-mill in America.

Charles F. Fager attended school in his native town until thirteen years old and then went to a point about four miles above Philadelphia, where he worked at butchering until twenty years of age, and then for one year worked for the same employer in Philadelphia. In August, 1859, he began with the Pennsylvania Railway Co. as a fireman, and eighteen months later was promoted to be engineer, his present position.

On March 10, 1864, Mr. Fager married, in Philadelphia, Miss Mary A. Fisher, and to this union there were born three children, viz.: Edwin, a traveling salesman of Columbia and married to Mary Snyder; George H., proprietor of a machine and general repair shop in Columbia, and married to Elizabeth A. Landis, and Werner, who died in infancy. Mrs. Mary A. (Fisher) Fager was born in Little Washington, Pa., but was called away July 9, 1888, at the age of forty-three years.

John Fisher, father of the late Mrs. Mary A. Fager, was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, in 1810. He was reared a cabinet-maker and engraver, and he came to America in 1848, and to Columbia, Pa., in 1850. There he married Barbara Seibert, and to this marriage were born: Mary A., Mrs. Fager; Lydie, unmarried; Emma, wife of P. A. Krodell, a dealer in dry-goods, millinery, etc.; and Barbara, who died in infancy. Mr. Fisher died in 1862, but his widow survived until June, 1899, when she passed away at the age of seventy-three years. Ernest and Magdalena (Dorothy) Fisher, paternal grandparents of Mrs. Fager, were also natives of Germany, where the former was the proprietor of a blacksmith and wagon shop; the maternal grandparents, Peter and Barbara (Eberly) Seibert, of Bavaria, Germany, came to Columbia, Pa., in 1839, where Peter Seibert, did an extensive business as a cabinetmaker and undertaker the remainder of his life.

Charles F. Fager settled in Columbia in 1864, and here he has made many friends and made an enviable reputation. He is a Red Man, a Knight of Pythias, and a Master Mason. In his religious belief he is a member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics, a sound Democrat.

JOHN A. ALEXANDER, a prominent farmer and leading citizen of Martic township, was born Sept. 2, 1853, son of John and Susan (Zaroher) Alexander, also of that township.

John Alexander, the grandfather of John A., was the father of six children, namely: Thomas, Samuel, David, James, Rachel and John, all of whom have long since paid their debt to nature.

John Alexander (2), the father of John A., was born in 1803, and in 1829 married Susan Zaroher, of Lancaster. He died in 1877. They had seven children, as follows: Maris, who died on the field of battle during the Civil war; Martha, wife of Amos Walton, of Fulton township; Mary A., widow of Lewis Jenkins; Samuel, of Martic township; Rebecca J., wife of Harry Marsh, of Lancaster; John A.; and Calvin, deceased.

John A. Alexander grew up to farm life, in which he takes a deep interest and has prospered. As a poor boy, with but limited school opportunities, he began his business career for himself, but he believed in industry, in perseverance and in sensible frugality, and he can now show, as the result of following those principles, a fine farm, embracing 196 acres, upon which he has erected a commodious and comfortable residence and some of the most substantial barns and other improvements to be found in the county.

On Dec. 24, 1874, Mr. Alexander was united in marriage with Miss Lydia A. Eshleman, who was born May 5, 1853, daughter of Benjamin and Catherine (Harnish) Eshleman, of Conestoga township. Seven children have been born to this union, namely: Katie, wife of Calvin Hambleton, of Harford county, Md.; B. Emmerson, who married Bertha Reece, of Martic township; Clinton, of Martic; John Wesley, of Martic; and Martha M., Garbutt R., and Lena A., at home.

Mr. Alexander has long been very active in church work, being for many years a class-leader in the Methodist Church and for twelve years the efficient and beloved superintendent of the Mt. Nebo Sunday-school. Both he and his wife are valued highly in this connection. Mr. Alexander is a strong advocate of temperance, living as he talks, working by precept and example for the cause of prohibition. He is known as an honorable, upright and reliable citizen, a truly representative man of Martic township.

DR. MARY ADELAIDE UNDERWOOD enjoys the distinction of being the first practitioner of medicine of her sex to be admitted to the city and county medical societies of Lancaster. The societies honored themselves quite as much as they did her, not only by receiving her into membership, but by sending her as a delegate to the State and National Medical Conventions.

Mrs. Underwood is the daughter of Edward Marklew, who came to this country from Birmingham, England, about fifty years ago, and settled in Philadelphia. He served in the United States Navy for a time, and then became a prominent manufacturer of pearl buttons in Philadelphia, being engaged in this line at the time of his death.

some twenty-eight years ago. Mary Jane Manuel, his wife, was the daughter of a French officer, and both of Dr. Underwood's grandfathers fought at Waterloo, one under Wellington, and the other under Napoleon. Mrs. Underwood's parents had two children, one of them dying in infancy, his young life going out with his mother's soon after his birth.

Dr. Mary Adelaide Underwood was born in Philadelphia, where she was partially educated, reaching the high school, but leaving it to accompany her father to Birmingham, and she finished her girlhood education in that city. She returned to this country about thirty years ago, and was married in 1876 to Dr. Robert Rutherford Underwood, now and for many years past one of Lancaster's prominent dentists, who today enjoys a large and lucrative practice. Mrs. Underwood began reading medicine in 1887, graduating from the Women's Medical College in 1890, and becoming resident physician in the Woman's Hospital of Philadelphia for the year following her graduation. In 1894 she took a post-graduate course in Johns Hopkins Hospital, and spent the summer of 1896 in the hospitals in Birmingham and London. Thus thoroughly equipped she returned to Lancaster, and resumed her practice which has grown steadily and rapidly. The Lancaster Medical Society sent her to the State Medical Society, which met at Wilkesbarre, and to the National Medical Society, which met at Atlantic City, in 1900. Dr. Underwood is on the staff of the Woman's Hospital in Philadelphia, and her professional character and standing are recognized on every hand.

Dr. Underwood takes a deep interest in every movement that tends to the improvement of the world around her, and gives much time and thought to social and religious labor. For five years she was president of the Y. W. C. A., when that organization was struggling for a foothold. She and her husband, Dr. Robert R. Underwood, are members of the Presbyterian Church, and there as elsewhere their influence is felt for good.

Mrs. Underwood, while never for a moment losing sight of her profession, in which she holds a front rank, never fails to make herself felt as a thoroughly womanly woman, full of tenderness and sympathy, always alive to the needs of the unfortunate, and quick to assist worthy projects and worthy people.

HOWARD MILES BAIR, the well-known funeral director, of No. 136 East King street, Lancaster, is descended from a family who have lived in this county for generations. Originally there were three brothers who settled in the vicinity of New Holland, early in the eighteenth century, and Mr. Bair is a lineal descendant of one of these brothers.

Henry Bair, father of Howard M., was a prominent hotel-keeper of this county, and died in 1878, aged seventy-nine years. He had been blind for his last twenty-one years. The mother, Mary (Miller)

Bair, died in 1882. The three children born to this union were: Charles Fremont, who is a finisher with a large New York establishment engaged in the manufacture of architectural and structural iron; Elsie B., wife of William M. Shaum, head bookkeeper in the Lancaster Intelligencer office; and Howard M., of this sketch.

Howard Miles Bair was born in Strasburg, March 9, 1859, his father being at that time proprietor of the "Washington House" of that borough, but the latter died when Howard was nineteen years of age. In 1873 he became an errand boy in Shultz Bros.' hat store, this city, and later spent years in the service of Zecher Bros., liverymen, and also in the Brimmer livery service. After 1895 he turned his attention to the study of funeral directing and embalming, and in November, 1897, became a graduate embalmer. On April 1, 1900, Mr. Bair purchased the well-established and extensive undertaking business of Mr. Henry Wolf, which he has since conducted as an up-to-date undertaking establishment.

In January, 1878, Mr. Bair was married to Miss Mary L. Martin, of Bridgeport, Conn., and one child was born of this union, Miss Agnes E. Bair, who was graduated from the College of St. Xavier, at Beatty, Pa., in June, 1900. Socially Mr. Bair belongs to the Eagles, and the Vetlan Veterans. He and his wife and daughter live in the marble front dwelling at No. 125 North Duke street, and their hospitable home is a favorite resort of a large circle of devoted friends.

PARK B. SHANK is a leading citizen and business man of Peters Creek, Fulton township. He is a grandson of Alexander Shank, who was a weaver by trade, and who had a family of eleven children: William (the father of Park B.), Joseph, Alexander, Thomas, John, Isabel, Mary, Adeline, Anna, Elizabeth and Margaret. William Shank was born in Ireland in 1808, and emigrated to America with his father, Alexander Shank, while yet a youth. In 1831 he married Eliza Burkins, and eight children were born to them: Margaret, deceased; Rachel, wife of Henry Medley, of Drumore township; Park B.; Alexander, a carpenter in Clinton county, Pa.; Harriet, wife of Joseph Barnett, a blacksmith of Drumore township; Catherine, wife of Miles Fite, of Philadelphia; Adeline, wife of Bruce Rush, of Ohio; and William, a shoemaker by trade, who died in Drumore township in 1870, leaving a widow who followed him to the grave in 1887.

Park B. Shank was reared in Drumore township and received his education in the common schools of the district. In 1873 he married Dora, daughter of John Dorsey, and to this union have come eleven children, seven of whom are living, as follows: William, Charles, Park, Grover, Harriet, Thurman and Andrew. Park B. Shank commenced the active duties of life at the age of fourteen years, as a raftsman on the Susquehanna river, and followed that vocation for nearly forty years. In 1866 he opened a lumber yard at Benton Station, and soon afterward bought a sawmill and opened a business at Peach Bottom Station, Peters Creek. Since 1885 he has also carried on a coal business, contracted for slate work, and done general contracting and building. Besides his various other enterprises he operates a large farm of 300 acres of the finest land, and does it in the most approved manner at that. He is a large real-estate proprietor, owning six dwellings in Peters Creek, besides a sawmill and lumber yard, a warehouse, and other buildings located at various points.

Mr. Shank started in life with only his ability as a "hustler" for capital, and may be justly regarded as a self-made man in the proper sense of the term. He is the soul of honesty, and his word is as good as his signature, a proud distinction to have in these days. He attributes his more than usual success in life to hard work, economy and strict attention to business. Financially he stands among the best of the neighborhood, and all his wealth has been gained by his own unaided efforts. He is a splendid specimen of American citizenship, and is highly respected by all who know him.

Mr. Shank is a Democrat in politics, and believes in the strict Jacksonian doctrines of his party. He is a Democrat from principle, but has no political aspirations for himself, only the belief that Democracy will eventually prove the salvation of this country. In his religious views Mr. Shank is a Protestant, but he is a member of no church.

From 1879 to 1887 he was engaged in business as a butcher in Intercourse, and for the past twenty years, in connection with his other work, he has been an auctioneer. He came to his present farm in 1883. It has one especially attractive feature aside from its neat and well cultivated acres, and that is a stream of clear spring water that runs through it, and is well stocked with trout.

Mr. Kling is a Republican, and he and his wife belong to the Mennonite Church. They are substantial people, well-fixed in life, and enjoy the confidence and respect of all who know them.

His widow is now spending her time in ease and retirement on a highly improved and valuable place of seventy-three acres near Wakefield, as already stated. She has lived a goodly life, and has followed the doctrines of the Friends faith from childhood. HORACE H. KLUGH. Among the prominent citizens of Maytown is Horace H. Klugh, a worthy representative of one of the old families of Lancaster county, the founder of the Klugh family having come to America from Wittenberg, Germany, among those who first made a home in this part of the State of Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Horace H. were Henry and Barbara (Hutzapple) Klugh, natives of Lancaster county, where the former followed the trade of shoemaker, and they passed their whole existence here, dying in Maytown; their remains rest in the old Lutheran Church cemetery. The family born to them consisted of six children: Frederick, Henry, Mary, Barbara (who married Berry Hill), Christiann (who married Daniel Brown) and Benjamin, all of whom have passed out of life.

Henry Klugh, the father of Horace H., was a potter by trade, and later conducted a distillery. He married Margaret King, of Chanceford, York county, and reared the following named children: Benjamin, who is a physician of Florin, Pa.; Horace H.; Viola, deceased; Anna, deceased; and Jacob Nienan, deceased. The parents were consistent members of the Lutheran and the Methodist Churches, respectively, and the father died in October, 1857, at the age of thirty-nine, the mother surviving until 1894, when she too passed away, at the age of seventy-six.

Horace H. Klugh was born in Maytown Nov. 13, 1844, and there attended the village school, but at the early age of thirteen he lost his father, and was obliged to earn his own living. Nothing daunted, he found employment in the office of a daily paper, in Lancaster city, and for three years carried on the paper, proving satisfactory in every way. The next step in his business career was his entrance into the shop of Collins & McCurdy, to learn the shoemaker's trade, and he remained with that firm for three years.

In July, 1864, Mr. Klugh enlisted for service in the Civil war, in Co. D, 195th P. V. I., being mustered in at Harrisburg for 100-days service. He then went to Elizabethtown, where he continued work at his trade until March, 1865, when he re-enlisted, entering Co. D, 77th P. V. I., under Capt. George W. Skinner, and was placed on guard duty, traveling through Texas. He was finally discharged, at Victoria, Texas, in December 1865.

After his war experience Mr. Klugh returned to Maytown, where he worked during the summers in a brickyard and occupied his winters with his trade, but he later discontinued the former employment, and since 1889 he has been entirely engaged at shoemaking. In politics he is a Republican, and for six years he was the very efficient constable, also serving one term acceptably as register and assessor of his district. For many years Mr. Klugh was connected with the Lutheran Church.

In July, 1866, Mr. Klugh was married in Elizabethtown, to Miss Sarah Jane Hagerly, and to this marriage have been born: Mina E., who married Walter B. Sharp, of Marietta, Pa.; and Henry, who died young. The parents of Mrs. Klugh were Joseph and Leah (Jacobs) Hagerly, the former of whom died in 1869, aged fifty-nine years, the latter in 1885, at the age of seventy-one. The children of this worthy couple were: Mary, who married Webster Buller, of Philadelphia; Sarah J., born April 9, 1845, in Maytown, Pa.; and Elizabeth, who died at the age of twenty-one.

Mr. Klugh is ranked by his fellow-citizens among the representative, substantial men of East Donegal, and is one of the most highly esteemed residents of Maytown. His energy and perseverance have enabled him to conquer early disadvantages successfully.

CHARLES H. FREY, a descendant of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Lancaster county, is a son of Jacob L. Frey, who is the oldest surviving dealer in cigars and leaf tobacco in Lancaster, and is now retired from business. During his long years of activity he built substantial dwellings, and contributed in no small degree to the natural growth and development of the city.

Jacob L. Frey, the grandfather of Charles H., was a pioneer merchant and carrier in this State, owning and running the old-time Conestoga wagons for freight between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, before the building of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The Freys were a sturdy, honest and progressive family, and from this substantial stock came Charles H. Frey, the successful shoe merchant.

Mr. Frey was born in Lancaster April 1, 1862. After passing through the city schools up to graduation in the high school he entered Weidler & Musser's Business College in this city, from which he was graduated in due time. Mr. Frey took up the shoe trade, establishing a partnership with W. K. Eckert, under the firm name of Frey & Eckert.

These two gentlemen continued in business together for three years, and then Mr. Eckert retired, leaving Mr. Frey as sole manager, his location being where he is still found, at Nos. 3-5, East King street, where he has built up a colossal business. Realizing that many of the Lancaster people went to Philadelphia to buy the highest grade shoes, he determined that all they desired could be found at home, and very soon he made the public understand his lines of fine footwear were as fine and complete as could be found anywhere. The result was an increase in his business that showed the wisdom of his enterprise.

Mr. Frey was a pioneer in the movement for early closing, 6:00 P. M. He closed his store every night of the week excepting Monday and Saturday nights, and soon brought his many competitors in co-operation. The trades people, however, appreciated Mr. Frey as their friend, and stand by him to the last. This prompt action on his part gives the keynote of his character, quick action when once a clear understanding is had of what a conscientious regard for the rights of others demanded. Mr. Frey has been very successful in his career, and the success he has won is richly merited.

Mr. Frey was always deeply imbued with the spirit of religion, and has taken a most active interest in all departments of church work. For fifteen years he has been a teacher in St. Paul's Reformed Church, taking an active share in the work of the Christian Endeavor, and of the Y. M. C. A., of which he was a director for six years. In this line, as in other lines, he gives his heart to his work.

JACOB M. FRY. The early records of the Fry family in Lancaster county recall the fact that Martin Fry, a native of Alsace, France, now a principality of Germany, came to America some time before the Revolutionary war and settled in Berks county, Pa. In 1780 he removed from Berks county, and located in Lancaster county near the present home of the Fry family in Ephrata township, and there founded a family that has become widely scattered, having honored members in all the walks of life, through many States. That Martin Fry belonged to a family in Alsace above the ordinary, is shown by his coat of arms, a copy of which has recently come into the possession of the family. Its motto "Never Despair," is one any family may well adopt. John Fry married Elizabeth Fry, who was not a relative, although of the same name. To this pioneer couple were born two children, John Martin and Christiana. By the wife of a second marriage a large family was born to him, but as John Martin was the progenitor of the family of whom this sketch is written, their record will not be traced.

John Martin Fry, the great-grandfather of Jacob M. Fry, served as private in Capt. Abraham Dehuff's company of Pennsylvania troops in the Revolutionary war. After the close of his service in the army, he purchased the land now known as the Fry homestead on which he passed the remainder of his days. He married Catherine Capp, and their children were: Peter; John; Jacob; Martin; Margaret, who married Christian Bentz; and Mary, who married Jacob Bricker. Part of the homestead was originally purchased from the Penns, and the deed for the same, which is now a highly prized relic of the Fry family, is known as the "Red Rose Deed," as one of the payments provided for was a red rose, which was to be given annually if called for. Upon the land which has so long been the home of the Fry family (the sixth generation now living on it) stands the old mill which was built in 1749, and in which grinding is still carried on.

Martin Fry, son of John Martin, was born Sept. 15, 1780, and was both a farmer and miller. He was a man of no ordinary ability, and was looked upon by the people as a man of fine judicial qualities, and as law giver he was sent for from far and near to settle disputes. He married Susannah Houck, and to them were born four sons, Samuel M., Martin H., Jacob and John. Martin Fry died in September, 1848, and his wife died in 1854.

John Fry, the father of Jacob M., was born on the old homestead, Aug. 29, 1815, and died there May 12, 1888. He married Elizabeth Merkle, daughter of Daniel and Catherine Merkle. She was born June 8, 1822, and passed away Feb. 6, 1902. Their children were: John H., a prominent attorney of Lancaster, Pa.; Jacob M.; Lafayette, who resides on the homestead with his brother; Susan, who married John Seldomridge of Ephrata, Pa.; Katherine, who married B. C. Kready, a member of the Lancaster Bar; Caroline, who married William M. Cline, of East Earl township; and Lizzie and Ida, who reside on the old place with their brother. John Fry made for himself a reputation for honesty and industry his children will make no mistake in following. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, as was his wife. In politics he was a Whig, and when the Republican party was formed became a member of that.

Jacob M. Fry was born Feb. 18, 1859, on the home farm and there grew to manhood. As was natural, he early took an interest in agricultural pursuits, although it was not allowed to interfere with his desire to acquire an education which should fit him for other occupation than farming if he so desired. Until he was seventeen he attended school regularly, after which he taught school when not engaged on the farm. When twenty-five years old, he took up and carried on milling as well as farming, and was, as might be expected from a man as intelligent and well informed as Mr. Fry, successful in both callings. In his political belief he is a Republican, not because his father was, nor because the party is so largely in the majority in his State, but because as a close student of national events and needs he, as a man of independent thought, believes his party stands for the greatest good to the greatest number. For many years he has been an earnest and consistent member of the Lutheran Church and is rearing his family in that faith.

On April 14, 1884, Mr. Fry was joined in marriage to Miss Margaret Ruth, daughter of Isaac and Eliza (Ruth) Ruth, of Sinking Springs, Berks Co., Pa., and their union has been blessed with four sons and two daughters, as follows: John Martin, born Oct. 16, 1885; Morton H., Jan. 27, 1887; M. Elizabeth, Sept. 1, 1889; Jacob R., April 20, 1891; Miles W., March 13, 1898; and Ruth, Feb. 26, 1900.

DAVID H. HUBER, a leading farmer and esteemed citizen of Martic township, who lives retired from active labor in his handsome residence in Rawlinsville, was born in Marticville, Dec. 30, 1839, son of Henry and Anna (Hess) Huber.

The Huber family is one of the old and honored ones of the State, and was founded by four brothers of the name who came hither from Germany, sometime in the seventeenth century. One of these brothers settled in Lancaster county, Pa., and another in Bucks county, while all trace has been lost of the other two. John Huber, the great-grandfather of David H., was a farmer and one of the early settlers of Martic township. His son Abraham was well known in the township, and was the father of the following children; Henry, Nancy, Jacob, Martin, Joseph, Frederick, Benjamin, David, Martha, Barbara, John, and one who died young.

Henry Huber, father of David H., was born Oct. 19, 1815, and died Jan. 20, 1885. He married Anna Hess, of Conestoga township, on July 16, 1838; she was born in 1821 and died Feb. 16, 1896. They had a family of nine children, namely: Martha, deceased; David H.; Mary Ann, deceased; Eliza, deceased; Abraham, of Conestoga township; Henry, deceased; Jonas, a prominent citizen of Marticville; Sarah Ann, the wife of Henry Rohrer of Lancaster; and Samuel, also of Lancaster. Henry Huber was a merchant and tailor in Marticville for fifty years; was a lifelong member of the Mennonite Church, and a respected and honored citizen.

David H. Huber was reared in Marticville and attended school there in his youth. From assisting his father in the store, he became interested in the mercantile business and engaged in it for a period of thirty years. In 1883 he closed his mercantile business and engaged in farming, which he followed until 1900, when he retired to Rawlinsville where he owns one of the finest residences to be found in Martic township. Mr. Huber is a man of large means, owning several fine farms in the township and other valuable property.

On Oct. 10, 1864, Mr. Huber was united in marriage to Miss Catherine A. Good, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Dietrick) Good, of Martic township, and this marriage has been blessed with four children, namely: Laura, born March 26, 1866, wife of Benjamin Herr, of Providence township; Amelia, born April 18, 1868, wife of Samuel Siefred of Martic township; Aaron D., born Sept. 21, 1871, who married Selma Warfel, and is a farmer in Martic township; and Mary Ella, born Feb. 4, 1874, at home.

Mr. Huber is a man whose name carries weight with it in Martic township, where he has passed his life, and where he is known as a responsible, reliable man. He is a Republican in politics. His interest has always been in support of educational legislation and he served as school director a long period, and also held other local offices. His life has been one which enables him to command the esteem and respect of the whole community.

ALONZO DILLER AMMON, a successful farmer and representative citizen of Lancaster county, was born in Salisbury township, Sept. 6, 1856, and was a son of Henry and Sarah J. (Patton) Ammon, of Salisbury township. Henry Ammon was born in 1830 and is a carpenter and also a farmer, residing in the village of Gap, in Salisbury township. His estimable wife was born in 1832, and their children are: Alonzo D.; Samuel, of Lancaster; Lemuel, a baker in Gap, Pa.; and Garfield, a blacksmith, in Lime Valley, Pa. The oldest child, Lillie, died in infancy.

Alonzo Diller Ammon remained in his parents' home until his marriage, and obtained his education in the public schools. Becoming a practical farmer, he first rented a tract of land in Salisbury township for a period of three years, moving then to Chester county where he rented a farm for one year, later purchasing it and operating it for eight years, when he sold it, although he remained there as a renter for one more year, coming then to his present well-stocked and improved farm in Sadsbury township, in Lancaster county, his estate comprising forty-six acres. Mr. Ammon has taken a decided stand in Republican politics and in 1900 was elected supervisor, performing the duties of this important office with the close attention which he has always paid to his personal business.

Alonzo Diller Ammon was married in Salisbury township, March 15, 1877, to Miss Lucy C. Worst, and the children born to this union were; Susan J., Martin L., Ella M., Chester A., William H., Mollie E., who died in infancy, Pearl A., Margaret L., Alonzo D., Kate L., Harry E., Eddie S., Charles J., Earl B. and Park. All of these are bright, intelligent children, reflecting credit upon the estimable parents, and promising to grow into the best type of American citizens.

Mrs. Ammon was born in Salisbury township, on March 15, 1858, a daughter of Elias and Susannah (Kraybill) Worst, the former of whom was born in Salisbury township, and the latter in Earl township, both of them passing out of life in the former place, the father in 1888 at the age of sixty-three years, and the latter in 1886 at the age of fifty-three. Both were laid to rest in Springville in a private cemetery on their old farm. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, and were highly respected in their neighborhood. Their children were: Shaffer, a farmer of Salisbury township; Lucy C.; Kraybill, deceased; Anna M., who married Edward Seldomridge, of Salisbury township; and Elias B., a farmer of Salisbury township. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Ammon was Henry Worst, a farmer of Lancaster county, and the maternal grandparents were John and Margaret (Shaffer) Kraybill, of Lancaster county.

AARON BUSHONG LANDIS, who is now serving his third term of three years as deputy sheriff of Lancaster county, belongs to one of the oldest and best known families in that county.

Isaac S. Landis, his father, is now a retired farmer of Witmer. He married Lydia Bushong, a daughter of Henry Bushong, a farmer of Witmer. Nine children were born to this union, six of whom are living: Aaron B., whose name appears above; Israel, a farmer of Witmer; Amos, a farmer in Witmer; Annie, unmarried; Amanda, widow of Henry Denlinger, a farmer of Monterey; and Sarah, wife of Elam Rohrer, a farmer in Oklahoma. Of those deceased, Levi was a farmer of East Lampeter, but he died in Kansas.

Aaron Bushong Landis was born on his father's farm in East Lampeter township, June 22, 1855, and was educated in the district school. When he was nineteen years of age Mr. Landis took possession of his father's farm as a tenant. On March 16, 1880, he was married to Miss Emma Brubaker, a daughter of Andrew B. Brubaker, a farmer of Rohrerstown, East Hempfield township. After his marriage Mr. Landis began farming his father-in-law's place, in the cultivation of which he is still engaged. To this union were born six children, four of whom are living: Clayton, a farmer; Mabel; and Herman and Howard are both at school.

Mr. Landis belongs to the Blue Lodge of Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of the Mystic Chain, the Jr. O. U. A. M., the Knights of Malta, the Young Republicans, and is a trustee of the Reformed Church of Rohrerstown. In his politics he is an unflinching Republican, and has served as township auditor. For four years he was supervisor in East Hempfield township. His appointment as deputy sheriff came as a just recognition of his ability and character as well as of his devotion to his party principles. In this position he has given great satisfaction to the people generally. He is now serving his third term, which will not expire until January, 1906.

J. PETER HERMAN, the proprietor of the Gordonville Warehouse and Elevator, is a farmer, who is also engaged quite extensively in the produce business. He was born in Snyder county, Pa., July 8, 1855, and is a son of Jacob and Nancy (Breon) Herman, both of Snyder county. After their marriage his parents moved to Union county, Pa., where the father died in 1871, at the age of fifty-five. His widow is now living in Union county, at the venerable age of eighty-three. They were members of the Lutheran Church. Born to this couple were: Joseph, a farmer in Union county; as were his brothers, Noah, Jesse and Henry; George, who died in infancy; Maggie, who married Levi Oberlin, a farmer, of Earl township; Lucy, deceased, wife of Charles Leiby; J. Peter; Ada O., married to William Lynch. The paternal grandparents of J. P. Herman were natives of Germany.

J. Peter Herman and Hannah F. Snyder were united in matrimony in Christ Church, Leacock township, Dec. 20, 1883, and to their union have come Samuel S., Leon, Arthur S. and John F.

Mrs. Hannah F. Herman was born in Paradise township in September, 1856, and is a daughter of Aaron and Hannah (Fenniger) Snyder. Her father was born in Germany and her mother in Lancaster county. Aaron Snyder came from Germany with his parents when a boy, and located in Leacock township, where he learned the butcher trade. He was killed in 1871 while walking on the railroad track at McIlvaine's Quarries, and died at the age of forty-five. His widow died in 1881, at the age of sixty years. They were both members of the Episcopal Church. Born to them were the following children: Sarah, who died unmarried at the age of forty-two years; Jane, living unmarried in Lancaster; Samuel, who died at the age of fifty-three; Rebecca is unmarried, and has her home in Lancaster; Hannah F.

Mr. Herman remained on his parents' home place until he reached the age of twenty-one, when he spent a year in the employ of a neighboring farmer, coming into Lancaster at the expiration of that period, to be employed in farm work two years. As a dealer in produce, he was busy some five years in Leacock township on the Old Road, and then coming to Gordonville established himself as a farmer and a produce dealer. In April, 1901, he added the warehouse and elevator to his present business, carrying along all three lines with decided success. Mr. Herman has fought his way to his present enviable position, without a dollar or an influential friend; his strength, character and industry have made him what he is. Many are his friends, and the respect in which he is held is very marked. In his politics he is a Democrat.

L. RUTTER HASTINGS, a well known farmer and esteemed citizen of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born at the old Hastings homestead in East Drumore, March 3, 1849, a son of John and Rebecca (Russel) Hastings.

L. Rutter Hastings received his early education in the local schools, and was a student at the State Normal School at Millersville a year. His home was with his parents until his marriage, Nov. 26, 1874, when Miss S. Anna Ewing, of Martic township, became his wife. Mrs. Hastings was born in March, 1855, the daughter of John and Letitia (McElhaney) Ewing, and was educated in the public schools.

Mrs. and Mrs. Hastings were settled for a time on one of the farms belonging to his father. This farm was located in East Drumore township, and was bought by him from the estate after his father's death. In 1898 he sold it and devoted himself to the sale of farming implements and carriages. After following this occupation for three years, he rented the John Russel farm in the southern part of East Drumore township. This place comprises 400 acres and is still under his excellent management.

SIMON U. EISENBERG. Prominently identified with all of the most important interests of Millway, Pa., is Simon U. Eisenberg, who is the prosperous proprietor of a general merchandise establishment at that point. The location is an excellent one, on the Reading and Columbia Railroad, some four miles south-west of Ephrata.

Simon U. Eisenberg was born Dec. 13, 1849, a son of Myers and Zetta (Uhlman) Eisenberg, the former of whom was born in Germany in 1811 and emigrated to America at the age of fourteen years. With three comrades, he landed in Philadelphia, soon after coming to Adamstown, Pa., where in the course of time he married the excellent daughter of Daniel Uhlman; to this union six children were born: Simon U.; Daniel, born in 1850, married a Miss Fisher from New York and later decided to migrate to Bismark, South Dakota; he relates how he reached there with no shoes on his feet, but now is able to back almost any financial enterprise;

Mary married Charles Stamm, of Millway; Jacob lives near Canton, Ohio, where he is a prominent merchant; Hannah married Charles Shirley of Millway; and Levi, lives in Livingston, Montana, where he is successfully engaged in the mercantile line.

Mr. Eisenberg received his education in the common schools, this being supplemented with a short course at the Millersville Normal school, where he proved himself a very apt pupil, and was considered competent to teach at the early age of fourteen; he continued in this profession for the following five years, and left it to become a clerk in an establishment at Schoeneck, Pa. In 1875 he opened up a business of his own, which he has since most successfully conducted. Mr. Eisenberg deals in a general stock of first-class merchandise and has a trade that is continually extending, and he also is connected with the manufacture of cigars.

The first marriage of Mr. Eisenberg was to Miss Annie Wolf, of Millway, in 1874, a daughter of David and Lydia (Hull) Wolf; her death occurred in 1886. His second marriage was to Miss Kate Heiser, of Akron, Pa., Oct. 13, 1890. No children have been born to Mr. Eisenberg and his wife, but their kind hearts opened to a little adopted daughter, Katie, born Jan. 1, 1891, and under their rearing she will never miss any parental love or care.

An intelligent and reliable man, Mr. Eisenberg has been called upon by the Republican party to fill some of the local offices, but he considers himself no politician, consenting to serve only as judge of elections, school director and as one of the auditors of Ephrata township. He belongs to the I. O. O. F. and the Patriotic Sons of America. Like many another successful business man, Mr. Eisenberg began life crippled by lack of means but he is a very capable man, and during his active life of the past twenty years, has gained considerable property, owning at least five comfortable houses in Millway, aside from his other interests. As a citizen he possesses the esteem of the community, and in the Reformed Church he is known as one of the most cheerful and generous givers to all benevolent and charitable objects.

WILLIAM P. BRINTON, who is now a retired nurseryman in Christiana, Pa., owns a system of greenhouses in the borough that covers nineteen acres and requires over 35,000 feet of glass. It was established in 1858 by Mr. Brinton, and meets every demand of the market for cut flowers, general bedding plants and nursery stock. It is regarded as one of the most complete plants in this part of the State, and has commanded a widely extended patronage. Mr. Brinton was born Oct. 20, 1835, on a part of his present property about a quarter of a mile northeast of his present home, and is a son of Samuel and Lydia P. (Jackson) Brinton.

Samuel Brinton was born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, and followed farming all his days. His death occurred on the place where his son now resides, May 5, 1857. He was born Feb. 3, 1789, and led a long and useful life. Lydia P. (Jackson) Brinton was born in Cecil county, Md., Oct. 10, 1798, and died March 22, 1869. Both were buried in the cemetery of the Old Friends Meeting House in Sadsbury township. The husband and father was a man of more than local prominence, and held various offices, being called on also to settle many estates. To them were born the following children: James J., deceased; Susan, unmarried, in Sadsbury township; Lewis, deceased; Cyrus, a farmer in Sadsbury township; Mary A. who married Thomas Stubbs, a farmer in Fulton township, but who now resides in Westchester; William P.

The parents of Samuel Brinton were Joseph and Susan (Rigbee) Brinton, residents of Leacock township. Joseph Brinton was a son of Moses Brinton, who settled in Lancaster county, coming from Chester county at a very early day.

William Brinton, the American ancestor of the family, was reared near Birmingham, England, where he married. He had one son. In the spring of 1684, in company with his wife and son, he embarked for the colony, leaving three daughters in England. His landing in America was on the Delaware River, at the point known as Grubb's Landing, now a part of Brandywine, Newcastle Co., Del. There was already a settlement at this point, and the most of the company elected to remain there, but William Brinton, at that time advanced in years, with long white hair, surprised the others by moving into the wilderness, and locating on the Indian Trail, twelve miles back from the river. He did not prepare for the rigors of the coming winter, and would have starved and perished, had not the Indians of the neighborhood helped him out with game. The following summer he made a clearing for a log cabin, planting a pear tree in front of his door. This structure was torn down in 1812, but the tree survived until 1853, when it was destroyed. In 1686 he purchased fifty acres of land from Thomas King, in the north end of Concord. In the same year he received a patent for 450 acres of land from James Claypole and Robert Turner, commissioners for William Penn. This was located in Birmingham township. The Indians belonged to the Lenni-Lenape tribe of the Algonquin family. The settlement of these Indians was known as Brinton's Run, and the last of the tribe, "Indian Hannah," died in 1803.

Mr. Brinton was sent in 1687 on a delegation to Philadelphia to ask that liquor be forbidden to the Indians, by sale or otherwise. In 1697 the Society of Friends erected a meeting house in Concord, to which William Brinton contributed three pounds and ten shillings, and his son two pounds and sixteen shillings. The will of William Brinton was proved in December, 1700, in Philadelphia, no register of wills existing in Chester county before 1714. It was drawn in June, 1699, and is still in preservation. Its wax seal bears the seal of a lion rampant. One hundred pounds was left to each of his daughters, who had married and had come to America about 1685.

William Brinton, son of the emigrant ancestor of the family, married Jean Thatcher in 1690, by whom he had the following children: Joseph, William, Edward, Ann and John. In 1714 and again in 1721 Mr. Brinton was a member of the Provincial Assembly, and in 1721, when the Birmingham meeting house was erected, he was one of the trustees of the title. His wife was a highly educated member of the Society of Friends, and when she was fifty-four years old she accompanied a "public Friend," Elizabeth Webb, on a visit to members of the Society in New England.

Moses Brinton, who was the son of Joseph, noted in the preceding paragraph, and who married Mary Pierce, was the great-grandfather of William P. Brinton. Joseph had his home near the head waters of the west branch of Chester Creek, in Thornbury township, Delaware county, Pa. The house which he built was torn down in 1816. He was an extensive land owner in Leacock and Lampeter townships, Lancaster county. The first representative of the Brinton family in Lancaster county came to Leacock township in 1747.

Moses Brinton was born Sept. 27, 1725, married Eleanor Vaman, March 5, 1747, and died, Jan. 31, 1789. They had the following children: Mary A., born June 14, 1748, married to Robert Moore, Nov. 10, 1768; Abigail, born Dec. 14, 1751, who married Ellis Pussey, Oct. 30, 1777, and died in 1842; Joseph, born Nov. 22, 1754, married to Susan Rigbee in 1784; William, born Jan. 26, 1759, married to Lydia Ferree, April 21, 1785; Moses, Jr., born Aug. 26, 1761, who married Elizabeth Whitson, and on her death, Hannah Chamberlain; Samuel, born Dec. 1, 1765, died Feb. 9, 1773; Eleanor, born July 28, 1769, who married Thomas Henderson, and died March 29, 1853. Moses Brinton settled on 500 acres of land in Leacock township, Lancaster county, given him by his father.

Joseph Brinton and Susan Rigbee, of Leacock township, were married in 1784, and became parents of the following children: William, born Nov. 22, 1785, married to Juliema Cooper, who was born Dec. 13, 1782, and died in 1878; James, born Feb. 25, 1787, who died unmarried; Samuel, born Feb. 3, 1789, who married Lydia P. Jackson, Dec. 25, 1823, and died May 5, 1857; Mary, born Oct. 3, 1790, who married Joseph H. Cole, May 4, 1815, in 1830 was again married to David Townsend, and died in 1880; Sarah, born March 16, 1793, married to Joseph Cooper, born April 17, 1785, both of whom passed away in 1858.

The Brinton family had its home in England in the parish of Ledgerley, Staffordshire, where John Brinton was living seven miles south of Church-Eaton in the closing years of the fifteenth century.

Here was born William Brinton, who married Ann Bagley in 1659. Three years prior to her marriage she had united with the Friends in company with her mother. Her father, Edward Bagley, was a man of wealth, character and standing in the community. These were years in which the friends were exposed to many persecutions, and could find neither law nor justice in the land. In 1683 William Brinton was fined twenty-six shillings for refusing to take the oath, and had goods taken from him to the amount of five pounds and eleven shillings. The following year, as noted above, he sought a peaceful home in the New World, his family at that time consisting of his wife, Ann, his only son, William, Jr., and his three daughters, Ann, Elizabeth and Esther.

The Brinton family in Lancaster county, comes of the best stock; and its various representatives have been noted for their business ability, their industrious habits, and their sterling manhood. Almost without exception they have followed the religion of their progenitors, and have been worthy and consistent members of the Society of Friends.

William P. Brinton, whose name introduces this article, was married in Bird in Hand, Lancaster county, in 1867, to Miss Mary E. Cooper, by whom he has had the following children: Lucy, who married Maurice Phillips, a farmer and manufacturer of Keystone Dehorners at Pomeroy, Pa., and is the mother of one child; Morris J., who married Gertrude Rakestraw, (whose father Henry Rakestraw operated a creamery in Christiana, Pa., and is now dead), and has one child; Anna, who married Norman Entrekin, mechanical engineer at Work Brothers' Iron Mill, at Coatesville, Pa., and is the mother of one child; Alice, married to Howard Brosius, cashier in the bank at Avondale, Pa.; Estelle, a student in the University of Michigan; Ethel, at home. Mrs. Brinton was born in East Lampeter township, and is a sister of Calvin Cooper.

William P. Brinton remained at home until his marriage, when he built his present property. There his mother and sister lived with him until 1867, when they returned to their old home. Mr. Brinton has been assessor of the township, and is a member and trustee of the Friends Meeting, and is a member of the building committee, which has charge of the erection of the new house of worship, which is now being built. He was one of the organizers of the State Horticultural Society, and has been its corresponding secretary for many years. In temperance labors he takes advanced ground, and has won more than a local reputation for his zeal and enthusiasm in this great reform. The green houses which he established are now operated by his son. In politics he is a Republican, and cast his first presidential vote for John C. Fremont.

JOHN C. SMITH, a rising and greatly respected general farmer of Cordelia village, West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, is now in the prime of life, having been born on his present farm, March 25, 1852.

John K. Smith, father of John Christian, was born Aug. 8, 1797, also on a part of the West Hempfield farm, was reared to farming and was twice married, the first time to a Miss Mumma, who bore him seven children, namely: Eliza, who was married to John Dellinger; Gideon, deceased; Barbara, widow of H. G. Brookhart, and living in Columbia, Pa.; Joshua; Susan, widow of John Harnish and residing in Manheim township, Lancaster county; and Henry and John, who both died in infancy. The second marriage of John K. Smith was to Magdalene Sterline, and to this union were born four children, viz.: John Christian; Albert, deceased; Laura, widow of David Slaughter, late of Columbus, Ohio; and Horace, deceased. The father of these children, John K. Smith, died in October, 1876, a member of the United Brethren Church, and his remains were interred in Silverspring cemetery; his widow, Magdalene, born in 1825, is now a resident of Columbus, Ohio.

Rev. John C. Smith, father of John K. Smith, was also a native of Lancaster county, Pa., was ordained a minister of the Gospel in 1809, was one of the founders of the United Brethren denomination, and died on the John Christian Smith farm, near Cordelia, in 1860, at the age of eighty-six years. His wife was a Miss Kertz.

On Jan. 19, 1876, John Christian Smith married in Columbia, Pa., Miss Linda G. Mellinger, who has borne him seven children, viz.: Elsa A., still at home; Bessie C., wife of William Kelly, a wholesale butter merchant in Philadelphia; Lucy B., also residing in the City of Brotherly Love; Arthur D., Bertram B., Jennie M. and Phebe M., all at home. Mrs. Linda G. (Mellinger) Smith was born in East Berlin, Adams Co., Pa., and is a daughter of Dr. David and Jane (Gallaway) Mellinger, who settled in Lancaster county in 1860, lived four years in Elizabethtown, then awhile in Columbia, and then retired to Running Pump, near Elizabethtown, where the Doctor passed the remainder of his days with a daughter. Not only was Dr. Mellinger a physician, but he was a politician of some note, and served one term in the State legislature from Adams county. The Doctor died in 1894 at the age of eighty-four years, in the faith of the Lutheran Church; his wife died in 1892, when seventy-five years old, was also a Lutheran, and the remains of both were buried in Columbia. They had twelve children, viz.: Samuel, who died in Cuba, in 1878; Martha, wife of Christ Myers, a coachmaker in Elizabethtown, Pa.; Edward, who died in Cuba in 1870; Penrose, who died in infancy; John, a painter in Lancaster; Phebe, living in Columbia; Mary, who died when seventeen years old; George, deceased; Linda G., now Mrs. John C. John C. Smith lived on his present farm until twenty-six years of age, then rented a small farm near by, and cultivated it six years; he then came back to his present farm, on which he lived thirteen years; then passed two years in Philadelphia; came again to his old farm of forty-three and a half acres, and there has lived in ease and comfort and prosperity ever since, honored and respected by all his fellow citizens. In politics Mr. Smith is a Republican.

SAMUEL J. PUGH, one of the successful business citizens of Hollinger, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born on English soil of English ancestry, near the great city of London, Jan. 1, 1855, a son of James and Mary (Janes) Pugh.

James Pugh was a brewer in his native country, but also understood machinery, and after locating in America, in 1857, he engaged in business for a time, in Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., and then removed to Salem, where he took charge of the engine in the Nickel mines and operated it for thirty years, retiring on account of advancing age, and spending his last days with his son Samuel. His death occurred at Hollinger in 1897, at the age of seventy-six years, the mother dying in 1898, at the age of seventy; both of them lived blameless lives, consistent members of the M. E. Church, and the former was the efficient superintendent of the Sabbath-school for twenty years. A family of five children were born to these worthy people; Samuel J.; Annie, who is the wife of Frank Martin of Lancaster; Mary, who is the wife of Harry Marr, of Gordonville; William T., who is the miller and postmaster of Wheatland Mills; Elizabeth, who is the wife of John Donnelly, of Hollinger.

Samuel J. Pugh was reared in his native place until he was two years old, when his parents came to the United States, and he received his education in the public schools of Lancaster county. When still quite young he began work in the Nickel mines, but at the age of eighteen he began to learn the milling business under Jesse P. Rauk, at Rauk Station, remaining there some eight years, when he entered into the employ of Samuel Rauk, of Lancaster City, in the same business. Later he returned to his old mill and operated it for two years in the interest of a milling company. At a later date, in 1887, he engaged in the same business in association with his brother, William T., under the firm name of Pugh & Bro., at Horse Hollow, using the Abraham Herr mill for three years, when the firm was dissolved, Samuel J. Pugh withdrawing. At this time he purchased the plant he is still operating, the water right only, as the mill had been destroyed. In 1890 he erected the present modern structure, which is fitted with all the latest improved machinery and milling appliances, a four-story building with a capacity of sixty barrels a day, the motive power being both water and steam, and his trade purely custom. In 1900 he established a store in Lancaster City, with a branch in Reading, where are marketed his leading brands of flour; the best known ones are the Daisy and the Red Seal, both of them products of the highest milling art.

In 1879 he was married to Sarah Mullen, a daughter of Stephen Mullen, who was born in Lancaster county; their children were Mary, James, Blanche, Walter, Clarence and Elizabeth. The family connection is with the Reformed Mennonite Church, of Willowstreet, in which Mr. Pugh is on the official board and is one of the most active workers in the Sabbath-school.

Samuel J. Pugh has a high standing among his fellow citizens as a moral, worthy and honorable man, and is regarded as one of the substantial members of the community, being the owner of considerable property in the vicinity, which he uses for renting purposes.

JOHN G. STAUFFER. The name of Stauffer is one which is well known and universally respected in Lancaster county, where it represents wealth, prominence, social position and good citizenship. Among those who have worthily held this honored name for sixty years is John G. Stauffer, a leading farmer of Mt. Joy township, who was born July 12, 1840, on a farm adjoining the one which he now owns, a son of Jacob and Mary (Groff) Stauffer, both natives of Mt. Joy township.

Jacob Stauffer was born Jan. 5, 1811, a son of John and Anna Stauffer, natives of Lancaster county, and he died Jan. 7, 1879, having been a prominent man in his locality for a number of years, serving as supervisor for a long period. He was a member and liberal supporter of the German Baptist Church. His widow, who was born July 2, 1814, died July 11, 1890, and both were buried in Chickies Meeting House cemetery, in Rapho township. Their children were as follows: Fanny G., widow of Samuel Risser, of Lebanon county; Mary G., widow of David Moyer of Mt. Joy township; Rebecca G., deceased, wife of Christian Gruber; John G., Abraham G., a farmer in Lebanon county; and Jacob G., a resident of Elizabethtown, of whom extended mention is made elsewhere. The family originated in Switzerland and probably located in Pennsylvania early in 1700. Mrs. Mary (Groff) Stauffer was a daughter of John and Veronica Groff, of whom the former was born Aug. 20, 1789, and died Nov. 23, 1859, aged seventy years, two months and three days; his wife, who was born Aug. 3, 1794, died March 16, 1831, aged thirty-six years, seven months and thirteen days.

The early rearing of Mr. Stauffer was in a good home, under kind and wise parents, with whom he remained until his own marriage, acquiring his education in the district schools. After marriage Mr. Stauffer and his wife settled upon a farm which they still occupy, which comprises 190 acres, and this with an additional forty-acre tract, adjoining, makes an estate of 230 acres which is universally regarded as the very finest farm in Lancaster county. Mr. Stauffer is a thorough farmer, and with his progressive ideas has yearly added to the value and productiveness of his farm. He has other large business interests, owning a sawmill and manufacturing lumber, being a prominent factor in that trade in this locality.

In addition to these enterprises Mr. Stauffer has been identified with a number of the leading financial organizations of the township, for twenty years having been a director in the Mt. Joy National Bank, and for the past twenty-five years has been one of the board of directors of the Mt. Joy Mutual Fire Insurance Co. His interest in the progress of education in his township has been shown by his service on the school board for a period of nine years. With his family he belongs to the German Baptist Church.

On Oct. 11, 1860, in Lancaster City, Mr. Stauffer was married to Miss Maria W. Shelley, a member of an old and prominent Lancaster county family. To this marriage were born the following children: Mary A., born July 5, 1861, married John W. Heistand, of Lancaster Junction, where he engages in farming; Lizzie S., born June 20, 1864, married Joseph N. Risser, of Mt. Joy township, extended mention of whom will be found in this volume; Emma S., born July 2, 1866, married Monroe B. Forney, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Benjamin, born Jan. 2, 1869, married Lizzie B. Keller, and is a farmer in Lebanon county, Pa.; and Sarah S., born Jan. 23, 1873, married Monroe G. Hollinger, a farmer in Mt. Joy township. Mr. Stauffer gave his children the educational advantages afforded by the excellent schools of the township, and many of them have located in his vicinity and are among the respected and useful citizens of Mt. Joy township.

Mrs. Maria W. (Shelley) Stauffer was born Sept. 22, 1840, in Rapho township, Lancaster county, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Witmer) Shelley, the former of whom was born in Rapho township and the latter on the farm now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer. For ten years prior to his death Mr. Shelley lived retired from active life. He was an extensive farmer and prominent and wealthy citizen. For a quarter of a century he was one of the directors of the Mt. Joy First National Bank, and took a leading part in the life of his neighborhood. At his death he was lamented as one who had been a good, upright and useful citizen. Mr. Shelley was born Jan. 12, 1809, and died Nov. 6, 1885. The mother of Mrs. Stauffer was born Jan. 16, 1808, and died July 29, 1848. She was a member of the River Brethren Church. Both parents were buried in the private burying ground on the old Shelley homestead, on the farm where Mr. Shelley was born. Their children were as follows: Anna, who is the widow of Alva Earhart, resides in Manheim, Pa.; Fanny, who married Rev.

S. R. Zook, a German Baptist minister, resides in Mastersonville; Lizzie is the widow of Samuel Kraybill, of Manheim; Abraham, who is a retired farmer, lives in Mastersonville, Pa.; Susan, who married Benjamin R. Zook, a retired farmer, lives in Rapho township; Maria W. is the wife of Mr. Stauffer; and Harriet, who married Abraham G. Stauffer, a brother to John G., resides on a farm in Lebanon county, Pa. Mr. Shelley married for his second wife Lizzie Gantz, by whom he had one son, Reuben, now a resident of Steelton.

Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer are among the most highly esteemed residents of Mt. Joy township. Many warm personal friends enjoy their friendship and hospitality, while in public life and business circles Mr. Stauffer is recognized as a man of most upright character.

HENRY R. OBER, a retired farmer of Rapho township, was born in that township Sept. 13, 1844, son of Christian and Barbara (Ruhl) Ober, also of Rapho township.

Christian Ober, the father, died in 1873, at the age of sixty-six years. He was a farmer, but also held various township offices. His wife died in April, 1883, at the age of sixty-one years, one month. They are buried in Hernley's cemetery. They were members of the Mennonite and United Brethren of Christ churches. The following children were born to them: Harriet R., deceased; Michael R., retired farmer of Penn township; Moses R., retired farmer of Rapho township; Barbara R., wife of George Keener, a farmer; Anna R., wife of Jacob Nornhall, a farmer in Oklahoma; Henry R., subject of this sketch; Christian R., deceased; Sarah R., deceased; Aaron R., a farmer of Rapho township; Martha R., who married first Jacob Sahm, and afterward Joseph D. Brown, carriage builder of Manheim, Pa.; and Mary R., deceased wife of Abraham Heht. Christian Ober was a son of David Ober, a farmer of Lancaster county.

On Oct. 16, 1866, Henry R. Ober married Miss Mary Ann Metzler, of Lancaster, Pa. To this couple have been born the following children: Fannie married Pharis Rohrer, a farmer of West Hempfield township, and has three children; Agnes married Alva Lehman, of Lebanon county, and has four children; Phillip, a Lebanon county farmer, married to Miss Ida Holderman; Susanna M. is the wife of Oliver Litch, a farmer of Rapho township; Nathan M. married Miss Anna Baker, of Lebanon county, and has one child; Anna M. is unmarried and at home. Mrs. Ober was born Nov. 20, 1844, in Rapho township, and is the daughter of Henry and Anna (Hershey) Metzler, of Lancaster county. The father, who was a farmer, died in 1889, at the age of fifty-nine years, and is buried in Hernley's Meeting House cemetery. Mrs. Metzler, the mother, was born in 1824, and is still living with her daughter, Mrs. Isaac Cup, at Centerville. Both she and her husband were members of the Mennonite Church. There were born to this union: Christian, a retired farmer of Rapho township; Mary Ann, wife of Henry R. Ober; John, a farmer of Warwick township; Fanny (deceased) wife of Paul Gible; Mrs. Isaac Cup, of Centerville; Henry, farmer of Rapho township; Samuel, a Washington township farmer; Jacob, deceased; Farris, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Anna, wife of Isaac Stauffer, farmer of Warwick township; and Isaac, a farmer in Oklahoma. Mrs. Ober's paternal grandparents were John and Hettie (Eshter) Metzler, of Lancaster county.

Henry R. Ober remained at home with his parents until after he attained his majority, after which he began farming on his own account and continued to do so until he retired in March, 1892. For the four years preceding his marriage he farmed his father's place on shares and did well at it, but after that event he took the farm for his own. Mr. and Mrs. Ober are members of the Mennonite Church, and are prominent in both religious and social circles. Mr. Ober is a prominent man in his neighborhood, and is well regarded as a man of influence and position in the community. By care and intelligent management he has accumulated a fortune, and he is able to enjoy the declining years of his life in ease and comfort, respected by all who have the pleasure of his friendship and acquaintance.

HON. J. C. GACHELL, M. D. Few citizens of Martic township are better known or more highly esteemed than is Dr. J. C. Gatchell, late member of the State Legislature, a successful physician and prominent and public-spirited citizen.

Dr. Gatchell was born May 1, 1835, in Chester county, Pa., son of John P. and Caroline (Simpers) Gatchell, the former of whom was a son of David Gatchell, a resident near East Nottingham, where he carried on farming and brought up his family in the Quaker faith. The seven children born to Grandfather Gatchell were Joseph, Jesse, Joshua, Enoch, John P., David and Lydia, all of whom have passed out of life. John P. Gatchell married Caroline Simpser and they were the parents of five children, namely: Dr. J. C.; Ellis, deceased; David K., deceased; Eli, who was killed while serving his country during the Civil war; John E., a resident of Washington, D. C. John P. Gatchell was an esteemed citizen, a Republican in his political belief, and in religious matters he adhered to the principles of the Friends.

Dr. Gatchell was reared on his father's farm and his education was acquired in the public schools of his district and in the Unionville Academy. After finishing his general course of study the young man became a student of medicine for three years, in 1860 was graduated at the Pennsylvania Medical College and upon his return to Lancaster county began practicing in New Texas, in Fulton township. Although enthusiastic in his work in that locality, in 1864 he left it to become assistant surgeon in the 55th P. V. I., and remained with his regiment until the close of the war. After his return from the army Dr. Gatchell located for practice in Marticville.

On Feb. 7, 1862, Dr. Gatchell was united in marriage to Miss Sarah H. Garver, of Oxford, Pa., and the three children born to this union are: Clara, the wife of E. P. Dalberry, of Chester county; John W., also of Chester county; and Reba, at home.

A man of fine education and broad outlook, Dr. Gatchell has always been actively interested in public affairs and has served his township most efficiently in many offices, on the Republican ticket. He was chosen representative to the General Assembly from the southern district of Lancaster county, was re-elected in 1872 and 1878 and was again honored in 1888, performing the duties of his high office with the ability which characterizes all his efforts. Since his return to private life he has resumed the duties of an absorbing practice and in his profession he is recognized as a leader in Lancaster county.

JOHN B. APPLETON, whose death in 1871 was deeply lamented by the community in which he lived and where he was known as an industrious and honorable man of business and a kind and helpful neighbor, was born in Chester county, Pa., in 1836, son of Joseph Appleton, of the same county, of English origin. On Sept. 12, 1856, he was married to Miss Mary Stevenson, born Feb. 11, 1831, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Daulin) Stevenson, of Lancaster county, and was one of a family of eight children, as follows: Matilda; Mary, Mrs. Appleton; Harriet, wife of Gilbert Smith, of Philadelphia; Malinda, deceased; Samuel, of Mt. Nebo; Marinda, deceased; Miss Elizabeth, of Philadelphia; and James, deceased. The Stevenson family is one of the oldest now residing in Martic township, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Appleton coming hither from England a great many years ago.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Appleton was blessed with six children, namely: Wilmot C., of Oxford, Chester county; William M., of Rawlinsville; Elizabeth, the wife of J. F. Bair, of Lancaster; Luella, a stenographer in Philadelphia; Mabel V., the wife of Levi Shank, of Long Island, New York; Jane, the wife of Elmer Walton, of Lancaster. Mr. Appleton was a cabinetmaker and followed the business of undertaking. In 1864 he volunteered in the defense of his country and faithfully served as a soldier in Co. D, 69th P. V. I., and it was during this time that his health was so undermined that his recovery was never complete, and he died in 1871. The widow was left in straitened circumstances, with the care of six young children, and it redounds to her credit that she not only cared for them physically but also managed to educate them and fit them for the honorable positions they now hold in society. Mrs. Appleton is a respected and beloved member of her community, a lovely Christian woman, daily performing acts of kindness and showing the fruits of an exemplary life.

JOSEPH STAUFFER BRUBAKER, now and for many years the leading pharmacist of Vinton, Iowa, is a native of Lancaster county, but went West in 1855, and there became a very prominent citizen. He is a native of Rapho township, and belongs to one of the oldest and most influential families in the county; for, although the Brubakers alone would constitute enough people—numerically as well as financially—to fill and run a good sized city, the relationship does not end with that name, for they are closely related to the Erismans, the Strickers, Rohrsers, Fricks and Stauffers.

Originally there were three brothers in the ancestry of Joseph S. Brubaker, and those three brothers came from Switzerland generations ago and settled in Rapho township, where they have ever since been among the most substantial people.

Abraham Brubaker, grandfather of Joseph S. Brubaker, grew to manhood in Rapho township, and there wedded Maria Erisman, daughter of Jacob Erisman and wife, who were also prominent people of that district. From this union fourteen children were born, eleven sons and three daughters, as follows: Abraham, Christian, Benjamin, Jacob, Samuel (who was the father of Joseph S.), David, John, Daniel, Henry, Peter and Martin. All were farmers and all are deceased. The daughters were Adaline, who married a Bletcher; Maria, who married a Hollinger; and Nancy, who married a Shoemaker.

Samuel Brubaker, the father of Joseph S. Brubaker, was born on the old homestead in Rapho township, and there lived all the days of his life. After a career of much usefulness he entered upon his reward, and his remains were laid to rest in the private cemetery on the Stauffer homestead. His wife was Catherine Stauffer, and to them were born two sons and two daughters, as follows: Samuel, deceased, who married a Miss Shelley; Joseph S., now of Vinton, Iowa; Maria, deceased, who married Christian Miller; and Catharine, who died young.

Joseph Stauffer Brubaker, of Vinton, Iowa, is the last survivor of his family. He was twice married, his first wife having been Harriet Hostetter, daughter of Abraham Hostetter, of Lancaster county, and his second wife, Susan S. Smith, daughter of Christian Smith, of Warren, Pa. Mr. Brubaker is the father of three sons and one daughter, his sons being Stauffer Joseph (who married a Miss Hostetter and has a daughter), Frank H. and Charles W. Charles W., the youngest, was honored by an election for two successive terms to the responsible office of treasurer of Benton county, Iowa, and is as popular as he is trustworthy.

No man who has ever left Lancaster county has become more prominent in the home of his adoption than has Joseph S. Brubaker, his name ranking with that of Hostetter of Stomach Bitters fame, who located in Pittsburg, and with Dr. S. B. Hartman, of Peruna fame, now living in Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Brubaker (Joseph S.) is not only the leading druggist of his section but is interested in almost everything tending toward the advancement of the place. He is one of the directors of the People's Saving Bank, of Vinton, and is interested in many business enterprises. This sketch can be concluded in no better way than by quoting the following from a newspaper article published in Vinton, where Mr. Brubaker has lived these many years, and of which place he is now so important a part:

"No branch of the business is more important to the community at large than that of the druggist, and this house (Mr. Joseph Stauffer Brubaker's) is one of its most prominent representatives. It is always supplied with a full and comprehensive line of pure drugs, chemicals, perfumes, toilet articles and a complete stock of all the proprietary remedies of acknowledged merit and standard reputation, druggists' sundries and physicians' supplies. This house is indorsed by the leading physicians on account of the reliability and purity of its drugs, and scientific service in the prescription department, where the utmost caution is taken in compounding medicines of all kinds. The laboratory is supplied with all the requisite facilities for compounding the most difficult prescriptions, and has won the well-merited distinction of being the leading pharmacy in the locality. Mr. Brubaker, the proprietor of this model pharmacy, is a native of Lancaster county, Pa., but came West in 1855, beginning his business career at twenty-five years of age, since which time he has been engaged in the drug business. He has the honor of being the oldest established druggist in the Cedar valley, having had forty-three years' practical experience. He is one of the most substantial and highly respected citizens, and enjoys the confidence and esteem of the entire community, and is numbered among the leading and most progressive business men in the place."

BENJAMIN EAVENSON, burgess of Christiana, and a successful cattle dealer of that borough, was born in Thornbury township, Chester county, this State, Nov. 3, 1831, and he has long been one of the notable men of Lancaster county.

Jonas and Emily (Valentine) Eavenson, his parents, were hotel keepers in Chester county many years, and they died in Philadelphia. For a time the father was in the mercantile business, and then later in the stock dealing. For the last few years of his life he and his son, Alben T., were soap manufacturers in Philadelphia, and made a large quantity of that article: later his son, Marvin M., was admitted, and subsequently his grandsons, F. V. Eavenson and William J. Eavenson, were admitted as members of the firm and the above, together with Lewis L. and Roland M. Eavenson, sons of Alben

T. and Marvin M., are now the largest soap manufacturers in Pennsylvania. Jonas Eavenson died March 14, 1883, in his seventy-ninth year. The wife and mother died Dec. 18, 1868, at the age of sixty-six. She was a Quaker, and lived a beautiful life as befit her faith. Their children were Alben T.; Lydia Ann, deceased wife of Nathan E. Dubree; Francis, who died young; Benjamin; Reece, a cattle dealer and a farmer in Sadsbury township; John, who died young; Richard; George; Mary, who married L. F. Davis, a contractor and builder in Philadelphia; and Marvin.

The paternal grandfather of Benjamin Eavenson was Richard Eavenson, of Chester county, Pa., of Welsh extraction, while the maternal grandparents were John and Mary (Taylor) Valentine.

Benjamin Eavenson was married on March 1, 1855, in Compassville, Lancaster county, to Martha Gibbs, by whom he had the following children: William J., who married Mary Scheide, is in the soap business noted above; Harry, who died at the age of twenty-four; Mary, who died when about two years old; Clara, deceased at the age of eleven; and Marvin M., a horse dealer and liveryman in Christiana, who married Ida L. Whiteside.

Mrs. Benjamin Eavenson was born near Compassville, Lancaster county, Feb. 7, 1830, a daughter of William A. and Mary (Evans) Gibbs, farming people of Lancaster county. Her father, who died at the age of fifty-five years, was born Sept. 29, 1794. The mother, Mary (Evans) Gibbs, was born Sept. 8, 1798, and died June 18, 1838. They left seven children as follows: William A., Susan, Elizabeth, Joseph, Martha and Mary (twins) and James. Of these Mary died young and Martha (Mrs. Eavenson) died Aug. 3, 1899, in the seventieth year of her age.

Mr. Eavenson lived on a farm until 1849, when he set himself to learn the trade of a plasterer, which he followed until 1863. That year he took up the cattle business, and still later was a merchant at Black Horse, Chester county, where he held the postoffice until 1881. That year he came to Christiana, and for about two years was out of business, taking up the stock business at the end of that time and he has earned a comfortable competence.

In February, 1901, Mr. Eavenson was elected burgess for three years, and had been councilman for three years. In his politics he is a Republican. He stands high in the community, and is known as a gentleman in the truest sense of the word.

JOHN GIBSON (deceased). For many years the larger part of the building interests of the city of Lancaster, were in the capable hands of the late John Gibson, who was well known through Lancaster county, not only for his prominence as a builder and contractor of reliability, but also as a most estimable and worthy citizen. He was born April 20, 1813, in Lancaster, and his lamented death occurred Aug. 12, 1891. He was interred in Woodward Hill cemetery. His parents were Alexander and Mary Gibson, also of Lancaster, their family consisting of four sons, namely: Alexander, Michael, William and John, all now deceased.

The first marriage of John Gibson was to Miss Elizabeth Nagle, two children being born to this union: John, who died at the age of twenty years, and Elizabeth, who died young. The second marriage of Mr. Gibson was to Miss Susan Miller, in Lancaster, who was born Feb. 17, 1823, in Providence township, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Raub) Miller, who were farming people in this county. They were both consistent members of the Lutheran Church; his remains rest in Woodward Hill cemetery in Lancaster, while she sleeps in Providence township. Their children were: Jonas; John; Jacob; Elizabeth; Esther; and Susan, who is the widow of Mr. Gibson. The children born to Mr. Gibson's second marriage were: Miller, who died at the age of four years; Jonas, who died at the age of five years; Ada, who married Christian Farlick, of Lancaster; and Emma, who married Daniel Yackley, and has had four children, John, Walter and Ada being deceased, and Elmer L. surviving.

The useful life of Mr. John Gibson was passed in Lancaster. He learned the trade of brick-layer and in the course of time became a prominent contractor and builder. His thoroughness and reliability made him known over a wide extent and placed many important contracts in his hands. He was the builder and contractor to whom Lancaster owes the greater number of the stately, handsome and substantial buildings which were erected during his active life. Among these may be mentioned the Stevens House, German Lutheran Church, Trinity Chapel and a large number of the artistic residences which mark this city as one of great beauty. One of his most remarkable feats was the erection of the Mishler "twenty-four hour" house, which was started and finished within twenty-four hours, ready and complete to live in. For fifteen years prior to his death he lived retired from active endeavor. He was a strong supporter of the Republican party, but would never consent to accept office. For a number of years he was a valued member of Trinity Lutheran Church.

A. C. ILYUS is best known as 'Squire Ilyus to his fellow citizens in Manheim township, where he served twenty-nine years as justice of the peace. He has held various other public positions of trust, and has from early manhood been identified with the best interests of Lancaster county, forwarding every enterprise which promised benefit to his town and county.

The Squire was born Jan. 17, 1837, in West Hempfield township, son of Abraham and Mary (Clair) Ilyus, and comes from one of the old and respected families of Manor township, where his father was born. Abraham Ilyus died Feb. 21, 1856, in the prime of life. He was a shoemaker by trade.

His wife survived him many years, dying in 1889, at the age of seventy-six. She was born in Rapho township, as was also her father, Jacob Clair, a farmer and weaver. Mr. and Mrs. Ilyus had the following children who grew to maturity: Barbara, wife of William Watts, of Brentwood, Ark.; A. C., our subject; Susan, wife of Christian Snyder, of Kansas; Anna Mary, wife of Harry Bertzfeld, of Columbia, this county; Elizabeth, wife of Michael Kreider, of Lancaster county, but now deceased; Magdalena, deceased wife of Amos Sehner, of East Hempfield township; and Sarah, deceased wife of William McClain, of Lancaster county.

Until twenty-two years of age our subject lived in West Hempfield township. He was reared on a farm and attended the neighborhood schools. After a course of study in the Mount Joy Academy, he began teaching during the fall of 1853, in Penn township, and for twelve terms successfully conducted schools. The last six terms he was stationed in two schools in Manheim township, and he taught four terms, in the Neffsville school, where he located permanently in 1859. In 1866 he abandoned teaching, becoming a clerk in the recorder's office in Lancaster, and the following year was transcribing clerk in Harrisburg. In 1863 he was first elected assessor, which office he has held altogether for over thirty-five years. In 1869 he was elected justice of the peace, discharging the duties of this office up to January, 1894, when he resigned. Each time he was re-elected on the Republican ticket, and was the only one to fill the office in Neffsville. Having been re-elected assessor of Manheim in 1872, he has continuously held that position up to the present time. On April 15, 1893, he was nominated on the Republican ticket for the office of Prothonotary, and was elected that fall, taking his office at the beginning of the following year, and serving for a term of three years. For about seventeen years he was collector of the school tax in this township, and is also a conveyancer.

In West Hempfield, 'Squire Ilyus was married, in September, 1857, to Victoria Musselman, a native of Cumberland county, born July 12, 1838, daughter of Henry Musselman, who taught school in Mt. Joy and other places. In 1864 he enlisted in the 184th P. V. I. At the battle of Petersburg his tongue was shot off by a minie ball, he was made a captive and he died in a Rebel hospital. At the time that he volunteered his services he was over the regulation age, and he was a faithful and valiant defender of the flag to the last. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Ilyus, three are living: Harry M., who attended the Millersville State Normal school and is running a shoe store on North Queen street; Edward B., formerly a student at the State Normal, and now a practicing physician at No. 13 East Walnut street; and A. Charles, a graduate of the high school, who served as deputy clerk while his father held the office of prothonotary, continued with Capt. Stauffer, our subject's successor, and with the present incumbent some fifteen months. Mrs. Ilyus, who passed away July 1, 1896, was a member of the Lutheran Church and a most estimable lady. On Oct. 8, 1901, the 'Squire married Mrs. Julia A. Groff, widow of Martin S. Groff, late of Kissel Hill, this county, and daughter of John G. Hollinger, of Ephrata township.

For over a quarter of a century, 'Squire Ilyus has been clerk of sales. He is particularly busy during the winter, managing about 120 sales a year, besides which he has administered a number of estates. From 1885 to 1888 he was jury commissioner of the county, elected on the Republican ticket. When nominated in the spring of 1893, he was the successful one of four candidates, receiving a majority of 168 votes. He is a stockholder in the People's Trust, Savings & Deposit Co., of which he was one of the organizers, and is a director in the People's National Bank, of Lancaster. Since the organization of the Neffsville Mutual Fire Insurance Co., in 1878, he has been secretary thereof. Nearly $1,800,000 of insurance have been placed in the township, and only thirty cents on $1,000 a year has been paid out in losses. The Manheim & Penn Turnpike Co. was organized in 1881 and built the road on contract. It is a great convenience to the township, and the 'Squire was very active in carrying the movement forward. He served some fourteen years as secretary of the company. Of late he has been very active in promoting the construction of electric railroads in the county.

HENRY WEAVER EBY. Our sister republic, little Switzerland, is bound in sympathetic ties to the greater republic of the Occident, although thousands of leagues of water and thousands of miles intervene between the only two republics, pure and simple, that exist on the face of the globe, and demonstrate to the nations that man is capable of self-government and competent to enact and maintain laws that redound to the greatest good of the greatest number. While no truly great or famous man has come to America from the little republic to here make his home, nor any great numbers of the peasantry and middle classes sought a refuge on the soil of the United States, there have been planted several Swiss colonies throughout the Union, and numerous instances of individual immigration resulting in permanent residence within our country's bourn. The reason for this sparse coming is obvious. The Swiss are a free people. Climatic rigors in the Alpine hills and low-priced lands in this country are among the causes that lead to Swiss emigration chiefly, more especially of the agricultural classes, and these are invariably steady-going, intelligent and industrious husbandmen, and they become most excellent and useful citizens.

Among the early pioneers of Lancaster county, Pa., was Theodorus Eby, who came from Switzerland in 1719, and settled in Salisbury township. From him have descended all of the family name in the State, including several of more than a local reputation.

Henry Weaver Eby, a retired farmer of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, a descendant of Theodorus above mentioned, was born on the farm he still occupies Dec. 9, 1826, a son of Peter Eby and a brother of Bishop Isaac Eby, to whom this farm of 140 acres belongs; an adjoining farm of eighty acres is the property of Henry W. In 1866, however, Henry W. retired from active participation in the cultivation of the place, but still keeps a supervision over it.

Mr. Eby in politics is a Republican. He served thirteen years on the school board, and is still very popular with his party, as well as with the public in general. While not a member of any church, he has, nevertheless, proved himself a friend of all religious movements. He is of a genial disposition and a gentleman of unswerving integrity, while his life of usefulness has won for him the unfeigned respect of his neighbors and made for him warm-hearted friends by the score far and near.

JACOB R. MYERS, a well-known farmer of Manor township, is a grandson of George Myers, and son of Jacob Myers, both of Lancaster county.

George Myers lived and died in Manor township, where he conducted a distillery. Of his early life not much is known, but he is supposed to have been born there. He was twice married, first to a Miss Hagentobler, by whom he had four children, Barbara, Betsey, Annie and Jacob (father of Jacob R.). The six children by his second marriage, which was to a Miss Knisley, were named Daniel, George, David, Benjamin, Joseph and Henry. It is with those of the first union that this narrative is particularly concerned, since it is through that branch of the family that Jacob R. Myers traces his descent. Barbara became the wife of Henry Ament, of Washington Borough. Betsey was three times married, her first husband being Rudy Stehman, her second a Mr. Waller, and her third Michael Shenk. Annie was twice married, first to Christian Stehman, and after his death to John Landis.

Jacob Myers, the father of Jacob R., passed most of his life in Manor township, where he owned a large farm which he cultivated with notable success until within a few years of his death, when he retired and took up his residence in Mountville. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church, a man of substance, and deservedly held in high esteem by his neighbors and acquaintances. His first marriage was to Anna, daughter of Abraham Rohrer, of Manor, and after her demise he married Annie White. To the first union were born six children: Daniel, Elizabeth (wife of Levi Shuman), Mary, Jacob R., Annie and Abraham. Daniel was a farmer, and both active and influential in local affairs; he married Mary Lehman, and died in 1899, at the age of sixty-two. Elizabeth married Levi Shuman. Mary married Abraham Charles, of Washington borough, Lancaster county. Annie (deceased) was the wife of Amos Lehman, of Manor. Abraham had his home at Steelton, Pa., he was formerly a merchant, but is now in the ministry of the United Brethren Church. By his second marriage Jacob Myers had a son, Henry, who resides at Columbia; and a daughter, Sadie, who is the wife of Abraham Kauffman, of Philadelphia.

Jacob R. Myers was born in Manor township Feb. 26, 1843. He lived with his father on the latter's farm, until he had completed his thirtieth year, when he moved to his present home, one mile south of Mountville. There he owns and conducts one of the finest farms in Lancaster county, comprising 101 acres, highly improved. He is energetic and liberal, progressive and public-spirited, and one of Lancaster's most influential citizens. He was one of the organizers and is a director of the Mountville National Bank, and is secretary of the Mountville Manufacturing Co. Mr. Myers has held local offices, among them that of school director. His political creed is Republican, and in religious faith he is a Mennonite. He takes a deep and active interest in church affairs, contributing liberally to the cause of religion, is a trustee of the Habecker Church, and was among the foremost in securing the erection of the church edifice of his denomination in Mountville.

On Jan. 3, 1873, Jacob R. Myers married Elizabeth Seitz, daughter of Jacob Seitz, of Manor township, and one son has blessed their union, Charles. He was born Jan. 29, 1876, and is by trade a machinist. He married Martha Shenk, daughter of Abraham Shenk, of Manor, and resides in Columbia.

JOHN HOMSHER, long time a successful merchant at Bartville, Lancaster county, was born in Sadsbury township, Jan. 27, 1826, son of John and Mary (Coon) Homsher.

Daniel Homsher, his grandfather, was born in 1761, in Germany, and came to this country, settling in Montgomery county. His wife, Barbara Spearling, was also born in Germany in 1761. They had a family of five sons and two daughters: Peter, John, Jacob, Samuel, William, Maria and Catherine.

John Homsher, son of Daniel and father of John, was born in Montgomery county in June, 1792, and was reared and educated in his native county, where he learned the tailor's trade, which he followed until the death of his wife in 1858. From that time until his death in April, 1872, he made his home with our subject. John Homsher and his wife, who was Mary Coon, a native of Philadelphia, were reared as Presbyterians, but in later years became members of the Methodist Church. They had a family of ten children: (1) Mary J., born in 1822, married William R. Leach, a native of Bart township, and after some years moved to Pomeroy, Chester county, where she died leaving three sons, John, William and Louis, all of whom have become prominent in Chester county. (2) Frank, born in March, 1824, is now a retired business man of Christiana. (3) John is the subject of this sketch. (4) Theodore, born in Lancaster county, in 1828, is now a retired merchant of Kearneysville, W. Va., where he has a family of four children: Mary, Frank, Bell and Virginia. (5) Susan B., born in March, 1830, married J. R. Townsend, a prominent business man of Smyrna, Lancaster county, and is the mother of five children: Howard, Ellwood, Morris, Ella and Elizabeth. (6) Lydia A., born in 1832, married William H. James, a commission merchant of Philadelphia, and they have three children: Theodore, Mary and Alice. (7) Amanda, born in 1836, married John Supplee, who died in Philadelphia, where she still resides. They had one daughter, Mary, who is the wife of John Casey, of Philadelphia. (8) Charles W., born in 1839, in Lancaster county, where he was reared to manhood. He enlisted in one of the Indiana cavalry regiments, and served during the Civil war, and for nine months was in Libby Prison. After the war he came back to Lancaster county and was married to Miss Ella Baughman, of Philadelphia. He became a foreman in one of the marble works of that city, and he was killed by a slab of marble falling upon him. (9) Sarah L., born July 4, 1841, married Samuel Townsend, of Smyrna, now a retired business man of Christiana. (10) Miss Catherine, born in July, 1843, resides in Philadelphia.

John Homsher received his education in the district schools, and when a young man became an adept at the tailor's trade, which, however, he did not long pursue. In 1850, he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, J. R. Townsend, and engaged in a store at Smyrna. At the expiration of about two years Mr. Homsher bought out his brother-in-law, and for seven years carried on business alone, or until 1860, when he sold out, and then purchased a farm in Bart township, in the cultivation of which he was engaged for the ensuing six years. Previous to engaging in farming he was postmaster of Smyrna, Lancaster county, five years; was postmaster under James Buchanan, and he has been postmaster of Bartville for thirty-six years. In 1867 he purchased the real estate of Thomas Ferguson, and set up a store in Bartville, in the management of which he has continued to the present time.

John Homsher was married in 1853 to Rachel E. Coulter, who was born Oct. 20, 1830, daughter of John and Eleanor Coulter. To this union have come three children: (1) Viella L. Homsher, who received her education in the select and the Union High Schools, lives at home; she is regarded as a woman of more than the usual charms and graces. (2) Elmer died when a boy of seven years. (3) Howard N., a partner with his father at Bartville, married Miss Lizzie Montgomery, of Colerain, who died in 1895, leaving him one daughter, Olive Frances. Howard N. Homsher is an active worker and leader in the Democratic ranks of Lancaster county, and was elected in the fall of 1900 jury commissioner for a term of three years.

John Homsher is a Democrat, and has served a number of years as school director of Bart township. All this family belong to the Presbyterian Church, and are highly esteemed for their many good qualities and their genuine worth.

MILLER ECKMAN, one of the most substantial and highly respected farmers of Lancaster county, now retired from activity and a resident of Lancaster City, was born near Puseyville, in Colerain township, Lancaster county, Nov. 22, 1820, a son of Jacob and Catherine (Miller) Eckman, natives of Eden and Strasburg townships, respectively.

The Eckman family is an old one in Lancaster county, and was founded there by a German emigrant by the name of Hyrinimous Eckman, who married a Miss Slaymaker, accompanying the latter's family to Lancaster county in 1706.

John Eckman, son of the emigrant and grandfather of Miller Eckman, married Katie Foutz, and became an extensive farmer in Eden township.

Jacob Eckman, son of John, died in Lancaster City, Nov. 18, 1858, at the age of seventy-two years. He married Catherine, daughter of David Miller, of Lampeter township, who died March 15, 1880, at the age of ninety-two years, and was buried by the side of her husband in the Mennonite cemetery, both having been members of the New Mennonite Church. They had the following children born to them: Maria, widow of George Trout, lives at Mount Pleasant, Pa.; Elizabeth, widow of Charles Kirkwood; Susan, widow of Frank Brabson; Katie, widow of Amos Greist; Isaac, who died in 1859; Miller, of this sketch; Joshua, who died in Kansas; David, living in Kansas City; Jacob is a blacksmith in Philadelphia; and Hester A. deceased wife of Christian Kreider, of Lampeter township. Jacob Eckman, the father, was a wagonmaker by trade, and carried on a large business for years, and then became an extensive farmer. He owned three fine farms at his death, and in 1855 built his home in this city where he died. He had six acres of land which is a part of Lancaster City.

Miller Eckman grew up on the farm and remained on the old place until 1860, when as administrator he sold it, and in 1865 he sold his own farm to John Geiger, removing at that time into Lancaster. Desiring to see something of the country, when a young man, Mr. Eckman started on a western tour which he extended over several years, during which time he traveled over many States. He has crossed the Allegheny mountains some eighteen times. After his location in Lancaster he passed the succeeding twenty-two years in teaming, later working at the carpenter trade, in which he had become skilled. With the assistance of one helper, he did all the work on seven houses which still stand to attest his capability. Mr. Eckman also took a prominent part for some years in city politics, and from 1874 until he resigned in 1878, he was a member of the City Council from Republican wards. He has served on the jury many times and has always willingly assumed the duties of good citizenship. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and for the past eight years has been one of the trustees. Mr. Eckman owns a large amount of valuable city property, both improved and otherwise, and is regarded as one of the substantial citizens.

On March 21, 1848, in Lancaster, Mr. Eckman was married to Elizabeth Eckman, a distant relative, and a daughter of Martin and Catherine (Eckman) Eckman. To this union was born: George E., a clerk in the postoffice, who married Miss Filena Harry, who was born in New Garden, Chester county, a daughter of John and Sarah P. (Harry) Harry, farming people of that county. One son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. George Eckman, Harry M.

Mrs. Miller Eckman was born in Little Britain township, and died Nov. 10, 1890, aged seventy-seven years and two days. She was laid to rest in Woodward Hill cemetery.

Miller Eckman enjoys most excellent health despite his advancing years, and in both mental poise and physical appearance reflects the advantages of an active and well regulated life. He takes a deep interest in current literature, this being enhanced on account of his excellent eyesight, requiring no assistance from the lens of the oculist. He is universally esteemed, and is well-known through Lancaster county where his friends are many.

JACOB A. BAIR. For more than a quarter of a century Jacob A. Bair has been the popular and efficient proprietor of the "Williamstown Hotel" at the village of Vintage, Paradise township, Lancaster county. He had been a successful farmer in his earlier life, and as hotel keeper he soon became widely and favorably known to the traveling public, for he possessed those qualities of heart and mind which endear the host of the inn to his guests, and he is the representative of one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county.

Jacob A. Bair was born in Leacock township, Jan. 30, 1832, son of William and Mary Ann (Trout) Bair, and the grandson of David Bair, in his time a leading farmer of Earl township. Mary Ann Trout, the mother of Jacob A. Bair, was a direct descendant in the fifth generation from Conrad Rutter, who migrated to America in 1683, locating first on the site of Germantown, Pa., which town he helped to found. He removed to Montgomery county, and later in 1716 came to Leacock township, Lancaster county, with his three sons, locating on 588 acres of land. His descendants were among the most honored and respected citizens of Lancaster county, as clearly set forth in the history of the Rutter family. William Bair, the father of Jacob A., lived to the age of eighty-four years, and the mother died at sixty-four. To them were born the following children: Martin, deceased; David, deceased; Jacob A., whose sketch appears herewith; Samuel, who resides near New Holland, Earl township; Amanda, wife of Laban Rauck, of New Jersey; Elias, of Philadelphia; Mary Ann, wife of Harry Weidler, of Lancaster City; and Hannah, wife of Amos Brackbill, of Strasburg township.

Jacob A. Bair was reared on the farm of one hundred acres in Leacock township, where his father lived most of his life and received his education in the common schools. At the age of twenty-one he began life on his own account by taking charge of a farm of his father's in Leacock township. He continued actively engaged in farming in Leacock and Paradise townships until 1876, when he removed to the village of Vintage, where he has since resided, all the while as owner and proprietor of the "Williamstown hotel." He has, by his long experience in that capacity, amply demonstrated that he is the right man in the right place. He is genial and whole-souled, and his hostelry is famed throughout the eastern part of Lancaster county. Mr. Bair is also a well-known sportsman, with a special fondness for fox-hunting. His pack of fox hounds are of the best, and he has in his stables the right kind of horses to follow. He has given considerable attention to horses of the track variety, and has won during the past few years some good races.

Mr. Bair married in 1853 Miss Rachael Royer, daughter of John Royer, of Leacock township. To Mr. and Mrs. Bair have been born nine children, namely: Henry, who died at the age of twenty-two years; Josephine, wife of Henry Eby, of Philadelphia; Anna Mary; Catherine; Elizabeth, a stenographer with the Hazleton National Bank, Hazleton; Clara; Rachael, wife of Edward Livingston, of Point Pleasant, N. J.; Jacob, who married Miss Nora Russell, of Gap; and Clement, assistant clerk for the supervisor of the Pennsylvania railroad at Wall, Pa. Although now seventy years of age Mr. Bair has the appearance and activity of a man many years his junior. He is exceedingly well preserved and enjoys the friendship and esteem of a wide circle of friends.

JOHN GROSH, prothonotary of Lancaster county, although a familiar figure in Lancaster, particularly about the Court House, lives on the old family homestead in Landis Valley, Manheim township, where he carries on farming of the most progressive kind. His great-grandfather came from Germany, and his grandfather, Thomas Grosh, died at Neffsville in 1879, aged seventy-five years, after having lived a retired life for twenty years. Thomas Grosh married Sophia Shreiner, a descendant of the Shreiner who emigrated from Germany and settled in Manheim township, in 1730, and of the same family of Shreiners who, for three generations, owned the land upon which the Lancaster Trust Company Building, on North Queen street, now stands.

Thomas Grosh lived in the old homestead and was succeeded there by his son, Daniel S. Grosh, and in this house Prothonotary John Grosh was born. It is one of the oldest houses in Lancaster county.

Daniel S. Grosh, father of our subject, died March 31, 1881, aged fifty years. He married Sarah Ann Hostetter, a daughter of the late John Hostetter, a prominent farmer, miller, drover and general business man of Manheim.

John Grosh was born Jan. 20, 1854, on the old homestead in Landis Valley, and was married on Dec. 18, 1877, to Anna Elizabeth Weitzel, daughter of Elias and Susanna Weitzel, of Reamstown. The children born to this union are: Clarence Weitzel and Jennie Stewart, the former being a clerk in his father's office.

Mr. Grosh has farmed the old homestead of 141 acres from 1877 to the present time, and is, besides, a dealer in leaf tobacco. He has always been an ardent Republican, and the esteem in which he is held in his home district is evidenced from the fact that he was chosen a Republican county committeeman for ten years, has served as a school director for nine years (seven years as president of the board and two years as treasurer), was elected a delegate to the State Republican Convention which met at Harrisburg in 1880, and was triumphantly elected to the responsible office of prothonotary of Lancaster county in November, 1899. Mr. Grosh's family belong to St. Paul's Reformed Church, in this city. He is an Odd Fellow, of which order he is a past officer, and he also belongs to the Young Republicans and the Citizens' Republican Club. In lodge, club and business and social circles Mr. Grosh is exceedingly popular, and no man in the county enjoys a better reputation in all the things that go to make the good citizen.

WILLIAM S. CARPENTER. The term, or word, "boniface," from time immemorial, has been employed to designate the proprietor, landlord, or keeper of an inn, tavern, or hotel, according to custom of the people among whom such a house or public accommodation may be located, boniface being a word compounded from the French and English, signifying "good-natured or pleasing," the last syllable being self-explanatory. The term is not inaptly applied to the gentleman whose name opens this biographical notice.

William S. Carpenter, proprietor of the "Bellevue Hotel" at Gap, Lancaster county, was born in Lampeter Square, West Lampeter township, May 29, 1863, a son of Alpheus and Martha (Weaver) Carpenter, natives of the same place.

Alpheus Carpenter was a contractor, builder and undertaker at Lampeter Square, where he died in February, 1896, at the age of sixty-nine years, his remains being interred in Longenecker's meeting house cemetery. Mrs. Martha (Weaver) Carpenter, who was born in 1831, has her home in Lancaster. The surviving children born to Alpheus and Martha Carpenter are Katie A., Ida E. and William S., the daughters being single and residing with their mother. The paternal grandfather of William S. Carpenter, who married Elizabeth Grubbs, was of Swiss origin, but was born in Lancaster, Pa. He was a contractor and builder and died in Lampeter Square. The maternal grandparents were Samuel and Martha (Rush) Weaver, also of Swiss extraction. Samuel Weaver by calling was a farmer and died in May, 1887, in Lancaster, one of its most respected residents.

William S. Carpenter was united in marriage in Lancaster, May 18, 1887, with Miss Alice B. Rowe, of whom further mention will be made. To their union have been born the following children: Marian (deceased), Edith C., Cora, John A. (deceased), and Emily F.

Mrs. Alice B. (Rowe) Carpenter was born in Providence township, Lancaster county, Dec. 24, 1867, a daughter of Benjamin F. and Elizabeth (Miller) Rowe, members of one of the oldest and most distinguished families of Lancaster county. Benjamin F. Rowe was personally very popular throughout Lancaster county. He was elected to numerous township offices, and was the youngest man ever elected sheriff of Lancaster county. In the latter capacity he hanged two negroes—Anderson and Richards—a painful duty, but unavoidable under the law. After his term as sheriff he was deputy sheriff three terms. He died at the age of sixty-six years, and was buried in the Brick Meeting House cemetery in Lampeter township. In 1861 Mr. Rowe enlisted in the three-months' service in a Pennsylvania regiment, and after his discharge he was appointed assessor of Internal Revenue and served until Johnson's term as president. He was a prominent up-to-date, self-made man, and was popular as an auctioneer. Acquiring considerable money he was classed among the wealthy citizens of his town, and was of such genial and generous disposition, that he shared much of his wealth among his friends, and died with but limited means. Mrs. Rowe was a member of the Mennonite Church.

William S. Carpenter acquired a sound education in the district schools, and after finishing his studies he united with his father in conducting a contracting and building business which was continued until 1888, when he went to Rawlinsville, Lancaster county, and opened a hotel, which he successfully managed for two years. In 1890 he came to Gap and took charge of the "Bellevue," which is universally acknowledged to be one of the best kept in Lancaster county. This popular hotel is a brick structure of thirty rooms, and is equipped with all modern improvements and conveniences, such as stationary wash-stands and bath-tubs with hot and cold water, electric lights, etc., and was erected by Walker, Rutter & Eby in 1886. The table is furnished with all that could be desired by the most fastidious epicure.

Mr. Carpenter is a well read gentleman and possesses a library that exhibits a collection of volumes that are a credit to the taste and erudition of the owner. Fraternally he is a Master Mason and politically a Republican.

The history of the Webb family in Lancaster county begins in 1686. Ezekiel Webb, the great-grandfather of E. G., was a soldier of the Revolution. They lived for a few years in that county, when he bought a farm in Colerain township, where he lived for a time, and then moved to the farm of his uncle, Ezekiel Webb, which had come into his possession. In 1847 Henry Webb was persuaded by his father to return to Chester county, where he made his home until 1852, in which year he resumed his residence on his Lancaster county farm. In 1872 he sold this property to live with his children until his death, in 1887, his wife passing away the previous year. Mr. Webb was a Whig and a Republican, and took an active interest in politics. In religion he and his wife were Friends. I., and two weeks later was engaged in the second battle of Bull Run. His regiment was at Antietam, and in the thick of the battle at Fredericksburg. It was engaged at Chancellorsville, and made throughout its history a most honorable record. When Mr. Webb's term of enlistment expired he re-enlisted in Independent Battery I. He was at Gettysburg and in many other stirring and thrilling scenes. As a member of the battery he was stationed near Washington, where he remained until the war closed, being honorably discharged in June, 1865.

At the close of the war Mr. Webb came back to Lancaster county. In February, 1868, he was married to Narcissa D. Wright, a daughter of Samuel and Mary J. (Clayton) Wright. Honest and upright, he bears a fine reputation as a man and a citizen.

LANDIS. In the latter part of the sixteenth century, in Switzerland, members of the Landis family were well known for their devotion to their religious belief—a devotion that caused them to teach the Word of God in spite of persecution. In September, 1614, Hans Landis was beheaded for his faith, and he was the last person in that country to suffer the death penalty for religious conviction. In 1660 the Landis family, with others, were driven from the country to find homes elsewhere. In 1717 three brothers, Rev. Benjamin, Felix and John Landis, all of whom were Swiss Mennonites from the vicinity of Manheim, on the River Rhine, came to America, to find in the New World freedom to worship God. Like most emigrants, they were comparatively poor. Rev. Benjamin Landis, who was the ancestor of those of the name in Lancaster county, purchased 240 acres of land from William Penn and the Conestoga Indians, receiving his patent therefor in 1718. He and his son, Benjamin (2), began at once to farm. Benjamin Landis (2) became the father of four sons, Benjamin (3), Abram, Jacob and Henry, and these were the first American born children of the family.

(III) Benjamin Landis (3) moved to Manheim township in 1751-53. After buying out his brother-in-law he owned in all from 800 to 1,000 acres of land about three miles from Lancaster, near the Reading road, and not far from the Landis Valley Meeting House. In 1749 Benjamin Landis (3) married Anna Snively, only daughter of John Snively, and they had three sons:

(IV) Hansel (John), born March 15, 1755; Benjamin (4), called "Bennie," born in the winter of 1756; and Henry, born Dec. 5, 1760. Their home was a place of refuge for many Swiss emigrants, who enjoyed their hospitality until homes could be secured for them.

(IV) Henry Landis, youngest son of Benjamin (3), was blind. He became the father of a son, Henry.

(V) Henry Landis, son of blind Henry, was born and raised in Manheim township. He married

Anna Long, of the same township, and to them were born ten children, namely: Benjamin, John, Henry, Isaac, Jacob, Susan, Elizabeth, Nancy, Barbara and Mary, all of whom were married except Mary, who died single.

(VI) Benjamin Landis, son of Henry, was a farmer and a miller, and owned seven large farms and two grist mills in this part of the county, and his name survives as that of a capable and energetic business man. He died at the age of forty years, in the faith of the Mennonite Church. His children were as follows: Fianna, who became the wife of Benjamin Gerber; Isaac L., father of Levi L. Landis; Eliza, who married John Hess; Henry L., a farmer in Manheim township, who married Catherine Reist; Fannie, who married Samuel Hess; Benjamin L., who married Mary Landis; Anna, wife of Samuel Hershey; Israel, unmarried; Amelia, wife of Michael Nolt; Daniel, who married Maria Erb; and Maria, wife of Levi Getz.

Isaac L. Landis, the father of Levi L., was born April 14, 1823, and spent his life in Manheim township, where he held the office of town auditor for many years. His death occurred Feb. 11, 1897. Mr. Landis was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Long, a daughter of Benjamin and Susan (Rude) Long. She was born in Manheim township in 1829, and died March 31, 1852, the mother of three children, two of whom died in infancy, and Levi L. being her only surviving child. After the death of his first wife Mr. Landis was married to Susan Landis, daughter of David Landis, of near Witmer. Of this marriage were born ten children, of whom five are living: Rev. Noah L., of Oregon; Annie, wife of Rudolph Herr, of Petersburg; John L. and Milton L., both of Oregon; and Eli L., of Farmersville. The family all belonged to the Mennonite Church.

Levi L. Landis was born and reared on the old homestead near Oregon, and had his education in the public schools. When twenty-six years of age he began operations on his own account, locating on a farm of sixty-two acres between Neffsville and Kissel Hill. He made his home on this farm for eleven years, when he moved to his present location between Neffsville and Petersburg, where he has a place of twenty-five acres. This place has been very substantially improved by the erection of a new dwelling house, a barn and a creamery, with two large tobacco sheds. Mr. Landis has bought and sold many fine residences in the city of Lancaster, and at the present time owns several fine houses in the city. He also owns four farms in Manheim township, comprising 281 acres, which places have been greatly improved by him, and are considered among the best in that section of the county. Mr. Landis has bought two large lots in Neffsville, where he is preparing to build three houses on one lot, and on the other a fine residence, to which he will move and live retired. Mr. Landis is a progressive and prosperous farmer, and has given much attention to cattle and sheep raising. His public spirit is unquestioned, and he has amassed a handsome competency through his own efforts.

On Sept. 18, 1877, Mr. Landis was married to Anna S. Graybill, daughter of Peter and Molly G. (Sahm) Graybill, who was born July 16, 1853. To this union has come one child, Graybill G., born April 3, 1881, who now looks after the interests of his parents. They are members of the Mennonite Church.

The GRAYBILL family was founded in Lancaster county by John Graybill, who came with his brother from London, and was one of the early pioneers in the county, where he purchased from William Penn, receiving a patent, a tract of 300 acres of wild land, one mile north of Petersburg. There he built a house and reared his family. It is still owned by some of his descendants, being sixth in line from him. From the beginning of its history in this country, and even before, the family have constantly been associated with the Mennonite Church. Each generation has not been prolific in its offspring, consequently there are but few living representatives of this honored name. Five successive generations of the Graybill family have each had a Peter Graybill.

Peter Graybill, grandfather of Mrs. Levi L. Landis, was a son of John. He was born and bred on the homestead, which he owned and tilled, and he became one of the very substantial citizens of the county. He was long a director in one of the Lancaster banks. By his wife, Susan Miller, who attained the advanced age of eighty-four, he became the father of two sons, David and Peter. His death occurred when he was aged seventy-five years.

Peter Graybill, son of Peter and father of Mrs. Levi L. Landis, was in the sixth generation from John, the emigrant ancestor. He was an extensive farmer, owning about 400 acres of fine land, on which he made valuable improvements. Always interested in questions of the day, he took an active part in public affairs, and served on the school board. His death occurred Aug. 5, 1894, when he was aged seventy-seven years and four months. Peter Graybill was married to Molly G. Sahm, a daughter of George Sahm, of Rapho township; she is still living, at the advanced age of seventy years. To this union were born four children who reached maturity: Miss Lizzie S.; Anna S., wife of Levi L. Landis, of Manheim township; John S., a farmer of Witmer, who married Mary Sensenig and has four children, namely, Ammon, Minnie, Peter and Mary; Peter S., a farmer and stock dealer of Manheim township, who married Mary Weidler and has four children, Alice, Susan, Ada and Weidler. Peter Graybill was a member of the Mennonite Church, while his wife belongs to the Lutheran.

JACOB FORD KAUTZ, the well-known coal dealer of South Water street, in the city of Lancaster, comes from an old and respected Lancaster family. His great-grandfather, John F.

Kautz, was born in Germany, but came to the United States, settled in Lancaster county and engaged at farming. His son, Jacob Frederick Kautz, father of the subject of this sketch, was a brick manufacturer, and associated with the late Henry E. Carson, the firm, Kautz & Carson, operating three brick yards, one in Willowstreet, Lancaster county, and two in Lancaster City. Mr. Kautz was also a contractor, and did a great deal of work for the Pennsylvania & Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., and he macadamized a number of public roads in Lancaster, notably the Safe Harbor, Millersville, Oregon, Horse Shoe and Philadelphia and New Danville, the latter having been his last work of the kind. He was a prominent Democrat, and was the associate of such men as the late Col. Reah Frazer; the late Col. John M. Forney (then a Democrat); the brilliant George Ford, for whom he named his son Jacob Ford, and James Buchanan. When the latter became President of the United States Mr. Kautz was made Government Surveyor, and he spent two years on the Pacific coast surveying the boundaries of Washington territory. Returning to Lancaster at the beginning of the Rebellion, he engaged in farming on the Reigart's Landing farm, which he had purchased, and after ten years' residence there, retired from active life. This farm contained large deposits of fine building sand, in which he dealt extensively. Mr. Kautz was a Lutheran, and was prominent in Masonry. He married Miss Barbara Cashweiler, daughter of the late George Cashweiler, farmer of the lower end of Lancaster county. To this union nine children were born, four of whom are living: Barbara E., widow of the late W. H. Shultz, of Moore station, Delaware Co.; Anna, widow of the late D. W. Deidrich, of Lancaster; Emma, wife of William Morgan, in the iron business in Allegheny City; and Jacob Ford, of Lancaster.

Jacob Ford Kautz was born in the old family home on West King street Sept. 14, 1848, and was educated in the public schools of Lancaster. At twelve years of age he began work for his father in the brick business, staying in it for three years. In 1863 he enlisted in Co. K, 77th P. V. I., serving to the end of the war, seeing service in the battles of Chattanooga, Mission Ridge, in the march to Atlanta, in the three days' fight at Nashville, in the battles of Pulaski, Spring Hill and Franklin, Tenn., and finally, before the surrender of Lee, he was sent to Texas, where he was mustered out in December, 1865. Returning to Lancaster he went to work on his father's farm at Reigart's Landing, and after spending a few years there operating the sand banks he went to Philadelphia to be shipping clerk for an extensive metal dealing house. Afterward he went into the grocery business in Philadelphia. Again returning to Lancaster, he went into the ice business for three years, and his next venture was the coal trade, which he entered twenty-six years ago, and has since successfully engaged in it.

Mr. Kautz was a Democrat, and no man in the Seventh ward, in which he lives, has a greater following, or more influence, than he. He was a member of the Lancaster school board for fifteen years, during which time he was constantly a member of important committees, and was chairman of the Finance committee for six years, retiring from the school board on account of moving into another district. He has also served six years in the select branch of city councils, and four years as member of the common branch, and his record has been good on both. He was twice nominated for mayor of the city, but respectfully declined both times.

Mr. Kautz married Miss Catherine E. Ochs, daughter of Mr. John Ochs, a prominent merchant, and three children have been born to them: John M., who died at the age of three; Miss Edith E., a graduate of the State Normal School at Millersville, and now a school teacher; and Lillian M., in the graduating class of Cotta College. Like his deceased father, Mr. Kautz is a Lutheran. He belongs to Lamberton Lodge, No. 476, F. & A. M., and the Lodge of Perfection, in Masonry; to Lodge No. 88, K. of P. and to the Elks. No man in Lancaster is better known or more esteemed than Mr. Kautz.

ALFRED COOKMAN BRUNER, attorney-at-law and real estate dealer at Columbia, is a native of the borough, and was born May 18, 1858, a son of Abraham and Sarah J. (Breneman) Bruner, and of ante-Revolutionary ancestors.

Ulrich (or Owen) Bruner, a native of Switzerland, was born on Whitsunday, June 4, 1730. He sailed from Rotterdam to America, via Cowes, England, on board the ship "Mercury," May 29, 1735, in company with a number from the Palatinate, among them Henry Brunner (the name being variously spelled). In 1775 Ulrich was married to Fronica Gross (or Bross), a native of Pauls, Germany, who had settled in Bucks county, Pa., in 1744, and they had born to them six sons and five daughters, of whom nine names are on record, namely: Maria, John, Isaac, Fronica, Ulrich (or Owen), Barbara, Isaac, Jacob and Magdalena. The mother of this family died Feb. 27, 1796, and the father Feb. 19, 1821, at the advanced age of ninety-one years.

Owen Bruner, one of the above named children, was born July 5, 1762, and on March 2, 1787, married Elizabeth Weaver, daughter of John and Barbara Weaver, prominent and wealthy Mennonites of Earl township. He died Nov. 29, 1843. Mrs. Elizabeth Bruner died March 12, 1853, at the age of eighty-five years, having borne her husband ten children: John, born Jan. 7, 1788, died Jan. 15, 1799; Barbara, born Dec. 4, 1789, was married to John Good; Abraham, born Sept. 24, 1791, married Dec. 15, 1814, Rebecca Evans, and died March 3, 1870; Owen (or Ulrich), born Oct. 24, 1794, died April 1, 1845, the husband of Ann Martin; Jacob, born June 20, 1796, married Ruth A. Talbot; John, born Dec. 29, 1799, married Maria Jones; Isaac, born April 2, 1802, was a physician, and died Dec. 29, 1828; Elizabeth, born Sept. 30, 1804, was married to Dr. William Happersett; Daniel I., born June 22, 1807, was also a physician, and died in 1888, the husband of Elizabeth Davies; and Fronica (or Frances), born June 23, 1810, was married to John Kenega.

Abraham Bruner, of the firm of A. Bruner & Bro., wholesale lumber merchants of Columbia, was born in the borough Oct. 12, 1831, a son of the Abraham mentioned in the foregoing paragraph. His wife was Sarah Jane Breneman, to whom he was married by Rev. J. W. McCaskey Oct. 9, 1855. Abraham Bruner was the first president of the borough council of Columbia, under its present charter, in 1866 and 1867, also served in 1877-78-79, and was president three terms in all. His wife, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died Aug. 2, 1892, and her remains were interred in Mount Bethel cemetery, Columbia. The five children born to Abraham and Sarah J. Bruner are as follows: Mary E., born July 27, 1856, who married William B. Given, Esq.; Alfred C., whose name opens this article; Henry B., born Aug. 3, 1862, still at home; William Evans, born Jan. 8, 1866, now practicing medicine in Cleveland, Ohio; and James G., who was born Feb. 16, 1869, and who died Oct. 27th, of the same year.

In reference to the maternal ancestors of Alfred C. Bruner, it may be stated that Melchoir Breneman, a pioneer settler in Lancaster county, Pa., was born in the Upper Palatinate, and fled with other Mennonites to America, in the fall of 1717, he being a preacher. In Rupp's Record of Emigrants to the United States from 1709 to 1730, are the names of Christian Breneman, son of Melchoir (1), who purchased land in 1712, and of Melchoir.

Melchoir Breneman (2) was born May 10, 1726, son of Christian Breneman, a son of Melchoir (1). He was a Mennonite preacher and died Dec. 6, 1809. Melchoir (2) was the father of Christian Breneman, born May 3, 1776, and was, in 1814, elected the first chief burgess of the borough of Columbia, and in 1824, on the organization of the Columbia Bank, he was elected its president.

The maternal grandparents of Alfred C. Bruner were Henry Breneman, son of Christian and Mary E. (Strickler) Breneman. The former was born May 15, 1810, and was married March 18, 1834. His wife died April 28, 1851, and on Nov. 6, 1855, he married Mary Ann Bogle, who was born Nov. 17, 1813, and died Dec. 23, 1891; he died July 14, 1878. Christian, father of Henry, was born May 3, 1776; he was married, first to a Miss Hoffman, and after her death to Barbara Stehman, on March 3, 1803. He died March 2, 1834.

Alfred C. Bruner passed his entire life in Columbia, with the exception of the time spent in Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., from which he graduated when twenty-one years of age. He then embarked in the real estate business, and at the same time entered the law office of William B. Given, in Columbia, and was associate editor of The Columbia Herald for five years. Meanwhile he studied law and was admitted to the Lancaster Bar in 1884, and later for two years served as borough solicitor.

On Oct. 27, 1887, at Columbia, Mr. Bruner was united in marriage with Miss Annie M. Bruner, and this marriage has been graced with three children: Henry M. and Abram B., twins, and Alfred E. Mrs. Annie M. Bruner is a native of Columbia, and a daughter of Henry F. and Caroline (Mullison) Bruner, the former of whom is an extensive coal merchant in Philadelphia and Columbia, his residence being in Columbia.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Bruner are members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Columbia, in which he has been on the official board for many years. In politics Mr. Bruner is a Republican, and professionally, as well as socially, is held in very high esteem by all the residents of the borough. He is the recognized authority on titles to property in Columbia and vicinity.

JOSEPH EABY, a venerable representative of the agricultural interests of Lancaster county, is now living a retired life in Leacock township, where he was born Aug. 23, 1818, a son of Jacob and Susanna (Miller) Eaby. The father, who was a farmer in his later years, began life as a blacksmith. He died in Leacock township, in 1842, at the age of sixty-five years; his widow lived until 1863, when she, too, passed away, at the advanced age of eighty-two. Their ashes repose in the Eaby burying ground in Monterey, Pa. They were members of the German Baptist Church, and their modest and honest lives adorned their religious professions. Jacob and Susanna Eaby had the following family: (1) Moses married Susannah Kurtz; (2) Maria married Daniel Esbenshade; (3) Peter married Nancy Ranck; (4) Daniel married Caroline Bare; (5) Hannah married John Ranck; (6) Lydia married Isaac Bare; (7) Joseph; (8) Anna died unmarried at the age of seventy-six; (9) Susanna died at the age of seventy-five, unmarried; (10) Jacob married Martha Groff. All the above family are dead, excepting the one whose career forms the subject of this writing.

The paternal grandparents of Joseph Eaby were Jacob and Hannah (Leterin) Eaby, who were farmer folk of Lancaster county. Jacob Eaby was born July 18, 1728, and on Jan. 15, 1753, married Hannah Leterin, who was born Oct. 5, 1733. They had the following family: (1) Anna, born Nov. 27, 1753; (2) Peter, born Feb. 18, 1755; (3) Joseph, born Oct. 5, 1758; (4) Daniel, born Dec. 15, 1760; (5) Christiana, born April 15, 1763; (6) Elizabeth, born Sept. 3, 1765; (7) Benjamin, born Nov. 30, 1767; (8) Magdeline, born Aug. 4, 1770; (9) Barbara, born Feb. 30, 1773; (10) Jacob, born Nov.

9, 1776, and his name appears above as the father of Joseph Eaby.

Joseph Eaby is a single man, and made his home with his parents as long as they lived. He has continued to farm the old homestead in Leacock township for many years. In 1880 he retired from active labor. For one year he was supervisor, and is a Republican. In the local affairs of Leacock township he has filled a prominent place, and is very well-to-do. Many friends are about him, and he is much esteemed in the community where his creditable career has been run.

WILLIAM EDWARD CRIST, editor and proprietor of the Columbia Daily News and Weekly Courier, is an able newspaper man and exerts a marked influence in the affairs of his community. He was born in Decatur, Ill., Dec. 1, 1860, son of Samuel and Mary C. Crist.

The first representative of the family was John Martin Crist, who with his wife, Anna Catrina, came from Germany and settled near what is now Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa., Sept. 15, 1729.

George H. Crist, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Chambersburg, Franklin Co., Pa., about 1810. He received a fair education for that early day, and when ready to establish in life on his own account began farming in his native county, where he in time acquired a fine farm of 110 acres, upon which he resided until his death. When the Republican party was founded, in 1856, he was enrolled as a member thereof, and was a believer in, and a warm supporter of, its policy during his lifetime. In religious belief he was a devoted member of the United Brethren Church. He married Miss Anna Gerhart, a native of Franklin county.

George H. Crist lived but a few years after the birth of his son, and by the death of his mother six years later Samuel was left an orphan at the age of twelve years. He then made his home with an uncle, and was given a common school education. When old enough he learned the blacksmith and coach making trade, which he followed the greater part of his life. Shortly after mastering his trade he married Miss Mary Catherine Cleverstone, and soon after removed to Decatur, Ill., where he remained two years, and then returned to Greencastle, Franklin county, and engaged in the business of carriage and coach making, which he followed until his death, which occurred Oct. 31, 1892, at the age of fifty-two years. He was a lifelong and active member of the United Brethren Church, and was beloved by the people among whom he lived. His wife preceded him to the life beyond but a few months, having died Dec. 19, 1891, at the age of forty-nine years. She, too, was a member of the United Brethren Church, and was active in all good works in her neighborhood.

William Edward Crist attended the public schools until a youth of seventeen years, when he turned his attention to the printer's trade, learning the business in Greencastle and Philadelphia. For several years he worked at the case in the principal eastern cities, after which he returned to Greencastle, Pa., and engaged in the hat and gentlemen's furnishing goods business, which he conducted for five years, and then disposed of the stock. At that time the editor of the Valley Echo in Greencastle became incapacitated for active work, and Mr. Crist was engaged to conduct the business of the office, where he had served his apprenticeship. He continued in that capacity until 1889, when he removed to Columbia. In December of the above year Mr. Crist purchased a one-half interest in the Columbia Daily News and the Weekly Courier, and two years later bought out his partner, since which time he has been alone. The News is a sound family paper, containing articles on current topics and correspondence from various localities in the county. The paper is now in the fourteenth year of its existence, and is the pioneer penny daily in this county. In politics it is independent, and its readers know that when Mr. Crist supports or disapproves a person or a policy he is actuated solely by conscientious motives and does so only after careful consideration. A well-equipped job printing department is operated in connection with the newspaper, and in 1891, finding his business outgrowing his facilities, Mr. Crist decided to build a permanent home for his publication—the outcome of which is the Daily News Printing House, a handsome three-story building of light amber colored brick with brown stone trimmings; it is one hundred and thirty-five feet deep, and is especially adapted to the printing business; it is one of the finest and most attractive structures in Columbia.

In 1881 Mr. Crist married Ida C., only daughter of Samuel and Nancy Smith, residents of Greencastle, Pa. Five children have been born to them: Elva S., Edward Nev, Nan. C., Janet Smith and Samuel Smith. Mr. Crist is a stockholder in many of the important enterprises in Columbia, and is a member of different societies and organizations. Politically he is and always has been a staunch Republican.

HORACE ELLIOTT KENNEDY, who has been in active management of The Morning News, of Lancaster, almost from its inception, is a native of Pennsylvania, born Oct. 12, 1862, near Gap, Salisbury township, Lancaster county, a son of Sylvester Kennedy.

When a boy Mr. Kennedy worked on his father's farm, attending the public school of the neighborhood during the winter months, and for a brief time taking a course of study at Parkesburg Academy. At the age of twenty he went to Shackelford county, Texas, and for some eighteen months managed a large sheep ranch there. We next find him in Cincinnati, Ohio, in which city he for four years was associated with his brother, Maxwell Kennedy, in the grain shipping business. Returning, in 1899, to Lancaster county, on Jan. 1, 1890, he became registry clerk in the post-office in Lancaster city, by appointment of Postmaster Ellwood Griest; but this position he resigned on May 26 following, in order to become one of the incorporators of the Morning News Company and business manager of that newspaper.

The Morning News was founded in 1890 by R. A. Smith, and the first copy was issued Jan. 25, that year. Mr. Smith came to Lancaster from Mannheim, and began the publication without capital and with a very limited credit. At the end of a month his resources became exhausted and he was forced to solicit financial aid. E. K. Martin and Eugene G. Smith furnished sufficient means to keep the paper alive for a time, and about April 1, 1890, the property was turned over to them for their claims for money advanced. They then began the organization of a stock company to continue the publication. About April 7 Herbert Johnston, then employed on the Philadelphia Inquirer, was placed in charge as editor and manager, R. A. Smith being retained by the new management as editor of the labor department. He, however, a few weeks afterward, severed his connection with the paper and removed to Lebanon.

During the latter part of May, 1890, arrangements for the organization of a stock company were completed, and on the 26th of that month H. E. Kennedy was elected treasurer of the corporation, and business manager of the paper, and entered upon his duties immediately, Mr. Johnston being retained as editor. Mr. Johnston continued with the paper until January, 1891, when he resigned and Mr. Kennedy was given the management of the editorial, in addition to the business department. He has continued as editor and manager up to the present time.

The corporation was granted a charter by the governor June 13, 1890, under the name of "The Morning News Company." The subscribers for the stock, as set forth in the charter, were: E. K. Martin, Eugene G. Smith, H. E. Kennedy, John H. Landis, A. C. Baldwin, Walter M. Franklin and Amos Zigler. The officers were: E. K. Martin, president; Eugene G. Smith, secretary; and H. E. Kennedy, treasurer. Mr. Martin removed to New York shortly after the organization of the company, but retained his interest in it until 1899, when his stock, with that of other holders, was purchased by Mr. Kennedy, giving him a large majority of the shares and a controlling interest in the corporation. The present officers are: John H. Landis, president; Thos. B. Holohan, secretary; and H. E. Kennedy, treasurer. The paper was first issued from the second floor of No. 61 North Queen street, and was a one-cent daily. In February, 1890, it was moved to the McGrann building, No. 32 Center Square, and Oct. 1, 1892, the price was increased to ten cents a week. It has been twice enlarged.

It is worthy of note that Mr. Kennedy was the first newspaper man in Lancaster to anticipate the transformation to take place in the printing business through the Mergenthaler Linotype, and in January, 1896, he installed the first of those machines ever used in Lancaster, and demonstrated by his personal attention to them the practicability of their use without the services of a mechanic skilled in their construction. His move in that direction was followed shortly by the introduction of similar machinery in almost all of the newspaper and printing establishments in Lancaster, until they have now nearly supplanted hand composition and have become universal.

JOHN B. GREBILL. Among the leading citizens of West Earl township is John B. Grebill, who for many years has been prominently identified with the public life of the village and township, and is thoroughly representative of his locality. During a long term of years he efficiently served the government in the revenue service, and later was the popular postmaster at West Earl for two years, in both capacities displaying those qualities which obtain the esteem and confidence of the public.

Mr. Grebill was born May 23, 1837, the only child of John and Susannah (Brown) Grebill, the former of whom was born in 1775, and died in 1841; the latter was born in 1811 and died in 1876. They were married in 1836. The father was a thrifty farmer of West Earl. When but three years of age John B. Grebill was taken to West Earl, which has been his home ever since, and there received his education. While still a lad he began clerking in a store, and continued in that line until he had reached the age of twenty-five. Mr. Grebill has always been an active and ardent Republican, and his efficiency as a public servant was shown in his appointment as an official of the Revenue department, in which he served from 1869 to 1885. He had previously received another mark of appreciation, by appointment to the position of postmaster, without solicitation, and he retained that office two years. As judge of election he has given universal satisfaction, and is now serving his third term as justice of the peace.

John B. Grebill was married, in 1862, to Miss Rebecca Carpenter, a daughter of Emanuel and Fianna (Good) Carpenter, of West Earl, and five children have been born to this union. Alice, born April 1, 1863, who died in childhood; Susan, born Jan. 5, 1865, who resides at home; Milton C., born Aug. 30, 1867, married Miss Annie Gross, and conducts a cigar manufacturing business in Brownstown, Pa.; Fianna May, born Aug. 30, 1873, who resides in Lancaster; Darwin Ellis, born July 9, 1877, who resides at home and is engaged in the bakery business.

Mr. Grebill is one of the well-informed and progressive men of this locality, an excellent neighbor and unexceptional citizen, a consistent member of the Brownstown Evangelical Church, where he has served as trustee of the church and also as steward and president of the Missionary Society, and a man who has made not only an ample provision for the future, but one who also has gathered around him a large circle of warm personal friends.

HENRY PFAHLER. This family name is well-known in the iron trade; at Columbia none, perhaps, is better known. More than sixty years ago Henry Pfahler, then an ambitious lad, who had just attained his majority, and who had as his capital a well-learned tinner's trade, started in business for himself. His business broadened and extended, taking in hardware and the manufacture of stoves and kindred goods. Mr. Pfahler died June 10, 1900, but the name lingers as the synonym of sterling honesty, unswerving fidelity to business engagements and obligations, and rich success in the industrial and commercial world.

About a century ago Christian G. Pfahler, the father of Henry, was a lad in Ludwigsburg, Germany, his native land. He possessed a restless spirit and resolved to reach America, although payment for his passage across the ocean had to be earned after he landed in the United States. He first settled in Chester county, Pa., and a little later, in 1803, became a resident of York county, Pa., where he followed farming and the trade of a turner, which he had acquired in his native land. He married Catherine Hildebrand, a native of Germany, and their five children were as follows: Jacob, born Jan. 13, 1815, who died at Columbia, Sept. 10, 1899; Charles and Henry, twins, born Nov. 21, 1819, the former dying at York, Pa.; William, who died at Carlisle, Pa.; and Christian, who was sheriff of York county at the time of his death. Christian, the father, died Jan. 13, 1868, at the advanced age of eighty-two years; the mother died Jan. 10, 1863, aged seventy-one years.

The boyhood of Henry Pfahler was passed on the farm in his native county, in attendance at the district schools at times, but usually at work upon the farm. His choice of a business career was made when Henry was fifteen years of age. Entering a tin shop at Lititz, he thoroughly acquired the trade and continued to work diligently as a journeyman until he was twenty-one years of age. Then he purchased a small tin and coppersmith establishment at Columbia and cast in his business fortunes with that growing borough. This business he steadily improved from time to time, adding a complete line of hardware to his stock, and engaging in the manufacture of stoves, copper and tin goods, continuing in active business life until his retirement late in life to the comforts and ease that properly come as the reward of an earnest and well-spent life.

Mr. Pfahler married, July 12, 1843, at Columbia, Mary Hoernly, a native of Lancaster county, daughter of John and Barbara (Lichty) Hoernly, granddaughter of Isaac Hoernly, of Lancaster county, and great-granddaughter of Ulric Hoernly, a Mennonite and a native of Switzerland, who in 1737 migrated to America, and settled on a farm near Manheim. To Henry and Mary Pfahler were born three children, namely: William H., of Philadelphia, secretary of the Abraham Cox Stove Works, president of the Founders Association, and a man of prominence in the industrial world; Ann, who died young; and Henry C., who also died young. Mrs. Mary Pfahler died in 1854, and for his second wife Henry Pfahler married in March, 1855, Miss Rebecca Hoernly. She was born near Petersburg, Lancaster county, Dec. 27, 1827, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Bare) Hoernly, of Donegal township, Lancaster county, granddaughter of Abraham and Barbara (Stauffer) Hoernly, of Lancaster county, and great-granddaughter of Isaac C. and Maria (Koch) Hoernly.

John Hoernly, father of Mrs. Rebecca Pfahler, was a man of remarkable mechanical inventiveness and he invented a number of valuable farm implements. Holding to the Old Mennonite belief, he was unusually broad and liberal in his religious views. Possessing mental vigor of unusual activity, he was public-spirited, but in no sense an office seeker. In 1844 he removed to Indiana. He died in August, 1849, and was buried at Hillsboro, Ind. He was twice married, first in Lancaster county to Elizabeth Bare, who died in 1842, aged thirty-nine years. His second wife, Barbara Hoernly, who was his first cousin, he married in Indiana. By his first wife his children were Amos B., a farmer of Henry county, Ind.; Abraham, who was for twenty years county clerk at Lansing, Mich., and is now deceased; Rebecca, wife of Henry Pfahler; Mary, late wife of J. W. Stacey; Catherine, deceased wife of Dr. Fishburn; Barbara, deceased wife of Mr. McKinzie, of Indiana; Elizabeth, wife of James Price, a hardware merchant of Nebraska; Henry S., a farmer of New Castle, Ind.; and Fanny and Sarah, who died in infancy.

To Henry and Rebecca (Hoernly) Pfahler were born three children: Lillian K., a talented musician, who for the past twenty-five years has been a proficient teacher of her favorite art, and who resides with her mother; Mary H., wife of Rev. William J. Oliver, a Presbyterian minister of York, Pa.; and Harry L., a grocer of Philadelphia.

During the Civil war Henry Pfahler was a member of the Pennsylvania militia, which was called into active service. The regiment was mustered into the service and was stationed in front of Antietam but did not participate in that engagement. Mr. Pfahler was mustered out at Harrisburg. In politics Mr. Pfahler was a Republican. For six years he served as councilman at Columbia and filled various other local offices of trust and responsibility, and was associated with several of the local fraternal orders. In religious belief he was a member of Trinity Reformed Church of Columbia. Both himself and wife represented old and prominent families in the settlement and growth of the Susquehanna valley and were among the most highly respected residents of Lancaster county. Members of the family who have gone out into the world have won recognition and fame, while the scenes of privation, toil and final success in the development of Lancaster county's resources are still occupied by members of the families. Hon. Charles S. Hoernly, an attorney of Indianapolis, Ind., and chairman of the Republican committee, is cousin of Mrs. Pfahler, and some of the Hoernly heirs continue to reside on the old Hoernly homestead in Manheim township.

NATHANIEL ABBOTT KEYS SPURRIER, alderman of the Fourth ward, Lancaster, is one of the notable citizens of the day, and makes his influence felt alike in the professional, political and social circles of Lancaster.

The grandfather, William Atwell Spurrier, was born in Bristol, England, and came to this country in 1814, while still in his early manhood. Until peace was declared between this country and England he stopped in Nova Scotia, and then came on to Philadelphia. For about a year he remained in the Quaker City, and then, accompanied by his wife and six children, removed to Lancaster, where he set himself up in his calling, and became a noted and successful tailor. This was in the spring of 1817, and he pursued a very profitable and creditable career until his death from paralysis in 1835. In his religious convictions he was a Presbyterian, and socially he was a prominent 32d degree Mason, a member of Union Lodge, No. 213, Bristol, England; his associations in Lancaster were with Lodge No. 43.

George Spurrier, the father of Alderman Spurrier, born in Lancaster, Pa., was also a tailor, and for many years conducted a merchant-tailoring establishment at the corner of East King and Christian streets. For two and a half years he was warden of the Lancaster County Almshouse, filling that position at the time of his death, Nov. 10, 1882, when sixty-two years old. George Spurrier was prominent among the Odd Fellows, and was past officer of the Lancaster Lodge, secretary of the Encampment and a member of the Odd Fellows' Indemnity Society. An elder in the Reformed Church, for a quarter of a century he was a charter member of St. Paul's Reformed Church, and was one of the originators and stockholders of the Lancaster Cemetery Association. In early manhood he was married to Miss Margaret Frick, who was born in Lancaster, as was her father, Henry Frick, long an extensive contractor and builder of that city. Seven children were born to this union, only two of whom are now living: Anna Margaret and A. K. Spurrier, the Alderman.

Abbott K. Spurrier, born in Lancaster, was educated in the city schools, and enlisted June 25, 1863, in Co. K, 47th P. V. I., for a term of ninety days; subsequently he re-enlisted in the 8th Maryland Infantry and participated in the engagements leading up to the fall of the Confederacy.

The young soldier returned to Lancaster, and, taking up his schooling, devoted two years to study, and then became a clerk for Bair & Clarkson, bankers, with whom he remained for three years. When this firm was dissolved he continued as cashier three years for its successor, the firm of Bair & Shenk. For a time Mr. Spurrier was engaged in banking and broking on his own account, and then became clerk for the Hon. W. D. Stauffer, then the mayor of Lancaster. Mr. Spurrier was elected alderman from the Fourth ward in February, 1875, and is now filling his sixth term in that position. If he lives to complete this term, until 1905, he will have served continuously as alderman longer than any other man in the history of Lancaster.

Alderman Spurrier had disposed of more than 21,000 criminal cases, and considerably more than 6,000 civil suits at the time this sketch was written, in January, 1902, a record unprecedented in the history of the State. In the list of the criminal cases was that of the notorious Buzzard gang, a criminal association completely broken up by the sturdy alderman of the Fourth ward, as was also the "Meadow Gang," who infested Schoenberger Park, and terrorized the people of the southern part of the city for years. A stranger to fear, Alderman Spurrier took the matter up, visited their haunts and completely disarmed and dispersed the rowdies, who had threatened him with bodily harm.

Alderman Spurrier was married Oct. 12, 1871, to Miss Ellen C. Pearsol, daughter of John H. Pearsol, founder of the Daily Express, at one time the most successful daily paper in the city, now merged into the Daily Examiner. To this union were born three children, one of whom died in infancy; Miss Anna Pearsol Spurrier is a great favorite in the best society circles of Lancaster; and William Atwell Spurrier is the efficient superintendent of the press department of the Census Bureau at Washington.

Alderman Spurrier is a staunch Republican, and no man in the city has a stronger hold upon the people of his constituency than he has on the Fourth ward. Mr. Spurrier is an influential man throughout the city and county, and is an earnest worker for party success. For eleven years he was chairman of the Republican City Executive committee; on various occasions he has attended the National and State conventions, participating in the deliberations of the Republican party. He is an Odd Fellow, a member of the Red Men and prominent in the G. A. R., being aid-de-camp on the staff of the National Commander, Inspector-at-large, Dept. of Pa., and Post Commander of Admiral Reynolds Post, No. 405, G. A. R. He is widely known and universally respected.

HENRY BOMBERGER, proprietor of the Pearl street brick yards, and one of the successful business men of Lancaster, was born June 25, 1845, in Rheinbaiern, Germany, a son of Lawrence and Mary (Heitzemer) Bomberger, natives of the same locality.

Lawrence Bomberger was a carpenter and cooper by trade, and deciding that there were better advantages offered by the New World than in the Old, he emigrated to America, landing in Lancaster May 12, 1846, after a tiresome voyage of forty-eight days in a sailing vessel from Bremen, this port being the one from which he and his wife and two children had embarked. For eighteen years he pursued his trade successfully, and then turned his attention to market gardening on Manor street, which calling he followed for many years, meeting with marked success. His birth occurred in 1811, and he died in Lancaster, Oct. 1, 1893, while his wife died in 1885. They were both members of the Zion Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Bomberger was a Democrat. Five children were born to these parents; Rose married Philip Gornis, of Lancaster, Pa.; Mary married Philip Wall, a hotel man of Lancaster, Pa.; John; Cassie, is unmarried, and lives at Lancaster; Henry.

Henry Bomberger remained with his parents until he was twelve years of age, at which time he was hired out to neighboring farmers, and at the age of thirteen, he commenced to learn his father's trade of cooper. When he had mastered the details of this trade, he commenced business for himself on Hazel and Loveland streets. Here he succeeded very well, continuing in this line for twenty-seven years, and giving employment to about a dozen people. During the latter portion of this time, he was located on Manor street, and began to turn his attention to brick making. Finally he disposed of his cooperage business, and became foreman for James Brangley, a brick manufacturer, with whom he remained for the five succeeding years. His next venture was the erection of five frame houses, doing nearly all of the work himself. Three of these houses he afterwards sold, but still retains two.

In the fall of 1892, Mr. Bomberger purchased the brick yards owned by Peter Zeigler, and now has eleven and three-fourths acres of ground on Pearl and Second streets. His brick machine is a very fine one, and he manufactures chiefly by hand, employing two molders. The engines are of 25 and 35-horse power; the kilns have a capacity of 126,000 bricks each, he having two, square in shape. The sheds in use can contain about 135,000 brick, and the drying place has a capacity of 120,520. During the summer season the works are operated constantly, and thirty-five men employed. Four teams are kept busy delivering orders, and the trade is constantly increasing. In addition to his brick yards, Mr. Bomberger still continues his building operations, and owns a number of valuable residences in Lancaster, in addition to his own home at No. 202 Pearl street, where he enjoys the comfort his industry has provided.

On May 12, 1867, was Bomberger was married to Miss Charlotte Willig, who was born in Hanover, Germany, and came to America in 1865. Mrs. Bomberger is a daughter of Daniel and Johanna (Kornage) Willig, of Germany, where they lived and died, being farmers and people of prominence in their community. The children born to the union of Mr. and Mrs. Bomberger were: PHILIP L., manager and engineer of his father's brick yards, married Katie Brodecker, and they have two children, Wilmer H. and Catherine G.; Rosa is unmarried; Harry, with his father in the brick yards, married Ida Lafferty, and their children were Bessie, Ethel, Harry and Edith (deceased); and William, an engineer of Lancaster, married Mary Millysack, and they have one child, Pearl.

In political matters, Mr. Bomberger is a Democrat, and has ever been active in the promotion of all enterprises tending towards the advancement of the material, commercial and social welfare of the people of Lancaster. His recognized business ability has won for him the regard of his fellow-citizens, as well as the confidence of those with whom he has been intimately associated. Fraternally, he is associated with the Foresters, Eagles and Star of Bethlehem; he also belongs to the Militia. For many years he has been a member of Christ Lutheran Church, to which organization he gives a hearty support. His intelligence, good citizenship and fine character entitle him to the esteem of all who know him.

BENJAMIN F. HENRY, wholesale coffee dealer and roaster of Lancaster, Pa., is a native of that town, and was born in 1859. His parents, Benjamin and Anna E. (Oster) Henry, were also natives of Lancaster, while his paternal grandfather, Patrick, and his wife, were born in Scotland, and his maternal grandparents were born in Germany, the grandfather, Jacob Oster, a shoemaker by trade, having emigrated to Lancaster when a young man.

Benjamin Henry was a cabinet maker in early life, but latterly spent eighteen years in the feather and mattress renovating business. He served for one term in the city council, and was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, having served from the beginning to the end of the Civil war in the 157th P. V. I. He participated in eighteen battles during the memorable strife, and saw countless comrades fall by his side, but it was his good fortune to escape being either wounded or captured. Owing to ill health the last years of his life were spent in retirement from business activity, and his death occurred March 31, 1895, at the age of seventy-two years. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as was also his wife who survived him, who was born May 12, 1826, and is now living with her son, Benjamin F. Mrs. Henry is the mother of the following children: Emanuel O., an implement merchant of Lancaster; Frances E., wife of 'Squire H. E. Groff, of Lancaster; Edwin, deceased; Eleanora, wife of Alderman George B. Ressler, of Lancaster; Alice B., wife of E. B. Powell, who is engaged in the livery business at Lancaster; Benjamin F.; Hattie A., wife of Theodore Leib, of Lancaster; and Harriet A., deceased.

Until his thirteenth year Benjamin F. Henry attended the public schools of Lancaster, and then entered the blacksmith business with Samuel B. Cox, McKew & Norbeck, serving an apprenticeship of six years. During the year following he operated an engine in Kulp's foundry, and for nine years drove a coffee wagon for S. R. Miller. He then went into the wholesale coffee business on his own responsibility, and has since built up a large and remunerative trade. He has taken an interest in the politics of his town, and the confidence reposed in him by the public found vent in his election on the Republican ticket to the city council in 1890, and in his continuous re-election until 1898. He is fraternally connected with the I. O. O. F., and the K. of M. With his family he is identified with the Moravian Church.

In Lancaster, in 1882, Mr. Henry married Mary R. Mishler, born in this city, and a daughter of Henry R. and Diana (Kalbaugh) Mishler, the former of whom was born in Berks county, Pa., and is a retired drover of Lancaster. Two children, Maud M. and Paul O., blessed this union. Mr. Henry is an industrious, honorable man, and may be relied on to further any project for the welfare of the community.

JOHN S. GARBER was born in East Donegal township, Oct. 10, 1826, and died on the farm where his son, Amos E., now resides, March 30, 1888. His remains were laid in the cemetery connected with Bossler's Meeting House, in West Donegal township.

John S. Garber was a son of John and Catherine (Sechrist) Garber, both natives of Manor township, but early comes into West Donegal township, making their home on the farm where their grandson, Amos E., is now living. The father died in 1840, at the age of forty-nine years; his widow survived him many years, dying in 1878 at the age of eighty-three. They were members of the Mennonite Church and were buried in the Bossler Church cemetery.

John and Catherine (Sechrist) Garber had the following children: Michael S., who died young; Nancy S., the widow of John Longenecker, who has her home in West Donegal township; John S.; Catherine, a widow, who lives with her son-in-law, Amos Eby; Fanny, deceased wife of David Miller; Barbara, who died young.

Andrew Garber was the paternal grandfather of John S., and spent his life in Lancaster county. The Garbers of West Hempfield township, of whom Andrew Garber is a notable and noted representative, belong to the same stock.

John S. Garber was married Aug. 3, 1852, to Susan Erb, and to them were born the following children: Anna E., who is unmarried, and at home with her mother; Henry E., a farmer in West Donegal township, who married Fanny Eby, and is the father of five children, Tilman E., Ellen E., Jonas E.,

Elias E., and Ada E.; Amos E., a farmer in West Donegal township, who married Lizzie Reist, and with whom Mrs. Susan Garber is passing her declining days; John E., a resident of West Donegal township, who married Alice Newcomer; Kate E., unmarried, and living at home with her mother; Mary E., who died at the age of fifteen years; Simon E., a farmer in West Donegal township; Harriet E., who married Peter Nissly, of East Donegal township; Samuel E., a farmer in East Donegal township, who married Ellen Eby.

Mrs. Susan (Erb) Garber was born near the Erbs Meeting House, near Lititz, April 2, 1830, the daughter of the Rev. John and Fanny (Berge) Erb. Her parents were both born in Lancaster county, but removed to Cumberland county in 1833, where their remaining years were spent. Her father was a farmer, and was ordained a Mennonite minister in 1834. He died in 1844, at the age of forty-nine years; his widow died in 1858, at the age of sixty-four years; her father was buried in Cumberland county, and her mother in Kraybill's Meeting House cemetery. To them were born the following children: Mattie, who died young; Elizabeth, who married David Brubaker, and is now deceased; Fanny, late wife of John Hertzler; Barbara, who died at the age of two years; Anna, deceased wife of John Krider, a resident of Ohio; Samuel, deceased; Mary, late wife of Samuel Hertzler; Susan, Mrs. Garber; Catherine, late wife of John Crumleigh; Sarah, who died young; John, a farmer in Dauphin county.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Susan (Erb) Garber were Daniel and Barbara (Bomberger) Erb, both natives of Lancaster county.

John S. Garber, who was a farmer all his days, remained with his parents as long as they lived, and then cultivated the old homestead until his death. In all his business dealings he was very successful, and at the time of his death he owned three farms that aggregated 391 acres, an estate which gave him a fine standing in the commercial world. For many years he was a director of the First National Bank of Marietta, and long filled the position of school director in his home district. Possessing the confidence of the community to an unusual extent, he was called upon to settle a number of estates, and from time to time he had important trusts placed upon him. Never were the expectations of his friends disappointed, and never did he betray the slightest letting down of a high moral standard and an absolute integrity. In his politics he was a Republican, and in his religion a member of the Mennonite Church. All the family follow in his steps and are high-minded and honorable people.

E. SILAS OVERDEER, the junior member of the well-known firm of Everts & Overdeer, plumbers, tinsmiths and steam fitters, of Lancaster, was born in that city Sept. 23, 1851, son of Eli and Catherine (Hamme) Overdeer. The parents were natives of York county, Pa., where they married and lived until 1836. They located in Lancaster, that the father might accept the position of weighmaster for the Pennsylvania Railway Co. During the Civil war he was attached to the office of the provost marshal, and continued in the service of the Government until his death, in 1869, at the age of sixty-four years. His last position was in the revenue department as whiskey inspector. He was a zealous Republican, and was held in high esteem in his party. His widow survived until 1883, dying at the age of seventy-four years. Both were members of the Lutheran Church. They had the following named children: John A., a printer of Lancaster; Horace, who is a carpenter, in Lancaster; Miss Louisa, who resides with her brother Jacob, who is a blacksmith, in Middletown, Pa.; George, who is an engraver, in Lancaster; and E. Silas.

In 1877 E. Silas Overdeer was united in marriage with Miss Louisa Shenk, a daughter of John G. and Anna Shenk, natives of Germany, who met and married in Lancaster, where Mr. Shenk is a shoemaker. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Overdeer.

E. Silas Overdeer attended the public schools of Lancaster, and when he was seventeen years old he began to learn the trade of plumbing and tin-smithing, and in 1876 formed a partnership in that business with Franklin S. Everts. The site of the business is the same, but in 1887 the firm felt justified in erecting the fine three-story brick where all kinds of plumbing, gas and steam fitting are contracted for and carried on. The firm is the leader in its line in the city, and much credit is due for its success to the energy and ability of Mr. Overdeer. He is a self-made man, and is very highly esteemed in Lancaster. For several years he was a deacon in St. Paul's Reformed Church, and he is one of the substantial members of that congregation. His political adherence is given to the Republican party.

ALBERT COLLIER RUTHERFORD. The important position which Mr. Rutherford so efficiently fills, as manager of the immense estate of Senator Cameron, in Lancaster county, indicates the qualities he must possess, for no one without energy, excellent judgment and discrimination could fill this important office.

Albert C. Rutherford was born in Swatara township, Dauphin county, a son of Samuel S. and Mary A. (Rutherford) Rutherford, the former of whom died on the old homestead near Harrisburg, which has been in the family for five generations, in 1873, at the age of sixty-nine. The beloved mother died in 1884, at the age of seventy-four, and both were reverently interred in the Paxtang Church cemetery, where stands a beautiful granite monument, erected to mark their last earthly resting place. They were consistent members of the Presbyterian church. They reared a family which has reflected credit upon them, these being: John E., the manager of Lockhill, the Cameron home; Eliza, deceased, married to W. S. Rutherford, also deceased; Hon. Samuel H., a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, who resides on the old homestead; Martha, who also resides on the old homestead, at Paxtang; James A., connected with the construction department of the Pennsylvania railroad; Margaret S., who resides with her oldest brother; William B., who died young; and Albert C., the subject of this biography.

The paternal grandparents of Albert C. Rutherford were Thomas and Mary (Shultz) Rutherford. Thomas Rutherford was a son of Samuel (a lieutenant in the Revolutionary war), and Susanah (Collier) Rutherford, and a grandson of Thomas and Jane (Murdah) Rutherford, emigrants from Ireland. During the Revolutionary war this family distinguished itself in many ways.

Albert Collier Rutherford was reared on the old homestead and received excellent educational advantages. In 1877 he went to Cornwall, Pa., where he managed for a coal company, thence went into the employ of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at Steelton, Pa., as a foreman, then, after a four years' residence in Harrisburg, went to Colorado, where he was there employed as manager for the Colorado Coal and Iron Company. In 1886 he went to Omaha, where he remained three years in the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, in 1889 being made inspector in the Test department.

Leaving this strenuous work, Mr. Rutherford then went to the State of Washington where he engaged in the real estate business, very advantageously, but Dec. 1, 1890, he came to Donegal as the manager of the Cameron farms, consisting of 981 acres. The management has included the work of improvement, the erection of new buildings, etc., and all of this work has been performed in the most modern and substantial way. The energy and untiring industry of Mr. Rutherford are remarkable, while his comprehension of the details pertaining to an estate of this size has gained him the respect and utmost confidence of those who have placed their interests in his efficient hands.

JOSEPH W. BAKER, the well-known and popular proprietor of the "Lititz Springs Hotel" at Lititz, Pa., is a native of Lancaster county, born on a farm one mile west of Lititz, Oct. 30, 1853, a son of Abram B. and Catherine (Walter) Baker. The father died in April, 1898, at which time he was living a retired life. He owned considerable property in Lancaster and Lebanon counties, where he was extensively engaged in farming, and dealt largely in tobacco, buying and packing that product for market, and also manufacturing cigars under the firm name of Baker & Gunder. Besides his other property he owned considerable real estate in Lititz, where he erected several buildings. Religiously he was a member of the German Baptist Church, and politically was a supporter of the Republican party. In his family were three children: Jacob W., a horse dealer of Lancaster; Joseph W., the subject of this sketch; and Emma W., wife of Joseph W. Young, of Reading, Pennsylvania.

The boyhood and youth of Joseph W. Baker were passed upon a farm, and his education was received in the public schools. He began his business career at the age of eighteen years as a dealer in horses and cattle, and, after being alone for some time, he was associated with his brother in the same business for six years, the firm becoming among the largest horse buyers in the county. They imported some valuable stock and shipped principally to the Philadelphia and New York markets. Their headquarters were in Lititz. After the cessation of the partnership with his brother, Joseph W. Baker was alone in business, with headquarters at Ephrata until 1900, and handled as many as thirty-two carloads of stock annually. He has sold a large amount of stock to the farmers of Lancaster county. On Dec. 11, 1899, he took charge of the "Lititz Spring Hotel," which he is now so successfully conducting in connection with his stock business. The hotel is carried on in a most approved manner, and Mr. Baker is well adapted to fill the position of landlord, as he is a whole-souled, genial gentleman, well liked by all with whom he comes in contact. He continues to handle stock on his own account, as well as on commission, and is numbered among the most progressive and public-spirited men of Lititz. In his political views he is a Republican.

Mr. Baker was married, in 1873, to Miss Elizabeth A. Becker, who was born one mile south of Mt. Hope, Lancaster county, and is a daughter of Michael and Anna (Nauman) Becker. To them have been born three children: (1) Abram Joseph W., born Nov. 14, 1875, was educated at Cornell University, and was first employed as private secretary at the Pennsylvania working home for blind men at Philadelphia. Later he was in the office of L. B. Paxson, a superintendent of motive power and rolling equipment for the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, but he is now engaged in the wholesale and retail grain and flour business at Reading. (2) Anna M. and (3) Kathryn M., both at home, are graduates of the Millersville State Normal School, where their mother was also educated. The family is one of prominence in the community where they reside, and its members stand high socially.

JACOB W. GRUEL traces his ancestry back to Germany, but his immediate ancestors have been identified with the business life of Lancaster. He is a son of Samuel F. and Anna (Franciscus) Gruel, and his occupation, that of confectioner and manufacturer of ice cream, is but a continuation of the business inaugurated by his paternal grandfather, Jacob Gruel, who with his wife, Jacobenia (Swartz) Gruel, came from Germany and started the pioneer candy and ice cream industry of Lancaster. Mr. Gruel's maternal grandparents, John and Susan (Lutz) Franciscus, were of Lancaster, the former one of the pioneer railroad engineers of the county, employed for a time on the old State road. He, too, had spent his youth in the candy business, and after leaving the State road conducted a popular and paying tavern. He was well known, and a genial highly respected citizen.

Samuel F. Gruel, the father of Jacob W., was born in Harrisburg, and his wife was a native of Lancaster. He was a butcher by trade, but was for some years engaged in the ice business with only indifferent success, however. During the Civil war he served in the 79th Pa. Vols. He lived in Lancaster city from boyhood to the time of his death, in 1901, at the age of sixty-five. His wife died in 1900, aged sixty years. They were the parents of the following children: Christie, wife of D. H. Potts, an iron manufacturer of Lancaster; Jacob W.; Harry, living in Lancaster; Samuel, who died at the age of thirty-six; Jacobenia, living in Lancaster; John, in the ice business in Lancaster; Mary, living in Lancaster; and Walter, in the ice business in Lancaster.

When thirteen years old Jacob W. Gruel began to learn the confectionery business under his grandfather Gruel, with whom he remained until the latter's death. He then continued in business with his grandmother for a few years, coming to his present store in 1885. He has been very successful, and caters to the most exacting element in the town. But his interests are by no means centered in this line, for he is a director in the Conestoga Building & Loan Association, and is connected with various social and business affairs. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics is independent.

In 1878 was solemnized, in Lancaster, the marriage of Mr. Gruel and Mary Goodman, daughter of Jacob K. Goodman, a farmer of Lancaster county, who married a Sweeney. Mrs. Gruel was born in Mt. Joy, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Gruel have had two children: Edith, who died in 1899, at the age of eighteen; and Mary, who is living at home.

WELSH BROTHERS. To instruct as well as to amuse has been the object, for the past twelve years of the firm of native Lancaster citizens known as Welsh Brothers, the owners and operators of a popular circus. Col. Michael Henry Welsh and John Thomas Welsh are the members of the firm, and deserve the credit of conducting one of the most popular amusements of the locality, and of overcoming difficulties which would long ago have disheartened two less energetic and progressive men.

George Welsh, the father of these brothers, came to this country with his wife from Ireland, and settled in Easton, Pa., but remained there only a few months, coming later to Lancaster, where his death occurred. The mother still survives, and owns to a pardonable pride in her sons, who share their prosperity with her. The family consisted of four children: Mary, now deceased, was the wife of Isaac Rinehart, of Harrisburg; Michael H. and John T. are now in the circus business; George, Jr., is treasurer of his brothers' enterprise.

MICHAEL HENRY WELSH, who is generally known as Col. Welsh, and who is the manager of the fine show of which he and his brother are equal owners, was born in Lancaster Nov. 27, 1866, and was educated in the public schools, leaving school at the age of eleven years to go to work in the cotton mills. After three years of faithful work he, in association with his brother John, engaged in the huckster business.

JOHN THOMAS WELSH, who is just as active and as well known in connection with the circus, and who is the general agent as well as half owner, was born in Lancaster on Christmas Eve, 1861, and after attending the public schools for less than three years entered one of the cotton mills, as his brother had done. Both boys remained in the mill about the same length of time, and both were equally in earnest when they entered into the huckster business, which they conducted until when, at the suggestion of Col. Michael Welsh, who had long cherished the idea of becoming proprietor of a circus, they embarked in the show business.

The outfit at the beginning was not very imposing, consisting of one horse and one wagon, but by the second season the firm was able to put forth a sixteen-horse show, and by the third season prosperity had enabled them to open up with forty-eight horses. The fourth season saw them so well established that they sold their old belongings and organized a railroad circus, and have ever since traveled in that manner. During the season of 1899-1900, they owned and managed the John P. Harris "Uncle Tom's Cabin" show, and Col. Robinson's "Old Southern Life" Company, and introduced the novelty of producing "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as a tent show, playing also successfully "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." During 1900 they performed through the States of Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and New Jersey, using ten cars for transportation, carrying 165 people and ninety horses, a most wonderful growth, surely, considering the modest and unpretentious manner in which these young and enterprising Lancaster lads started upon their career.

However, 1901 found them with a larger and more comprehensive show, which includes a menagerie of fourteen cages, and with a tent capacity of 4,000, and an itineracy which takes them through Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Canada, Ohio, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina. The proudest monuments to the memory of the Welsh Brothers lie in their charities. For four years they have made it a practice to close their season by making a gift to the Soup House fund, of their native city, of the whole proceeds of both day and evening, and this has amounted to the sum of $2,000, which has been publicly and gratefully acknowledged by the mayor. At the time of the great mine disaster, in Pittston, Pa., the circus was performing in that section, and gave a benefit to the orphans and widows of the victims, a type of the substantial kind of charity which illustrates the character of Welsh Brothers.

Both brothers, who illustrate in their lives, a most beautiful fraternal feeling, are members of the Benevolent Order of Elks; both belong to St. Mary's Catholic Church of Lancaster. Neither of them has ever indulged in intoxicating drink, and both are united in providing every comfort for their devoted and beloved mother. They are not only examples of true manliness, but they are excellent business men, and cater to only that kind of public which is pleased with clean and amusing entertainment, a special feature being the pleasing of children. These young men have made for themselves a record which makes Lancaster proud to own them as her sons.

MICHAEL F. RUSSELL. Mr. Russell, although an American by birth, and intensely loyal to the government under which he was born, is of Irish parentage and descent. The country has no truer sons than these Irish-Americans, whose love of freedom, born within them, is co-existent with their devotion to duty and their fidelity to the flag. Children of centuries of oppression, they are ready to offer their lives a willing sacrifice upon the altar of the land of their birth. Their blood has wet the soil of many a southern battlefield, and when they fall their wounds are rarely found in the back. It is to this class that Mr. Russell belongs. He was born in Marietta, Pa., May 7, 1858. His father was christened Thomas, and his mother, before marriage, was Bridget Kelly.

In order to have a correct comprehension of the story of his own life, some account of his family should be given. Thomas Russell was born in Killinaboy, County Clare, Ireland, the son of James Russell, a peasant farmer of the same place. He emigrated to America while yet a young man and made his home in Marietta, Pa., as early as 1843. His wife, Bridget, was the daughter of Patrick and Mary (Connors) Kelly, both of whom remained in the land where they were born, Mr. Kelly having a small tenant's holding of land. Thomas and Bridget (Kelly) Russell were married in Ireland and the wife preceded her husband to America by some ten months.

To the parents of Michael F. Russell were born seven children: James, born Dec. 28, 1851, died March 23, 1870; Mary; John; Michael F.; Thomas; Catherine and Anna. James, Mary, Thomas and Anna died unmarried. John lives at Columbia, and is a freight conductor in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Catherine is the wife of Samuel Libhart, a flagman in the employ of the same corporation. The elder Russell died April 1, 1872, at the age of fifty-nine years; by occupation he was a furnace man. Mrs. Russell, the mother of Michael F., was born in November, 1822. She is still living, and since 1888 has made her home with her son in Columbia.

Mr. Russell was married June 12, 1894, to Miss Marcella F. Tyson, the marriage having resulted in the birth of four children, Thomas J., John M., Mary and Catherine R. Mrs. Russell was born in Wrightsville, her parents being John Tyson and Susanna Mooney. Her father was born in Maryland in February, 1831, and her mother in Ireland, in March, 1833. She is the fourth of seven children; her eldest sister, Margaret, died unmarried, as did also the first born son, Thomas; three other sisters, Anna M., Agnes and Emma, are unmarried; John, the youngest brother, is likewise unmarried.

Mr. Russell's life, while it cannot be called eventful, has been a useful and honored one. He began battling with the world at the early age of twelve years, when he found employment in the mines. For five years he followed this toilsome pursuit, and while yet a boy, barely seventeen years old, began the hard work of a laborer in a furnace. In both positions he acquitted himself well, as he has done in every relation of life. He spent eleven years at the furnace, and then began work with the Pennsylvania Railway, as a brakeman. For six years he filled this position, for three years he was a flagman, was then promoted to be conductor, and is still discharging the perplexing and responsible duties of that post. He possesses a combination of qualities well adapted for such a task; affable and courteous toward the company's patrons, he is inflexible in his obedience to and enforcement of discipline, and scrupulously faithful in his discharge of every obligation.

Since 1888 Mr. Russell has resided in Columbia. Both himself and family are devout, practical Catholics. In politics he places patriotism before partisanship, and votes in accordance with the dictates of his own conscience and judgment. He belongs to the O. of R. C. and the Relief Association.

HON. DAVID PORTER ROSENMILLER (deceased), ex-district attorney, ex-assemblyman and ex-mayor of Lancaster, came of good sturdy German ancestry.

Lewis Rosenmiller, grandfather of David P., was born at sea while his parents were on their way to America from Germany, and their son (the father of the subject proper of this sketch), Rev. D. P. Rosenmiller, was born in York, Pa., and he became a prominent Lutheran minister. His first pastoral work was in North Carolina; his next at Newville, Cumberland Co., Pa., and from there he proceeded to Dayton, Ohio, thence after a sojourn, to Hanover, York county, and from that place to Lancaster, arriving in that city in the fall of 1857. While a resident of that city he was president of the Lancaster County Bible Society for many years, and no more familiar figure could be found among the clergy of Lancaster. Rev. D. P. Rosenmiller married Miss Eliza Sheffer, daughter of the late Judge Sheffer, of York Springs, Pa., who at one time was a member of Congress. To this union seven children were born, three of whom are yet living: Misses Rebecca and Louisa, both living in the family home on North Duke street; and Rev. George F., of the Episcopal Church, his first charge having been at Montoursville, his second at Niagara Falls, and his present one at McKeesport, Allegheny Co., Pa. The father of this family was called from earth in 1880.

David P. Rosenmiller was born March 21, 1841, in Dayton, Ohio, and received his education for the most part at the schools of Lancaster, graduating from the Boys' High School, after which he attended Franklin and Marshall College, leaving that institution when in the junior class, in order to enter the service of his country.

On March 13, 1862, Mr. Rosenmiller was commissioned as fourth master in the gunboat service, Mississippi squadron, under First Flag Officer Foote. While on the U. S. S. "Essex" in 1862 he ran the batteries at Vicksburg; then proceeded down the river to New Orleans, and, after leave of absence, during which he visited Lancaster, Pa., he was promoted to the rank of ensign in the U. S. Navy, reporting to Admiral Porter on the Flagship "Black Hawk," on which he served till toward the close of the war. He was then given command of the S. S. "Alexandria," cruising on that vessel until the termination of hostilities, and having almost daily encounters with the Rebels.

Mr. Rosenmiller's naval experience may be briefly summed up as follows: Commissioned fourth master, March 13, 1862, in the U. S. Gunboat flotilla, by Flag Officer A. H. Foote; promoted to second master, in the same service, July 1, 1862, Flag officer C. H. Davis; commissioned by the Department as acting ensign in the U. S. Navy, for duty in the Mississippi squadron, Nov. 12, 1862; promoted to acting master in the same service Aug. 18, 1863, by Rear Admiral David B. Porter (that distinguished admiral, by the way, having been a cousin of D. P. Rosenmiller's father, the Admiral's aunt having married the latter's grandfather, Lewis Rosenmiller). The principal engagements in which D. P. Rosenmiller took part were: The attack on the Rebel ram "Arkansas," under the Vicksburg batteries at Baton Rouge; the destruction of the ram "Arkansas"; bombardment of Port Hudson; at Arkansas post and Haines Bluffs, and almost daily—some days hourly—in engagements when commanding the U. S. S. "Alexandria." He was honorably discharged at New Orleans, Nov. 5, 1865, by reason of the close of the war. Such is the record, in brief, of the part taken in the war of the Rebellion by as gallant a sailor as ever commanded a gun. As a matter of justice—and a thing to be proud of—Mr. Rosenmiller received a bounty of $600 from the U. S. Government for the part he took in the affair with the Rebel ram "Arkansas."

The war ended, Mr. Rosenmiller returned to Lancaster and entered the office of Hon. J. B. Livingston as a law student. After reading there for a time, he entered the office of the late Hon. A. Herr Smith, where he completed his studies, and in 1868 he was admitted to practice in the Supreme and Superior Courts. A staunch Republican in politics, standing well professionally, and commanding great personal strength, Mr. Rosenmiller was elected district attorney of Lancaster county, and not long after the expiration of his term as prosecuting attorney, he was elected to the legislature from the city district, serving two terms, 1875 and 1876. After his legislature experience, he was elected mayor of Lancaster by the Republicans, serving for two years, but after his retirement from the mayoralty, he took no active part in politics, but devoted himself assiduously to the practice of his profession, until his death May 3, 1891. He was a member of the G. A. R., of the Loyal Legion, and of Ireland City Lodge, No. 88, K. of P. In religion he was a Lutheran, belonging to Trinity Church.

JACOB HALBACH. Among the citizens of Lancaster who have been conspicuous, both socially and politically, in that city, from early manhood, is Jacob Halbach, alderman from the Second ward.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Halbach was John P. Halbach, a native of Germany, who located in Lancaster on coming to the New World and acquired considerable property here, becoming a substantial and highly respected citizen. His son, Gottlieb, the father of Jacob, was brought to America by his parents when he was only two years old, having been born in Reimsheid, Prussia. At an early age, he became an apprentice to the shoe-making trade, and on attaining his majority carried on the boot and shoe trade successfully for many years, passing out of life when about fifty-three. He was a devout member of the Reformed Church. Gottlieb Halbach married Miss Mary Wilhelm, a native of Lancaster, daughter of John Wilhelm, one of the pioneers of the city. To this union seven children were born, one of whom, William A., was killed while serving in Co. C, 89th Pa. Vols., at the first battle of Perryville, during the war of the Rebellion. Two daughters, Mary and Emma, live in the old family home in East Orange street, Lancaster. The mother, who was a pious and deeply loved woman, died in 1851.

Jacob Halbach, now serving his third term as alderman of the Second ward of Lancaster, was educated in the public schools of the city, attending until he reached the age of thirteen, when, after the death of his mother, he entered a grocery store. In 1854 he became an apprentice at smithing at the Lancaster Locomotive Works, where he remained until those works suspended operations, when he went to Philadelphia, securing employment in the establishment of I. P. Morris & Co. After working at other points he returned to Lancaster and again found employment in the Locomotive Works, where he remained until the breaking out of the Civil war.

Mr. Halbach testified to his courage and patriotism by enlisting in Co. H, 122d Regiment, Pa. Vols., for a nine-months' term, and during that time participated in the great battles of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, as well as in minor engagements, and was honorably mustered out, by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment. In 1864, again enlisting, he was assigned to Co. C, 197th P. V. I., as first sergeant, and was sent to Rock Island, Ill., where he was engaged in guard service until the close of the war.

Returning to private life, Mr. Halbach again took up his work in his old situation, and after pursuing various other enterprises for a time became employed in the Lancaster postoffice, where he remained two years. His next position was the important one of superintendent of the Lancaster Water works, and his knowledge of mechanics, coupled with his fidelity to duty, made him a notable good superintendent of this department. It was during his term of office that the new pumping station was erected.

In 1888 Mr. Halbach was elected alderman by the Republicans of the Second ward, and he was honored with a re-election in 1893, and again in February, 1898, being now engaged in filling his third term. Alderman Halbach issued the warrant for Ralph Wireback, the murderer of David B. Landis, the bank president; heard the case and returned it to court; and had the distinction of having the only murder case in the county that led to conviction and execution, for almost half a century, the ones immediately preceding it having been those of Anderson and Richards, away back in the fifties. For quite a time Alderman Halbach was secretary of the board of health of Lancaster. He was a member of the city executive committee of the Republican party, and at one time was chairman of same. Fraternally Mr. Halbach belongs to Lodge No. 476, F. & A. M., to the Royal Arch Masons, Knights Templar and Lodge of Perfection; and is a member of George H. Thomas Post, No. 84, G. A. R.

Mr. Halbach was married in early manhood to Miss Emma J. St. Clair, a native of Lancaster county, and to this union the following children were born: Harry L., a tinsmith; Charles, a machinist; J. Howard, a plumber, now in Co. F, 3d U. S. Infantry, stationed on the island of Luzon (he had previously served in the Spanish-American war, landing with Gen. Miles in Porto Rico); George Perry, an apprentice machinist; Frank, a stenographer and typewriter; and Clarence, at school.

Mr. Halbach is a member of the Reformed Church. In every trust confided to him, private and public, from his thirteen years of faithful superintendence of the water department, down to the least important position entrusted to him, he has proved zealous and conscientious, winning the high esteem not only of the people of his ward, but of the entire community. His life record is an enviable one.

JOHN B. SMUCKER was born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, Nov. 20, 1855, a son of John and Magdalena (Blank) Smucker, and a grandson of David and Mary (Lapp) Smucker, and he is now one of the prominent and popular citizens of Earl township.

John Smucker, the father of John B., was born Oct. 3, 1821, and died Feb. 8, 1889. He was married Jan. 12, 1843, to Miss Magdalena Blank, who was born April 12, 1823, a daughter of John Blank. They had the following family: David B., born July 27, 1844, is a farmer residing in Sadsbury township, married Elizabeth Reno, of Leacock township; Eli, born March 16, 1847, died Oct. 23, 1868; Lydia, born March 31, 1850, married Eli Stoltzfus, and is now deceased; Fannie, born Oct. 28, 1852, is the wife of Jacob Kauffman, of Leacock township; John B.; Mary, born Dec. 10, 1857, is the wife of Eli Kauffman, of Leacock township; Magdalena, born Nov. 17, 1860, married Amos Lapp, of Leacock township; and Amos B., born Oct. 12, 1863, married Miss Sallie P. Petersheim, and is a farmer in Chester county. John Smucker and his wife spent their lives in Leacock township, where he was known as one of the most capable and successful farmers of that section. He owned a farm of seventy-five acres, and was an active and devoted member of the Amish Church. Mr. Smucker was a member of the Leacock township school board, and was a man of character and standing.

John B. Smucker, whose name introduces this article, was reared on the farm in Leacock township, where he was born, and he was educated in the public schools. Remaining at home until he was twenty-five, he was married Jan. 4, 1881, to Miss Barbara Z. Beiler, who died June 29, 1883, at the early age of twenty-four years, two months and twenty-nine days. The second marriage of Mr. Smucker occurred Nov. 19, 1896, when Miss Bena Stoltzfus became his wife. To this union has come one child, Elizabeth E.

Mr. Smucker has made farming his vocation, and after his second marriage he removed from his home in Leacock township, to the Stoltzfus Home in Earl township. He owns the Smucker homestead in Leacock township, and is widely known as one of the progressive and up-to-date men of Lancaster county. Both himself and wife belong to the Amish Church, and the family are among the county's most worthy and respected people. Mr. Smucker is a director of the Amish Insurance Co., of Lancaster county. He has a fine steam threshing outfit, and when the threshing season is over, he works at steam rock drilling, wood sawing, fodder shredding, etc.

WILLIAM D. FINK, M. D., physician and surgeon of Denver, Lancaster county, was born Feb. 12, 1854, at Virginville, Berks Co., Pa., son of Abraham and Mary (Leshner) Fink, his paternal and maternal ancestry both being German, the families having long been known for business integrity and agricultural success.

Peter Fink, grandfather of Dr. Fink, was a farmer and later a hotel-keeper at Hamburg, Berks county, well-known and respected. His son, Abraham, was a farmer and merchant, first at Hamburg, later at Virginville, dying in 1900, at the age of seventy-seven years. His widow still survives at the age of seventy-four years. The five children born to Abraham and Mary (Leshner) Fink were: Alfred, a farmer and dairyman at Hamburg; Jonathan, a miller in Berks county; William D., of this sketch; Albert, a carpenter, in Reading; and Peter, a machinist in Philadelphia.

Dr. Fink was a farmer lad until his thirteenth year, obtaining his education in the public schools. He then became a clerk in his father's store, at Virginville, and while there attended the Keystone State Normal school, Kutztown, having previously spent one session in Freeland College. By the time he had reached his twenty-first year, the young man had made up his mind to become a physician, and with this end in view, entered the office of Dr. J. B. Pattinger, of Hamburg. In the fall of 1874, he entered Jefferson Medical College, graduating in 1878, as a regular practitioner. Dr. Fink then located at New Jerusalem, Berks county, in May, 1878, remaining in that village until the following September, when he removed to Adamstown, Lancaster county, where he lived for ten years and practiced through that locality. In 1888 he came to Denver, Pa., where he has been very successful in his practice, and where he is ranked among the leading physicians of this part of the county. His office is equipped with all modern appliances including a static machine and X-Ray combined, also a Hot Air Apparatus, both for the treatment of chronic diseases which cannot be reached by drugs.

In 1893 Dr. Fink engaged in the cigar manufacturing business, continuing until 1898. He recently served as chairman of the trustees in the erection of a large silk mill at Denver, which has no superior in structure and equipment in the United States, and which is now successfully running to its full capacity.

Fraternally Dr. Fink is connected with Ephrata Lodge, No. 406, I. O. O. F., Circle No. 27, Brotherhood of the Union, at Reamstown; and the Berks County Medical Society, and the State Medical Association, contributing to the medical literature throughout the State, notably to the Medical World. He is one of the leading Democrats in the township, was one of the re-organizers of Adamstown, and he served three years as a member of its council, and has been a member of the county committee, and delegate to convention. He was one of the prominent factors in the admission of Denver as a borough, and was elected its first burgess. Dr. Fink has always been identified with progress wherever located, both in public affairs as well as in his profession. He is capable, generous and public-spirited.

In 1882 Dr. Fink was married to Miss Mary E. Lenhart, of Berks county, and four children have been born to this union: Raymond; Mable, deceased; Florence; and Agnes. The family belongs to the Reformed Church, but Dr. Fink was reared a Lutheran and is still attached to that religious body.

WILLIAM R. RISK, one of the better known and popular farmers of Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in East Drumore township, March 23, 1842, a son of William C. and Mary Jane (Reed) Risk, both natives of this county.

Robert Risk, his grandfather, was a native of Ireland; as was also his wife, Margaret McFarland. They located near Quarryville, where he was a farmer and blacksmith, and where he died. His wife died in the home of her son, William C. They had the following family: John, who died at the home of his parents, unmarried, as did his brothers Robert and David; James, who was born in Eden, but who, after marrying Frances Moore, entered into a mercantile business at Colerain, and later moved to Buck, in West Drumore township, where he was engaged in business until his death (he left two sons, James, of Quarryville, and Robert, a writer on the Examiner, of Lancaster); and Elizabeth W., who was born at Quarryville, and died unmarried in the home of her brother, William C.

William C. Risk, was born in Eden township, July 22, 1808, and his wife, Mary Jane Reed, was born in Providence township, June 11, 1812. He purchased the home of his father-in-law in East Drumore township, where his life was passed. He also bought a farm adjoining that of his son, William R., and there erected fine buildings. His death occurred March 23, 1885; his widow passed to her rest Sept. 24, 1890. They were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and at a time when it was weak, his strong character and religious principles were important factors in its support. He was a strong Whig and Republican, and was always a determined opponent of slavery. To him and his wife were born five children: James and Margaret both died in childhood; Robert H., born in 1838, is single, and owns his father's old homestead; Elizabeth J., born in 1840, keeps the home of her brother Robert; and William R.

William R. Risk remained at home until the breaking out of the Civil War, when he enlisted in Co. G, 1st Lancaster County Battalion, the command being recruited from Lancaster county. They were stationed at Hagerstown, and participated in the battle of Antietam, and Mr. Risk did duty with his command until it was discharged.

In January, 1877, Mr. Risk was married to Miss Amelia Scott, who was born in Little Britain township, Sept. 7, 1849, a daughter of Robert and Martha J. (Gibson) Scott. Her parents settled where Mrs. Risk was born, and her brother, Robert Scott, still lives on the old homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Risk settled on their home, adjoining the old home of his father, and where he has made many valuable improvements. Mr. and Mrs. Risk are the parents of three living children: Hattie J., born May 22, 1880, received her education at the home school and in the high school at Quarryville; William Harvey, born Dec. 31, 1882, lives at home; and A. Leetie was born Sept. 6, 1885. Mr. Risk has always been identified with the old Republican party, but has never aspired to any office. All the family belong to the Presbyterian Church. He is one of the solid men of the community, and takes an active interest in the Church to which his parents were devoted.

WILLIAM KING. The King family, of which William King, of Kirk's Mills, is a worthy representative, is an old established one of Southern Lancaster county, and one which has consistently lived up to the precepts of the Quaker belief. It originated in England, but its descendants have long been among the most respected residents of this part of Pennsylvania.

William King was born Aug. 9, 1826, in Fulton township, a son of Lewis and Sarah (Thomas) King, the former of whom was a son of James King, who was both a farmer and a miller, in Fulton township, and was one of the first settlers after its organization, becoming a well-known and respected citizen; his children were: Thomas, Amos, Lewis, James, John, Pyle, Phebe and Ann. Lewis King was the father of five children: Thomas P.; William; Alfred, of Philadelphia, a mechanic; and Phebe and Edith, deceased. These children were all carefully reared and taught to observe the rules of the Society of Friends, and they were a family which exerted at all times an influence for good through the community.

William King has been a farmer through life, but now lives retired from activity. On March 5, 1846, he married Rebecca D. Reynolds, of Chester county, who was born Oct. 20, 1826, a daughter of Israel and Hannah (Stubbs) Reynolds, of Chester county, the family being of Welsh and English origin. Joseph Reynolds, her grandfather, was a native of Maryland, and there married Rachel Barnard, and then moved to Chester county, Pa.; they reared these children: Israel, Richard, Joseph, Jeremiah, Cyrus, Abia, Lydia, Susan, Lettice and Rebecca. Mrs. King was one of a family of five children born to her parents: Vincent, who lives in county, at the age of eighty-one years; Rachel B., who is the wife of Samuel B. Gatchell, of Chester county; Rebecca D., who is Mrs. King; Priscilla, who is the wife of Jonathan Pickering, of Oxford, Pa.; and Joseph, who died young.

The children born to William King and his estimable wife were two daughters: Sarah L. became a woman of more than usual prominence, a graduate of the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia, in 1883, a successful physician of this county, until her untimely death, in 1895; she was a woman of rare attainments and she left a vacancy that can never be filled either in her family or the community where she was much beloved. The second daughter, Hannah Ida, is the wife of John Evans, a machinist by trade, whose home is in Wilmington, Del., and who has two children, Marion Ellen and John E., Jr.

William King has always been known as an excellent citizen, has served as school director, and in former years was a leading agriculturist. Always opposed to slavery, since the Civil war he has turned his attention to the suppression of the slavery of intemperance, and cast his vote in 1900 in favor of the Prohibition candidate for the Presidential office. Mrs. King is a woman of rare qualities and Christian virtues, and in her solicitous care for the spiritual welfare of the community, has been a leader and a teacher in the Friends' First Day school at East Land Meeting house, for seventeen years. Both William King and wife are and long have been active in both religious and educational life in their vicinity, and they are universally held in high esteem.

CHRISTIAN MARTIN (deceased) was born in Earl township, where his life was spent, the greater part on the farm where his grandson, Isaac Martin, is now living. This farm, on which he located soon after his marriage, contains 150 acres, and is situated two miles northeast of New Holland. At the present time it bears the name of "Big Springs Farm," and is one of the notable places of the county. Most of its substantial and attractive improvements were made by its present occupant, who is known as "Springs Isaac."

Christian Martin married Magdalena Eby, and both lived to an advanced age. They had a family of eight children, of whom Daniel, Christian, Isaac and John are deceased; Elizabeth married John Sensenig; Annie married Henry Musser; Mary married John Groff; Lydia married Jacob Stauffer. All were members of the Mennonite Church.

John Martin, the father of Isaac, was born on the farm where that gentleman now lives, and there was reared and spent his life, following farming, and becoming one of the most successful men of his day. He bought farms for his sons Isaac and David. He married Annie Weaver, daughter of David and Christiana Weaver, both of Earl township, and she is still living, in her eighty-fifth year. The father died Sept. 28, 1887, when he was a little over seventy-six years old. He was a member of the Mennonite Church, as is his widow. They had a family of five children: David resides in Earl township; Magdalena is the widow of Peter Zimmerman, and lives in East Earl township; Isaac is mentioned below; Mary is the wife of Christian Zimmerman, and has her home in East Earl township; Anna married Joseph Sensinger.

Isaac Martin was born Jan. 25, 1842, on the farm where he has since made his home. He has always been a broad gauged and public-spirited man, and his influence in the community has been of the very best. He has kept fully abreast of the times, and is widely known as an intelligent and upright citizen, always ready to assist any good movement. For nine years he has been school director. He is a stockholder in the New Holland Bank, and is the owner of the old homestead, a farm of 150 acres, having also a half interest in Martin's Mill; a farm of fifty acres in Ephrata township also belongs to Mr. Martin, as well as property in New Holland and Cocalico. He also owns real estate in Philadelphia.

Mr. Martin was married Nov. 10, 1864, to Miss Annie Musser, who was born in Earl township March 14, 1845, a daughter of Martin and Mary (Weaver) Musser. To this union have come five children: Eli is a farmer and implement dealer of Earl township; John died unmarried; Isaac died unmarried; Sadac died Sept. 27, 1901, leaving a wife, Mrs. Lizzie (Nolt) Martin, and three children, Anna, Martha and Isaac; Mary died single. Mr. and Mrs. Martin are worthy and substantial people, and are highly esteemed members of the Old Mennonite Church.

L. R. AMBLER, one of the leading and substantial citizens as well as intelligent and representative men of Lancaster county, was born on the farm he now owns and occupies, in Martic township, June 24, 1864. His parents were Thomas E. and Mary J. (Boyd) Ambler, both now deceased.

Grandfather William Ambler was a native of Montgomery county, Pa., of mixed Welsh and English ancestry, and by trade was a weaver, attaining excellence in that line. He married Elizabeth Penrose, and they had a family of seven children: Adeline, who married James Smedley, of Fulton township; Penrose, a retired farmer of Fulton township; Owen, deceased; Thomas E., deceased; Edward and Ann, twins, the latter of whom married Aquilla B. Lamborn, a retired farmer of Little Britain township; and Edward, a cabinetmaker, who resides in Liberty Square, Pennsylvania.

Thomas E. Ambler, son of William, and father of L. R., was born in Montgomery county Dec. 12, 1823, and came to Lancaster county with his parents when but a child. In 1856 he was united in marriage to Mary J. Boyd, who was a daughter of William C. and Mary (Long) Boyd, of Drumore township, and to this marriage were born six children, all of whom, with the exception of L. R., of Martic township, died young.

L. R. Ambler had exceptional school advantages in the public schools of his locality, and is one of the most intelligent and progressive farmers of his township. His large estate, comprising 300 acres of excellent land, shows the sensible methods which he has employed in its cultivation and management.

Mr. Ambler was married, Dec. 15, 1886, to Miss Mary C. Long, of Drumore township, who was born Dec. 15, 1864, daughter of J. Harrison and Elizabeth S. (Harner) Long. Three children have come to this union: A. Levis, born July 18, 1890; Mabel Elizabeth, born Dec. 15, 1891; and Mary Clare, born Nov. 13, 1902.

Mr. Ambler is identified with much of the public life of the county, takes a great interest in educational matters, serving most efficiently as school director, and is financially interested in the Quarryville National Bank, being one of the directors. A worthy citizen, in the highest acceptance of the term, he is a true representative of his section of Lancaster county.

DAVID E. HERR, one of the leading farmers of Lancaster township, this county, belongs to one of the old and honored families of the State of Pennsylvania.

Henry Herr, the father of David E., was born June 1, 1821, in Lancaster township, near Millersville, and while still a young man began farming operations on the estate which is now the property of his son David E. All of his active life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He retired from active work in April, 1890, his death taking place in November of the same year. Henry Herr was a leading member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Mary Eshbach, and they became the parents of three children: Christian, a farmer and manager of a threshing machine, in Millersville; Henry, a farmer of Lancaster township; and David E.

David E. Herr first saw the light in the home which he now owns, Jan. 13, 1863. In the district schools he obtained an excellent education, and later followed in the footsteps of his worthy father, in the management of the farm. After his father's death he purchased the estate, and since then he has effectually demonstrated his ability as a farmer. His estate contains seventy-six acres, and is very valuable, being situated within one mile of the city of Lancaster, on the West, near the Columbia Pike road.

David E. Herr was married to Miss Fannie Huber, who was a daughter of Abram and Hettie Huber, and to this union three children were born: One child that died in infancy; and Hettie H. and Fannie M., both of whom are at home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Herr are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church.

ABRAHAM B. HARNISH, one of the enterprising farmer-citizens of East Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born in West Hempfield township, Nov. 30, 1849. His boyhood was passed in a manner similar to that of many sons of farmers, working upon the farm of his father and attending the public school of his district.

In 1874 Abraham B. Harnish decided to embark in life for himself, and removed to East Hempfield township, where he purchased his present desirable property and has since resided. This farm consists of fifty-three acres, and is devoted to general farming. The land is in a high state of cultivation, and the buildings are in excellent condition, testifying to his ability as a farmer and his thrift as an owner of property.

On Nov. 23, 1876, occurred the marriage of Abraham B. Harnish and Barbara Hiestand, a daughter of Jacob Hiestand, of Lancaster county, and to this union have been born: Clayton H. Hiestand, Abraham H. and Dora H., at home; and Ervin and Levi, deceased. Both Abraham B. Harnish and his worthy wife are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and enjoy a well-deserved popularity, not only in their religious connection, but also throughout the entire community. In their pleasant home, which is conveniently situated two miles west of Rohrerstown, they welcome their many friends and live lives which are examples to others, of honorable, upright, Christian people.

DAVID WANNER. The name of Wanner has been borne by a highly respected family of agriculturists in Lancaster county.

David Wanner, the gentleman whose name opens this biographical mention, is truly a fitting representative of the old Keystone stock, as will be found as the narrative of his life-career progresses. He was born near Pequea church, in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, July 7, 1847, a son of John and Barbara (Worst) Wanner, also natives of that township, and of Swiss origin.

John Wanner, who was a very prominent farmer in his day, served his fellow-citizens as a township official, and for three years was a school director. His death took place March 12, 1885, when he was seventy-one years of age, and that of his wife occurred in 1892, at the age of seventy, their remains being interred in Pequea church cemetery. They had been life-long Presbyterians, and the father had been a Republican in politics ever since the organization of the party. The four children born to John and Barbara Wanner were, in order of birth, as follows: Henry, a farmer in Salisbury township, married Emma Weiler; David, who is unmarried, is a retired farmer of Salisbury township; J. Alford, a farmer and a school director, married to Anna Eby; Samuel, likewise a farmer, is married to Sarata Seldomridge.

The paternal grandparents of David Wanner were David and Susannah (Garber) Wanner, the former of whom was a well-to-do farmer and died in 1861, when seventy-four years old, his wife dying in 1873, at the age of seventy-eight. They were devoted members of the Mennonite Church, and their remains were interred in Hays churchyard in Salisbury township. Their children were born in the following order: John, David, Jacob, Eliza (who died single at the age of thirty years), Isaac and Susannah (who was married to William Dague), all now deceased. The maternal grandfather, Henry Worst, was also a farmer and a native of Lancaster county, as was also his wife, whose maiden name was Kurtz.

David Wanner has never embarked upon the sea of matrimony. He made his home with his parents until they were called from earth, and then with his brother Samuel, continued to operate the home farm until it was partitioned in 1892, when his brother, J. Alford, took full possession, David having held an interest in it until that date. In the meantime, in 1865, David Wanner purchased a farm of 120 acres in another part of the township, one half mile north of Springville, which he rents out.

Mr. Wanner is a member of the Pequea Presbyterian Church, the precepts of which have been his guide through life. In politics he is a Republican, but he has always been too much engaged, however, with the management of his own affairs to care for office holding, and the result is that he has one of the best cultivated farms of its size in Salisbury township. He is a very public-spirited citizen, and is quite liberal in the contributions of his means toward the advancement of the township public improvements, in which he takes a deep interest, schools and roads receiving his special attention. To his efforts the township owes its progress in a large degree, and to his energy in promoting its interest, as much as to the prestige of his family name, is due his individual high standing in the community.

FRANK BARR SNAVELY, of No. 21 North Ann street, Lancaster, where he and his wife entertain in a most hospitable manner, is descended from one of the oldest and most influential families of Lancaster county.

Abraham Snavely, his grandfather, who was a Mennonite preacher in Pequea township, where he entered into rest at the age of eighty-six, was in his time one of the most conspicuous figures in Lancaster county, being the owner and manager of the Snavely Mill, three miles south of the city. This passed into control of his son, Benjamin Snavely, who was the father of Frank B.

Benjamin Snavely was a farmer and miller, and for years conducted the mill that had long been in his family. Coming to Lancaster, he became one of the pioneer cotton mill men of this city, being associated with Gideon W. Arnold, Francis Schroeder, and Christian Breneman in the ownership of No. 1 Cotton Mill. After ten years he disposed of his interest in this enterprise, and entered into partnership with the late Col. Brenner in the dry goods business; he also formed a partnership with the late Joseph Welchans in the leaf tobacco business. Bauman's tannery on West King street, in Lancaster, was bought by him, and turned over to his three sons, Benjamin, Jr., Abraham and Frank B. He married a Miss Eliza Barr, a daughter of Benjamin Barr, a notable farmer of Pequea. Mr. Snavely passed away in 1898, when eighty-six years old; his wife preceding him in 1896, when seventy-three years old. To them were born eight children, of whom only three survive: Benjamin, Jr.; Dr. H. B., physician; and Frank B., all of whom are in Lancaster.

Frank Barr Snavely was born on the old homestead in Pequea, Dec. 28, 1854, and received his education in the public schools of Pequea and Lancaster city. Leaving school, he entered into the tannery business as noted above, associated with his brothers, and continued in it with one brother as a partner until 1893. That year Mr. Snavely was sent to Chicago by M. S. Hershey, the millionaire engaged in the manufacture of caramels, to take charge of a branch of the big Lancaster concern. Mr. Snavely remained in the Chicago business for two and a half years, when it was removed to Bloomington, Ill., with him as its manager. The plant was sold in 1899, and Mr. Snavely returned to Lancaster to become the manager of the great creamery connected with the caramel works. The annual output of "Royal Butter" from this establishment—the finest butter on the market—has reached the enormous total of 500,000 pounds. The manufacture and sale of this vast product is under the direct management of our subject.

Mr. Snavely is a Republican in politics, and socially is connected with the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Snavely was married in November, 1881, to Miss Anna Elizabeth Eby, daughter of Simon J. Eby, for many years a hardware merchant of Mount Joy, but more recently associated with his son, C. L., in the baking business. Two sons were born of this union: Walter, who died in infancy; and Frank Clayton, who, after attending the Lancaster high school and Wade's Business College, accepted a clerical position with a wholesale linen house in New York city, where he now is.

H. F. YERGEY is treasurer and manager of the Columbia Wagon Company, at Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

ELIAS O. REITZEL has been for over a quarter of a century an employe of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, which he is now serving as conductor, and is one of the respected citizens of Columbia, where he has made his home since 1873.

Mr. Reitzel was born May 15, 1851, in Mountville, Lancaster county. His great-grandfather, the first of the family in America, came to this country from Holland with three sons, all of whom were unmarried at the time. Col. Joseph Reitzel, grandfather of Elias O., was a weaver by trade, came to America with his father, and located in West Hempfield township, Lancaster Co., Pa. In 1825 he settled in Mountville, Lancaster county. In early youth he learned the carpet weaver's trade, and in later years also that of miller, and he also followed farming and distilling. Toward the close of his life he embarked in business as a butcher, and continued in that line until his death, which occurred in 1867, when he was past eighty-four. He was distinguished for patriotism and personal courage, and was colonel in the war of 1812. While not a professing church member, he was a man whose standard of moral conduct was regulated by deep-seated Christian principles. Col. Reitzel was twice married. Among the twelve children born to the first union, that with Miss Boner, were: Joseph, John, Samuel, Henry, Peggy (Mrs. George Imhoff), and Betsey (Mrs. Edward McGlory). To Col. Reitzel's second marriage, with Elizabeth Mann, of Sunflower, Lancaster Co. (near Chester Co.), Pa., were born: Daniel, Harrison, Ephraim H. and Sarah. Daniel, now deceased, served as captain of Co. G, of a Pennsylvania Volunteer Regiment, during the Civil war, and was wounded in his country's service. Sarah is unmarried, and resides with her brother Ephraim. The others died before reaching mature years. Mrs. Elizabeth (Mann) Reitzel died June 15, 1893, at the same age as her husband; she was a member of the United Brethren denomination.

John Reitzel was born in Mountville, Lancaster county, and died there in 1851. He married Margaret Otto, who was born Oct. 5, 1825, in Berks county, Pa., and died Feb. 21, 1893, in Columbia. Her father, Henry Otto, of Berks county, settled in Manor township, this county, at an early day; he was a farmer by occupation. Mr. and Mrs. Reitzel were members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were Jacob, who is a farmer of Norton county, Kans.; Joseph, a railroad brakeman of Columbia; and Elias O. The mother married for her second husband William D. Mann, who also died long before her, passing away Oct. 24, 1868, at the age of fifty-five. Two children came to this union: Elizabeth, Mrs. John Good, of Lancaster, and Miss Mary Ann Mann, of Columbia, both of whom were born at Mountville.

Elias O. Reitzel was reared to farming, which he continued up to the age of seventeen, and subsequently, for several years, was employed in coal yards and tobacco warehouses in Mountville. On Sept. 10, 1873, he came to Columbia, as brakeman on the Pennsylvania railroad, with which he has ever since remained. In 1874 he became extra flagman and on April 9, 1888, regular flagman; on April 20, 1893, he was made extra conductor, and on March 28, 1896, was promoted to the position of regular conductor, the duties of which he has ably and faithfully discharged. Fraternally he is a member of the B. of R. T., and the Relief Department; also of the A. O. K. M. C.; and the Brotherhood of the Union, Liberty Circle, No. 23. His religious connection is with the Church of God. Mr. Reitzel is a Republican in politics. He is a member of the Columbia Fire Department.

Our subject was married Nov. 20, 1887, in Columbia, to Mrs. Catherine (Sherrick) Smith, who was born May 25, 1851, in Washington borough, this county. She first married John Smith, a plasterer and stone mason, and to that union was born one daughter, Mary E., who died in infancy. Two children have come to her union with Mr. Reitzel, Milton H. and Mary E.

Paul Sherrick, of Washington borough, Mrs. Reitzel's father, was a son of John and Elizabeth Sherrick, of Germany, who came to America, and were married in Lancaster county. He first married Margaret Vouliver, by whom he had: Jacob, now deceased; Lenah, widow of George Green, of Steelton, Pa.; Fanny, deceased; Mary, deceased; and John, an extensive farmer of Manor township. Mrs. Sherrick died March 29, 1845, aged thirty-five years. His second marriage was to Elizabeth Collins, also of Washington borough, whose parents, Samuel and Nancy (Hougentogler) Collins, were lifelong residents of Lancaster county, and to this marriage came children as follows: Henry, Anna, Susan, Samuel and Catherine, all deceased; David is a farmer of Washington borough; Ellen is the widow of Henry Hougentogler, of Columbia; Amanda married James Freeland, a contractor of Columbia; Paul is a farmer in Washington, Pa.; Caroline married John Philips, of Lebanon, Pa.; Lydia married Isaac Welsh, an ice merchant, of Columbia. The father died April 25, 1866, aged fifty-eight years. He was a pilot on the river during the season, and also engaged in farming. Mrs. Elizabeth Sherrick passed away Sept. 26, 1892, aged sixty-eight, at Columbia, where she was visiting a daughter. Both parents were members of the Church of God, and were widely known and beloved as good Christian people.

EPHRAIM WHITMEYER SHUE, the very popular proprietor of the "Kindig House," on North Prince street, is descended from an old Pennsylvania family, his great-grandfather having been among the early settlers who came to America from Germany.

The name of the grandfather also was John Shue, like that of the founder. He was born near White Oak, in this county, and married a Miss Motter, and their son, Jacob, became the father of Ephraim W. Shue.

Jacob Shue engaged in farming in this county. He married Priscilla Witmer, a daughter of William Witmer, a farmer of the same section. To this union were born nine children, eight of whom are living: Samuel F., who is in the cigar business near Newmanstown, this State; Harvey, a cigar maker; Jacob, who occupies a position in the Reading station of the Reading and Philadelphia railroad; Reuben, a building inspector in Peoria, Ill.; Ephraim W.; Albert, a builder, of Lakewood, N. J.; Alice, the wife of George W. Yetter, in the gas department in Philadelphia; and Emma, the youngest, is the wife of Rue McKelvy, a steam fitter and contractor, of Lakewood, New Jersey.

Ephraim W. Shue was born near Manheim, this county, in 1861, and was educated in the schools of his district, but left his search for education at the age of thirteen, although, as a matter of fact, he had commenced work, among neighboring farmers, as early as nine years. His career through boyhood, as well as through his more mature years, shows what may be accomplished by the American boy through industry, honesty and pluck. When other lads were at play in the evenings he learned cigar making, and during his boyhood years saved considerable money, earning it all by work on the farm, building fences and doing other work at night for the people of his neighborhood.

In 1892 he entered into the hotel business, buying a hotel property in Manheim, where he remained for three years. The Brooks High License law deprived him of his next license, and his next move, after having lost every dollar made in his first hotel venture, was to become head clerk in the "Summy House," in Manheim, where he remained for three years, and then came to the old "Franklin House," Lancaster, where he clerked for three years, and, in 1892 took possession of the old "Merrimac House," on North Prince street, changing the name to the "Kindig House" and rehabilitating the house as well as the name.

Mr. Shue is an ideal host, and understands the keeping of a hotel in first-class style. Soon after he took charge it became noted not only in this section but among traveling men all over the State for its excellent cuisine and first-class management. So popular did the place become that frequently Mr. Shue has been compelled to turn people away for lack of room. In 1898 he added to his other responsibilities by the purchase of the "City Hotel," on North Queen street, one of the finest hotel properties in the city. After renting this hotel for three years Mr. Shue purchased the adjoining property, and both buildings have been torn down. In their place has been erected the largest and best equipped hotel in the city, which Mr. Shue has named "The Wheatland," after Wheatlands, the home of the late President James Buchanan, which lies to the west of the city.

The marriage of Mr. Shue was to Miss Susan Frankfort, a daughter of Philip Frankfort, a contracting mason, living near Kissel Hill, this county, and five children have been added to the household: Frank, Harry, Scott, Charles and Ephraim W., Jr., all being students except the youngest. The family is connected with the Episcopal Church. Mr. Shue is liberal minded and believes in a moral life, and his contributions to all denominations are liberal. Fraternally Mr. Shue is popular and belongs to the Knights of the Golden Eagle; the Odd Fellows; the Junior Mechanics; the Knights of Malta; and the Patriotic Sons—the last and the Eagles being two new organizations which are attracting attention. His aged father makes his home with him, and no man in the community has been more devoted to family interests than Mr. Shue. Liberal at all times, with a pleasant greeting to all, with "a heart as big as his body," as is often remarked, Mr. Shue can boast of as many friends as any man who has ever lived in the city of Lancaster.

CLAYTON S. MELLINGER, cashier of the Mountville National Bank, at Mountville, Lancaster county, is a native of the town, born Aug. 10, 1874, a son of Abraham H. and Elizabeth R. (Shellenberger) Mellinger of Manor township.

Abraham Mellinger was born on the old homestead in Manor township, Feb. 21, 1837, came to Mountville in 1874, and engaged in the tobacco trade in partnership with George S. Roland for several years, but the last ten years of his life were passed in retirement, although he had his Manor township farm kept under cultivation until the end. Abraham Mellinger was a member of the Mennonite Church, and in this faith he passed away at Mountville, May 10, 1889; his widow still has her home in Mountville and of her pedigree further mention will be made near the close of this review. To Abraham and Elizabeth R. (Shellenberger) Mellinger were born five children, viz.: Edward, deceased; Clayton S., whose name opens this biographical memoir; Anna, deceased; Margaret, at home; and Charles, deceased.

The Mellinger family descends from Benedict Mellinger, a native of Southern Germany, who settled in Manor township, Lancaster county, in 1746—the original farm being a part of the present estate. Christian Mellinger, grandfather of Clayton S., came with his son Abraham from Manor township, where he lived in retirement until his death, in 1878, at the age of ninety-one years. Christian Mellinger was twice married. To his first union was born, John, who died a prominent member of the Episcopal Church in Columbia, in February, 1900. To the second marriage of Christian Mellinger were born the following children: Mary, married to John Seitz, Sr., of Rohrerstown, and retired; Barbara, widow of Jacob Gerher, of Newtown; Susannah, widow of Reuben Garber, of Salunga; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Lemuel Garber; Martha, married to Andrew L. Sheningberger, a farmer of Glen Manor; Anna, widow of John Hershey; David, living retired in Manor township; Rev. Daniel, a Mennonite minister in Winchester, Va.; and Abraham, deceased father of Clayton S. Mellinger.

The first of the Shellenberger family, Ulrick Shellenberger, came to West Hempfield township from the southern part of Germany in 1726, and engaged in farming. Mrs. Elizabeth R. (Shellenberger) Mellinger was born in this township, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rohrer) Shellenberger, who both died on the old homestead. The father was a farmer, and was sixty-seven years of age at the time of his death in 1878, and the mother died in 1886, aged eighty-one years, both in the faith of the Dunkard (German Baptist) Church, and their remains were interred in the Habecker church cemetery. The children born to the union of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rohrer) Shellenberger were, in the order of birth, as follows: Susannah, still single, and living on the old farm; Daniel, deceased; Andrew, a farmer in West Hempfield township; Abra, who died in 1898; Jacob, a physician in active practice at Germantown; Elizabeth R., widow of Abraham H. Mellinger; Sarah, who died young; and Mary, who was married to Amos N. Lehman, and who died in 1878. The paternal ancestors, Andrew and Elizabeth (Forry) Shellenberger, came from Switzerland, and were early settlers in West Hempfield township, where they followed farming; the maternal grandparents Abraham and Elizabeth (Eby) Rohrer, of Lancaster county, both died in Manor township.

Clayton S. Mellinger, who is still an unmarried man, attended the Huntingdon and the Millersville Normal schools until eighteen years of age, when he entered the Lancaster Trust Co.'s office as check clerk, and when he left the institution eight years later was keeper of the general ledger. He then came to Mountville, to accept his present responsible position.

In politics Mr. Mellinger has always been a consistent Republican, but has never been particularly active in party affairs, his own responsible situations having kept him pretty well occupied, and the handling of his father's estate has but added to his cares. Mr. Mellinger makes his home with his mother, and no family in Mountville is held in higher esteem by the residents than that of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Mellinger.

EDWARD L. HEISEY was born on the old Heisey homestead, in West Donegal township, Sept. 16, 1868, a son of Jacob W. Heisey, whose life and family history are presented in another place.

Edward L. Heisey was married Oct. 9, 1890, in Rapho township, to Miss Anna M. Erb. Their marriage was blessed by the birth of three children: Ella E.; Minnie M., now deceased; and Chester E., born April 24, 1901.

Mrs. Anna M. (Erb) Heisey was born in East Donegal township, the charming and estimable daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Mumma) Erb, natives of Lancaster and Dauphin counties, respectively. Her father, who was a farmer, died Dec. 17, 1885, at the age of sixty years. His remains were put to rest in the Graybill burying grounds. Her mother, who was born in 1830, is now living in East Hempfield township. They were members of the Mennonite Church. Seven children were born to them: John M., a farmer in West Hempfield township; Daniel, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of D. S. Metzler, a farmer in Rapho township; Fanny, deceased; Harry, a farmer in West Donegal township; Mary, the wife of Jacob E. Brubaker, a farmer in East Donegal township; and Anna, whose marriage is noted in the preceding paragraph.

John Erb, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Anna Heisey, lived and died in Lancaster county. Her maternal grandparents were John and Anna (Brubaker) Mumma, also natives of Lancaster county.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Elizabeth Erb contracted a second marriage with Benjamin B. Kauffman, now a retired farmer in East Hempfield township.

Edward L. Heisey remained at home with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-two years, when he struck out for himself, and began by working by the day in Rapho township. After two years of this he bought a small farm, which he tilled for four years. His next step was to remove to Mt. Joy borough, where he spent a year, and then came back to West Donegal township to engage in farming, at the same time taking up stone quarrying. In the spring of 1900, in company with four brothers, he formed a partnership for burning lime, under the name of the High C Lime Co. They have already secured a flattering patronage, and with the improvements contemplated in their business will soon take very front rank in their line. Since the establishment of the Rural Free Delivery system, Mr. Heisey has been mail carrier from the Rheems postoffice.

Mr. Heisey belongs to the Mennonite Church, and takes an independent stand in politics. He is prominent and thrifty, has hosts of friends, and gives every promise of a brilliant career.

AARON R. LUTZ, one of the Pennsylvania Railway Company's most capable and trustworthy engineers, was born in Newtown, Lancaster county, Nov. 25, 1854, being the fifth of a family of twelve children. His father's name was Reuben, and his paternal grandfather's was Jacob. Both were carpenters and both are deceased. Jacob Lutz died in 1863, and Reuben in 1890, at the age of sixty-three. Mr. Lutz's mother was Sarah Hoffman, daughter of Jacob Hoffman, a farmer of Silver Spring, in Lancaster county, who died in 1860, in his sixty-sixth year. Two years after the death of her husband Mrs. Reuben Lutz came to Columbia, where she passed the closing years of her long and useful life, entering into rest in November, 1899, having passed the Scriptural limit of three score years and ten. Both parents were members of the Church of United Brethren, and sleep in the cemetery of that denomination at Mountville.

The brothers and sisters of Mr. Lutz were as follows: Mary, who died in childhood; Jacob and John, carpenters living in Columbia; Barbie, wife of Henry Doll, of York, Pa.; Mary (2), who married Jacob Sailer, of Columbia; Sarah, now Mrs. Burchfield, of the same place; Isabella, whose husband, Isaiah Cain, is a farmer of West Hempfield; Emma, the wife of Christ Herr, a shoemaker of Millersville; Elizabeth, Mrs. Balaam Brooks, whose husband is a miller living at Steelton; Harry, whose home is in York; and Alice, who became the wife of Christ Rotkey, a farmer of West Hempfield.

Mr. Lutz was reared upon a farm until he was eighteen years old, when he served an apprenticeship to the painter's trade. This pursuit he followed for six years. In 1874 he came to Columbia, and there entered the Pennsylvania Company's service as a fireman. Six years later he was promoted to be an engineer, and still has his hand on the throttle. He enjoys the confidence of his superiors, the friendship of his associates and the esteem of the community in which he resides. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. His political creed is Democratic; in religious faith he is a Lutheran, being a member of St. John's Church.

On August 30, 1876, Mr. Lutz was united in marriage to Miss Ellen A. Sweeney, daughter of John J. and Martha A. Sweeney, of Columbia. Her father is also a Pennsylvania engineer, and a sketch of his life may be found on another page in this volume. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lutz: Robert Reginald, Maud M., James C., Madge M., Lena L., Roderick D., Isabella K. and Ella Marie. R. Reginald died before reaching the age of four years. The others are at home.

SAMUEL P. WHITESIDE, a farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in the township in which his active and useful life is passing, in April, 1864, a son of James and Elizabeth (Irwin) Whiteside.

James Whiteside was also born in Colerain township in September, 1825, and Elizabeth Irwin was born in Honeybrook in 1827. They were married in 1855, and settled on his father's farm. There they reared their family, and both died on this old homestead. He passed away Jan. 20, 1894, and his widow in March, 1896. They were Presbyterians in their religion, while in politics he was a staunch Democrat. Four sons survived their death. (1) John W., born in 1858, married Miss Mary Jones, and settled on the John Whiteside farm, which was owned at one time by his uncle. They have one son, Frederick.

(2) Charles Whiteside, born in April, 1860, married Miss Carrie Turner, of Colerain township, and lived on the old Robert Whiteside homestead. Three children, Mary, Walter and Dora, have come to them, all born in Little Britain township.

(3) William Whiteside, born in May, 1866, is a merchant of Little Britain, and became the father of eight children: Violet; Joseph; William; Edgar; Frank; Susan; Francis E., born March, 1901, and died in August, 1901; and David M., born Sept. 6, 1902.

(4) Samuel P. Whiteside was educated in the Union high school, and then entered upon his life as a farmer. He was married Dec. 21, 1886, to Anna M., a daughter of James and Mary (Davis) Turner, born in August, 1867, in Colerain township; she was given a public school education, and attended the high school at Oxford. Mr. Turner died in Oxford in 1885, and his widow resides with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Whiteside. There were eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Turner.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Whiteside settled on the farm which his father and Robert Whiteside had purchased from John Crawford some years before the marriage of Samuel P.; fine buildings had been erected and the place brought into first-class condition. Mr. Whiteside has also greatly improved this farm since it came into his possession.

Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside are the parents of eleven children: Francis E. Whiteside, Samuel E. and William D. all died in childhood; James T. Whiteside and Robert I., twins, born Aug. 20, 1888; Abbie E., born March 30, 1890; Laura D., born March 10, 1894; Helen, born June 29, 1895; Louisa W., born Dec. 19, 1897; Caroline, born April 29, 1899; Norman E., born Oct. 13, 1902.

Samuel P. Whiteside has always been a Democrat, and with his wife belongs to the Presbyterian Church. The Whitesides are an old-time Colerain family, and the men are of solid worth in the community. The present representatives sustain the honor of the family name, and their useful and well-ordered lives are of value in the community.

HIRAM H. NISSLEY is the proprietor of the extensive Achor Wagon Works at Elizabethtown, which he built in 1896, and which at the present time give employment to over forty people. Mr. Nissley manufactures business wagons exclusively, but deals in all kinds of pleasure vehicles, also handling harness on a considerable scale.

Mr. Nissley was born in East Donegal township Jan. 19, 1867, a son of Peter B. and Elizabeth (Hoffer) Nissley. The father was a farmer, and was born in Mt. Joy township. He died Jan. 19, 1869, at the age of forty-five years, and his remains are resting in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. The mother, who was born in 1833, is now living in Elizabethtown. They had the following children: Simon H., who is engaged with his brother, Hiram H., as shipping clerk in his very extensive establishment; Martin H., a contractor and builder in Elizabethtown; Hiram H.; Peter H., a farmer in Elizabethtown. To the first marriage of Peter B. Nissley were born: Amanda, the widow of Levi N. Risser, now living in Elizabethtown; Martha, who married David G. Heisey, of Conoy township; and Anna, who married A. G. Heisey, a merchant of Elizabethtown.

Hiram H. Nissley was married Dec. 24, 1895, in Elizabethtown, to Miss Laura E. Buch, daughter of Jonathan B. and Mary (Bard) Buch, who were living near Lititz, at the time of her birth, in 1867.

Hiram H. Nissley remained on his parents farm until he reached the age of seventeen years, working on the farm during the summer season and attending the Elizabethtown schools during the winter term. Then he devoted himself exclusively to the school, from which he was graduated as a member of the first class with high honors. His first step in the business world was to take a position as a clerk in the dry-goods store of A. Dissinger, which he held for more than six years. In 1899

Mr. Nissley became connected with the manufacturing works of Jacob Miller, becoming secretary and treasurer of the Fifth Wheel Manufacturing Co. Two years later he became proprietor with Isaac Corwall, of Williamsburg, as his partner, renaming the works the Keystone Forging Co. In 1895 this company was incorporated and removed to Northumberland county, Mr. Nissley retaining his position as secretary until the following year, when he disposed of his interest in the company, and bought his present business.

Politically Mr. Nissley is a Republican, and has served on the county committee of his party for many years. For the last two years he has been a member of the town council, and is one of the prominent and influential citizens of the community where his many genuine and sterling qualities command respect, and where his genial manners have won a host of friends.

ALBERT HUPPER, wholesale and retail confectioner, is one of the rising young merchants of the city of Lancaster and descends from stalwart German ancestry, both his grandfathers having come from Germany in an early day.

John Hupper, his father, who is a carpenter in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., with residence in Lancaster, married Elizabeth Urban, daughter of Jacob Urban, a farmer of Conestoga township, this county. Four children were born to this union: Frederick, who died about seven years ago at the age of twenty; Jacob, a salesman in M. T. Garvin & Co.'s dry-goods store; Albert, of whom we more particularly write; and Miss Anna, who assists in her brother's confectionery store.

Albert Hupper was born May 5, 1871, in Manor township, and received his education at the public schools of Conestoga Center. Laying aside his books at the age of nineteen, he came to the city of Lancaster and entered into an apprenticeship at the confectioner's trade, which he mastered in all its details. For nine years or more he made the bulk of the candies and ice cream for the late Rufus H. Anderson, and Sept. 4, 1899, he purchased the latter's business, which he has since successfully conducted. By strict attention to business, and by the excellence of his goods he has more than doubled his trade, both wholesale and retail, which is by no means confined to Lancaster and vicinity, for he ships to many distant points—the excellent quality of his ice cream, alone, having a wide reputation.

On April 3, 1895, Mr. Hupper was united in marriage with Miss Mary Bergman, daughter of Andrew Bergman, a retired merchant of Lancaster, and they have one child, Helen Beatrice. Mr. and Mrs. Hupper are members of Grace Lutheran Church, in which he is serving as deacon. Socially he is connected with the I. O. O. F. and the Royal Arcanum, but most of his time is strictly devoted to his business interests, in which he has met with more than ordinary success.

CHARLES B. KELLER, recorder of deeds for Lancaster county, lives in an elegant suburban home, built on land that has been in the possession of the Keller family for generations—land that was secured from the Penns by Mr. Keller's great-grandfather. At first this tract comprised but five acres, but Mr. Keller acquired more land until he held eighty-six acres.

The founder of the Keller family in America was Johann Peter Keller, a native of Germany, who came to these shores prior to 1760, settling in Lancaster county, where he died. His wife, Anna Maria, born in Germany, died in Lancaster Jan. 6, 1782. Two of their children, Carl Andrew and Johann Adam, were born in Germany.

Carl A. Keller, son of Johann Peter, married Barbara Judith Bigler, and from this couple Charles B. Keller is descended.

John Andrew Keller, son of Carl A., and father of Charles B., married Harriet Trissler, and both passed their lives in Lancaster. He died in 1856. They had the following children: Samuel, Benjamin Schaeffer, William Augustus, Clara, John Adam, Lizzie, Kate, Harriet Maria, Ella, Emanuel and Charles B.

Charles B. Keller was born Oct. 20, 1853, next door to the courthouse in East King street, where his father then lived. He was graduated from the Boys' High School in 1868 with valedictory honors, and graduated from Muhlenberg College in 1873. After being associated with his brother, William A., in the manufacture of paper boxes in Philadelphia for a year, Mr. Keller became principal of the Strasburg schools, in 1874, remaining there ten years, and raising the standard of the schools to a high grade. During his stay in that town he graduated hundreds of young people, and is held in grateful memory in that community. In 1884 Mr. Keller became engaged in the coal and lumber business at Ephrata, where he remained ten years. He was early identified with the Independent Telephone company, an organization that gave to the people of Lancaster a much lower priced and far more satisfactory telephone service, became superintendent of that company in July, 1898, and by his energy and push brought the business to the very fore-front in a brief period.

Mr. Keller was elected recorder of deeds for Lancaster county Nov. 6, 1900, and on the first day of the following year entered upon the responsible duties of that position, and his ability and integrity give every promise of a most successful and satisfactory administration of its affairs by the present incumbent.

On Sept. 19, 1884, Mr. Keller was married to Miss Harriet Leche, daughter of Lieut. David H. Leche, 2d Pennsylvania Cavalry, and this union has been blessed by the birth of three children: Frederick Rowe, who is now attending Franklin and Marshall College; and Harriet and Helen Leche, both at school. Mr. Keller is prominent in all the affairs of the city, is a member of Grace Lutheran Church, and is an intelligent and conscientious gentleman. Socially he belongs to the Masons, the Elks, and the Lodge of Perfection.

JOHN ADAM KELLER, brother of Charles B., was born Oct. 29, 1840, on the site of the Locher Bank building, in Center Square, Lancaster. He obtained his education in the local school, and on completing that course of study went into the Fellanbaum Foundry, where he spent two years. For three years he worked with W. C. F. Scheer, and then connected himself with the Pennsylvania Railway Company, being brakeman and extra passenger conductor for five years. At the end of that time he entered the service of his country, enlisting as a member of what afterward became the 17th P. V. I. At the close of his military experiences Mr. Keller engaged in the truck business on the Lititz turnpike. Five years later he sold out this business to his partner, Adam R. Keller, and opened a greengrocer's stand on East King street, in which he was engaged for four years. He was then employed by D. S. Bursk. In 1886 he became a clerk in the extensive establishment of Walter A. Heinitsh, where he has since remained.

Mr. Keller married Miss Anna, daughter of Patrick Carrigan, of Philadelphia, and they own and occupy one of the handsomest modern dwellings in East King street, opposite the Lancaster county prison. Mr. Keller is not only a great lover of flowers, but is also a most successful floriculturist, following the occupation, however, purely for pleasure. The flower beds about his home are always the most attractive in the city. When the park surrounding the Lancaster county prison was thrown open to the public it was Mr. Keller who suggested the big lily pond and superintended its construction.

JOHN A. GOLL, a prominent and representative citizen of Lancaster, and a member of the well-known railroad contracting firm of John Goll & Co., was born in Harrisburg, Dauphin Co., Pa., Feb. 18, 1863, a son of George and Fredericka Goll, the former of whom was born in Weilheim bei Kirchheim on der Teck, Wurtemberg, Germany, May 21, 1832. The father of George Goll followed the trade of baker in Germany, and the latter assisted in this business until the age of twenty-three years when he emigrated to America, together with his brothers, John G. and Charles, the former of whom is a prominent contractor in Philadelphia, and the latter, a farmer. Their one sister Mrs. Conrad Morning, of Lancaster, also came with them. For a short period, George Goll resided in the State of New York and then moved to Lancaster county, Pa., and engaged in work at Columbia as a journeyman contractor. Later he obtained a position with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and through excellent work and close attention to business, secured promotion in 1872, to the position of master workman of the Philadelphia division.

In 1875 Mr. Goll left this company, and in partnership with John Keller, engaged in contracting, giving especial attention to bridge building. During his career he has constructed many of the most important bridges in this part of the State, some of them being magnificent structures which will endure for generations as testimonials to his ability. Mr. Goll built the large stone bridge over the Conestoga river. After the Johnstown disaster, he secured several contracts in the desolated regions, and built the bridge over the Susquehanna River at Harrisburg, on the Cumberland Valley railroad; one on the same road over the Potomac River, on the Maryland and Virginia line; and three bridges on the Pittsburg division at Summer Hill. Some of these structures are marvels of engineering skill, and justly place the name of their builder among the notable men in his line in the State. In addition to the above, Mr. Goll did similar work on the New York divisions, and at the time of his death was just completing the bridge over the Juniata river at Tyrone. For future work he had on hand contracts for the building of bridges on the C. V. road at Newville and at Alto Junction. His thorough knowledge of this business made him desirable whenever any bridge was projected, for his work had stood the test of strain and time, and had proved the reliability of the builder.

The marriage of George Goll was to Fredericka C. Eiding, in Harrisburg, and among the eleven children born to this union, were: John A., William H. and George F. The death of Mr. Goll was caused by an attack of apoplexy, Feb. 15, 1891, at the age of fifty-eight years, and his burial was in Woodward Hill cemetery. His religious rearing had been in the Lutheran Church, and for many years he was an elder in Zion Lutheran Church, but his later years were passed as an elder in Grace Lutheran Church, the latter being situated nearer his home. Mr. Goll lived an exemplary life, and both by precept and example afforded a true type of Christian character. In his church particularly was he held in the highest esteem, and the church council attended his funeral in a body, with many other friends and fellow-citizens who desired to show respect to one who had so well lived up to the best standard of citizenship. He was a good neighbor, a devoted father and a kind husband, while in him the poor and needy all found a friend.

John A. Goll attended the common schools and then learned his business with his father, with whom he remained until the latter's death. Following this event he entered into partnership with his brothers, William H. and George F., forming the firm of John Goll & Co., and continuing in the railroad contracting business, making a reputation which has brought the firm prosperity. Some of the large contracts satisfactorily completed are: the remodeling of the Broad Street Station, Philadelphia; the remodeling of the Harrisburg Station; changing of the line tunneling 280 feet, in Philadelphia, and various other undertakings of a like nature, while the firm has also built bridges on the Cumberland Valley line, and the great tunnel under the Pennsylvania line in Lancaster.

The marriage of John A. Goll took place in Harrisburg, in 1889, the bride being Elizabeth Harnish, who was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, daughter of Amos and Caroline (Brady) Harnish (the former of whom follows the trade of wheelwright in Harrisburg), formerly residents of Manor township, Lancaster county. Mr. and Mrs. Goll have two children, Esther and George. In his fraternal associations, Mr. Goll is a valued member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Perfection Lodge, No. 14. He is also a member of the K. of P.; of the Red Men; and of the B. P. O. E. With his family he belongs to, and liberally assists in supporting, Grace Lutheran Church in this city. His standing in business circles is of the best, and he is justly regarded as one of the substantial men of Lancaster, his personal attributes winning him many friends.

DAVID H. LANDIS is a leading representative of the business interests of Manor township, Lancaster county, where he is extensively engaged in the milling business and the manufacture of cider, and also conducts a creamery and farm. Of excellent business ability and broad resources, he has attained a prominent place among the successful men of his community, and the prosperity that has come to him is certainly well-deserved.

A son of Jacob H. and Ann S. (Herr) Landis, he was born at his present home, Aug. 28, 1864, and was educated at the Normal School in Millersville, Pa. For some three or four years he engaged in farming, but in 1892 took charge of the Colfax Glen Mills, now known as the Windom Mills, which he still operates, doing simply a gristmill business; he also handles a large amount of grain. In 1894 he established a creamery, which he still conducts, and in 1893 a hydraulic cider mill, where he manufactures a large amount of cider annually, making almost 100,000 gallons in 1899. In connection with his other industries, he operates a farm of 108 acres, and is justly numbered among the leading and progressive young business men of the county.

In 1890 Mr. Landis married Miss Ella H. Shelley, a daughter of John Shelley, a contractor of Ashland, Schuylkill Co., Pa., and to them have been born three children, namely: Ralph S., Nelson S. and Edith S. The family hold membership in Zion's Reformed Church of Millersville.

Mr. Landis is a man of more than ordinary intelligence, has made considerable research into scientific subjects, and is well-posted on the leading topics and issues of the day. He affiliates with the Republican party, and in 1899 was elected a member of the school board, which position he is now most creditably filling. He secured the establishment of a post office at his place, to which he gave the name of Windom, and was appointed postmaster of the same.

REV. CHARLES ELVIN HAUPT, D. D., the beloved and revered pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, has been prominent in all good works in Lancaster for the last twenty-five years. His grandfather, Jacob Haupt, arrived in America from Baden, Germany, in 1763, and made his home in Philadelphia, where he lived until the War of 1812. Gen. Herman Haupt, a son of Jacob, is still living at the age of eighty-two; his home is in Washington, where he has largely resided since the war of the Rebellion.

Lewis L. Haupt, the father of Rev. Charles Elvin, was the General Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Railway Co., for fifteen years, and then became the Eastern Passenger Agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., a position he held until toward the close of his life, Sept. 17, 1898. He was finally Visiting Agent of the House of Refuge, now known as the Glen Mills School. He married Louisa Caroline Keller, a daughter of Rev. Benjamin Keller, a Lutheran clergyman of Gettysburg, and afterward of Philadelphia. To bless this union came five children: Rev. Charles Elvin, of Lancaster; Henry E., a scale-maker, of Philadelphia; William K., a banker of Philadelphia; Miss Fanny G., who cares for her aged mother; and Mary Louisa, wife of Richard R. Conarroe, a hardware merchant of Philadelphia.

Rev. Charles Elvin Haupt was born Oct. 6, 1852, in Harrisburg, where his father was then stationed in the interests of the Pennsylvania Railroad; but he was mainly educated in Philadelphia, where he attended the public schools and a private academy. In 1868 he entered the Classical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and was graduated from that Institution with honors in the class of 1872. Having decided in favor of the ministry, he entered the Lutheran Theological Seminary, on Franklin Square, Philadelphia; from which he was graduated in course in 1875. He was almost immediately ordained to the Lutheran ministry, and was at once called to Lancaster to take charge of Christ Lutheran Church, then a mission of "Old Trinity," acting as assistant to the late beloved Rev. Dr. E. Greenwald. Christ Church very soon became practically self-supporting under the able ministrations of Mr. Haupt, but he was called to the pulpit of Grace Lutheran Church, of this city, in January, 1880, and there he has since remained, deeply beloved by the people of that parish as well as by the entire community. He established Grace Church school, an educational establishment of high character, and by his earnest labors added to the numerical strength and standing of the congregation and Sunday School to a surprising degree. The congregation has increased from 140 communicants in 1875, to 849 at the present time, while the Sunday School has increased during the same period from 300 to 726. In addition to all this church and Sunday School work he has been a frequent contributor to church periodicals, and has written "Stories from Bible History," a text book for families; as well as a life of Dr. Greenwald.

Dr. Haupt was practically the founder of Emmanuel Lutheran Church, named after the venerated Dr. Greenwald, and he was closely identified with the founding of the Madame Cotta College for Young Women, of which Prof. W. W. Moore, for many years principal of Franklin and Marshall Academy, is principal. This college gives a Christian training for young women, and pursues practically the same studies that are offered in Franklin and Marshall College. Dr. Haupt is Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in this institution, which has already won a deserved recognition among the people. In the summer of 1900 Mr. Haupt was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity, conferred at Lancaster by Franklin and Marshall College.

On Jan. 15, 1878, Dr. Haupt was married to Miss Mary M., a daughter of John Geissinger, a farmer of Huntingdon county, and a sister of Rev. Dr. D. H. Geissinger, now of Pittsburg, and Dr. Haupt's immediate predecessor at Grace Church.

Two sons were born to Dr. and Mrs. Haupt, Gerald L., who died at the age of six years; and Charles E., a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College, and now a student of architecture in Philadelphia. Dr. Haupt has made himself felt as a friend to the city of Lancaster, and he is cherished by a host of friends, who revere his learning, admire his devotion to the Faith, and love him for his sincere and unaffected manliness. He is one of the charter members of the board of directors of Lancaster General Hospital, and has been actively identified with it ever since.

ALBERT B. WORTH, formerly county commissioner, and a successful farmer of Colerain township, was born in September, 1843, in the home in which he now lives, son of William C. and Phoebe (Romans) Worth, who were both born in Romansville, Chester county, in 1805.

John Worth, father of William C., was born in England, and his wife, Lydia (Carpenter), was born in this country. They made their home in Romansville, where their lives were devoted to farming, and Mr. Worth became one of the wealthy men of that section. For many years he held local and county offices, and at one time served in the State Legislature. He was widely known as a local minister of the Society of Friends. Of his children, (1) William C., father of Albert B., was the eldest. (2) Chespazer married Miss Mary Bailey, of Chester county, where he was a leading iron man until his death, in 1881; he left two sons, who still reside in Coatesville, Sharpless and William, proprietors of the Laurel iron mills, of Chester county. (3) Richard was a farmer in Chester county, where he died. His wife was from that county. They had seven children: Rachel Ann, deceased; Bennett, who resides in Denver, Colo.; Lydia H., deceased; John R., deceased; Mary, wife of Garrett Taylor; Annie, wife of Frederick Wetherill, of Philadelphia; and Thomas, of Texas. (4) John married Miss Mary Pyle, of Chester county, where he is a prominent lumberman, in West Chester. They have one son, Herbert, who is at home. (5) Elizabeth Worth, born in Chester county, married Jacob Wickersham, and settled on the old Worth homestead in that county, where they still reside. They have had one son and one daughter, Bell and Howard, the latter deceased. (6) Rachel Worth, born in Chester county, married John White, of West Chester, and they have one daughter, Mary, who is the widow of William Minster, of West Chester. (7) Samuel, born in Chester county, was married (first) there and lived on a farm, where his wife died leaving three children: Emma, wife of Bordley S. Patterson, of Little Britain; Edward, a real estate dealer in Wawa, Pa.; and Mary, wife of Samuel Dickey, of Philadelphia. The second wife of Samuel Worth was Sarah Carpenter, of Philadelphia, where they were living at the time he died, leaving two children by that union, Jane and Mary.

William C. Worth settled on the farm in Colerain township, now occupied by our subject, where he married Phoebe Romans. There he erected a large stone house, and a bank barn. This farm house, which is situated on the Octoraro creek, was known as one of the best rural homes in the town in its day. Sixty acres of this farm lie in Chester county. There William C. Worth died in 1874, and his widow in August, 1879. They were members of the Society of Friends. He was a prominent man in all local affairs, and in 1853, was elected county commissioner in Lancaster county, a position he filled with credit to himself, and satisfaction to his constituents. William C. Worth and his wife had children as follows: (1) J. Carpenter, born in 1832, married Mary Galloway, daughter of Rev. Joseph Galloway, of Steubenville, Ohio, formerly of Clearfield county, Pa., a clergyman of the Presbyterian church. The young married couple settled at Coatesville, and later at Oxford, Chester county, where he was manager for one of the Pennsylvania iron firms. He died in February, 1901, leaving a widow and two sons: Mason C. (engaged in the iron business), and Elmer E., both of Philadelphia. Mrs. Worth is still a resident of Oxford. (2) Charles died when a young man, unmarried. (3) Smith, born in 1834, married (first) Phoebe Brinton, who died childless, and second, Emaline Wilson, of Chester county. He has his home in Oxford, where he had a large hardware store. In 1890 he was made treasurer of Chester county, an office he is still filling very acceptably to the public. He has two daughters, Helen and Marian, the former of whom married Howard Snodgrass, cashier of the National Bank of Oxford. (4) George died in infancy. (5) Lydia married Samuel Holmes, of Chester county, and is the mother of two children—Charles, a lumberman of Tennessee; and Jennie, at home. (6) Harrison was born in 1840, married Elizabeth Boyce, and after her death, married Miss Louisa Pettitdemonge. They reside in Delaware, where he is a farmer. They have two children, Frank and Bessie, of whom the former married a Miss Chandler, and the latter a Mr. Eastman. (7) Albert B. is mentioned below. (8) Davis was a merchant at Mt. Vernon, Chester county, at the time of his death, which occurred when he was only twenty-two years old. (9) Samuel, born at the old home, married Jennie Smith, of Chester county, and is a merchant and is also postmaster at Oxford.

Albert B. Worth was educated in the Union high school and at the Oxford Academy. He was engaged in farming at the old homestead until his marriage, Jan. 21, 1868, when Letitia J. Byer, a daughter of Thomas and Mary A. (McClenaghan) Byer, became his wife. Her father was born in Colerain township in 1804, and his wife in Ireland in October, 1824. They were farming people in Colerain, where Mr. Byer died in 1887, leaving a widow and five children: (1) Rebecca, widow of Clark Morrison, of Chester county; (2) Letitia J., wife of Albert R. Worth, born in 1846; (3) Mary, unmarried, who resides in Colerain township; (4) William, a lawyer in Lancaster, who married a daughter of ex-Senator Warfell of Pennsylvania; and (5) Winfield S., who is on the old Byer homestead. Mrs. Letitia J. Worth was educated in the Union high school and the Ladies' Seminary at Chestnut Hill, and was a successful teacher in the public schools for some years.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Worth settled on the old homestead, where they have resided to the present time. Many additions to the building have been made by him, principally a frame addition to the old stone house, and many changes in the barn. To them have come seven children: (1) Lydia, born in February, 1869, graduated from the Millersville State Normal School, and taught school thirteen years in Colerain township. She is now a teacher in Brownell Hall Seminary, in Omaha, Neb. (2) Lenora and (3) Lillian, twins, died in childhood. (4) William T., born in April, 1872, graduated from the Millersville Normal and the University of Pennsylvania, and is now a practicing physician at Bainbridge, Lancaster county. He married Miss Elizabeth Nissley, and they have a daughter Allene. (5) Davis R., born Dec. 9, 1873, died when nineteen years old. (6) Della R., born Jan. 29, 1880, received her education in the Union high school and for several terms was a teacher in Lancaster county. She married John A. Kimble, of Nottingham, Chester county, and has one child—a daughter. (7) Mary Alberta, born in May, 1888, is now a student in the Union high school.

Mr. Worth is a Republican in political faith. In 1888 he was elected county commissioner and was re-elected in 1891, filling the office with ability, and to the public satisfaction. The family are all members of the Presbyterian Church. The Worths have all been men and women of fine character and cultured minds, and have borne an influential part in the affairs of the community.

JAMES MARTIN CAIN, the artistic sign writer and principal of the School of Card Sign Writing, at No. 22 North Queen street, Lancaster, is of Scotch-Irish descent, coming from that race of people who did so much for the development of the southern end of Lancaster county.

James Cain, his grandfather, was one of the most prominent architects in this section, and many fine buildings still remain as enduring monuments to his skill in designing.

Benton A. Cain, son of James, lives in Lancaster, and is a hardwood worker and carver. He married Mary A. Fagan, daughter of the late Martin Fagan, of Fairfield, this county, and three children were born of this union: Verree, at school; Cleston; and James Martin.

James Martin Cain was born at Benton Station (named after his father), on the banks of the Susquehanna, in Drumore township, July 9, 1875. He was educated in the public schools of Fairfield and in the Chestnut Level Academy. At the age of seventeen years he left school and entered the drug store of Charles E. Long, in Lancaster, but the confinement of that business and the recognition of his artistic talents, led him to become an apprentice at sign painting in the establishment of Charles H. Tucker, with whom he remained four years. At the end of that time he went West, settling in Zanesville, Ohio, where he carried on business for himself for six months; and he then returned to Lancaster, and started in business for himself at No. 221 North Queen street. His next move was to enter into partnership with H. B. Greenawalt, at No. 27 East King street, under the firm name of Greenawalt & Cain. In February, 1901, this partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Cain established himself in commodious quarters at No. 22 North Queen street, where he has been kept busy literally day and night. He has been obliged to engage expert assistants, has introduced a telephone in order to attend the calls made for him, and besides doing sign writing and personally teaching card-writing to numbers of students has established a School of Correspondence, instructing people from all sections in the art of card sign writing. His ability as a painter is everywhere acknowledged, and no work in the State is more artistic. His contracts for the most prominent firms in this section of the country have been carried out with faithfulness and intelligence, his work giving entire satisfaction.

Socially Mr. Cain belongs to the Aerie Eagles, Odd Fellows, Royal Arcanum, and Jr. O. U. A. M. Religiously, he is a member of the Western M. E. Church. Before coming to Lancaster he was associated with the Mt. Zion M. E. Church, of Fairfield, where he served as treasurer and secretary of the Sunday-school, and after taking up his residence in Lancaster he joined the Western M. E. Church by letter. All who know him (and he has a wide circle of friends) feel that he is one of Lancaster's rising business men. Mr. Cain is an amateur violinist of no ordinary ability.

GERRITT SMITH, who is one of the successful farmers of Drumore township, is an honest, upright and respected citizen of that community. His birth took place on the same farm he now owns, Oct. 17, 1857, and he was a son of George and Emmeline (Tennis) Smith, deceased.

Joseph Smith, his grandfather, was of English and Scotch-Irish origin, and he married Tacy Shoemaker. They reared four children: Rachel, of Drumore; George, the father of Gerritt Smith; Amos, a twin brother of George; and Ellen, wife of Hon. William H. Brosius, who is a member of the State Legislature, and of whom more extended mention is made elsewhere.

George Smith, son of Joseph, was born May 19, 1827, and his death occurred Feb. 12, 1898. His wife, Emmeline Tennis Smith, whom he wedded in 1848, was born in 1828, and died April 9, 1899. They were the parents of the following children: Amos P., a farmer of Drumore, of whom a sketch is given in this volume; Annie M., wife of Gardner C. Crawford, of Perryville, Md.; Gerritt, of this sketch; and Ellsworth, who died young.

Gerritt Smith was reared a farmer boy, and received his education in the common schools of his district. His life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, and he now owns the old homestead farm which was the property of his grandfather. This consists of 132 acres, and is well improved, and under the highest possible state of cultivation.

Mr. Smith is a stanch Republican in politics, but has never found time to accept the duties of office except that of school director. He is a trustee in the Presbyterian church. Both he and wife are among the leading members of Chestnut Level Presbyterian Church, to which Mr. Smith is a liberal contributor and cheerful supporter of all its charitable and benevolent enterprises. His standing in the township where he is known to be a public-spirited and generous citizen, is high, and he is an honest and upright man of business, a devoted husband and a kind and careful father.

On Dec. 5, 1878, Mr. Smith was married to Ida McGuigon, and one son, James Roy, born April 15, 1885, has blessed this union. Mrs. Ida A. (McGuigon) Smith was born Nov. 4, 1857, a daughter of James and Marinda (Shoewalter) McGuigon, both of Irish origin. She was one of a family of six children born to her parents, as follows: William, deceased; John, of Plain City, Ohio; Lillie B., widow of Emanuel Erb; Eldora, wife of O. D. Brubaker; Minnie, wife of Frank Erb, a miller by trade; and Ida, wife of Mr. Smith. The parents of Mrs. Smith still survive, residents of Martic township, both now advanced in years, the father being in his eighty-fifth year and the mother in her seventy-second.

ALDUS GROFF, a miller of East Drumore township, was the son of Abraham and Hannah (Peoples) Groff.

Abraham Groff was the son of Simon Groff and was born in Providence township in 1813. When a young man he went to Columbus, Ohio, where he learned the milling trade. Returning to Providence township, he followed his calling there as he also did later in Lampeter township, for sixteen years in Martic township and for two years again in Lampeter. At the end of this time he bought the Long Mill, which his son Aldus now owns, and there he was engaged at the time of his death, in 1875. Mrs. Hannah Peoples Groff was two years younger than her husband, and also born in Lancaster county. They were married in 1838, and were the parents of three sons and one daughter. (1) Milton learned his father's trade. While living in Martic township he married Miss Martha Hart. He is now living in the city of Lancaster. He and his wife have had children as follows: Aldus, deceased; Clarence; Lizzie; Hannah; and Annie, deceased. (2) Annie is unmarried and lives in Lancaster. (3) Theron S. learned his father's trade. In 1875 he married Miss Louisa Hess, of East Drumore township, and is now living in Lancaster. Two of his three children are living: Anna, a public school teacher; Theron, who died in early manhood; and Sarah, living at home. (4) Aldus.

Aldus Groff when a young man learned the milling business. He remained with his parents as long as they lived, being manager of the mill during the last years of his father. On Jan. 1, 1880, he was married to Miss Sarah Huber.

JACOB D. RIDER, of the firm of Rider & Snyder, commercial printers at No. 20 North Queen street, Lancaster, is descended from an old Pennsylvania family. The original American ancestor of this family was one of seven brothers who came from Germany to America, settling in Pennsylvania, some of them locating in Lancaster county.

Rev. Jacob Rider, the grandfather of Jacob D., was a bishop of the German Baptist Brethren, living near Elizabethtown, and at his death over 1,000 vehicles were in the funeral cortege, so widely was he known and so profound the sorrow at his death.

Joseph H. Rider, the father of Jacob D., is a successful hardware merchant at Elizabethtown, where he has been in business for thirty-five years. Mary C. Dulebohn, his wife, was the daughter of George C. Dulebohn, a farmer and wagon maker, living two miles south of Welsh Run, Franklin county, who lost horses, wagons, and other valuable property during the Rebel invasion of the State. Two sons were born to this union, Emmert, who died in April, 1900, at the age of twenty-four years; and Jacob D.

Jacob D. Rider was born in Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, Oct. 31, 1872, and after receiving a partial education in the schools of his native town, attended the Huntingdon Normal School, became an apprentice to the printing trade in the office of the Chronicle, at Elizabethtown, and completed his trade in the New Era job room, in Lancaster. At Lebanon he became connected with the Daily Report, and put in one year in the job office of that paper. For one and one-half years he worked in the Harrisburg Telegraph job room, and for six months worked for Frank L. Hutter, a maker of blank books in that city.

Mr. Rider was married to Miss Katharine Keiser, of Lancaster, and they have a fine home on East King street. Mr. Rider is serving his third term as president of the Young Men's Democratic Society of Lancaster.

JOHN POWELL SNYDER, Mr. Rider's partner, is a son of Henry Snyder, who died thirty-six years ago, and he, too, belongs to an old and well-known family. Mr. Snyder is also a graduate of the New Era printing office. He married Miss Anna R. Shoemaker, of Drumore township, a member of a well-known Quaker family. Six children blessed this union: Harry C.; Ednah M. and Margaret K., are deceased; Adah L., Marion P. and James are at school. Mr. Snyder is past grand and present secretary of Emanuel Lodge, I. O. O. F.; he is also past chief patriarch of Ridgely Encampment, No. 217, I. O. O. F., and Standard Bearer of No. 25, Patriarchs Militant.

As a firm and as individuals Rider & Snyder are widely known, and are very popular. They began the business of commercial printing on East King street, opposite the Court House, and their first job bears the inscription, "Friday, March 10, 1895, 11:15 A. M.," marking the beginning of a prosperous career, compelling them by its rapid expansion recently to move to their present more commodious quarters. In their new location they have established a plant for commercial printing, which has no superior in the city. They have all the most modern devices for accelerating work and cheapening its cost, and they employ a number of job printers, and turn out a vast amount of work.

ELI SMUCKER, who is now residing on his farm two miles northwest of New Holland, in Earl township, was born in Leacock township, Feb. 29, 1856, a son of David and Leah (Petersheim) Smucker, both of whom are deceased.

David Smucker was born in Leacock township, Aug. 10, 1832, a son of David and Mary (Lapp) Smucker, farming people of Leacock township, where he also followed farming, and in his lifetime was an honored and successful representative of that calling. At one time he owned two good farms, but later disposed of one of them. He belonged to the Amish Church, and died Aug. 3, 1898. Leah, his wife, was the daughter of David Petersheim, and was born Nov. 24, 1829; she died Aug. 5, 1883, the mother of eight children: Christian, deceased; Eli; Nancy, deceased; Rebecca, who married C. King, of Leacock township; Barbara, who married David Riel, of East Lampeter township; Leah, unmarried; David, deceased; and Samuel, a farmer, of Leacock township.

Eli Smucker was reared on the farm in Leacock township, and when twenty-two years of age began farming on his own account, on the place where he has since been occupied. It comprises 115 acres of fine land, well improved, and its every foot indicates a prosperous and successful operator and owner.

Mr. Smucker was married Dec. 10, 1878, to Miss Mary Blank, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Stultzfus) Blank, and a native of Lancaster county, where she was born some three miles northeast of Intercourse, Aug. 11, 1858. They are the parents of a family of ten children: Jacob, Leah, David, Samuel, Mary, Annie, Eli, Sarah, John, and Fannie. The family are all members of the Amish Church, and stand very high in the community where their useful lives are passing.

DAVID S. MARTIN (deceased). The late David S. Martin, during his too short life one of the best-known and most highly respected farmers of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, was born there March 24, 1830, and died Feb. 3, 1877, in the faith of the Mennonite church, of which he had been a lifelong member, his mortal remains being interred in White Horse cemetery.

David S. Martin was a son of Jacob and Hettie (Sowers) Martin, of Swiss descent, the former of whom died in 1882 at the age of seventy-six years, and the latter in 1864, at the age of sixty-six, the remains of both being also interred in the White Horse Mennonite cemetery. Jacob and Hettie were farming people and had born to them the following named children: Mary, deceased wife of Levi Newswanger; Henry and David S., deceased; Hettie, married to Jacob Zimmerman, of Earl township; Elizabeth, deceased; Jacob, a farmer in Salisbury township; John, deceased; Catherine, born Aug. 31, 1838, wife of John Seabold, of whom further mention will be made.

In 1850 in Earl township, David S. Martin was joined in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Gable as his first bride, and this union was graced with ten children, namely: Susannah and Maria, deceased; Ezra, of Lancaster; Levi, deceased; Adam; Anna, living with her brother Solomon; Hettie, deceased; Solomon, a farmer in Paradise township; Jacob, farming in Salisbury township, and Abraham, deceased. The second marriage of David S. Martin was to Mrs. Anna (Ames) Zeiley, and to this union were born five children, viz.: Catherine, who has her home with her uncle, John Seabold; Elizabeth, deceased; Henry, a farmer in Leacock township; John, also residing with Mr. Seabold; and David, a farmer in Earl township.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Gable) Martin was born in Earl township, Lancaster county, and died in 1866 at the age of thirty-seven years, her remains being also interred in White Horse cemetery. She was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Newswanger) Gable, of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a miller by calling, but in his later days lived in retirement. John and Elizabeth Gable were the parents of two children, viz.: Susannah, wife of Jacob W. Nolt, a farmer in Earl township; and Elizabeth.

ADAM MARTIN, son of David S. and Elizabeth (Gable) Martin, was born in Earl township, June 5, 1857, and remained with his parents until twenty years old; he then worked out as a farm hand until 1883, when he came to live with his uncle, John Seabold, whom he has ably assisted until the present time. Adam Martin is a member of the Mennonite Church, in politics is a Republican, is an excellent manager and skillful farmer, and one of the highly respected and leading citizens of Salisbury township.

JOHN SEABOLD, one of the most prosperous agriculturists of Salisbury township, of which he is a native, was born July 28, 1839, and is a son of Samuel and Maria (Brower) Seabold, of Schuylkill, and natives of Bucks county and Lancaster county, respectively. Samuel died at Sadsburyville, Chester county, Oct. 6, 1889, aged seventy-eight years, and his wife, Maria, died in February, 1895, when eighty-three years old, her remains being interred in the White Horse Mennonite cemetery. Samuel was a shoemaker by trade but for several years before his death had lived retired. To Samuel and Maria Seabold were born eleven children, namely: Christiann, widow of Joseph Lynn of Coatesville, Chester county; Mary, widow of Albert Shoemaker, of Parkesburg, Chester county; John, whose name opens this paragraph; Harry, a butcher in Honeybrook, Chester county; Daniel and Elizabeth, deceased; Thomas, street commissioner and high constable at Honeybrook; Morris, wagonmaker at Rauch, Pa.; Martha E., Hattie E., and Peter, all three deceased. The paternal grandfather of John Seabold was Henry, a farmer of Schuylkill, who was one of the early settlers of Lancaster county, and the maternal grandparents were Henry and Mary Brower, natives of this county.

In December, 1869, John Seabold married Miss Catherine Martin, but to this union no children have been born, though they have reared to maturity a nephew and a niece, viz.: John S. Martin, from the age of nine days, and Catherine, sister of John S., from her sixth year. John S. Martin was twenty-six years old on March 17, 1902, and is now caring for himself, while his sister, Catherine, is still being cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Seabold. John Seabold up to the date of his marriage had filially assisted in the cultivation of the parental homestead, but then began farming on his own land; he has as fine a place as any of its dimensions in the neighborhood and is classed with the best farmers and most useful citizens of Salisbury township. Mr. and Mrs. Seabold are members of the Mennonite Church and in politics Mr. Seabold is a Republican.

REV. WALTER RUSSELL BREED, B. S., B. D., rector of the parish of St. James, Lancaster, comes of an honored ancestry dating back to nearly three centuries in the Eastern States.

The Breed family settled in 1632, in Lynn, Mass., (which place was founded in 1630), being, therefore, within a year or two of ranking among the founders of that place, and there are now over three hundred Breeds in Lynn alone. All the people of that name in Essex county, Mass., have their descent from the Breed colony in Lynn, where for the most part they have been successful merchants and manufacturers, dominating the place. There is Breed Square in Lynn, and the water supply for the place is drawn from Breed's pond, which is located on what was at one time the private ground of the Breeds. The battle of Bunker Hill was, in reality, for the most part, fought on Breed's Hill. as now claimed by dispassionate and truth-loving historians.

Joseph Breed, father of Walter R., was born in Lynn, Mass., in 1826, and for many years followed mercantile pursuits in that city. In 1852 he married Miss Frances Burrill, daughter of Rev. John T. Burrill, rector of Christ Church, Boston, for years rector of Quincy Point Church, and, during the sixties, rector of the old North Church, in Boston. They settled in Lynn three years after the Breeds located there. Many Breeds and Burrills served in the Colonial wars, thus making their descendants on both sides, eligible as Sons and Daughters of the Revolution. To Joseph and Frances (Burrill) Breed were born children as follows: Anna, George, Arthur, Henry, Laura and Walter Russell.

Rev. Walter Russell Breed was born Jan. 10, 1866, in Lynn, Mass., and received his collegiate education in Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., from which he was graduated as a Bachelor of Sciences in 1887. Three years later, having taken the prescribed course in the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge, Mass., where he became a Bachelor of Divinity, he was ordained Deacon by Bishop Paddock, in Cambridge, and priest in Tarrytown, N. J., by Bishop Potter. His first parish was Trinity Church at Concord, Mass., where he remained three years, and in November, 1893, he accepted a call to Christ Church, Quincy, Mass., one of the most historic churches in America, where he became a member of the Quincy school board, having been chairman of the committee on Evening Schools, and was in the management of the Woodward School from the date of its organization, having been honored with the position of vice-president of its board of trustees.

Mr. Breed became rector of St. James Church, Lancaster, Nov. 23, 1900, and his reception was a most cordial one. With his severe training in noted educational institutions, his experience in the East, and in Europe, where he has traveled, Mr. Breed came to St. James more than ordinarily well-equipped for the work of that important parish, and everything points to a future of great usefulness.

On June 4, 1894, Rev. Walter R. Breed was married, by the late Rt. Rev. Bishop Rulisan, to Miss Ellen Broderick Zehmer, daughter of William Zehmer, of Lansford, Pa., the latter of whom has been superintendent of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co., for the past twenty-five years. Mrs. Breed's maternal grandfather was Thos. Broderick, of Wilkes-Barre, at one time mayor of that city, and who was descended from the Brodericks of Ireland, who came to America about 150 years ago.

The new remodeled and beautified rectory of St. James has had elegance added to it by the quaint old historic furniture brought from the East by Mr. Breed, and it is specially fitting therefore, that Rev. Mr. Breed should become rector of the grand old St. James Episcopal Church—one of the oldest and most distinguished parishes in the State—a parish that has reason to be proud of its Revolutionary traditions and its long line of distinguished clergy and laity.

SILAS R. BUCKWALTER, a resident of Manheim township, one mile from Lancaster, was born in East Lampeter township, this county, Feb. 25, 1854, a son of Benjamin and Susan (Johns) Buckwalter. Both parents were natives of East Lampeter township. The father was born June 14, 1816, son of Abraham and Anna (Witmer) Buckwalter, and grandson of Benjamin Buckwalter, and died Jan. 10, 1898. The mother was born May 28, 1816, and died Sept. 25, 1862.

Benjamin Buckwalter, father of Silas R., was reared in East Lampeter township, where he spent his life with the exception of two years, when he was in Upper Leacock township, soon after his marriage. He returned to his native township, and was engaged in farming all his days, owning a farm of 107 acres, four miles east of Lancaster city, lying along the Philadelphia pike. There he reared his family. At Greenland for some ten years he had an interest in a mercantile establishment, held the office of postmaster there, and for a time was in the butcher and meat business. He served long and faithfully on the school board of East Lampeter township. Benjamin Buckwalter was twice married, first to Miss Susan Johns, by whom he had a numerous family: Elias, now deceased; Mary, the wife of Elias Eby, of Strasburg; Elizabeth, widow of Adam S. Rohrer, of Mechanicsburg; Lydia, unmarried, a resident of Lancaster; Peter, a resident of East Lampeter township; Eva, who died in childhood; Silas R.; Abraham, a resident of Lancaster, a dispatcher of the Conestoga Traction Company; Emma, professional nurse in Lancaster; and Silinda, deceased. Benjamin Buckwalter married, for his second wife, Anna (Eshelman) Whiteside, and by this union became the father of four children: Benjamin, now a resident of Eden, Manheim township; Laura, who first married Abraham Perry, and after his death became the wife of David Decker, of New Holland; Hetty, now deceased, and John, a resident of Eden, East Lampeter township.

Silas R. Buckwalter, whose name appears above, began business for himself at the age of twenty-one. For four years he tilled part of the old homestead and then moved to another farm two miles east of Lancaster, which he tilled for sixteen years; this place consisted of fifty-five acres, and proved very productive and profitable. At the end of that time he bought the farm of sixty-five acres on which he still resides, and in addition to its cultivation conducts a milk route in the city. In 1901 he took the agency for the Kemp & Burpee Manure Spreader in his part of the county. He has thoroughly modernized and thoroughly improved his property. The house is supplied throughout with hot and cold water, and in the barn his stock have automatic water troughs, the water supplying which is pumped into a tank by a water wheel; he also has a feed mill operated by wind power. His place is conceded to be one of the most desirable homes in that part of the county. On the north it adjoins Long Park, which lies about one and one quarter miles northwest of Lancaster City.

Mr. Buckwalter was married Dec. 24, 1874, to Miss Mary K., daughter of Benjamin R. Landis, of East Lampeter township, and to this union have come: Lottie S.; Jacob, who died at the age of twenty-three; Elam, who died at the age of seventeen; Benjamin, who died at the age of eighteen months; Frank, at home; Elias, who died at the age of five months; Harry, at home; and Silas, at home. Mr. and Mrs. Buckwalter belong to the Mennonite Church, and are classed among the respected people of their community.

P. B. KOFROTH, a carriage manufacturer of Rothsville, and one of the successful business men of Lancaster county, was born Oct. 3, 1858, in the village of Disston, Pa. In 1860 his mother died; in 1861 his father, Martin Kofroth, enlisted and served in Co. K, 129th Regiment, which left the subject of our sketch drifting among his relatives until he was old enough to look out for himself.

After receiving a common school education, he was employed at the trade of coach maker, with S. & H. Grosh, in Lititz, Pa., and later worked for U. F. Hartranft, at Brunnerville. He started in business for himself in 1878, has successfully conducted the same, until the present time, and now commands a lucrative patronage. Mr. Kofroth is well known in social, political and fraternal circles, being a member of the P. O. S. of A. No. 559, of Rothsville, I. O. O. F. of Lincoln, No. 915, and K. of P. of Lititz; he is a past officer in the above named orders. In politics he is a staunch Republican and has represented his party in the county committee for the last six years. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, of which he is one of the trustees.

In July, 1879, Mr. Kofroth wedded Miss Lillie Seltzer, of Hamburg, Berks county. To this union have been born seven children, two of whom died in infancy; Mamie is attending the State Normal School at Millersville; Reno J., Percy B., Avon S. and Maud S. are all at home. Mr. Kofroth takes an active interest in all local affairs whether of a social, religious or public nature.

WILLIAM HUESTIS KELLER is the junior member of the well-known law firm of Coyle & Keller, and has been practicing at the Lancaster County Bar for a period of about ten years.

Mr. Keller's paternal ancestry were from Germany, coming to this country about the year 1750, and settling in either Dauphin county or Lancaster county, Pa.—which, is not quite certain, though one of the ancestors evidently lived in Lancaster county, as his name appears among the members from that county on the roll of the "Pennsylvania Associators" in the War of the Revolution. From here, however, he moved to Center county.

Daniel S. Keller, father of William H., was a prominent member of the Bellefonte (Pa.) Bar. He was a son of Henry Keller, of Boalsburg, Pa. Daniel S. married Martha E. Huestis, daughter of William H. Heustis, a contractor and builder of Vermont, who descended from old Puritan stock, and children as follows were born to them: Harry, William H. and Martha E. The father died in 1894, the mother in 1876.

William H. Keller, whose name introduces these lines, was born Aug. 11, 1869, in Montgomery county, Md., and in early life was brought by his parents to Bellefonte, Pa., at the public schools of which place he received his earlier education, graduating from the High school in 1884. He graduated from the Bellefonte Academy in 1887, and from Franklin and Marshall College in the class of 1891. His college days over, Mr. Keller read law with his father in Bellefonte, then took a course in law at Columbian University, Washington, D. C., graduating from that institution in 1893, and in July of the same year was admitted to practice in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia, and to the Bar of Center county, Pa. On Aug. 22, 1893, he removed to Lancaster and was admitted to the Bar of Lancaster county, and, as soon as the time limited under the rules had expired, he was admitted to the Supreme, Superior, and United States Circuit and District courts. From January, 1894, to January, 1899, Mr. Keller was associated with J. L. Steinmetz in the practice of law, at the end of which time he entered into partnership with John A. Coyle, his present associate.

On Oct. 18, 1893, William H. Keller married Miss Anna Dickey, youngest daughter of the late Hon. O. J. Dickey, well remembered as the most prominent criminal lawyer of his time, and honored by the Republicans of his district with two terms in Congress. Mr. and Mrs. Keller have four children, their names and dates of birth being as follows: Daniel S., Aug. 15, 1894; Elizabeth Dickey, Dec. 4, 1895; Oliver James, Feb. 9, 1898, and Martha Eleanor, Nov. 14, 1902. Mr. Keller is a member of the First Reformed Church of Lancaster. In politics, he is a staunch Republican. Though not a native of Lancaster county, Mr. Keller has become thoroughly identified with its interests and is in entire sympathy with its development and progress along all lines.

J. ALDUS HERR, one of the intelligent and progressive citizens of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, was born on the farm where he still lives Nov. 22, 1859, a son of Benjamin and Ann E. Herr. His father was a farmer, and is now deceased.

J. Aldus Herr spent his boyhood on his parents farm, and obtained his education in the public schools, and he has eagerly grasped every opportunity to broaden and deepen his mind. About the time he completed his studies in the school he helped to organize a literary society, and has been one of its active workers. His eye has always been single to the advancement of the community. Mr. Herr was the founder and promoter of the Jersey Cattle Club of Lancaster, an object which he brought about after a hard and protracted struggle, and he has had the satisfaction of seeing the society—which was organized March 7, 1898, with a roll of twenty-five members, with himself as chairman—accomplish the most gratifying results. Mr. Herr was one of the pioneers in the establishment of the rural mail delivery in his township, and did much to advance the Farmers' Institute of West Lampeter township, which has grown to large proportions from a very modest beginning. In fact, he is always ready to forward anything that looks to the public good. His place is considered one of the finest homes in the county, and there he engages in general farming and stock raising, owning the celebrated Pequea herd of Jerseys, and he is the only owner of registered Jerseys to sell the product in Lancaster. He disposes of much butter weekly, having a herd of thirty-five head. Mr. Herr takes much interest in local politics, has been tax collector, and has served as county committeeman for seven years.

Mr. Herr was married, Jan. 27, 1897, to Miss Mary, daughter of Rev. Jacob Bowman, a lady of culture and refinement. They have had a family of four children: Paul Bowman, who died in infancy; Mary Hilda; Anna Irene, who also died in infancy; and Helen Elizabeth. Mr. Herr's home is one of the most hospitable and pleasant in the locality, and the taste of the owners is fully exemplified by the amount of good literature they have and enjoy.

REV. WILLIAM STUART CRAMER, assistant pastor of the First Reformed Church of Lancaster, although not a native of Lancaster county, has yet been so closely connected with it by church, college and seminary associations, that his personal history, as well as that of his ancestry, cannot fail to excite interest in a community where he is so well known and so greatly beloved. Practically, however, he has been a Lancastrian for many years, counting the time that he spent in Franklin and Marshall College, and in the Reformed Theological Seminary.

Mr. Cramer is descended from Revolutionary stock, one of his ancestors having been a colonel in one of the early wars. His grandfather, William J. Cramer, was born in Graceham, Md., and his father, Miller Cray Cramer, is a manager in one of the large mercantile establishments in New York City. The latter married Julia Crouse, daughter of Michael Crouse, a farmer of Frederick county, Md., and three children were born of this union: Victor Clay, a traveling salesman, of New York; Ada Estelle, at home with her parents; and Rev. William Stuart, of Lancaster.

William Stuart Cramer was born in Creagers-town, Frederick Co., Md., April 12, 1873, and, after being partially educated in the public schools of that section, attended Eaton & Burnett's Business College, in Baltimore, from which he was graduated, and then entered into business with his father. His parents having removed to Baltimore, where his father held a position in the sub-treasury under Hon. George L. Wellington, for four years, young Cramer became entry clerk in the establishment of Armstrong, Cator & Co. He next attended Lamb's High School in Baltimore, from which he was graduated in 1895; then attended Franklin and Marshall College from which he was graduated in 1898, and he graduated from the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster in 1901. He received an immediate call to the First Reformed Church, as assistant to the venerable and beloved Rev. J. M. Titzel, D. D., which he accepted, and was ordained (and installed as assistant pastor) on July 7, 1901. During the seven years of his college and seminary life in Lancaster, Mr. Cramer held important positions, as tenor soloist in the best choirs of the city, among which was the choir of the church which he now serves. Mr. Cramer was for a time one of the editors of the College Student; was assistant manager for one year, and manager another year of the Franklin and Marshall Foot Ball Team; belonged to the Franklin and Marshall Glee Club; to the Diognothian Literary society in which he held several important offices; and was one of the founders and president of the Paradise Club of Franklin and Marshall College, a social club like that at Princeton, and of which Mr. Cramer is justly proud. During his second year in the Theological Seminary he won the prize ($20 in gold) in Sacred Rhetoric. During his first five summer vacations, while a student, Mr. Cramer was associated with the American Bible Society of Maryland, as a colporteur, and in 1899 he assisted in re-cataloging the State Library at Harrisburg, under Dr. Reed. In 1900, during his vacation from the Theological Seminary, Mr. Cramer filled Rev. M. H. Sangree's pulpit in the Fourth Reformed Church, in Harrisburg, for five months, preaching with great acceptability. Such has been the busy, useful and not uneventful life of the new assistant pastor of the historic First Reformed Church of Lancaster. With such a field of labor as presents itself in this charge there is vast opportunity for one possessed of Mr. Cramer's experience, ability and earnestness to accomplish much good.

SAMUEL GIBSON, one of the well-known farmers and esteemed citizens of Martic township, was born March 14, 1831, son of James and Griselda (Neel) Gibson.

James Gibson, the father, was born in York county and came of Scotch ancestry, his father James, coming to America from Glasgow about 150 years ago. Grandfather Gibson had thirteen children. A family of nine children was born to the parents of our subject, and we have record of Mary Ann, William and James L., all deceased; Samuel, of this sketch; Annie E., the wife of J. W. Barton, who resides in Maryland; Mary Jane, the wife of William Pagan, of the home place; and Robert H., deceased. James Gibson was born March 25, 1791, and died March 8, 1868. He was a staunch Democrat and one of the leading men of the township. He belonged to the Presbyterian Church.

Samuel Gibson came with his parents from York county to the old home place which he now owns when he was six years of age. He grew up a farmer lad, adopted agriculture as his life vocation and has successfully pursued it ever since. He acquired a good common school education and has put it to practical use in the intelligent management of his farm. This property contains sixty-two acres of excellent land upon which very good improvements have been made, and here Mr. Gibson enjoys a most comfortable home. He has never married.

In former years Mr. Gibson was a Democrat, like his father, but for some time he has advocated the principles of the Prohibition party. He is a much respected man in Martic township, and is valued as citizen, neighbor and friend.

SAMUEL C. MAY. The great-grandfather of this enterprising and prosperous citizen of West-Hempfield township was among the early settlers of Lancaster county, emigrating from Germany in the year 1716, settling in what is now Lancaster county, and there remaining through life, a patient and efficient worker in the county's best material development. The family has ever since been among its prominent and active citizens.

The grandfather of Samuel C., was Michael May, a life-long resident of Lancaster county, whose son Samuel, father of Samuel C., was born June 18, 1808, and lived in West Hempfield township to the good old age of ninety years, passing away Dec. 21, 1898. He was a mason by trade. He married Miss Anna Christy, who was born in West Hempfield township, July 21, 1816, and died Dec. 28, 1886. They were good Christian people, highly respected by all who knew them and were buried in Mathew cemetery at Kinderhook. To Samuel and Anna (Christy) May were born eight children, namely: Michael, deceased; Henry, of Drumore township; Malanthan, deceased; Mary, deceased; Margaret, of Kinderhook; Sarah, deceased; Samuel C.; and Anna C., deceased.

Samuel C. May was born Dec. 4, 1853, in a house which stood but a few hundred yards from his present residence. At the age of seventeen years he learned from his father the mason's trade, which he followed successfully for many years, starting out for himself at the age of twenty-eight. He married in Martic township, Feb. 22, 1886, Miss Anna E. Fares, a native of West Hempfield township, daughter of Henry and Rebecca (Cain) Fares. Henry Fares was the son of an old settler of Lancaster county, a blacksmith and farmer. Henry was born in West Hempfield township, May 1, 1835, and married Rebecca Cain, who was born March 7, 1839, daughter of John and Mary (Hippie) Cain, of Lancaster county, of German ancestry. To Henry and Rebecca Fares were born four children: Anna Elizabeth, wife of Samuel C. May; Joseph; John; and Margaret, deceased. In earlier life Henry Fares was an engineer. He is now engaged in farming in Martic township, where he and his wife are devout members of the United Brethren Church.

In 1887 Samuel C. May gave up his trade for agricultural pursuits. He began farming in West Hempfield township, where he has ever since successfully continued. To this he in 1896 added the poultry business at Kinderhook and he is now one of the prosperous and influential farmers and business men of the township. In politics he is a Republican, and among the fraternal orders, a Master Mason.

WILLIAM M. BRYSON, one of the most venerated retired farmers of Salisbury township, and an ex-carpenter of more than ordinary skill, was born in Millwood, Salisbury township, Lancaster county Pa., March 22, 1826, and is the fifth of the ten children that resulted from the marriage of Jesse and Margaret (Myers) Bryson.

The parents were also natives of Lancaster county, but have long since passed away to a world where, it is fondly believed, there are none of the toils, cares and asperities that afflict life on this mundane sphere. Jesse Bryson was a stonemason by trade and was called away in 1854, when fifty-two years old, but he had lost his wife in 1842, at the age of fifty-two. Their remains lie in Georgetown cemetery. The ten children alluded to were named, in order of birth, as follows: Isaac, deceased; John, who is a retired lumber dealer at Los Angeles, Cal.; Joseph, who died in Libby prison; Mary A., wife of Edward Dorsey, of Adair county, Iowa; William M.; Margaret, wife of James McGuire, of Viola, Ill.; Elizabeth, deceased; Jesse, a miller in Iowa; and Catherine and Samuel, who died young. John Bryson, the paternal grandfather of William M. Bryson, was also a native of Lancaster county, an evidence in itself of the long residence of the family in the State of Pennsylvania.

William M. Bryson lived with his parents on a farm until he had reached the age of nine years and then took leave of his home and for six and a quarter years lived on a farm in Strasburg; he then returned to the home place, where a year and a half later his mother was called to her final rest and William M. again went to live among farmers, with whom he worked until the fall of 1850, when he began learning the carpenter's trade; this he followed for twenty years and then again resumed farming, settling in the meantime on his present farm in 1862, and continuing actively in the pursuit of agriculture until 1876, when he retired.

Mr. Bryson having reached the years of discretion and matured judgment, selected for his companion through life a most estimable young lady in the person of Miss Margaret Patton, and having wooed and won her consent, married her in Lancaster, Oct. 17, 1850; to this felicitous union were born four children, namely: John, an iron worker at Lebanon; William, deceased; Jacob, who is employed in a spice mill in Philadelphia, and is married to Rachel Martin, who has borne him three children; and Jesse L., who is still under the paternal roof, but who is, sad to relate, blind.

Mrs. Margaret (Patton) Bryson was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Oct. 22, 1827, the sixth child in the large family born to Linton and Elizabeth (Reel) Patton, of Lancaster county, the former of whom died at the age of seventy-one years, while the latter survived until Jan. 1, 1879, when she expired at the age of eighty. Their family of fifteen children were born in the following order: John, who is now deceased; Lydia, deceased wife of Henry Coffroad; Samuel, of Earl township; Elizabeth, a widow in Salisbury township; Catherine, widow of William Rissel, of Compassville; Margaret, who died Dec. 31, 1894, the wife of William M. Bryson; Rachel, wife of John Elmer, of Salisbury township; Ann, in Reading, wife of Henry Miller; Gabriel, deceased; Jane, married to Henry Ammon, in Gap, Lancaster county; Henry, a farmer in Salisbury township; Mary, wife of Harrison Ross, of Chester county; Harriet, wife of John Ross, also in Chester county; Abraham, and Leah, both living in Salisbury township and unmarried.

William M. Bryson, although a modest and unostentatious citizen, has in his day done as much as any man in promoting the growth and prosperity of Salisbury township. Public-spirited and alert, he has been one of the foremost to detect what has been wanting to add to the convenience and comfort of the public; has been prompt in his financial contributions to the remedying of such wants, has ever advocated the construction of good roads and of culverts and bridges so as to furnish easy transportation over the highways and to reduce to a minimum the time and labor consumed by farmers in transferring their products to market, and to facilitate travel in general, and has thus aided in enhancing the value of farm property throughout the township. He has always been an ardent friend of public education, was a school director for twelve years, and was largely instrumental in bringing to their present high standard of efficiency the district schools of the township; he has also served as a member of the county board of supervisors for nine years, his care of his township's interests in that body being so satisfactory as to justify his repeated election by an appreciative and gratified constituency. In politics Mr. Bryson is a Republican, but as a rule he has been chosen as the guardian of his fellow-citizens more on account of personal abilities and unswerving integrity than for the sake of party triumph. Not infrequently has he been selected as judge and inspector of elections, in which capacity he has served so impartially as to elicit the commendation of all, irrespective of party affiliations. On just such men as Mr. Bryson does the growth of the community depend.

CHRISTIAN K. NEWCOMER, deceased. The Newcomer family has been prominently identified with the development of Lancaster county and like many another family of prominence won its way upward through manly struggles with adverse circumstances. Upon the father of Christian K., Jacob Newcomer by name, especially devolved the stern duties of life at an early age, for when Jacob was twelve years old, the eldest son of the family, his father died, and upon his young shoulders fell largely the responsibilities of managing for his mother the farm in Manor township. Jacob grew up on the old homestead and there remained through life. He and his family were devout members of the Mennonite Church and for many years he was a deacon of the church. He married Miss Barbara Kauffman, and to them were born ten children, nine of whom reached maturity. These children were: Elizabeth, who married Abraham Sanders and is now deceased; Barbara, deceased; Christian K.; Jacob K., a Mennonite of Manor township; Joseph, a farmer of Manor township; Mary, who married Jacob Snowley; Catherine, widow of Jacob Lindeman, of Manor township; Abraham, of the same township; Isaac, who died unmarried; and Anna, whose death occurred in childhood. Jacob, the father, died in 1861, aged sixty years and the mother passed away in 1858.

Christian K. Newcomer, the third child and eldest son, was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Oct. 11, 1830. He was reared in Manor township and there received a good common school education. Adopting farming as his vocation, he was for many years a prominent agriculturist of Manor township.

The marriage of Christian K. Newcomer and Elizabeth M. Mellinger was solemnized Nov. 20, 1866, and the union has been blessed with two daughters, Anna E., wife of Jacob S. Spangler, a farmer of West Hempfield township, and Elizabeth A., who makes her home with her sister in West Hempfield township. The wife and mother was born in Manor township, Oct. 19, 1835, daughter of Dr. Henry and Anna (Hertzler) Mellinger, of Manor township, her father having been a prominent physician. The Mellinger family is one of the oldest in Lancaster county, having descended from Benedict Mellinger, a native of southern Germany, who immigrated to America and in 1746 settled in Manor township, Lancaster county, the original farm still being in the possession of the family.

Upon a well tilled farm of eighty-six acres in Manor township, Christian K. Newcomer continued general farming after his marriage. He became one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of that township. In politics he was a Democrat and himself and wife were prominent members of the Old Mennonite Church. He retired from active life about a year prior to his death, which occurred in October, 1886. His wife preceded him to the grave, passing away Jan. 16, 1879. Their remains were interred in the burying-ground of the Habecker Mennonite Church.

MILTON WIKE (deceased), late a retired butcher and a director in the Columbia National Bank, was born in Fairview Village, Manor township, Lancaster county, Pa., Jan. 25, 1831, a son of George and Sarah (Eberlee) Wike, of Columbia.

George Wike was a cooper by trade, but for many years was a pilot on the Susquehanna river. In his latter days, however, he was employed by the State as a slip boss, and finally retired to pass the remainder of his days in ease and comfort. He died in Columbia in 1858, at the age of fifty-two years, a Lutheran in his religious belief, although not a member of any congregation. His widow, who was born Nov. 3, 1806, is a member of the Episcopal Church and has her residence in Columbia. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wike were fourteen in number, and were named as follows: Susan, who died when five years old; John, who was married, but is now deceased; Milton, whose name opens this article; Ann Jane, of Philadelphia, and the widow of Jacob Wall; Nathan E., railroad conductor in Columbia; Emma Frances, who died young; George W., married to Mary J. Wagner; Henry M., who was killed in the army; Hannah J., wife of Henry Mullen, of Philadelphia; Samuel F., a widower, a railroad engineer, in Columbia; Andrew J. and Albert, who died young; Eunice, widow of Edwin Stair, who was a dry-goods merchant of Columbia; and Franklin, who died young.

George Wike, Sr., paternal grandfather of Milton, who came from Berks county to Lancaster when a young man, was a shoemaker by trade, and was twice married. Milton's maternal grandparents, John and Anna (Neil) Eberlee, were natives of Germany and Lancaster county, Pa., respectively. John Eberlee was born in Wonseck, a town in the Margrave der Bysith, in the circle of Franconia, Nov. 25, 1755, and was confirmed in the Lutheran faith. His father, who was also named John, was a butcher and also a burgomaster of Wonseck, and his mother bore the maiden name of Margaret Ballach. John, the younger, landed in America, June 3, 1777, and May 4, 1784, married Anna Neil, who was born in Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pa., April 6, 1767, a daughter of John and Jean (Mease) Neil. To their union were born the following children: John, Oct. 15, 1785, died Oct. 20, 1785; Jean, born Sept. 30, 1786; Margaret, born June 14, 1788; Elizabeth, born April 10, 1790; and Sarah, Mrs. Wike. All the children had their nativity in Columbia, and all, with the exception of one who died in infancy, were married.

Milton Wike, in his boyhood, was employed on the river as a carrier of shingles, and later worked for his father, who was a butcher, until he was nineteen years old. He then began the butcher business on his own account, and bought and sold horses, cattle and other live stock, or anything that he could buy and sell, and continued in this line until 1885, when he gave the butcher branch of the business to his brother George, and became a drover. His custom was to buy poor cattle in Pittsburg, Pa., and Buffalo, N. Y., fatten them, and then sell them in Philadelphia and Baltimore. He continued in business until 1894, when he retired.

Mr. Wike was for a long time a director in the Grey Iron Works, but, in 1900, sold his stock and resigned his directorship. At the time of his death he was and had been for four years, a director in the Columbia National Bank. He was also a stockholder and director in the Susquehanna Rolling Mill until 1898, when the mill was sold to a syndicate for $175,000, the stock standing at par.

In January, 1862, Milton Wike married, in Columbia, Miss Elizabeth A. Hinkle, who bore him three children: George, of Columbia, married to Sally McCoy, and a machinist in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Edith, deceased wife of Edwin Smith; and Flora, deceased.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. (Hinkle) Wike was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pa., and is a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Magill) Hinkle. The father was a farmer and an attendant at the German Lutheran Church, and died in August, 1862, when sixty-two years old; the death of the mother took place in July, 1870, when she was fifty-eight. Their children were eight in number and were born in the following order: Samuel, who was killed in the army; Catherine, wife of Peter Mangas, a miller and farmer of York county, Pa.; Elizabeth A.; Mary, wife of Amos Mullen, of Bellefonte, Pa.; Patience, wife of Augustus Killian, express agent at Lancaster; Jacob, Sarah and Christiann, all of whom died young. Mrs. Wike's paternal grandfather, John (better known as Yohan), came from Switzerland, settled in West Hempfield township, and married Catherine Kaufman. He was a renter, and after his death his sons, Isaac and Henry, succeeded him in the management of the farm, but, as it was not for sale, they could not buy it. It was a large tract and belonged to the Bethel & Heise estate. But the brothers realized a fortune, and when worth $40,000 removed to Columbia, where they owned two brick dwellings, separated by a wall, and, in order to be more conveniently connected with each other, they cut a gateway through this partition. To Isaac there were born five children on the farm, and Henry reared ten on the same place. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Wike were Lawrence and Christiann Magill, who first located in York county, but early came to Lancaster county, and settled in West Hempfield township.

Mr. Wike owned and highly prized as an heirloom a sampler made by his mother and worked in silk, for which she had to go to Lancaster. It is 18x28 inches in size. It delineates a large oak tree, a lamb and a lady sitting in a chair in the act of sewing. It also bears the following lines:

Sarah Eberlee is my name;
With needle wrought the same.
In Lancaster county I was born
The third of November, in the morn,
1806, as I am told,
Which makes me near 11 years old.

Mr. Wike was a Knight Templar Mason, and in politics was a Republican. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, and his upright walk through life won for him hosts of friends. His death occurred Aug. 25, 1900, and he was interred in Bethel cemetery.

JOHN S. SNYDER, the efficient and energetic Pennsylvania Railroad dispatcher at Columbia, was born in Soudersburg, Lancaster county, June 5, 1851, a son of John C., and Jane (Given) Snyder, natives of the same borough, the former of whom was a carpenter by trade.

In 1854 John C. Snyder, with his family, removed from Soudersburg to Strasburg, in 1858 he removed to Lancaster; in 1860 to Alexandria, Huntingdon county; and in 1870 came to Columbia. He and wife were parents of twelve children, viz.: Anna E., widow of Henry S. Wood, of Lancaster; Elim G., a grocer in the same city; John W., who died young; Margaret J., widow of William Jacobs, of Philadelphia; Oliver W., a bricklayer in Lancaster; Catherine S., wife of Thomas D. Lundy, special officer for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Lancaster; Mary M., married to H. A. Hoffman, a wagonmaker at Tyrone, Pa.; Elmira L., wife of John Folk, railroad conductor at Columbia; Sarah E., who died single; John S., whose name stands at the opening of this sketch; Edwin A., who was a railroad conductor and was thrown from his train and killed at Witmer Station, Nov. 1, 1894; and Ada J., widow of Emanuel Sprout, a flagman. John C. Snyder was born, Feb. 21, 1805, was of German descent, and died April 3, 1894; Mrs. Jane Snyder was born of Irish extraction, June 30, 1810, and she died April 16, 1898. Both she and her husband were members of the M. E. Church, and their remains were interred in Mount Bethel cemetery.

Andrew Snyder, father of John C. Snyder, came to America when quite young, served in the Revolutionary war, and at his death had reached the remarkable age of 112 years; his remains were interred in Roland's burying-ground, near New Holland, Lancaster county. The father of Mrs. Jane (Given) Snyder was killed at Gordonville, Pa., on a railroad operated by the State at that time.

John S. Snyder, at the age of seventeen years, began learning gas-fitting and plumbing, but two years later, July 9, 1870, entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in Philadelphia, as freight brakeman; he held this position two years, was then a flagman in Columbia, for eighteen months, was next a conductor, until 1889, and was then made train dispatcher.

On June 19, 1878, Mr. Snyder married Miss Katherine E. Sittler, in Columbia, and after his marriage, his parents came to live with him. Three children, Margaret M., Joseph S. and Anna W., now brighten his home. Mrs. Katherine E. Snyder was born in York county, Pa., in May, 1855, a daughter of Joseph and Rachel A. (Morrow) Sittler, of that county. The former, who was born April 23, 1814, for many years conducted a hotel at Long Level, York county, then for five years lived in retirement, and died, Jan. 27, 1882; his widow still resides at Long Level. The children born to Joseph and Rachel Sittler were seven in number, viz.: Katherine E.; Martha R., who died in 1896, the wife of Randolph Rutledge; Joseph W., hotelkeeper at Long Level; James B., in the Pension Department at Washington, D. C.; Abraham H., railroad engineer at York; Agnes M., wife of Truman Schultz, in the cigar business at Long Level; and Russell B., is in the cigar trade at East Prospect, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Katherine E. Snyder, Abraham and Anna Sittler, of Baltimore, Md., came to Lancaster county to live, remained a few years, and returned to Baltimore, but then came back to Pennsylvania to stay, settling in Prospect. Her maternal grandfather, William Morrow, came from Ireland.

John S. Snyder is a member of the O. of R. C., the I. O. O. F., and the K. of M. Religiously he belongs to the M. E. Church. In politics he is independent.

ABRAHAM PATTON, carpenter and builder, located in Alert, Salisbury township, was born near his present home, Jan. 31, 1840, son of Linton and Elizabeth (Reel) Patton, the former of whom was a blacksmith by trade and later worked as a laborer. He died in January, 1867, aged seventy-one years, his widow surviving until 1879, and dying at the age of eighty years. They were interred in the Pequea Presbyterian Church cemetery. The following children made up their family: John, deceased; Lydia, late wife of Henry Coffroad; Samuel, aged seventy-nine years, a resident of Earl township; Elizabeth, residing in Salisbury township; Margaret, deceased, wife of William Bryson, of Salisbury township; Catherine, the widow of William Rishel, living in Compassville; Rachel, married to John Elmer, of Salisbury township; Gabel, deceased; Jane, married to Henry Ammon, of Gap, Pa.; Ann, married (first) to Henry Wademan and (second) to Abraham Miller, of Reading; Henry, a farmer of Salisbury township; Abraham; Mary, married to Harrison Ross, ex-county registrar of Chester county; Harriet, married to John Ross, a farmer of Chester county; and Leah.

Abraham Patton attended the district schools and remained at home with his father until his marriage, after which he began housekeeping and has followed the carpenter trade. On Aug. 19, 1861, at Lancaster, he enlisted in Co. A, 79th P. V. I., and served under Captains William Kendrick, James Benson and Edward McCafferty, faithfully performing the duties of a soldier for a period of three years. Mr. Patton participated in some of the most serious and decisive battles of the war, including Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga and Chattanooga, going then with Sherman to Atlanta; he was discharged on account of the termination of his enlistment, June 19, 1863. Mr. Patton was severely wounded in the right side, by a musket ball, in the battle at Perryville and was kept for seven weeks in the hospital at New Albany, Ind. After his return from the war he worked at the carpenter trade and now is one of the leading builders of the locality.

In January, 1870, Mr. Patton was married in New Holland, to Miss Mary Palmer, born in Earl township, in September, 1842, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Bowers) Palmer, of Earl township, who had these children: Ann, deceased wife of James Dunlap; Rebecca, married to Israel Gabel, of Lancaster; Maria, the widow of Solomon Shaffer, of Earl township; Mary, the wife of Mr. Patton; Margaret, deceased wife of John K. Diem, of Leacock township; Oetmer, a carpenter of Chester county; and Amos, deceased. Mr. Palmer was a farmer of Earl township and died in 1867 at the age of seventy-one years, his widow dying in 1879, aged eighty years. They were buried in the Pequea Presbyterian Church cemetery.

To Mr. and Mrs. Patton these children were born: Clara, the wife of William Kiser, a cigar-maker in Lancaster; Anna, the wife of Elwood Menzer, a painter, in New Holland; Lillie, Henry and Samuel, at home.

In politics Mr. Patton is a staunch Republican. As a business man, he is regarded as reliable and competent, and as a citizen, he commands the respect of the community.

PETER G. MESHEY. Mr. Meshey's life of fifty-seven years has been full of activity, yet he is as vigorous in mind and body as when, thirty-five years ago, he donned a soldier's uniform to fight the battles of his country.

Peter G. Meshey was born in Mt. Joy, Feb. 11, 1846. His father, who was also named Peter, was the son of John and Maria (Myers) Meshey, and both father and grandfather were farmers. His mother was Susan Groff, the daughter of Abraham Groff and Nancy Myers, whose home was originally in Chester, but who later removed to Lancaster county. Mr. Meshey's parents were members of the Dunkard communion, and both are deceased, his mother having died in 1890, at the age of seventy-two, and his father four years later, after reaching his seventy-sixth birthday. Peter G. was their second child and eldest son; an elder sister, Anna, was killed by a corn-cutting machine; two brothers, Abraham and Amos, are also deceased, and a younger brother, Jacob, resides in Steelton. Four other sisters, Mary, Susan, Elizabeth and Amanda, are married: Mary is Mrs. John Stoffer, of Rapho township; Susan married Jacob Heise, of Annville; Elizabeth is the wife of Henry Nauman, of Rapho; and Amanda, Mrs. Cyrus Heise, has her home at Mt. Joy.

Peter G. Meshey remained at home with his parents until 1865, when he enlisted in Co. G, 16th Pa. Cav. He took part in the battle of Petersburg, as well as in other engagements, and in the final fighting around Richmond. He was mustered out in that city in August, 1865. From 1871 to 1873 he was engaged in farming, and for a year followed the business of a butcher in Lancaster. Two more years were devoted to agriculture, and for a time he was employed in hauling coal at Lancaster. In 1885 he came to Columbia to begin work as brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad. Four years later he was made a flagman, and in April, 1900, was given the position of extra conductor. He is a property owner in Columbia, where he resides, and where he is held in esteem. He is a member of the G. A. R., and politically a Republican. He is also a member of the Church of God.

He has been twice married. His first wife, to whom he was united in Bainbridge, Pa., in 1866, was Elizabeth, daughter of Nathaniel Striner, of Lancaster. She died Sept. 1, 1869, at the age of twenty, leaving a daughter, Alice, who is now the wife of John Shudy, a boss painter, of Manheim. On May 28, 1871, he led to the altar Miss Lucy A. Bletcher, of Lancaster. Fourteen children have been born to them, nine of whom are living. All bore the middle name of Bletcher; they were christened Amos, Clinton, Aeneas, Harrison C., Ella, Jacob, Euphemia, Milton, Blaine, Susan, Morton, William, Sarah and Margaret.

Mrs. Meshey was born in Rapho township, Nov. 17, 1852. She is the granddaughter of John and Anna Bletcher, of Rapho township, Lancaster county, and the eldest child of Samuel Bletcher and Caroline Bander, his wife, who was a daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Flowers) Bander, of Lebanon county. Her grandfather was a farmer and her father was a blacksmith. Samuel Bletcher was born in January, 1828, and now resides in Manheim, Pa. Her mother died in November, 1878, in her forty-sixth year. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Bletcher were Benjamin, Barbara, Mary, Emeline, Melinda, Jacob, Sarah and Amanda. Of this large family only four are living. Benjamin resides at Manheim; Mary is Mrs. Ezra Gingeras, of Columbia; and Amanda is the wife of Leo Kriner, of Middletown.

ABRAHAM G. HERR. One of the old families of Lancaster county is represented by Abraham G. Herr, whose father, grandfather and great-grandfather in the paternal line of ancestry were each named Abraham. He was born Oct. 7, 1834, on the farm in West Hempfield township, upon a portion of which he now lives in that retirement which is earned by a career of successful activity during earlier years.

The parents were Abraham and Mary (Greider) Herr, natives of Manor and West Hempfield townships, respectively. The father was born in 1806 and became a prominent citizen of West Hempfield township, serving for two years as supervisor. He lived to the age of eighty-two years and passed away in July, 1888. The mother, who was the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hartsler) Greider, of Lancaster county, died in January, 1880, aged seventy-seven years. They were members of the Mennonite Church and were buried in the old Mennonite cemetery at Landisville. To Abraham and Mary (Greider) Herr were born the following: John, deceased; Abraham G.; Martha, late wife of Henry Wirtz, a farmer; Mary, of Lancaster, widow of A. P. Breneman; Benjamin, a farmer of Cole-rain township; Frances, wife of Levy S. Root, of Eden township; and Elizabeth, of Lancaster.

Abraham G. was reared on his father's farm in West Hempfield and with the exception of seven years he has lived there all his life. He married in September, 1859, Miss Elizabeth Balmer. She was born in East Hempfield township in January, 1839, the daughter of Jacob and Mary (Sanger) Balmer, and the granddaughter of Martin Balmer, a farmer of Lancaster county, and of Christian Sanger, a farmer and carpenter of Manheim township. Jacob Balmer remained a lifelong farmer of Lancaster county and died in 1896, aged seventy-eight years. His wife Mary died in 1890, aged sixty-eight years. They were members of the Mennonite Church and were buried in the cemetery at the Kauffman Meeting House, in East Hempfield township. Three children were born to them: Elizabeth, wife of Abraham G. Herr; Mary A., who married S. G. Summy, a hotel proprietor at Manheim; and Emanuel, deceased.

To Abraham G. and Elizabeth (Balmer) Herr has been born one daughter, Mary B., who married Daniel D. Bowers, a farmer of Rapho township. On Aug. 4, 1864, Abraham G. Herr enlisted in Co. K, 195th P. V. I., for ninety days service, and was mustered out at Harrisburg, Nov. 6, 1864. The regiment was engaged in guard duty at Monocacy Junction. In 1879 Mr. Herr left the farm to take charge of a hotel in Penn township for four years. After living retired for a short time in Mountville, he resumed the hotel business in Penn township, continuing three years, until 1887. He then resided in Benfordsville for a year, when he purchased the old homestead in West Hempfield township, operating it successfully until the spring of 1900. In that year he sold all the farm except one and one-half acres, which he retained for a home and since then he has retired from active life. Mr. and Mrs. Herr are active and prominent members of the Mennonite Church. In politics he is a Republican. He is a man of unusually keen judgment and of profound convictions. His life in West Hempfield township has been one of influence, brightened by the esteem and respect in which he is held by all who know him.

GEORGE W. H. FREW, M. D., is one of the young and successful physicians of Paradise township, Lancaster county. After receiving his medical degree in 1895, he located in the community where he was born and reared, and there he has already attained prominence in his profession.

Dr. Frew descends from an old Huguenot family, which, driven out of France by religious persecution, had sought refuge in the north of Ireland, where the family remained through many successive generations. About 1830, or a little later, Shaw Frew the grandfather of our subject emigrated with his wife and two children from Ireland to America, and located in East Lampeter township, Lancaster county. About 1848 he removed to Leacock township where he purchased a farm and lived until his death in 1870 at the age of seventy years. He had married Miss Eleanor Butler, daughter of an Englishman, resident of Ireland, and sister of an officer in the English navy. She died in 1852, aged forty-two years. The family of Shaw and Eleanor (Butler) Frew consisted of the following children: David, deceased; James, deceased; Mary, deceased wife of Isaiah McKillips; William C., father of our subject; Shaw W., a resident of Vineland, N. J.; George B., deceased; and Mel-lisena E., deceased wife of B. C. Weaver.

William C. Frew, one of the most prominent citizens of Paradise township, and familiarly known as "Squire" Frew, was born in East Lampeter township, Feb. 18, 1842. He was educated in the common schools, and at the age of sixteen years he assumed the task of taking care of himself. Learning the trade of carriagemsmith he was employed at that trade and in various other temporary vocations, until the breaking out of the Civil war.

The career of Squire Frew in the army was long, honorable and eventful. He enlisted as a private Oct. 4, 1861, in Co. D, 2nd P. V. C., serving in the ranks until 1864. He was held in Libby Prison until the following March, when he was paroled, and was exchanged in June, whereupon he immediately rejoined his company and regiment. Again he was wounded, June 24, 1864 at St. Mary's Church, Va. It was a gun shot wound, and he was sent to the hospital, remaining until the following September. He also received a gun shot wound after the surrender of Lee, while doing duty as provost guard.

After his return from service Capt. Frew engaged in railroad construction for about two years, and then returned to his trade of coachsmith, at which he continued for about eleven years, during this time acting as foreman for some years for Jacob Wenger, coach manufacturer of Paradise township. In 1879 he began for himself the operation of a carriage manufacturing establishment, making all kinds of light vehicles for the local trade. Continuing this business successfully for twenty-one years, he sold out in 1900.

He has had an experience of about thirty years as local magistrate. He was appointed justice of the peace in 1872, holding that office continuously ever since, and in all this time he has had but two cases reversed by the higher courts. He has also served on the board of education for sixteen years, during nine years of which time he was secretary of the board. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of Cavalry Post, No. 35, G. A. R., of Philadelphia. For many years he has been a member of Washington Lodge, F. & A. M. To Mr. and Mrs. Frew have been born five children who are now living: Harry, who is postmaster at Paradise; George, sketch of whose life appears herewith; and Edith, May and Ross, at home. The mother of these children is a member of the Presbyterian Church, while the father is an adherent of the Episcopal faith, and is a vestryman of the Paradise Church.

Dr. George W. H. Frew, son of William C. and Susan (Hull) Frew, was born Oct. 13, 1871, in Paradise township. He was there reared to manhood, receiving his education in the public schools and at the Millersville State Normal. For three years he taught in the public schools. Choosing medicine as his profession, he in 1891, entered the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, graduating in the Medical Department in 1895. During his college years he also took a special course of one year in penmanship, and he is a fine penman. He was also engaged as a tutor after leaving the University. After receiving his diploma Dr. Frew located at once at Paradise, where he has since continued in general practice. Though yet a young man in the profession he has attained wide recognition and success. He is a member of the Lancaster County Medical Society, and also of the State Medical Society. He is the medical examiner at Paradise for a number of insurance organizations, including the Mutual Life of New York, the Prudential of Newark, the New York Life, and the Manhattan Life of New York, and the American Relief Association and Union Mutual of Cincinnati, Ohio. Among the fraternal orders he is an active member of Pequea Lodge, No. 161, I. O. O. F., at Paradise.

These children have now all passed away, with the exception of Peter Glosser, a blacksmith in Columbia.

Bauchman in the planing mill, and while with him learned the carpenter trade; he next worked in the old Columbia woolen-mill one month, when it was destroyed by fire, and then in the fall of 1869, became baggage master for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. In 1876 he went on the road as fireman, and in 1882 was appointed engineer, his present position.

On Jan. 17, 1883, Mr. Glosser was joined in matrimony at Philadelphia, with Miss Mary E. Gallagher, a native of Newtown, Lancaster Co., Pa., born May 5, 1857, a daughter of James and Eliza (Varnett) Gallagher, the former of whom was a shoemaker and died in Newtown. To Mr.

JACOB KENDIG, of the firm of Jacob Kendig & Son, tobacco packers at Silverspring, West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born in Manor township, this county, Nov. 8, 1830, and is a son of Rev. John and Mary (Mellinger) Kendig, the former of whom was a farmer and Mennonite minister who died in Manor township in 1849, at fifty-three years of age, and whose wife died in the same township at the advanced age of ninety-six years. Of the seven children born to John and Mary (Mellinger) Kendig, Christian died at the age of thirty years; Elizabeth of Manor township, was twice married, first to Jacob Dorschel and secondly to Christopher K. Witmer; John died in Iowa; Susan who died in 1899, was married to Rev. Peter Ebersole, a Mennonite minister; Martin is also among the departed; Jacob is the gentleman whose name introduces this biographical review, and Fanny is the widow of Henry R. Witmer.

Jacob Kendig was reared on the old homestead in Manor township, and made his home thereon until the death of his father, when, being about nineteen years old, he hired out among neighboring farmers for a few years and then came to Silverspring and embarked in general mercantile trade; he successfully carried it on for eighteen years, and then for six years was engaged in the live stock business as buyer, seller, drover and shipper. He made money at the precarious business, and then embarked in the tobacco trade as buyer, packer, etc., and this trade is still flourishing under the firm-name of Jacob Kendig & Son, his partner being his son, Jacob H.

Jacob Kendig married in Philadelphia, Nov. 16, 1856, Miss Catherine Hershey, who bore her husband the following-named children: Elizabeth A., and Franklin, who both died in infancy; Jacob H., partner with his father in the tobacco business at Silverspring and married to Effie Kauffman, who has borne him two children, Harry and Albert; Susan, married to J. J. Hougendobler.

Mrs. Catherine (Hershey) Kendig was born in Manor township and was a daughter of Benjamin and Susan (Reitzel) Hershey, the former of whom was a farmer and likewise a miller. Mrs. Kendig died in West Hempfield township, Feb. 15, 1900, at the age of sixty-four years, and her remains were interred in the Silverspring cemetery.

Jacob Kendig was never afraid of hard work and, when a young man, neglected no opportunity of making by his own exertions an honest dollar. He was observant of men, things and events, and profited by his observations, applying the results or lessons therefrom to the practical workings of his business, whether as a general merchant or a dealer in live stock. Mr. Kendig is now a director in the Columbia National Bank, and is likewise a trustee of the Silverspring cemetery. The firm name of Jacob Kendig & Son is very prominent in tobacco circles and stands without a blemish.

In religion Jacob Kendig is a member of the German Brethren Church, and in politics is a Republican. Socially the standing of the family is all that could be desired, the best people of the community taking pride in calling and recognizing them as friends.

CLARENCE NORTON McHOSE, whose delightful and much frequented studio of music is at No. 244 East King street, Lancaster, is a conspicuous figure in the musical circles of that city. Mr. McHose belongs to a well-known Pennsylvania family, and was born at Allentown Oct. 15, 1879. His father, Lucius H. McHose, lives at Catasauqua, and is a member of the firm of McHose Brothers, who control and operate extensive clay banks at Perth Amboy, New Jersey.

Clarence N. McHose spent his boyhood in Allentown, where he attended the public schools, finishing his education at Mercersburg Academy, of which institution he was musical director for a period of two years, and later he studied the organ with Prof. Fred. Wolle, of Bethlehem. He located in Lancaster four years ago, and his name soon became prominent in musical circles. He seemed to leap into popularity at a single bound, and to-day we find him one of the busiest men in all Lancaster county, teaching piano, organ and harmony. It is not only that his methods are thorough, but he is equipped for his work in far more than an ordinary way. Of course his studio contains a first-class, high-grade piano; but he also has a magnificent organ, and recently added a Virgil clavier to his equipment, the clavier being a key-board used for the development of hand and finger technique. It is an invaluable aid to students, and Mr. McHose enjoys the distinction of having been the first music teacher in Lancaster to introduce this instrument into the work of his students. He is particularly successful in the instruction of very young children, his genial disposition and patience winning their confidence. Nor is this all. Busy as Mr. McHose is with his many pupils, he finds time to be organist and choirmaster in Trinity Lutheran Church, director of the choir of Zion's Lutheran Church, and director of the Mozart Singing Society of Columbia, as well as other prominent musical organizations in his community.

Mr. McHose was married, June 19, 1901, to Miss A. Margaretta Vollmer, in whom he has found an invaluable assistant, as far as the practical side of the profession is concerned. They have one child, Allan Irvine McHose, born May 14, 1902. Mr. McHose is a genial and intelligent gentleman, earnest and enthusiastic in his work, and as popular in social circles as he is in the musical world. His work among our young people has been much appreciated, and no man within our knowledge has secured a stronger hold upon our people in the same length of time than has Clarence N. McHose in the past four years.

REV. JOHN M. SAUDER. Among the leading men and representative citizens of East Earl township, prominent in both agricultural and religious circles, is Rev. John M. Sauder, a resident of Goodville, Lancaster county, who, since May 16, 1895, has been a minister of the Mennonite Church.

Rev. John M. Sauder, was born in the old house which has been his home ever since, June 27, 1864, a son of George H. and Judith (Martin) Sauder, the former of whom passed out of life, Sept. 17, 1894, at the age of sixty-seven years. The latter still survives, a beloved member of her son's family.

Father George H. Sauder was a son of Peter and Hettie (Hoffman) Sauder, and was born in East Earl township where his whole quiet, worthy life was spent. An agriculturist all his days, he gave his attention to the cultivation of his farm of seventy-five acres, where his father had erected the comfortable residence still standing. George H. Sauder was a good citizen, a worthy man and a consistent member of the Mennonite Church. To him and his wife were born ten children: Mary, deceased; Nancy, the wife of Israel Hallinger, a druggist in East Earl township; Catherine, deceased; Martin, deceased, a farmer of Caernarvon township, whose wife and six children survive; Susannah, the wife of Levi Good, of Brecknock township; Hettie, deceased; John M.; Lizzie, deceased; Lydia Ann, the wife of Martin Swigart, of East Earl township; and Rebecca, unmarried, who lives in the old home.

John M. Sauder was reared on the farm and became its practical manager at the time of his father's retirement from activity. This is one of the carefully cultivated and productive estates of that part of the county, and Mr. Sauder has given much attention to general farming. His improvements have been numerous and his adoption of modern methods and implements, quite in the line of progress.

Mr. Sauder gained his education in the public schools, and when twenty years of age, he not only became a member of the Mennonite Church, but decided to dedicate his youthful energies to religious work. His ordination as a minister by Bishop Jacob N. Brubaker followed on May 16, 1895, and he was assigned to duty in the Weaverland district, which includes five places of worship. Here he has, for the past eight years, been faithfully laboring, and although young in years, he is old in religious experience, and has done work for his church and people that promises to bear fruit long after he has passed away.

Mr. Sauder was married on Nov. 8, 1885, to Miss Susannah Good, who was a daughter of John and Mary (Zimmerman) Good; she was born in Brecknock township, but was reared in East Earl township. To Mr. and Mrs. Sauder has been born a family of six children, all surviving except Susie, the youngest, the others being: George, Eli, Menno, Mary and Lizzie, all bright and intelligent, and promising to become worthy members of society.

LOUIS HENRY PFAEFFLE, until lately one of the esteemed and successful citizens of Lancaster, and a stock-broker in Rooms Nos. 232 and 234, in the Woolworth building, is now located in Philadelphia. His birth was in Wurtemberg, Germany, and he has been identified with American interests since his eleventh year, and has been engaged in business for himself since his sixteenth year.

Henry Pfaeffle, the father of Louis Pfaeffle, who is now a resident of Los Angeles, Cal., came to the United States when he was but fourteen years old, returning to Germany at maturity, and there marrying Miss Mary Lauer, whose father was a miller in Wurtemberg. Sixteen children were born to this marriage, several of whom are deceased. One brother, Ernest, a brave lad in the Philippines, was wounded and died a year ago, far from home, a martyr to his country. The living members of this once numerous family are: Louis Henry; Bertha, wife of Jacob Emerling a hotel-keeper; Henry, who lives in San Francisco; Charles, a cigarmaker in Philadelphia; Robert, who is a druggist of San Francisco; Eugene, who is in the cigar business, in San Francisco; Matilda, in San Francisco; and Clara, who is with her parents in Los Angeles, Cal.

Louis Henry Pfaeffle came to America, as noted, at the age of eleven years, a bright, intelligent, ambitious youth, ready and willing to turn his attention to anything promising to advance his interests in a legitimate way. For eight years he followed the butchering business, embarking then in hotel-keeping, managing the Maennerchor hotel for eight years. During five years of this time he was also an amusement manager, being the first to introduce light variety shows to the public of Lancaster. These enterprises were carried on without interfering with other lines as Mr. Pfaeffle also conducted a cafe in the rear of the Central market, at Grant and Market streets, and for a time was proprietor of Knapp's

Villa. In the early part of 1897, Mr. Pfaeffle began business as a stock-broker, in Columbia, and after conducting the business there for about three years, returned to Lancaster, and here built up an extensive business. He has at comparatively a recent date located in Philadelphia.

The marriage of Mr. Pfaeffle was to Miss Matilda Gerstner, of Baden, and five children were born to this union: Otto Henry, who ably assisted his father in the brokerage business; Henry George, a clerk; Henrietta, a capable saleslady in Watt & Shand's New York store; and Florence and Gertrude, in school. Fraternally Mr. Pfaeffle is connected with the order of Odd Fellows, the Eagles and the Royal Arcanum, being active and popular in all of them. His religious connection is with the Lutheran Church. His standing in business circles in Lancaster was deservedly high, and few men had been more successful in building up and establishing firmly a prosperous business through unassisted effort.

ALBERT M. DEICHLER, the book, news and stationery dealer at Nos. 141-143 North Queen street, is a striking example of a self-made man; and, except for the retail store keepers who buy their supplies from him, few people in the community have an adequate idea of the size and scope of his business. He is not only a retail book, news and stationery dealer, but a wholesaler of imported fancy novelties and toys of every description. An expert salesman represents him on the road, and gives close attention to his trade, which includes not only fancy novelties, but ice-cream boxes, paper bags, wrapping paper, twines and all kindred supplies.

Albert M. Deichler is a son of Philip Deichler, who, hale and hearty at the age of eighty-three, still carries on the business of shoemaking and goes hunting for exercise and pleasure. Philip Deichler and his brother, Maximilian, now deceased, were among the very early settlers of Lancaster county, having come to this country from Germany in 1820. Their father, who came with them, died soon after arriving in Pennsylvania. Philip Deichler married Miss Elizabeth Ann Leaman, belonging to a well known Lancaster county family, and of the ten children born to this union five are still living: Charles, a coachsmith; Harry, for the last twenty years in the service of the Adams Express Company, in Lancaster; Irene, who lives at home; Frank, bookkeeper for the Girard Trust Company, of Philadelphia; and Albert M.

Albert M. Deichler was born in Lancaster, June 2, 1870, and left school at the age of thirteen to help his father in his shoe business and to sell papers on the street. At seventeen he went to pattern-making, a trade he followed for eight years. At the end of that time he started in business as a news dealer in a most modest and unpretentious way. His first location was in his father's shoe shop in the Shober building, on West Orange street. From there he set up for himself at the corner of North Queen and West Orange streets, where he erected a frame structure, and where he quickly developed one of the largest newspaper and periodical trades in the city. In 1898 he removed to No. 156 North Queen street, where he soon built up the handsome business of which mention is made above. Aug. 1, 1902, Mr. Deichler moved into larger quarters at 141-143 North Queen street, where he occupies the first floor and basement of a large double building, with floor space of 100 feet by forty feet, where the demands of his constantly increasing trade can be more easily met.

Mr. Deichler was married in 1893 to Miss Emma Gerlitzki, a daughter of the late Joseph Gerlitzki, who was an artist in his calling as a wood carver. To this union have come two sons, Frank Raymond and Albert Melvin. Mr. Deichler is a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of Malta, the Odd Fellows, the Jr. O. U. A. M., the Royal Arcanum, the Knights of the Ancient Esenic Order and the Young Men's Democratic Society. Personally he is very popular, and has a host of friends.

CHARLES MARTIN REILING, the efficient official court stenographer of Lancaster county, although not a native of Lancaster has been here for so many years, and has made such an honorable record for himself, as to fairly entitle him to a place on these pages.

Mr. Reiling's ancestors came from Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, and his grandfather Reiling settled at Gettysburg, Pa. His father, John Martin Reiling, was born in Adams county, where he became a farmer, and he is now living retired at Philipsburg, Center county. John Martin Reiling married Elizabeth Zeilinger, daughter of a well known farmer of Monterey, Pa., and two sons were born of this union: Harry Calvin, now a jeweler at Philipsburg; and Charles M., of Lancaster.

Charles Martin Reiling was born at Gettysburg, July 15, 1867, and was educated in the public and private schools of the district. Leaving school he became a teacher for one year, meanwhile studying stenography, and we next find him in the employ of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., in Philadelphia, as a stenographer. After remaining there one year, he was with the Pencoyd Iron Works, then with a wholesale grocery house, and then as a stenographer with the Sporting Life Publishing Co. On Jan. 15, 1894, Mr. Reiling was appointed official court stenographer to the courts of Lancaster county, and has held that position ever since, with entire satisfaction to the court, the attorneys and all who come in contact with him. His cosy office is in the Brown Law Building, on North Duke street, and his home is at No. 235 East Orange street. Socially Mr. Reiling belongs to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and politically to the Young Republicans, taking a very active interest in the latter organization, of which he was vice-president for two terms, and is now chairman of the Library committee. Of pleasant address and kindly disposition, Mr. Reiling has made hosts of friends during the years of his residence in this, the home of his adoption.

JOHN S. ROHRER, a general farmer of Rapho township, was born on his present farm, Jan. 11, 1868, a son of Jacob and Mary (Kreider) Rohrer. On Sept. 28, 1893, Mr. Rohrer was married at Lancaster, Pa., to Miss Lizzie Nissley. Three children have been born to them, Edna N., J. Norman and Alvin N., all at home.

Mrs. Lizzie (Nissley) Rohrer, was born in Rapho township, May 13, 1870, a daughter of David E. and Martha M. (Rutt) Nissley, of Lancaster county. The father was a farmer in Rapho township, and died in February, 1893, aged sixty-three years, and is buried in the old Nissley graveyard in Rapho township. His widow is residing with her daughter, Mrs. Risser, in Manheim. She is a member of the Mennonite Church, as was also her husband. They were the parents of the following children: Menno, a farmer of Rapho township; Amos, deceased; Lizzie, wife of the subject of this sketch; Martha, wife of John R. Risser, of Manheim; David, of Chicago, Ill.; and Simon, a farmer of Rapho.

Mrs. Rohrer's grandparents on her father's side were Samuel and Anna (Eby) Nissley, of Lancaster county; on her mother's side the grandparents were David and Martha (Miller) Rutt of Lancaster county.

John S. Rohrer has always lived in his present abode. Upon his father's retirement in 1894, he took charge of the farm and has conducted it very successfully ever since. The family are members of the Mennonite Church. In politics Mr. Rohrer is a Republican, but up to the present time has never sought office. He is prominent in his district and stands well as a man of sterling worth. Of kindly disposition he has a large circle of personal friends.

WENGER R. GROFF, now residing on his farm, a mile and a half west of New Holland, long known as the Groff homestead, is one of the representative and progressive men of Lancaster county. He was born July 14, 1862, on the same farm which has been held in the family since it was first settled by Hans Groff, the founder of the family in America.

Wenger R. Groff is a son of Daniel W. and Savilla (Ranck) Groff, and a grandson of Abraham Groff, who married a Miss Wenger. Abraham Groff is remembered as a wealthy and public-spirited citizen who owned four farms in Earl and West Earl townships, and a mill property. The farm on which Wenger R. Groff now lives was a part of his property, and he was both a miller and a farmer. In a manner he may be said to have been a self-made man, as most of his property was acquired by his own efforts and good management. By his honest heart and gentle bearing he won many friends. Not a member of any church, his bearing and habits were in keeping with the most religious character, and his life of eighty years was spent in industry and kindliness. His children were as follows: Daniel the father of Wenger R.; Samuel, of Bareville; Christian, a farmer of West Earl township; Abraham, deceased; Maria, the widow of Rev. John Graybill; Nettie, the widow of Peter Snyder, of Reading, Pa. To his second wife, Catherine Good, was born Elam, a resident of Bareville.

Daniel W. Groff, the father of Wenger R., died July 16, 1889, when fifty-six years old. He was reared on the mill farm in West Earl township, and was educated in the common schools. After his marriage he located on the farm where Wenger R. is found to-day. This farm comprises 109 acres, and it was his home during his life-time. In Lancaster county he was noted during his active years as one of the heaviest stock-dealers, buying the stock in Pittsburg, and selling them to Lancaster county farmers. When the stock was brought into fine condition, he would again buy it and ship to eastern markets. In local affairs he was always deeply interested, held to the principles of the Republican party, and was an intelligent and public-spirited citizen.

Mr. Groff was married to Miss Savilla Ranck, who was born in Earl township, and who died Sept. 20, 1899, at the age of fifty-six years. Jacob Ranck, her father, lived in Earl township. Mr. and Mrs. Groff were the parents of thirteen children: Oliver, deceased; Ida, the wife of L. S. Wiedler, of Manheim township; Wenger R.; Kate, the wife of John Schaeffer, of West Earl township; Mollie and Savilla, both deceased; Daniel, a resident of West Earl township; Diller, who lives in West Earl township; Maggie, wife of John Reinhold, of Rothsville; Walter, unmarried, living in West Earl township; Annitta, the wife of Edward Wenger, of West Earl township; Rufus and Rolland, both unmarried and living in West Earl township. The mother of these children was a member of the Reformed Church.

Wenger R. Groff was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools. When he was twenty years old he began operations for himself at Lancaster, in the cattle and butchering business. After two years of this work, he returned to the farm, where he has since made his home, owning the old homestead of 109 acres which was selected by his ancestor, Hans Groff, as noted above. Mr. Groff gives his attention wholly to his farm and to his stock dealing, which he took up on the death of his father, and which he carried on until 1901 when he turned his stock dealing business over to his brothers. He has always been known as a bright and progressive character, ever ready to help on every good work in the community. In politics he is a Republican, and has been supervisor.

Mr. Groff was married in September, 1897, to Miss Elizabeth Brubaker, a daughter of Shaeffer Brubaker, of Warwick township. She was born in Ephrata, Lancaster county, and is the mother of one child, Wenger.

MILTON N. MILLER, a general farmer of Rapho township, Lancaster county, is one of the leading citizens of his district. He was born March 1, 1874, a son of David L. and Leah (Nissley) Miller, of this same farm.

Mr. Miller was reared to agricultural pursuits, and obtained his education in the common schools of his district. He has made his home on the farm where he was born, and has made for himself quite a local reputation as a good, careful and judicious farmer. In politics he is identified with the Republican party. His religious connection is with the Old Mennonite Church.

On Nov. 10, 1896, in West Hempfield township, Mr. Miller was married to Mary N. Hostetter, a granddaughter of Jacob and Nancy (Stauffer) Hostetter, farming people of West Hempfield township, and Christian and Lizzie (Nissley) Newcomer, natives of Lancaster county. The parents of Mrs. Miller were Christian and Barbara (Newcomer) Hostetter, the former of whom was born on his present large farm in West Hempfield township, and the latter, born in Rapho township, died on the old farm, Dec. 6, 1884, at the age of forty-seven years. She was buried in the Cross Roads Meeting House cemetery in East Donegal township. The father was born Jan. 22, 1835, and after a long and busy life, retired from activity in 1897. Both parents were long valued members of the religious body known as Brethren in Christ. Their children were: Anna N., who married Benjamin Nissley, a farmer of East Hempfield township; Reuben N., who married Annie Miller, and lives in Rapho township; Jacob N., who died young; Lizzie N., widow of Albert Engle, now residing with her father; David N., who resides on the old homestead; Christian N., who is a farmer in Manor township; Barbara N., who married Enos Hess, a bookkeeper in Center county; Abraham, who resides on the home farm; and Mary N. (Mrs. Miller), born Oct. 24, 1873.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller are highly regarded in their community and have a very wide circle of friends and acquaintances. They have one child, Barbara H., born April 30, 1902.

HENRY H. KLINE. One of the representative citizens of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, industrious, enterprising and prosperous, is Henry H. Kline, now engaged in general farming and dairying at Klinesville. He is a native of East Hempfield township, where he was born Oct. 18, 1838, the son of John and Catherine (Hougendobler) Kline, and the grandson of Jacob and Elizabeth (Docksie) Kline, of East Hempfield township, and of Joseph and Mary (Heastand) Hougendobler, of West Hempfield township. Both grandfathers were farmers of German extraction. John Kline, the father of Henry H., was in early life a stone mason but later followed farming. He was a member of the New Mennonite Church. He died Jan. 2, 1876, aged sixty-nine years. His wife died Aug. 4, 1868, aged fifty-five years. They were buried in Klinesville cemetery. Eight children were born to John and Catherine Kline, as follows: Mary, of Columbia, Pa., widow of Jacob Metzgar; John, deceased; David, retired in Klinesville; Ephraim, a farmer of Klinesville; Anna, wife of John Seifried, a farmer of Lancaster; Jacob deceased; Henry H.; Samuel, a painter of Marietta.

Henry H. Kline was reared on the home farm, where he remained until he was eighteen. He then began life for himself at farm work among the neighboring agriculturists and in 1870 he purchased from his father's estate the well-tilled farm where he now resides and which he has since operated. He married Oct. 24, 1871, in West Hempfield township, Miss Hester A. Sourbeer, who was born in Columbia, Sept. 16, 1849, the daughter of Joshua and Charlotte (Hougendobler) Sourbeer, prominent residents of West Hempfield township. To Henry and Hester (Sourbeer) Kline have been born five children, namely: Joshua S., who married Anna M. Wagner and lives at Columbia; Charlotte S., at home; Joseph C., a silk weaver at Marietta; Edmond, who died at the age of two years; and Charles B., at home.

Politically Henry H. Kline supports the principles of the Republican party. His wife is a member of the M. E. Church. In the social life of West Hempfield township they are highly esteemed for their many estimable qualities, with which are united that shrewd judgment of men and affairs, and that staunch unswerving integrity which command admiration and insure a deserved and abundant prosperity.

ANDREW JOHN DUNLAP, the popular collector and solicitor of the Sprenger Brewing Co., is descended from a family prominent as patriots and soldiers in the American Revolution.

John Dunlap, the great-great-grandfather of Andrew John, came from Scotland in 1735. His lands were located near Weavertown, this county, and he made his home at Pequea, in Leacock township. His children were: Andrew, Isaac, Archey and John. Of these Isaac located in Center county, Pa. The father shouldered arms in the war of the Revolution, and went forth to battle for the freedom of his adopted land.

John Dunlap, son of the emigrant, was also a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He married Isabella Lytle, of Pequea, and their children were:

James, Isaac, John, Archey, Andrew, Susan, Jane, Isabella, Lizzie and Rebecca. Of these, Susan married John McKillips, and is still living, making her home at No. 431 West Walnut street, Lancaster; Isaac served in the war of 1812; and John, the only merchant in the family, was also weighmaster of the Pennsylvania Railroad, when that road was under State control.

Andrew Dunlap, son of John and grandfather of Andrew John, lived most of his life in the vicinity of Weavertown, Leacock township, but spent several years in Lancaster township, where he died in 1854. He married Mary Miller, of Weavertown, and their children were: (1) John M., the only one of the family to enter the professional world, is a successful physician in Manheim, and prominent in public affairs, having served two terms as State Senator from his district; he married Matilda Arndt, of Manheim Borough, and became the father of Francis, M. D., and Charles. (2) James Clemson is mentioned below. (3) Isaac Lytle. (4) Samuel served in the Civil war. (5) Lizzie and (6) Hallie completed the family.

James Clemson Dunlap, son of Andrew and father of our subject, was married to Frances Hastings, whose father was a farmer of Colerain township, and whose ancestors were from England. Six children were born of this marriage, all of whom are living: Andrew J., our subject; Maria L., wife of Abraham D. Swartley, of Lancaster; Stephen H.; Emma J., who married Adam Deitrich, of Rohrerstown, and has three children, Minnie (who is attending Madame Cotta College), Davis and Alta; Alice I., who lives at home; and Frank M. Mrs. Frances (Hasting) Dunlap, the beloved mother, entered into rest Nov. 29, 1901.

Andrew J. Dunlap was educated in the public schools, and entered the high school, but was obliged to leave at the age of fourteen years to assist his mother in the management of the family patrimony. After the death of his father, his mother bought a tract of land known as Conestoga Park, where she lived for twenty-four years, when she sold it for park purposes. Here young Andrew, although but a lad, developed rich sand and stone quarries, and remained on his mother's place, until he had fitted himself by study during spare hours for school teaching, and by a partial course at Millersville. For seventeen winters he taught school with much success. During these years he taught day and night sessions in Eden, Warwick and Manheim townships; and for one winter he was principal of the night school for boys in Lancaster, and held the same position sixteen years in Conestoga Mills Night School, a school maintained by S. S. Spencer. Mr. Dunlap gave up teaching to take a position as deputy collector in the Internal Revenue office, serving in that responsible position under the Collectorship of John P. MacGonigle, and George W. Hensel, and also that of Sam Matt. Fridy, having entered the office under President Cleveland's first administration. Leaving the government employ after some years of very creditable work, he became a bookkeeper for Frank A. Rieker's Brewery, a position which he left to take a much better offer from the Sprenger Brewing Co., which place he has held for the last eight years.

In 1877 Mr. Dunlap was married to Miss Lydia K., a daughter of the late Emanuel Landis, a farmer whose lands extended on both sides of the Big Conestoga bridge, and of this union were born seven children: John, Charles and William, deceased; Frank, who is clerk for the Standard Oil Co.; Bessie Landis, the wife of W. Z. Roy, a bookbinder and church organist; Uhler Hastings; and Stephen Edgar. Mr. Dunlap, with his family, belongs to Trinity Lutheran Church, although his father's people were Episcopalians, and his mother's Presbyterians. In Conestoga Park, a beautiful place that is full of old Colonial and Revolutionary associations, there is a subterranean passage way, one hundred feet long, that is supposed to be the work of colonists in the old and troubled times when the Indians roamed Lancaster county. The old home building of the Dunlap family, in Conestoga Park, is supposed to have been built a hundred and sixty years ago, by a Mr. Witmer and for a time during the Revolution was a hotel. Stories and legends enough to fill a volume center around it, and Mr. Dunlap is full of its lore and can recount it in a most interesting manner.

EDWARD B. REITZEL, a brakeman in the service of the Pennsylvania Railway Co., is a son of Ephraim H. Reitzel, and a somewhat extended narrative of his family history may be found in the biographical sketch of his father elsewhere. He was born in Columbia, Sept. 17, 1871, and, with the exception of one year, which he spent in Philadelphia, he has passed his entire life in that town. He entered the employ of the railway company on March 1, 1893. He is a young man of remarkable powers of observation, and while not a profound student he is an active thinker, keeping in close touch with the vital issues of the day. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Order of Railway Trainmen.

On Dec. 23, 1897, Mr. Reitzel was united in marriage to Miss Ida M. Witman, who was born in East Prospect, York county, April 7, 1870. They have one son, William Taylor, born in Columbia June 25, 1901. Mrs. Reitzel is the second of a family of six children born to John A. and Alice A. (Hoke) Witman, the latter the daughter of John and Julia (Green) Hoke.

Joseph Witman, great-grandfather of Mrs. Reitzel, lived in Germany, where he was a farmer. He was a soldier, too, and participated in the battle of Waterloo, where he was wounded, and he died on the battlefield. His wife was Mary Rhoads, who was also German born.

Joseph Witman, grandfather of Mrs. Reitzel, was born in France, Feb. 7, 1818, and came to York county, Pa., in 1836. By occupation he was a farm-

(8) Maggie, born Aug. 14, 1857, a twin to Elizabeth, married Alfred Flager, and has had four children; Jane (deceased), Nannie, Alfred, Jr., and Hammond. (9) Frank, born Jan. 22, 1860, is a carpenter in York; he married Carrie Miller, and has four children: Annie (a school teacher), Helena, Frank and Manuel. (10) Emanuel, born May 20, 1862, is a merchant in Colorado; he married Katie Shaw, and has two children, Sylvan and Ruth. (11) Emma, born, Nov. 22, 1864, married Albert Seigert, who died in 1899. She has one child Catherine, and lives in York.

John A. Witman, son of Joseph and father of Mrs. Reitzel, was born in 1846, and he married Alice A. Hoke, who was born in 1847, a daughter of John and Julia (Green) Hoke. Their children were: Anna E., Mrs. H. Folkenroth, of York; Ida M., Mrs. Reitzel; John J., deceased; Carrie H., wife of Harry Reikart, of York; Frankie, who died in infancy; and Harry M., at home with his parents. John A. Witman is a retired farmer and coach maker, and both he and his wife are members of the M. E. Church.

Mrs. Reitzel in maternal lines is descended from John Hoke, who was born in Adams county. He married Catherine Homan, and had four children, Hammond, Manuel, Mary Ann and John, all of whom lived in York. Of these, Hammond married Elizabeth Free, and had seven children, Leah, Adam, Sarah Ann, Amanda, Catherine, Rebecca and Emma; Manuel married Katie Blatz, and had two children, Harmon and Katie; Mary Ann married Gust Wiser, and had children, Annie, Ella (deceased), Percy and Florence.

John Hoke, youngest son of John and Catherine (Homan) Hoke, married Julia Green, and had three children, Joshua, Alice and Elizabeth. Of these, Joshua married Telitha Meck, and they have five children, George, Mamie, William, Ward and Viola; they live in Middletown, Pa. Elizabeth married John Gilbert, and they have ten children, Titus, Neva, Claudia, Iva, Vergia, Lula, Etta, Moma, Bertha and Blaine.

Alice Hoke, mentioned above, was married Oct. 18, 1866, to John Witman, and became the mother of six children as previously stated.

EMMOR SHAW, in his life time a general farmer and excellent citizen of Sadsbury township, was born on his late farm, Feb. 14, 1859, son of Benoni and Ruth (Seeds) Shaw, both of Chester county.

Benoni Shaw came to the Lancaster county farm in 1841, and although by trade he was a mason, he was principally engaged in farming. For many years he was one of the school directors, faithfully attended to school affairs, and was a just and honorable man. His death occurred Jan. 6, 1888, at the age of eighty-one years, his widow surviving until Jan. 17, 1901, when she passed away at the age of eighty-three. Both were buried in the old Friends' cemetery at Homeville, Pa., both having been exemplary members of the Society of Friends. The children born to Benoni Shaw and wife were: Phoebe, widow of Clayton Thompson, of Atglen, Pa.; Oliver, a farmer and drover, in Colerain township; Maggie, unmarried and residing in Westchester, Pa.; Sallie, who married Robert Fitch, and lives in Chester county; John, a carpenter, living in Iowa; Franklin, who conducts a grist mill, in Rochester, N. Y.; and Emmor.

Emmor Shaw was reared on the home farm, acquired his education in the public schools, and was engaged in farming almost all his life. Some three years were spent at Andrews Bridge, in Colerain township, where he managed the hotel, during the first year in association with his brother-in-law, but the rest of the time alone. He then returned to Sadsbury township and resumed agricultural pursuits, and was justly regarded as one of the successful farmers of this locality.

On March 3, 1887, in Andrews Bridge, Emmor Shaw was married to Miss Ella Roop, who was born in Pequea, Salisbury township, daughter of Abraham and Susanna (Hurst) Roop, the former now residing in Colerain township, a retired farmer. Mr. Roop was born Jan. 2, 1833, and for thirty years operated the "Octoraro Hotel," was postmaster at Andrews Bridge, and has long been a director in the Christiana Bank. Mrs. Susanna (Hurst) Roop died in Octoraro, in April, 1886, at the age of fifty-one years, and was buried in the Union Presbyterian cemetery there. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Roop were: John M., a hotel keeper at Andrews Bridge; Clara, deceased, who married Emlen Davis; Ella, who became Mrs. Shaw; Joseph H., a merchant at Andrews Bridge; Abraham C., a farmer of Colerain township; and Clement, who died in infancy. The grandparents of Mrs. Shaw were: John and Barbara (Martin) Roop, and Peter and Diana (Sheaffer) Hurst, all of Lancaster county.

Mr. Shaw was prominently identified with the Republican party, and for two years was the capable township auditor, being known as one of the most upright citizens of Sadsbury township. He died Aug. 30, 1902, and was laid to rest in Union Presbyterian cemetery on Sept. 3d, following. The family is one which is universally respected through this part of Lancaster county.

He came to the United States from Germany, in 1853, locating in Millville, N. J. He also took a course at Weidler's Business College, after which he took up the profession of phonography, making a specialty of legal work, and in which he has been entirely successful. His services are used by the leading members of the Bar, and are also sought by other professional gentlemen.

Mr. Myers married Miss Lilian A. Remley, daughter of the late R. J. Remley, contractor and builder of the Lancaster County Almshouse, the John L. Arnold building on North Queen street, and other prominent structures. Mr. Remley entered into rest in February, 1900. One son and one daughter have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Myers, Nelson K. and Anna C. Mr. Myers is a member and deacon of Grace Lutheran Church, and is also secretary of the Sunday school. He is secretary of Empire Council, No. 120, Jr., O. U. A. M., and belongs to Emanuel Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Fulton Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle. He is a Republican, but takes no active part in politics, preferring to devote his entire time to the duties of his profession. Mr. Myers lives in a cozy home at No. 630 East King street, opposite Lancaster County Prison Park, and there, when freed from cares of business, he finds substantial rest and comfort with his family.

AMOS WADE, one of the better and more public-spirited farmers of East Drumore township, was born in Lancaster county, in November, 1829, a son of Christian and Mary Wade, who came from Germany, and settled in Eden township, on the property now owned by Robert Montgomery. There Amos Wade was reared, the oldest member of a family of six children. Christian Wade, the next in the family, lived and died in East Drumore township; Aaron Wade married and died in Eden township, leaving a widow and three children, Mabel, Myrtel and Rufus; Mary Wade is the widow of Samuel Marrow, who died in Lancaster leaving a family; Eliza Wade is the widow of Daniel Hess, of Martinsville, Lancaster county; Emma Wade is the wife of Thomas McNichols, who lives at Martinsville, and has a family.

Amos Wade had his education in the public schools, and was a farmer until his death. In December, 1853, he married Mary A. Keen, who was the daughter of Henry and Julia (Mowrer) Keen, a noted family in Lancaster county. Mrs. Wade was born Nov. 17, 1833, in Eden township, on the Keen homestead, near Quarryville. The young couple settled for a few years on the old Wade homestead, which Mr. Wade had bought, and then removed to the present home of the family in East Drumore township. There Mr. Wade died in August, 1888, leaving a widow and ten children. (1) Jacob C. Wade, born in August, 1854, is a railroad employe, married Winfried Bryson and has one son, Ira. (2) Anna E. They now reside in Elkhart, Ind., where he is engaged in the car shops. They have one daughter, Nellie Marie. (9) Aaron Wade died in childhood. (10) Amos Milton Wade, the youngest of the family, born in March, 1874, remained at home until his father's death, when he became a clerk with Mr. Kauffman at Buck, where he was engaged for three years. For about the same time he was employed in the store of John McElhaney, at Quarryville, where he now is in business for himself as a restaurant keeper and a green grocer. In 1890 he married Miss Lillie Rohrer, a daughter of John Rohrer, of Strasburg, and has one daughter, Miriam.

Amos Wade was a Republican, and at different times in his life filled a number of local offices. For some ten years he was a school director. In religion he and his wife were members of the Old Mennonite Church. His name is held in endearing memory by his children and friends, as that of a good and noble man, who has entered into rest, "and his works do follow him."

O. N. SOUDERS, one of the well-known and respected citizens of Lime Valley, was born in Salisbury township, July 15, 1858, a son of Peter and Rosa (Bonholtzer) Souders, the former of whom is now a resident of Chester township. The latter passed out of life in 1872.

The Souders family has been known in Lancaster county for several generations, the grandfather, Christian Souders, having lived and died in Salisbury township, where he owned three large farms. His religious connection was with the Old Mennonite Church, in which peaceful community he was a leader. His family consisted of four sons: Henry, David, Christian and Peter; and two daughters, Barbara, who married Joseph Souders, and moved to Elkhart, Ind.; and another daughter who married a member of the Hershey family.

Peter Souders, the father of O. N. Souders, was born and reared in Salisbury township, where he became a well-known citizen and successful farmer, efficiently filled the offices of supervisor and school director, and he remained in Salisbury township until his retirement from activity in 1897, when he removed to Chester county, where he now resides. His political sympathies have always been with the Republican party. The children born to Peter and Rosa Souders were: O. N.; Abraham, a blacksmith, of Paradise township; Sherman, a blacksmith, at The Gap; Louisa, deceased, who was the wife of Martin Miller; Lyda, deceased; and Barbara. Mr. Souders, the father of this family, is connected with the Presbyterian Church.

O. N. Souders was reared on his father's farm and obtained his education in the public schools. At the age of nineteen, he left the farm in order to learn the blacksmith's trade, and this business he has followed until the present time, buying out the man with whom he first worked, six years before, at Lime Valley. In 1900, Mr. Souders was made postmaster at Lime Valley, and conducts this office in connection with his blacksmith business. For the last few years he has been a member of the school board, and he has always taken very great interest in educational matters. Mr. Souders has also been active in the political affairs of the township, and is highly regarded by the Republican party.

On Feb. 22, 1883, Mr. Souders was married to Miss Dolly Barr, a daughter of Jacob Barr, of Salisbury township, and to this union have been born four children: Rosa, Pearl, Orma, and Jay. As a worthy citizen and industrious, progressive and enterprising man, Mr. Souders has won for himself a high position in the esteem of the community.

WILLIAM W. HENSEL, contracting carpenter at No. 619 East Orange street, Lancaster, belongs to one of the old and influential families of the community.

The Hensels came from Germany to America, and their ancestors in this country served in the Continental army. They were of the Lutheran faith for generations, and some of the earlier Hensels have stones marking the location of their ashes under the steps of the Trinity Lutheran Church in Lancaster.

John Hensel, the grandfather of William W., lived for many years in the old stone dwelling on East Orange street, near Shippen, which was razed only a few years ago to make way for modern buildings now standing there. John Hensel's sons were: Christopher, Jacob and William Henry. Jacob, the only one of the three brothers living, makes his home in Philadelphia, and although engaged in the iron business for an ordinary lifetime he is now a model maker, and is regarded as a great genius in wood work. He is now seventy-five years old, and has just finished a miniature village, the little structures in which are so numerous that they fill a good-sized room. A hotel in this beautiful little village is composed of several thousand pieces of wood. Once he made a fac simile of Mount Vernon, and so remarkable was this work that it was exhibited at Lancaster, and was viewed by many thousand people.

William Henry Hensel, the father of William W., died in February, 1894, at the age of eighty-six years. With an inherited talent for wood work he became a successful contractor and builder, and among the notable buildings erected by him were the well known Henderson mansion, the late Hiram B. Swarr's house on North Duke street, Mrs. G. W. Arnold's house on South Main street, the late George Nauman's house on King street, the home of Col. Eshleman on East Orange street, and many other substantial and elegant structures. In much of this work he was assisted by his son, William W. Hensel. At one time he served as the efficient superintendent of the city water works. William H. Hensel was married to Catherine Trissler, belonging to the well known family of that name in Lancaster county. From this union was a large family of children, of whom eight lived to reach the age of maturity, and five of these are still living: George O., a carpenter and florist, a pioneer in the higher cultivation of flowers in his community, is now a resident of Delaware; Peter C. was for years a letter carrier, at one time superintendent of the water works, and more recently sanitary officer in the employ of the Lancaster Board of Health: Mary Salina; Ann Eliza is the wife of Adam J. Auxer, whose biography may be found on another page, and William W. Mrs. Hensel died in 1844, and from the union with his second wife, who was a Miss Aument, two children were born: Emma, the wife of John Bursk, of Carlisle; and Alice A., widow of Walter A. Haldy, the cashier of the Lancaster County National Bank.

William W. Hensel was born in the old Hensel home on East Orange street, Nov. 14, 1835, and had his education in the Lancaster public schools. At the age of thirteen, he began work at the carpenter trade with his father, with whom he remained until 1868, when he started in business for himself, and has followed it continuously to the present time, having laid a hardwood floor in one of the handsome houses of Lancaster, as late as the autumn of 1900. During the war of the Rebellion Mr. Hensel did carpenter work for the Pennsylvania Railroad for a period of twenty-six months. Thirty-one years ago he built the commodious dwelling at No. 619 East Orange street, in which he has since resided, and he has planted and grown many noble fruit trees in the ample grounds surrounding this building, for he is an enthusiastic and well informed horticulturist.

William W. Hensel was married in May, 1860, to Miss Kate, a daughter of Peter B. Long, a well-known tobacconist of Philadelphia, especially prominent in Odd Fellow circles, being the oldest member of the order at the time of his death, which occurred in 1890. Miss Long came to Lancaster to make her home with her grandmother, graduated from the Girls' high school; at the age of sixteen she became a teacher there, later teaching at the noted Linden Hall at Lititz. To this union were born five children: Laura, the widow of Jacob D. Weaver; Mary, who died in infancy; John Atlee, who also died in infancy; Charles W., who died at the age of fifteen years, having lived long enough to show the inheritance of Hensel constructive abilities; and Nellie, now the assistant teacher in the Franklin street school, having special charge of department of drawing. Miss Hensel, in addition to being a graduate of the State Normal at Millersville, class of 1893, was graduated from Prang's Art Classes in 1896, and has since taken special instruction from Leon Von Ossko, Lancaster's most distinguished artist.

William W. Hensel, like his ancestors, is a Lutheran in religion, and in politics is a staunch Republican, though never a candidate for official station. His career has been a useful one, and the city owes much to him and men of his class, honest, industrious and upright in all they do.

JACOB BREINIG, a prosperous German business man, in middle life emigrated in December, 1870, with his wife and children from his native land to America. Locating soon after in Columbia, he became prominently identified with the manufacturing interests of the city, adding to its industries and representing in his personality a high type of citizenship.

Jacob Breinig was born in Germany and in Berfelden he married Elizabeth Wolf, who was born in that town Jan. 6, 1835, a daughter of George (3) and Margaret E. (Rebscher) Wolf. George Wolf was a cloth and woolen manufacturer in Germany, where he remained through life, dying in 1878 at the age of seventy-five years. His wife died in Germany in May, 1867, aged forty-nine years. Many of their nine children found homes in America. Elizabeth, widow of Mr. Breinig, was the eldest; Catherine died unmarried in Germany in 1898; Mary is the widow of John Wolf, who died in Germany, and she now resides in Philadelphia; Peter died in California; George has retired from business and lives in Philadelphia; Henry lives in Lancaster; Jacob died in Louisville, Ky.; William is a carpet manufacturer of Pittsburgh; and Adam. To Jacob and Elizabeth (Wolf) Breinig were born four children, three of whom died in infancy. The surviving child, Katharine Mary, married Frank A. Rieker, brewer, of Lancaster.

In Germany Mr. Breinig was engaged in the cloth business; in December, 1870, he was prompted to come to America by the success in business which relatives had attained in Philadelphia. Reaching that city, he remained only a few weeks, and in January, 1871, removed to Columbia, Pa., where he engaged extensively in the carpet weaving business. He died July 16, 1876, aged fifty-nine years, and was buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery. Himself and his family were prominent members of the Salem Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Wolf) Breinig, the surviving wife, married for her second husband, June 21, 1877, at Columbia, Pa., William Buchholz, who was also a native of Germany, and in America, the land of his adoption, became a prominent business man.

William Buchholz was born in Bavaria, Germany, Nov. 4, 1824, son of John W., and Anna Mary (Beckman) Buchholz. The father was engaged in the butcher business and died in 1841, aged forty-nine years, his wife surviving until 1856, dying at the age of sixty-three. Their three children were: William; Mary, who married Henry Metz, a baker, and died at Philadelphia; and Lena, who died at the age of fourteen years. William followed successfully in Germany the vocation of his father, and in November, 1851, at the age of twenty-seven years, came to America. He settled in Lancaster, and for about eight years was employed as a butcher in that city. In 1859 he married for his first wife Catherine E. Young, and then a few days later removed to Columbia, where he engaged in the butcher business for himself. He prospered to an unusual degree and in April, 1874, when at the age of forty-nine years he retired from active business life, he had amassed a competence and became one of the most influential citizens of the city. His success was due wholly to his own efforts. He died March 28, 1894.

The widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Buchholz, now resides at Columbia with Mrs. Katharine Mary Rieker, her daughter by her first marriage. Both possess unusual force of character and have won the affection and deep respect of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

GEORGE BOLSTER. To be known as a good citizen and honorable and upright man has been the ambition of many who have not been willing to earn such honor, but such is justly the reputation of George Bolster, one of the prominent business residents of Ephrata borough, for Mr. Bolster started out in life with very limited means and has honestly earned his present competency and established record.

George Bolster, the well-known proprietor of a business in marble cutting and tombstones in Ephrata, was born April 9, 1831, in Bavaria, Germany, a son of the distinguished musician, Frederick Bolster, and Mary (Hartman) Bolster, both of whom were born in Germany, the former in 1796 and the latter in 1794, both of them noted for their longevity, the former passing away in his ninety-first year and the latter in her eighty-ninth. Frederick Bolster was an accomplished musician who had been employed as a music teacher in some of the royal palaces of Europe, and naturally became very well known in Reading, Pa., where he finally made his home. In 1847 the family came to America, and as soon as the musical gifts of Mr. Bolster became known he was employed as a musical director, continuing for many years as such.

George Bolster, of this sketch, received his education in Germany and was thoroughly instructed in music by his talented father. In 1847 he began to learn the trade of stone-cutter, and engaged in this business for a number of years in Reading. He was also a musical director and teacher there. Later he located in Ephrata and has successfully conducted a good business and gained the esteem of the community.

The marriage of George Bolster occurred in 1858, to Miss Bertha Strauss, of Pottsville, Pa., a daughter of Samuel Strauss, and a niece of the late Mr. Strauss, who served as member of Congress. Mrs. Bolster was born Feb. 14, 1834, and became the devoted mother of these children: Theresa, born in 1858; Frederick, born in 1860; Lidia, born in 1864, married to John Taylor, of Ephrata; Flora, born April 18, 1863, died in 1872; Jennie, born Aug. 19, 1866, married to John Bishop; George, Jr., born Feb. 24, 1868; Clara, born March 12, 1872, married to Amos Burkholder, of Lancaster; Herman, born Dec. 31, 1873, died March 20, 1885; and Frances, born Feb. 8, 1876, who remains with her parents.

Mr. Bolster is one of the old-time Democrats, a believer in the Jeffersonian principles of Democracy; he is fraternally connected with the I. O. O. F. and with the German lodge of Harugari. In all his dealings with his fellow-citizens he has been honorable and upright and belongs to the very best type of German-Americans in Lancaster county.

At the present time he is engaged in the practice of his profession in that city. He is unmarried. Mrs. McMichael died in 1860, and the same year Mr. McMichael was married to his third wife, Anna, the daughter of James and Martha (Curswell) Steele. Mrs. McMichael was born in 1835 in Lancaster county and died in 1897, leaving five children. Mr. McMichael bought a farm in East Drumore township in 1869, and for some years owned the father's homestead. He has proved himself an active and progressive farmer. In 1888 he gave over his farm to his son, Jacob, and erected his present house on the west end of the farm on the road leading to Quarryville, where he has since led a retired life.

Mr. McMichael has always been a Republican, and belongs to the Methodist Church. There his family has always been prominent. He was one of the founders and builders of the Mt. Hope Methodist Church, where he has been class leader and Sunday-school superintendent and also held other offices for many years.

The McMichael family have had an honorable history. The grandfather of the present representative of the family, of whom this is written, was a Revolutionary soldier. The father of Mr. McMichael fought in the war of 1812. The family has always been identified with the county affairs.

Mr. McMichael is over ninety years old, and keeps his mental faculties clear to a remarkable degree. His general health is good, though his power of speech has been somewhat lessened by a recent stroke of paralysis. His disposition is genial and sunshiny and he is always looking on the bright side. For many years he has been known as a professional peace maker and some very knotty controversies have been settled by him. Modest and retiring, he has cared little for popularity but has lived a beautiful life, in close accord with the Golden Rule.

JOSEPH M. BENNETT, a retired mechanic, was born in Columbia, Pa., March 18, 1824, and is still a resident of his native borough. His parents were Abel and Elizabeth (Markley) Bennett, natives respectively of Fairfax, Va., and Strasburg township, Lancaster county, Pa., both of whom came to Columbia at an early day.

Abel Bennett was an old stage driver between Columbia and Bainbridge, and died in 1840, at the age of forty years; his widow died July 26, 1860, aged seventy-three; both were members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were nine in number, viz.: Christian, who died of lockjaw; James, who was killed in 1870 on the Pennsylvania railroad; John, deceased, a locomotive engineer; Joseph M.; Susan, wife of William Moore, of Philadelphia; Thomas, killed at the battle of Antietam; Mary, married to William Burr, of Philadelphia; Samuel, a retired engineer of the same city; and Margaret, who died in infancy.

Sir John Bennett, the paternal great-grandfather of Joseph M. Bennett, was heir to a large estate in his native England, but as he came to America with the Marquis de LaFayette to assist in the war for the release of the American colonies from the yoke of Britain, his estates were confiscated to the crown. After the declaration of peace he settled near Fairfax Court House, Va., there married, and became a prominent agriculturist and citizen. John Bennett, Jr., came from Virginia to Lancaster county, Pa., in 1805, was the founder of the Bennett family in Columbia, and was the grandfather of Joseph M. Bennett.

The maternal grandfather of Joseph M. Bennett was a native of England, named Joseph Markley, who was apprenticed, after his arrival in America, to a doctor in Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Pa.; after filling out the time necessary to reimburse the doctor for the cash paid for passage money, he went to work on his own account and became a prosperous farmer.

Joseph M. Bennett, at the age of twelve years, began working on the river as a passer of shingles from rafts, and this he followed until sixteen years old, when he began the trade of machinist, at which he served on the old State road until 1845; on the purchase of this road by the Pennsylvania road in 1857 he served the latter until January, 1899, when he was laid off on the pension list.

Mr. Bennett has been twice married, first, March 11, 1847, to Louisa J. Clepper, who was born in Columbia, Pa., Dec. 28, 1827, and was a daughter of Michael Clepper, of York county, who married a Miss Herr. Mr. Clepper was a bridge contractor by calling, and early settled in Columbia. To this first marriage of Mr. Bennett were born four children, namely: Charles E., a machinist of Hummelstown, Pa.; Francis A., a merchant in Columbia; James A., deceased; and Louisa J., who died in infancy.

The second marriage of Mr. Bennett took place in Lancaster, June 14, 1855, to Miss Frances N. Bartholomew, and to this union have been born two children, viz.: Henry A., a Pennsylvania Railroad engineer, residing on his own property; and George T., a machinist, at home, but married to Mary E. Groom, daughter of Arthur and Mary (McGloughlin) Groom, of Lancaster.

Mrs. Frances N. (Bartholomew) Bennett was born in Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Nov. 2, 1833, and is a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Mowery) Bartholomew, of Strasburg township. Henry Bartholomew was a stone mason by trade, and died Nov. 20, 1865, at the age of seventy-three years; his wife reached the age of eighty, and died Nov. 20, 1873. The remains of both lie interred in the Mennonite cemetery at Strasburg. They were the parents of ten children, viz.: Mary, deceased wife of John Herr; Catherine, married to Jacob Pebble, of Lancaster; John, deceased; Addison, a miller in Rushville, Ind.; George, deceased; Susan, deceased wife of John Hebble; Samuel, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Price, of Tippecanoe City, Ohio; Barbara, who died young; and Frances N. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Bennett were John and Rachel (Zimmerman) Bartholomew, natives of Lancaster county, Pa., who removed to Ohio in 1838, where the grandfather engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Bennett's maternal grandparents were George and Susan (Shaffer) Mowery, the former of whom came to Lancaster with his parents when there were but three houses in that now thriving city.

James M. Bennett has always been public-spirited as well as patriotic. In February, 1864, at Lancaster, he enlisted in Co. D, 195th P. V. I., under Capt. Christ Hebble, and was honorably discharged in Philadelphia in February, 1865. He had no opportunity to participate in any battle, but for six months of his term was on guard duty in Washington, D. C. He is a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, and with his wife, an unusually bright, well-versed and active lady, is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church. The family reside in the comfortable dwelling erected by Mr. Bennett in 1851, where they enjoy the frequent visits of innumerable friends, although Mr. Bennett is suffering from a paralytic stroke sustained shortly after having been placed on the railroad pension list in 1899.

JOHN S. LEFEVRE, a retired farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born Feb. 14, 1827, and is a son of Tanner D. and Mattie (Shenck) Lefevre.

Tanner D. Lefevre was born in East Drumore township in 1804, and his wife in 1809. They were married in 1826, and settled on a farm in East Drumore township. He was a tanner by trade, and he followed this occupation in connection with agriculture. For some years he lived retired in Chester county, where he died in 1889. His widow passed away in 1897. They live in Chatham, and have one son, Walter.

John S. Lefevre was reared and educated at home, and in 1850 was married to Anna, a daughter of John and Fannie (Longenecker) Groff. Mrs. Lefevre was born in Strasburg township in 1829, and settled in Providence township with her husband. He was engaged in farming and lime-burning until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he enlisted in the 1st Pa. Reserves at the first call in the spring of 1861. He re-enlisted in the "Consolidated Bucktails," the 190th Pa. Reserves. This regiment was noted for its fighting qualities, and is known the world over for its bravery and extreme gallantry. Among other important conflicts he was engaged in the following: The seven days' battle before Richmond in June, 1862; Bull Run; South Mountain; Antietam; Fredericksburg, under Gen. McClellan; two days at Gettysburg; at Weavertown, on the Potomac; Rappahannock Station; White Oak Swamps, on the Chickahominy river; the second battle of Fredericksburg, under Gen. Burnside; and the battles of the Wilderness, where Mr. Lefevre was seriously wounded, both legs being broken by a shell. He was taken to Belle Plain hospital, later being removed to the hospital at Washington, and still later to New York and at Philadelphia, where he was under treatment until 1866. He was discharged at Harrisburg in 1867, with a record in which his wife and two children in Lancaster county might well take pride. Coming home he followed farming when he was able to do manual labor.

Mrs. Lefevre died in Providence in 1873, leaving a son, Elmer, and the daughter, Anna. Elmer, who was born in 1855, moved to Hardin county, Iowa, in 1863, where he engaged in farming. His wife, Ella Broyles, was a resident of Sterling, Ill., and is the mother of three children, Ruby, Dora and Ralph. Mr. Lefevre is a Republican, and belongs to the Bireley Post, G. A. R., No. 511, at Quarryville. He is one of the old veterans, and loves the memories and companions of the tented field and the battlefield. He is a most interesting conversationalist, and has a rich store of memories of that great struggle. He attends the M. E. Church.

ELDER THOMAS R. HIRST, now a retired carriage manufacturer at Christiana, Pa., was born in Leeds, Yorkshire, England, April 6, 1833, and is a son of John and Edna (Robinson) Hirst, English born and reared. They spent their lives in their native land, where in due season they passed to their reward in the Land Unseen. The father was a wheelwright, and died in 1852, at the age of forty-nine years. His widow survived his loss many years and died in 1890, at the age of ninety years. They had the following family: Benjamin, who died in England; Frederick, a marble worker in Yorkshire; England; Elizabeth, who is married and has her home in Yorkshire; a fourth child, deceased; Thomas R.;

Jabez, who died in England; Priscilla, who married and lives in England. The father of John Hirst was a cloth manufacturer.

Thomas R. Hirst was married in Lancaster, Pa., in 1861, to Sarah A. Lingerfield, by whom he had the following children: Frank, a carriage trimmer, living in Christiana, who married Eva Withero, by whom he has had one child; Harry E., a carriage-body maker, married to Margaret Rushworth, by whom he has had two children; Mary E., who married William E. Walker, a farmer in Sadsbury township, and is the mother of one child; Thomas I., who married a Miss Bucher, has one child, and is a machinist in Christiana; a child who died in infancy; Zelva M., unmarried and at home; John, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Sarah A. (Lingerfield) Hirst was born in Paradise township, Lancaster county, in 1837, and is a daughter of John and Catherine Lingerfield, her father having been in his active years a miller in Paradise township.

Thomas R. Hirst remained in England until he was twenty years old. When he was eleven he entered a machine shop, and led a laborious and hard-working life during his later youth. Coming to America in his early manhood, he found a home in Cecil county, Md., where he worked at the carriage business four years. In 1857 he came to Lancaster county, and for three years worked at his trade with James Winger in Paradise township, and then started a shop for himself in company with H. Parvin, a partnership that was soon broken by the enlistment of Mr. Hirst in Co. G, 21st Pa. Vol. Cav. in July, 1863, under Capt. William Philips. The company was recruited for six months, but after serving two months over time, reorganized and enlisted for three years. Mr. Hirst had his shoulder wrenched by a horse falling on him and was honorably discharged in the spring of 1864.

Mr. Hirst went to Lancaster after his recuperation to take a place in a carriage shop in that city. Samuel Cox, his employer, was building a hundred wagons for the government, and after the completion of that contract Mr. Hirst entered the Lancaster locomotive works for a stay of some few months. His next engagement was at Christiana with Enos Frame, a carriage maker, with whom he remained a year and a half. At the end of that time Mr. Hirst and Cyrus Lingerfield purchased a carriage shop, which they operated very successfully as long as Mr. Hirst felt it wise to continue in active business.

During his active years, Mr. Hirst held the position of road supervisor several years, and was town assessor three years. He is an honorary member of the I. O. O. F., having united with that order in England. Mr. Hirst is a charter member of the John A. Ross Post, No. 358, G. A. R., and is an elder and a trustee in the Presbyterian Church. His politics put him in accord with the Republican party, and he has been a member of the borough council for two years, and is president of the fire department. In the rebuilding of the new firehouse, for the purpose of keeping the fire company together, he took an active part, and on many occasions has proved himself a public-spirited citizen, being regarded as one of the benefactors of the town.

WINFIELD SCOTT, a general farmer of Sadsbury township, who is also engaged in the butchering business, was born in Chester county, near Marshallton, Oct. 10, 1857. His parents were Elwood and Hannah (Keach) Scott, both of whom were natives of Chester county, where the former was a butcher for a number of years, but who now lives in retirement in Philadelphia, at the age of sixty-eight years. The mother died in 1865. The grandfather of Winfield Scott was Amos Scott, a farmer of Marshallton, who married a Miss Reed.

The children born to Elwood and Hannah Scott were: Ainos, who is a butcher, living in Philadelphia; Sally, who married and lives in St. Davis, Pa.; Anna, who married Milton Young, a contractor and builder of Overbrook, Pa.; Amanda, who married Harry Morgan, and died in 1900; Hannah, who married Charles Valett, and lives in Philadelphia; and Winfield.

Winfield Scott remained with his parents, went to school and became interested in agricultural pursuits, until two years prior to his marriage, coming then to Lancaster county, and entering into the employ of his uncle, Nelson Scott, remaining with him for two years engaged in farm work. After his marriage, he located on his present farm and has since remained there, carrying on farming operations, and also assisting his father in his butchering business. Mr. Scott buys suitable cattle, attends to the slaughtering and sells the meat by wagon, in that vicinity, having built up a fine and increasing trade, on account of the excellence of the commodity.

Mr. Scott was married June 12, 1884, in Lancaster, Pa., to Mary E. Shaw, and the children born to this marriage are: Nettie M., James, Catherine and Winfield, all bright and unusually attractive children, who are receiving the best educational opportunities. Mrs. Scott was born on the present farm, April 27, 1857, a daughter of James and Ellen (Dunningham) Shaw, natives of County Monahan and Belfast, County Antrim, Ireland, respectively, although they were married in Westchester, Pa., Mr. Shaw having come to Lancaster county in 1824, settling at that time on the farm. In 1857 Mr. Shaw rented the farm and moved to Chester county, taking charge then of the old "Gen. Washington Hotel," operating this famous hostelry until his death in 1859, at the age of sixty-one years. After the father's death, the mother returned to the old farm where she lived in comfort until 1880, dying at the age of fifty-eight years. Mr. Shaw was a much respected citizen, and for many years was an elder in the Bellevue Presbyterian Church.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw were: James, deceased; Catherine, who died young; and Mary E., the wife of Mr. Scott. The first marriage of Mr. Shaw was to Martha Hirst, the three children of that marriage dying in infancy. The grandparents of Mrs. Scott were William and Mary (Hirst) Shaw, of County Monahan, Ireland, and Richard and Margaret (Steward) Dunningham, of Scotland, who came to America in 1849, and settled in Chester county, Pa., on the Horse Shoe Pike road.

In politics, Mr. Scott has always been an active Republican. His early rearing was under Quaker influences, and he has never connected himself with any other religious body. Mr. Scott is well known and universally respected.

JOSIAH WALKER, late a retired farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in Leacock township, Jan. 16, 1828, a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Buckwalter) Walker, both natives of Lancaster county.

Joseph Walker was born in Colerain township in 1797, and his wife in Leacock township, four miles east of Lancaster city, in 1801. Joseph Walker was a son of Isaac and Hester (Collins) Walker, both of whom were born in Lancaster county, where they made their home on a part of the farm lately owned by Josiah Walker. Isaac Walker was the son of Nathaniel Walker, who came from the North of Ireland, settling on the Walker property long before the Revolutionary War. The title deeds to this property came from William Penn. When he died he left two sons, Isaac and Andrew, who settled on this land. Andrew died without children. Isaac married Hester Collins, and both died on this farm, leaving four children: Andrew, James, Joseph and Mary (who married Joseph McCord, and settled on a part of the Walker property, where they died leaving four children, two of whom are still living, one in the West, and one in the South). Andrew Walker married a Miss Crawford, and moved to Ohio, where he reared a family of four children, three of whom, Samuel, Mary and Eliza, are living in Ohio. James died when a young man.

Joseph Walker settled in Colerain, on a part of the Walker homestead, where he lived some years. For thirteen years he was a farmer in Leacock township. At the end of that time he came back to the old Walker homestead, which became his property after the death of his father, and here he remained until his death in 1855. The widow remained on the old home with her son, whose name appears at the opening of this article, until her death in 1891. During the life time of Joseph Walker he made many substantial improvements on this place, and left it a thoroughly modern and up-to-date farm. He and his wife belonged to the Presbyterian Church. In politics he defined himself as a Jacksonian Democrat. They were the parents of four sons and two daughters: (1) David, born in July, 1820, married Prudence Morrison, of Colerain township, a daughter of Alexander Morrison, and located in Colerain township, as a farmer. There he died in 1852, leaving no family. (2) Isaac, born in June, 1824, married Mattie Martin, of Colerain township, and made his home in Strasburg borough, where he followed the dental profession. They have a family of three children: Edward, Ida (who married the late Prof. Roop, and lives in Indianapolis) and Clara (who married Rev. Mr. Roop, of this State). (3) Josiah Walker is mentioned below. (4) John, born in July, 1832, married Lucy Greenleaf, of Colerain township, where he made his home, dying in June, 1899, survived by his widow. (5) Fanny Walker, born in October, 1835, is unmarried, and kept house for her brother, Josiah. (6) Mary E., born in September, 1839, died unmarried in 1898.

Josiah Walker had his education in the schools of Leacock and Colerain townships, and always remained at the Walker homestead. There he owned 150 acres of the old grant, made extensive improvements, and developed a fine country home. In religion he was a stanch Presbyterian, in which faith he died. Politically he was a Democrat, and a man of character and standing in the community.

JACOB A. MINICH. This enterprising and prominent citizen of Columbia is the descendant of one of the earliest settlers of Lancaster county. He was born at Landisville, in February, 1844, and has spent his entire life within the borders of the county, contributing quite materially to its development and growth. His parents, Henry and Catherine (Albright) Minich, were both natives of the county. The grandfather was Jacob Minich, an early resident of Landisville, where he engaged in farming and also operated a distillery. He was the father of seventeen children. John Minich, the great-grandfather, was a native of Germany, who early in the eighteenth century emigrated to America and settled at Landisville.

Henry Minich, the father of Jacob A., was born in 1817. He was reared to the hard toil of those days, and early in life engaged in the butcher business, which he continued through life. In 1846 he moved to Columbia, where he remained until his death in May, 1895, at the age of seventy-eight years. Prominent in the political and social affairs of the town, he served for several terms as a member of the town council. His widow, a member of the Moravian Church, survives and is now a resident of Columbia. To Henry and Catherine Minich were born six sons, namely: Jacob A.; T. Jefferson, who lives retired at Chicago; Charles W., a butcher at Columbia; Jerome, editor of the Kent Bulletin of Kent, Ohio; Benjamin F., a veterinary surgeon of Columbia; and Harry J., a grocer of Florida.

Jacob A. Minich was brought to Columbia in 1846 when two years of age. He received a fair schooling and at the age of sixteen years assisted his father in the latter's cattle and meat business. This vocation he has followed ever since and he has become one of the most prominent citizens of Columbia. He has always been foremost in advancing the interests of the borough and it was largely due to his efforts that the Keeley Stove Works were secured for the city. Since the organization of the Central National Bank of Columbia he has been one of its directors.

In June, 1891, at Columbia, Mr. Minich married Harriet Jackson, who was born in Brantford, Ontario, daughter of William and Maria (Broomfield) Jackson. Her father is a native of England, who immigrated to Canada. He is a wheelwright by trade and now lives a retired life at Brantford, Ontario.

In politics Jacob A. Minich is a Republican. He is a man of unusual business energy and is a typical representative of those leading citizens to whom a thriving community owes a large debt of gratitude for its advancement.

RALPH A. BARTON. Among the young men who have by their energy, determination and genuine manliness early attained to high position, is Ralph A. Barton, manager for the Postal Telegraph Co.'s interests in Lancaster. He was born Sept. 7, 1879, son of Isaac and Sarah M. (Pegan) Barton.

Isaac Barton was born June 25, 1851. He became a carpenter and bridge builder with the Pennsylvania Railway Co., and was later promoted to be master carpenter of the Philadelphia & Norfolk Division. At the end, however, of but six months he was stricken with paralysis, and compelled to resign in 1885. On Dec. 23, 1875, Isaac Barton was married to Sarah M. Pegan, daughter of Alexander L. and Ruth A. Pegan. He died May 8, 1900. Two sons, Ralph A. and Elmer I., survive.

Ralph A. Barton received his education in the public schools, continuing to attend until he completed the third class in the high school. On July 17, 1893, he entered the messenger service of the Postal Telegraph Co., and employed his leisure moments in the study of telegraphy. His devotion to his work and his trustworthiness won recognition, and on May 20, 1897, he was promoted to be night operator. One year later he resigned to become first operator for the Western Union Telegraph Co., where he gave great satisfaction to both the company and the public. His ability was well known, and his work with his former employers was not forgotten. On Nov. 15, 1901, he resigned his position with the Western Union Telegraph Co., to become manager of the Postal Telegraph Co.'s interests in Lancaster—a most responsible office for a young man of twenty-two years, as Lancaster is considered the banner office of the eastern district, whose headquarters are at Philadelphia. Mr. Barton is very popular in the community where his life has been passed, and his upright dealings and temperate habits have won him the respect of the best class of citizens.

Besides his work with the telegraph company, he was, on Jan. 21, 1903, elected secretary and a member of the board of directors of the A. F. Hawthorn Roof Paint Co., which is capitalized at $250,000. Socially Mr. Barton belongs to the Royal Arcanum and to the Red Men.

CHARLES W. MINICH, a well-known butcher, was born in Columbia, Oct. 21, 1847, and there he still makes his home. His parents were Henry G. and Anna C. (Albright) Minich. In September, 1874, he married Miss Anna V. Clark, and to this union have been born ten children, viz: Ella, Cora, T. Jefferson, Charles G., Blanche and Bessie, all at home; Nettie and Harry, twins, both deceased; and Loretta and Grace, also at home.

Mrs. Anna V. (Clark) Minich was born in West Hempfield, Lancaster Co., Pa., Feb. 26, 1850, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Zahn) Clark, natives of Cecil county, Md., and Lancaster county, Pa., respectively. John Clark was a wagon-maker by trade and died in Maryland, July 27, 1895, aged seventy-five years; his wife had passed away in Lancaster county, Pa., Aug. 4, 1879, at the age of fifty-nine. To Mr. and Mrs. Clark were born the following children: Susan, deceased wife of Joseph Batty; Philip, a wheelwright in Columbia; John H., a blacksmith at Uhrichsville, Ohio; Daniel Z., who died in 1865, in the war of the Rebellion; Anna V.; James B., a machinist of Reading, Pa.; Matilda C., who died of cholera in 1854; Luke, who was killed on a railroad in Indiana, where he was employed as engineer; Edith C., married to Samuel Thompson, a railroad engineer at Lancaster, Pa.; George W., a boilermaker in Harrisburg; Mary C., a trained nurse in Lancaster; Andrew J., a butcher in West Hempfield, Pa. A singular coincidence may be alluded to, the fact that Luke was killed the same day on which his father died.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Anna V. (Clark) Minich, Philip and Susan (Shriber) Clark, were natives of Maryland, but early settled in Columbia, Pa.; her maternal grandparents were Daniel and Elizabeth (Bratt) Zahn, the former of whom was a hatter by trade, but in later years was the proprietor of a hotel, and also a sale crier. Both died in Columbia.

Charles W. Minich is a Master Mason, a member of the Heptasophs and the Artisans. In politics he is a Republican and for three years was a member of the town council.

HENRY K. KURTZ. Among the well known retired farmers of Ephrata township, who by the application of industry and energy through his active years accumulated means and property which enable him to spend his declining years in peace and comfort, is Henry K. Kurtz, a worthy representative of a large family of Lancaster county.

Henry K. Kurtz was born Oct. 14, 1826, grandson of Jacob Kurtz and son of Henry Kurtz, both of whom were of Dutch origin, farmers by occupation and members of the Mennonite Church. Reared on the farm, Henry K. early became acquainted with its practical workings, and when he had finished his educational course in the common schools, he settled down to agricultural pursuits, becoming a successful farmer and stock raiser. The farm is located very advantageously, two miles west of Ephrata, and one mile from Lincoln, Pa., thus enabling the family to enjoy the comforts of both town and country life.

In 1850, Henry K. Kurtz married Miss Annie Hoover, of Ephrata, and to this union three sons were born, Henry B., Benjamin and Addison. The second marriage of Mr. Kurtz occurred in 1870, and three children were born of this union: Alice, who married Horace Brown, of Lancaster county; Amanda, who married Louis Eberley, of Clay township; and Aaron, born Aug. 20, 1880, who remains on the farm with his father.

Henry K. Kurtz was one of five children born to his parents, all of whom settled in Lancaster county; the names of the others are as follows: Annie, who married Samuel Keller, of Ephrata township; Magdalena, deceased; Lydia, who married David Zeagler, of Warwick township; and Elizabeth, who married Levi Zendt, of Ephrata.

In the autumn of life, Mr. Kurtz has the satisfaction of knowing that he possesses the esteem of friends and acquaintances, and is regarded as an excellent citizen. He is a Republican in political faith, and for many years has been one of the leading members of the Mennonite Church.

NICHOLAS S. SIEGLER (deceased), who was in his life time very prominently identified with the farming and commercial interests of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in Germany, March 28, 1843, and was the son of Nicholas and Catherine Siegler, both born in Germany. The father came to this country in 1845, and settled on a farm near Millersville, Lancaster county, where Nicholas S. was reared. On this farm his mother died in 1860, and then the father took his family to Lancaster, where he died the same year, leaving two sons, Nicholas and Gotlieb. The latter, who married Lizzie Ager, lived in Millersville, and had a family of seven children, John, Mary, Lizzie, William, Anna, Charles and Barbara.

Nicholas S. Siegler remained under the parental roof until his marriage to Miss Helen Pauline Fitz, born in Germany, Dec. 13, 1840, a daughter of Frederick A. and Anna M. (Myers) Fitz, both of whom were born in Germany. Her parents came to this county in 1843, settling at Millersville, where her father spent his remaining active years in carpet weaving, his trade in Germany. His death occurred in Millersville in January, 1889; his widow passed to her reward in 1894. Of their family of eleven children, four lived to maturity, the others dying young. They are as follows: (1) Ferdinand F. Fitz, born in Germany in 1835, married in Lancaster Miss Catherine Humer, and died in 1883, leaving a widow and four children, John, Mary (deceased), Harry and Katie, residents of Lancaster City. (2) Mary, born in Germany in 1843, married Frederick Marquart, resides at Millersville, and is the mother of two sons, William and Charles. (3) Barbara is married, and lives in Lebanon, Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas S. Siegler lived on a rented farm in Lampeter township until 1888. That year Mr. Siegler bought the John Hoffman farm, in the vicinity of Mechanics Grove, and has very materially improved the property, remodeling the residence, adding to the barns and making other marked improvements. One of the thrifty and successful farmers of the township, he died at this home in August, 1899. In the Reformed Church at Quarryville he served as a trustee, and was for many years a member. He was known among the people of his community as a thorough Christian man, of kind heart and generous disposition. He left a widow and four children. (1) Kate, his oldest daughter, was born in July, 1867, and in 1891 she married Josiah B. Fisher. They live in New Providence on his farm, where they have a son and a daughter, Harry and Letitia. (2) Adam M., born in October, 1869, married Miss Mary L. Shaup, a daughter of Henry Shaup, of Drumore township, and is living in East Drumore township, on a farm, where they have one son, Norman E. (3) Anna M., born in Lampeter township, in April, 1873, married Enos F. Nissler, a resident of Mechanics Grove, where he follows the blacksmith trade. They have two children, Florence L. and Raymond. (4) Milton, born in September, 1878, has charge of his mother's estate, and is a young man of marked gentlemanly habits and bearing, with upright qualities and good principles. Mr. and Mrs. Siegler have held membership in the Quarryville Reformed Church. Mrs. Siegler is a most excellent character. She has many friends in the community where her womanly career has passed.

GEORGE W. HAWTHORN, who is engaged in the undertaking and cabinet making business at Bainbridge, Lancaster county, has built up an extensive trade in fine furniture, and is regarded as one of the solid and substantial citizens of the community. He was born in that town, in June, 1842, a son of James and Margaret (Esworthley) Hawthorn.

James Hawthorn was born in Donegal, and for fifty-five years was engaged as an undertaker and cabinet maker. For twelve years he served as school director, and he died in Bainbridge, June 27, 1898, at the age of eighty-four years. The mother, who was a native of Bainbridge, died in 1886, at the age of sixty-seven years. They were both members of the Methodist Church. Their children were: Calvin, who died young; Elizabeth, wife of Franklin Feltenberger, of Bainbridge;

George W.; Serena, widow of David Brubaker, of Bainbridge; Robert, a painter; Alfred, deceased; Malinda, wife of Harry Albright, a dispatcher at Harrisburg; Horace, a painter in Philadelphia; Austin, a cabinet maker, in business with his brother in Bainbridge; Flora, the wife of Edward Eyer, a railroad conductor, whose home is in Harrisburg; Alice, wife of Alonzo Stanfield, a machinist at Middletown; and Sherman T., of Bainbridge, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of George W. Hawthorn were George and Mary (Black) Hawthorn. The grandfather was born in Donegal, Ireland, and was among the first settlers in Donegal township, making his home near the Donegal Springs in 1799. He died near Columbia, and was buried in the Donegal Presbyterian Church cemetery. Nathaniel Esworthley, the maternal grandfather of George W. Hawthorn, lived in Lancaster county, and died in Bainbridge, where he carried on a shad fishery.

On Feb. 22, 1866, in Lancaster, George W. Hawthorn was married to Margaret Pence. They have become the parents of one son, Harry, who is now living in Harrisburg, and has been twice married, first to Ida Adams, by whom he has a daughter, Jennie, and second to Clara Hake, who has also borne him one daughter, Myrtle L.

Mrs. Margaret (Pence) Hawthorn was born in York county, in 1840, and is a daughter of Henry and Christianna (Dorn) Pence. Henry Pence was born in York county, in November, 1816, and moved to Bainbridge in 1856, where he followed farming and cabinet making for many years. In 1898 he retired from business, and is now making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Hawthorn. Notwithstanding his very advanced age he is a hale and hearty old gentleman. Mrs. Christianna Pence died in 1890, at the age of seventy-two years, and was buried in Bainbridge. She was a member of the Lutheran Church, as is her husband. They were parents of the following family: Angeline, wife of John Snyder, a farmer of Clearfield; William, of Harrisburg; Chapman, of Bainbridge; Margaret, who is Mrs. Hawthorn; Jane, who married John Finley, lives at Bainbridge; and Arvilla, the wife of Samuel Sloat, a plasterer of Maytown.

George W. Hawthorn remained with his parents as long as they lived, and in 1889 purchased the shop in which his father had worked so many years, and he has continued it in the same careful and business-like way. In 1895 he attended the Oriental School of Embalming, and two years later graduated from the Clark School of Embalming in Harrisburg, thoroughly preparing himself for his business.

Mr. Hawthorn is a member of the two noted societies, the I. O. O. F. and the G. A. R., and is a man of considerable prominence in his home community, having served as tax collector four years. In his politics he is a Republican. Mr. Hawthorn has memories of that exciting period of the Civil war, when the Rebellion was being crushed before the resistless advance of the hosts of the Union, and the "boys in blue" were uplifted by the feeling that victory was not far away. In August, 1864, he enlisted in Co. E, 28th P. V. I., under Capt. Robinson, and was discharged May 23, 1865, the most of his service being devoted to patrol duty.

In Bainbridge Mr. Hawthorn is justly esteemed one of the leading citizens of this part of the county, and is very widely respected for his many good qualities and unaffected manliness.

JOHN FEAGLEY. To the casual observer old iron, bones, rags and similar commodities represent in their handling a slow and laborious method of livelihood, but to the shrewd financier and discerning business man there are large possibilities in these apparently worthless emblems of past usefulness. John Feagley, one of the prominent business men of Lancaster, has found in this line of activity large and constantly increasing returns, and while thus engaged since 1870 has established a reputation for substantial worth in the community.

A native son of Pennsylvania, John Feagley was born in Berks county, Feb. 28, 1832, a son of Nicholas and Mary (Bupp) Feagley, the former of whom died in 1846, at the age of thirty-five, and the latter in 1897, at the age of ninety-four. The father was a blacksmith, and followed that trade during his entire business life after coming to Lancaster county in 1833. With his wife, he was a member of Zion Lutheran Church. To this couple were born the following children: Ellen, deceased in infancy; Henry, deceased; John; Sarah, the wife of Joseph Cogley, a printer of Lancaster; and Louise, the wife of Jacob Norbeck, a coach painter of Lancaster.

At the age of sixteen years, John Feagley entered a shop in Lancaster and learned the comb makers' trade, but at the end of five years he engaged in the produce business, of which he made a distinct success. During the seven years in the produce trade he operated two cars between Lancaster and Philadelphia, and at the end of that time sold out his enterprise at a large profit. He was then foreman of a crew of men employed to remove the telegraph poles four feet from the railroad track, a task requiring twenty-seven months for completion. His present business was entered upon in 1870, and it is doubtful if any man in the county has a more complete knowledge of the various uses to which scrap iron, bones and rags, may be put. In the same year, 1870, Mr. Feagley bought a tract of land in the northern part of the city of Lancaster, now known as Feagleysville, where he has built about thirty houses. This property, now become quite valuable, he still owns.

In 1856, in Lancaster, Rev. Beates united in marriage Mr. Feagley and Mary A. Dennis, and to this union there have come the following children: Henry and Charlotte, deceased when young;

John, a carriage maker of Mt. Pleasant, who married Emma McCulley, and has one son; Anna, living at home; Edgar, a carriage painter of Washington, D. C.; Sheldon, a printer at Lancaster, who married Katherine Errisman, and has ten children; Mazie, a stenographer; Frank S., manager of his father's business, and married to Anna Maxton, by whom he has two children; Charles, a watch-maker in Lancaster, who married Anna Pontz, and has three children; Elmer, a watch-maker of Lancaster; and Walter, also a watch-maker of Lancaster, who married Agnes Kelley, and has one child. Mrs. Feagley was born in Providence township, Lancaster county, in 1836, a daughter of Abraham and Margaret (McClosky) Dennis, the former of whom was in early life a tanner, but of late years engaged in farming.

FRANK S. FEAGLEY, manager of his father's business, was born in Lancaster, June 17, 1868, and was educated in the public schools. In Lancaster, Pa., he married Anna Maxton, of which union there have been born two children, F. Harold and Elizabeth M. Mrs. Feagley is a daughter of Adam and Elmira (Strine) Maxton, of Columbia, Pa., the former of whom is a retired contractor and builder, and is living with his son-in-law. Mr. Feagley has learned every detail of the business of which he is manager, having from earliest youth been under the particular care of his father, from whom he learned thrift, economy, and sound business tactics. He is variously identified with the social organizations in which Lancaster abounds, including the A. O. M. P., the I. O. O. F., the B. P. O. E., and Jr. O. U. A. M. He is a Republican in political affiliation, and is a member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Feagley is enterprising and progressive, and is recognized as an important factor in the commercial world of Lancaster.

JOHN M. GROFF, a prosperous and successful farmer of East Drumore township, Lancaster county, was born in the township where his active years have been spent, in December, 1839, his parents being Joseph and Susan (Myers) Groff, both natives of Lancaster county, the father born in 1813 and the mother the year following.

John M. Groff was reared to manhood under the parental roof, and secured his education in the local schools. In June, 1861, he was married to Miss Hannah Richard, who died in 1867, leaving him with one daughter, Anna, who resides at the old home. In 1868 Mr. Groff was again married to Miss Sarah Powell, a daughter of David and Lucetta (Shineheart) Powell. Her grandfather, John Powell, was a soldier in the Revolution, and in his later years received a pension from the Government. David Powell, Mrs. Groff's father, settled in East Drumore township, where both he and his wife died, leaving a family four members of which are still living: Mary A., the wife of Daniel Logan, of Colerain township; Anna E., the wife of Roy Suter, of Quarryville; George, a resident of Lancaster; Sarah, who is Mrs. Groff, born in East Drumore township, April 20, 1847.

After his marriage Mr. Groff and his wife settled in Quarryville, where for six years he was engaged in burning lime. In 1880 he moved to his farm in East Drumore township, and is still engaged in the cultivation of the soil.

Mr. and Mrs. Groff have the following children: John H., born in 1869, unmarried, and at home; Ida C., born in 1871, the wife of Levi Rhodes, residing in Bart township on a farm, and the mother of two children, Edith E. and John L.; Charles, born

In the Grand Review at Washington he was one of the soldiers who marched down the Avenue and gave notice to the world that the great Rebellion was ended.

Mr. and Mrs. Groff hold to the faith of the Old Mennonite Church, and are among the most respected people of the county. The Groff family is a numerous one in Lancaster county and its various representatives have been of high character and sterling worth.

JOSEPH LODER, as president of the Loder Brewing Company, and one of the most successful business men in Columbia, needs no introduction to the readers of this volume.

A native of Germany, Mr. Loder was born March 10, 1846, in the village of Wurtzburg, Unterfranken, Bavaria, a son of Nicholas and Josephine (Bachman) Loder. The family of which he is a member was one of the oldest and most influential of Bavaria. His paternal great-grandfather was born in the Province of Hessen, which, since the Napoleonic wars, has been included in the Kingdom of Bavaria. He was a man of powerful frame and stalwart physique, whose unusual height, six feet seven inches, made him conspicuous among the other officers who served under the first Napoleon. In religious belief he was a Catholic.

Thomas Loder, the paternal grandfather of our subject, followed the occupation of milling in Bavaria. He took a prominent part in public affairs, and during the Revolution in Germany he was a staunch Loyalist. For twelve years he was a member of the city magistracy. He had four sons, Louis, Charles, Valentine (who died at the age of thirty-one) and Nicholas. The last named was born in Bavaria, received a good education there, became a man of high standing in the community, and was respected by all who knew him. His occupation was that of milling, in which he was very extensively engaged, giving employment to about one hundred and forty men. Successful in his undertakings, he accumulated a valuable property, and was one of the most prosperous men of the community. In his views he was aggressive, and was staunch in his support of republican principles. For twelve years he was a member of the city council, and at all times took a very active part in municipal affairs. Like his father, he was a man of massive frame, over six feet in height. In the family of Nicholas and Josephine Loder were six children, namely: Valentine, Joseph, Henry, Anna, Ida and Carrie. The father died in December, 1874, at the age of sixty-three years; the mother passed away in 1889 when seventy-six.

Joseph Loder received his education in the public schools of Bavaria, spending two years as a student in the grammar school. At the age of twenty years he was drafted into the army, but did not see much active service. He left Germany, March 29, 1867, with three companions, and crossing the ocean landed and located in New York City. Having learned the trade of stone cutter, he secured employment at that occupation, in which he was engaged in New York for two years, and afterward in Newark, N. J., for seventeen years. From the latter place he went to Atlantic City, where for eight years he was interested in the bottling business, and also conducted a hotel. Next we find him a traveling salesman for a wholesale house in Philadelphia, and it was while filling this position that he learned the Columbia Brewery was for sale. He investigated the matter, and negotiated for the property, which he has since owned. Soon after its purchase he formed a partnership with John Kazmaier, and the firm of Loder & Kazmaier has since conducted a general business, employing fifteen men. In addition to this enterprise, Mr. Loder is also stock-holder in the Columbia Lace Mill. In politics a Republican, Mr. Loder has always taken a deep interest in the affairs of his party, and the progress of his adopted city. He has represented the third, eighth and ninth wards in the city council, and is still a member of that body. His religious connection is with the Catholic Church, and he is a prominent member of Trinity Catholic Beneficial Society.

On May 3, 1867, Mr. Loder was united in marriage with Miss Rosalie Grasman, and to them have been born eleven children, eight of whom are living, namely: Andy, Joseph, Rudolph, William, Charles, Eva, Caroline and Tillie.

ABRAHAM A. DE HAVEN, a resident of Earl township, Lancaster county, is of German descent, tracing his line to Isaac DeHaven, who located at Morgantown, Berks Co., Pa. He followed both blacksmithing and farming, and reared his family there. His children were as follows: Abraham was the grandfather of our subject; Edward was a merchant at Churchtown, where he died; Isaac, who died near Terre Hill, where he was engaged in manufacturing, was the father of the DeHavens, well known iron manufacturers of Pittsburg; James resided on the old homestead near Morgantown, where he farmed and carried on a blacksmithing business; and of the daughters, one married a Mr. Wight; another married a Mr. Keemer; and a third married William Skiles.

Abraham De Haven, son of Isaac, was the youngest son of his parents, and was reared on the home place, learning the trade of blacksmithing under his father's instructions. When he was nineteen he went to live with an older brother, and later married a Miss Anna Thompson. After two years of married life at Morgantown, where he followed blacksmithing, he moved to New Holland, and had a shop in that place for twenty-five years. His last years were spent on a farm which he purchased about a mile and a half southeast of New Holland, and comprised 103 acres. He died at the age of eighty-eight years, after a long and useful career. In religion he was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church. In the founding of that denomination at Cedar Grove he was very conspicuous, and of this church he was a ruling elder, and was always one of its most liberal contributors. At a time of financial stress in that organization, its pulpit was supplied almost entirely at the expense of Mr. DeHaven. For his day he was counted a wealthy man, and was greatly honored and respected in the community. To Mr. and Mrs. DeHaven were born the following children who lived to maturity: Thompson died at the age of seventy years; Mary lived to be seventy-two; Ann Eliza married James Jack, and lived in Philadelphia and elsewhere, finally making their home in Lewistown, Pa., where they both died; Phoebe married Dr. James McCleese, of Honey Brook, Pa.; Susan married John Hollingsworth, a cabinet maker, of New Holland; and George.

George DeHaven was born April 1, 1821, and died May 30, 1894. His youth and early manhood was passed on a farm, and he devoted his life to the cultivation of the soil. Until in 1876 he lived on the old homestead, when he removed to the Bard homestead, which he had purchased near New Holland, and where he died in 1894. His widow, who survives him, has her home on this farm, and has three of her children about her. Mr. DeHaven became an extensive landed proprietor, owning four farms, which comprised 307½ acres, not counting the heavily timbered land. This property represented unusual business ability, combined with unflagging industry and the most determined spirit. Though often called upon to serve his community in official capacity, he steadfastly declined, preferring to give his entire attention to farming. Like his father he was a devoted Christian, and officiated as an elder for years. Mr. DeHaven was married to Miss Clara Eckert, who was born near Intercourse, a daughter of Levi and Mary Eckert. They became the parents of twelve children, of whom nine lived to maturity: Abraham A.; Clara and Elmira, twins, of whom Clara is unmarried and Elmira is the wife of William K. Hurst, of Caernarvon township; Levi, a farmer, died March 20, 1894; Edward, a retired farmer, has his home in New Holland; Clayton, was a farmer on the old homestead, and passed to his rest in 1897; William lives at home, and is unmarried; Miss Phoebe J. lives at home; Mary Ann, the eldest, died at the age of nineteen years.

Abraham A. DeHaven was reared to farm work, and was educated in the common schools. When he was twenty-three he began on the farm which he-still occupies, where he owns fifty-five acres. His entire attention is given to its cultivation. His standing in the community is very high, and his good habits, industrious ways and upright character command a wide circle of friends, whom his genial disposition holds fast in an unbroken friendship.

Mr. DeHaven was married to Miss Rebecca Sandow, a daughter of John and Martha (Shoeffer) Sandow. Mr. and Mrs. DeHaven have a family of nine living children: George, Martha, Rebecca, Belinda, Mary Grace, Elizabeth, Margaret, Elmira and Abraham. All the family are associated with the Presbyterian Church, and like their progenitors stand high among those who know them best.

WILLIAM McCausland Noble, whose useful life ended May 4, 1883, at University Hospital, Philadelphia, where he was undergoing treatment, was born in Marietta, Pa., April 5, 1818. His active life was largely associated with Christiana, where he settled in 1826, and soon became one of the leading citizens of the place, his industry, fine character, and upright principles winning him many friends, and making him popular with the community.

Andrew and Esther (McCausland) Noble, his parents, were natives of Sadsbury and Salisbury townships, respectively. Andrew Noble was an extensive merchant, and had a wholesale store in Philadelphia, which he sold after a time and moved to Marietta, where he carried on three general stores until the closing of the Marietta Bank nearly ruined him. For a time he was not in business, but in 1826 established himself in a store in Christiana. In 1830 he disposed of his mercantile business and moved to a farm in Sadsbury township, where he remained until his death, Oct. 15, 1852, at the age of fifty-one years. His wife, Esther McCausland, was a daughter of Major William McCausland, a Revolutionary soldier, who lived in Lancaster county; she early passed to her rest, dying Aug. 21, 1831, at the age of thirty years. In the war of 1812 Mr. Noble served as captain, lieutenant and paymaster. Andrew Noble was a son of James and Margaret (McWhorter) Noble. James Noble was born in Sadsbury township, a son of William Noble, who was born in the North of Ireland, in 1711, and came to Lancaster county when a young man, locating in Sadsbury township. Margaret (McWhorter) Noble was born in Delaware.

William McCausland Noble remained in Marietta until he was eight years old, when he accompanied his parents to their home in Sadsbury township, near Christiana. At the age of sixteen he entered his father's store as a clerk, and then engaged in farming in Sadsbury township. After his marriage he bought the original homestead of the family in Lancaster county, and engaged in its cultivation, also carrying on stone quarries, and making lime on his home farm. He continued in this business until his death and his remains were laid to rest in Atglen, Pa. He attended no church as a member, but took much interest in the United Presbyterian Church at Octoraro. His politics were Democratic, and his standing in the community beyond question.

On Oct. 12, 1854, at Atglen, Pa., Mr. Noble was married to Martha L. Hughes. To them were born seven children. (1) Andrew, of Christiana, was elected county auditor in 1899 for a term of three years, on the Democratic ticket, and is one of the exceptionally popular and capable young men of the county; he has been tax collector, supervisor and assessor of Sadsbury township, a rare compliment in a district that is heavily Republican. Socially he is connected with the Order of the Golden Eagle, and has many friends wherever he is found. (2) Joseph died in infancy. (3) Anna died unmarried in November, 1895. (4) William McC. Jr. died at the age of twenty-five. (5) Harriet, who married Frank D. Crawford, died in August, 1892. (6) Thomas is single, and lives at Wernersville, Pa. (7) Rebecca is a school teacher, and lives with her brother Andrew at Christiana, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Martha L. (Hughes) Noble was born in Oromucto, British America, Sept. 6, 1829, a daughter of Joseph and Ann (Lynn) Hughes, of Ireland. They came to Maryland in 1831, where her father operated a general store at Brick Hill. In 1851 he came to Christiana, and engaged in a general mercantile business until within a very few years of his death, in 1884, being eighty-four years old at the time he was called away. His wife died in 1865, at the age of sixty-six. Both were members of the Old School Baptist Church. They had the following children: Jane, late wife of James Jones; Samuel, who died in 1896; Martha L., Mrs. Noble; Robert, who died young. Mrs. Noble, who died Nov. 15, 1901, aged seventy-two years, was a lady of high character and remarkable mental vigor for one of her years. Her kind heart won the affection of her friends and she was highly respected and generally beloved in the community.

AMOS BARTCH (deceased) was for many years prominently identified with the business interests of Columbia, Pa., and was one of her honored and highly respected citizens. He was a native of Lancaster county, born in Hempfield township, May 6, 1846, a son of Michael and Elizabeth (Schwin) Bartch, who were born in Germany, but came to this country when young and were married here. Both died in Lancaster county. He was foreman in Grubbs mines. Their children who are now living are: Michael, a contractor and builder of Dayton, Ohio; Mary, widow of David Shroun, and a resident of Columbia, Pa.; George, also a resident of Columbia; Sarah, wife of Valentine Bentley, a carpenter of Columbia; Tobias, a resident of the same place; and Elizabeth, wife of Adam Agle of Columbia.

Until fourteen years of age, Amos Bartch pursued his studies in the country schools near his boyhood home, and then on leaving the parental roof, went to York county, Pa., where he was employed as engineer. Returning to Columbia, he engaged in clerking in the grocery store of his brother-in-law, Frederick Bucher, for thirteen years, and then rented the store, which he conducted for five years. At the end of that time he erected a store building and continued to engage in the grocery trade until his death, which occurred in Columbia, Oct. 12, 1899. He was laid to rest in Mt. Bethel cemetery. He was a consistent and faithful member of the M. E. Church; was affiliated with the Artisans and Heptasophs, and in his political views was a Republican. As a business man he was energetic, prompt and notably reliable, and gained the confidence and regard of all with whom he came in contact.

In Columbia, in April, 1874, Mr. Bartch married Miss Mary E. Williams, who was born in York county, Pa.; and was left an orphan during infancy. By this union were born three children, Florence P., William A. and Catherine I. The family is one of prominence in the community where they reside.

HENRY Z. YOUNG, of the firm of Young Brothers, extensively engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of vehicles, and in carriage building, repairing and blacksmithing, at Florin, Pa., was born in Rapho township, Oct. 30, 1862, a son of Emanuel M. and Mary (Phyfe) Young. His parents were natives of Lancaster county, and his mother died in Rapho township, in February, 1871, at the age of thirty-one years, her remains now resting in the cemetery connected with the Strickler Church.

Emanuel M. Young, was born Aug. 27, 1840, and was a farmer and butcher in his active days, although early in life he learned the cooper's trade. At one time he was tax collector in Rapho township. In 1876 he removed to Florin, and is now passing the closing years of his long and useful life in that pleasant municipality. In 1859 he married Mary Phyfe, who was born in Rapho township, a daughter of Daniel and Susannah (Walter) Phyfe, and died in 1871, aged thirty-one. To them were born the following children: Phares, a carriage maker; Henry Z.; Emanuel, a carriage maker in York county, where he also has farming interests; Mary, who married Elmer Weaver, of Florin; Samuel, a partner of his brother, Henry Z. Emanuel M. Young was married, second, in 1872, to Elizabeth Martin, who was born in Rapho township April 9, 1845, a daughter of David and Catherine (Blager) Martin, of Lancaster county. To this marriage were born the following children: David, a molder in Florin; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Brown; Frank, a barber and undertaker in Mountville; Katie; Elsa and Minnie, at home with their parents. David Martin was a son of Jacob and Maud (Geif) Martin, and like his father, became a weaver, following that occupation until his death June 14, 1896, at the age of seventy-five years. His wife, Catherine (Blager), died June 23, 1900, and was buried in the cemetery of the Green Tree Meeting House. To David and Catherine Martin were born children as follows: Mary, who married Samuel Good; Elizabeth; Anna; Katie, wife of John Kennedy; David, deceased; John, of Lancaster county; and Jacob, deceased. In fraternal matters Emanuel M. Young is quite prominent, being connected with the Mystic Chain, the Red Men, and the Order of Pocahontas. In religion he belongs to the United Brethren Church, and in politics is a Republican.

The parents of Emanuel M. Young were Richard and Martha (Moore) Young, natives of Rapho township and Harrisburg, respectively, the former of whom died in Rapho township, in 1890, at the age of seventy-eight, and the latter in East Donegal township, in 1877, at the age of sixty-six. They spent their lives in farming, and were buried in the cemetery at Mt. Joy. They had the following children: William and Elizabeth are deceased; Caroline, widow of John Cole, lives in Iowa; Matilda, the widow of John Ludman, lives in Manheim, Pa.; Sarah married Henry George, and is deceased; Ella, of Lancaster, married Ephraim Rhodes; Fanny is the deceased wife of Emanuel Dailinger; Rosanna married George Kline, and lives in Florin; Sophia married Henry Mumma, and lives in Florin; Levi is retired, and has his home in Manheim; Emanuel M.; Lemon lives in Lebanon; Eli lives in Florin; and Richard and Cornelius are both deceased. Richard Young was a son of Michael and Catherine (Goetz) Young, who came from Germany, and settled in this county.

Henry Z. Young has been twice married, first in 1887, in Mt. Joy, when he married Lizzie Bletz, who died leaving a son, Harry. Her remains rest in the cemetery at Florin. Charles Bletz, her father, came from Germany, and died in Florin. In 1891 Mr. Young was married in Mt. Joy to Edna Miller, who was born in Northumberland county, Pa., a daughter of Simon and Saloma Miller, natives of Dauphin county, who died in Juniata county, where the former was engaged in farming. To Mr. and Mrs. Young has come one son, Oscar.

Henry Z. Young learned his trade in Helm, York county, where he entered the shops at the age of nineteen. Before this he had worked for the neighboring farmers, and was a hustling and energetic youth. For ten years after he had learned his trade, he served as journeyman, being employed at both Elizabethtown and Middletown, Lancaster county. In 1898 he came to Florin and joined his brother in the business which is known as Young Brothers. Mr. Young is a member of several orders—the Red Men and the Knights of the Golden Eagle, being the principal ones. In religion he is a member of the United Brethren Church, and in his politics a Republican.

SAMUEL YOUNG, a member of the firm of Young Brothers, began learning his trade with William Shutte, in Florin, when he had reached the age of eighteen years. For four years he was employed by the Samuel Bailey Safety Buggy Company at Lancaster. In 1897 he returned from Lancaster to Florin, where after a year of journeyman work he formed a partnership with his brother, and began business for himself. This has proved very successful, and the two are doing a flattering business. Samuel Young belongs to the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and is a Republican in his politics. He is a bright and capable young man and he and his brother are pushing forward to an enviable position in commercial and manufacturing circles. They have a good trade, and are doing strictly high-grade work of a character that commands respect and retains confidence.

FRANK ZIEGLER (deceased) was for over a third of a century one of the trusted employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and throughout life was a highly esteemed citizen of Columbia, where he was born May 5, 1821, a son of George and Margaret (Sloat) Ziegler, the former a native of Baltimore, Md., the latter of York county, Pa. George Ziegler came to Columbia in 1798 with his father, Francis Ziegler, and here he was married in 1811 to Margaret Sloat, a daughter of Michael Sloat, a farmer by occupation, who was born in Germany and on his immigration to America settled in York county, Pa. George Ziegler followed the cooper's trade, and as one of the prominent and influential citizens of Columbia, he was called upon to serve as councilman at an early day. He died April 3, 1838, aged fifty-two years, and his wife departed this life in 1831, aged forty-two. Both were communicants of the Catholic Church. In their family were the following children: Catherine, a Sister of Charity, who died in New Orleans; Fanny, wife of Andrew Leady, died in Wrightsville, Pa.; John, a retired lumberman of Columbia; Rosanna, who died in childhood; Francis; Margaret, a nun of Baltimore, Md.; George, an engineer, who was killed on the railroad in 1855; Michael, who died in Pittsburg, Pa., in 1864; and Joseph and Ferdinand, who both died in childhood.

During his entire business career, Frank Ziegler was interested in railroading, and for thirty-five years served as engineer, first with the old State road, and later with the Pennsylvania Railroad. He always affiliated with the Democratic party and held membership in the Catholic Church. His upright and honorable life won for him the confidence of all with whom he came in contact, and his circle of friends seemed only limited by the number of his acquaintances.

At St. Peter's Catholic Church in Columbia, Nov. 18, 1860, Mr. Ziegler was united in marriage with Miss Mary M. Flynn, and they began their domestic life in the house which she still occupies. Nine children came to brighten their home, namely: Margaret R., now the wife of William K. Garrity, a blacksmith of Altoona, Pa.; Alice, deceased; Edward F., who married Alice Michael and is a coppersmith of Columbia; George, deceased; Mary G., who is living with her mother; Joseph O., who wedded Mary Smith and is a machinist of Columbia; Blanche, deceased; Lucy G., at home; and Frank X., a resident of Columbia.

Mrs. Ziegler was born in Columbia, a daughter of Edward and Margaret (Freil) Flynn, who were born in Ireland, but were married in Lebanon, Pa., and then settled in Columbia. There the father died in 1844, aged thirty-five years; the mother in 1875, aged sixty-four. Their children were John, deceased; Katherine, wife of Joseph Brown, assistant road foreman at Altoona, Pa.; Mary M., now Mrs. Ziegler; Margaret, Joseph and Edward, all deceased. Mrs. Ziegler's paternal grandfather, John Flynn, came to America at an early day and located in Lebanon, Pa. Her maternal grandparents, Francis and Mary (Magetigan) Friel, were also natives of Ireland and early settlers of Marietta, Pa. Their remains were interred at Columbia.

SAMUEL WAGNER (deceased). The life of Samuel Wagner who for many years was a prominent citizen of Paradise township, Lancaster county, is a worthy example of industry. At the tender age of eight years he began to earn his own living and from that time he has led an active, honorable and exemplary life in Lancaster, pursuing with zeal and success the various vocations which opportunity and place presented to him. He is the son of Christian and Christiana (Bowers) Wagner, both born in Wurtemberg, Germany. Shortly after their marriage in the Fatherland the parents migrated to America, accompanied by the mother's widowed father, Gottlieb Bowers, who during his remaining years lived with them in Lancaster county, for here it was that the parents of Samuel made their home.

Christian Wagner was a shoemaker, and he followed the trade through life. Himself and wife were members of the Lutheran Church, but Gottlieb Bowers was a member of the Old Mennonite church. Christian Wagner lived to the age of seventy-six years, and his wife passed away at the age of fifty-six. Of the seven children born to them, only three grew to maturity, namely, Samuel, whose sketch appears below: Gabriel, a farmer of Leacock township; and Martha, who died the wife of Edward Kurtz.

Samuel Wagner was born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, Aug. 5, 1836. His educational advantages were limited, as when eight years of age he began working by the month to earn his own living, during the winter months, receiving only his board for his services. He continued in this manner to win his own support until he was seventeen years of age, when he hired out by the year, his parents receiving his wages until he was twenty-one. At twenty he began an apprenticeship at the wagon and coach making trade with his brother-in-law, Edward Kurtz, and after its completion he established a shop of his own in Leacock township which he conducted for five years. He then started in the butcher's business continuing it for three years. Procuring a steam outfit, he then engaged for three years in threshing, after which he commenced farming, and has ever since followed that vocation. For six years he farmed on the halves in Leacock township, then came to the place in Paradise township, located one mile southeast of Leaman Place, which he lately occupied. It is known as the Belmont farm, and was operated by Mr. Wagner for nineteen years. It is now the property of the Pennsylvania railroad company, and contains eighty-six acres of land. Mr. Wagner engaged in general farming and stock dealing. He married Sept. 13, 1860, Miss Rachel Ruth, who was born in Leacock township, Aug. 10, 1832, daughter of Simpson and Mary Ann (Becker) Ruth. To Samuel and Rachel Wagner were born three children, Mary Ann, who lived with her father until his death Aug. 23, 1902; Simpson, living in Paradise township, who married Miss Annie Martin and has three children, Mable, Florence, and Ruth; and Emma, the wife of Ed. J. Kautz, of Paradise township, and the mother of two children, Samuel and Blanche. The mother died April 6, 1895. Samuel Wagner was a member of the Reformed Church, as is his son, and the family are among the honored and highly respected people of Lancaster county.

HIRAM C. LOCKARD, a retired farmer and a citizen of great respectability and influence, was born in Rapho township, Lancaster county, Feb. 2, 1832, a son of John M. and Anna (Conklin) Lockard, natives of Columbia and West Hempfield townships, respectively, but both of whom died in Rapho township, the father in 1869, at the age of seventy-two years, and the mother in the same year, when sixty-eight years old.

John M. Lockard was a blacksmith by trade. With his wife, he was a very pious member of the United Brethren Church, and he gave the ground to the United Brethren congregation which it afterward consecrated for burial purposes. The remains of John M. and wife, however, were interred in Newtown, Rapho township. Their family comprised seven children, born in the following order: Margaret, deceased, who was first married to George Maxville, and afterward to William McGee; Samuel, deceased; John, a retired engineer at Chickies; Mary, deceased wife of Aaron Dyer; Hiram C., whose name opens this article; Harriet, who died in infancy; and Washington, of York, Pennsylvania.

Hiram C. Lockard was married, Dec. 16, 1856, in Cordelia, Pa., to Barbara E. Hougendobler, and to this marriage there were born the following children: Anna, of Harrisburg, wife of Martin Sugars, a railroad conductor; Harvey, clerk in the Columbia Hotel and married to Nellie Harsh; John, also of Columbia, and married to Mary Daum;

George, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Mary C., wife of Jacob Gaber, foreman of the plow-works in West Hempfield township; Barbara, deceased wife of John Froelich; Samuel, a carpenter in Columbia; and Hiram, also of Columbia. Barbara E. (Hougendobler) Lockard was born in Cordelia, Dec. 4, 1836, a daughter of Henry and Catherine (Getz) Hougendobler, who were farming people of West Hempfield township, where the father died in 1858, when sixty-four years old, and the mother in 1894, at the age of eighty-eight years, and were buried in Ironville cemetery. They were members of the United Brethren church, and in politics Henry Hougendobler was a Republican. Their children were named as follows: Elizabeth, the deceased wife of John Crider; George and Henry, deceased; Christiann, deceased wife of Aaron Lutz; Albert, who died in infancy; Catherine, deceased wife of Christian Baker; Barbara (Mrs. Lockard); Mary, wife of William Burnheisel, a carpenter in West Hempfield township; John, who was killed in the Civil war; Amos, postmaster and shoe merchant in Columbia; and Adeline, wife of Lewis Briggs, baggage master for the Pennsylvania Railway Company at Erie, Pa. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Barbara E. Lockard, George and Elizabeth Getz, came from Germany. George Getz was a miller by calling, but was also a farmer and charcoal burner, and although he started in this country a poor man, became very wealthy and at the time of his death owned several large tracts of land.

Hiram C. Lockard, at the time of his marriage, rented a farm in West Hempfield township, and continued to be a renter for many years, when he purchased a farm in West Hempfield, which he cultivated until 1885. That year he removed to Columbia, and engaged in the men's furnishings business for three years, when he sold out simply because the landlord wanted the store, thus sacrificing a profitable business. For the next two years Mr. Lockard lived again in Cordelia, then returned to Columbia, and lived there until the spring of 1898, when he came to Cordelia, with the intention of returning to Columbia at no distant day, which he recently did.

Mr. Lockard and wife are devoted members of the United Brethren Church, and in politics Mr. Lockard is a Democrat. The life of Mr. Lockard has been pure and simple and without guile, and his name has always been honored and respected wherever he has lived—in town or in the country—and he numbers his friends by the hundred.

JOSEPH KNAPP, a merchant grocer of Columbia, was born in Dillsburg, Germany, Oct. 15, 1851, and is a son of Ludwig and Mary M. (Hildt) Knapp, of Neckar and Dillsburg, Baden, Germany, who came to Columbia, Pa., in 1855. The father was a baker by trade, but after reaching America became a general laborer. He died in Columbia in 1868 at the age of fifty years. His widow survived him until June, 1887, when she expired, aged sixty-three. They were devout Catholics, and their remains were interred in Holy Trinity cemetery.

To Ludwig and Mary M. (Hildt) Knapp were born the following named children: Anna R., widow of Adam Smith, who was a blacksmith, and to whose marriage were born eight children; Joseph, a grocery merchant, of Columbia; Frances, who married John Shillow; and Mary.

John Shillow, deceased, was a brother of Frank Shillott, although the name is spelled differently. John Shillow was a butcher by trade. At Columbia, June 2, 1887, he married Frances Knapp, to which union one child, Agnes M., still with her mother, was born, but the father was called away Jan. 26, 1888, prior to the infant's birth, and his remains are interred in Holy Trinity cemetery, at Lancaster.

Joseph Knapp was brought to Columbia by his parents when he was but four years of age, and there was educated in the district school, as well as the parochial. At the age of eighteen years, he began clerking in a dry-goods store, where he remained for sixteen and a half years, and then engaged in his present business. Mr. Knapp has been a director of the Central National Bank of Columbia for eight years, is a director of St. Joseph's Building Association, and for the past twenty-five years has been secretary of St. Peter and Paul's Benevolent Organization. He has speculated largely in real estate, and has built seven fine edifices in Columbia. He is a devout Catholic, and freely contributes to the support of his church. In politics he is a Democrat.

Joseph Knapp was joined in the holy bonds of matrimony in April, 1894, at Philadelphia, with Miss Emma Chappatte, and to this marriage have been born three children, viz.: Alphonse Joseph, William C., and Mary M. Mrs. Emma (Chappatte) Knapp was born in the city of Philadelphia and is a daughter of Constant and Agatha (Ulman) Chappatte, natives of Switzerland and Prussia, respectively, but married in Philadelphia, where they now reside. Constant Chappatte was born in 1828 and his wife in the same year. To their marriage were born four children, viz.: Josephine, who died an infant; Joseph H., a watch-case maker in Philadelphia; Constant J., a musician, whose location is unknown; and Emma (Mrs. Knapp). The father was also a watch-case maker, but is now retired. The family are devoted Roman Catholics.

ABRAM A. LEFEVER, a farmer in East Drummore township, Lancaster county, was born in Strasburg township, April 8, 1846, his parents being John E. and Eliza (Martin) Lefever, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county.

John E. Lefever was the son of Benjamin Lefever, of Lampeter township, and Mr. Lefever married and settled in Strasburg township until old age came upon him. He then bought a home near Camargo, where he died in 1885. His wife passed to her reward in 1876. They were the parents of six sons and two daughters, four of whom are living: John, living in Camargo; Martin, in East Drummore; Abner, of Lancaster; and Abram A., whose name introduces this article. Susan married Benjamin Shaub, who was killed by a train while walking on the track. She died and left a large family. Eliza Lefever married Daniel B. Mowrer, of Eden township, and located near Camargo, where she and her husband both died, leaving three children: Emma, who married Miner Ressler; Lottie, who married Daniel Deiter; Winnie, who married Harry Herr.

Abram A. Lefever was reared on the paternal estate, and in September, 1868, married Elizabeth, a daughter of Joseph and Susan (Myers) Groff. Mrs. Lefever was born in East Drummore township, April 2, 1847. Her father settled near Oak Bottom, on the farm now owned by Henry Heidelberg, on which he made the first improvements. There he reared his family, and there both he and his wife died.

Mr. Lefever was located for a time in Strasburg township, and then for seven years in Camargo, and two years on the Isaac Bauman farm in Eden. In 1879 he moved to the farm where he now resides, the Gilbert Dickinson farm. His reputation is that of a master of agriculture.

Mr. and Mrs. Lefever are the parents of ten children: (1) Daniel F., who died in childhood; (2) Harvey J. born in 1870, who married Miss Sallie Burkey, of Mechanics Grove, and lives on a farm in East Drummore township, where they are rearing four children, Abram, Harry, Annie, and Milton; (3) Amos, born in 1873, who married Susie Russell, lives on his farm in East Drummore township, and has one daughter, Virgie; (4) John, born in 1874, who married Flora Deever, lives in Quarryville, where he is engaged in a creamery, and has two children, Amos and James; (5) Annie, born in 1876, who is a seamstress and unmarried, living at home; (6) Charles, born in 1879, who lives at home; (7) Susie, born in 1881; (8) William, 1883; (9) Abram, 1886; (10) Ira, 1890. All the children not otherwise noted are still at home.

Mr. Lefever is a Republican, and in religion, both he and his wife were nurtured in the faith of the Old Mennonite Church as both their parents were among the early workers and founders of that church in Strasburg township. The Lefevers and Groffs can look back with pride upon their ancestors who participated in the Revolutionary struggle, and were honorable and upright in every generation.

HENRY WESTERHOFF, an important factor in the industrial growth of Ephrata borough and one of the most prominent business men of Lancaster county, is the efficient secretary and treasurer of the Paterson (N. J.) Silk Mill Co.

The Westerhoff family originated in Holland, where Eugene Westerhoff was a teacher in the schools for a period of forty-five years, as was also his father before him, the two rounding out almost a century of service to the youth of the land. Jacob Westerhoff, his son, was born in Holland in 1810 and came to America in 1861, settling in Midland Park, N. J., where he died in 1896. His wife, Henrietta (Koot) Westerhoff, was born in 1821 and resides with her son Peter, in Paterson, N. J. They reared a family of worthy children: John; Annie, who married Ira Griffin, of Holland; Eugene; Carrie; Albert, of Paterson; Egbert, of Paterson; R. R., a railroad engineer; Henry, of this sketch; and Peter, the youngest, who is the president of the Westerhoff Brothers & Mapier Co., silk manufacturers of Paterson and Jamesburg, N. J., and of Ephrata borough and Denver, Pennsylvania.

Although Henry Westerhoff now occupies a position of trust and influence, he has reached it through a long and toilsome experience. Born May 8, 1861, into a family already burdened with a number of little children, at the early age of ten years he assumed his part of the support of the family by entering the mills in Paterson, where he faithfully worked until, at the age of sixteen, he was considered efficient enough to be made the foreman in the weaving and spinning department of the silk mill, which position he held for several years. Later he engaged as foreman with other mills, all this time acquiring valuable information and a thorough and practical knowledge of the business. In 1889 Mr. Westerhoff first established the South Paterson Silk Co., and after a successful career for five years he sold that business and started with his brother, Peter D. Westerhoff, in the same line, continuing thus until 1896, at which time Thomas S. Mapier entered the firm and the firm name now is Westerhoff Bros. & Mapier Co., Inc. In 1894, as the business was in such a flourishing condition that it seemed the part of wisdom to extend its possibilities, the annex was started at Ephrata, Pa., and in 1899 they still farther extended their scope by buying an interest in the Fleetwood silk mills, all three plants running on full time, giving employment to a great number of people and proving one of the most useful industries in the county. In 1901 they sold their interest in the Fleetwood mill, and established the annexes at Jamesburg, N. J., and Denver, Pennsylvania.

In 1886 Henry Westerhoff was married to Miss Fannie H. Flosblum, of Albany, N. Y. To this union were born: J. Henry, born in 1887; Rutter G. in October, 1889; and Hattie, in August, 1894. The beloved wife and mother passed out of life in October, 1898, at the early age of thirty-four years. In 1901, Mr. Westerhoff married Miss S. E. Brown, of Pleasant Grove, Pa., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis A. Brown. Mr. Westerhoff is an example of what may be accomplished by the exercise of energy and perseverance. Deprived of opportunities for education, he took advantage of the night schools at Paterson and obtained after a day of toil the mental training that was impossible during working hours, thus showing the spirit which has made him a successful man. Courteous in manner, he wins friends on all sides, while he is recognized as a keen man of business, fully alive to the interests of his firm. Perhaps no man in this section has done more for its industrial development than has Henry Westerhoff.

WILLIAM M. BAREFOOT, of Columbia, one of the favorite conductors on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in Bethania, Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Nov. 26, 1841, and is a son of Job P. M. and Nancy (McCaskey) Barefoot, of Bedford and Lancaster counties respectively. Job and Nancy Barefoot were the parents of nine children, viz: John M., who died in Chester county; Margaret, who was married to Solomon Powers, and died in Columbia; Sarah, who died in Cambridge, Ind.; Isabella, who was married to Dr. J. W. Houston, of Lancaster, and died in Chester county; Rebecca, the wife of E. Pierce McClelland, a farmer; Job, a retired railroad man in Philadelphia; William M.; Kimloe, who died young; and Clara, unmarried and residing in Philadelphia.

Job P. M. Barefoot was a drover who came to Lancaster when a young man and remained there until 1860; he then moved to Chester county, where he passed away in 1869, aged seventy years, and his wife in March, 1870, aged sixty-seven. The latter was a member of the Presbyterian Church. The remains of both were brought to Lancaster county for interment and rest side by side in Leacock cemetery. The paternal grandparents of Wm. M. Barefoot were William and Polly Barefoot, of Bedford county, and the maternal grandparents were John and Margaret McCaskey of Lancaster county.

William M. Barefoot was reared on his father's farm but did no farm work, as there was ample hired help. Daniel Harrar, grandfather of John D., came with his father, also named Daniel, from Germany in 1749, and settled near Philadelphia. They were farming people, and the younger Daniel bore arms in the Revolution, receiving a pension for his services in that struggle. He died about 1793 in Montgomery county, at the age of ninety-three.

Joseph Harrar was born in Montgomery county, and his wife in Bucks county, Pa., where they were married at her home. Coming into Lancaster in 1821, they lived three years in Bart township, and then removed to Colerain township, where they

John D. Harrar has had a somewhat varied and eventful history. He remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority, when he took up the carpenter trade, and followed it until 1848. That year he established himself in the mercantile business at Puseyville, where he remained for some five years, when he transferred himself and his belongings to Smyrna, Lancaster county, and continued there for some fifteen years in the same line. In 1868 Mr. Harrar came to his present stand. Whenever there was a Democratic administration Mr. Harrar held the post-office in the town where he was then in business, and for two years has been school director in Christiana. His father's extensive and complicated estate was settled by him. He and his wife are members of the Baptist Church.

Mr. Harrar is a man of very superior education and during his early manhood taught school some four years in Drumore and Colerain townships, Lancaster county, and in Upper Oxford township, Chester county. In 1838 and 1839 he attended the Hopewell Academy, and throughout his life has been recognized as a gentleman of information and character. At the present time, though his name is at the front, he does but little work in the store, leaving the drudgery and hard work to younger hands.

GEORGE F. STEINHEISER, engineer of a passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a resident of Columbia, was born in Leaman Place, Lancaster Co., Pa., Dec. 12, 1841.

Jacob O. Steinheiser, father of George F., was born in Strasburg township, this county, taught school for many years and by trade was a miller. He was mail carrier from the railroad depot to the post-office in Lancaster City, having located there in 1860; later he was superintendent of the Lancaster county hospital for ten years, and retired from active business in 1874. His death took place in December 1899, at the age of eighty-three years. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. To his marriage with Anna M. Ingram, of Paradise township, this county, were born: George F.; Anna, who was married to Henry Rudy, and died in 1885; Lizzie and Mary, twins, the former of whom died in infancy, the latter being the wife of David Peterman, a retired butcher of Lancaster; and Jacob, deceased. The mother of these children died in 1848, at the age of thirty-five years.

The paternal grandparents of George F. Steinheiser were Jacob and Sarah Steinheiser, natives of Germany and during an insurrection in the country Jacob, with two brothers, was banished and came to America, settling in Lancaster county, Pa., where he followed his trade as a tanner.

George F. Steinheiser was but seven years of age when his mother died, and he was then placed out among strangers and worked as a farm-boy until he was fifteen years old; he next served as an apprentice at shoemaking for three and a half years, but found the confinement injurious to his health, and returned to farming for a year and a half. In May 1861, he enlisted at Lancaster, for three years, in Co. B, 1st Pa. Reserve Corps, under Capt. Thomas B. Barton, and was mustered into the United States service at Camp Carroll, Baltimore, Md. He fought at Gaines Mill and in the Wilderness; was next on duty in the ammunition department; was at the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg, and at the termination of his three-year's enlistment, was honorably discharged. He then went to Harrisburg and began work with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as locomotive fireman; he filled this position five years and eight months, and in 1871 was promoted to engineer; in 1873 he was transferred to Columbia and that place has since been his home.

The marriage of Mr. Steinheiser took place in Lancaster, Dec. 22, 1865, to Margaret P. Goodman, and five children have come to grace this union, viz: Lillie J., wife of Joseph Rankin, a street-car conductor in Columbia; Estella, who died young; Stella, wife of D. J. Dellet, shop-foreman for the P. & R. Company at Reading; Owen J., paper hanger in Columbia; and Myrtle, who married Guy Ferguson, the foreman of the Columbia Herald. Mrs. Margaret P. Steinheiser was born in Marietta, Pa., in September, 1842, and is a daughter of Peter and Jane (Moore) Goodman, the former of whom was a dealer in agricultural implements in Lancaster and died there in 1883; the latter died in Columbia in 1875, at the age of sixty-five years, both members of the Church of God. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Goodman were the parents of five children, viz.: Jacob, G., a cigar manufacturer in Lancaster; Elizabeth, in Columbia; Margaret P., now Mrs. Steinheiser; John M., who died in Lancaster in 1898; and Sarah, of Columbia, unmarried. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Steinheiser were Nicholas and Patience (McGloglan) Goodman, farming people of Lancaster county, and her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Moore, were also residents of Lancaster county.

Mr. Steinheiser is a K. of G. E. and a member of the Church of God. In politics he is a Republican, but has never been an officer seeker, although quite popular in the community and with his party. He has the full respect and confidence of his superiors as to his ability and prudence as an engineer, and well deserves the high regard in which he is held by all who know him.

ADAM DELLET, alderman of the Ninth ward in Lancaster, is descended from a family whose various representatives have been conspicuous in city affairs.

Adam Dellet, his father, was a prominent contractor, and did considerable construction work on the old State and Pennsylvania Railroads. He was engaged in an extensive railroad contract at Pittsburgh, when he died from cholera, in September, 1855. An enthusiastic Democrat, he took an active part in politics, and was a personal friend of James Buchanan, President of the United States, and of the late Col. Reah Frazer, known as "the warhorse of Democracy." During the Know-Nothing excitement he joined that party. Mr. Dellet was married to Susan Huber, a native of Lancaster, and to this marriage came thirteen children, of whom Adam was the ninth in the order of birth.

Mr. Dellet was born in Lancaster, May 24, 1841, and was educated in the public schools, which he left at an early age to enter a daguerreotype gallery, but he soon transferred himself to the Examiner office, to learn the printing trade. Of this office he presently became the superintendent of the job department, and here he remained until 1888, except the period of his service in the army. In 1862 he became a member of Co. E, 178th P. V. I., being mustered in as sergeant at Harrisburg, on a nine-months term of enlistment. In 1863 he was discharged from the service at the same place.

Adam Dellet was married in 1862 to Elizabeth Knight, who was born in England, and who was only seven years old, when her father, Thomas Knight, now deceased, brought her to America. From this union were born seven children: Annie O., wife of William Aldrich, of Lancaster; Samuel G., a printer; Jennie J., wife of J. Frank Sweeton; Minnie M., the wife of H. G. Pinkerton; John O. L., an employe of the Penn Iron Works; Joshua L., employed at H. S. Williamson's store; and Emma B., at home.

In 1877 Mr. Dellet was appointed as bank assessor for Lancaster county, by Gov. Geary, and he discharged the important duties of that position with credit. In 1880 he was appointed to fill an unexpired term as alderman and in 1889 was again appointed to fill another broken term. So well did he discharge the duties of the office, that he was elected in February, 1900, to a term of five years by one of the largest majorities ever given to a candidate in that ward. Mr. Dellet is a sturdy Republican, and has repeatedly served on the city executive committee, and the county committee of the party, and has been a delegate to many conventions. An active Grand Army man, he has associated with Admiral Reynolds Post, No. 405. Faithful in his friendships, and willing to help his friends, devoted to his family and to the interests of the community, careful in his legal decisions, and unwavering in his courtesy to all, Adam Dellet is justly popular, and no man in this district has more friends personally or politically.

In 1886, in New York city, he was united in marriage to Amanda Sheaffer, and the children born to this union are; Roy S., John, Clair and Edna M. Mrs. Leaman was born in Upper Leacock township, May 10, 1866, a daughter of John and Maria (Sensenich) Sheaffer, the former of whom

After his marriage B. Frank Leaman began farming in Strasburg township, where he continued for four years, going then to Manheim township for two years; then he came to his present farm, which he manages with success, employing modern and progressive methods and raising large crops of the products of the locality.

In politics Mr. Leaman has always been connected with the Republican party and takes an active part in public affairs in his vicinity. His religious rearing was in the Mennonite Church, and he is one of the universally respected citizens of Sadsbury township.

WILLIAM HENDERSON. The late William Henderson, of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Pa., was born Aug. 14, 1863, to the marriage of Archibald L., and Margaret Ann (Linville) Henderson.

William Henderson was reared on his father's farm, received the ordinary district school preparatory education, was later graduated from the Millersville Normal School, taught school himself for two years, and then returned to the homestead, which he assisted in tilling until his marriage. He was naturally apt and versatile and to his other accomplishments added civil engineering, which he studied after he had married, and then leaving his bride at home, he went to Oxford, Chester county, where he followed this profession three years; thence he removed to Lancaster where he was engaged in engineering for several years, and then went to Connellsville, where in conjunction with S. R. Slaymaker, of Lancaster, he laid out the town, built the trolley railroad line, and there passed the remainder of his days, being at the time of his death superintendent of the Connellsville Heat & Power Company. He was a member of the Episcopal Church and of the Americas Order; in politics he was a Republican, was well qualified in his art, industrious and attentive to his duties, and honored without exception by all who knew him.

township, Lancaster county, a daughter of Isaac and Mary (Linvill) Livingston, and granddaughter of William and Jane Livingston, also of Lancaster county. Isaac Livingston was a highly respected farmer of Salisbury township and died in 1887 at the age of seventy-four years, having lost his wife in 1864, she having died at the age of twenty-two. The remains of both were interred in the cemetery of the old Friends' Meeting House at Sadsbury, they having been birthright members of the Friends' Society. They left, to mourn their loss, besides a host of friends, a family of four children, viz: Harriet, wife of C. E. Reece, D. D. S., in Atglen, Chester county; Sarah A., Mrs. Henderson; Thomas, who was twice married, first to Ida Kurtz, and secondly to Ida Livingston; and Isaac, a decorator residing in Lancaster. Mrs. Henderson lived on her old homestead until her husband had properly learned the details of his profession, and after he had gone to Connellsville to live, joined him in 1896. At his death she returned to her farm in Sadsbury township, where she still resides in comfort, mingling with the best society and classed among the better informed and more intelligent residents of the village and township. Both the Henderson and Livingston families are among the oldest and most substantial in the neighborhood, their ancestors having been early settlers and among the prime factors in developing the agricultural possibilities of the township and county, and in some instances promoting their manufacturing enterprises, particularly by the investment of means for this purpose.

In early life the father was a boatman, but is now living retired in his native county. Both he and his wife are active members of the United Evangelical Church and are held in high regard by all who know them. Their children are: Florence L., who is the widow of George S. Uberdorf and is living with her parents; Ida, wife of Reuben Swartz, of York, Pa.; Carrie Edna, now Mrs. Corrigan; and Amandus, who is with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Columbia. Mrs. Corrigan's maternal grandparents were Harry and Elizabeth Wallick, of York county.

On starting out in life for himself, Mr. Corrigan worked for a water company, laying pipes for a few months, and then was employed in a flouring mill for seven years. After working in Bruner's coalyard at Columbia for a few months he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in 1878, serving as brakeman until 1882. He was next employed as fireman, and in 1891 was promoted to engineer, in which capacity he is still employed. Socially Mr. Corrigan affiliates with Chicasawunga Tribe, No. 39, I. O. R. M.; and politically he is identified with the Republican party, taking a deep interest in political matters. Those who know him best are numbered among his warmest friends, and no citizen of his community is held in higher regard.

JOHN CRAWFORD, a retired farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born on his present farm Nov. 4, 1823, his parents being Oliver and Martha (Walker) Crawford, old time families in both Lancaster and Chester counties.

Oliver Crawford was born at the family home in Colerain township as early as 1794, and his wife Martha Walker, in Chester county in 1799. Mr. Crawford was the son of John Crawford who was born in County Derry, Ireland, and who came to this country when a young man, and took part in the Revolutionary War, being with Washington at Valley Forge. After the war he married a Miss Bunting, and established the home where John Crawford now lives. When he secured it he found wild land on his hands, and by hard and tremendous work he cleared up a farm which has remained in his family to the present day. The stone house and barn which he erected are still in use. Here John Crawford and his wife died. They were the second family to locate in this section. The Crawfords were Presbyterians in their faith. To John Crawford and his wife were born two sons and two daughters: William, who moved to Ohio when a young man, married there and became the father of a numerous family; Mary A. married a Mr. Campbell, and moved with him to Baltimore, where he died, leaving no children; Polly died at the home unmarried; and Oliver, the father of John, received but a meagre schooling when a boy, and began life for himself as a farmer on the old homestead.

When Oliver Crawford was married to Martha Walker, they settled on the old Crawford homestead, and there they lived and died. His death occurred in 1841, and her death in 1861, his father dying the same year with Oliver. Oliver Crawford and his wife were the parents of the following family: Ellen married Frederick McClellan, and settled on his farm, where she died leaving a family, three of whom live in Chester county, and John, in Chicago; Mary A. married James McClellan, and lived in Colerain township, where she died, leaving one daughter, Martha, who is now the wife of Joseph Richardson, of New Jersey; Jane married James Palock, of Chester county, and died, leaving two children, James and Martha, both of Oxford; Amanda married Robert Black, and is deceased; Hannah married Silas Williams, and they reside in Colerain township; Samuel, deceased, married Mary J. Cooper, and located in Chester county, but while visiting in Philadelphia he died, leaving three children, Thomas who lives in Oxford, Elizabeth who lives in Chester county, and Martha, wife of C. McClellan; Elkanah died unmarried; and John.

John Crawford, whose name introduces this article, was reared in the home place, attended the local schools, and remained with his parents as long as they lived. His father died when he was eighteen years old, and the farm passed into his possession, his mother remaining with him as long as she lived.

John Crawford and Martha Black were married in March, 1851. She was a daughter of Isaac and Martha Black, who were born in Ireland, and came to this country in 1825, making their home in Philadelphia, where he lived to be eighty-two years old. Both father and mother died in Philadelphia, and there Mrs. Crawford was born in 1828. She was one of a family of eight children, and is the only child of her parents now living. Given superior educational advantages in the high school of Philadelphia, she became a teacher, and for five years was employed in the schools of her native city. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Crawford located on the old Crawford place, where they have lived fifty-two years, and have become the parents of nine children, of whom Izene, Allman, Ella and John died early in their maturer life. Alida, born in 1855, married Charles Homsher, and lives in Philadelphia, where she is the mother of two children, Ruth and Martha; Anna E., born in 1856, married Leander Lamborn, of Chester county, where they reside on a farm, and have three children, Esther, Benjamin and Marguerite; Elkanah, born in 1860, married Hannah Winchester, of Chester county, and is a resident of Philadelphia, where they have one daughter, Helen; Margaret, born in 1864, is the wife of John Place, who is on the police force of the city of Lancaster; and Calvin, born in 1866, is a farmer on the family homestead, and married Mary Quigley, of Georgetown, Lancaster county, by whom he has had two children: John P. and Elva M. Mr. and Mrs. Crawford both belong to the Union Presbyterian Church, of which they have been members over fifty years. Mr. Crawford has always been a Democrat, but has never sought office.

The Crawfords are among the old families of Lancaster county, and the title to the Crawford home came from the heirs of William Penn. During the Revolution the Crawfords were actively identified with that great struggle. They helped found the first free schools in Lancaster county, and helped to erect the first Presbyterian Church in Colerain township. Both John Crawford and his wife are worthy successors to their ancestors and worthily wear an honored name.

JOHN BRANDT (deceased) was born in Manheim township, Sept. 19, 1813, and died in Conoy township, while going to market with a load of wheat, in January, 1870, and was buried in the cemetery at Falmouth. John Brandt, Sr., his father, was born in Lancaster county, and there he spent his life. Of the children in the family of John Brandt, Sr., we have record of the following: Benjamin; Samuel; Katie, deceased, who married John Bahm; Nancy, widow of a Mr. Rudy; Polly, who married Jacob Lehman; and Fanny, who married Henry Heisey. The father of this family was a life-long farmer, and belonged to the River Brethren Church. The Brandt family is of Swiss extraction, and its representatives in this country have been men of ability and character.

John Brandt, whose career is the subject of this sketch, was married in West Donegal township, by the Rev. John Gish, Dec. 26, 1850, to Mrs. Margaret (Grove) Metzgar. To this union were born the following children: Elizabeth, wife of Theophilus Burger, a stone mason of Royalton; Mary, who died young; Margaret, wife of Jeremiah Dimeler, a stone mason in Conoy township; Mary, (2), who died young; Fanny, the wife of William W. King, a carpenter of Conoy township; Sarah, the wife of Horace Brenner, a railroad man; Barbara, wife of Harry Ellenberger, of Enhaut, Pa. John Brandt had been married previous to his union with Mrs. Metzgar, his first wife being Mary Hernley, by whom he had the following children: Susan, who lives in California, and has been thrice married, first to a Mr. Hartzel, second to Reuben Royer and third to Moses Brubaker; Anna is the wife of John Hoffman, of Middletown, Pa.;

Hettie is the wife of Fred. Shoebauer, of York county; and John is a carpenter of Elizabethtown.

Mrs. Margaret (Grove) Brandt; at the time of her marriage to Mr. Brandt, was the widow of John Metzgar, who was born in Dauphin county, Feb. 13, 1818, and died Aug. 26, 1852. To their marriage was born one son, David, who died at the age of eighteen years.

Mrs. Margaret Brandt was born in Germany, Aug. 15, 1825, a daughter of Conrad and Elizabeth Grove, both natives of Germany, but who came to this country in 1832, lived in Baltimore a short time, and then moved to Dauphin county, where they built a home and remained a few years. Their final move was to a home in West Donegal township where the remainder of their lives was passed. They had a family of two children: Anna, who married first Philip Troutwine, and second a Mr. Engerich, and is now dead; and Margaret. Mrs. Brandt early united with the German Baptist Church.

WILLIAM W. KING, son-in-law of Mrs. Brandt, is a carpenter in Conoy township, and was born in York county, March 4, 1858, a son of Henry and Rebecca (Fink) King, natives of York county, who both died in Dauphin county, the former at the age of forty-eight, and the latter in 1890, also at the age of forty-eight. To them were born the following children: William W.; Harry, of Middletown, Pa.; Emma, wife of Benjamin Ellenberger, of Enhaut, Pa.; Mary, wife of John Ebersole, of Kingston, Pa.; Fanny, wife of Samuel Kreptz, of Dauphin county; and Monroe, of Conoy township. Mr. King and Miss Brandt were married in Highspire, Dec. 14, 1881, and have had the following children: Maggie B., Ella M., Mary A., Harry J., and Howard W. Mrs. King was born in Conoy township Aug. 16, 1861. Mr. and Mrs. King came to their present home in 1895, moving from a place on the Falmouth Pike. Mr. King is a Republican, and has followed the trade of a carpenter since he was seventeen years old.

MARIS HOOPES, one of the most reliable conductors on the Pennsylvania Railroad and a resident of Columbia, was born in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, Pa., Aug. 17, 1841, the sixth of a family of ten children, born to Maris and Mary Ann (Harlan) Hoopes, natives of Chester county, who settled in the above-named township and county in 1830.

Maris Hoopes, the elder, was an iron master, and during the Civil war was a government paymaster. He was born Aug. 27, 1801, and died Nov. 12, 1878; and his wife, born May 29, 1808, died July 28, 1885, the remains of both being interred in Mount Nebo Presbyterian cemetery, in Martic township. Their children were named as follows: Harlan, Elizabeth, Hannah, Mary and Harriet, all deceased; Maris; Coleman, a baggage-master at Lebanon; Henry and Hannah (2), deceased; and Emma, wife of John T. Brubaker, a contractor in Martic township.

The paternal grandparents of Maris Hoopes were Joshua and Elizabeth (Alexander) Hoopes, of Chester county, the former of whom was a miller; the maternal grandparents were Levi and Hannah (Sheldon) Harlan, also of Chester county, and farming people.

Maris Hoopes was reared on the home farm, and attended school until twenty years of age. He began his business life as a clerk in the iron works in Conestoga, held this position three years and then for four years farmed in Burlington county, N. J.; thence he returned to Pennsylvania and for three years was a clerk in the car works at Harrisburg; he next clerked in the iron works at Coatesville three years, later was manager of the ore bank at Camargo, Lancaster county, four years, and Aug. 17, 1881, came to Columbia. He began work on the railroad as a brakeman, two years later was made a flagman and two years after that was appointed to his present position of conductor.

On Nov. 30, 1865, Mr. Hoopes was married, in Philadelphia, to Maria J. Ingram, and there have been born to this marriage four children, viz: William, who died an infant; Mary E., the wife of Charles West, assistant to his father, who is superintendent of the insane asylum at Morristown, Pa.; Emma, at home; and Edward T., clerk for the Consolidated Rubber Tube works at Philadelphia.

Conductor Hoopes is a genial and accommodating gentleman and obliging railroad official; he is a Knight of Maccabees; a member of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics is a Republican.

SAMUEL IRWIN, a well-known and highly respected citizen of Christiana, is a self-made man, one who by his own efforts has won his way to a position of responsibility with the great Pennsylvania railroad system.

Samuel Irwin was born in County Derry, Ireland, Nov. 9, 1833, son of John and Martha (Fleming) Irwin, farming people of County Derry, where their whole lives were passed, the father dying in 1867, in his ninety-third year. The mother passed away before her son left home, in 1848, at the age of sixty years. Of his grandparents Samuel Irwin only recalls that his paternal grandfather fell a victim of smallpox. The children born to John Irwin and wife were: William, James and John, who died in Ireland; Nancy J., who (first) married Thomas Culverson, and (second) William Hutton, and died in Philadelphia; Mary (deceased), who married Alexander Hutton; Martha, who married Joseph Irwin (no relation); and Samuel.

Samuel Irwin came from his native country to America in 1852, and located in Philadelphia, where he followed weaving for five years. He had also been a farmer in Ireland. Desiring to resume his old occupation, he removed to Lancaster county and remained for eight years, on a farm in Sadsbury township, leaving there to enter the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, his first work being on the track. This necessitated a removal to Christiana. Soon his business ability was recognized, and he was made foreman of a track crew on the Christiana division, remaining for twenty-five years in that position, attentive to every detail of the work, and esteemed by his employers. His work included attention to signals, and so reliable was Mr. Irwin that when a serious illness attacked him he was sadly missed. Since 1895 he has had charge of the electric signals, a position of great responsibility.

Samuel Irwin was married, Feb. 4, 1854, in Philadelphia, to Matilda Seaton, and children as follows were born to this union: Martha J., who married Gus. Skillman, lives in Philadelphia, and has two children; Rachel, at home; John H., who is track foreman on the Pennsylvania railroad at Pomeroy, married Isabella Knox, and has ten children; Margaret, who married Isaac Williams, lives in Philadelphia; Samuel J. B., who married Sadie Carlin, is the shipping clerk of the Brayburn steel works; William S., who is foreman on the N. H. & H. Railroad, at West Dale, Mass., married Jean Bowland, and they have three children; Charles F., who married Amy Skillman, is a railroad foreman on the Pennsylvania line, and they have three children.

Mrs. Irwin was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, and passed away at her home Feb. 18, 1900, at the age of sixty-five years. She was buried in Atglen, Pa. She came to America when she was eighteen years old, and was a daughter of John and Matilda (McKay) Seaton, both of whom spent their days in Ireland.

The honorable positions to which Mr. Irwin has attained, and the esteem in which he is held, may be explained in one way, when it is stated that neither he nor his sons use either tobacco or drink. Their lives are hard-working and law-abiding, and all have become excellent types of American citizenship, and represent the class from which this great country has drawn her noblest and most exalted citizens.

HENRY STAUFFER MUSSER, late of the firm of Musser & Miller, lumbermen and manufacturers in East Donegal township, Lancaster county, was born in the present family home, July 16, 1820, son of Jacob and Martha (Stauffer) Musser, natives of the same township. Jacob Musser, who was a farmer by calling, died in December, 1831, when thirty-two years of age. He was the father of six children, viz: Henry S.; Anna, deceased wife of Rev. H. N. Graybill, a Dunkard preacher, and a farmer; Elizabeth, who died young; Martha, wife of Lewis Lindermouth, of Marietta; Jacob, who also died young; and Abraham, who is living in retirement in Marietta. Mrs. Martha Musser, who was born Aug. 13, 1802, married for her second husband John Miller, a farmer, and to this union were born four children, viz: John; Joseph, the junior member of the firm of Musser & Miller; Isaiah, deceased; and Sarah, wife of John Conley, a retired banker of Lancaster. John Miller, the stepfather of Henry S. Musser, did quite an extensive business as a lumber manufacturer in addition to farming, and operated the mill, afterward owned by Musser & Miller, until his death in 1867, at the age of sixty-one years. Mrs. Martha (Musser) Miller survived until 1885.

Henry Stauffer Musser lived on the home farm until the death of his father, when he went to West Hempfield township, and for five years lived on the farm of an uncle, Rev. Hostetter, a Dunkard minister. He then returned to his mother, who by this time had remarried, and he lived in the old homestead again until he had reached his majority (1841), when he was awarded his share of his father's estate, which he invested in connection with his stepfather in the lumber business. In 1863 he was joined by Mr. Miller in the business in which he continued to prosper up to his death, which occurred Jan. 17, 1901, when he was aged eighty years, six months and one day.

Mr. Musser was married in July, 1847, in East Donegal township, to Miss Anna M. Greisinger, and six children crowned this union, viz: Elizabeth, wife of Charles Johnson, of Philadelphia; Stephen, who married Mary Sellers, and is now deceased; Frank, who was killed in December, 1867, when he was thirteen years of age, by a pile of lumber falling upon him in his father's yard; Ada, married to Dr. John J. Steiner, of Jefferson county, Pa.; Stanton, of Columbia, married to May Grier; and Lincoln, member of the Johnson & Musser Seed Company, who married Emma Pomeroy. Mrs. Anna M. (Greisinger) Musser was born Oct. 3, 1828, in Rapho township, near Mt. Joy, Lancaster county, daughter of Jacob and Anna M. (Lindersmith) Greisinger, of East Hempfield township and Mt. Joy, respectively. Jacob Greisinger was a coachmaker by trade and also followed farming, but lived retired for several years prior to his death, which occurred at the age of seventy-five years, in 1868; his widow survived until 1873, dying at the age of eighty. They were members of the River Brethren Church, and their remains were buried in the Florin cemetery. They were the parents of four children, viz.: Barbara, widow of Christopher Sherick, of Mt. Joy; Stephen, a farmer of Rapho township; Anna M., Mrs. Musser, and Sarah M., deceased wife of Henry Gish. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Musser were Stephen and Mary (Brubaker) Greisinger, the former of whom was a farmer near Landisville.

Henry S. Musser, in addition to his lumber business, owned considerable land, which he laid out in town lots, besides other valuable property in close proximity to Marietta borough. He was a director in the First National Bank of Marietta, and also in the Marietta Turnpike Company. He was very well preserved for his years, and very seldom had occasion to use spectacles. In politics he was a Republican, and for six years served as county prison inspector. In religion he was a Dunkard, and bore an unblemished reputation for integrity, in both private and business life.

AMOS GROFF. This prominent citizen of Columbia and honored veteran of the Civil war, was born in the town where he now resides, March 18, 1843. He is a descendant of Hans Groff, who, with his family, was among the early settlers of Lancaster county, his home being in what is now known as Groffdale.

The paternal grandfather of Amos Groff bore the Christian name of Joseph, and his third wife, the grandmother of Amos, was Mary Whitestick. He resided in Martic (now Providence) township, and both he and she died on the old homestead. His son Benjamin, the father of Amos, was born in Providence township in 1816. He became the husband of Elizabeth Lefevre (born in 1820), and was the father of two sons, Daniel and Amos, the elder of whom died in 1861. He was a Mennonite, while his wife was a member of the M. E. Church. He was a farmer, and died in 1872, at the age of fifty-six. After his death his widow married a Mr. McCollister. She is still living, in Jay county, Indiana. To this union there were born three children.

Amos Groff was reared upon his father's farm, and in 1863, being then twenty years old, enlisted for nine months in Co. I, 20th Pa. Cav. He participated in many important engagements, among them the hotly contested battles of Strasburg, Winchester and Gettysburg. He was mustered out April 6, 1864, at Gettysburg, having passed his period of services without receiving a wound. He still cherishes the memories of the bivouac, the march and the field, and the better to keep alive old comradeship has connected himself with Post Relief, of the G. A. R. After receiving his discharge from the army, Mr. Groff returned home, and within a few years purchased a small farm in Providence, which he cultivated and where he continued to reside until he was thirty-two years old. The life, however, was too lacking in incident and excitement to prove attractive to him, and in 1875 he came to Columbia, to enter the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He is still in the service of that corporation, having passed his first fifteen years as brakeman and flagman, after which he was made a conductor. This post he yet fills.

Mr. Groff has a wide circle of friends, by whom he is much beloved for his urbanity of manner, his geniality of disposition and his generosity of heart. His years rest lightly upon him, and his clear, well disciplined mind and strong physical frame are ever alert and active. His political creed is that of the Republican party; in religious profession he is a member of the Church of God.

In 1866 at Lancaster, Pa., Mr. Groff was united in marriage to Miss Anna Huber, by whom he has been the father of eleven children, whose baptismal names are as follows: Benjamin F., Harry E., Amos H., Frances E., Anna M., Emma F., Elam J., Charles W., Christian A., Nellie S. and William M. Of these Benjamin and Charles are deceased; Anna, Emma, Nellie and William are unmarried and live at home; Harry E., a machinist, married Alice Hershey, and lives in Columbia; Amos H. and Christian A. also reside in their native town, and are yet single; Frances E. is the wife of George E. Haymaker, and Elam J. married a Miss Hershey. Both the latter also have homes in Columbia.

A brief account of Mrs. Groff's family history is of interest in this connection. She was born in Strasburg township, Nov. 13, 1844, and is a granddaughter of Christian and Anna (Shaub) Huber, who lived and died in that township. Her father was named Henry S., and her mother before marriage was Fanny Barr, of Eden township. Both professed the Mennonite faith. He was a farmer and died in April, 1881, at the age of sixty-six. Mrs. Groff is one of a family of six children: Christian, Anna, Elam, Susan, Christian (2) and Fanny. The eldest and youngest died in early childhood; Elam, is a shoemaker of Providence; Susan is the wife of Jacob Brison, of Columbia; Christian (2) is a farmer, and lives on the old homestead. Mrs. Groff's mother died in 1857, having passed the fortieth milestone in life's journey. Subsequently her father married a sister, Anna Barr. Of this union was born one daughter, Mary E., who has died.

GEORGE B. GRUBE, the proprietor of the hotel at Neffsville, was born in that interesting and prosperous Lancaster county village April 15, 1843, a son of Christian S. and Susan (Boyd) Grube, his father being a native of Manheim township, and a son of George Grube, of the same township.

Christian S. Grube was born on a farm about a mile northwest of Lancaster, in 1819, and died in 1897. The most of his life he was in the cattle business, beginning as a butcher in Neffsville, and later taking up the work of a drover. His business was largely of a commission character, buying and shipping to the Philadelphia markets. For many years he was associated with Adam Deitrich, who bought cattle in the West, and Mr. Grube cared for them in the Philadelphia markets. For some years they were associated, and after the withdrawal of his partner, Mr. Grube continued alone until his retirement, some years later. His home was in Philadelphia. A man of generous impulses, though he was shrewd and keen, yet his open heartedness proved his downfall in business. Three times he was married, his first wife only bearing him children. She was Miss Susan Boyd, and died about 1857, being the mother of eight children: Matilda, deceased wife of Edward Blickenderfer, of Lancaster City; Mary, the wife of Amos Shaub, of Lancaster; George B.;

William B., of Dayton, Ohio; Emma, the wife of Clifford Smith, of Columbia, Lancaster county; Samuel B. of Canton, Ohio; Jacob, deceased; Sally, the wife of John Kunkle, of Philadelphia.

George B. Grube was reared with an intimate knowledge of the cattle business, and while still a very young man embarked in business as a butcher in Neffsville, with a capital of muscle, nerve and a good reputation. Prospered in this, he followed the business for twelve years, when he took charge of the hotel at Roseville, at the same time carrying on his butcher business for seven years longer. At the end of that time he moved to a farm of thirty acres which he had purchased in Roseville. There he put up new buildings, and greatly improved the place. At the end of six years he sold this place and returned to Neffsville, spending a year looking for an opportunity for a good business investment, stopping at the hotel meanwhile. Mr. Grube bought the hotel at Roseville, and carried it on for three years, when he sold it, and lived a private life for a year at Neffsville. At the end of the year he bought the hotel at Neffsville, and since 1885 has been its owner and proprietor. Under his able management it has become one of the noted hotels of the inland towns of the county. His genial character, uniform courtesy and upright spirit have brought him many friends.

Mr. Grube has not been willing to confine himself to his hotel business alone, and has dealt largely in real estate in and about the village. The old Judge Lang farm, of ninety-seven acres, belongs to him, and here he is making many improvements. A bright and progressive man, he is awake to the demands of modern life. His business management and sound judgment have brought him from the conditions of comparative penury to wealth and affluence.

Mr. Grube was married in 1868 to Clara E., a daughter of Peter Albert. She was born in Lancaster, and has become the mother of one child, Harry A., born in Roseville, in December, 1883. He is in the Millersville State Normal School.

WILLIAM H. LUCAS, general manager and a director of the Triumph Steam Laundry, the Triumph Embroidery Co. and the Triumph Shirt Co., three industries under one roof, is one of the most progressive citizens of Columbia, and one of the chief stockholders in these enterprises, the other officers being: William B. Given, director; F. S. Given, president and treasurer of the Embroidery Company; F. A. Bennett, president and director of the Shirt Company; C. E. Graybill, secretary; and E. C. Shannon, director.

The birth of Mr. Lucas was at Mount Holly, N. J., Oct. 18, 1850, a son of Miles and Phebe (Shinn) Lucas, the former of England and the latter of New Jersey. In 1824, when but eighteen years of age, Miles Lucas came to America and settled in Pointville, N. J., where he engaged in farming, at which he continued until his death, in 1853.

His widow still survives and now resides with her daughter in Camden, N. J.; the date of her birth was April 14, 1813. Both she and husband were long members of the Presbyterian Church. They reared these children: Robert, who is a foreman in a factory in Florence, N. J.; Elizabeth, who married George T. Newell, a carpenter and builder, of Woodbury, N. J.; John, who was colonel of the 1st N. J. Cav. during the Civil war and was killed at the battle of Sulphur Springs, an officer of distinguished bravery; Miles, who died in 1900; George, a well-known manufacturer of hard wood fixtures in Philadelphia; Ellen, who married Rev. Mason, a prominent Methodist minister, of Camden, N. J.; and William H., of this biography.

William H. Lucas was reared on a farm until the age of nineteen and then went to serve an apprenticeship as a pattern maker in Smithville, N. J., where he remained three years, becoming expert in the business. Then he went to Philadelphia, where he engaged in shirt cutting for J. B. Atkinson for the next three years, going from there into the employ of Allen S. Sternberger for the succeeding four years. Making a change in his business, he took charge of the Troy laundry for two years, and then returned to shirt cutting at Brighton, N. J., remaining until 1889, when he came to Columbia to take charge of the business here, of which he was one of the organizers. Four months after the establishment of the Columbia Laundry Company, as it was first named, he became the general superintendent; in 1897 the Embroidery Company commenced the successful manufacture of the finest Irish Point embroideries, it being the only factory of its kind in Lancaster county. Mr. Lucas also established the Columbia Embroidery Company in Wrightsville and was a director, but resigned his connection there when he took charge of the present plant. Mr. Lucas employs a force of 350 people in the embroidery business, fifty-five in the laundry and sixty in the shirt department, the latter industry turning out about 300 dozen shirts per week.

Mr. Lucas was married Oct. 21, 1875, in Philadelphia, to Clara S. Radcliff, and to this union two children were born: Clara, who married Capt. Edward C. Shannon, the manager of the Chickie Iron Furnaces, and resides in Columbia; and William W., who died Jan. 4, 1887, aged five and one-half years. Mrs. Lucas was born in Montgomery county, Pa., a daughter of Edward H. and Mary (Rhodes) Radcliff, of Bucks county, both of whom died in Philadelphia. Mr. Radcliff was a retired farmer, surveyor and conveyancer, a man of ample means, who survived until 1900, dying at the age of seventy-four, the mother of Mrs. Lucas having passed away in March, 1899, at the age of seventy-seven; they were connected with the religious body of Quakers on the one side and the Presbyterian Church on the other. Their children were: Winfield S., who is manager of the railroad station at Maywood, Chicago, Ill.; Leslie C., who died young;

Clara, who is Mrs. Lucas; Edward, who is in Alaska; Harry C., a carriage manufacturer and decorator, of Philadelphia; and Gertrude V., who married Eugene E. Rouch, a civil engineer. The paternal grandfather was Robert Radcliff, the family coming originally from England.

The success of the embroidery factory at this place is a tribute to the energy of Mr. Lucas, and a very profitable investment, turning out all classes of goods, from the finest to the less expensive. Both he and his wife are connected with the Methodist Church, where he is liberal and charitable. He is a valued member of the Artisans organization. Mr. Lucas has done much in an industrial way for his locality and is one of the most substantial and reliable as well as progressive and energetic citizens of Columbia.

LEVI W. NISSLY, a farmer, owner of a feed mill, and manager of the branch of the Reist, Nissly & Co.'s Creamery, located in Rapho township, was born in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, March 7, 1847, son of Henry H. and Jane (Wolgemuth) Nissly, of Mt. Joy township. The father died in Florin, Pa., Dec. 20, 1890, at the age of sixty-six years, and is buried in Kraybill's Meeting House cemetery, East Donegal. His wife still lives in Rapho township, near Union Square, with her son, Amos W. Nissly.

Mr. Nissly retired from business four years before his demise. He and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church. They had children as follows: Levi W.; Isaac W., deceased; Amos W., a farmer of Rapho township; Henry W. and Lizzie W., both deceased; and Anna W., wife of Jacob Spangler, of Cornwall township, Lebanon county, Pennsylvania.

Levi W. Nissly has been twice married. He first married Anna E. Good, of Lancaster, Sept. 29, 1870, and the following children were born of this union: Israel G., a farmer of Rapho township, who married Susan Snively and is the father of two children, Rufus and Ada; Amanda G., deceased wife of B. G. Shelley; Henry G., who is employed in the creamery, married to Miss Katie Frye, with one child, Stella; Jennie G., who lives with her parents. Mrs. Anna E. She was a daughter of Joseph and Barbara Good, farming people of Conoy township.

On April 20, 1884, Mr. Nissly married for his second wife Miss Kate S. Bradley, who was born April 23, 1850, in Rapho township, and is a sister of John S. Bradley, a well-known citizen of the county. Mrs. Nissly's grandfather was Hughes Bradley, of Ireland; the grandmother came from England. One child was born to our subject's second marriage, Hettie B., who is at home.

Levi W. Nissly lived with his parents until 1868, and served an apprenticeship to the miller's trade, a part of the time in Conawanga township, Lebanon county, where he remained for a year and a half. He then went to Mt. In 1884 he went on his present farm, the mill upon which was built in 1871 by S. H. Snively. Mr. Nissly purchased the same and has done very well with it. In 1890 Mr. Nissly was appointed census enumerator for his district, and did the work to the entire satisfaction of the authorities. Both he and his wife are members of the Mennonite Church, and politically Mr. Nissly is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party. He is well thought of in his community, and is an energetic, progressive man, fully alive to all matters pertaining to the good of his locality.

JOHN FORREY, now a retired farmer in Rapho township, Lancaster county, was born on a farm in Manor township, which is now owned by his brother Isaac, April 3, 1816, a son of Daniel and Catherine (Kauffman) Forrey, whose entire married life was spent on the farm to which reference has just been made. For some years he served as auditor of the township, and for nearly thirty years was a director of the First National Bank at Columbia, a position he resigned in 1897. With his family he has been long associated with the Mennonite Church. He is a Republican in his political belief. Success has attended his various business ventures, and he is now quite wealthy, a result of long continued industry, thrift and wise management.

AMOS N. FORREY, who has the old homestead in charge, was born there June 24, 1862, and spent his youth and early manhood under the parental roof. In Lancaster, Oct. 15, 1890, he was married to Susan Brubaker, by whom he has the following children: Lizzie W., Mary W. and Susan.

Mrs. Susan (Brubaker) Forrey was born in Warwick township, Aug. 22, 1884, a daughter of John B. and Elizabeth (Weidler) Brubaker, of Warwick and Manheim townships, respectively. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Susan Forrey was Joseph Brubaker, a farmer of Lancaster county, who married a Miss Bucher. Her maternal grandparents were George and Fanny (Landis) Weidler, also of Lancaster county.

Amos N. Forrey has spent his life on the farm he now has under cultivation, where he began a career for himself in 1892 which reflects much credit upon his push and energy as well as upon his character and manifest integrity. In political matters he is a Republican. He and his family belong to the Mennonite Church, whose good name suffers no discredit at his hands.

SAMUEL M. STILLINGER. The entire life of this prominent citizen of Lancaster county has been passed upon the farm in West Hempfield township where he was born, more than a half century ago. He was an only child and remained at the old home until his marriage, and then began housekeeping in a home erected on the same farm.

Samuel Stillinger, the grandfather, was born in Chester county, and in his youth acquired the carpenter trade. While yet a young unmarried man, nearly a century ago, he came to Lancaster county and located. There he married Miss Mary Spear, a native of that county, and to them were born a family of six children, namely: Elizabeth, deceased wife of James Brennan; John, deceased, father of Samuel M.; Mary, who died in early life; Ann, of Mountville; Joseph, of Millersville; and Susan, wife of John Dowhower, of Columbia. The grandfather died in 1826 at the early age of thirty-eight years and his wife survived until 1833, passing away at the age of forty-two years.

John Stillinger was born about 1816. He was reared on the farm and became a prominent and highly respected citizen of Lancaster county. He married Miss Mary Metzgar, daughter of Andrew Metzgar, a leading farmer of Lancaster county who was for many years a justice of the peace and who died in 1860, comparatively young in years. John Stillinger served as supervisor of West Hempfield township where he followed farming successfully until his death, which occurred April 11, 1881, at the age of sixty-five years. His faithful and devoted helpmeet survived him just one week, passing away April 18, 1881, also aged sixty-five years. They were a model couple in the community in which they lived, upright and industrious.

Samuel M., the only child, was born in West Hempfield township, December 2, 1850, and remained at home with his parents until his marriage at Lancaster in November, 1873, to Miss Anna Dellinger. She was born in East Hempfield township, March 10, 1852, the daughter of Jacob and Anna (Mumma) Dellinger, and the granddaughter of Mathias and Anna (Lutman) Dellinger and of John and Anna (Newcomer) Mumma, two prominent pioneer Lancaster county families. Jacob Dellinger, the father of Mrs. Stillinger, was born in 1822. He acquired the trade of tailor, which he followed for many years. He was also the owner of a large farm. He was an influential citizen of the township and held many of the local offices, including that of tax collector. He and his wife were devout and consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church. Jacob Dellinger died in East Hempfield township in June, 1897, aged seventy-five years, and was buried at Landisville. His widow, who was born in 1828, still survives on the old homestead. Three children were born to Jacob and Anna Dellinger: Amanda, wife of John S. Swar, a farmer, residing near Landisville; Anna, wife of Samuel M. Stillinger; and Elizabeth, widow of Andrew Hershey, who now resides in East Hempfield township with her mother.

To Samuel and Anna Stillinger have been born four children, of whom one, Jacob, is deceased. The three surviving children, Harry, Ida and John, reside at home; John is employed in the silk mill at Columbia. The married life of Samuel M. and Anna Stillinger began on the farm of his father and there they have since remained, assuming entire charge of the property eight years later, when his parents died, and conducting the farm most successfully during the past twenty years or more. Mr. Stillinger is one of the progressive and leading farmers of the township. He and his family are active members of the Lutheran Congregation, the church lot and cemetery of which were a part of the old Stillinger farm, conveyed by him to the congregation. In politics Mr. Stillinger is a Republican. He was one of the organizers of the Knights of the Mystic Chain, No. 207, of Mountville, and is now one of its active and influential members. In local and political affairs he is patriotic and public-spirited, his excellent business judgment not only advancing his own interests but being freely enlisted for the general welfare of the community in which for so many years he has been the representative of the best type of citizenship.

ELAM REEL, a farmer in Salisbury township and postmaster of Cambridge, was born in Salisbury township, Aug. 30, 1832.

Mr. Reel attended the district schools during his youth and remained with his parents until his marriage, following which he entered into a partnership with his brother-in-law, George Emrey, in the butchering business. For twenty-one years Mr. Reel was known in that line of business in his neighborhood, removing then to his small farm of nine acres, which he has since operated. He owns other property in the locality and is one of the highly respected as well as substantial residents. Mr. Reel is a Republican and in 1895 was appointed postmaster and has very satisfactorily filled that honorable office ever since. He has also served as school director. In religious matters he is a member of the M. E. Church, to which he gives a liberal support.

Mr. Reel was one of the loyal citizens who rallied to the support of the State in 1893, enlisting then in Co. C, 47th P. V. I., for the ninety-day service. When the regiment reached Hagerstown, it was recalled to Pottsville, Pa., to assist in keeping order as the draft was then in progress. It was then sent to Reading and there was finally discharged.

In November, 1863, Mr. Reel was married in Cambridge to Miss Sarah G. Emrey. No children were born to this union, but Mr. and Mrs. Reel adopted a little one at the age of thirteen months, who was given their kind and tender care and has grown to manhood, reflecting credit upon them. His name is Charles McConnell Reel, born March 23, 1877, and as a skilled electrician he is engaged in business in St. Louis, Missouri.

Mrs. Sarah G. (Emrey) Reel was born in Honeybrook township, Chester county, in February, 1832, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Irwin) Emrey, farming people of Chester county, where the former died in 1882, at the age of eighty-five years, and the latter in 1885, at the age of eighty-four. Irwin; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Cyrus Eagle; Catherine M., married to Joseph Martin, of Honeybrook; Rebecca, deceased wife of Edward Eshleman; Sarah G., Mrs. Reel; Keziah, who died unmarried, at the age of sixty-three; and George, who is in the creamery business in Honeybrook township.

In religious belief Mr. Hook is a Methodist.

In Columbia, Oct. 19, 1876, Mr. Hook was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Strohm, and by this union three children have been born, namely: Jennie B., a music teacher; Clara H., a school teacher; and John H., Jr., a mechanic, all at home. GEORGE SANDOE. One of the best known residents of Mt. Pleasant, Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Pa., is George Sandoe, whose multifarious callings of a necessity bring him in contact with almost every inhabitant of the township, he being a farmer, a stockman and a butcher, whose business transactions reach every corner of his neighborhood, and where his visits are always welcome, pleasant, and, it may be added, not unprofitable to himself, as his genial disposition makes him friends wherever he goes.

George Sandoe was born in East Earl township, Lancaster county, Pa., Jan. 26, 1846, and is a son of the late Isaac and Louisa (Duchman) Sandoe, of the same township. Isaac Sandoe was a farmer by vocation, but for the latter ten years of his business life conducted a popular hotel in conjunction with his farm. His death occurred Feb. 9, 1878, when sixty-five years old, his wife having been called hence in 1865 at the age of fifty-two, and the remains of both being interred in the cemetery of the Lutheran Church at New Holland, this county. Their children were seven in number and born in the following order: Lizzie, the deceased wife of Martin Elmar; George; Franklin, a farmer in Salisbury township; Cyrus, deceased; Anna, deceased wife of Frank Mozier; Amos, a stonemason in Salisbury township; and Newton, who died in Kansas City, Mo. The paternal grandparents of these children were Jacob and Barbara (Ranck) Sandoe, of East Earl township, the former of whom was a miller at Sorrell Horse, and the maternal grandparents were George and Margaret (Schaeffer) Duchman, also of East Earl township, George having been a merchant in the village just mentioned.

George Sandoe began his business life after leaving the paternal roof by working out among the farmers in the neighborhood of his boyhood home for a few years; next, he began butchering and for ten years attended the markets at Reading and then the markets at Lancaster for twenty-eight years. His straightforward method of doing business and his pleasant disposition secured him a large patronage in each city, while his immediate neighborhood was not neglected. He finally relinquished the meat business as his chief vocation and settled down to farming, although he continues to buy and sell cattle and incidentally does some butchering.

George Sandoe was joined in marriage Sept. 6, 1866, in Hinkleton, Lancaster county, with Miss Lizzie Franckhouser, who has borne him eight children, namely: Harry, who died young; Ella F., who is the wife of Newton Palmer, a stone mason in Salisbury township, and has two children; I. Roland, a farmer in Salisbury township and married to Lizzie Caffery, who has borne him two children: Cyrus, a resident of Philadelphia; Emma, who died young; Shaffer, merchant and postmaster at Vinola, Lancaster county; George N., at Coatesville, Chester Co., Pa., and married to Susie Caffery, who has borne him two children; and Jason B., who has married Viola Caffery, who bore him one child, now deceased.

Mrs. Lizzie (Franckhouser) Sandoe was born in East Earl township, in June, 1840, to the late John and Eliza (King) Franckhouser, farming people, formerly of Brecknock township, the former of whom passed away in 1846 at the early age of twenty-eight years while the latter survived until sixty-two years old, dying in 1871, both in the faith of the United Brethren Church. They were buried in Center Church and Rauck's Church cemeteries, respectively. They left three children only, viz.: Ella, wife of Jacob Seldomridge, a farmer in Earl township; Lizzie, now Mrs. Sandoe; and William, a carpenter and contractor in California. To a second marriage of the mother of Mrs. Lizzie Sandoe, to William Stunkard, was born one son, Enos, a farmer in East Earl township.

George Sandoe is in politics a Republican and is one of the most popular men in the county, and as far as the township of Salisbury is concerned, were he inclined to seek office, might have his choice of any within the gift of his constituency. He is a sincere Christian and a faithful member of St. Peter's Church, to the support of which he is a constant and liberal contributor.

CHARLES PENROSE HIPPLE, the heaviest dealer in groceries in Marietta, Pa., was born in that borough, Sept. 30, 1858, and is a son of George H. and Henrietta A. (Reisinger) Hipple, also natives of Marietta, but married in Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 4, 1857.

Hipple was a shoemaker by trade, but later farmed in East Donegal township for twenty-five years, beginning when forty-three years old, and also clerked in his son's grocery store the last thirteen years of his business life. He died at his home, next door to that of his son, Charles, Feb. 14, 1900, when seventy-seven years old; his widow, who was born in 1841, still occupies the old home. Both he and his wife passed their declining years in Marietta.

Mrs. Henrietta (Reisinger) Hipple, mother of Charles Penrose, is a daughter of Isaac and Jane (Miller) Reisinger, of Carlisle, Pa., where they were married; soon afterward they came to Marietta, where Mr. Reisinger conducted a general store until about 1875, when he retired; he passed away in 1878, when seventy-nine years old. He also served several years as tax-collector and was always regarded as a public-spirited and useful citizen. His wife had passed away in 1872, at the age of seventy-four years, and the remains of both were interred in the Marietta cemetery. They were the parents of five children, viz.: Mary J., who was married to William McCain; Elizabeth, wife of James Donecho, a machinist; Henrietta, mother of Mr. Hipple; Sarah A., wife of John F. He then came to Marietta and in November, 1886, entered upon his present prosperous career as a grocer.

Mr. Hipple was joined in marriage at Reading, June 6, 1882, to Miss Clara J. Garst, who has borne him two children, Pearl G. and Crystal B. Mrs. Clara J. Hipple was born in Reading, Pa., and is a daughter of George W. and Mary (Zeiber) Garst, natives of Marietta and Reading respectively. George Garst was born Aug. 21, 1821; he left Marietta in 1840 for Reading, and there learned the carpenter's trade; later he became proprietor of a large planing mill, and still later became an architect, contractor and builder, and erected most of the large structures in Reading where he also superintended the construction of the post-office building. He has been living retired since 1886. In politics he is a staunch Democrat.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Garst were nine in number, as follows: Clara J., now Mrs. Hipple; Alice, Florence and George, who died young; Mary, wife of John Barbey, a brewer of Reading; George; Ida, widow of Prof. D. S. Cowp; Ella, wife of John B. Clevensine, a printer, living in New Jersey; and Laura, wife of George Potteiger, a telegraph operator in Philadelphia. The mother of this family passed away in April, 1892, at the age of sixty-five years.

Mr. Hipple is a Knight Templar Mason, belongs to the K. of P., and is a member of the Episcopal Church. In politics he is a Republican.

JAMES BRINTON, in his life time one of the leading citizens of Lancaster county, Pa., was born in Sadsbury township, and died in the present home of his family in Christiana, April 6, 1881, at the age of sixty-two years. His ashes repose in Bart township. He was a son of Samuel and Lydia (Jackson) Brinton, of Lancaster county, and a biography of his brother, William Brinton, which appears on another page, contains a very full summary of the history of the Brinton family.

James Brinton had two wives, his first being Elizabeth Lewis, and to their union were born: Henry, who is interested in a knitting factory at Philadelphia; Samuel, a farmer near Westchester, Pa.; Alfred, a farmer on the old homestead; Edward, a produce merchant at Philadelphia; Emma, married to Ebenezer Maule, a farmer, near Doerun, Pa.; Clara, married to George Maule, a farmer near Franklin.

Elizabeth (Lewis) Brinton, who was born in Bucks county in 1821, died in 1871, and lies buried in Bart township by the side of her husband, who followed her to the grave not many years after. He, however, was married in 1875, in Bart township, to his second wife, Lydia T. Jackson, who was born in Chester county in 1839, a daughter of James and Abigail (Rakestraw) Jackson, natives of Chester county, but settlers of Lancaster county in 1843, locating in Bart township. They were farming people, and both died in 1881, the father at the age of seventy-two, and the mother being one year younger. They were members of the Society of Friends, and were buried in Bart township. He was a preacher of that Society for some twenty years, and spoke with the power of the Spirit. To them were born: Marv, who married Joseph Brocius, of Chester county; Thomas, who died when two years old; Eliza, late wife of Thomas Baker; Edith, who died young; Lydia; William L., a farmer in Christiana; Ellwood, a farmer at what is called Nine Points, in Lancaster county; James J., a farmer in the same locality.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Brinton were Josiah and Mary (Sharpless) Jackson. They lived in Chester county, where the grandfather was engaged in a woolen factory. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Brinton were Thomas and Mary (Lippencott) Rakestraw, natives of New Jersey, but their last years were spent in Lancaster county, where they died.

James Brinton lived with his parents until about six years prior to his marriage, when he built his family's present home, to which he removed, and where he made his lifelong residence. In business and commercial affairs he was prominent, and served as a director of the Williamstown Fire Insurance Company, and for many years was supervisor of the township. He and his family were members of the Society of Friends. His wife was a school teacher some two years before she married Mr. Brinton. In his politics he was a Republican, and personally was a man of fine character and genuine worth.

S. P. ROMIG, once proprietor of the "Martindale Hotel," and long a useful and respected citizen of Earl township, Lancaster county, was born in Lincoln, in this county, Dec. 7, 1860, a son of Martin and Sarah (Kissinger) Romig. Both his parents are deceased, the father dying at the age of fifty years, and the mother at forty-five.

Martin Romig was a carpenter, and spent his life in Lincoln, where he was born and reared. In addition to his carpenter work he was also a cabinet maker and an undertaker. For many years he carried on a large business, and was well and favorably known throughout a wide section of the country. Endowed with a generous disposition and a kind heart, he made many friends and retained them to the last. In politics he was an ardent Republican, and he worked hard for his party.

Henry K. Romig, the grandfather of Simon P., was a farmer, and lived to the advanced age of ninety years, to the last being well preserved and active. He is remembered as a man of more than ordinary vitality.

Martin and Sarah (Kissinger) Romig were members of the Lutheran Church. They had a family of five children: Milmort, a carpenter in Lincoln, Lancaster county; Jesse, deceased; S. P.; and Alice and John, both deceased.

S. P. Romig was born in Lincoln, where he was reared. When he reached the age of twelve years he began working for wages, and from that time has taken care of himself. At the age of thirty he engaged in a bakery business at Terrehill, a trade he had learned at Ephrata, and at which he had been employed for several years. This baking enterprise at Terrehill he conducted for some ten years, associated with David K. Eitnur. In the spring of 1901

Mr. Romig sold his bakery and purchased the "Martindale Hotel," in the management of which he displayed qualities that peculiarly adapt him for the life of a landlord of a popular hotel. He is genial and whole-souled, and well knows how to meet the demands of the public. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and socially belongs to Ephrata Lodge, No. 406, I. O. O. F., in which he has passed all the chairs.

Mr. Romig was married in 1890 to Mary, a daughter of John C. Martin, and to this union have come two children, Harry and Florence. Mr. Romig may fairly be regarded as a self-made man, as he began at the bottom, and by industry, integrity and a strong determination to be somebody, has risen to a very important place in the world while still a young man, and deserves much commendation for the results that have waited on his earnest endeavors.

WILLIAM H. MCCALL. Among the railroad engineers now residing in Columbia, Pa., none stand higher in public esteem than Mr. McCall, who was born in Watts Station, Lancaster county, Jan. 11, 1857, a son of John and Mary A. (Mill) McCall, the former a native of Ireland, the latter of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

The father, John McCall, came to America in 1849 and located in Lancaster county, where he married. He lived in Watts Station until October, 1861, when he went to Washington, D. C., as a blacksmith in the employ of the government, remaining there until the close of the war. On his return to Lancaster county, Pa., in 1865, he settled in Columbia and entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. While serving as conductor on a sand train he was killed in September, 1888, at the age of fifty-eight years, and his remains were interred in the Kleinsville Catholic cemetery. His wife, who was born in December, 1833, now resides with William H., their only child. John McCall, our subject's paternal grandfather, was a lifelong resident of Ireland, while his maternal grandparents, Abraham and Lydia Mill, were residents of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

During his boyhood and youth William H. McCall attended the public schools, and in December, 1879, began his business career as a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, in which capacity he was employed by the company eight months. For six years and five months he was fireman, and at the end of that period was promoted to engineer, a position he still fills in an able and satisfactory manner. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and of the Relief Association, and is a staunch supporter of the Democratic party and its principles.

Mr. McCall was married in Philadelphia in 1881 to Miss Margaret V. Tolon, a native of that city and a daughter of John Tolon, who was born in Ireland. She died in September, 1898, at the age of thirty-seven years, leaving seven children, namely, John, William, Edward, Philip, Mary, Regina and Anna, all at home. On Aug. 17, 1899, in Atlantic City, N. J., Mr. McCall was again married, his second union being with Theresa Smith, a native of Lancaster, Pa., and a daughter of Edward and Louisa (Klein) Smith, of Lancaster county. The father died in Lancaster, but the mother, now fifty-four years of age, is living in Newtown, Lancaster county.

DAVID R. FORNEY, who is a general farmer and respected citizen of Mt. Joy township, was born Aug. 20, 1836, in West Earl township, son of Levi and Mary (Roop) Forney.

Mr. Forney is one of the well-seasoned, capable and efficient farmers of his locality, who has followed an agricultural existence all his active life. Leaving the parental roof at the age of twenty-six years, he rented land in Penn township for four years, and then operated a farm near White Oak for three years. These ventures proving successful and remunerative, Mr. Forney took charge of another farm in Penn township, and after four years there moved into Lititz for a year. Returning to the country he operated two farms for nine years, and then settled down upon his present place, which he purchased. Mr. Forney has been an industrious man all his life, is a very close observer, and he possesses the judgment which is just as necessary in agricultural work as in any other department of human energy. His political sentiments have always been in accord with the Republican party. With his family he belongs to the Old Brethren German Baptist Church, in which he has served as a deacon since 1892.

On Aug. 28, 1862, Mr. Forney was married in Lancaster to Elizabeth R. Bollinger, and eight children were born to this marriage, as follows: Monroe B., who married Emma Stauffer, and lives with his father; Amanda B., wife of Reuben L. Miller, a farmer of Rapho township; Elizabeth B., who married Samuel Sherrer, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Mamie B., who wedded Alva K. Young, of Mt. Joy township; David B., unmarried, at home; Miss Ella B., at home; and Albert B. and Annie B., both deceased.

Mrs. Forney was born June 19, 1841, in Warwick township, daughter of Martin and Elizabeth (Royer) Bollinger, both of whom were natives of that township, the former born June 17, 1810. A short time prior to his death Mr. Bollinger retired from active life, and both he and his wife died on their farm near Lititz, the father at the age of seventy-five years and the mother in 1845, at the age of thirty-one years. They were interred in Royer's Middle Creek Meeting House cemetery. Although they belonged to no church, they were good, kind, estimable people. They had four children, namely: John R., who died at the age of fifty-five years; Joseph R. and Martin R., residents of Lititz; and Elizabeth R., who became Mrs. Forney. On the paternal side Mrs. Forney's grandfather was Benjamin Bollinger, of Lancaster county (his wife was a Nissley); and on the maternal side her grandparents were Joseph and Martha (Swar) Royer, also of Lancaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Forney are well known in Mt. Joy township, where they have hosts of warm, personal friends. Mr. Forney is known as a man of his word and is an example of honest dealing and upright life.

At the age of thirteen years Peter S. Hoffman commenced working in ore mines and was thus employed for six years, after which he followed the blacksmith's trade until 1872, when he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, one year being spent as brakeman and ten years as flagman and extra conductor. Since 1885 he has been a regular conductor on the road, and is one of its most trusted employees. Mr. Hoffman is an honored member of the Improved Order of Red Men, the Knights of the Maccabees, the Order of Railroad Conductors and the Relief Department. He is also a member of the Church of God, and is a stalwart supporter of the Democratic party.

In Columbia, Jan. 14, 1873, Mr. Hoffman was united in marriage with Mrs. Laura L. (Welsh) Ferguson, and to them were born two children, Claude C. and Lysle. The older, now a brakeman on the railroad, and residing in Columbia, enlisted for the Spanish-American war and was with his command in Porto Rico. He married Maud Miller. The younger son is at home.

Mrs. Hoffman was born in Chester county, Pa., March 28, 1852, a daughter of Charles T. and Catherine J. (Sproat) Welsh, also natives of that county, whence they came to Columbia in 1860. The father, who was agent for an iron furnace and overseer of the same for twenty-five years, died Nov. 29, 1879, at the age of sixty-six. He was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, while his widow holds membership in the United Brethren Church. She was born Dec. 21, 1818, and is now living with Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman in Columbia. Her parents were David and Sarah (Miller) Sproat, who were born in Ireland, and on their immigration to America settled in Chester county, Pa., where the former engaged in blacksmithing and filled the office of constable. Mrs. Hoffman's paternal grandparents were David and Margaret (Fleming) Welsh, the former a native of Lancaster county, Pa., the latter of County Derry, Ireland. Mrs. Hoffman is the sixth in order of birth in a family of seven children, the others being: David R., John P. and William W., all deceased; Frances A., deceased wife of Samuel Shultz; Charles T., who died in infancy; and Charles T. (2), a railroad engineer, of Lancaster.

Mrs. Hoffman was first married, Jan. 16, 1868, to William G. Ferguson, a native of Columbia and a son of John and Sarah (Wilson) Ferguson, of Lancaster county. He was born in October, 1849, and died in September, 1869. By this union there was one son, Guy W. Ferguson, now general manager of the Weekly Herald, of Columbia. He married first Helen Sipel, who died, leaving one child, Guy S., who has been reared by Mrs. Hoffman; and for his second wife he married Myrtle Steinhiser.

HARRY K. HUSSON, a well-to-do farmer of Warwick township, belongs to one of the old and respected families of Lancaster county. Thomas Husson, his grandfather, emigrated with his wife from Ireland to this country in 1848, and settled in the city of Lancaster, where he worked at his trade, that of wood turner, until his death, which occurred in 1870. Thomas Husson was born in 1829, in Ireland, and came to America with his father when a lad of nineteen years. He was very handy in the management and care of horses, and was coachman for Samuel Reynolds for fifteen years, until his death, which occurred in 1866. He married Miss Sarah Keller, and they became the parents of two children: Harry K., our subject; and Mary, wife of Daniel B. Kraatz, a miller, of Philadelphia.

Harry K. Husson was born in the city of Lancaster May 31, 1859. He made it his home with his mother until he was eighteen years of age, meantime receiving his education in the common schools of the county. He then learned the wheelwright's trade, serving his apprenticeship with John Stuber, of Lancaster, with whom he remained three years. During the next ten years he continued to follow his trade. In 1895 he purchased the farm on which he now resides, near Brunnerville, and on which he has made extensive improvements. Mr. Husson is regarded as one of the most progressive men of his locality, and as a public-spirited citizen he takes a deep interest in everything concerning politics and the welfare of his community.

On Dec. 23, 1883, Mr. Husson was united in marriage with Ida Seibert, daughter of Edward and Caroline Seibert, and to this union have come three children: Mary S., born Dec. 10, 1885; Alice S., born July 1, 1887; and Lloyd S., born March 1, 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Husson and their eldest daughter are members of the Lutheran Church.

JOHN A. HAMILTON, a popular conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad at Columbia, was born in Stottsville, Chester Co., Pa., June 17, 1862, son of William and Sarah J. (Harrison) Hamilton, of York and Adams counties, respectively.

William Hamilton was born in December, 1832, was an iron-worker by trade and is now residing in Coatesville, Chester county, retired. Mrs. Sarah J. Hamilton died in Philadelphia in October, 1886, at the age of fifty-four years, in the faith of the M. E. Church. Mrs. Hamilton had been twice married, her first husband having been a Mr. Wagner, by whom she had one child, George F.; the latter is now an iron worker in Berwick, Pa., and has adopted the surname of Hamilton. The children born to William Hamilton were eight in number, viz: Richard, general superintendent of the Millville (N. J.) Gas Works; Mary, wife of Charles F. Hale, a conductor in Philadelphia; John A.; Lewis, flagman on the Pennsylvania Railroad; Henry, occupying a similar position; Susan, wife of William Hipple; Ambrose, a fireman; and Romance, a brakeman, all in Philadelphia.

The grandparents of John A. Hamilton were John A. and Susan Hamilton, of Wrightsville, York county; the former was a farmer of considerable prominence and died in the Lancaster hospital from small-pox.

John A. Hamilton remained with his parents until twenty years of age. When ten years old he entered a rolling mill where he worked until he was sixteen; he then became an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman, then as flagman and was finally made a conductor. He began his railroad service in Philadelphia and came to Columbia in March, 1883.

Mr. Hamilton has been twice married, first in 1880, at Philadelphia, to Anna Bateman, who was born in England, a daughter of James Bateman, and died in Columbia, Pa., in 1884, at the age of twenty-three years, without issue. In August, 1885, Mr. Hamilton married Miss Elizabeth Lindenberger, and to this union have been born six

HARRY ROHRER LEFEVER, the popular grocer at No. 109 East King street, Lancaster, belongs to one of the oldest families in this county, the first of his ancestors having settled in the county in 1742, on their arrival from Germany.

Martin B. Lefever, the father of Harry R., was a farmer in Strasburg and his father, the grandfather of Harry R., was David Lefever, a retired farmer, who was living and in good health in October, 1900. For many generations this family has belonged to the Old Mennonite communion. Martin B. Lefever married Rohrer, a daughter of Jacob Rohrer, who lived on what was called the "Burker Hill" farm, near Strasburg, and from this union were born six children, five of whom are now living: Harry R., the Lancaster grocer; Frank R., a clerk in the store of Follmer, Clagg & Co.; and Elsie, Lillie May and Roy, all at home, the latter attending school.

Harry Rohrer Lefever was educated in the public schools of his district, the State Normal School at Millersville, and then took a business course in the Pennsylvania Business College. With this thorough preparation, he secured a clerkship in the employ of the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Lefever was married in 1896, to Miss Annie S., daughter of William Good, the efficient superintendent of the Lancaster County Hospital, almshouse and asylum, and to this union has been born one charming little child, Ruth. Mr. Lefever opened a handsome grocery store at No. 109 East King street, in the spring of 1900, and the enterprise has proved a decided success. It has drawn a very good class of custom, and its proprietor is making a large circle of warm friends for himself and steady patrons for his grocery by his un-failing courtesy, fair dealing and integrity. As a husband and a father, as a churchman (he being a member of the United Brethren Church), and as a business man Mr. Lefever enjoys the respect and esteem of all the community in which he lives.

PETER REIST, the founder of the Reist family in this county, one of the most prominent in Lancaster, was born in Switzerland, but went from there to the Palatinate, and came to the United States in 1723. A cabin was erected by him on Kissel Hill, but after living there for a time he gave up the place, and took possession of 600 acres of land, two miles to the northwest. Two hundred acres of this extensive tract is still in the possession of two of his descendants, John and Jacob Reist.

Peter Reist was the father of five sons and two daughters, the sons being Peter, Christian, Abraham, Jacob and John. One of these sons was killed on Braddock's Field, July 9, 1755. The Reists have a wide family connection, and among the immediate descendants of the first Peter Reist, are Mennonite clergymen and men prominent in all the walks of life. Joseph Ritner, afterward Governor of Pennsylvania, worked in his young manhood, and was employed by Peter Reist. When he had become Governor of the State he visited Mr. Reist in Warwick township.

Jacob Reist, son of the second Peter Reist, was an extensive farmer in Warwick township, during the limits of an ordinary lifetime, but was living retired in Petersburg at the time of his death. Jacob Reist was the father of Simon, Peter, Levi and Isaac Reist. Peter Reist is the only surviving member of this family, and he is now living retired in Lititz. They were all widely known among the farmers of the county, and Levi and Peter Reist were especially prominent. They were leading members of the Lancaster County Agricultural Society, where they frequently read essays and took part in all the discussions.

Living in a cosy home at No. 49, East Walnut street, Lancaster, is the venerable widow of Simon Reist, who was a grandson of the second Peter Reist, and son of Jacob. Simon Reist, who was a farmer in Manheim township, and was one of nine men who organized the Republican party in Lancaster county, died in 1861 at the early age of forty-five years. Miss Mary J. Rohrer, who became his wife, was a daughter of Jacob Rohrer, a prominent farmer of Washington county, Md. To this union were born four children, all of whom are living, as follows: Henry, engaged in the leaf tobacco business in Lancaster; Lineas R., an extensive farmer in Manheim township; Simon, who is engaged in the cigar business in Lancaster; John, long the bookkeeper and general officeman of Hager & Brothers, Lancaster.

Such is a brief glimpse at the past history of one of the leading families of Lancaster county. To tell its story fully would require a volume.

LINEAS R. REIST, son of Simon Reist, deceased, was born on the farm where he still lives, and is one of the leading farmers in that section of Lancaster county. His education was secured in the local schools, and in the State Normal at Millersville. Before he had reached his majority he began business for himself, taking charge of the homestead, and gradually has erected a complete set of buildings on the place where he now resides.

Mr. Reist does general farming in a most practical and successful manner, owning 135 acres; he has identified himself in a business way with various institutions of the county.

Mr. Reist was married Oct. 21, 1879, to Susan, a daughter of Jacob N. Landis, by whom he has become the father of three children: Lineas L., now a student of Franklin and Marshall Academy; John J. and Anna, both at home. Mr. Reist is a staunch Republican, and is one of the party leaders in his township and county. He is a director of a bank in Lancaster, and is one of the most enlightened and public-spirited men of the community.

JAMES FREDERICK FREY is a fine example of a self-made young man. His father, Jacob L. Frey, was one of the three pioneer dealers in leaf tobacco in Lancaster, and the latter's uncle was the first mayor of the city.

Jacob L. Frey married Caroline Hannum, whose father was long a well-known resident of Lancaster city, and to this union came the following children: Celia, who is the wife of Benjamin Frey, of Masonville; Mary, wife of George F. Rathvon, a merchant of Danville, Va.; Annie, wife of William Vorhees, of Milltown, N. J.; Charles H., the leading shoe merchant of Lancaster; William D., of Lancaster; Ella, at home with her parents; James F., in the livery business in Lancaster; Lillie, wife of Edward V. Read, formerly of New Brunswick, N. J., but now in the oil business in Lancaster.

James Frederick Frey was born in Lancaster, and after going to a private school for a time attended the public school, where he studied until he was eighteen, when he began work on one of his father's farms. Presently he had saved a few hundred dollars from tobacco, and when but little over nineteen years old began business for himself in a livery barn. This was in the summer of 1895, and he very soon became a dealer in oil as well. In the summer of 1900 he sold out his oil interests to his brother-in-law, Edward V. Read, and, concentrating all his energies on the livery business, conducted two large barns, one at No. 214 West Grant street, his original stable, and the other at No. 37 West Mifflin street.

Mr. Frey was married, May 25, 1898, to Mary Emma Auxer, a daughter of Adam J. Auxer, a prominent housebuilder of Lancaster. Mr. Frey is connected with St. Paul's Reformed Church, of which he is a faithful member, and was for some time an usher. He takes a constant interest in St. Paul's Sunday-school, belongs to the Bible class, which is taught by his brother Charles H., and is everywhere regarded as a successful business man and a model citizen.

ISAAC S. GIBBLE, general farmer, successful cattle raiser and substantial and respected citizen of Mt. Joy township, was born in that township Jan. 4, 1854, son of Isaac and Eliza (Shelly) Gible, the former of whom was born in Rapho township, Lancaster county, and the latter in Conewago township, Dauphin Co., Pennsylvania.

Isaac W. Gible, the father of our subject, is now a retired farmer of Rapho township, where he was born Aug. 28, 1822, son of Abraham H. and Barbara (Wenger) Gible, the former of whom was a native of Penn township, who later removed to Rapho township and engaged in farming until his death in 1864 at the age of seventy-four years. His widow survived until 1866, and died aged seventy-seven years. They were both buried in Rapho township. Their children were as follows: Joseph W., a retired farmer of Rapho township; Michael W., who died at the age of seventy-two years; Isaac W.; Fanny W., deceased, who married Jacob Warner; John W., who died at the age of sixty years; Abraham W., who lived to the age of sixty-one years; Elizabeth W., who married John Royer of Lebanon county, Pa.; Miss Nancy W., living in Rapho township; and Barbara W., widow of Timothy Price of Rapho township.

Abraham H. Gible was a son of John Gible, and his wife, who was a member of the Hummer family. They lived in Penn township, and had the following children: Samuel, Henry, Daniel, Abraham H., Joseph, Elizabeth, Mary, Steena, Sally and Anna. The last named died young.

In 1844 Isaac W. Gible was married in Hanover, Pa., by Elder Lawrence Etter, to Miss Eliza Shelly, born in 1825, and died at the age of seventy-two years. She was buried in the cemetery attached to Chickies Meeting House. She had been an estimable Christian woman, a member of the German Baptist Church, to which religious body Mr. Gible also belongs. In politics he is a Republican. The children born to Isaac W. Gible and wife were as follows: Samuel S., who resides on the old homestead in Mt. Joy township; Abraham S., who is a farmer in Rapho township; Henry S., who died young; Mary, who married Rev. Jacob S. Longenecker, a German Baptist minister in Lebanon county; Eliza S., who died young; Isaac S., who is the subject of this sketch; Fanny S., who married Harvey Stauffer, a farmer in Rapho township; Gideon S., who is a farmer in Mt. Joy township; and Barbara S., who married Milton Hoffman, a farmer of Rapho township. Isaac W. Gible is well known in Rapho township and is regarded as one of its most substantial residents and respected citizens.

Isaac S. Gible grew to manhood on the home farm, his time being divided between attendance at the district school and assistance given to the farm work. At his marriage he was capable of managing farming operations on a large scale, and for the two years succeeding this event he had charge of his father-in-law's farm. In 1857 he moved to Rapho township, and settled for two years upon what was known as the Joseph Keener farm, and then came to Mt. Joy township. Here Mr. Gible successfully operated a farm for two years, but in 1881 located upon his present valuable property. This place was locally known as the old George Baker farm, and it comprises 190 acres of fine land, a part of which is in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county and a part in Londonderry township, in Dauphin county. When Mr. Gible took charge of this land it was in need of a vigorous and progressive manager and this it found in its new owner. Mr. Gible has been very successful also in cattle-raising, and financially he is regarded as one of the solid men of his locality.

On Sept. 20, 1874, in Elder Zook's parsonage, in Rapho township, Lancaster county, Isaac S. Gible was united in marriage with Miss Fannie Z. Witmer. A family of four children have been born to this union, as follows: Sadie W., who married Jacob Brandt, who is a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Anna W., who married Harry Baumberger, a farmer of Rapho township; and Hiram W. and Noah W., both young men at home. The birth of Mrs. Fannie Z. (Witmer) Gible was on Oct. 31, 1855, in Mt. Joy township, a daughter of John and a sister of D. Z. Witmer, a prominent citizen of Elizabethtown. The Witmer family is one of the oldest and most honorable in Lancaster county, and is of Swiss extraction. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gible belong to the German Baptist Church, in which religious body Mr. Gible has been a deacon since Good Friday, 1892. In politics he favors the Republican party, but is no active member. Mr. Gible is a man who is trusted and respected by his neighbors, and is not only a successful farmer and cattle raiser, but a man who exerts an influence for good through the community, upholding all worthy enterprises.

DAVID B. RUDY, one of the honorable and esteemed citizens of Manheim township, Lancaster county, was born in Warwick township, June 30, 1836, a son of Charles and Elizabeth (Bear) Rudy. The father was born in Warwick township, where he was reared and where his life was spent. He owned a large farm and he lived to the advanced age of eighty-three. His father, also Charles Rudy, was a farmer in Warwick township, and lived to be eighty-four. His children were: Daniel; John; Charles; Susanna, married to Charles Hostetter; Elizabeth, married to George Buch.

David B. Rudy was reared in Warwick township, and educated in the common schools; he remained in that township until 1880. That year he moved to his present home near Neffsville, where he has a property of some five or six acres. Always a farmer, he has made himself a name as one of the substantial citizens of the county, and a lover of law and order.

Mr. Rudy was married Sept. 5, 1861, to Elizabeth, a daughter of Christian B. and Fannie (Dentlinger) Landis. Mrs. Rudy was born in Landis Valley, Manheim township, March 13, 1841, and was the mother of two children: Adia, who was born Aug. 4, 1872, and died Nov. 24, 1877; and a daughter deceased in infancy, born Aug. 27, 1868. Mr. and Mrs. Rudy are members of the Old Mennonite Church, and are much esteemed for their quiet lives, industrious ways and staunch integrity.

JACOB E. WITMER, an old and experienced farmer in the township of East Donegal, Lancaster county, has led a long and industrious life, and his peaceful character, manifest honesty and industrious years command the respect and confidence of the community to a marked degree.

Mr. Witmer was born in East Donegal township, Sept. 26, 1835, son of Peter F. and Elizabeth (Eshleman) Witmer, both natives and residents of Manor township, this county, who moved to East Donegal in 1834. The father was a farmer until the last twenty-four years of his life. A long life was granted him, and he died in December, 1896, when within eight days of being eighty-eight years old; his remains were interred in the Kraybill's Mennonite Church cemetery. Mrs. Witmer, the widow, who was born April 9, 1811, is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Nissley, in Landisville, Pa. She is a member of the Mennonite Church. Born to this union were children as follows: Catherine is deceased; Jacob E., is mentioned below; Peter is a farmer in Rapho township; Elizabeth, who is living in Landisville, Pa., is the widow of Joseph Nissley; Mary, who is unmarried, is residing with her brother Jacob; Annie married Jesse Myers, of Carroll county, Md.; Jonas is a hotel proprietor in Marietta, Pa.; Henry is a farmer in East Donegal township; Fanny married Jacob Sawders.

Jacob E. Witmer was married Nov. 22, 1860, in Lancaster Pa., to Anna E. Kraybill, and to this union were born: Amanda K., who married Aaron Grove, a farmer in the township of East Donegal; Anna, who married Jonas Landis; Emma K., wife of Harvey Hossler, a farmer in the township of East Donegal; Elizabeth K., who is at home; Mary K., wife of Henry Hossler, a farmer in the township of East Donegal; and Susan K. and John K., at home. Mrs. Anna E. Witmer was born on an adjoining farm, Aug. 12, 1838, and was a daughter of John P. and Susan (Engle) Kraybill, both natives of the township of East Donegal, where their entire lives were spent, and where they died at a ripe old age. Her father was born Jan. 6, 1813, was a farmer and retired some twenty-five years prior to his demise, which occurred March 20, 1884. In his active days he was a prominent man in the community, and for two years served as supervisor from Rapho township. Mrs. Kraybill was born July 9, 1817, and died in April, 1872. Born to this union were: Anna E., Mrs. Witmer; Barbara, wife of Samuel Eyer, a farmer in East Donegal township; David, deceased; John, a farmer of Steelton, Pa.; Susanah, wife of Leander Engle, a farmer in Belle Springs, Kan.; Peter, who resides at Florin, and is the present supervisor of the township; Israel, deceased; Mary, who married Daniel Shenk, of the township of East Hempfield; Edward, deceased; Franklin, a farmer in East Donegal township; and Aaron, deceased.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Witmer were Peter and Elizabeth (Nissley) Kraybill, both of Lancaster county. Peter Kraybill married for his second wife Lydia Wayne, also a native of this county. Mr. Witmer's mother's people, the Engles, were born and reared to farming in Lancaster county, where their lives were passed.

Jacob Witmer spent the first twenty-six years of his life at home with his parents, and began farming for himself in Rapho township, where he spent eleven years. At the end of that time he removed to East Donegal township, where his home has been maintained to the present time. Habits of industry and an unswerving integrity have pushed him well to the front, and in his advancing age he enjoys an ample competence. At the present time he owns three choice farms in the township of East Donegal, and is counted one of the solid men of the county. In religion he is a member of the Mennonite Church, and his unostentatious life has been very greatly influenced by the spirit of his faith.

P. S. EPLER. Among the successful and well-known agriculturists of East Donegal township is Parris Scott Epler, who carries on general farming and also raises great numbers of poultry for market. Mr. Epler was born in Maytown, Aug. 4, 1851, a son of Christian and Mary A. (Hollinger) Epler. In 1853 the family removed to Urbana, Ohio, where the father died in 1858, at the age of forty-five, the mother dying in 1852, at the age of thirty-five. Their children were: Amanda, who married John Ebersole, a farmer of East Donegal; and our subject.

Early in life Mr. Epler was left fatherless and motherless, and was reared by his grandfather, John Hollinger, remaining with him until he was twenty-one, at which age he married and then located on his present excellent farm of thirty-three acres, to which he has devoted the best part of his life, its present excellent condition demonstrating that Mr. Epler deserves his reputation of being one of the best farmers in the township.

On April 17, 1872, Mr. Epler was married to Miss Catherine S. Creider, and to this union has been born a family in which any parent might feel justified in taking pride. The children of Mr. Epler are: Frances, who married Harry Hornafins, a cigar manufacturer of Elizabethtown; Edward H., who married Ida Tottenback, and is a mail agent between Harrisburg and Hagerstown, Md.; Bertha, a young lady, at home; John H., a mail agent between Harrisburg and Hagerstown; and Maude A., at home.

Mrs. Epler was born in Donegal township, Nov. 25, 1847, a daughter of John and Fanny (Stoner) Creider, both of whom died at the home of their daughter in East Donegal. Mr. Creider lived to be eighty-one years of age and followed farming until within six years of his death in 1892; the mother of Mrs. Epler lived to be seventy-six, dying in May, 1894, both of them being buried in Peck's Meeting House cemetery. The father died in 1870, at the age of sixty-nine years. The mother, who died in 1879, was eighty-three years old. They had the following children, all of whom, with the exception of John, remained in Germany: John; Barbara, who married a Mr. Milburger; Jacob; Mary; Louie.

Mr. Kemmerly enlisted at Mt. Joy, Oct. 26, 1861, in Co. G, 9th Pa. Cav., under Capt. Jacob K. Waltman, and was discharged at McDougal Hospital at Fort Cycle, N. Y., June 12, 1865. Enlisting for three years, he re-enlisted in June, 1864, under Capt. B. G. Heistand. Among the various engagements in which Mr. Kemmerly participated were those at Tompkinsville and Paris, Ky., at Richmond, Perryville, and Franklin, Tenn. He was attached to the raid made by Gen. Carter, and remained with his command until he was wounded at Black River, N. C., March 16, 1865. His injury was received from a gunshot wound in the left hip, and he was taken to various hospitals, until his discharge at Fort Cycle.

When Mr. Kemmerly returned home he resumed his work as a cooper, having learned that trade in Germany. This was his steady occupation until 1885, when he was compelled to give up work. At the present time he occupies an invalid's chair, and receives a pension of seventy-two dollars a month from the general government, his wartime experiences having so seriously impaired his health. All his life an industrious and hardworking man, it is very hard for him to endure the burden of helplessness. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and is a man whose character, abilities and disposition have brought him well to the front. In his long and wearisome illness he has the satisfaction of knowing that his pain and suffering have somehow a vital connection with the welfare of the country which he has made his own.

DAVID R. LAYMAN. The life of Mr. Layman has been one of unwearied activity and constant devotion to duty. Born in Marietta, Pa., Sept. 1, 1844, his first experience was at boating along the canal, beginning this toil when he was but eight years old.

days of having completed her fifty-sixth year. The paternal grandfather of David Layman was also named Michael. He was a farmer of Centre county, where he passed his life. He was mustered out at Washington and received his final discharge at Philadelphia. He was many times under fire, and took part in the battles of Fredericksburg and Cedar Creek, but was never wounded. After his discharge he came to Columbia, and there entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. For three years he worked as brakeman, and for three as fireman, and in 1869 he was given charge of an engine. The grandfather was the founder of the family in Manheim township, coming originally from Schoeneck, Lancaster county, where he was born and reared to early manhood. When he was a young man the family came to Brownstown, Earl township. After his marriage to Miss Kurtz, he located on the farm belonging to his wife, which she had inherited. This property is still owned by their grandson, L. W. Shirk, and it adjoins the farm where he has his home. It contains some ninety acres. Ulrich Shirk had grown quite wealthy and had become an extensive land owner at the time of his death. Belonging to the New Mennonite Church, he was a man of positive convictions and clear thought. When he died he was eighty-two years old, and was survived by but one child, John K., the father of L. W. Shirk.

John K. Shirk was born on the paternal estate, and was engaged in farming and stock raising all his life. For a young man he had become quite wealthy at the time of his death, which occurred at the age of forty-two. John K. Adam and Susan (Minick) Bell, parents of Henry D. Bell, were natives respectively of County Donegal, Ireland, and of Lancaster county, Pa. Adam Bell was a saddler by trade, came to America when young, and was married in Columbia, Pa. There he was a toll-gate keeper for many years, later attended the old bridge between Columbia and Wrightsville, and still later, for fifteen years, was employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad. He died in Wrightsville in May, 1874, in the Presbyterian faith, when sixty-eight years old; he had lost his wife in 1843, at the age of twenty-eight. There had been born to this union two children, Henry D. and John W., the latter deceased; to a second marriage with Elizabeth Lawrence, of Marietta, was born one child, Armour D., now baggage master for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Frederick, Maryland.

John and Alice Bell, paternal grandparents of Henry D., were born in County Donegal, Ireland, of Scotch-Irish descent. They were agricultural people and came to America in 1810, locating first in York county, but finally settled near Columbia, and continued farming until the end. The maternal grandparents, Daniel and Margaret (Clare) Minick, were early settlers in Lancaster county, and were also engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Henry D. Bell attended the Columbia schools until fourteen years old, and was then employed for a few years as a driver for canal boats; he next clerked in a general store a year or more, and in 1856 entered the employ of the railroad company as a freight-car brakeman; two years later he was advanced to the position of brakeman on a passenger train between Harrisburg and Altoona, and in 1862 was promoted to baggage master, which position he filled four years. His train was then withdrawn from the road, and he returned to Columbia, where he was employed as brakeman and flagman until 1874, when he was promoted to conductor, and this position he has since filled to the entire satisfaction of the company and the patrons of his train.

Henry D. Bell has been twice married. First, in June, 1866, he was joined in matrimony at Harrisburg with Miss Rebecca R. Wilt, a daughter of Daniel E. Wilt, of Dauphin county, but this lady passed away without issue, in November, 1867. The second marriage took place Oct. 20, 1869, in Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa., to Miss Anna Stehman, and to this union were born eight children in the following order: Henry S., a railroad fireman at Columbia; Adam B., deceased; Rachel S. and Amelia, at home; Grant B. and Sidney, deceased; Daniel W. and James B., also at home.

Mrs. Anna (Stehman) Bell was born in Middletown, Pa., and was a daughter of Henry and Margaret (Beakler) Stehman, formerly of West Virginia, both of whom died in Middletown, Pa., where the father had been a justice of the peace twenty-five years. Mr. Bell had the misfortune a second time to lose his wife, as Mrs. Anna Bell was called away Feb. 26, 1895, at the age of fifty-four years.

In politics Mr. Bell is a Republican, and was an emergency man during the war of the Rebellion. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Relief, and of the Reformed Church, and is one of the most respected men of Columbia.

CHARLES HOWELL WELCHANS, late of Lancaster, now of Germantown, enjoys the distinction of having had two grandfathers who were pioneers in their respective lines in the former city. Both were of very old and respected influential families. His paternal grandfather is well remembered by the older citizens as one of the pioneer leaf tobacco dealers of Lancaster, while his maternal grandfather, David Shultz, was a pioneer hatter, and founder of the big hat concern now known as Stauffer & Co.'s on North Queen street. Both grandfathers were representative men, and both were progressive and substantial citizens.

Mr. Welchans is the only son of the late Edward Welchans, who was for years a dealer in tobacco and cigars, and who served six years as city treasurer of Lancaster; while his mother was Rebecca Shultz, daughter of the late David Shultz.

Charles Howell Welchans, named after the venerable Major Charles M. Howell, was born in Lancaster March 4, 1871, and was educated in the public schools of Lancaster, graduating from the Boys' High school in the class of 1887. After attending Weidler's Business College for a time, he entered the service of Skiles & Frey, leaf tobacco dealers, remaining with them seven years, and then engaging in the leaf tobacco trade on his own account, trading as Welchans & Good for three years, at the expiration of which time he formed a partnership with John D. Skiles in the leaf tobacco trade, the firm being known as C. H. Welchans & Co. This continued for four years, and the firm was dissolved in April, 1901, by the withdrawal of Mr. Welchans, who had become a member of the firm of Barnholt, Welchans & Co., commission brokers, on April 1, 1901. This firm consisted of C. W. Barnholt, C. H. Welchans, and W. S. Barnholt, and they had three elegantly equipped offices in the Woolworth Building, the finest business structure in Lancaster. As commission brokers in stocks, bonds, grain and cotton, they also had offices at No. 1208 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, and in the Russ Building, in Harrisburg. Mr. Welchans has withdrawn from this business and is now located in Germantown, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Welchans was married, April 18, 1894, to Miss Frances M. Shultz, daughter of William Shultz, one of the early and prominent leaf tobacco dealers of Lancaster. They have one child, Madeline. Mr. Welchans is a member of all the local bodies of the Masonic order up to the Mystic Shrine, which does not exist in Lancaster, his membership being in the Philadelphia Shrine. During his residence in the city he belonged to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Young Republicans, the Hamilton Club and the Conestoga Country Club. In religion he is a Lutheran. Wherever we find him, Mr. Welchans is a genial, clever, kindly gentleman.

JOHN T. BENNETT, a well-known engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, residing in Columbia, Pa., was born in Lakewood, N. J., July 8, 1862, and is a son of John and Lydia (Conover) Bennett, who spent their entire lives in that State, the father being engaged in the nursery business. He died in August, 1881, at the age of sixty-four years, and the mother passed away in April, 1870, at the age of sixty. They were the parents of six children, namely: William, who died at the age of fourteen years; Ezeriah, a grocer of Branchport, N. J.; Charles H., who died at the age of fourteen years; John T.; Mary E., who married William Thompson and died at the age of twenty-three years; and Irene, a resident of Asbury Park, New Jersey.

John T. Bennett was reared on a farm and handled fine trotting horses until sixteen years of age, after which he followed racing with fast running horses until the spring of 1887. The following year he was engaged in the butcher business, but again turned his attention to horses for one year. In 1888 he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as a fireman, and after serving them faithfully in that capacity for over eleven years he was promoted to engineer. He made his headquarters in Philadelphia until Jan. 18, 1892, when he was transferred to Columbia, of which he has since been a highly esteemed citizen, one who easily makes friends and as easily retains them, for he is upright and honorable in all his dealings and possesses a genial disposition. He is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, and of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and in politics is independent.

At Columbia, Oct. 31, 1893, Mr. Bennett was united in marriage with Miss Mabel F. McBride, by whom he had four children, namely; James T., Edward H., John W. and Renetta. Mrs. Bennett was born in Columbia, May 20, 1874, a daughter of James M. and Clara G. (Huber) McBride, also natives of that city, the former born in 1847, the latter in 1856. They are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, and are still residents of Columbia, where the father is employed as a stationary engineer by the railroad company. Mrs. Bennett is the oldest of their children, the others being: Lillie M., who resides with Mrs. Bennett; Anna S., who married George Groff and lives with her parents; Bertha M., deceased; Morris H. and Rachel R., both at home.

JOHN S. HOOVER (deceased) was born on the family homestead in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pa., in September, 1849, and died July 6, 1894, his remains being interred in the Mountville cemetery.

E. Ferree and Elizabeth (Smith) Hoover, parents of the deceased John S. Hoover, came from Williamstown, Lancaster county, and founded the Hoover homestead in West Hempfield township in April, 1845, and there passed the remainder of their days. They were the parents of three children named as follows: Joseph, who died when small; John S.; and Mary, deceased wife of William Shriber of Hanover, Pennsylvania.

Joseph and Elizabeth (Ferree) Hoover, paternal grandparents of Joseph Hoover, deceased, moved from the family homestead shortly after marriage to Middletown, Dauphin county, Pa., and there passed the remainder of their lives. Joseph Hoover was prosperous as a farmer, was popular as a citizen and held several township offices; he died in 1848, when sixty-five years old, and his widow was called away about 1858. Their children, four in number, were named in order of birth: Elisha Ferree, who died on his homestead; Anna M., deceased wife of Hiram Witmer; Joseph, a retired farmer, living on the old homestead, unmarried; and Elizabeth, who died unmarried in 1895.

In October, 1871, at the home of the bride, John S. Hoover married A. Lizzie Hess, and to this union were born seven children, namely: Ferree, who married Laura Igar, and is living on the same farm with his mother; Joseph, of Mountville, married to Ella Pennypacker; Mary, deceased; John and Lizzie H. at home; Park, deceased; and Edward, at home.

Mrs. A. Lizzie (Hess) Hoover was born on the Columbia Pike in East Hempfield township and is a daughter of Daniel and Barbara (Witmer) Hess, both of whom died on the old Hess homestead. The father was a farmer and was also a hotel keeper at what is now known as Kready, which hotel was under his management at the time of his death, which occurred in 1872, at the age of fifty-nine years; his widow survived him until 1878, when she expired at sixty years of age. She was a member of the Menonite Church, and the remains of both were interred in Longnecker's burying ground. The family born to Daniel and Barbara (Witmer) Hess comprised twelve children, viz: Dr. John W., who died in Lancaster in 1896; Martin, who served in the army but is now living a retired life, spending his time with his sisters; Catherine and Emma, deceased; Alice, wife of George Trout, a farmer living near Landisville; A. Lizzie, Mrs. Hoover; Susan, deceased; Witmer, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Ellen, wife of Henry Deitrich, a carpenter of West Hempfield township; Zena, deceased wife of Alford Cogle; Edward, of Karns City, Pa., and Lila, deceased.

The deceased John S. Hoover was a farmer all his life and a thrifty and experienced manager; he was a Democrat in politics and for two years was a school director, but never had any great desire for office or notoriety. His estimable widow still resides on the homestead of 140 acres and is surrounded with a number of sincere friends and several of her children, who make what is now the prime of her life endurable, and indeed pleasant comparatively, in the absence of that friend of all friends—her deceased husband.

SAMUEL DENLINGER, a retired farmer of Leacock township, was born in East Lampeter township, March 17, 1830, and is a son of John and Anna (Groff) Denlinger. His parents were both born and reared in East Lampeter township, where they were married. His father was born April 2, 1790, and died Oct. 30, 1861; his mother, who was born May 21, 1793, died March 25, 1859. Their ashes remain in a quiet corner of the old farm.

To John and Anna Denlinger were born the following children: David, who died at the age of eighteen years; Magdalina, who died unmarried at the age of sixty-seven; Jacob, who died young; Barbara, who is living unmarried in East Lampeter township, at the age of eighty-four years; Anna, late wife of Isaac Kreider; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Daniel Buckwalter; David, who died at the age of nineteen years; Susannah, who died single at the age of sixty-two years; John, who died at the age of forty-seven years; Samuel. John Denlinger, the father of John and the grandfather of Samuel, was a farmer in East Lampeter township. David and Anna Groff, the maternal grandparents of Samuel Denlinger, were farmer folk of Lancaster county.

Samuel Denlinger has been twice married, the first time on Jan. 3, 1852, to Elizabeth Musser, by whom he had the following children: Jacob M., a farmer in Leacock township, married to Anna Musser, by whom he has had two children; John D., a motorman in Lancaster, who married Mary Kramer, and has one daughter. Mrs. Elizabeth Musser, who was born in Leacock township, died in 1872, at the age of thirty-eight years, and was buried in Resh cemetery, at Bird-in-Hand. Mrs. Denlinger was a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Musser) Musser, both of Lancaster county.

Mr. Denlinger was married again, Jan. 3, 1875, in Upper Leacock township, to Mrs. Emma (Ruth) Eby. Mrs. Emma Denlinger was born in Leacock township, and is a daughter of Simpson and Mary A. (Becher) Eby, of Lancaster county. Her father, who is dead, was a carpenter and farmer.

Samuel Denlinger remained with his parents until his marriage, when he located on his farm in Leacock township, where he remained until 1872. He spent a year on another farm, and then established himself on the one where he is found at the present time. He is a man who has accumulated a very considerable property, and owns two handsome and well appointed farm properties. His church relations are with the German Baptist (Dunkard) Church, of which he is a faithful and devoted member. He was largely instrumental in the building of this church, and in the maintenance of its services he is a constant and hard worker. In 1871 he lost the fingers of his left hand in a fodder press.

THORNTON B. METZ, an honored veteran of the Civil war, who for a third of a century has been a trusted employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, now makes his home in Columbia, where he has an elegant residence.

Mr. Metz was born in Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pa., July 22, 1844, a son of Philip and Susan (Breneman) Metz, the former also a native of Williamsburg, the latter of Huntingdon county, this State, where their marriage was celebrated. Both died in Williamsburg, the father in 1846, at the age of thirty-five years, the mother in 1889, at the age of eighty-two. They were faithful members of the Baptist Church and highly respected by all who knew them. The father conducted a packet station and grocery store in Williamsburg up to the time of his death. In the family were five children, namely: Samantha, who died at the age of two years; William, who died in Danville, Pa.; Anna, wife of Ephraim Gerst, a merchant tailor of Altoona, Pa.; George, now alderman from the first ward of Altoona; and Thornton B. The paternal grandfather of our subject was Jacob Metz, a native of Germany, who on his immigration to America located in Williamsburg, Pa., and followed farming. He died in 1841 at a good old age. The maternal grandparents were Jacob and Rachel Breneman, who were born in York county and died in Huntingdon county, Pa. Mr. Breneman was quite an extensive land owner and lumberman.

At the age of fifteen years Thornton B. Metz commenced the study of dentistry, and was thus employed until after the Civil war broke out. In 1862 he enlisted for nine months in Co. B, 125th P. V. I., under W. L. Hewett, and after serving that term, re-enlisted, Feb. 9, 1864, for three years, or during the war, in Battery G, 3d Pa. Artillery, under Capt. Joseph W. Sanderson; he was discharged at Philadelphia, Nov. 9, 1865. Mr. Metz participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, and the engagements in front of Richmond and Petersburg. At Chancellorsville, he received a slight wound in the wrist from a bayonet, but lost no time from his regiment. After the war Mr. Metz purchased the stage route between Williamsburg and Hollidaysburg, which he operated one year, and then came to Columbia and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as fireman, but at the end of two years and eleven months he was promoted to engineer, in which capacity he has served the company faithfully and well ever since. At one time he was a member of the B. O. L. E. and I. O. O. F., and served as vice grand in the latter fraternity, but at present is connected with no secret society. In his political views he is a Democrat. A pleasant, genial gentleman, Mr. Metz makes many friends, and is held in high regard by all who know him.

In Ansonville, Clearfield Co., Pa., Aug. 9, 1866, Mr. Metz was united in marriage with Lydia A. Groom, who was born in Columbia, Aug. 13, 1849, a daughter of Thomas and Anna (Lochard) Groom, also natives of Columbia, where the father followed farming for some years, but later was superintendent of the junction and breakwater of the Delaware, Maryland & Virginia railroad at Lewes, Del. When the road was purchased by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, he remained with them until his death, which occurred in Lewes, whither he removed in 1875.

AARON W. MILLER, the proprietor of the "Oregon Hotel," in Oregon, who enjoys an enviable reputation among the hotel men of Lancaster county, was born in Manheim township, Aug. 5, 1857.

The son of Martin Van Buren and Anna M. (Eberley) Miller, he worthily sustains the honor of an old family name. His mother is still living, and makes her home with her daughter in East Hempfield township, having already reached the age of sixty-four years. The father was sixty-five years of age at the time of his death, July 10, 1900, near Manheim. Born in Lancaster county, he was the son of Samuel E. Miller, who died when Martin was a small boy.

Martin Van Buren Miller was early left to care for himself, and he made his home with Ulrich Shirk, where he lived until his marriage. After that event for several years he was engaged in cultivating the Shirk farm. Leaving there, he engaged in the butchering business, which he followed for thirty-five years, attending the Lancaster markets. After his son Aaron was married, he became a partner with his father until 1882. For several years after that the business was under the management of the son, for whom the father worked. In 1893 the business was sold, and Aaron retired from business life, and the father lived with him. Martin Van Buren Miller was a Republican. To him and his wife were born four children: Etta E., the wife of Samuel Rutter, of Lancaster; Aaron W.; Abraham L., the keeper of the toll-gate on the New Holland pike; Alice, the wife of Harry Dunkler, who resides between Landisville and Lancaster.

Aaron W. Miller was educated in the public schools, and learned the butcher business with his father, when only twelve years of age keeping his father's books; when a young man he attended the market business at Lancaster, and this was his occupation for over thirty years. In 1893 he lived retired one year, but found it difficult to endure the lack of a regular occupation, and accordingly entered upon the hotel business, which has been his main labor to the present time. With peculiar adaptability to the hotel career, he has made it a great success.

Mr. Miller has been twice married, first in 1879, to Ella, a daughter of John Myers. She died Aug. 28, 1892, at the age of thirty-five years, seven months and three days, and was the mother of the following: Walter, born Sept. 10, 1879, now living in Lititz, an engineer, who married Ada Beech, and has one child, Edna May; Samuel S., born Dec. 3, 1881, at home; Katie, born May 28, 1883, the wife of William Mills, of Ephrata township, and the mother of one child, Helen; Anna Mary, born Feb. 11, 1886, at home; Martin Van Buren, born April 26, 1887; Alice, born May 18, 1889.

Mr. Miller contracted his second marriage in 1893, to Mrs. Carrie Kemper, of Lititz, a daughter of William Stauer. To this union have come two children: Wesley O'Brien, born Nov. 5, 1893; and Carrie, born Feb. 15, 1895. The Millers stand among the best and most respected people of the county.

That year he retired in favor of his two sons. He and his wife belong to the Methodist Church. In his politics he is a stanch Republican, and takes a prominent part in local and general affairs. They are a happy couple, and enjoy the unmeasured respect and esteem of all with whom they come in contact.

HOOK, a well-known citizen of Columbia, who for eighteen years has been connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 4, 1859, a son of John A. and Mary (Wolf) Hook, the former a native of Lancaster, the latter of York, Pa. Their marriage was celebrated in Columbia, where the father located in 1848, but in 1854 he removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, and spent six years in that city, returning to Columbia in 1860. There he was engaged in the insurance business, and as one of the prominent and influential men of the city was called upon to serve in the city council.

During the infancy of John F. Hook his parents returned to Columbia, Pa., where he was reared and educated, attending school until sixteen years of age, when he entered the office of the Columbia Herald and was there employed seven years. At the end of that period he accepted a position as brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and served there for three years and a half. During the following twelve years he was employed as fireman, and was then promoted to engineer, in which capacity he is still employed by that same company, his labors having always given the utmost satisfaction. Fraternally he is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and the Pennsylvania Volunteer Relief Department; and politically he is an ardent supporter of the Democratic party and its principles. In religious belief he is a Catholic.

At Columbia, April 12, 1893, Mr. Hook was united in marriage with Miss Henrietta Hinkle, and to them have been born three children, namely, Sarah F., Mary C. and Grace A. Mrs. Hook is a native of Columbia and a daughter of David K. and Henrietta Hinkle.

HOSEA GIVLER, a general farmer of Rapho township, lives on the same farm where he was born, Feb. 28, 1863. He is the son of Henry and Nancy (Shepler) Givler, of Ephrata, Lancaster county.

Both the parents of Hosea Givler died on this farm, upon which they settled in 1858. They are buried in private ground on the Fauss farm, in Rapho township. The parents were members of the River Brethren Church. He was a shoemaker by trade but had retired some years before his death, which occurred in March, 1898, at the age of eighty years. Mrs. Henry Givler died in 1880, at the age of fifty-nine years. There were born to this union of Henry and Nancy Givler the following children: Elizabeth, deceased; Isaac, a farmer of Mt. Joy; Samuel, a farmer of Rapho township; Henry, Peter, Jacob, Mary, wife of Nathan Myers, Christian and John, all deceased; Aaron, of Manheim township; Hiram and Anna, deceased; and Hosea.

Mrs. Newgart's maiden name was Mary Geisel and she was born in Rapho township in March, 1835. She was the daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Gepfer) Geisel, of Rapho township. He worked at the carpenter trade in Germany and when he came to America in 1850 he still followed it in connection with farming until 1894, when he retired.

Hosea Givler has lived on his present farm, as already mentioned, all his life. He has been very successful since he took charge of the place, in 1889, upon the retirement of his father, and no one stands better in the community than he. He is a fine, up-to-date man, well off financially, and alive to the interests of Lancaster county. In politics he is a Republican, and it would not be surprising to his friends if he, a little later, should take a prominent part in the councils of the party.

JAMES R. McMANUS. This well-known railroad conductor of Columbia, Pa., was born in that city, Sept. 18, 1854, and throughout life has been identified with its interests.

Owen McManus, father of James R., and a retired railroad man of Columbia, was born in the village of Oldtown, County Meath, Ireland, Nov. 4, 1832, a son of Patrick and Elizabeth (Gaffney) McManus, also natives of Ireland, where the former died in 1842, while the latter departed this life in Lancaster, Pa., in 1857. The father came to the New World in 1849, landing in New York, Dec. 14, and after a few days spent in that city he came to Lancaster, Pa. He removed to Columbia in 1871, and until he retired, Jan. 1, 1893, he was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. On Dec. 4, 1853, he married Nora Larkin, a native of County Clare, Ireland, and a daughter of James and Catherine Larkin, who never left that country. She died Dec. 23, 1875, aged forty years. To Owen and Nora (Larkin) McManus were born eight children, of whom James R. is the oldest; Mary A. is at home with her father; John was killed on the railroad, Oct. 17, 1884; Alexander was killed, Jan. 23, 1890; Eugene died young; Margaret is a school teacher of Columbia; Michael is a railroad brakeman; and Nora is the wife of Desmos Barbot, a wholesale liquor dealer of Philadelphia.

The first fifteen years of his life, James R. McManus spent upon a farm, engaged in agricultural pursuits when not in school. He was then employed on track repairs with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company one year, after which he went as brakeman on the road for four years and flagman three years. Since then he has held the responsible position of conductor and has discharged his duties in a capable and satisfactory manner. The Democratic party finds in him a staunch supporter of its principles, and he affiliates with the Order of Railroad Conductors and the Knights of St. Patrick. In religious belief he is a Catholic.

Mr. McManus was married in Columbia, May 9, 1882, to Miss Alice Hendrick, by whom he has five children, Alice V., James R., Joseph H., Margaret and Estella. Mrs. McManus was born in Columbia, April 1, 1863, a daughter of Lawrence and Mary (Grenan) Hendrick, natives of County Carlow, Ireland, who were married in Norristown, Pa., and came to Columbia in 1854. The father was flagman for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company until crippled while coupling cars, and is still in their employ, having charge of the sharpening of tools. He was born in 1822, his wife in 1830. Both are devout members of the Catholic Church and most estimable people. They have only two children: Anna M., who is the widow of Michael P. Berry and resides with her father; and Alice, now Mrs. McManus.

AMOS G. GOOD. For many years the name of Good has been known and respected in Lancaster county, where the grandfather of Amos G. Good established a reputation for honesty and an estimable life that is still remembered. For many years he was a prominent justice of the peace and innumerable were the occasions when the good judgment and wise advice of "Squire Good" settled troubles which might have resulted in long litigation. His son, Jacob Good, was born and reared in Conestoga township, where he became an extensive farmer and owned a large acreage of land both in Conestoga and in Pequea townships. His years almost reached eighty-four, but his wife died at the age of sixty-five; both of them were devoted members of the Old Mennonite Church.

A large family was born to Jacob Good and his wife, the greater number being settled in Lancaster county, with honors and descendants of their own: Christian, a retired resident of Strasburg township; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Benjamin Kreider, of Pequea township; Mary, deceased wife of Jacob Kreider, of West Lampeter township; Benjamin, a farmer of Pequea township; Simon, a farmer of Providence township; Annie, who married Jacob Harnish, a farmer of Pequea township; Susan, deceased wife of Martin Eshelman, a farmer of Pequea township; Amos G.; Martha, who married John Ressel, of Pequea township; and Fannie, who married Frank Weaver, of Upper Leacock township.

Amos G. Good was a typical farmer boy, was reared on the old farm and early became acquainted with its various duties, and received his education in the common schools of his district. At the age of twenty-four he started out in life for himself; he located first on a farm of 140 acres in Strasburg township, near Refton, where he remained for nine years, at the end of which period he removed to his present farm of fifty-seven acres, two miles south of Lancaster City. Mr. Good was born Aug. 17, 1842, in Pequea township, a son of Jacob and Mary (Gochnaur) Good, and he has always felt an interest in that locality. The farm he now occupies is one of the old ones of the county and the house and barn are almost historical on account of their age, the former having weathered well the storms of 129 years, while for eighty-nine years the old barn has done duty as shelter for stock and the yield of the fertile fields. The location of this farm enhances its value, its proximity to the city being of great advantage.

Amos G. Good was married to Catherine Huber, a daughter of David Huber, of West Lampeter township, and they have had a family of five children: Melinda, married to John Barr, a farmer who resides near Kansas City, Mo., and the mother of four children, Katie, Mary, Franklin and Earl; Mary, at home; Henry F., a farmer of East Lampeter, who married Ella Zittle, and has three children, Vernon, Lester and Sylvester; Amos H. and David S., both at home.

Amos Good has been one of the energetic, progressive, wide-awake men of his neighborhood, and a consistent supporter of the Old Mennonite Church, of which both he and his estimable wife have long been members.

JOHN R. LANDIS, one of the best known conductors on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in Lititz, Lancaster Co., Pa., June 2, 1857, and is a son of David F. H. and Mary A. (Resler) Landis, who in February, 1897, removed from Lititz to the city of Lancaster, where they are now living in quiet retirement. David F. H. Landis was born July 4, 1835, was reared a carpenter and followed the trade until his retirement; his wife was born in August, 1826, and to them have been born two children, John R. and Susan R. The family are strict Mennonites in religion and descend from a long line of ancestors renowned for their piety, and whose early history forms very interesting reading.

In the latter part of the sixteenth century, the Landis family were members of a sect in Switzerland known as Pietists on account of their rigorous piety. In this connection historical mention is made of Hans Landis, a minister of this faith, who located on the Swiss side of the Rhine river in order to promulgate the doctrines of his church, but the Council of Zurich, who were not Catholics but members of the Reformed Church, in order to check the teachings of Hans, ordered his arrest; this action did not dampen the ardor of the good man, and later he was sent in irons from Zurich to the Papists at Zolothurn. Through the aid of good friends he secured his release and returned to Zurich, where he rigorously examined as to his faith, and in September, 1644, was beheaded with a sword as a teacher of heterodoxy.

In May, 1637, with three others of the same faith, Hans Landis, the second, a steadfast Pietist in Horgenberg, was arrested, and he and his daughter, Margaretha, were confined fully sixty weeks at Othenbach, and while thus incarcerated the authorities confiscated their property, valued at 7,000 florins, and applied it to their own use. In 1640 Oswald Landis, his wife, and two daughters-in-law, were also incarcerated in Othenbach, and Jacob Landis, son of Oswald, and all his family were banished. The two daughters-in-law, with their infants, later escaped from prison, which good fortune afterward befell Oswald and his wife, but they had been deprived of all their property and were compelled to wander about in poverty.

Felix Landis, son of the beheaded Hans, was a firm member of the church at Horgenberg, and for this he was imprisoned at Othenbach, where he was cruelly treated, and his digestive organs so impaired by starvation, that he afterward died from this cause. His wife and children were deprived of their home and furniture and fortune of 5,000 florins, and turned loose among strangers.

For about two generations, from 1643 to 1717, the records fail to reveal further individual incidents in the history of the Landis family. But in 1683, and in 1709 and 1712, many Mennonites availed themselves of the liberal policy of William Penn in America, and came to Chester county, which then included Lancaster county. In 1717, three brothers Landis, Rev. Benjamin, Felix and John, all Swiss Mennonites, came from the vicinity of Manheim on the Rhine, whither they had been driven from Zurich, and purchased land from Penn and the Conestoga Indians. Rev. Benjamin Landis was accompanied to Pennsylvania by his only son, Benjamin, Jr., then eighteen years of age. He took up a tract of 240 acres from a London company, and received his patent in 1718, but the land was then occupied by Conestoga Indians. Rev. Benjamin and his son, however, at once began farming, the location of the tract being in what is now Lampeter township, near Mellinger's Meeting House, and about four miles east of Lancaster, and many of the descendants of Rev. Benjamin are still living in that neighborhood.

The paternal grandparents of John R. Landis were David S. and Anna (Frick) Landis, who lived on their farm in Lancaster county; the great-grandfather was John Landis.

John R. Landis lived on the home farm until 1873, when he came to Columbia, and worked in a planing mill until the latter part of 1877, and then in a livery stable until the close of 1878; at that time he became brakeman for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, working thus until 1885, and next as flagman until 1892, when he was promoted to conductor, and is now considered to be one of the most reliable on the road.

March 14, 1877, Mr. Landis married in Columbia, Miss Phebe Depue, and to this union have been born three children: Mazie D., who is married to Harry S. Garrett, a brakeman in Columbia; and John D. and Mary D., at home. Mrs. Phebe (Depue) Landis was born in York county, Pa., March 28, 1858, and is a daughter of John and Rachel (Brooks) Depue; the father, a carpenter, still resides in York county, at the age of sixty-eight years, but the mother was called away March 14, 1870, aged thirty-one years, in the faith of the M. E. Church. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Depue are four in number and are named: Phebe, now Mrs. Landis; Thomas, of Oxford, Pa.; Mary, of Leaman Place, and married to Frank B. May; and Lillie, wife of Jacob Isenberger, a painter in Philadelphia. Mr. Landis is a member of the B. of R. T., is a K. of P., a member of the Relief, and of the Lutheran Church, and in politics is a Republican.

JOHN H. METZLER, a retired farmer in Rapho township, Lancaster county, was born in Strasburg township, of that county, May 24, 1826, a son of John and Esther (Herr) Metzler.

John Metzler was born in Strasburg township, his wife in Paradise township, and both died in Rapho township. The father was an active farmer until a few years before his death, which occurred June 18, 1865, he being at that time aged seventy years. The mother, who died Sept. 26, 1867, was born March 16, 1799. They were buried in the Erismans Meeting House burying ground. They were members of the Mennonite Church, and were honorable and upright people. To them were born the following family: Henry H. and Martin H., both deceased; John H.; Susan H., the widow of Martin Gepfer, living in Mt. Joy township; Eliza H., who married Samuel Stauffer, and has a home in Rapho township; Fanny H., who married Samuel Barnes, and lives in Rapho township; Abraham H., deceased; Benjamin H., living in West Hempfield township.

Henry Metzler, the paternal grandfather of John H., was a farmer in the township of Strasburg.

John H. Metzler has been twice married, the first marriage occurring Oct. 12, 1852, when Hettie Shelley became his wife. There were born to this union: Abraham S., deceased, who married Mary Hernley, and had three children, Herman, Monroe and Abraham; Eli S., a farmer in Rapho township who married Rebecca Gingerick, by whom he had Dora, Bessie and Martin; Daniel S., a farmer on the present homestead, married to Lizzie Erb, by whom he had Minnie, Harvey and John; Lizzie S., who married Abraham Hernley, a farmer in Rapho township, and is the mother of Nora, Minnie, Peter, Barbara, Lizzie, Martha and Esther.

Mrs. Hettie (Shelley) Metzler, born in Rapho township, died Dec. 26, 1873, at the age of forty years and twenty days, and was buried in the Erisman's Church cemetery. She was a daughter of Abraham and Esther (Shoemaker) Shelley, of Lancaster county. Her name is tenderly cherished by those who knew her as a woman of fine character and consecrated spirit.

The second marriage of Mr. Metzler occurred March 18, 1875, in Rapho township, when Mary Bradley became his wife. To this marriage has come one daughter, Emma B., now the wife of Jacob Snavelly, a farmer in Rapho township, and the mother of three children, Stella, Mamie, and Monroe.

Mrs. Mary (Bradley) Metzler was born in Rapho township, March 22, 1843, a daughter of Henry and Esther (Shelley) Bradley, of Rapho township, where they spent their lives. Her father was a lifelong farmer. He was born in 1807, and died in 1865. His widow was born in 1813, and died at the age of seventy-nine years. These were their children: Samuel, now living retired in Rapho township; Abraham, now retired in Rapho township; Anna, unmarried, and living in Rapho township; Henry, living in the same township; Mary, Mrs. Metzler; Hettie, who died young; John, a farmer in Rapho township; Barbara, who died young; Catherine, married to Levi Nissley, a miller of Rapho township; Benjamin, of Rapho township; Fanny, married to Samuel Cober, a carpenter in Rapho township.

Henry Bradley, Mrs. Metzler's grandfather, came from Ireland, and was an early settler in Rapho township. There he died in 1812.

John H. Metzler remained with his parents until his marriage, after which he was employed by his father-in-law some ten years, when he set up for himself. In 1852 he removed to his present place, where he has become very prominent as a rich and prosperous farmer. His business abilities are of a high order, and his personal character unstained. To each of his children he has given a farm, and both he and his wife are much esteemed and respected by a wide circle of good friends. They are a fine old couple, and well deserve whatever peace and comfort comes to them as their years decline. They belong to the River Brethren Church, and their sound and wholesome lives have brought no discredit to their religious associations.

HENRY BINKLEY, the well known cattle dealer at Mountville, Lancaster county, Pa., was born in Manheim township, in the same county, Sept. 23, 1849, and is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Stackhouse) Binkley, natives of Welsh Mount, Earl township, and Mt. Joy township, respectively. Samuel Binkley was a lifelong farmer and died at Chickies, in Rapho township, Jan. 6, 1890, at the age of sixty-seven years, in the faith of the Dunkard Church. Mrs. Elizabeth Binkley was born in Mt. Joy township, May 20, 1831. To her marriage with Samuel Binkley were born six children, in the following order: Henry; John, of Mountville; Mary, deceased; William, who died in Texas; Samuel, of Chicago, Ill.; and Harmon, a cigarmaker in Mountville, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Henry Binkley were John and Hannah (Kertz) Binkley, of East Earl township, where Mrs. Binkley passed her life; John Binkley was a miller and died in Landisville, where his mill is still standing. To John and Hannah Binkley were born seven children, all now deceased, viz: Hannah, who was married to David Miller; Elizabeth, who was the wife of John Dunkel; Mary, married to John Paxter; John, Samuel, John (2) and William, all deceased. David Binkley, great-grandfather of Henry, came from Germany and was a pioneer of Lancaster county. His son John, conducted a flouring mill, which is still standing, known as the old Binkley mill, but which is now operated as a paper-mill. John also built the Binkley bridge, which crosses Conestoga creek.

The maternal grandparents of Henry Binkley were John and Susan (Johnson) Stackhouse, natives of Bucks county. John Stackhouse was a cooper by trade, came to Lancaster county in an early day, and there died in 1861, at the age of sixty-five years; he had lost his wife in 1837 when she was forty years old. To their union were born the following named children: Sarah, who was married to John Watts; Evaline, who was Mrs. Jacob Sonon; Sylvester; Amanda, Mrs. Schriver; Matilda, Mrs. Boggs; Elizabeth, Mrs. Binkley, the only survivor; and John H.

Henry Binkley remained on the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-five years, and then joined his brother John as a partner in the milling business at Abbeyville for one year, and then came to Mountville, where he has been since most prosperously engaged in trading, buying and selling horses and cattle and other live stock.

On Sept. 6, 1876, Henry Binkley married Clara Yohn in Mountville and to this union have been born eight children, viz: Elizabeth, a school teacher, living with her parents; Blanche, deceased; Ella, also under the parental roof; Edward, a machinist; Marie, Harry, Esther and Thomas, all still with their parents. Mrs. Clara (Yohn) Binkley was born in East Hempfield township, Jan. 31, 1856, a daughter of John and Jane (Middleton) Yohn, of Brecknock township, Lancaster county, and Compass, Chester county, Pa., who were married in Lancaster county. They came to Mountville in 1862, where John Yohn, previously a farmer, conducted the "Barley Chief Hotel" until his death, which occurred in April, 1882, when he was seventy-three years old. His widow was called to rest July 3, 1898, at the age of eighty-three years; she was a member of the Reformed Church, to which her husband had also belonged. There were born to this couple the following children: William, a deceased farmer of Canton, Ohio; Edward, a stock-dealer at Mountville, Pa.; Martin, of Columbia, Pa.; Catherine, Anna and John, who all died in infancy; Mary, residing with her sister Clara, who is the youngest of the family and the wife of Henry Binkley.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Clara Binkley were Peter and Catherine (Styer) Yohn, both now deceased. Peter was a farmer and a son of John Yohn, a German pioneer of Lancaster county who came to America with two brothers, one of whom went West and the other settled in Berks county, Pa. The death of Peter occurred in 1862. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Binkley were James and Sallie (Armstrong) Middleton, of Chester county, Pa., where James Middleton was a stonemason.

Henry Binkley is a member of the Mystic Chain, of Mountville, and in politics is a Republican. He is very highly esteemed socially and as a business man stands fair and square before the world, without a blot on his fair name.

JOHN HENRY SWARTZ, an enterprising and progressive citizen of Columbia, who is now employed as conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in that city, Oct. 2, 1855, and is a son of John Frederick and Catherine (Hammond) Swartz, natives of Columbia and Mt. Joy, Pa., respectively.

The paternal grandparents were John and Catherine (Beiter) Swartz, who were born in Germany and on coming to the United States, in 1812, located in Columbia, Pa., where the former engaged in the butcher business for the remainder of his life. The maternal grandfather, George Hammond, was a native of Wales and an early settler of Lancaster county, Pa., where he followed the occupation of farming. The father, John F. Swartz, was flagman for the old State road; was engaged in the butcher business from 1868 to 1872; and afterward was employed as railroad brakeman. He was killed at Philadelphia, June 7, 1877, at the age of forty-seven years, being run over by the train while he was making a coupling. His wife is still living at the age of sixty-four years, and now makes her home in Lancaster; she is a member of the Lutheran Church, to which he also belonged. John H. is the oldest of their children; William died at the age of nine years; Maggie is the wife of Edward B. Fralick, who is engaged in the hotel business in Lancaster; Anna is the wife of Albert Charles, a butcher of Lancaster; Emily died young; Carrie is the wife of Harry McCalister, a railroad conductor of Lancaster; George is a clerk for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Lancaster; and James is a conductor of Columbia.

In his native city John H. Swartz grew to manhood. At the age of sixteen he commenced working for his father in the butcher business, and two years later began his railroad career as brakeman for the Pennsylvania Company, serving them in that capacity three years. The following three years he was flagman, and was then promoted to conductor, which position he is now most creditably filling. He is an honored member of the Order of Railway Conductors, and also belongs to the Pennsylvania Relief Association and the Signal Insurance Company. In his political views he is a staunch Republican, and always ready and willing to give his support to any enterprise which he believes calculated to prove of public benefit.

On Aug. 13, 1876, in Columbia, Mr. Swartz married Miss Catherine Heim, and to them were born eight children, namely: Minnie and Nellie, twins, who died young; Walter; John H.; Grover C.; Charles F.; Albert C.; and Ollenine. Mrs. Swartz was born in East Prospect, York Co., Pa., Sept. 26, 1857, a daughter of Peter and Catherine (Hibner) Heim, natives of Germany, who came to the New World in 1853, and located in Columbia, Pa., where for many years the father followed his trade of shoemaking; he is now living retired with his daughter, Mrs. Swartz. He was born in 1822, his wife in 1815. Religiously they are members of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Swartz is the youngest of their children, the others being: Emma, wife of Bud Williams, of Wrightsville, Pa.; Elizabeth, wife of Reuben Berg, of Columbia; George, a switch tender of Columbia; Philip, a train receiver of the same place; John, a railroad engineer, now deceased. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Swartz were Adam and Catherine (Youhann) Heim, lifelong residents of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, the former a shoemaker in his younger days and later a lumberman. The maternal grandparents were John and Catherine Hibner, also natives of Germany, where the grandfather died, after which the grandmother and her children came to America.

JOHN H. KREIDER, deceased. The name of Kreider is an old one in Lancaster county and originated in Switzerland, various members of the family coming here during the first settlement of this part of the State and taking up residence when it was still a wilderness and inhabited principally by Indians. The contrast is great between the possessions of the family then and at the present time, for their land is probably among the very best in this agricultural district in point of care and cultivation.

Christian Kreider, the grandfather of John H., was one of the solid, substantial citizens of West Lampeter township, owning a farm of sixty acres located about two and one half miles south of the city of Lancaster, now owned by Amos S. Mowrer. There he lived, and owned and operated a sawmill, run entirely by water power; some of this kind are still in operation in different sections. He married Anna Harnish, who survived him, living to be eighty-two, while he died at the age of seventy-six. They were good and worthy people, consistent members of the Reformed Mennonite Church. They had a family of five children: Elizabeth, who married John Weaver, of West Lampeter township; Jacob, who became a prominent man; John; Nancy, who married Benjamin Landis, of Upper Leacock township; and Fannie, wife of John Herr, who resided some time in Manheim township, but later moved to Lancaster City, where he lives in retirement.

John Kreider, who was locally known as "John Kreider, fuller," because he operated a fulling mill in connection with his woolen factory, was born in 1804, and lived until 1871, his life covering a space rich in the world's discoveries and improvements. He was reared on a farm, and after he reached maturity took entire charge of the place, and not only engaged in farming but opened a woolen factory, built a fulling mill and carded wool, for many years doing a thriving business in that line. In 1848 he closed up these interests and turned his energies to farming exclusively, buying a property which lay adjacent to the old farm, and to which he later removed, his acreage then being 180 acres. As he desired to keep his sons employed at home, he engaged in extensive farming operations, and also raised considerable stock. About 1858 he purchased another farm, consisting of 110 acres a little farther south in the same township, now owned by his son, John H., and upon this place passed his last years. During the latter part of his life he again invested in land, buying a forty-two acre lot in West Lampeter, adjoining his former purchase, now the property of his son Christian, and in addition to this a farm of eighty-two acres in Drumore township, which later came into the possession of his daughter Mary. Fifteen acres of valuable timber (chestnut) land, in Providence township, also belonged to him, all most desirable tracts, as John Kreider was too keen a business man to purchase any inferior land. His means were large and he was well known for his generosity and benevolence, as well as for his public spirit.

John Kreider married Anna Houser, daughter of Christian Houser, of Lampeter, where she was born about 1802. She lived a good and pious life, and she and her husband were devout members of the Reformed Mennonite Church. A family of five children were born to this union: Christian, a retired farmer of West Lampeter; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Jacob Landis, of East Lampeter; John H.; Isaac, a retired farmer, who died in Lancaster, Feb. 7, 1901; and Mary, who married Isaac Fritz, of Strasburg township.

JOHN H. KREIDER was born Nov. 21, 1834, and was reared on the farm, although when quite young he was employed in the fulling mill. His education was received in the public schools and when he reached his twenty-fourth year he began farming operations for himself, locating on the fine farm of 110 acres which he occupied up to the time of his death, which occurred April 15, 1901. At present all the surroundings denote thrift and prosperity, and demonstrate that Mr. Kreider was an excellent manager. Four and a half acres of fine chestnut timber land, in Providence township, also belonged to him. This estate is still in the possession of the family. Mr. Kreider amassed considerable property, owning, besides his farming and timber lands before mentioned, a tract of eight and one half acres at Paradise, which is occupied by his son, upon which are good buildings; he also owned the brick residence where his daughter lives.

To possess the confidence and esteem of those who have known one all his life must surely be gratifying, and that John H. Kreider possessed these is proved by the number of trusts that were placed in his hands, as he probably had more estates to settle and was called upon more often to act as guardian than any other man in the community. The religious connection of the family is with the Reformed Mennonite Church, in which Mr. Kreider was a worthy deacon for twenty-two years, and to which he was a generous and cheerful contributor for many years for benevolent and charitable enterprises.

John H. Kreider married, Nov. 11, 1858, Mary Ann Eshleman, a daughter of Jacob Eshleman, of Strasburg township, and two children were born to this union. Elam E. is a resident of Paradise township, where he is the milk deliverer to the American Caramel Factory, at Lancaster; he married Hettie Miller and has six children, Lillie, John, Miller, Ernie, Anna and Elam. Ada married Martin Bowman, and has one child, Muriel; Mr. Bowman is in the grocery business and resides at the corner of Ann and Green streets.

DANIEL STOKES, of Martic township, is one of the leading farmers of that section of the county. He was born Sept. 14, 1851, son of Jacob and Mary (Reinheart) Stokes, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county.

Grandfather John Stokes was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, for the British, being one of the Hessians who were sent by the English to fight against the colonies. He did not relish the business and upon the first opportunity deserted and threw in his lot with the patriot army, his descendants all having been among the most loyal and staunch supporters of the government of the United States.

Jacob Stokes, the father of Daniel, was twice married. To his marriage eleven children were born, six of whom grew to maturity, as follows: Barbara, Henry, Mary, Leah, Lizzie and Susan, the others dying young; six children were born to his second marriage, namely: Jacob, deceased; Ellen, the wife of Abe Corrigan; John, of Colerain township; Joseph, of Little Britain township; Ann, deceased; and Daniel, of this sketch.

On April 6, 1873, Daniel Stokes was united in marriage with Miss Anna Herman, born Feb. 3, 1853, daughter of Samuel and Susan (Lowrhees) Herman, of Lancaster. To this marriage a family of fifteen children was born, as follows: John, born Oct. 23, 1874, a farmer of Martic; Elenora, Oct. 15, 1875; Jacob, June 18, 1878, of Martic; Harry, April 25, 1877, died Nov. 3, 1879; Ida, June 20, 1879; Daniel, Aug. 12, 1883; Charles, May 28, 1881, deceased; Florence, Aug. 12, 1885; Barbara, Feb. 16, 1887; Willis, Dec. 14, 1888; Mary, Nov. 27, 1890; Minnie, July 14, 1892; Joseph, Nov. 10, 1893; Howard, July 1, 1896; and Walter, Nov. 5, 1897.

Mrs. Stokes was one of a large family of children, as follows: John; Herman, of Pequea township; Henry, a clergyman, in Ohio; Benjamin, of West Lampeter township; Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Miller, of Lancaster; Susan, wife of Martin Snyder of West Lampeter township; Mary, the wife of Jacob Stokes; Fannie, the wife of Jacob Hilderbrand, of West Lampeter township; Samuel M., of the same township; and Anna C., the wife of Daniel Stokes.

Mr. Stokes, like many another successful man, began life for himself with very few possessions. He has, however, accumulated an ample fortune and owns a fine farm in Martic township, comprising 150 acres of land, with excellent improvements. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and is regarded as one of the leading men of his township.

JOHN G. DETZ. For many years Mr. Detz has filled the responsible post of an engineer in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and he enjoys at the present time the unqualified esteem of his fellow townsmen of Columbia. He is of German descent, as may be inferred from his patronymic, and his paternal grandfather was John Detz, of Wurtemberg, a farmer who passed his days in the Fatherland.

The father of John G., who was also christened John, came to this country with two sisters, at the early age of sixteen years. He settled near Strasburg, and was by occupation a wheelwright. From there he moved to Columbia, in 1864. For three years he conducted a shop of his own, but subsequently worked at his trade as a journeyman until he reached his sixty-fifth year, when he gave up active toil. Four years later, in April, 1886, he entered into rest, leaving a beloved and revered memory. He was a devout and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, as was also his wife, Rachel E. Urban, whose birthplace was within the limits of Lancaster county. She was of the same age as her husband, and survived him for only six months.

The family of Urban deserves more than a mere passing mention. Its first representatives in Lancaster county, where they were among the early settlers, were three brothers; two of these remained there, while the other, who was of more adventurous instincts, sought a wider field in Philadelphia. There he became associated with the eccentric and philanthropic Stephen Girard. He was a man of quick, keen business perception, and this quality of mind recommended him to the merchant prince, who virtually started him in business. He left a large estate, which is still in litigation, and to which Mr. Detz believes that he is one of the lawful heirs. The parents of the elder Mrs. Detz were George A. Urban, a farmer of Conestoga township, and Elizabeth Rathfon.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. John Detz were as follows: Susan, now the wife of Christian Bowers, a wealthy, retired farmer of Kosciusko, Ind.; Caroline, who married Henry Gehr, a farmer of Creswell; Catherine, the widow of Aaron Gehr, whose home is in Millersville; Joseph, a passenger conductor in the employ of the Columbia & Reading Railroad Company; Mary, the widow of the late Adam Hersh, of Lancaster; Elizabeth, widow of J. E. Wolfskill, a railroad engineer; John G.; George, a merchant's clerk in Columbia; and Martha, who is unmarried and whose home is in Lancaster.

John G. Detz was born Sept. 10, 1854, in Safe Harbor, Lancaster county. His school days lasted until he was a well-grown youth of seventeen years. His first venture in the business world was as clerk in the grocery store of Frederick Bucher, where he was employed for eighteen months; for thirteen months following he was a clerk in the furnishing goods store of I. O. Bruner, and next he entered the employ of A. R. Hogentogler, with whom he remained for a year and a half. Having acquired some business experience during these periods, and being possessed of some little accumulated money, he resolved to embark in business for himself. He opened a grocery store, but it proved by no means successful; within a year $1400 had been sunk, and this venture ended his commercial career. His next move was to enter the employ of the railroad company, his first position being that of a fireman. Strange to say, in view of his previous experience, he found the task congenial. The dash, the excitement, the risk and the responsibility, one and all, struck a sympathetic cord in his nature. After four years and a half thus passed, he was made an engineer, and it goes without saying that to his new position he brought the same sound, common sense, absolute fidelity and unflinching courage which have marked his career through life. Through industry, integrity and good business judgment, he has acquired a modest competence. Keeping himself fully abreast with the times he can hold his own in any argument, while his kindness of heart and courtesy of manner have won and kept for him hosts of friends. A Republican in politics and a Presbyterian in religious faith, he is consistent alike in his profession and his practice. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen (of which he is past master), the K. of P., and is president of the Columbia branch of the B. of I. Building & Loan Association of New York.

His wife's maiden name was Ella A. Brown. He was married to her on May 6, 1875, at Elizabethtown, Lancaster county. Some mention of her father and her family may be found in succeeding paragraphs. The issue of the union has been six children: The eldest, Anna M., is a school teacher, unmarried, and living at home; the second daughter, Margaret E., also makes her home with her parents, as do the two boys, George B. and Louis M. John H. and Caroline, twins, died in infancy.

Mrs. Detz was born at Bainbridge, Nov. 6, 1855, the daughter of George W. and Annie (Shissler) Brown, both of whom were born in Lancaster county. Her father, whose seventy-fifth birthday was observed on May 25, 1900, makes his home with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. Detz. While venerable in years, he is vigorous in body and unclouded in mind. The following short sketch of his long and useful life will be found of interest.

George W. Brown is the son of William and Elizabeth (Weaver) Brown, and was born two miles from Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, on May 20, 1825. His grandfather came to America when his father was a boy of sixteen years, and for several years made his home in Dauphin county, which was the locality where he first settled. William, the father of George W. Brown, married Elizabeth Weaver, and was the father of six sons and three daughters. John W., the first born, is a retired merchant, living at Bainbridge. Margaret married John Singer, and is now deceased. Elizabeth, also deceased, was the widow of Frederick Smith, at one time sheriff of Lancaster county. Five others, William, Jacob, Polly, Henry and Adam, died single. William Brown passed away in 1845, aged fifty-four years; his wife had preceded him fourteen years (1831), in her forty-third year. Their original religious denominational connection was with the Lutherans, although later in life Mr. Brown adopted the faith of the Dunkards.

George W. Brown was married on New Year's day, 1854, at Bainbridge, to Mrs. Anna (Shissler) May. The issue of this union was two children: Ella A., Mrs. Detz; and Laura, who died in infancy. Mrs. Brown, as has been implied, had been previously married, her first husband having been Michael W. May, who was born in 1809, and died in 1851. She herself died Aug. 17, 1896, at the age of eighty-two. She was the daughter of John and Anna (Zook) Shissler, both of whom were respected residents of Lancaster county. By her first husband she was the mother of eight children: Frances E., the wife of John Filbert, of Philadelphia; Mary J., who married R. S. Ross, of Elizabethtown; Simon P. and John, deceased; Anna, the widow of William Wanbaugh, of Columbia; Maggie A., Mrs. T. J. Clepper, of Columbia; Louis, of Chicago, Ill.; and Ellie, who died young.

To return, however, to George W. Brown himself. His early life was spent upon a farm among strangers and his educational facilities were not of the best. Such as they were, however, he made the most of them. At the age of sixteen he learned the trade of a shoemaker, following it for fifteen years; during five or six years he filled the post of pedagogue in a country school. In early life no kind of labor was too hard or too exhaustive for him to undertake. He worked on the canal, and clerked in stores; in 1880 he was tendered the agency for a wholesale meat house in Harrisburg, and later he accepted another and more attractive proposition from the Knowles, Freman, Fisk Co., of Boston. Recently he has retired from active business, choosing to end his busy, useful life in the home of his daughter. He has reached on epoch where he may consider his life's work complete, and his eye looks back upon the past without regret, as in the clear prescience of vision granted to old age, he looks forward to the future without fear.

JOSEPH ZOOK, a retired farmer, whose home is in Intercourse, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in Leacock township, Aug. 20, 1823, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hostetter) Zook, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county. They were farming people, and he died in Paradise township, in 1863, at the age of seventy-nine years, the last twenty of which were spent in retirement from active labor. His wife died in 1876, at the age of eighty years. The ashes of both are resting in a private cemetery on the Weaver farm in Leacock township.

Jacob and Elizabeth Zook were the parents of the following family: Mary, deceased wife of Benjamin Bushong; Elias, who married a Miss Bushong, and is dead; Daniel, who married Mary Cowan, and is dead; Christian, deceased, who married Susan Lefever; Joseph; Leah and Elizabeth, who are both unmarried and live in East Lampeter township; John, who is retired, and has his home in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland Co., Pa.; Catherine, who is single, and has her home with her sisters.

The paternal grandfather of Joseph was Christian Zook, a resident of Lancaster county; his maternal grandparents, the Hostetters, were of Swiss extraction.

Joseph Zook was married in October, 1847, to Miss Frances Diffenbach, in Lancaster, Pa. To this union has come only one child, Amanda, who is the wife of J. K. Eaby, a prosperous merchant and postmaster at Intercourse, Pa.

Mrs. Frances (Diffenbach) Zook was born in West Lampeter township, May 7, 1811, and is a daughter of Henry and Mary (Bresler) Diffenbach, natives of Lancaster county, and all their lives farming people. He was born in East Lampeter township, where he lived retired for many years. They were married Sept. 3, 1805, and led long and useful lives. He died in 1857 at the age of seventy-nine, and she in 1872 at eighty-six. They were buried in the cemetery connected with the Longnecker Church, and were both members of the Mennonite Church. To them were born the following family: Elizabeth, late wife of Samuel Girvin; Mary, deceased wife of Christian Schultz; Henry, who was born Nov. 15, 1809, still living, and in good health; as is his wife, two years younger; Frances, who is the wife of Mr. Zook; John, who married Mary Landis, and has since died; Peter, deceased, who married Anna Witmer; Abraham, who was born March 22, 1817, was four times married, his first wife being Emma Esther, and his second, Lucy Stevens; Nancy, born in January, 1819, the wife of David Hyde, a veteran of the Civil war, who lives at Como, Ill.; Isaac, deceased, who married Martha Miller; Jacob, deceased, who married Martha Urban; Adam, who died young; Samuel, who died in infancy.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Zook was John Diffenbach, who married a Miss Buckwalter, both of Lancaster county, as were her mother's people, Peter and Elizabeth (Stoner) Bresler. Peter Bresler was a farmer and blacksmith, and was known as a man of much character and standing.

Joseph Zook remained with his parents until his marriage. For about a year he worked by the day, then rented a farm on which he remained fifteen years, in Leacock township. At the expiration of that period he bought a farm in Providence township, which was his home for five years, when he sold it and bought in East Lampeter township, where he remained until 1880. That year he moved to Intercourse, where he has since led a retired life.

In his politics he is staunch Republican, and is widely known throughout that section of Lancaster county as a man of sterling honesty, wide intelligence and genuine worth.

JOHN W. HICKEY, a representative citizen and prominent railroad conductor, residing in Columbia, Pa., was born on a farm in the southern part of Lancaster county, Sept. 4, 1862, a son of John and Elizabeth (Fitzsimmons) Hickey, also natives of that county.

The father followed farming in his early days but after his removal to Columbia in 1875 was employed as a lime burner. In 1890 he went to Philadelphia, where he lived retired until called to his final rest in January, 1896, at the age of seventy-two years. His wife is still living at the age of fifty-five years and continues to make her home in Philadelphia. Both held membership in the M. E. Church, and were highly respected by all who knew them. They were the parents of five children, namely: Thomas, deceased; Edward L., a railroad conductor of Columbia; John W.; Harriet H., deceased wife of Edward Smith; and Sarah A., who is the widow of Samuel Lochard and is now living with her mother in Philadelphia.

During his boyhood and youth John W. Hickey attended the local schools and engaged in farm work until 1878, when he went to Columbia and entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman, in which capacity he was employed for seven years. The following three years were spent as flagman, and since then he has held the position of conductor with the same road. He is progressive, public-spirited and enterprising, and is a staunch supporter of the Democratic party and its principles. Fraternally, he is connected with the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Pennsylvania Relief Association.

On Sept. 3, 1884, in Columbia, Mr. Hickey married Miss Elizabeth S. Dimeler, who was born near Elizabethtown, Lancaster county. Her parents, Jeremiah and Catherine (Sharer) Dimeler, were also natives of that county, and there the mother, a consistent member of the Mennonite Church, died in 1870, at the age of twenty-eight years. Their children were: Amos, a resident of Middletown, Pa.; Susan, wife of George Dwyer, of Marietta, Pa.; Elizabeth S., now Mrs. Hickey; William, a fireman in a town in Maryland; and Mary, deceased. The father of this family is a stone mason by trade and is now a resident of Rockville, Pa. He is sixty-five years of age. His parents were Sullivan and Susan Dimeler, who died in Lancaster county; Mrs. Hickey's maternal grandparents were John and Susan Sharer. The grandfather is still living in Elizabethtown, Pa., at the age of seventy-six years, and is a farmer by occupation.

ANDREW GARBER, a retired agriculturist, resides on the old homestead in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pa., where he was born Sept. 1, 1834, a son of Jonas and Catherine (Garber) Garber, the latter of whom died on the present homestead in 1849, at the age of forty-two years, and the former on an adjoining farm in 1888, when he had reached the good old age of eighty-seven. They were members of the United Brethren Church and parents of four children, viz.: Reuben, who died when sixty-five years old; Anna, who was married to John Stehman, owner of a farm adjoining the Garber homestead, and was called away when sixty-six years old; Andrew; and William, who died young.

The paternal grandparents of Andrew Garber were Andrew and Mary Garber, farming people, and they died on Andrew Garber's present farm; the maternal grandparents, William and Anna Gamber, of Lancaster township, were also farming people, although William was a miller in his younger days.

Andrew Garber continued actively at his vocation of farming until 1882, when he withdrew from labor and turned over the charge of his 200 acre farm to his son. Mr. Garber has lost a considerable amount by going security for his friends, but is yet quite well to do. In politics he is a Republican.

On Nov. 21, 1855, Andrew Garber married Susan M. Greider and there have been born to this union three children, viz.: Jonas B., a veterinary surgeon in Hopkinsville, Ky.; Christian G., a farmer in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county; and Harry G., a farmer in Lancaster township.

Susan M. (Greider) Garber was born in West

Hempfield township, Sept. 18, 1836, a daughter of Christian and Susan (Miller) Greider, of West Hempfield township, where her father died on his farm in 1889, when ninety-one years old, and the mother, June 21, 1861, when fifty-eight years old. They were members of the Mennonite Church, and their remains were interred in Landisville. To the marriage of Christian and Susan (Miller) Greider were born the following named children: Rev. John, who was a Mennonite minister at Osborn, Ohio, but is now deceased; Christian and Benjamin, deceased; Elizabeth, who was married to Daniel Mellinger and died in Virginia; Mary and Mattie both died young; Jacob, a farmer in West Hempfield township; Susan M., Mrs. Garber; Anna, widow of Henry Breneman, of West Hempfield township; Mary, of Mt. Joy, who was first married to Clint Rohrer and next to John S. Nisley; Barbara, wife of Jacob McCallister, a farmer of Lancaster county; and Amos, who is cultivating the old homestead in West Hempfield township. The paternal grandfather of Susan M. Garber was John Greider, a farmer of this county. Her grandfather on her mother's side, Benjamin Miller, married a Miss Kaufman.

SAMUEL GLASS, a venerable and much respected citizen of Bart, Lancaster county, was born in Providence township, of this county, March 19, 1835, and is a son of James and Margaret (Wisner) Glass, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county.

James Glass was a son of Robert Glass, who was born in Ireland, and who came to this country so early that he was able to bear arms for the colonies in the Revolutionary war. He also served in the war of 1812. He settled in Providence township, where his only son, James, was born and reared.

James Glass married and carried on farming in Providence until his death in 1859, at the comparatively early age of forty-five. He was a member of the M. E. Church and an active christian worker. In politics he was a Whig. His widow remained on the old home until her death in 1878, at an advanced age. They were the parents of five children. (1) Mary, born in 1832, married Christian Newswinger, and both are dead. They left four daughters: Elizabeth, the wife of Theodore Cumer, a professor in one of the county high schools, where she is also teaching; Fannie, who married George Brown, of Steelville; Susan, a teacher in the public schools; Maggie, a young woman living in Colerain township. (2) Samuel Glass. (3) John Glass, born in 1837, was a soldier during the Civil war, where he served as a member of Capt. Evans' battery of artillery. He is unmarried and has his home in Strasburg township. (4) Eliza Glass, born in 1840, is the widow of Lewis Wagoner, of Strasburg township. She has one son, Amos, who is living with her. (5) Susan Glass, born in 1842, is the wife of Isaac Miller, and lives in Providence township, where they have three children, Fannie, Lizzie and Naomi.

Samuel Glass was reared to manhood on his father's farm, and was educated in the home schools. When a young man he learned the mason's trade with his brother-in-law, William Crosner, who lived at that time in Lampeter township. Mr. Glass has worked at his trade over forty years. In 1858 he was married to Miss Susan Crosner, a daughter of John and Anna (White) Crosner. Her parents were both natives of Lancaster county, but lived in and died in Colerain township. Mrs. Glass was born in that township in 1839, and is one of a family of seven children born to her parents; five of whom are now living: Lizzie, a maiden lady of Strasburg; William, a resident of East Lampeter township; Susan, Mrs. Glass; Barbara, who married John Ryan, and lives in Strasburg; Joseph, deceased, who served during the Civil war in the 122d Regiment, a command largely recruited from Lancaster county, and whose record was that of a faithful, loyal and gallant soldier; Sarah, who married Jonas Long and has her home in Lancaster; John, unmarried and living in Strasburg township.

Mr. and Mrs. Glass lived in Lampeter township, where he worked as a mason until he enlisted in 1862 as a member of Co. B, 122d P. V. I., his company commander being Capt. Samuel Row, of Lancaster. The regiment joined the Army of the Potomac, and served under Gen. McClellan, coming at once into active service, and participating in a number of severe skirmishes. At Chancellorsville many members of Company B were killed or wounded. Mr. Glass survived, and on the discharge of the regiment at Harrisburg on account of the completion of its term of enlistment, he returned to his wife and family in Providence township, where he has spent the greater part of his life. In 1893 he moved to his present home in Bart township, where he has since resided. To him and his good wife were born four sons and six daughters.

(1) William Glass, born in 1860, married Edith Rineer, a daughter of Aaron Rineer, of Strasburg township. There they live on his farm, and have one son, Willis. (2) Frank Glass, born in 1862, in Pequea township, married Miss Alice Groff, of Bart township. He is a stone mason, and the father of five children: John, Myrtle, Elsie, Cora and Susan. (3) John Glass, born in 1864, is unmarried, and lives at home with his parents. (4) Samuel Glass, born in 1866, is a mason by trade and has never married. (5) Naomi Glass, born in 1868, married Rarie Rineer, of Quarryville, and has her home in Strasburg township, where her husband is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad. They have three children, Willis, Winston and Walter. (6) Anna Glass, born in 1870, married Elmer Bleacher, of Lancaster county, and has two sons, Frank and Samuel. (7) Lizzie Glass, born in 1872, married John Weaver, of Bart township, where they now reside. They have two children, Willis and Lizzie. (8) Bertha, born in 1883, lives unmarried at home. (9) Amanda married William Friend, of Lancaster, and is the mother of one daughter, Effie. (10) Susan Glass is the wife of William Oatman, of Bart township, where they reside near Groff's Mill, at Georgetown. They have one son, Willis.

Samuel Glass has always been a Republican, and belongs to Bireley Post, No. 511, G. A. R., at Quarryville. He and his wife are members of the United Presbyterian Church. Mr. Glass is counted among the best citizens of the county, and his manly and heroic qualities have won him a host of friends. As a soldier he was loyal and gallant, and as a friend tender and true. As a citizen of the community he is linked with every forward movement, and lives a thoroughly upright and honorable life.

J. JOSEPH BLACK, of Columbia, the popular conductor of a passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, is a native of Columbia borough, was born Nov. 15, 1854, and is a son of Joseph H. and Elizabeth W. (Lockard) Black, of whom full mention will be made further on.

At the age of sixteen years, Mr. Black began working for the railroad company in the civil engineer corps, and assisted in building the old Columbia bridge, round house, etc., having risen from the position of water boy. At the age of nineteen, he began flagging and braking, and four years later was promoted to be a passenger conductor. In 1879 he was transferred to Philadelphia, from which city he ran a train six months; then one from Westchester for three months, and from Downingtown nine years, when he was returned to Columbia in 1889, and there he has since remained.

On Nov. 18, 1885, Mr. Black married in Philadelphia Miss Florence R. Myers, who has borne her husband three children, Joseph S., Helen and Marshall. Mrs. Florence R. Black was born in Philadelphia, Dec. 10, 1859, and is a daughter of John W. and Sarah T. (Robinson) Myers, of Chester county. John W. Myers was born in June, 1826; was formerly a railroad clerk, and is living in retirement in Philadelphia, totally blind. Mrs. Sarah T. Myers died in Philadelphia in February, 1878, aged forty-eight years. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Myers were born six children, viz: Martha J., wife of Steers T. Foster, a yardmaster at Morrisville, N. J.; Thomas J., a railroad engineer in Philadelphia; Zilla A., married to William Shuman, a civil engineer in Philadelphia; Mary E., wife of John P. Robins, a railroad engineer in the same city; Florence R., now Mrs. Black; and Daniel J., a railroad engineer, also in the Quaker City. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Black were Rev. Daniel J. and Sarah Myers, the former a Methodist minister, and her maternal grandparents were Rev. John and Zilla Robinson, the Rev. John being a local Methodist Episcopal preacher, and all residing in Chester, Pennsylvania.

Joseph H. Black, the father of J. Joseph Black, was born in the borough of Chester, Pa., June 26, 1824, and is a son of Joseph and Hannah P. (Moore) Black, of Delaware county, Pa. Joseph Black was born April 12, 1793, came to Columbia, April 1, 1835, and conducted "Black's Hotel" from 1839 until 1852, in which latter year he died, Feb. 10; his wife was born Jan. 4, 1798, died April 28, 1869, and the mortal remains of both now rest side by side in Mount Bethel cemetery. The children born to Joseph and Hannah P. Black were six in number, viz: Samuel A., who died in Bryn Mawr, Montgomery Co., Pa.; John, who died young; Joseph H.; Col. Henry M., a graduate of West Point, six feet, four inches in height, who with Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, was considered to be the finest appearing man in the war of the Rebellion; Vernard L., a butcher of Houtzdale, Pa.; and Edward R., who has been an engineer for a railroad company in Philadelphia since 1858.

The paternal grandparents of Joseph H. Black were Samuel and Catherine Black, the former of whom was born November 11, 1762, and was a farmer, of German extraction; to this couple were born seven children. The maternal grandparents were John and Sarah Moore. John Moore was born July 3, 1773, and by calling was also a farmer.

Joseph H. Black, now the owner of a zinc mine four miles from Lancaster city and an iron ore bank in Chester county, left his home at the age of fourteen years and for one year clerked in a store in Columbia. He then returned to his father's hotel and kept bar for a year; the next year he passed in Haverstraw, N. Y., as a clerk, and then for eighteen months again kept bar for his father. In 1852, in compliance with his father's last request, Joseph H. took possession of the bar and conducted it until 1880, when he sold out and began contracting; as his first work he laid a mile of track for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

In 1881 Mr. Black contracted to build two bridges and lay one mile of track for the same company, and at the same time held a contract for doing the foundation work for the Philadelphia elevated road between the Schuylkill river and Broadway station. In partnership with his brother, Samuel A. Black, and W. W. Upp, he continued in a general contracting business until 1887, when he began dealing in real estate, which is still his occupation. In 1897 he purchased his fifty-two acres of iron ore land in Chester county, and in 1898 leased the zinc mine in East Hempfield township, in which he has a partner, D. R. Saylor.

On Aug. 23, 1849, Mr. Black married in Columbia Miss Elizabeth Lockard, and to this marriage were born six children, as follows: Hannah E., who died in infancy; Caroline, wife of Charles A. Jeffers, a railroad engineer at Columbia; John Joseph; Edward J., who died when four years old; Charles F., a locomotive engineer at Columbia; and Anna M., the wife of Alfred I. Crosby, a brakeman in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Lockard) Black was born in Columbia in 1826, and died there Oct. 16, 1890. She was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hinkle) Lockard, farming people, who were the parents of six children, viz: John, deceased; William; Margaret A., widow of William Dickey, and a resident of Clearfield county; Samuel, deceased; Elizabeth; and Mary, wife of J. J. McMahon.

Joseph H. Black is in politics a Republican, and has served as councilman several terms, although office holding is obnoxious to him; he was also triennial assessor of Columbia borough and a director in the Columbia National Bank, but resigned such offices as he has held. For ten years he was in the transportation business in Columbia, but now makes his home with his children, part of the time in Columbia and part in Philadelphia. He is remarkably active for his age, reads without spectacles, is five feet, eleven and one-quarter inches in height, weighs 160 pounds, and appears to be as young as he did sixty years ago.

EDWARD H. STAMAN, the well known dairyman and farmer and proprietor of the Shawnee Farm in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born near Marietta, in East Hempfield township, Dec. 14, 1849, and is a son of John P. and Mary E. (House) Staman, of Manor township.

John P. Staman, who has been twice married, was born in October, 1821, and now resides in Columbia, Pa., having removed from the old homestead to that city in 1891, in order to live retired from the cares and duties of active life. To his marriage with Mary E. House there were born four children, viz: Anna E., wife of Dr. S. A. Bockius, of Columbia; Edward H.; Hester, wife of Marion Zook, of Lancaster; and John, also of Lancaster. Mrs. Mary E. (Zook) Staman was a daughter of Abraham Zook, of Lancaster county, and died in 1888, at the age of sixty-four years.

Edward H. Staman was transferred when an infant from one estate to another, or from one farm to another, and in childhood it was much the same with him. At the age of two years he was taken from the homestead to the J. M. Strickler farm, thence to the J. L. Wright farm, and thence to the J. H. Mifflin estate, all in West Hempfield township, and from the latter in 1868, he came to his present farm, then the property of his father, and there remained until shortly after his marriage, when he went to Columbia and engaged in mercantile business, continued there until 1891, and then bought his present farm from his father. He belongs to the Masonic order, and in his politics is a Republican. The family is connected with the Presbyterian Church.

January 28, 1875, in Philadelphia, Edward H. Staman married Anna E. Wright, and this union has been blessed with seven children, viz: Emily E., Bessie C., Nellië, John P. Smith, of the same city; and Emily G., of Lansdown, Pennsylvania.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Anna E. (Wright) Staman were Thomas J. and Nancy (Sinserrick) Wright, of Columbia and Lancaster, respectively; and the maternal grandparents were Martin and Elizabeth (Woodbridge) Curry, respectively of Philadelphia, Pa., and Bangor, Me., but who were married in Philadelphia and shortly afterward located in Columbia, where Mr. Curry was a tobacconist and passed the remainder of his days, and where Mrs. Curry later married a Mr. Evans.

GEORGE H. MILLER, a retired hotel man and a former merchant in Leacock township, was born Dec. 25, 1840, in Earl township, Lancaster county, and is a son of Abner and Maria (Seldomridge) Miller, of Earl and Leacock townships, respectively.

Abner Miller was a farmer and died on the farm where his son now lives, May 21, 1884. He was born Sept. 18, 1808. His wife, who was born March 6, 1808, died July 25, 1853. They were members of the Reformed Lutheran Church. Born to them were: Adam, born June 15, 1833, who married a Miss O'Dair and is now deceased; John S., born Feb. 23, 1836, died March 10, 1865; Christian, who is single, lives on the home place; George H.; Miss Elizabeth C., born in 1843, died Oct. 31, 1862. The paternal grandparents of George H. Miller were Dr. Adam and Elizabeth (Sheaffer) Miller, the former a noted physician of Leacock township, where he reared to maturity a family of twelve children. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Miller were John and Christiann Seldomridge.

George H. Miller and Anna Louise Rote were married in Lancaster, April 19, 1864. To them was born one son, George Albert, who died July 21, 1868. Mrs. Anna L. Miller was born in Lancaster, May 15, 1844, a daughter of George F. and Anna (Finkabine) Rote, of Lancaster and Chester counties, respectively. Mr. Rote was one of the oldest undertakers in Lancaster, held the office of school director. and was a city councilman for many years. In religion both himself and his wife belonged to the Moravian Church. In his political associations he was a Democrat. He died in 1876, at the age of sixty-five years, and his widow in 1884; both were buried in the Woodward Hill cemetery. They were the parents of the following family: William and George, both deceased; Anna L.; Amos, an undertaker in Lancaster, now deceased; Joseph, a house decorator in Cleveland, Ohio; Lovine, an undertaker in Lancaster, now deceased; Jacob, a photographer of Lancaster; James A., a house decorator in California. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Miller was William Rote, of Lancaster county; her maternal grandparents were Jacob and Rebecca Finkabine, of Chester county, where they lived on a farm.

Mr. Miller was reared on a farm until he reached the age of twelve years, when he became a clerk in the store of B. F. Hull, at Intercourse; after a year he was sent to Mechanicsburg, where he was employed in the store of the father of Mr. Hull for some eighteen months. For a year and a half he was a clerk in Paradise; at Brownstown he was employed a year and a half.

Mr. Miller enlisted April 16, 1861, in Co. C, 10th P. V. I., under Capt. D. W. Patterson. He was in the army three months, and on his return home re-enlisted in Co. A, 79th P. V. I., under Capt. Kendig. In 1864 he re-enlisted as a veteran in the same company under Capt. Benson. He served until the close of the war, receiving his most severe injury at Chickamauga, where he was shot through the right leg. Taken into the hospital at Jeffersonville, he would not remain until he was pronounced cured, but ran away, to re-enlist in Philadelphia. He was discharged in July, 1865, with a creditable record as a gallant and loyal soldier.

At Lancaster he returned to civil life, and buying the Union League building, conducted it as a hotel for a year and a half. For some years he was employed in farming in Leacock township, when he returned to Lancaster and conducted the "Court Avenue Hotel" for seven years. For a few years he resumed farming; and after that ran a restaurant in Lancaster for a year and a half. At the end of that time he had a hotel and restaurant business on the site of the Woolworth building, which he conducted for about seven years, when he removed to engage in the same line at Baltimore. He had not been there many months when his business was completely wrecked by a very severe storm. For a short time he spent his energies at home, and then took charge of the "Sprecker House" at Lancaster. He held this property for two years, and then selling it, was soon established at Intercourse, Pa., where he was landlord for some two years. At Dado he was engaged in a mercantile business for a year. He was manager of the "County House" for about a year, and was landlord at Gordonville, also for the same time, in "Kinzer's Hotel." In June, 1901, he returned to his farm, where he proposes to spend the balance of his days.

Mr. Miller is an honored member of the G. A. R., and belongs to the German Reformed Church. In his politics he is a Republican, and is pronounced one of the leading men of the community. Of late he has suffered from poor health, having experienced a severe paralytic stroke.

JOHN H. KLINE, president of the Columbia school board, and a popular young conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Feb. 25, 1860, a son of David H. and Margaret (Isenburger) Kline, also natives of West Hempfield township, where the mother died in 1897, at the age of fifty-seven years, a member of the Reformed Church; and where the father, who was born in 1839, still resides, a Mennonite in his faith.

David H. Kline was reared on a farm, but in young manhood was employed in an iron furnace and later by an oil company. He then returned to his farm and resumed agricultural pursuits, attained considerable local influence, and served for five consecutive years as township supervisor. To his marriage with Margaret Isenburger were born the following children: John H.; Anna, wife of J. H. Hartman, a brakeman at Columbia; Mamie; Ella, widow of Michael Kern; Kate; Carrie, wife of John Hable, electrician—all of Columbia; Maggie, wife of George Marley, car inspector at Lancaster; and Cora, wife of William Harris, car inspector in Philadelphia.

The paternal grandparents of John H. Kline were John H. and Anna (Hogentogler) Kline, farming people of Lancaster county, and the maternal grandparents were Samuel and Peggie Isenburger, also of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a quarryman.

John H. Kline, whose name opens this article, was reared by his paternal grandparents on their farm from the age of two until ten years, and then came to Columbia, where he attended school until fifteen. He was then employed in a flouring-mill four years, and later by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company one year as inspector of the cementing of the Columbia bridge; he then worked for the company as brakeman three years; next as flagman four years; and was then promoted to be extra conductor, which position he has filled in a most satisfactory manner up to the present time.

Mr. Kline was joined in marriage at Columbia, Aug. 4, 1878, with Anna Foreman, who was born in Huntingdon county, Pa., in 1858, and is a daughter of David Foreman. To John H. and Anna Kline has been born one daughter, Bessie L., who taught school three years and is now the wife of William H. Yohe, a heater in an iron mill.

Mrs. Anna Kline was born in Mifflin, Juniata Co., Pa., Oct. 15, 1858, daughter of David and Rebecca (Bell) Foreman, of the same borough. In 1864 the family removed to Altoona, Blair county, thence to Mill Creek, Huntingdon county, and then, in 1867, went to Columbia, and there lived until 1879, when they went to Harrisburg, where they still reside, the father being a brakeman. To David and Rebecca Foreman, who were both born in 1839, have been born three children, viz: Anna; Elmer, a railroad conductor, of Harrisburg; and a child who died in infancy.

John H. Kline is a Republican in politics, has been a member of the Columbia school board for the past several years, and in June, 1899, was elected its president. He is also a member of the Columbia fire department, and is in general a useful citizen. As a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, he has been financial secretary of his Tribe five years. He is likewise a member of the B. of R. T., and in religion leans toward the Mennonite faith. Socially his standing is with the best families of Columbia.

ADAM T. HERMAN, one of the well-known farmer citizens of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, whose fine farm is located but two and one-half miles from the city of Lancaster, was born in Pequea township, this county, March 10, 1858, a son of John M. and Elizabeth (Thomas) Herman, who still reside in the same township.

Adam T. Herman was reared on the farm under his father's excellent instruction, completed the common school course and remained under the paternal roof until 1884, operating his father's farm. At that time he began the improving of the sixty-acre farm where he now resides and carries on general farming; he supplies also considerable stone used for roads in the district and does much teaming to Lancaster City and to the outlying districts.

In 1880 Adam T. Herman was united in marriage with Susan Kendig, the estimable daughter of Christian Kendig, of Manor township, who was born there in 1863; to them have been born thirteen children: Mary, who married Clarence King, of Pequea township; Lettie; Mello; Lizzie; John; Adam; Christie, deceased; Harry; Charles; Samuel; Katie; Francis; and Alice.

Mr. Herman is a progressive farmer and public-spirited man, who has devoted his life to the interests of his family and section, and he possesses the respect and esteem of the whole community.

DAVID H. HUBER. The farms of West Lampeter township are among the best in Lancaster county, and one of these is the property of David H. Huber, who comes of an old and honored agricultural family which has been established in this part of the Keystone State for generations. David H. Huber, one of its worthy representatives, was born June 6, 1860, and is the son of David and Maria Huber, his birth occurring on the old homestead located near Willowstreet, where he was reared. His education was secured in the common schools, after which he became occupied in the home farming operations.

In 1890, he located on the fine farm he now occupies, which is situated one-half mile south of Big Springs, and consists of fifty-three acres, a part of the large estate once owned by his ancestor, Hans Herr. The old sandstone house, erected there prior to 1719, is still standing a relic of long ago and an object of interest to all. The various excellent improvements on the farm were placed there by his father, David Huber. Mr. Huber carries on general farming and is considered one of the solid and substantial men of the community, successful in whatever he undertakes.

As a stockholder in the Lancaster County Bank and in the Southern Market House, he is recognized as a man of commercial integrity, and has been of great service in educational matters in the township, now serving his fourth term as a member of the school board. A Republican in politics, he votes with his party but never seeks or consents to hold political office.

David H. Huber was married Nov. 25, 1889, to Anna Mowrer, a daughter of Amos S. and Anna Mowrer, of West Lampeter township, and to this union three interesting children have been born, Myrtle M., Mary and D. Mark. This is one of the representative families of West Lampeter, and they enjoy the esteem of the whole community.

SAMUEL H. BOYD, a valued employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, whose home is in Columbia, Pa., was born in that city, May 10, 1862, and is a son of Samuel A. and Kate (Pierce) Boyd, also natives of Columbia.

Samuel A. Boyd, the father, was an expressman and did hauling. He died in Columbia, Sept. 25, 1862, at the early age of thirty-four years, and there his remains were interred. His wife, who was born in 1830, died in Port Deposit, Md., in 1869, and was buried in that city. Both were active members of the M. E. Church, and were highly respected by all who knew them. Their children were: Mary A., wife of William A. Wolf, of Harrisburg, Pa.; John A., a resident of Columbia; Jane H., wife of Robert Clay, of Harrisburg; Kate A., who died in childhood; and Samuel H. The maternal grandparents were John and Catherine Pierce, lifelong residents of Columbia.

As he lost his father during his infancy, Samuel H. Boyd was reared by a great-aunt, Miss Catherine Hougendoubler, and remained with her until his marriage. On June 18, 1883, in Columbia, he wedded Anna M. Smith, by whom he has had five children, namely: Katherine, who died in infancy; Frederick J., Greta M. and Irene B., all at home; and Mary E., who died in 1899. Mrs. Boyd was born in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, April 4, 1865, a daughter of Leonard and Margaret (Phath) Smith, who though born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, were married in Lancaster county, Pa. The father had come to America at the age of fifteen years with his parents, Samuel Smith and his wife, also natives of Germany, who spent the remainder of their lives in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county. Mrs. Boyd's maternal grandparents never left Germany. Her father, Leonard Smith, followed the blacksmith's trade throughout life and died in 1887, at the age of fifty-two years. The mother is still living at the age of sixty-five years and continues to make her home in Columbia. In religious belief both were Catholics. Their children were: Catherine and John, both deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Frank C. Shillow, a butcher of Columbia; Leonard, a blacksmith of that place; Anna M., now Mrs. Boyd; Catherine and Henry, both deceased; Mary, wife of William Horner, a railroad brakeman of Columbia; Samuel, a machinist of the same place; William, deceased; Frank, a resident of Columbia; and Edward and Charles, both deceased.

At the age of fifteen years Mr. Boyd began his business career as a boiler maker and worked at that trade for seven years. In 1882 he commenced braking on the Pennsylvania Railroad, but in 1885 decided to become an engineer and devoted the following seven years to firing. In 1892 he was promoted to engineer and is now serving the company in that capacity. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and the Pennsylvania Relief Association, and affiliates with the Democratic party.

CLAYTON K. STAUFFER. Among the prominent young business men of Rowena, East Donegal township, one who has, by his energy and close attention to business, become the owner of property and holds an excellent position with the great Pennsylvania Railroad Company, is Clayton K. Stauffer, the telegraph operator in charge at Shock's Mill.

Mr. Stauffer was born in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, March 9, 1868, a son of Abraham H. and Elizabeth (Kreider) Stauffer, both members of old and prominent families of this State.

Abraham H. Stauffer, now living retired, was born Feb. 4, 1845, on the farm in West Donegal township where he yet resides and on which his father, Jacob Stauffer, settled in 1820. His grandparents, Jacob Stauffer and his wife, a Miss Nissley, were born in Penn township, this county, and he was a farmer and miller by occupation. Jacob Stauffer was also a native of Lancaster county, and one of the successful self-made farmer citizens of West Donegal township, where he made his permanent home. As such he was at various times requested to hold office but invariably declined. He was a Republican in political sentiment. Mr. Stauffer married Catherine Hershey, also a native of Lancaster county, and a daughter of Benjamin Hershey, of this county, who married a Miss Snyder. To this union came children as follows: Benjamin, who married and is deceased; Miss Anna, who died in 1888; Peter, a miller of Rapho township; Fanny, deceased wife of Christ Snyder, of East Donegal; Joseph, who died in Illinois; Miss Mary, deceased; Christian, deceased; Jacob, a retired farmer of Mt. Joy; Barbara, deceased in infancy; John, deceased; Henry, a farmer of Lititz; Abraham H.; and Samuel, a farmer and tobacco merchant of Dayton, Ohio. The parents were members of the Old Mennonite Church, and were known as good Christian people. The father passed away Jan. 29, 1861, aged fifty-nine years, three months; the mother died in December, 1875, aged seventy-three. Their remains rest in a cemetery on the farm.

Abraham H. Stauffer has passed all his life on the farm in West Donegal where he was born, with the exception of a brief residence in 1867-68 in Mt. Joy township. The place comprises eighty-two acres of valuable land, and he has engaged successfully in agricultural pursuits, winning a substantial income from the cultivation of the soil. On Nov. 8, 1866, in Lancaster, Pa., Mr. Stauffer married Elizabeth Kreider, who was born May 12, 1846, in Rapho township, daughter of Daniel and Anna (Bossler) Kreider, natives of East Lampeter and East Hempfield townships, respectively. He was a successful and prominent farmer. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kreider died in East Lampeter township, he in 1861, at the age of sixty, she in 1859, at the age of forty-eight, and their remains rest in East Petersburg. They were members of the Mennonite Church. Children as follows were born to them: Jacob and John, who died young; Anna, deceased wife of Benjamin Kauffman; Maria, deceased wife of Isaac Kauffman; Daniel, a retired farmer of Petersburg, Pa.; Abraham, a farmer and cigar manufacturer of Salunga, this county; Elizabeth, the wife of Abraham H. Stauffer.

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham H. Stauffer are the parents of children as follows: Clayton K., whose name introduces this article; Daniel K., deceased; Catherine K., wife of Levi Eby, of Rapho township; Jacob K., unmarried, who lives at home; Maria K., wife of Christ Newcomer, of Rapho township; and Reuben K., living at home. The parents are faithful members of the Mennonite Church. Mr. Stauffer gives his political support to the Republican party.

Clayton K. Stauffer was reared on a farm, remaining at home until twenty years old, when he began the study of telegraphy, soon showing evidence of natural ability in that line. He received his first instruction in a little back office near Rheems Station, where he assiduously applied himself for a period of six months, and in the next few years was transferred to various stations where a quick and capable operator was wanted. In March, 1895, he was located at his present place, and has remained there doing most excellent work, ever since.

The marriage of Mr. Stauffer took place in February, 1891, Miss Anna Ebersole, a member of one of the oldest families of the county, becoming his wife. To this union have been born two children, Edna P. and Mary, the latter dying in infancy. Mrs. Stauffer is a daughter of John L. and Amanda (Epler) Ebersole, of East Donegal township. Mr. Stauffer stands well in the community, owning his own comfortable home, and drawing a liberal salary, and is one of the much respected and highly valued employees of the great company he has faithfully served.

J. MILTON HERSHEY, the proprietor of the "Cross Keys Hotel" at Intercourse, Pa., was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, June 26, 1860, a son of John B. and Mary (Warner) Hershey, of Upper Leacock and Salisbury townships, respectively. The father, who was born in 1837, is now a retired farmer of Salisbury township; his wife was born in 1833. They were both members of the Presbyterian Church, and were prominent people in the community where their active years have passed. Born to them were Amanda, who married John Reasser, a farmer of Salisbury township; and J. Milton, whose name introduces this article.

The paternal grandparents of J. M. Hershey were Jacob F. and Christina (Bare) Hershey, both natives of Lancaster county; his maternal grandfather was Jacob Warner, who married a Miss Pratt.

Mrs. Hershey was reared on the farm, and remained at home with his parents until his marriage, when he settled on a farm in Salisbury township. In 1887 he removed to the city of Lancaster, and for three years was assistant turnkey. At the end of that period he became a hotel man in Lancaster, and was landlord for twenty-nine months. For three years he kept a hotel in Spring Garden, and in 1897 he came to his present locality. For two terms he has been a member of the Republican Committee, and is one of the leading men of the county.

ADAM J. REISINGER, a very efficient and popular engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a resident of Columbia, was born on a farm in York county, Pa., Aug. 7, 1849, and is a son of Adam and Catherine (Eckert) Reisinger, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1848.

The parents settled in York county, where Adam followed his vocation of farmer until his death, April 1, 1896, at the age of seventy-seven years, while his widow at the age of seventy-four is still residing on the old homestead, a member, as was her husband, of the Reformed Church. To the marriage of these venerable parents were born the following children: Mary, who was married to George Oldwilder and died in 1887; Adam J.; Joseph, a carpenter of York county; George, Henry, Peter, all farmers in the same county; Emma, who is married to William Wallace, a school-teacher, also residing in York county; Kate, the wife of Charles Fitzking, a cigar manufacturer in New York City; and Francis, a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and residing in Columbia.

Adam J. Reisinger lived on the home farm until thirteen years old, when he began driving horses attached to canal-boats, from which humble position he rose to be a captain and acted in that capacity for four years. He then found employment as a brakeman on the railroad on which he is still working and four months later was made a fireman; at that he served seven years, and was then promoted to his present position of engineer, a position he has filled now for seventeen years.

In April, 1873, in Columbia, Mr. Reisinger married Miss Cecelia Reisinger, who, although of the same surname, is of no consanguinity. To this union were born two children, Ella and Charles, who both died in infancy. Mrs. Cecelia Reisinger is a native of Columbia; her parents, Peter and Leah (Reichard) Reisinger, came from York county, and after settling in Columbia, conducted a hotel.

Mr. Reisinger is in politics a Democrat, but has never been an office-seeker. He is held in high esteem by his fellow railroad men and is the more closely allied to them by being a member of B. O. L. E., division No. 104, and the F. B., No. 552; he is also a member of the Heptasophs and the Columbia Fire Company, in which, when at home, he is always prompt in responding to a fire alarm.

JOHN BEAMESDERFER, a general farmer and stock dealer of Rapho township, was born on the farm he now lives on, Sept. 1, 1868. He is the son of Henry and Anna (Balmer) Beamesderfer of Petersburg, but now residing in Manheim township, having retired in 1901 to make Manheim their home.

Henry Beamesderfer, the father, was born in 1840 and his wife was also born in the same year. They are members of the New Mennonite Church. He is a director of the Keystone National Bank of Manheim, a director of the Sporting Hill and Manheim Turnpike Company, and for some time was a school director of his district. There were born to him and his wife the following children: Anna, wife of H. Y. Brandt, a farmer of Rapho township; John; Jonas, a tinsmith of Norfolk, Va.; Amos, in the livery and bicycle business at Lebanon, Pa.; Harry, deceased at twenty-three years of age; and Anna, deceased at the age of twenty-one years. Mr. Beamesderfer's grandfather was George Beamesderfer, of Lancaster, Pa., and on his mother's side his grandparents were John and Anna (Frick) Balmer, of Lancaster county.

On Jan. 5, 1896, Mr. John Beamesderfer married Miss Anna May Rheam, of Elizabethtown, Pa. They have had no children. Mrs. Rheam was born in West Donegal township, April 24, 1876, and is the daughter of Jacob B. and Susan (Wisler) Rheam, of West Donegal township. He was born in December, 1832, and Mrs. Rheam was born Oct. 20, 1842. Mrs. Rheam is a member of the United Brethren Church. There were born to this couple the following children: Frank, a tinsmith, of Manheim, Pa.; Samuel and Jacob, who both died in youth; Edward, a horsedealer of Mt. Joy; Norman, a railroad man, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Anna May, wife of our subject; Blanche, wife of Jacob Shaffer, a hotel man of Eton, Pennsylvania.

Mr. John Beamesderfer lived with his parents until the age of twenty-eight years when he left home for Harrisburg, Pa., where he entered the bicycle business, which he continued for some time. He then went into the electrical business and fitted up the Capitol building in Harrisburg with electrical appliances. On April 1, 1901, he returned to his present home, the farm on which he was born. It is a large, handsome place, one of the best in the county.

Mr. Beamesderfer is a young man and a Republican and there is likely to be a great future in store for him. He is well known, well liked, and progressive, a combination of attributes hard to beat.

B. H. NISSLY. Among the fine farms for which East Donegal township, Lancaster county, is noted, is that of B. H. Nissly, comprising seventy acres of some of the best land in Lancaster county. Although Mr. Nissly has never operated his farm personally, he thoroughly understands its management and its fine condition shows that its owner is fully alive to its possibilities.

Mr. Nissly was born in Mt. Joy township, Oct. 4, 1865, a son of Christian and Lydia (Huntzberger) Nissly, the former of whom was an excellent farmer in this county, dying in Feb., 1866, at the age of forty-three; he was buried in Mt. Joy township, on the old Nissly homestead, where the family has its private burial ground. The mother of B. H. died at Anchortown in 1875, at the age of forty-six, the only child of the marriage being our subject. By a previous marriage to a Miss Warner, Mr. Nissley had one son Tobias, who is a machinist in Reading, where he married Belle Balmer.

The ancestry of Benjamin Nissly includes some of the old and honored family names of Lancaster county. His paternal grandfather was John Nissly, of Lancaster county, who married a Miss Hershey.

B. H. Nissly remained with his mother until the age of five years, having been deprived of his father when but one year old, and she then found a good home for him with Benjamin Hernley, of Mt. Joy township, where he remained until fifteen, going to school and attending to the chores. At this age John Reist desired his services on the farm, and he went with him for the following two years, then worked for two more years with Christ Nissley, and spent one year in mill work in Mt. Joy township, returning then to farm work in West Donegal township for three years. In 1888 Mr. Nissly purchased his fine farm, paying for it the handsome sum of $11,200, and moved upon it in 1889. The residence, a two-story brick building, was erected at a cost of $4,500, and was on the farm when it was purchased from the estate of Benjamin Herr.

Mr. Nissly has never farmed this place, preferring to rent it, but he makes it his home. During the years of 1894 and 1895 he was employed in the Reading Railroad car shops. In politics he has always been an ardent Republican and is one of the substantial men of the township.

WILLIAM M. GUILLES (formerly spelled Giles), of the firm of A. G. Guiles' Sons, takes high rank in commercial circles in Columbia, where since January, 1887, he and his brother, Samuel W., have carried on the business established by their honored father.

Our subject is a grandson of William Guiles, who was born May 26, 1795, in Chester county, Pa., and was of English descent. When ten years old he came with his stepmother to Lancaster county, locating at Strasburg, where he grew to manhood, and he was self-supporting from that early age. When a boy he did various kinds of work, blacking boots, working as a stable boy, anything, in fact, that would bring him an honest penny, and in early manhood he took up the trade of wagonmaking, which he followed successfully until ten years before his death, when he retired. He continued to reside in Strasburg, of which place he became one of the most respected citizens, winning by hard work and a life of consistent uprightness a high place in the hearts of his fellow-men, as well as substantial financial rewards. He was a devout Christian, an active member and pillar of the M. E. Church, and his death, which occurred May 16, 1867, was sincerely mourned. On Aug. 8, 1819, Mr. Guiles married Miss Mary Markley, who was born Aug. 24, 1800, south of Strasburg, this county, daughter of George Markley, who was of German descent. Eleven children were born to them, three of whom died in infancy. Sarah, now deceased, was the wife of D. S. McElhaney, of Marticville. William is deceased. Mary, deceased, was the wife of Rev. Albert G. Williams. David is deceased. Elizabeth is the wife of John J. Long, of Freeport, Pa. John W. is deceased. Charlotte W., deceased, was the wife of Simon Groff, of Strasburg. Abraham Groff is the father of our subject. The mother of this family passed away March 26, 1852.

Abraham G. Guiles was born Oct. 3, 1840, in Conestoga Center, this county, was reared at Strasburg and received his education there in the public schools. He left school at the age of fourteen, learned the trade of wagonmaking under his father, and at the age of sixteen was working at that trade as a journeyman. By the time he was twenty he was engaged in business on his own account. When twenty-one he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and soon became engineer, running from Harrisburg to Philadelphia. So trusted an employee was he that when but twenty-five he was frequently called upon to run passenger trains. In 1864 he came to Columbia, making his home there one year, while for the next five years he lived in Harrisburg. He remained in the railroad employ ten years, at the end of that time engaging in merchandising in Columbia, where he continued to reside throughout his entire business career. He first embarked in the shoe business in Locust street, but soon took up general merchandising, at No. 210 2d street, and was thus engaged most successfully from 1871 to January, 1887, when he turned the establishment over to his two sons, William M. and Samuel W., who now conduct the store under the firm name of A. G. Guiles' Sons. After assisting them in the management for some time Mr. Guiles retired from the enterprise and gave his attention to various other business affairs until his removal to Lititz, where he is now spending his days in the enjoyment of the ample competence which awarded his years of activity. Although his mercantile interests demanded his constant attention for so many years, Mr. Guiles found time to encourage and promote any enterprise for the public good, and he did much for the welfare of his adopted city, keeping abreast of every progressive movement. He gave special aid to her business prosperity by his interest in and support of various establishments of importance in the town, being stockholder and director in several concerns. He was one of the organizers of the Columbia Shirt Company, now the Triumph Shirt Company; is a stockholder in the Columbia Electric Light & Power Company; of the Keely Stove Company, of which he was one of the organizers; and a stockholder and director of the Central National Bank of Columbia. Mr. Guiles officiated as a member of the school board in Columbia, as member of the board of health for many years, and for four years as member of the city council, of which he was president one year. In political sentiment he is a Democrat. Fraternally he unites with Columbia Lodge, No. 286, F. & A. M., and with the Perfect Artisans.

In 1861 Mr. Guiles wedded Miss Rebecca K. Welsh, of Conestoga Center, and three children were born to them, Samuel W., Ida May and William M. Samuel W. married Catherine K. Haudshaw, of Harrisburg. The daughter died when twenty-one years of age. The mother passed away Nov. 2, 1896, and in the fall of 1898 Mr. Guiles married Miss Mary R. Doster, of Lititz. On Dec. 1, 1899, they removed from Columbia to Lititz, where Mr. Guiles has erected a fine residence in South Broad street. Mr. Guiles united with the M. E. Church in 1871, but since his removal to Lititz he has been connected with the Moravian Church.

William M. Guiles was born in 1869, in Harrisburg, this State, and was but two months old when his parents took up their residence in Columbia. He received a good education, and at an early age commenced learning business methods in his father's store, continuing with him until he and his brother took the business on their own account. They are following in their father's footsteps, and bid fair to rank, as he did, among the most substantial merchants of Lancaster county. Mr. Guiles is a member of the Artisans and the Odd Fellows, and, in religious connection is identified with the M. E. Church. In politics he is independent.

In June, 1894, Mr. Guiles was married, at Hazleton, Pa., to Miss Adelaide Curnow, a native of that place. They have no children. Mrs. Guiles' father, William Curnow, was a native of England, and died in Hazleton. Her mother is now the wife of John Arrey, a retired resident of Hazleton.

MARTIN LEFEVER, one of the representative farmers of Lancaster county and a leading citizen in West Lampeter township, was born on the small farm that was owned by his grandfather on the Lampeter Road, Feb. 14, 1854, and is a son of Adam and Catherine (Kendig) Lefever. His father was reared at home and spent his life in West Lampeter township, making himself known and felt as one of the leading men of the county in his time, dying in 1889.

Adam Lefever was left fatherless when a babe and was reared to manhood with no parental guidance. There was good stuff in him, however, and while still a lad he did not hesitate to assume responsibilities and undertake labors that should go with more advanced years. Always a farmer, he soon became successful, amassing property and becoming the owner of four farms and a timber lot in the southern part of the county, also possessing two pieces of property in Lampeter. Known as a hard-working man, his business acumen was soon recognized, and for many years he was a director in the County Bank. His townsmen elected him director of the poor, as well as to other local positions, and he served on the school board many years.

Adam Lefever was married to Catherine Kendig, by whom he had thirteen children: Harry, a farmer in Strasburg township; Martin; Frank, a farmer in West Lampeter township; Mary Ann, deceased; Elizabeth, the wife of Christian Huber, of West Lampeter township; Aaron, who died unmarried; Daniel and Alpheus, both deceased; Enos K., a physician of Boiling Springs, Cumberland Co., Pa.; Adam, a farmer in West Lampeter township; Grant, deceased; Kate, who is the widow of Frank Mullinger, and lives in Lancaster; Emma, the wife of John Hauser, of West Lampeter township. The mother of this family is still living, and is a member of the Mennonite Church.

Martin Lefever was reared on the farm and educated in the common schools. He remained at home until he was twenty-six years of age, then married and located on the farm of John B. Mylin, which he farmed on shares for seventeen years. It comprised 110 acres and proved very productive.

Mr. Lefever, in company with his brother, bought 155 acres of the old homestead, and settled on it April 1, 1897. This has become one of the fine farms, and is now owned exclusively by Martin Lefever, who has made many improvements, and is the possessor of a herd of fine stock. All his attention is given to farming and his place as a progressive and wide-awake farmer is conceded. He also owns another piece of land in West Lampeter township, which consists of five acres. Mr. Lefever was married Nov. 2, 1880, to Miss Amanda C. Mylin, a daughter of John B. Mylin, and to them have come the following children, Martha, Harry, Mamie, Minnie, Edna, John, Aldus, Martin, Florence and Verna.

WILLIAM H. SMOKER. The railroad train service requires men of sound judgment, capable of forming quick and unerring decisions, and men who are faithful in every small detail of duty. Those men succeed best who are attached to their vocation, and one of the best-known among the citizens of Columbia engaged in railroad work is William H. Smoker. For the past thirty years he has been in railway service and during that time he has shown his fidelity to the stirring and responsible life of a train man by surrendering promotion for its attractions.

Mr. Smoker was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Feb. 18, 1851, the son of Jacob K. and Sarah L. (Nelson) Smoker, the latter of Paradise township, and the grandson of John G. and Polly M. Smoker. The grandfather was a native of Germany, who in his youth migrated to America, here married and became a citizen of Lancaster county, where he died.

Jacob K. Smoker, the father of William H., was born Oct. 27, 1822. He is now a resident of Columbia, an auctioneer by occupation. During the Civil war he served for three years in the engineering corps and was stationed at Harper's Ferry. He was register and property assessor of the second ward in Lancaster for six years and has held various township offices. In politics he is a Republican and in religious faith himself and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. The children born to Jacob K. and Sarah L. Smoker are as follows: William H.; Louis J., of Columbia; Lillie, deceased wife of John Richardson; James M., a Pennsylvania Railroad conductor, of Columbia; Lucy, wife of John Weymer, proprietor of a bakery at Columbia; and Howard G., a druggist of Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

William H. was reared on a farm, but began his railroad career in 1870, at the age of nineteen years, as a brakeman on a freight train, on the run between Columbia and Philadelphia. Eight months later he was promoted to conductor, a position which he held for five years. He was again promoted, to the position of assistant yard master, which he filled for three years and nine months. Preferring his old work on the road, he returned to the position of conductor, which he has held uninterruptedly ever since, and is now one of the best-known and most popular conductors in the service. Mr. Smoker has not wholly escaped the accidents which surround the life of a train man, for in 1892 he slipped from his train and lost four toes from his right foot.

William H. Smoker married, March 11, 1875, at Columbia, Miss Anna Reinhart, daughter of the late John and Barbara (Hogentogler) Reinhart, of Columbia. To William H. and Anna (Reinhart) Smoker were born four children, namely: Pacie M., deceased; James M., a graduate of a business college; Lewis J.; and Florence E. In politics Mr. Smoker is a Republican, and himself and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church.

FRANK K. LEFEVER, one of the industrious and respected citizens of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, was born on the old homestead in that township, Jan. 10, 1856, where he was reared and educated in the common schools. Remaining at home until he was in his thirty-third year he then married and located on the farm where he is still living. It is a farm of sixty-three acres, and is highly cultivated. There Mr. Lefever has made many valuable improvements, both in remodeling and in erecting new buildings. His is a modern and progressive spirit, and he is a lover of law and order.

Mr. Lefever was married Nov. 8, 1888, to M. Naomi, a daughter of Jacob R. and Leah Ann (Landis) Buckwalter. She was born in East Lampeter township, April 28, 1866. Mr. and Mrs. Lefever are the parents of two children, Mary and Walter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lefever belong to the best people of the county, and are respected alike for their many good qualities and their industrious habits.

SAMUEL S. GREIDER, a general farmer in Rapho township, who lives on the old family homestead, was born on that place, Nov. 10, 1865, a son of M. L. Greider.

Samuel S. Greider was reared under the old roof, and educated in the local schools. He was married April 18, 1888, in East Donegal township, to Emily Engle, by whom he had the following family, Edna E., Mary E. and Mildred E., twins, Alvin E., Minnie E., Rea E., Martin E. and Ruth E.

Mrs. Emily (Engle) Greider was born in East Donegal township, Oct. 16, 1866, a daughter of Hiram and Mary (Engle) Engle, both of whom were born and reared in East Donegal township. Her father operated an extensive nursery in East Donegal township, and for some twelve years was very successful in that line. His death occurred in 1873, at the early age of thirty years. He was a school director, and was becoming one of the best-known and influential men of his community. His wife, who was born in 1843, is still living, and makes her home with her son-in-law, Samuel S. Greider. To the father and mother were born the following family: N. Lizzie, the wife of John K. Miller, a photographer in East Donegal township; Alvin, a manufacturer of bicycles in Philadelphia; Emily; Wilson, a bookkeeper for the McDowells paper mills in Philadelphia.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Emily Greider were Daniel and Mary (Kraybill) Engle, both of Lancaster county. Her maternal grandparents were Hervey M. and Eliza (Breneman) Engle, both natives of Lancaster county. Hervey was a son of Henry Engle, and was three times married: first to Eliza Breneman, by whom he had seven children; second, to Lizzie Musser, by whom he had one child, and third, to Fanny Nissley, by whom he had nine children.

Samuel S. Greider remained with his parents until he was married, having received his education in the local schools, and being well prepared for the practical labors of life. With his young wife he rented a farm in Rapho township, on which he remained two years, when he returned to the old homestead, where he has lived to the present time. This place comprises 164 acres, and in his hands it is kept to a high pitch of fertility, and presents a fine appearance.

In politics he is a Republican, and is numbered among the energetic, thrifty and progressive men of the township.

F. M. HERR, one of the thrifty, well-known and highly esteemed farmer-citizens of Martic township, was born May 5, 1861, son of John and Fannie (Hoover) Herr, of Marticville.

John Herr, the father of our subject, was born in 1836, son of Levi and grandson of Menie Herr, who was one of the early settlers of Lancaster county. The family originated in Germany. To John and Fannie Herr was born a family of seven children, namely: F. M.; Martha A., the wife of Hiram Hammond, of Mount Nebo; John C., of West Lampeter township; Jacob, Elam, Levi and Ezra, all of Manor township.

Mr. Herr was reared on a farm and attended the public schools. He has been interested in farming all his life, and by his industry and good management has acquired a fine farm of 109 acres which he has improved in a very substantial manner. He is one of the best farmers and most respected citizens of Martic township.

On May 15, 1881, Mr. Herr married Miss Rebecca Armstrong, born Dec. 1, 1862, daughter of William and Rachael Armstrong, of Mt. Nebo, and this marriage has been blessed with eight children, as follows: Dora E., Lloyd G., John W., Ida B., Amos F., Mary E., Esther M. and Thomas H. Mrs. Herr was one of a family of fourteen children, seven of whom grew to maturity, these being: Thomas of Martic township; Mary, the wife of Amos Haltzinger; Sarah, the wife of J. M. Drumm; Isabel, the widow of Harvey McMellon; Rebecca, the wife of Mr. Herr; Emma, the widow of William Swigert, of Lancaster; Franklin, of Mt. Nebo.

The Herr family is one which has long been known in Lancaster county and has always taken part in public matters. John Herr was a member of the 79th P. V. I. during the Civil war, from 1863 to 1865. He was a staunch Republican and his son has also always adhered to the principles of that party. F. M. Herr and his family belong to the Mount Nebo M. E. Church. Mr. Herr is much respected in his community and is a very useful citizen.

GEORGE SYLVESTER DESCH, one of the leading railroad men of Columbia, Pa., was born in that city, May 10, 1865, and has always been identified with its interests.

The father, Joseph G. Desch, was born in Bavaria, Germany, Sept. 10, 1833, and came to this country with his parents, Philip and Mary H. (Herr) Desch, in 1851, locating in Baltimore, where the latter died in 1875. Philip Desch died in 1870 while on a visit to his native land. His children were John and Peter, who died in Baltimore; Mary, wife of Leo Bruner, of Germany; Baldser, a traveling agent of that country; Anthony, who was killed in the battle of Fredericksburg during the Civil war; Joseph G., father of our subject; Gertrude, wife of George Smith, of Baltimore; George, who died in that city; and Margaret, who married and lived in Baltimore.

After spending five years in Baltimore, Joseph G. Desch came to Columbia, Pa., where he engaged in the butcher business nine years, conducted a tavern thirty-six years, and operated a brewery six years, but is now living retired. He is a member of the German Catholic Church and a Democrat in politics. In 1858, in Columbia, he married Caroline Rider, who was born in that city, January 28, 1840, a daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (Graff) Rider, also natives of Germany, who immigrated to America in early life and were married in Columbia. Her father, who was a carpet weaver by trade, died in January, 1850, her mother in 1890. They were members of the Lutheran and Catholic Churches, respectively. To Joseph G. and Caroline (Rider) Desch were born the following children: Frederick, who died in 1879; Elizabeth, wife of Edward Bittner, a cigar manufacturer of Columbia; Charles, George and Mary, all of whom died in childhood; George S.; Carrie, wife of Henry Glotfelder, a clerk of Columbia; Cecelia, at home; Jennie, wife of John Payne, a stove-molder of Columbia; Joseph A., proprietor of the "Exchange Hotel," of Columbia; August, a clerk of that city; Stella and William, both at home.

In 1881 Mr. Desch entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as telegraph operator, but a year later spent six months as fireman on the road, and then was brakeman for three years.

During the following twelve years he was again employed as fireman, and in January, 1900, was promoted to engineer, in which capacity he is now serving the company to their entire satisfaction. In religious belief he is a Catholic, and in his political affiliations is a Democrat.

At Columbia Mr. Desch was married, Oct. 19, 1886, to Miss Barbara Mulligan, and by this union seven children have been born, viz.: George F., Charles J., Edward J., Emma E., Carrol Leo, Mary C. and Joseph A. Mrs. Desch was born in Safe Harbor, Lancaster county, Oct. 5, 1867, a daughter of Joseph and Susan (Young) Mulligan, also natives of Safe Harbor, where the father was born in 1844 and still continues to live. By occupation he is a farmer. The mother, who was a consistent and faithful member of the M. E. Church, died in 1876, at the age of thirty-five years. In their family were nine children, namely: Henry and Martha, both deceased; Elmer, a railroad brakeman of Columbia; Frank, a resident of Illinois; Barbara, now Mrs. Desch; Emma, wife of Carroll Foster, a bookkeeper of Williamsport, Md.; Milton and Howard, both bakers of Erie, Pa.; and Miles, a resident of Columbia. Mrs. Desch's paternal grandparents, Richard and Rachel Mulligan, lived and died in Lancaster county, Pa.; the grandfather was a shoemaker by trade. The maternal grandparents, Jacob and Rachel (Munder) Young, were natives of York county, Pa., and on coming to Lancaster county, located in Safe Harbor, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Young followed the tailor's trade.

THOMAS E. CONLEY is one of the men whose success in life is due entirely to their own unaided efforts, for at the early age of twelve years he commenced earning his own livelihood and has ever since been dependent upon his own resources. He has worked his way steadily upward, and is to-day holding the responsible position of assistant yardmaster for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Columbia, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Conley was born in that city, Dec. 21, 1855, a son of Michael C. and Martha (Heaps) Conley. The father was a native of Philadelphia and a son of the Conley who came to this country from Ireland and first located in Philadelphia, but spent his last years in Pittsburg, Pa. Martha (Heaps) Conley was born in Harford county, Md., of which her parents, Abraham and Jane (Allen) Heaps, were lifelong residents. Her father was a blacksmith by trade. Michael C. Conley, father of our subject, came to Columbia in 1847, and for some years was employed as police officer by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, entering their employ on the organization of the company. In his early days he was a brakeman on the old State road, and was superintendent of the O'Connor line of that road. He also engaged in boating on the river between Pittsburg and Columbia. He died Aug. 28, 1872, aged sixty-three years, and his wife passed away Aug. 18, 1886, aged sixty-two. In religious belief he was a Catholic, while she was a Presbyterian. Their children were: Elizabeth, wife of Andrew Grandy, of Columbia; James, Michael C., Jr., and James (2), all deceased; Thomas E.; and A. Eugene P., a farmer of Kleinville, Lancaster county.

Thomas E. Conley commenced clerking in a grocery store at the age of twelve years, and was thus employed for two years. He was next a telegraph operator with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company from 1870 until 1890, and in the latter year was made assistant yard master, in which capacity he is still employed by the company. He is a member of the Catholic Church and of St. Patrick's Society, and in political sentiment is a Democrat.

On Nov. 26, 1889, in Columbia, Mr. Conley married Miss Edith A. Davidson, and they have become the parents of two children, Mary T. and Agnes, the latter now deceased. The family have a large circle of friends and acquaintances and are held in high esteem by all who know them.

Mrs. Conley was born in New York City, Sept. 1, 1864, a daughter of William and Henrietta (Lutz) Davidson, natives of Mifflin and Lancaster counties, Pa., respectively. Her paternal grandparents, Samuel and Agnes (Werly) Davidson, always made their home in Mifflin county, where the grandfather was employed as a boat builder. Her maternal grandparents, William F. and Mary (Galligar) Lutz, were natives of Baltimore, Md., and Millersville, Pa., respectively. Mr. Lutz was an early settler of Lancaster county, and continued to make his home there throughout the remainder of his life. When a young man, Mrs. Conley's father worked in furnaces, but later followed farming and was employed as watchman at Bruner's coal yard in Columbia, in which city he located in 1865. Here he died Sept. 22, 1892, at the age of sixty years, but his wife, who was born Nov. 18, 1841, is still a resident of Columbia. She is a devout member of the Catholic Church. Mrs. Conley was the oldest of their children, the others being: Mary A., deceased; Ellen E., who is with her mother; William J., deceased; Henrietta F., who died in infancy; Ambrose V., a machinist in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Altoona, Pa.; and Samuel B. and Lucy R., both with their mother.

CHRISTIAN G. GARBER, a farmer, tobacco grower and wholesale dealer in milk, resides on a farm in West Hempfield township, adjoining the one on which he was born, Oct. 20, 1860, in Lancaster county.

Christian G. Garber faithfully assisted his parents, Andrew and Susan M. (Greider) Garber, until he attained his majority; on becoming of age Christian G. was married, and having taken a helpmeet, also took upon himself the responsibility of managing the homestead, which he cultivated two years on his own account. From the homestead Christian G. removed to Manor township, and for two years leased the old John Landis farm, after which he removed to Mountville, and for three years was there engaged in the tobacco trade. Mr. Garber then returned to his present farm, which is a part of the old homestead, and now has the management of both tracts, which comprise in all 200 acres.

On Sept. 22, 1881, Christian G. Garber married in Mountville, at the home of the bride, Anna M. Kaufman, and to this union have been born three bright children, Maud K., Roy K. and Mary K. Mrs. Anna M. (Kaufman) Garber was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, in 1863, and is a daughter of Isaac H. Kaufman, deceased.

Christian G. Garber is widely connected with the fraternal orders having lodges in his county, and among these are lodge No. 876, I. O. O. F., at Columbia; Ridgely encampment, No. 217, at Lancaster; camp No. 25, I. O. F., at Lancaster; Jr. O. U. A. M., at Mountville, No. 65, and the Mystic Chain at Mountville.

In politics Mr. Garber is a Republican and has been a school director for the past three years. As a business man he has been upright and consequently successful, and he is moreover a skilled agriculturist and tobacco grower. Socially, the family, being one of the oldest in the county, is held in great respect, and the individual merits of its members have greatly enhanced the esteem to which they naturally fall heirs.

ISAAC L. AUVERTER, the favorite dealer in groceries, dry-goods and notions in Columbia, Pa., was born in that town, Nov. 30, 1852, a son of Jacob and Sarah (Patterson) Auverter, the former of whom was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., and the latter of Ireland, both being now deceased.

Jacob Auverter was a millwright by trade, and in his earlier days was a foreman of a gang of carpenters on the old State road. In 1846 he came to Columbia and in 1850 his family arrived here. After the sale of the State road to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Mr. Auverter worked for the latter until 1861, after which he worked for Supplee & Bro., as pattern maker until his death, which occurred in 1883, at the age of seventy-two years; his widow died in 1891, aged eighty-seven. The remains of both lie side by side in the Skelton Park cemetery at Columbia. They were devout members of the First Lutheran Church. Their children were: Hiram, who received a wound in the war of the Rebellion and died from the effects of it at home in 1865; Jerome, who died from a disease contracted during the same war; Rachel, who died unmarried; Taylor, foreman of a machine shop at Braddock, Pa.; Anna E., making her home with Isaac L., who is the youngest of the family.

The paternal grandparents of Isaac L. Auverter were Leonard and Anna (Hoover) Auverter, the former a Franco-German, who settled in Soudersburg, Pa., in 1807, where he was in business as a butcher for fifteen years, and then became a drover in Canada, where he died in 1842, at the age of seventy years.

The marriage of Isaac L. Auverter took place in Columbia, Nov. 1, 1882, to Miss Sue Witmer, born in Safe Harbor, Lancaster county, Pa., March 1, 1860, a daughter of Jacob R. and Susan (Miller) Witmer, who now reside in Columbia, where Mr. Witmer conducts a machine shop and foundry. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Auverter have been born four children, viz., Anna, Clara, Taylor W. and Andrew M., all still under the parental roof.

The business career of Mr. Auverter began when he was nineteen years old, at which age he began learning pattern-making; after finishing his apprenticeship he worked at his trade ten years for the Columbia Agricultural Works, of which he was made foreman at the end of three months. In 1878 and 1879, in partnership with Frank Allison, he conducted a boot, shoe and notion store in Wrightsville, although he continued to make Columbia his home, and in 1894 engaged in his present business there.

In politics Mr. Auverter is a Republican and was a school director from 1882 until 1892; in February, 1900, he was elected to the town council, in which he is chairman of the Fire committee and is a member of the committees on Finance and Law and Order. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Artisans and the A. & I. O.; in religion he is a Methodist, being prominent as a member of the First M. E. Church of Columbia.

WILLIAM W. REAM. The planning and the erection of dwellings were among the earliest arts that engaged the attention and aroused the inventive genius of man, he even in his primitive day finding it necessary to secure shelter from the inclemency of the elements in the more rigorous latitudes of the earth and a retreat from the sun's rays in the torrid parts of the habitable globe, and it is an art that will give employment to the skillful mechanic, and particularly the carpenter, as long as man has an abiding place in a civilized community, so that he who would become an architect even of the humblest class is wise in making choice of a vocation that is ever as enduring indeed as that of agriculture itself. Such was the choice of William W. Ream.

Mr. Ream was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, June 3, 1862, a son of John and Mary A. (Trego) Ream, the former of whom, a farmer, was born in January, 1832, and the latter in 1834; both are still living in Alert, in their native township of Salisbury, the parents of seven children, viz.: Martin, who died at the age of two and one-half years; William W.; John E., a farmer in Salisbury township; Sarah, who died when two years old; Dollie, wife of George Myers, of Salisbury township; Frankie, who also died at the age of two years; and Aaron, a carpenter, still at home. The parents of John Ream were residents of Juniata county, and those of Mrs. Mary A. Ream, Robert and Dorothy (Ely) Trego, were of Lancaster and Chester counties, respectively.

William W. Ream at the age of nine years temporarily parted with his parents and for four years made his home with his grandfather Trego; he then returned to his father, for whom he worked three years, thoroughly learning the carpenter's trade; he next served an apprenticeship of four years under John Diem, a wheelwright; he then purchased his present village property, on which he erected his dwelling and carpenter shop, and there has been engaged in contracting, building and working at job-work ever since, and, being an expert in every branch of his trade, has met with the most flattering success.

In Salisbury township, Feb. 7, 1884, William W. Ream was united in marriage with Miss Margaret J. Cooper, who was born in Salisbury township in 1859, a daughter of William and Caroline (Steely) Cooper, who were born in Chester and Lancaster counties, respectively. William Cooper was a prominent farmer and a man of considerable influence in his neighborhood, and died June 3, 1900, at the age of about seventy years, his remains being buried in Pequea cemetery. Mrs. Caroline (Steely) Cooper was born Jan. 21, 1830, and is the mother of three children: Leah C., wife of Bart Smith, a farmer, in Salisbury township; Mary E., married to John E. Ream, brother of William W. Ream; and Margaret J., now Mrs. William W. Ream. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Margaret J. (Cooper) Ream were Nabeth and Jane (Blair) Cooper, of Lancaster county, and her maternal grandparents were Thomas and Caroline (Montgomery) Steely, of Chester county. The marriage of William W. and Margaret J. (Cooper) Ream has been blessed with three children, two of whom still survive, John C. and Edwin M.; the youngest child, Helen C., was called away at the age of five years.

Mr. Ream is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. In politics he is a Republican, but has never been an office seeker. He is of a very genial disposition and one of the most popular young men in Salisbury township, where he is sincerely respected for his strictly upright walk through life, his word never having been impeached and his business reputation standing without a flaw.

JOHN W. ROBINSON. The late John W. Robinson, formerly one of the most enterprising and successful native-born farmers of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Pa., had his nativity on the homestead on which his widow and children still reside, was born July 3, 1853, devoted all his life to agriculture and was most untimely called from earth, Jan. 20, 1896, his remains being interred in the Pequea Presbyterian cemetery. His parents, William and Rachel (Wallace) Robinson, were respectively natives of Salisbury township, Lancaster county, and Chester county, Pa., but were born on adjoining farms, the county line separating the two homesteads.

William Robinson was born March 4, 1821, and died Feb. 20, 1893; his wife, Rachel, daughter of Rev. John and Isabella (Gault) Wallace, was born March 6, 1821, and now resides in Strasburg, Pa. Her father was the pastor of the Pequea Church for more than thirty years. William Robinson was a successful farmer and attained a very prominent position in the community in which he lived, winning the respect of all who knew him. To William and Rachel (Wallace) Robinson were born four children, namely: Belle, widow of Edward Worrall and a resident of Strasburg, Pa.; John W.; William, who died when eight years old; and R. Anna, a young lady, also living in Strasburg.

The Robinson family are of Irish origin and about the close of the American Revolution three brothers and one sister, members of the family, came from the north of Ireland to make their homes in America. The sister here married a Mr. Renney, and two of the brothers purchased farms in East Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pa.; Hugh, the youngest of the three located in Dauphin county, and there married, in 1784, Jane Wilson, a native, and shortly afterwards purchased at sheriff's sale, a tract of 300 acres of land near Cambridge, in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, where he passed the remainder of his life, dying in 1800. His children numbered twelve, five sons and seven daughters, of whom two sons died in infancy and three reached maturity.

William Robinson, the eldest of the three sons who attained maturity, died in 1833; Hugh married Martha Stanley, settled near Cambridge, and had born to him, James, who died young, and Susannah, who was married to William Torbit and passed away, leaving one son, Joseph; Mary was married to Isaac Buchanan, a farmer; Ellen became the wife of John Rambo, a miller; Jane married Alexander Martin; Agnes was married to Samuel Black, a farmer; Margaret, Betty, and Martha remained single and died well advanced in years, and John married Isabella Galt, settled in Salisbury township, and had born to him two sons and three daughters. He was born Aug. 11, 1780, and died May 4, 1861. He served in the war of 1812 as captain, was elected justice of the peace in 1825, and in 1829 was elected a member of the State Legislature, in which he served with distinction and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. In 1830 he was selected as ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church of Pequea, a position he filled with untiring zeal and fidelity until the end. His property still remains in the family.

On Dec. 28, 1882, John W. Robinson was joined in matrimony in Camden, N. J., with Miss Annie J. Cross, who became the mother of his four children, born in the following order; William W., John W., Ethel A. and Margaret. Mrs. Annie J. Robinson was born in Salem, Juniata Co., Pa., and is a daughter of John W., and Eleanor C. (Woodward) Cross, the former of whom was a farmer and a gallant soldier of the Civil war, who was not permitted, however, to "like a soldier fall" but died on board the transport Knickerbocker of that fell disorder, typhoid fever. He was a private in the 53rd P. V. I., from Chester county. In his last sickness, feeling that dissolution was about to take place, he reached his hand beneath his pillow and drew forth a daguerreotype, and unclasping the case, gazed, with dim eyes on the lineaments of his wife and two children. As death drew near, he handed the case to a Washington (Pa.) soldier, with the request that he tell her that it was the last thing he had looked upon and that they were the last earthly objects of his thoughts.

To John W. and Eleanor Cross were born two children, namely; Annie J., Mrs. Robinson, and Mary E., wife of Dr. J. H. MacCreary, superintendent of Pittston Hospital. Mrs. Cross was next married to H. Wilson Robinson, and this union was crowned with four children, viz.: Charles W., of Dorlan's Mills, Chester county; and Alexandria, John L., and Bernette, all three deceased. The mother of these two families was taken away in October, 1899, aged sixty-one years; she was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

The late John W. Robinson was also a member of the Presbyterian Church, was in politics an active member of the Republican party, and fraternally was an Odd Fellow until his marriage, when he became non-affiliating. He was one of the most upright of men, a fond husband and an indulgent father, and an excellent provider for his family, his widow now occupying a delightful home, furnished with every convenience, including steam heat. He was public-spirited, charitable, and popular; was honored for his many personal merits and fine qualities of head and heart; and his loss was deeply deplored, not only by his immediate family, but by a host of warm-hearted and unfeigned friends who in his lifetime had had an opportunity of becoming familiar with his sterling attributes.

FRANK ROTEHORN is in the prime of manhood, having been born Nov. 24, 1855, at Lancaster. He comes of sturdy Dutch stock, both his parents having been born in Holland, of a race which has suffered much in the cause of religious freedom, and which is closely united by ties of consanguinity to the Boers of South Africa, who have made such a heroic fight for independence against the best drilled troops of the British Empire.

John Rotehorn, father of Frank, married a Miss Bonson, and shortly after their marriage they immigrated to America, settling in Lancaster county, where they remained until their death, he dying in 1866, at the age of fifty-two, and she two years later, in her fifty-third year. He was a teamster, who won universal respect through his industry, sobriety and probity. Frank Rotehorn is the only one of their four children yet living. The first born died on the passage to America, and two others also died in infancy.

Young Frank remained in Lancaster until he reached his thirteenth year, when, being an orphan, he went to Columbia to find a home with his guardian, Albert Bonson, his uncle. Mr. Bonson was a bottler, and his nephew worked with him in this business until he reached his majority. When he reached the age of twenty-one he purchased a canal boat and for a time carried freight between Nanticoke and Baltimore. The venture, however, did not prove as successful as he had hoped, and after one experimental season he abandoned it to take the position of a brakeman with the Pennsylvania Company. After twelve years of faithful service he was promoted to be a flagman, and in the autumn of 1892 he was given charge of a train as conductor. He is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, of the Pa. Relief Association, and politically is a Democrat.

Frank Rotehorn was married in April, 1877, to Miss Barbara Stockum. Their only child, Bertie, died at the age of thirteen. Mrs. Rotehorn was born at Lancaster, March 29, 1855. Her parents, John and Elizabeth (Metrode) Stockum, were natives of Germany. Both crossed the water in 1852, and their marriage was solemnized at Lancaster. John Stockum was a gardener and died at Chickies, having been struck by a railway train Aug. 28, 1894. Mrs. Stockum, who was born July 7, 1833, is still living at Columbia; she is a devout, practical Catholic, as was also her husband. Mrs. Rotehorn was their oldest child; the next in order of birth was Elizabeth, who married George Weber, of Allegheny; Andrew lives at Covington, Ky.; Charles, George, Frank and Charlotte are deceased; Edward lives at Sparrow's Point, Md., while Mary and Ann, both of whom are unmarried, reside with their mother.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Rotehorn were Christopher and Catherine Stockum, of Germany, and her maternal grandparents were Andrew and Barbara C. Metrode, also of Germany. The last-named died on the sea, when on her way to America.

PATRICK J. MACK. The motto "merit always commands its reward" is exemplified in the career of Patrick John Mack, who is now most efficiently serving as assistant yard master for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Columbia.

Mr. Mack was born in Annville, Lebanon Co., Pa., Aug. 4, 1855, a son of James and Joanna (Kirvy) Mack, natives of County Limerick, Ireland, who came to America when young and were married in New York City. In 1863 they took up their residence in Columbia, Pa., where the father was employed as a laborer by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company until his death, which occurred in January, 1900, when he was seventy years of age. The mother, who was born in 1835, is still living and continues to make her home in Columbia. She is a devout member of the Catholic Church, to which her husband also belonged. They were the parents of six children, namely: Maggie, wife of Patrick Kehoe, of Columbia; Patrick J.; Ellen, at home; Daniel, a machinist of Columbia; James, deceased; and Anna, at home.

Patrick J. Mack was only eight years old on the removal of the family to Columbia, where he was reared and educated. At the age of fifteen he commenced clerking in a grocery store, where he was employed for two years, and held a similar position in another store for five years. Subsequently he worked for a year and a half in a machine shop, and then operated a stationary engine for a year, after which he was employed as a slate mantle polisher for four years. In 1877 Mr. Mack became identified with the repairing corps of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; from 1879 until 1882 he served as extra brakeman, was flagman the following year, then conductor until 1893, and assistant yard master at Columbia since that time. It will thus be seen that he has gradually worked his way upward to his present responsible position, having always discharged his duties in a most commendable and satisfactory manner. Religiously he is a communicant of the Catholic Church, and politically is identified with the Democratic party.

In Columbia, Nov. 15, 1882, Mr. Mack was united in marriage with Miss Mary Jane Conley, and to them have been born four children, namely, Mary, Ella, Theresa and Cecelia. Mrs. Mack was born in Wrightsville, York Co., Pa., Nov. 15, 1856, a daughter of John and Sarah (Dalton) Conley, who were born, reared and married in Ireland, where they continued to reside until 1848, which year witnessed their immigration to America. They located in Wrightsville, Pa., where they made their home until the father was drowned in the Susquehanna river in 1857, at the age of forty years. Later the mother came to Columbia, where she departed this life in September, 1900, at the age of seventy-nine. To them were born three children, but John and Bridget are both deceased, leaving only Mrs. Mack living at the present time.

JOHN R. HERR, one of the leading farmers of Providence township, was born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, son of Henry H. and Magdalena (Buckwalter) Herr, of Leacock township, and a grandson of Henry.

Abraham Herr, the great-grandfather of John R., was one of the early settlers of Lancaster county. The family has been one of agriculturists, and Henry Herr, son of Abraham, was a well-known farmer of this county, who became the father of a numerous family which has intermarried with very many of the other old and honorable families of the county, a kinship existing among many of them and the old names honorably perpetuated. The twelve children of Henry Herr were as follows: Barbara, Lydia, Susan, Mary, Annie, Hattie, Martha, Elizabeth, Henry H., Abraham, Ezra and Amos.

Henry H. Herr, father of John R., married Miss Martha Buckwalter, of East Lampeter township. They had eight children, namely: Enos, John R., Henry H., Annie, Ida, Walter (deceased), Martha and Aaron.

John R. Herr, of this sketch, early displayed a taste for the farming life in which he has been so successful. As soon as he finished his educational course in the common schools of his district he began operating a farm, prospering yearly, so that although he began with limited means he is now the fortunate owner of a fine 100-acre farm in Providence township, which is supplied with excellent buildings and conveniences. In politics he is identified with the Republican party. Both he and family belong to the Mennonite Church.

Mr. Herr was united in the bonds of marriage with Miss Mary E. Huber, a daughter of Jonas Huber and a descendant of one of the most respected families in the county. This marriage has been blessed with four children, namely: Elmer, Clarence (deceased), John and Ira C. Mr. Herr stands as one of the honorable and upright citizens of Providence township, reliable in business, consistent in religion and devoted to home and family.

FREDERICK H. BRANDT. About a half century ago, or in 1852, one of the many German emigrants who left the Fatherland to seek a new home in America was Peter Brandt. He was born in Hessen, Germany, Aug. 31, 1808, the son of Michael and Minnie (Klick) Brandt. Michael Brandt was a farmer and linen weaver by occupation and died in 1813 at the age of forty years, leaving a widow and a family of small children. The widow survived many years, dying at the age of sixty. Peter Brandt was reared in his native land and there married Mary Hartman, who was born Feb. 20, 1820, the daughter of Michael and Margaret (Freind) Hartman. Michael Hartman was by trade a weaver and died in Germany in 1840, aged sixty-three years. His widow migrated to America and died in Lancaster county in 1853, aged sixty-five years, leaving four children, Henry, George, Eva and Mary, of whom the latter, wife of Peter Brandt, is now the only survivor. When Peter Brandt came to America in 1852 he settled on Chestnut Hill, West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Pa., where he has since remained. He and his wife have been lifelong and consistent members of the Lutheran Church, and they now live in retirement with their only surviving son, Frederick H., in West Hempfield township. To Peter and Mary Brandt were born two sons, Michael and Frederick H. Michael enlisted in Co. E, 70th P. V. I., in 1861 and was mortally wounded at the battle of Stone River, dying in the hospital at Nashville, Tennessee.

Frederick H. Brandt, the only surviving son, now a prominent farmer, gardener and florist of West Hempfield township, was born in Hessen, Germany, July 31, 1849, and was a child of three years when brought to America by his parents. He was reared in Lancaster township and in his early life acquired the sterling traits of industry and integrity which, combined with excellent judgment, have won for him a notable success in life.

He married Oct. 8, 1874, in Columbia, Miss Louise Stradtman, who was born in Chestnut Hill, West Hempfield township, Nov. 23, 1856, daughter of Henry and Minnie (Stube) Stradtman. Her parents were natives of Germany, but became acquainted and married in Lancaster county. Henry Stradtman was a carpenter by trade and his family consisted of the following children: Henry, a merchant of Columbia; Louise, wife of Frederick H. Brandt; Lena, wife of John Whiteroth, a farmer of Manheim township; Amelia, wife of John Harneser, a railroad clerk of Columbia; Susan, wife of Amos Auxer of Manor township; William, a printer of Lancaster; Mary, wife of George Seiple, a railroad engineer of Columbia; and Peter, of Lancaster. Henry Stradtman, the father, died in 1889, aged sixty-eight years; his wife survived until 1894, passing away at sixty-three years of age.

To Frederick H. and Louise (Stradtman) Brandt were born the following children: Henry F., who married Kate E. Miller and is engaged in farming in West Hempfield township; Emma, of Lancaster; John, a farmer; Martin, Susan, Michael, Amelia, Anna and Carl, all at home; and Frederick, deceased.

In politics Frederick H. Brandt is a Democrat. He and his family are prominent members of the Lutheran Church. He has been a farmer through life, remaining with his parents until 1888, when he purchased the home farm. Since then the parents have lived with him. He is a progressive farmer and has met with abundant success. Besides conducting a general farming business he is a "trucker" and florist and is deeply interested in these latter specialties, being a recognized authority in floriculture. His interest in business affairs extends, however, beyond his immediate occupation and he is regarded generally by the many who know him as a man of keen perception, rare judgment, and progressive ideas.

ELWOOD P. GARRETT, the genial and popular express, freight and passenger agent at Christiana, Pa., was born in Peach Bottom, Lancaster county, April 10, 1854, and is a son of Edwin and Sarah T. (Masson) Garrett.

The father was born in Goshen, Chester county, and the mother in Philadelphia, where they were married. Jan. 1, 1869, they began their residence in Christiana, where the husband was appointed the local agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, a position he held until 1895, when he resigned on account of the infirmities of advancing age. In his earlier life he was a farmer, and had a saw-mill at Peach Bottom, which he operated for five years, and then for a time had a hotel at Quarryville. After three years at that point, he had a hotel at Green Tree, which he carried on for seven years, and then for three years farmed at Steelville. From that point he came to a farm in Sadsbury township, which he cultivated until 1869, when he came to Christiana as noted above. Edwin Garrett has long been a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is a faithful and devoted Presbyterian, as is also his wife. In Bart township he was school director and justice of the peace; and supervisor in Salisbury township. He is a Democrat. He was born in November, 1821, and his wife in December, 1822. Born to this union were Edwin L., deceased; Elwood P.; Emma L., who is the widow of Charles Senior, and lives in Reading, Pa. Nathan Garrett was the paternal grandfather of Elwood P.

The wedding ceremonies of Elwood P. Garrett and Maggie B. Miller were celebrated Nov. 7, 1873, in Middletown. Born to this happy union were the following, Edwin L., Charles M., Raymond P. and Helen B. Mrs. Miller, who was born in Middletown, died in February, 1896, at the age of thirty-eight years, leaving behind her precious memories as a devoted wife and mother. She was a daughter of Harry and Catherine Miller. Her father was born in Dauphin county, and her mother in New Holland.

Elwood P. Garrett began the carpenter trade, and served an apprenticeship at it in Lancaster from 1871 to 1873, when he engaged in a planing mill in Middletown, Dauphin county, and worked there eight years. In September, 1881, he came to Christiana and was employed in a warehouse until 1895, that year being appointed as the local agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and it is not too much to say that to the present time the arduous and complicated duties of his position have been discharged entirely to the satisfaction not only of the road but also to the comfort and welfare of the general public, who find in him a most accommodating and courteous official.

Mr. Garrett belongs to the I. O. O. F. at Atglen, and to the Knights of the Golden Eagle of Christiana. He is a member of the Methodist Church, as was also his lamented wife. In politics he takes strong Prohibition ground, and generally is a man of high character and lofty principles.

ABRAHAM PELEN, one of the leading railroad men residing in Columbia, Pa., shows in his successful career what can be accomplished through individual effort. From the age of eleven years he has been dependent upon his own resources, and, being industrious, enterprising and ambitious, he has met with well-deserved success.

Mr. Pelen was born in Columbia, June 10, 1860, a son of Henry and Hannah P. (Free) Pelen, the former a native of Strasburg, Lancaster county, the latter of Chester county, Pa. His paternal grandfather, Chaney Pelen, spent his entire life in Strasburg. At an early day Henry Pelen removed to Columbia, where he made his home until 1875, and then went to Harrisburg, Pa., residing there until called from this life in July, 1896, at the age of seventy-five years. During his earlier years he was an engineer on the old State road, and on leaving the employ of the company, he engaged in the grocery business, first in Columbia and later in Harrisburg. His wife died in the latter city in January, 1900, at the age of seventy-five. Both were earnest members of the United Brethren Church, and were highly respected and esteemed by all who knew them. Their children were: Chaney, Gustave and Martha J., all deceased; Anna, wife of Harry Sourbeer, a stone cutter, of Harrisburg; Abraham; and Harry, a painter of Harrisburg.

On starting out in life for himself at the age of eleven years, Abraham Pelen worked at anything which he could find to do until Oct. 20, 1879, when he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad as brakeman. Five years later he was made flagman, in which capacity he served for two years, was fireman eight years and six months, and on May 11, 1892, was promoted to engineer, in which capacity he is now employed.

Mr. Pelen was married in Columbia in February, 1884, to Miss Minnie Neiman, and to them were born two children, Ivy M. and John N. Mrs. Pelen was born in Columbia, and died in that city Dec. 9, 1898, at the age of thirty-three years. Her father served as first sergeant in the war of the Rebellion under Capt. Fisher. He came to Columbia in 1855 and was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as engineer until his death, Feb. 16, 1873, when he was thirty-seven years of age. He left four children, namely: Minnie, deceased wife of Mr. Pelen; Sarah, wife of F. C. Brink, an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad and a resident of Philadelphia; Charles, deceased; and Effie, wife of W. S. Broomal, an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad and a resident of Harrisburg. The mother afterward married William Collins, who still resides in Harrisburg, but she died Jan. 9, 1896, at the age of fifty-three years. By this union there were three children: Walter B., a printer, of Columbia; A. May, a resident of Philadelphia; and Maud E., a resident of Harrisburg.

Mr. Pelen is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and a supporter of the Republican party. He is quite a popular and influential man, and his genial, pleasant manner makes him many friends among all classes of citizens.

MRS. MARY A. (BARD) BUCH was born in Ephrata township, Lancaster county, a daughter of George and Catherine (Weidler) Bard, of Lancaster county, both of whom have passed away, and their ashes are reposing in the Lancaster cemetery. George Bard was a farmer in his earlier life, and in 1856 engaged in a mercantile business with his son for four years, when he retired. He died in 1873, at the age of sixty-five years, his wife dying in 1860, at the age of forty-six. They had the following children: Reuben W., a retired merchant of Lincoln, Pa.; Mary A.; Susan, who died young; and Kraybill, deceased.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Buch were George and Elizabeth (Swope) Bard, both of Lancaster county, where they led a farming life. Philip Bard, her great-grandfather, was born in Hesse, Germany, and was an early settler in Lancaster county. John and Susan (Gonter) Weidler, her mother's people, were farming people of Lancaster county.

In August, 1862, in Lancaster, Miss Mary A. Bard was married to the late Jonathan B. Buch, by whom she became the mother of four children, as follows: Ada, wife of George W. Hoffer, of Elizabethtown; Kate, who married Simon A. Rutt, a West Donegal farmer; Laura E., wife of H. H. Nissley, of Elizabethtown; and Bard, a machinist in Philadelphia. She is kind-hearted and charitable, and is greatly beloved by those who know her best.

SHERIDAN D. FISHER, a well-known engineer in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and a highly respected citizen of Columbia, Pa., was born in that city, June 5, 1866, a son of David R. and Margaret J. (Welsh) Fisher, also natives of Lancaster county, the former born in Mt. Joy, the latter in Columbia.

The father, David R., was only two years old when, in 1842, he came to Columbia with his parents, George and Anna (Strickler) Fisher, of Mt. Joy, who died in Columbia. The grandfather had previously engaged in farming, but in Columbia he conducted a tavern and engaged in the manufacture of cigars. His children were Harriet, wife of Lawrence Balser, of Minnesota; George and Henry, both soldiers in the Civil war; Christian; Anna, wife of Henry Mann; Elizabeth, wife of a Mr. Harris; Mary; Sarah, widow of Daniel Chaffant and a resident of Columbia, Pa.; Reuben; John, a cigar manufacturer of York, Pa.; and David R., father of Sheridan D. All are now deceased with the exception of Harriet, Sarah and John.

David R. Fisher grew to manhood in Columbia, and there he was married in 1864 to Margaret J. Welsh, a daughter of David and Barbara (Heck) Welsh. Her father was born in Columbia, in August, 1822, and continued to make his home there until 1898, since which time he has lived retired with a son in Philadelphia. By occupation he was a car maker, and is a member of the United Brethren Church, to which his wife also belonged. She was born in York county, Pa., and died in Columbia, in May, 1863, at the age of thirty-six years. Mrs. Fisher was the oldest of their children, the others being: James, deceased; Samuel, an engineer in the Susquehanna Rolling Mill at Columbia; David, a railroad conductor of Harrisburg; John, a switchman of Philadelphia; Scott and Benjamin, who are employed in the rolling mill at Columbia; William, station agent on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Spring Mill, Pa. The maternal great-grandparents of Sheridan D. Fisher were Henry and Jane Welsh, who died in Columbia.

In early life David R. Fisher worked in a furnace, but when the Civil war broke out he laid aside all personal interests to enter the service of his country, enlisting first in 1861 for six months, under Col. Welsh, and on the expiration of that time re-enlisting for three years or during the war in the 20th Pa. Cav. Fortunately he was never wounded, and when the war ended was honorably discharged, July 22, 1865. Returning to his home in Columbia, he was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, first as brakeman and later as baggage-master, and for the last twelve years of his life was switchman. He was discharging the duties of that position when killed, Dec. 21, 1888, at the age of forty-eight years. He was a consistent and faithful member of the United Brethren Church, and an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Improved Order of Red Men. In all the relations of life he was found true to every trust reposed in him, and merited and received the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens in a marked degree. His estimable wife, who was born Feb. 25, 1846, is still living and makes her home with Sheridan D., their oldest child. The other children are: Mary, at home; Anna, wife of Harry Shank, fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad and a resident of Columbia; and Charles, a resident of Philadelphia.

Sheridan D. Fisher was reared and educated in Columbia, and there he was married, Jan. 20, 1887, to Araminta Frey, by whom he has had five children: Vernetta F., deceased; William R.; Greta; Cleon H.; and Amy E. Mrs. Fisher was born in Danville, Pa., Aug. 10, 1865, a daughter of Franklin and Amanda (Constant) Frey. Her father was a native of York county, Pa., born Oct. 10, 1840, and a son of one of the Freys of Freysville, that county, where the grandfather engaged in farming throughout his life. Her mother was born in Danville, Aug. 15, 1846, a daughter of Ephraim Constant, who married a Miss Thompson, farming people and lifelong residents of that place. Mrs. Fisher's parents came to Columbia, in 1874, and here they still reside. The father was formerly employed as filler in a furnace, but is now connected with the rolling mill. Both he and his wife are earnest members of the United Brethren Church. Their children are: Araminta, now Mrs. Fisher; Coleman H., a flagman of Columbia; Alford C., a brakeman of that place; Maggie L., wife of Jacob Buck, a flagman of Columbia; William H., who is engaged in the rolling mill of that place; and Charles W., deceased.

At the age of sixteen years Mr. Fisher commenced work in the rolling mill, where he was employed for three years, and then entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman. Three years later he accepted a position as fireman, and in April, 1900, was promoted to engineer, in which capacity he is now serving the road. He is an active member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, No. 252; the Relief Association; the Knights of the Maccabees; and the United Brethren Church. In his political views he is a Republican and gives his support to all measures which he believes will prove of public benefit.

JACOB K. KELLER. Among the prosperous young farmers of Lancaster county, Pa., is Jacob K. Keller, who since 1890 has been engaged in farming his present property in Ephrata township, and since 1891 has conducted a large and successful dairy in connection with it.

The Keller family is of German origin, and grandfather Jacob Keller became a prominent and wealthy agriculturist of Ephrata township, was one of the pillars of the German Baptist Church, and reared his large family in this belief. George Keller, the father of Jacob K. Keller, was an honest and honorable citizen, a successful farmer, a consistent member of the German Baptist Church and one of the substantial men of the township. He married Mary Keller in 1843, and they became the parents of eleven children: Edward, David, George and James, deceased; Elizabeth, the wife of Eben Eberly, of Lincoln, Pa.; Levi, a farmer of Morgantown, Pa.; Mary, the wife of Christian Brubaker, of Pineville, Pa.; Adam, a retired farmer of Ephrata borough; Israel, a successful farmer of Springville, Pa.; Priscilla, the wife of Levi Snyder; and Jacob K., the subject of this biography.

Jacob K. Keller was born Feb. 20, 1869, the youngest son of the late George and Mary Keller, and was reared on a farm, choosing agriculture as his life profession. His education was acquired in the excellent schools of his district, where he was an apt pupil, and soon after completing his course he engaged in his selected work, succeeding from the beginning. The fine farm of 100 acres which Mr. Keller owns and occupies, is located one mile north of the borough of Ephrata, he purchased it in 1890 and in the following year he opened up a dairy business, his well placed land being especially desirable for this enterprise. Not only has Mr. Keller a well cultivated farm, but his handsome dwelling and well kept buildings attest his good management and show evidences of prosperity.

Jacob K. Keller was married Jan. 6, 1889, to Kate, the estimable daughter of Reuben and Matilda (Baling) Witters, of Ephrata township, Germans by descent and prominent in the German Baptist congregation. To Mr. and Mrs. Keller have been born two interesting children: Tillie May, born Jan. 10, 1890; and Harry, March 31, 1894.

In politics, Mr. Keller is a staunch Republican, but he places good citizenship above politics and is interested in any movement which promises benefit to his section of the country. Both he and his wife are devoted members of the German Baptist Church where they are highly valued, and through the township Mr. Keller is justly regarded as one of the representative men, socially, politically and commercially.

JOHN ELSWORTH IRWIN, proprietor of the "Ironville Hotel" in West Hempfield township, was born in Kinderhook, in the same township, Lancaster county, Feb. 27, 1862, and is the only son of Samuel and Lizzie (Minnick) Irwin, also natives of West Hempfield township.

Samuel Irwin was a blacksmith by trade and on enlisting for the Civil war was employed as such by the government, was sent West and was never again heard from. Mrs. Lizzie (Minnick) Irwin, who was born in 1839, was subsequently married to George Adams, who was also a blacksmith and lived in Akron, Lancaster county, and to this union have been born four children, viz.: Henry, a cigar maker in Akron, Pa.; Minnie, wife of Benjamin Lewis, a cigar packer at Effort, Pa.; Susan, now the wife of a Mr. Jacobs, a cigarmaker at Akron; and Agnes, who has been twice married and is now a resident of New Jersey. The mother of this family now lives in Denver, Pa., and is a devout member of the M. E. Church.

The paternal grandparents of John E. Irwin were James and Margaret (McCorkle) Irwin, of Chester county, Pa., but early settlers in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, where James Irwin followed his trade of blacksmith until the end of his days; the maternal grandparents were Henry and Lizzie Minnick, of West Hempfield township.

John Elsworth Irwin was reared by an uncle, Abraham H. Gram, from the age of four months until thirteen years old, and up to this age lived on his uncle's farm; later he lived for three years with other farmers, but returned to his uncle Gram and continued to work for him until the latter's death in August, 1884, when he took entire charge. Abraham H. Gram first engaged in hotelkeeping at Silverspring, this county, conducted his place one year, and then located in Mountville, and conducted the "Black Bear Hotel" for six years, when the estate was settled up, and John E. Irwin came to his present stand in Ironville, which was erected by Joseph Foreman in 1873. In the meantime Mr. Irwin has also been a musician of more than local reputation, and has been a teacher of the violin since eighteen years of age, still giving private lessons, but in 1898 practically withdrew from the profession as a general teacher for all comers.

On Nov. 7, 1886, John Elsworth Irwin married, in Lincoln, Lancaster county, Miss Anna Weidman, who has borne him four children, John W., Harry W., Mamie W. and Esther W. Mrs. Anna (Weidman) Irwin was born in East Cocalico township, Lancaster county, March 27, 1860, and is a daughter of Henry and Mary (Burkholder) Weidman, of Clay township, where the father was a farmer and died in July, 1891, when seventy-four years old; his wife, born in 1825, still lives. Their children were seven in number and in order of birth were named: Samuel, who lives in Reamstown, and is a cabinetmaker; Lavinia, who married and is deceased; Jacob, also deceased; Henry, a farmer in Reamstown; Anna; Emma, wife of Frank Myers, a farmer of Rockville; and Lemuel, a farmer of Reamstown. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Irwin was John Weidman, of Lancaster county, who died in 1899; the maternal grandfather was Jacob Burkholder, an undertaker.

Fraternally, John E. Irwin is a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, and politically is a Republican. As a hotel man he is popular and widely known and, being yet a young man, is full of joviality and genial good nature, which peculiarly adapt him to his calling. Having been in the business almost from boyhood, he is acquainted with its every detail, and it is safe to say that the traveler who needs accommodation a second time at Ironville, makes it a point to secure his room at Mr. Irwin's hotel.

FREDERICK ADAMS. For twenty years Mr. Adams has been a faithful and trusted servant of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, having entered the service of that corporation in 1880 as a brakeman. He was made a fireman two and a half years later, and in 1892 was promoted to position of engineer. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and as a citizen is held in high esteem. He is a Democrat in politics, and although not himself a church member, his family are connected with St. John's Lutheran Church. He married Miss Caroline Bupp, Feb. 16, 1886, and their marriage has been blessed with nine children: Nettie, Barbara, John, Carrie, Marguerite, Fred, Nellie, and twins, born in 1900.

Frederick Adams was born in Columbia, Aug. 11, 1864, and like many of Columbia's public-spirited and valued citizens is of German lineage. His grandfather was the proprietor of an inn in Germany, and died in his native land. His father, John M., came to America when a young man of twenty-one, to avoid military service, for which he had been drafted. He first settled in Baltimore, but after a few years removed to Columbia, where he worked as a foundryman and a stevedore along the canal. Frederick Adams also began his life of hard but honorable toil in a foundry, at the early age of eleven years, five years later finding employment unloading coal and still later working two years upon a farm. Mr. Adams, Sr., died in December, 1891, after completing his sixty-first year. His wife was Anna Bates, who, like himself, was a native of Germany.

Her father died there, and she and her mother crossed the ocean together. They found a home in Columbia, and both are now deceased, Mrs. John M. Adams having died July 23, 1872, aged thirty-nine years. Both were members of the Lutheran Church.

Frederick Adams was his parents' sixth child and one of a family of ten. The others were named Maggie, Barbara, Anna, Grace, Sally, John, Nellie, Elizabeth and Lydia. Maggie married Lewis Bates, a retired merchant, and died in 1874. Barbara is the wife of Benjamin F. Hogentogler, a machinist. Anna married Jerry McCracken, a cigar dealer. Grace, deceased, was the wife of Frank Stucker. Sally became Mrs. William Bell, of Columbia, her husband being a railway conductor. Nellie married George McKinney, a car inspector of that place. John, Elizabeth and Lydia died in childhood.

Mrs. Adams is a daughter of William and Caroline (Heaffner) Bupp, and was born in Marietta, Pa., Nov. 19, 1866. Both her parents were of German birth, although they were married at Marietta. Her father died in 1880 and her mother in 1874. They were members of the German Lutheran Church. She has one sister, Margaret, whose husband, Henry Rettew, is a puddler. They, too, reside in Columbia.

GEORGE HEIM, JR., a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, residing in Columbia, Lancaster county, was born in that place, and is a son of George Heim, who is now a retired citizen of Columbia.

George Heim, Sr., was born Feb. 13, 1832, in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, where his parents, Adam and Catherine (Yonhann) Heim, spent their entire lives. In his younger days the father followed the shoemaker's trade and later worked as a lumberman. He died in 1857, aged seventy-five years. Their children were: Peter, who died in Germany; John, a shoemaker of York, Pa.; Leonard, a millwright of Germany; George; and Catherine, who married George Reitsel, a miller, and died in Germany. During his boyhood George Heim attended school until fourteen years old, and then commenced learning the shoemaker's trade, which he has made his life work. On Dec. 23, 1852, he came to America, and first located in East Prospect, York Co., Pa., where he followed his chosen occupation for four years, but since then his home has been in Columbia. There he has met with success, and is now quite well-to-do, being able to lay aside active labor. For the last five years he has lived practically retired, though he does a little work now and then. For twelve years he has been a director of the St. Joseph's Building Association, and he is also a director of the Home Building & Loan Association, which was founded in 1899. The Democratic party finds in him a stanch supporter of its principles, and he is an active member of Salem German Lutheran Church.

On May 29, 1856, in Columbia, Mr. Heim married Miss Christina Gussler, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, and a daughter of George Gussler, a mason by trade, who spent his entire life in that country. Mrs. Heim came to America in 1854, and died Feb. 9, 1895, at the age of sixty-four years. She left four children, namely: George; John, an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a resident of Columbia, who married Lizzie Ambrose and has three children, Edgar, Harry and Walter; Charles, a prospector of York county, Pa., who married Emma Leber; Lillie, the wife of Edwin Marley, a bricklayer of Columbia, who has two children, George and May.

George Heim, Jr., received his education in the public schools of his native town, where he has passed all his life with the exception of two years spent on the sea and in Baltimore, Md., whither he went at the age of sixteen. When but twelve he entered a slate mantel works in Columbia, finishing that trade in Philadelphia, and he was thus employed about four years in all. On Oct. 7, 1880, Mr. Heim entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, worked up as brakeman and flagman, and finally, on Feb. 28, 1899, received promotion to his present position. Mr. Heim is a highly esteemed citizen of the town in which he resides, respected for his industry and integrity. He is identified with the German Lutheran Church, and, in politics, with the Democratic party. Mr. Heim is a member of the Pennsylvania Relief.

On Sept. 24, 1875, George Heim married in Philadelphia, Pa., Miss Ella M. Carter, who was born Dec. 25, 1855, near Haddonfield, N. J., one of the seven children of George Carter. She was reared by an aunt. Six children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Heim, namely: Rosa B., who married Alva Hogentogler, foreman in a silk mill; Charles B., at home; Isabella, deceased; Katie M., deceased; Clara L. and Lillian S., at home.

GEORGE ROTH REICH, M. D., a highly educated and rising young physician of Marietta, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born Nov. 30, 1877, and is a son of George W. and Ella (Roth) Reich, of German extraction.

Dr. Reich attended public school in Marietta until seventeen years of age, and then attended Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster for two years. His preparatory work in medicine was taken at the University of Pennsylvania, which he attended one year, and then he entered the Hahnemann Medical College at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated May 17, 1900. He at once settled down to practice in his native borough, where his many friends predict for him a remunerative and successful professional career.

Dr. Reich married in Philadelphia in March, 1897, Miss Mary Miller, who has borne him one child, Mary. Mrs. Mary (Miller) Reich was born in Marietta and is a daughter of John S. Miller, a native of East Donegal township, Lancaster county, Pa. The Doctor and his wife are members of the Episcopal Church, and socially are great favorites with the better class of citizens in Marietta. In politics the Doctor is a Republican.

FRANK G. GIRFIN. For three generations the Girfins have been thrifty and prosperous blacksmiths of Pennsylvania. The grandfather of Frank G., Frederick Girfin, came to America in an early day in search of a home, then returned for his wife, Catherine (Hobbart), and their family, and settled in Newport, where for many years he followed blacksmithing.

Christian F. Girfin, the father of Frank G., was born in Germany, on Nov. 29, 1825. He acquired the blacksmith trade. In his native land he married Elizabeth Greneman, who was born Aug. 26, 1831, daughter of Christian and Catherine (Hossman) Greneman, lifelong farmers in Germany. In 1858 Christian F. Girfin migrated with his family to America. He leased a blacksmith shop which stood on the site of the shop in Locust Grove, now occupied by his son, Frank G., and this shop he continued to operate successfully until his death, which occurred Feb. 21, 1891. In politics he was a Republican and he and his wife were active members of the Lutheran Church. The wife still survives, and now resides with her son Frank G. To Christian F. and Elizabeth Girfin were born the following children: Fred, who married Eliza McGinn and is a blacksmith at Columbia; Henry, who married Mary Groff and is also a blacksmith at Columbia; Charles and William, both deceased; Anna, twin sister of William, wife of Andrew Dershermer, a farmer of West Hempfield township; Sarah E., wife of John Heidloff, a farmer of Hambright, Pa.; and Frank G.

Frank G. Girfin was born Jan. 13, 1869, in his present home. When a boy of thirteen years he entered his father's blacksmith shop as an apprentice and was soon able to put on from thirty-five to forty horse-shoes a day. He remained steadily in this shop until his father's death, nine years later, then took charge of it and has ever since operated the same most successfully. He is recognized as one of the active and prosperous young business men of West Hempfield township, and is most highly respected. In politics he is a Republican and in religious faith he is associated with the Lutheran Church. Among the fraternal orders he holds membership with the I. O. O. F. and the Red Men.

Mr. Girfin married in June, 1892, at Columbia, Miss Lena Newmyer, who was born in Germany in 1870, the daughter of Frederick and Magdelina (Sanders) Newmyer and the granddaughter of George and Elizabeth Newmyer. In 1871, the father, Frederick Newmyer, migrated to America with his family and settled in Columbia, where he died three years later, aged thirty-eight years. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. The widow subsequently married for her second husband Peter Smith, a farmer of West Hempfield township. To Frederick and Magdelina Newmyer were born three children: Catherine, deceased wife of Joseph Brown; Lena, wife of Mr. Girfin; and Christina, wife of Lewis Fritz, a bricklayer of Lancaster. The family of Frank G. and Lena Girfin consists of four children, namely: Sadie E., Anna M., Henry W. and Elizabeth G.

JOSEPH DETZ is a conductor in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and has been one of their honored and trusted servants for more than thirty years. He is a son of John G. and Rachel E. Detz.

Joseph Detz was born in Manor township, Oct. 29, 1849, and until he was ten years old lived at home with his parents. He then went to work upon a neighboring farm during three summers, spending his winters at home and attending school. At the age of thirteen he entered a store at Safe Harbor and there remained as clerk for two years. In 1865 he came to Columbia, and found employment in the rake factory. Two years later he began work in the rolling mill of the railroad company. Before long he was placed in charge of the company's round house, and after two years was given the position of passenger brakeman. His next promotion was to the post of baggage master, and after twenty years there he was appointed conductor in the passenger service. To the discharge of his duties he brings a quick intelligence, a ripe experience and tried fidelity. No emergency finds him unprepared, and his urbanity of manner has won for him many friends. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, a Republican in politics, and an earnest member of the Presbyterian Church. Of a kindly sympathetic nature, and with a heart quick to respond to a call for help, it is not surprising that he is best loved by those who know him best.

The maiden name of his wife, to whom he was united May 4, 1872, was Mary C. Lash. She was born in Reading, her father, Henry W. Lash, being a successful and respected farmer of Berks county, and by trade a tailor. During the last ten years of his life he filled the office of tipstaff in the courts. He died in March, 1893, after reaching the age of sixty-five years. His father, who spelled his name Lasch, was born in Germany, but crossed the ocean and settled at Reading. The mother of Mrs. Detz was Susanna Keller. She was a daughter of George and Catherine (Schlichter) Keller, he being a Berks county farmer. She and her husband were members of the Universalist Church, and in his younger days Mr. Keller was a valued member of the choir. She was born April 18, 1827, and is still living, her home being in Philadelphia. Mrs. Detz is the second of their family of nine children, the others, in order of birth, being: Alwilda, now Mrs.

John H. Rooth, of Reading; Frank M., of Philadelphia, a bachelor; Sarah, also unmarried and living in the same city; Anna, wife of W. H. Tobias of Reading; Harry, whose home is in Pottstown; Heister K., a grocer of Reading; Howard, deceased; and Effie, who became the wife of Dr. Walter Richmond, a dentist of Newark, New Jersey.

Mr. and Mrs. Detz have a daughter and a son, Anna E. and Vernon B., both of whom are unmarried and live with their parents.

CHRISTIAN B. HUBER, one of the leading farmers and esteemed citizens of Providence township, was born there April 26, 1853, a son of Henry S. and Fannie (Barr) Huber, both now deceased.

Henry S. Huber followed an agricultural life in Providence township. He was born Dec. 15, 1815, son of Christian Huber, and died April 9, 1882. Throughout life he was a consistent member of the Mennonite Church, following its teachings in his daily life. He was conscientiously attached to the principles of the Republican party. The children of Henry S. and Fannie Huber were as follows: Christian, deceased; Annie, wife of Amos Groff, of Columbia; Elam B., a shoemaker in Providence township; Susan, wife of Jacob Bryson, of Columbia; Christian B.; and Fannie.

Christian B. Huber was reared on the farm and early became interested in agricultural work, to such an extent that he has followed that line through life, being one of the successful and progressive farmers of Providence township. He received his education in the public schools, and after his school days were over, like many others in his vicinity, was obliged to make his own way in the world. His industry and economy soon enabled him to begin accumulating, and he is now the owner of one of the valuable farms of his part of Lancaster county, situated within a half mile of the pleasant village of New Providence. He has a handsome dwelling and other modern improvements, making his place an ideal country home.

Mr. Huber was married March 22, 1883, to Miss Caroline Eckerman, born July 4, 1854, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Eckerman, and this marriage has been blessed with one daughter, Miss Ida Viola, a most estimable young lady.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Huber descend from honorable families of Lancaster county, and they command the respect and esteem of the community in which they have their home. Mr. Huber is known to his neighbors as a man of sterling integrity and of kind and charitable disposition. Like his father he supports the Republican party, but he does not seek political preferment.

WILLIAM CORNELIUS, a cigar manufacturer of Lancaster, Pa., and one of the leading business men of that city, was born in New Berlin, Union Co., Pa., July 4, 1852, son of William and Elizabeth (Bemfor) Cornelius, he a native of Union county, and she of Snyder county.

William Cornelius, Sr., was born in 1814, and his wife was born in 1818. They now reside in New Berlin, Snyder Co., Pa., where he is a retired shoemaker. Both are consistent members of the M. E. Church, and both are in possession of all their faculties to a remarkable degree. The following family was born to their union: Harriet, married Joseph Taper, an Illinois farmer; Jeremiah, a shoe manufacturer and merchant of Catawissa, Columbia Co., Pa.; Emma, married J. Hawk, retired, of New Columbia, Pa.; William Cornelius; Joseph, a shoemaker of Catawissa, Pa.; George, who died in Philadelphia.

The paternal grandparents were James W. and Elizabeth Cornelius, of the State of Pennsylvania. James W. Cornelius was a shoemaker, and both he and his wife died in New Berlin, Pa. The maternal grandparents were Frederick and Mary Bemfor, of Snyder county, Pa., where the former was a farmer, but died in St. Joseph county, Mich., June 9, 1878, at the age of ninety years, eight months and twenty-eight days. These grandparents left seventeen children, 106 grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

William Cornelius was reared upon a farm until he reached the age of eighteen, when he removed to Lancaster, and learned the trade of cigar making, in 1876 embarking in this line of business for himself, and continuing it with marked success, his output being on an average of 100,000 cigars, none but the finest grades being manufactured. Some of his special brands are "Try Me" and "Little Dandy." Fraternally, he is a member of K. of P., No. 88, and Uniform Rank K. of P. In religious matters, he is a member of the M. E. Church. Mr. Cornelius has always taken an active part in politics, voting and supporting the Republican ticket, although he has never consented to hold office, believing he can do more good in his capacity of a private citizen. His success is the result of his thrift, energy and thorough knowledge of his business, and the future offers still brighter prospects.

On April 29, 1874, when not considering the season of the year there were nine inches of snow upon the pavements of Lancaster, Mr. Cornelius married Flora E. Fortney, a native of Lancaster, Pa., daughter of George and Mary (Barclipp) Fortney, of Dauphin county, Pa. George Fortney was a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad from 1865 to his death, on July 23, 1900. His body was interred in Woodward Hill cemetery. During the Civil war, Mr. Fortney served for three years under Capt. Edgerly. At the time of his death, Mr. Fortney had been in the service of the railroad for thirty-five years, and gave universal satisfaction. His wife, who was born April 9, 1837, now resides in Lancaster. She is a consistent member of the M. E. Church, as was her husband. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Fortney were: Lizzie, who married Charles Villa, of Lancaster; and Flora E., Mrs. Cornelius. The grandparents of Mrs. Cornelius on her father's side were Henry and Margaret Fortney, farmers of Dauphin county, Pa., both most estimable people. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius have one child, George C., who graduated from the city high school, after which he learned the trade of cutter and tailor. After learning his trade, his father realized that there was room in his growing business for the energies and capabilities of his son, and since then George has been an assistant in the cigar business, both father and son bending their energies toward the enlarging of their field of action, and the betterment of their product, with the result that their trade is a very enviable one and constantly increasing. Mr. Cornelius is not only well known as a business man and a leader in politics, but also for his public-spirited and pleasant, frank manner, which win him many friends, and make it possible for him to forward many plans for the betterment of the city's interests and the general welfare of the community.

REV. S. CLEMENT BURGER, the energetic and beloved rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, the latest addition to the Roman Catholic Churches in Lancaster, is the youngest brother of Prof. Chris Burger, who is a recognized leader in musical circles in Lancaster.

Christian J. Burger, his father, came from Germany to the United States in 1848, and settled in Reading, where he died in 1883. He married Annetta Kaul, a sister of the Very Rev. Anthony F. Kaul, of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Lancaster, and to this union came six sons, four of whom survive: Dr. A. J. Burger, who is now the coroner of Brooklyn; Dr. Francis J., also of Brooklyn; Rev. Clement S.; and Prof. Chris.

Rev. Father Burger was born in Reading Jan. 17, 1871, and was educated in the parochial schools of that city, and for one year in St. Anthony's parochial school of Lancaster. His collegiate course was taken at Notre Dame University, Indiana, graduating in June, 1891, and he pursued his theological course at Mt. St. Mary's, Emmitsburg. On May 10, 1895, he was ordained at Harrisburg, in St. Patrick's Pro-Cathedral, by the Rt. Rev. Thomas McGovern, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Harrisburg, Pa., and he was at once appointed assistant to his uncle, Very Rev. Anthony F. Kaul, at St. Anthony's Church, Lancaster, remaining there until Jan. 1, 1899, when he was sent to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, at New Oxford, Adams Co., Pennsylvania.

On Nov. 1, 1900, Father Burger was sent by the Rt. Rev. John W. Shanahan, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Harrisburg, Pa., to St. Mary's Church, Middletown, Pa. A few weeks later, on Nov. 20, he was ordered to Lancaster, to begin the work of building up a new parish, that of the Sacred Heart.

So energetically did he pursue the work that the corner stone of the school and chapel building was laid with imposing ceremonies, on May 26, 1901, and the dedication took place Sept. 22, 1901. Both the ceremonies were held by the Rt. Rev. John W. Shanahan, D. D. The school and chapel are located at the southern end of the plat of ground purchased for the congregation at the corner of West Walnut and Nevin streets, and it will prove a fine addition to that beautiful section. In the near future a handsome rectory will be erected, and the new parish promises to become large and influential, under the ministrations of Rev. Father Burger. At present the parish numbers ninety families—four hundred and fifty souls. On Sept. 8, 1902, the parochial school was opened under the direction of two sisters of the Holy Cross from Notre Dame, Indiana. The enrollment at the opening numbered fifty scholars.

JOHN JONES WATSON, undertaker and funeral director, Lancaster, is one of the most prominent men in that line in Lancaster county.

Mr. Watson is descended from old and patriotic stock, Gen. Sullivan of Revolutionary fame, having been his great-uncle on his father's side. Mr. Watson's great-grandfather came from Glasgow, Scotland, and, with two brothers settled in Philadelphia. He owned part of the land on which Germantown now stands.

Benjamin Franklin Watson, the grandfather, a tailor by trade, was born in Philadelphia, removed to Lancaster county, and became the owner of two farms in Drumore township, where he died in 1842, aged eighty-five years. In this connection it is of peculiar interest to note that our subject belongs to a long-lived family, his uncle William having died at the age of eighty-seven years, another ancestor at ninety-two, another at ninety-six, another at ninety, and his maternal grandfather at ninety-eight.

Hiram Watson, father of John Jones, was the youngest of twelve children. He married Lydia Ann Jones, daughter of John Jones, who was foreman of Martic Forge, and also kept the old "Blue Bell" tavern in Drumore. John Jones died at the age of ninety-eight. To Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Watson were born twelve children, of whom the following named are living: John Jones, our subject, of Lancaster; Hannah Martha, of Philadelphia; Benjamin Franklin, who has for over thirty years been in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for which he is now a baggage master; William, who was superintendent of the painting department of the Wilmington & Northern Railroad, but is now keeping hotel in Wilmington; Clayton M., of Wilmington, who succeeded his brother William as superintendent of painting for the Wilmington & Northern Railroad; Mary, wife of William Maxwell, manager of the old Pennock Iron Works in Coatesville; Annie, wife of Samuel Forbes, of Philadelphia; Wesley, a telegrapher, for years past in the Adams Express service at Philadelphia; and Milton A., an upholsterer of West Chester.

John Jones Watson was born in the old "Blue Bell," Drumore, on Jan. 28, 1837, and, after receiving the education afforded by the public schools of his district, went to cabinet making and undertaking in Conestoga Center, serving three years at the business. He then removed to Coatesville, where he carried on business for himself. Not content with what he already knew, however, he engaged an expert upholsterer to teach him that branch, employing him continuously, work or no work, until he (Mr. Watson) had mastered the business. In 1877 Mr. Watson went to West Chester, working there six years, and coming to Lancaster in 1884. After working in two of the leading undertaking establishments he started in business for himself, on East Orange street. This was in 1887. Removing from East Orange street to South Queen street, he carried on business there for one year, where the Inquirer printing office now is, and in 1891 removed to his present location, No. 114 South Queen street. He lives in the building, which is a commodious one, and has telephone connections and all conveniences. A graduate embalmer, Mr. Watson is an active member of the Lancaster County Funeral Directors Association, of which he was president for one term. Mr. Watson keeps fully abreast of the times in his business, and has by courteous treatment of his patrons and strict attention to all the details of his profession, won a substantial position in commercial circles in the city of his adoption.

Mr. Watson was married to Miss Barbara Ann Urban, daughter of the late Jacob Urban, a farmer of Conestoga Center, and this union has been blessed with four children, as follows: Lydia Ann, wife of Thomas M. Shaner, who is at the head of one of the departments of the Safety Buggy Works, of Lancaster; Emma Jane, at home; John W., an upholsterer and decorator with Hager Bros. (he designed and executed the decorations for the newly-furnished court room in Lancaster); and Dr. Walter W., a graduate of the Lancaster high school, of the College of Pharmacy, and of the Medico-Chirurgical Institution (where he won a gold medal for the practice of medicine), and now resident physician in Blockely Almshouse, Philadelphia. Our subject has been prominent in the societies, having belonged, in his time, to seventeen secret societies, in eleven of which he was a past officer; he has been an Odd Fellow for forty-three years, and a Mason for thirty-two years, being a past master by merit. In religion he is a consistent member of St. Paul's M. E. Church.

REUBEN G. KAUFFMAN. Among the progressive and thorough farmers of East Hempfield township is Reuben G. Kauffman, a worthy representative of one of the old and respected families of Lancaster county.

Reuben G. Kauffman was born March 22, 1867, on the old family homestead, one and one-half miles south of Petersburg, a son of Benjamin and Anna (Kreider) Kauffman, who were well and favorably known in that locality, removing thence to the farm in East Hempfield township upon which Reuben G. Kauffman now lives, when the latter was ten years old. He had all the advantages of the district school, and remained at home, engaged in agricultural pursuits, after he was twenty-two years old engaging in farming upon his own account, remaining on his father's land, where he carries on general farming very successfully.

In 1899 Mr. Kauffman purchased the farm from his father, containing seventy-three acres, and there he has a valuable property and a most comfortable home.

Reuben G. Kauffman was married Jan. 1, 1889, to Amanda Neff, the estimable daughter of Henry Neff, of Manor township, who was born March 16, 1868, and died Jan. 12, 1891, leaving one child, Elmer N. On Oct. 3, 1896, Mr. Kauffman was married to Ellen Kraybill, daughter of Joseph Kraybill, of Mt. Joy, who was born Oct. 10, 1873. Of this union two children have been born: Kathryn and Joseph, the latter of whom died in infancy.

Understanding farming thoroughly, Mr. Kauffman has adopted modern machinery and methods, and is regarded as one of the most able agriculturists in his vicinity. He and his wife are among the most valued members of the Old Mennonite Church, the members of which are universally regarded as exhibiting in their lives the highest principles of morality and good citizenship.

PHARES P. SWARR. The earliest records of the human family tell of agricultural pursuits, and on down through the ages the tillers of the soil have been not only the most necessary, but also the most independent of men. Upon the success or failure of crops great commercial enterprises and military operations are based, and poor indeed is the State that has to call upon a richer neighbor for her food products. Fortunate are the dwellers in the great State of Pennsylvania, with her equable climate and rich soil, and no county within her borders more abundantly rewards agricultural effort than does old Lancaster.

Among the old families of the county is that of Swarr, which for almost 200 years has been identified with her farming interests, and has a number of worthy representatives in the prosperous township of East Hempfield, one of whom, Phares P. Swarr, is now cultivating a tract adjoining the old family homestead, which lies some two miles east of Landisville. The founder of the family in this locality was John Swarr, the great-grandfather of Phares P., who died in 1823, aged eighty-seven years. He was one of the early members of the Mennonite Church in his locality, and the general religious connection has ever since been with that denomination, although in later days, through marriage connections, some have become identified with the Methodist Church, and some with the Dunkards. All belong to the best class of citizens, and are so recognized by the communities in which they live.

The grandfather of Phares P. bore the name of Martin Swarr, and his son John, who died in 1886, aged sixty-eight, was the father of Phares P. He was a well-known farmer of East Hempfield and a most worthy member of the Mennonite Church. He married Elizabeth Peifer, who still survives, at an advanced age, a much beloved and respected resident of the vicinity. Seven children were born to this union: Phares P.; Martin, deceased; Hiram, a resident of Drumore township; John, of Manheim borough; Menno, of Petersburg; Reuben, of Landisville; and Elizabeth, who is the wife of David H. Gochnaur, of Petersburg. For a number of years the father of this family was prominent in the educational affairs of the township, serving efficiently on the school board.

Phares P. Swarr was born June 23, 1844, and has always resided on the farm. His education was acquired in the excellent public schools of his district, and in this locality he married, in his twenty-second year, beginning domestic life on the fine farm, consisting of 115 acres, where is one of the pleasantest and most attractive homes of the county, all the surroundings indicating thrift and prosperity, and showing how ideal the life of a farmer may be. Phares P. Swarr has been interested in almost all of the public affairs of the county, is a director in the Farmers National Bank of Lancaster, and of the Agricultural Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of which he and Johnston Miller were the organizers, and has long been a member of the school board, his influence ever being used in the direction of progress and improvement.

Phares P. Swarr was married, Oct. 19, 1865, to Amanda Minnick, a daughter of John Minnick, of Warwick township, and to this union one child was born, Ellen, the wife of Milton G. Forney, who manages the farm, Mr. Swarr now living in retirement. To Mr. and Mrs. Forney have been born five children: May, Charley, Phares, Roy and Marian. Mr. and Mrs. Swarr are valued members of the German Baptist Church, to the support of which he is a liberal contributor, and they enjoy the esteem of all.

JOHN BUTZ, the efficient and popular night baggage agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Lancaster, who resides at No. 431 East King street, that city, has been employed by this great road, continuously, for seventeen years.

John Butz, his father, was born on the Rhine, in Prussia, came to America when a young man, and for many years lived in Lancaster, where he became a property owner and was regarded as a substantial citizen. By trade he was a tanner, following that line until his death, some eighteen years ago. His wife died about sixteen years ago.

John Butz, who was an only child, was born Feb. 15, 1858, in Portsmouth, Ohio, but while he was very young his father removed to Lancaster, where John was educated in the public schools. After finishing his school course he engaged in various occupations, putting in most of his time in assisting his father in the tannery. About 1885 Mr. Butz secured employment with the Pennsylvania Railway Co., first as a repairman, and about 1891 he became assistant night baggage agent, and finally agent, which onerous position he has since filled to the comfort and satisfaction of the traveling public.

On Feb. 3, 1885, Mr. Butz was married to Miss Ada Adelaide Steinheiser, daughter of the late J. O. and Lydia Steinheiser. The former, who died Dec. 11, 1899, at the age of eighty-two years, was for eight years steward of the Lancaster county almshouse and hospital. Prior to that he had been a successful teacher, and after giving up his office at the almshouse he became a mail agent, and later had the contract for carrying the mails to and from the post office and railroad station. Mr. Steinheiser's wife, formerly Miss Lydia Swope, was a sister of the late Zuriel Swope, a prominent member of the Lancaster Bar. She died April 21, 1889, aged seventy-five years. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Butz, namely: Emma Marguerite, Edgar Owen and Lydia Grace, all of whom are at school; and the youngest, Harold Steinheiser.

Fraternally Mr. Butz is connected with Meridian Sun Commandery, No. 99, Knights of Malta; to the Pa. R. R. Relief Association; and to the Baltimore Mutual Aid Society. In politics he is a Republican. He belongs to Trinity Lutheran Church, and is much respected for his industry, intelligence and general capacity, while his genial disposition makes him many warm personal friends.

JOHN M. SHULTZ is one of the successful farmers and prominent citizens of Providence township. He was born Aug. 17, 1837, in Lampeter township, son of John and Elizabeth (Morrison) Shultz, both of whom are deceased.

John Shultz, the father of John M., was a son of John Shultz, who was born in Baden, Germany, and came at the age of seventeen years to make his home in America. He was a machinist, and was skilled in his trade. He married and became the father of the following children: John, Jacob, Elizabeth and Sarah, all of whom have passed out of life. John Shultz, the father of John M., was born June 27, 1805, and died Feb. 16, 1888. About 1828 he married Elizabeth Morrison, of Chester county, daughter of John Morrison, and this marriage was blessed with eight children: Jacob; Abraham; Mary, wife of Henry Diffenbaugh, of Lampeter township; Elizabeth, wife of John M. Grosh, of Lancaster; John M.; Sarah, widow of Peter Lyons;

Levi, of Lancaster county; and Hettie, who died young.

John M. Shultz was reared on the farm and obtained his education in the common schools of his district. He has successfully followed farming all his life, and owns a fine property, comprising 108 acres of valuable land in Providence township. He has improved his farm with handsome, convenient and modern buildings, and all of his operations are carried on in the most approved manner. Mr. Shultz understands the blacksmith's trade, and has worked at same at times. He is a man of prominence in Providence township, for the past six years has been one of the directors of the county poor farm, and has also served two terms as county auditor, performing all these duties with an eye single to the welfare of those most concerned.

On Nov. 10, 1863, Mr. Shultz was married to Miss Susan Rank, born March 17, 1845, in Salisbury township, daughter of David Rank. Her death took place Oct. 17, 1890. She was the mother of eleven children, eight of whom grew to maturity, as follows: Elizabeth, born in 1865, married to J. F. Graybill; William L., born in 1867, a farmer of Providence township; Levi, born in 1869, who resides in Lancaster City; David D., born in 1871; J. Frank, born in 1873, a farmer; James O., born Oct. 25, 1878, who is unmarried and resides at home, as do E. H., born in 1880, and Morgan, born in 1883.

The family is held in the highest esteem in Providence township, where Mr. Shultz has long been looked upon as a representative citizen.

WILLIAM FREY DILLER, son of the late Isaac Diller (whose family history and whose portrait will be found elsewhere in these Annals), is one of the most industrious men in Lancaster, as it requires industry to keep in hand the many business interests in which he is concerned. Mr. Diller, whose office is at No. 61 North Duke street, and whose residence is at No. 338 East Orange street, was born in Lancaster City, Nov. 3, 1858, and, after attending private schools of Lancaster, was graduated from Franklin and Marshall College, in 1876, graduating with honor when five months less than eighteen years old. After leaving college, and spending one year on his father's farm in the southern part of Lancaster county, Mr. Diller entered his father's hardware store, remaining there until his father bought a controlling interest in the Caledonia Furnace property of Thaddeus Stevens. William F. then became the manager of that property, consisting of 12,500 acres. Mr. Diller installed and operated two sawmills, a shinglemill, a sand rock grinding mill, and developed and worked two iron ore banks. At the end of three years his father sold his interest in the Caledonia Furnace property, and Mr. Diller then returned to Lancaster, entering actively into the hardware trade with his father and brother, having been a partner in that business even while managing the Caledonia business. At the death of the father (the founder of the house) Mr. Diller continued with his brother, the firm trading as Isaac Diller's Sons. This continued until May 20, 1899, when the hardware business was sold, and Mr. Diller then organized the Lancaster Slate Roofing Company, a concern that does a large part of all the slate roofing in Lancaster. He is also a wholesale dealer in coal, the only exclusive wholesale dealer in that commodity in the city; controls an iron ore bank in York county, employing twenty-four men, and supplying, among others, the Susquehanna Steel & Iron Company at Wrightsville; and is treasurer and general manager of the Diller Sand and Clay Company, in the formation of which he was the chief promoter. This latter company owns 400 acres in the extreme east end of Lancaster county, near Honeybrook; and Col. H. C. Demming, State Geologist and Volunteer United States Geologist, reports that it is the largest body of sand rock within his knowledge, in the world. It analyzes 98 per cent. of pure silica. They also ship clay by the carload, for steel moulding purposes, as far west as Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Mr. Diller was married, June 8, 1898, to Miss Eliza Murray Schofield, daughter of the late lamented Dr. E. Lane Schofield, and granddaughter—on her maternal side—of the late Hon. James Black, at one time the Prohibition candidate for President of the United States. Three children were born of this union, Mary Black (bearing her grandmother's maiden name), Alonzo Potter (named after Mr. Diller's lamented brother, Rev. Alonzo Potter Diller, who, with his wife and child clasped in each other's arms, went down in the Johnstown flood), and William Frey, Jr. Mr. Diller is an Episcopalian in religion, and is a vestryman in St. John's Episcopal Church, where his father was senior warden to the day of his death. Although a member of St. John's, Mr. Diller and his family still retain, in St. James' Episcopal Church, the pew that was rented by his father—then only sixteen years old—in 1839, and it has been continuously in the Diller family from that day to this. Modest and unassuming, yet full of energy and vigor, no man in Lancaster enjoys in a greater degree the esteem and confidence of his fellowmen than does William Frey Diller.

MRS. MARY MURRAY SCHOFIELD, widow of the late Dr. E. Lane Schofield, and who lives in a charming home at No. 542 West James street, just opposite the Reformed Theological Seminary, enjoys the distinction of being the daughter of the gentleman who was honored with the first nomination for the Presidency of the United States on the Prohibition ticket, her father having been the late Hon. James Black, a prominent member of the Lancaster Bar, and one of the most prominent Temperance advocates in the United States. His library of Temperance works was said to have been the finest private library of the kind in this country, if not in the world, and he was as familiar with every book in that vast library as the school children are with their every-day text books.

Mrs. Schofield is descended from Revolutionary stock on both sides—paternal and maternal. The Blacks, from whom she is a lineal descendant, came to this country from the North of Ireland, whither they had fled from Scotland because of religious persecution. They settled on an extensive land grant from the Penns, this land being located along the Susquehanna, in Union county. They were descended from a mighty Scottish clan, whose colors were green, blue and yellow. Mrs. Schofield's great-grandfather Murray (on her mother's side) was a member of the Continental Congress, and the chair he sat on in that body is still in the possession of a cousin of Mrs. Schofield living in Philadelphia. The Murrays were Scotch-Irish, and, like the Blacks, were enthusiastic Presbyterians for generations.

John Black, the grandfather of Mrs. Schofield, was a famous contractor, and built the first large brick dwelling-house ever erected in Lancaster—the largest dwelling-house in Lancaster at the time it was built, and among the largest, if not the largest, now in this city, the house being that now owned and occupied by Mrs. Louisa A. Breneman and Major B. Frank Breneman, at the southeast corner of East Orange and Lime streets. John Black built the first Croton dam in New York; built the bridge over the St. Lawrence, at Montreal; built the railroad bridge at Columbia that was burned to keep the Rebels from crossing the river into Lancaster county, at the time of the Rebel invasion of Pennsylvania; built the bridge across the Susquehanna River at York Furnace, Pa., that was swept away by a flood; built the Penn Iron Works of Lancaster, and was the first president of that company; and, in fact, was, in his day, the most widely known and successful contractor of this section. His surviving children are John, the well-known druggist of Lancaster; Reuben, a farmer of Dakota; and William, who is in the lumber business in Minnesota.

Hon. James Black (John Black's most distinguished son) was an honored member of the Lancaster Bar, and was one of the most enthusiastic and powerful advocates of the Temperance cause ever known in this country. He was, at the time of his death, the owner and developer of Black Barren Springs, a great health resort in southern Lancaster county, the waters of which are regarded as a great remedial agent; the estate is still in the possession of his heirs. James Black married Miss Eliza N. Murray, daughter of the late William Murray, who belonged to the old-time book-store firm of Judd & Murray, of North Queen street, and both of whom are well remembered by the older citizens of Lancaster. The Murrays, on coming to this country, settled in the Cumberland Valley. To this union of James Black and Eliza N. Murray, six children were born, of whom the survivors are: Mrs. Mary Murray Schofield and William Murray Black, major in the United States army and colonel of volunteers, who for three years past has had entire charge of the sanitation of Havana, and whose praises in that work have been sung by the newspapers all over the United States, and who has now been appointed engineer officer in charge of sanitation in the construction of the Panama Canal. Major Black graduated from West Point at the head of his class, and he has a son, Roger Derby Black, who entered the Military Academy at West Point in June, 1900, having been appointed by President McKinley. Hon. James Black died in 1894. His wife passed away in October, 1889.

Mrs. Schofield was born in Lancaster, and after graduating from the Girls' High School of the city attended a private school in Philadelphia, and then attended Poultney Female College, fifteen miles from Rutland, Vt. She married Dr. E. Lane Schofield June 27, 1871. The Doctor was called to his reward in November, 1894, deeply lamented by hosts of people, for he was alike popular professionally and socially. After practicing in Lancaster eight years Dr. Schofield removed with his family to the coal regions, in the northern part of Dauphin county, where he followed his profession fourteen years, and then removing to Chambersburg practiced medicine there for four years, when he laid down his labors and entered into rest. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and established a lodge in the coal regions, and no man of his years did more work for the cause of Methodism than did Dr. Schofield. By his union with Miss Black seven children were born, of whom four are living, as follows: Eliza Murray, wife of William F. Diller, of Lancaster; Miss Gertrude B., attending Miss Wheelock's School in Boston; Walter S., attending the State College, class of 1904; and Edward Lane Schofield, of Franklin and Marshall College, class of 1905.

Mrs. Schofield is an earnest member of the First M. E. Church of Lancaster, and before the care of rearing and educating a family became so pressing upon her took an active part in all the affairs of the church and in charitable and reform work. She is a member of the Dorcas Society, which has done such noble work for the deserving poor of the city for so many years past, and in all the walks of life—in girlhood, motherhood, church and society—has shown herself a worthy descendant of the worthy people who preceded her.

CAPT. JOHN LEWIS BINKLEY. One of the prominent and successful business citizens of Lancaster is Capt. John Lewis Binkley, a descendant of one of the old established families of this State. Three brothers of the name came to America from their native Germany, settling, respectively, in Lancaster and Lebanon counties, Pennsylvania, and in Canada; of the last branch, however, all trace has been lost.

Johann Binkley, great-grandfather of Capt. Binkley, bought land from the London Land Company, at Millport, and there he erected a mill which did a successful business in those early days.

Felix Binkley, son of Johann, and the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer and landowner near Rocky Springs, in this county, for a number of years. Later he removed to Ohio, making the long trip by teams in the old pioneer way, locating near Canton. There he died and there his family is still settled.

John Binkley, son of Felix, and the father of Capt. Binkley, was the only son of the family to return to Pennsylvania. His location was near Bird-in-Hand, where he embarked in the mercantile business and for many years was a prosperous man of affairs, dying in 1893, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. John Binkley was a man of high character and was highly esteemed by his contemporaries. A cousin of John Binkley was the builder of Binkley's bridge, which is one of the old landmarks of Lancaster county. John Binkley married Isabella Martin, daughter of Robert Martin, the latter coming to America from Ireland in his youth. Mrs. Binkley died in 1894, at the age of eighty-three. The career of Robert Martin, the maternal grandfather of Capt. Binkley, was a rather romantic one: In his youth he deserted his ancestral home, although the son of an Irish noble, running away from a stepmother; later he married a Miss Peeling, who was a daughter of Joshua Peeling, a Revolutionary patriot, who was wounded at the battle of Brandywine. Six children were born to John Binkley and wife, one of these, Salome, dying in early childhood, the others being: Catherine, widow of Gideon Barr, lives in the old Binkley homestead, near Bird-in-Hand; Miss Annie lives at home; Dr. W. G. is a prominent practicing physician of Washington borough; Miss Maria Peeling; and John Lewis.

John Lewis Binkley was born at Smoketown, Oct. 28, 1845, and was educated in the public schools of his district. His business career had not yet been decided upon when occurred the stirring events of 1861. Knowing full well that his father would never consent to his entering the army at the age of fifteen years, so fired was he with patriotic enthusiasm he did not stop to ask permission, but enlisted as a bugler in the 9th P. V. C. Before the loyal but injudicious lad had a chance to show his valor his father found him, brought him home, and, to avoid further temptation, placed him in a school at Tremont. Here he remained until the following Spring, recognizing his father's superior judgment, and later became a student in the State Normal School at Millersville.

When the State of Pennsylvania was invaded by the troops of Gen. Lee, Morris Wickersham, of the Normal school, formed a company of the Millersville students, and it goes without saying that young Binkley was one of the number. Following this experience Capt. Binkley enlisted in the 50th Pa. Vol. Militia, under the late brave Col. Emlen Franklin, and served three months. This was after the 122nd Regiment, of which Col. Emlen Franklin was the head, had been out nine months. To please his father young Binkley now returned to his studies and even engaged in school teaching, but his heart was with the men who were striving to subdue the foe, and again he became a soldier, entering the 86th P. V. I. and serving until the close of the war. His military and loyal spirit was again shown when he placed his services at the command of his Government during the Spanish-American war. Mr. Binkley raised a company, of which he was made captain, and his brave men were ready to take part, but there proved to be no occasion.

After the close of the Civil war Capt. Binkley returned to Indiana, where he had previously been engaged in teaching, and remained there until 1867, in the Spring of 1868 opening up a grocery business in Lancaster. With the exception of about six years spent with Lane & Co., in the dry-goods business, Capt. Binkley has been in the grocery trade here ever since that time. His present location is at No. 133 East King street, where he has one of the most complete and best appointed grocery stores in this part of the State. His stock includes all kinds of staples and also novelties from other lands, displayed in a manner calculated to please every taste.

Capt. Binkley was united in marriage in 1868 to Miss Mary M. Herr, who was a daughter of the late Daniel Herr, a farmer, who was a lineal descendant of Hans Herr, one of the five Swiss patriots who formed a nucleus in the settlement of Lancaster county so many generations ago. Five children were born to Capt. Binkley and wife: Elizabeth, wife of John W. Bush, a son of the late Col. L. L. Bush; Maude, wife of William S. Barnholt, a stock-broker in this city; Marbel, wife of George W. Morrison, freight agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Thorndale, Chester county; John Martin, a graduate of the school-ship "Saratoga," and now quartermaster in the service of the Panama Railway Steamship Company, plying between New York City and Colon, Central America; and Florence, a graduate of the Lancaster High School, a bright and accomplished young lady.

Capt. and Mrs. Binkley, with their charming daughter, reside in an elegant home located at No. 106 South Ann street, Lancaster, which the Captain purchased some years since. The religious connection of the family is with the First Methodist Church. Capt. Binkley belongs to no organizations with the one exception of Admiral Reynolds Post, No. 405, G. A. R. Few men of this Grand Army Post have been more active in its work than Capt. Binkley. Almost all of the offices have been efficiently managed by him, and he is a past commander; is district adjutant of the Central Association of Grand Army Posts, and is on the staff of the commander-in-chief. In his political sympathy he has long been an ardent Republican, and takes the deepest interest in the Young Republican Club.

Attentive to business, earnest and active in public affairs, of a generous and social nature, Capt. Binkley enjoys the esteem of hosts of friends.

FREDERICK STAMM. It has been truly said that the department of biography is crowded with the lives of men who have been distinguished in war, politics, science, literature and the professions. Rhetoric has been exhausted in the effort to direct in these upper walks of life the youthful and the ambitious, and the result is that the professions and the "genteel callings" are filled to overflowing. It is another, but commendable task to hold up for study and emulation the lives of the wise and the good. One who lives in Lancaster, and who gained years ago the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen, and who retains the friendship and trust of all who know him by his peaceful and well-ordered life, is Frederick Stamm, an inventor, whose home for many years has been at No. 516 East King street, Lancaster.

Frederick Stamm, his grandfather, in early manhood bought the tannery at the division of the Philadelphia turnpike and the old Penn road, and "Stamm's tannery" for three generations was a landmark in Lancaster county. When the Lochers owned it, it was but a small affair, and Mr. Stamm greatly enlarged it when it came into his hands. Mr. Stamm married a Miss Pickel, of Irish descent, and from this union were born the following children: John; Peter; David; Elizabeth, wife of Rudolph Kauffman, a wheelwright; Sarah, the wife of Christian Sterneman, a school teacher; and Polly, who was the first wife of Rudolph Kauffman.

David Stamm, the third son mentioned above, married Miss Eve Cook, daughter of Peter Cook, a farmer, and a son of one of the early settlers of Franklin county, and from this union were born: Harriet married Capt. James Cross, a gallant officer in the War of the Rebellion, and both are now deceased; Peter C., a tanner is also deceased; Frederick lives in Lancaster; Mary is the widow of A. K. Hoffmeier; Hiram, a veteran of the Civil war, is a leaf tobacco dealer, and choir-master of the First Reformed Church; Henry Clay, a tanner and currier, now lives at Mechanicsburg, Pa.; David, deceased was organist of the First Reformed Church, having been a teacher of the organ and the piano; and Rebecca makes her home with her brother Hiram in this city.

Frederick Stamm was born on the old homestead just east of Witmer's Bridge, in February, 1832, where his father, and his grandfather as well, carried on tanning, currying and farming. His education was obtained in the neighboring district school, and when he was fifteen years of age he entered his father's tannery, remaining there for some three years. For eight years he was employed in a planing mill at Lancaster, and during these years richly developed that inventive genius that had come down to him from his grandfather, who made the first shovel and the first land roller ever used in this section. They were never patented, and were at the free use of his neighbors. This inventive faculty descended to his grandson, whose fortunes afford the theme of this article, and one result was the Eureka Bark Mill, which was patented Jan. 31, 1871, and was first manufactured in a foundry on West Chestnut street, but the demand for it proving unexpectedly large, it was transferred to John Best's extensive works, and there it has since been manufactured. Very many thousands of these mills have been sold, and they have lessened the labors of tanners all over the world, as nothing so good in the line of a bark mill has been made. Mr. Stamm is mechanical, heat and ventilating engineer for the Best Works, and his services are required in distant places as well as at home, he having put in heating plants last year in Chicago, Mobile, and other distant points, as well as being very busy near at home.

Mr. Stamm was married in his early life to Miss Eliza, a daughter of John Echternacht, a farmer just below Strasburg. Mr. Echternacht was born in Germany, but his wife, who was a Miss Potts, belonged to one of the oldest and best known families of Lancaster county. To this union were born four children, three of whom are now living: Eve Marie, the wife of Dr. E. Merle Bishop, then of Greencastle, but now a practicing dentist in Hanover, Pa.; Mary Louise, the wife of Charles L. Marshall, a bookkeeper, and Margaret Ethel, now at home with her father, having assumed the cares of the household at the death of her devoted and beloved mother. Mr. Stamm sent all his girls through the Girls' High School in Lancaster. Mr. Stamm was a Whig in early life, but attached himself to the Republican party on its organization, and has since worked with it, though never seeking or caring for official station. From early manhood Mr. Stamm has been a member of the First Reformed Church of this city, and for some sixteen years or more has served on its Board of Trustees. For many years he has sung in the choir of that church, of which his brother Hiram is the leader, and his lamented brother David the organist.

Mr. Stamm has a fine library, containing among other valuable books, some rare works on scientific subjects, all of which he has diligently and intelligently read, and to such advantage that for ten years or more he has been a member of the Engineers' Club, of Philadelphia, one of the most distinguished bodies of engineers in the state.

CARL P. STAMM, the successful young dentist, whose pleasant office is located at his home on North Prince street, between Orange and Chestnut streets, is one of the young professional men of whom Lancaster is justly proud. He was born in 1871, and received his literary training in the public schools:

His dental studies were begun in 1885 under the able instruction of that thorough practitioner, Dr. H. D. Knight, with whom he remained four years. In 1889 he matriculated at the Philadelphia Dental College, from which he was graduated in 1891. The next year he opened an office above the hardware store of Stoner, Shreiner & Co., but the quarters there proved too small for his rapidly increasing business, and a year later he moved to No. 40 West King street, but in 1895 he was again obliged to move to accommodate his extensive custom. In 1892 Dr. Knight wrote of Dr. Stamm as follows: "Dr. Stamm's gentlemanly manner and thorough work are worthy of and receive admiration, and he [Dr. Knight] takes this opportunity to recommend Dr. Stamm to any who may need his professional services, feeling assured they will find in him a pleasant and efficient operator."

In 1892 Dr. Stamm married Miss Emma S. Mayer, of Reading, Pa., daughter of George Mayer. Two children blessed this union, but Ruth died in infancy; the other, Miriam, is a bright little sunbeam in the home.

BENJAMIN H. HERSHEY, a well known dealer in coal and agricultural implements, and a prominent business man of Manheim, Lancaster county, is descended from one of the oldest families of the county. The first of the name to come to America were two brothers, Andrew and Benjamin Hershey, who crossed the Atlantic from the Palatinate, in Germany, in 1717, and located near Lancaster, Pa., at what is now Wheatland. Later came Christian. It is from Benjamin that our subject is descended. He is supposed to have been a member of the Mennonite Church, and either he or his son settled on a farm one and a half miles east of Manheim, which property is still in the possession of the family, now belonging to Levi Hershey. It is believed to have been purchased from William Penn originally, and cleared and improved by the family. The tract now consists of 130 acres.

Christian Hershey, grandfather of Benjamin H., was born in this country in 1789, and it is supposed that his father, as well as his grandfather, bore the name of Christian. Each in turn lived on the old homestead. Christian (1) was born in Lancaster county in 1719, Christian (2) in 1762. Christian Hershey (3) was reared on the farm, and always followed agricultural pursuits. He was a man of more than ordinary ability, and stood high among his fellow men, being looked up to as a leader and adviser, but he never sought political preferment, choosing to instruct and advise rather than officiate, though he filled some township offices. He was a member of the Mennonite Church, and in early life was a Whig in politics, but after the organization of the Republican party he affiliated with the same. He married Susan Bear, and to them were born two children: David, father of Benjamin H.; and Mary, wife of Henry Brubaker, who resided at Hammer Creek, beyond Lexington, and also belonged to one of the old families of Lancaster county.

David Hershey was born in 1817, on a part of the old homestead, was there reared to manhood, and received a limited education in the public schools of the neighborhood. He followed farming throughout life, and was a quiet, unassuming man, domestic in his tastes, and refraining from all public life. He was a devout member of the Mennonite Church, in which he served as deacon twenty-five years, and died in that faith in 1898. He married Fannie Hostetter, and of the four children born to them Benjamin H. is the eldest; Susan is the wife of Simon K. Nissly, of Lancaster; Amos H. resides on a farm adjoining the old homestead near Manheim; and David C. resides in Manheim.

Benjamin H. Hershey was born Oct. 10, 1847, and passed his boyhood and youth on the home farm, where he remained until he attained his majority. Having received a good practical education in the public schools, he successfully engaged in teaching for three years in the vicinity of Manheim, and then spent several years in various parts of the West. On returning to Lancaster county, in 1877, he located in Manheim and succeeded Jacob H. Kline in the coal business, which he still conducts. Since 1882 he has also dealt in agricultural implements, and he has built up quite a large and profitable business in both lines.

On Feb. 1, 1887, Mr. Hershey married Miss Isabella Sharp, daughter of John L. Sharp, of Manheim, and they have two children: David Lyman, born Jan. 12, 1889; and Mary Isabella, born Nov. 7, 1897. The parents are active members of the Reformed Church, in which Mr. Hershey has served as elder for the past three years. In his political views he is a Republican, and he is now efficiently serving as a member of the school board of Manheim, having always taken an active interest in educational affairs. He is secretary of the Water Company of Manheim, of which he was one of the organizers, and is a stockholder in the Manheim National Bank and was a member of its board of directors for some years. As a business man he is enterprising, energetic and progressive, and generally carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

JAMES HENRY MARSHALL, ex-postmaster of Lancaster, and at present one of the efficient men connected with the city post-office where he holds the position of assistant postmaster, is deservedly one of the most popular men of the day in Lancaster.

William Marshall, the father of James H., was born in Lancaster in 1812, and was a shoe maker by trade. For many years he was janitor at Franklin and Marshall College. He married Elizabeth Sowers, who was born in 1812, daughter of Henry Sowers. A family of twelve children were born to them, of whom five are yet living: William A., a graduate from the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., is a Commander, United States Navy; James Henry; Mrs. John J. Keffler lives in Harrisburg; and Miss Emma L. and Mrs. Henry Elias live in Lancaster.

James Henry Marshall was born in Lancaster, Sept. 12, 1838, and received his education in the city schools and parochial school of St. James Episcopal Church. When he reached the age of seventeen years he became an apprentice at the printing trade in the office of the Lancaster Examiner, and after serving his time, was a pressman in the Harrisburg Patriot. In 1859 he went to Nashville, Tenn., where he was employed in the Baptist Publishing House. Coming back to Lancaster he became foreman of the Examiner office, where he at the time enlisted, Oct. 5, 1861, joining Co. K, 79th P. V. I., and with his command was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland. When his three years of service were up, he veteranized, re-enlisting for the war. Mr. Marshall was engaged with his regiment at the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge, and followed General Sherman on his triumphant march to the sea. On Feb. 12, 1862, he was made commissary sergeant and on Jan. 20, 1865, was commissioned first lieutenant by Gov. Curtin, and was also appointed quartermaster of the regiment. After the Georgia campaign, he participated in the battles of Goldsboro and Bentonville, and after the surrender of Gen. Johnston, he took part in the Grand Review at Washington, and was mustered out in July, 1865.

Mr. Marshall worked at his trade for some years after the end of the war, being at Coatesville, Pa., for a time, when he was appointed United States Deputy Marshal for Lancaster. He became a letter carrier, Dec. 1, 1867, and served eight years in that capacity. On Jan. 26, 1876, he was appointed postmaster of Lancaster, and was reappointed in 1881, continuing in office until Aug. 10, 1885, when he was retired on account of a change in the national administration. After retiring from the postal service he was made financial clerk of the Soldiers' Orphan Schools at Harrisburg, receiving his appointment from the State Superintendent, Dr. E. E. Higbee, and he resigned this position to become assistant postmaster under the late Major Griest, holding the same relation to his successor, Major Reinöehl, who died in December, 1900. On the death of this latter gentleman Mr. Marshall was strongly urged by many persons for appointment to the vacant office.

Mr. Marshall, while home on a furlough, was married May 26, 1863, to Miss Katherine W. McCaskey, a daughter of the late William McCaskey, for many years in the Pennsylvania Railroad service, and a sister of Dr. J. P. McCaskey, the veteran principal of the Boys' High School of Lancaster, and publisher of the Pennsylvania School Journal. Six children were born to this union: Maggie died at the age of seventeen; William L., a graduate of the Lancaster High School, now receiving teller in the Farmers' National Bank, of Lancaster, married in 1898 Wilhelmina, daughter of Henry Wolf, and has a son, Henry James; Bertha P. is at home; Harry H., a clerk in the Lancaster post office, married July 1900, Maggie McGovern; Maude is a clerk; and Blanche is at school.

Mr. Marshall is a member of the St. James Episcopal Church, where he has been a vestryman for a number of years. In Masonic circles he is conspicuous, holding membership in Lancaster Lodge, No. 43, A. F. & A. M., and Lancaster Chapter, No. 43, Royal Arch Masons. As treasurer of the Lancaster Monumental Association, he succeeded Major Sherk at his death. He is also prominently identified with George H. Thomas Post, No. 84, G. A. R. In whatever position of trust and responsibility he may have been placed, Mr. Marshall has always acquitted himself well. Since 1867 he has been connected almost continuously with the Lancaster post office with the exception of the Cleveland era, and here he has always given the greatest satisfaction to the public both by his ability and his courteous treatment of all with whom he comes in contact.

EMANUEL H. HERR, an enterprising farmer and business man of East Lampeter township, was born Aug. 30, 1839, on the farm which he still occupies. He belongs to a well-known family of this section, being a son of Solomon Herr, and a grandson of Abraham Herr. The latter was born in Lancaster county, and lived near Lancaster City all his life. By occupation he was a farmer and distiller. He was one of the Old Mennonites in Lancaster county. His family consisted of five children, as follows: Solomon, the father of our subject; Peter, Abram and Christian, all deceased; and Annie, wife of Henry Herr.

Solomon Herr was born in East Lampeter township, Jan. 6, 1806. He lived at home with his parents until he was of age, receiving a common school education, and then began farming for himself on the place a part of which our subject now owns. He, too, was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Catherine Herr, daughter of John and Barbara Herr, of Manor township, and they became the parents of six children, two of whom died in infancy; Emanuel H., and Abraham and Ehas H. (twins) reside in East Lampeter township; and Adam H., of Lancaster City.

Emanuel H. Herr worked for his father until he was twenty-one years of age, received a common school education, and when he began life for himself continued farming, which has been his main occupation to the present time. In connection with his agricultural pursuits he ran a thresher for thirty years, and has also been engaged in butchering quite extensively. Mr. Herr has prospered in all his undertakings, and now ranks among the progressive and well-to-do residents of his township. He is a public-spirited man, deeply interested in the public as well as the commercial welfare of his community. He is a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Herr first wedded Miss Mary Witmer, daughter of Rev. David Witmer and to this union were born eight children, two of whom died in infancy; David L. lives in Quarryville, Pa.; Hattie A. is the wife of Reuben W. Myers; Lizzie is the wife of Reuben Esbenschade; Mary L. is the widow of Enos Eby, of Strasburg; Emlin W. is deceased; Ida C. is the wife of David Myers, of East Lampeter. The mother of these children died Aug. 21, 1888, and on Sept. 17, 1889, Mr. Herr married for his second wife, Mrs. Annie C. Herr, widow of Jacob M. Herr. To this union was born one son, Roy S., who lives at home. Mrs. Annie C. Herr died Sept. 30, 1898. On Nov. 14, 1899, our subject was united in marriage with Mrs. Susan Killinger, widow of John Lewis Killinger.

CHARLES FREDERICK DILLER, sole proprietor of the Peerless Emery Wheel Co., of Lancaster, presents in his life a notable illustration of what intelligence, industry, indomitable courage and honorable methods can accomplish. He comes of a long and sturdy line of Pennsylvanians. Leonard Diller, his grandfather, was a noted auctioneer of Lancaster, and the late Isaac Diller, father of Charles F., was the founder of the extensive Diller Hardware Store, of Lancaster, which afterward became the Isaac Diller's Sons' Store. It is now owned by Herr & Snively, who bought the business from Isaac Diller's sons.

Isaac Diller married Miss Anna Margaret Frey, daughter of the late Jacob Frey, who owned a farm in the western suburbs of Lancaster, the sale of portions of this tract as building lots giving the first impetus to the great building operations in the West End of the city. To this union were born nine children, four of whom are now living: William F., who is a coal and slate dealer of Lancaster; Lydia, who is unmarried, and lives with her aged though still active mother on East Orange street, Lancaster; Anna M., who spent three years in perfecting herself in music in Leipsic, Germany, and is the wife of Edward D. Starbuck, Ph. D., a professor in the great Stanford University, California; and Charles F., who is noted above as the proprietor of the Peerless Emery Wheel Co. One of the nine children of Isaac Diller who has entered into rest was Rev. Alonzo Potter Diller, a deeply lamented Episcopal clergyman, who met death in the great Johnstown flood, his body—with one arm clasped around his wife and the other about their only child—having been found in the debris after the waters had subsided.

Charles Frederick Diller was born in Lancaster Jan. 29, 1861, and was educated in St. James Parochial School, at the Franklin and Marshall Academy, and at Franklin and Marshall College. Leaving the latter institution, he was placed on his father's farm in Providence township, and after spending a year there entered his father's hardware and house furnishing store, on East King street. In this establishment, first as employe, and then as proprietor, he was engaged for a quarter of a century, selling out eventually, as noted above, to Herr & Snively. In 1893 Mr. Diller started, in a very unpretentious way, the manufacture of the Peerless Emery Wheels, but the business soon took on such proportions that he was obliged to purchase extensive buildings and grounds, on North Charlotte street, in Lancaster. His original investments have since been increased, until at the present writing the company owns one of the finest plants in the city, and employs twenty-five men; their goods are used all over the civilized world. Besides his other interests Mr. Diller is a director of the Lancaster and Columbia Turnpike, of Greenwood cemetery, and of the Fulton National Bank, and he is secretary of the Cassidy Fork Boom & Lumber Co., in West Virginia.

On June 30, 1885, Charles F. Diller was married to Miss Sarah R. Slaymaker, daughter of the late John Slaymaker, of Williamstown, Lancaster county. The ceremony was performed in a house that that has been in the bride's family for five generations. To this union were born five children, four of whom are now living, John having entered into rest at the age of three years. Those surviving are Isaac, who is named after his grandfather Isaac; Sara Ferree, bearing the name of her great-grandmother; Charles Frederick, who is attending a kindergarten school; and DeBois, the youngest of the family.

Mr. Diller belongs to the Order of Artisans, the Royal Arcanum and St. John's Episcopal Church. In politics he is an independent. He has a delightful home at No. 210 North Prince street, which he purchased before his marriage, and where all his children have been born.

TOBIAS R. KREIDER, of East Lampeter township, Lancaster county, was born Oct. 17, 1827, on the same farm upon which both his father and grandfather were born. The history of the Kreider family is interesting from a number of points of view. It indicates in a marked degree those admirable traits of domesticity and love of family ties so often seen in eastern states. Three generations have been born on the same homestead. Tobias Kreider, grandfather of Tobias R., was born on the place and he died there. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church, and a good, moral upright man and citizen all the days of his life. He was the father of nine children: Martin (father of Tobias R.) Tobias, Jacob and Henry, and five girls. All these children were brought up in Lampeter township.

Martin Kreider, as already stated, was born on the home place in 1793. He remained there all his life, but from time to time purchased adjoining land which still remains in the possession of the family. He married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Christian Rohrer. They were the parents of seven children: Mary, wife of Henry F. Rowe; Henry, deceased;

Martin, deceased; Tobias R., the subject of this sketch; John, of West Lampeter township; Elizabeth, wife of Henry Doner; and Daniel, of West Lampeter township.

Tobias R. Kreider lived at home with his parents until he was twenty-three years old, receiving during the time a fair common-school education. He then married Miss Annie, daughter of John Kreider, and settled on his father-in-law's farm, where he resided for thirty-one years, when he purchased an adjoining farm and moved onto it.

Mr. Kreider is very well-to-do, and while engaging directly in no other occupation than farming, has other interests; for instance, he has been a director of the Farmers National Bank of Lancaster, for the past five years, and was also a director of the Strasburg turnpike for a time. He is a Republican in politics, and held the office of school director for a number of years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kreider are members of the Old Mennonite Church. This worthy couple have been blessed with six children, as follows: Mary, wife of Henry Rohrer; Elizabeth, wife of Isaac Eby, bishop of the Old Mennonite Church; Martin, who now lives on the old homestead in West Lampeter township, being of the fourth generation of the family to reside there; Anna, deceased wife of Christian Stauffer; John, with whom Mr. Kreider now lives; and Hettie, who died unmarried. Mrs. Kreider died Dec. 5, 1889, at the age of fifty-seven years, two months and thirteen days. Although Mr. Kreider is somewhat advanced in years, he is hale and hearty, and he takes an active interest in passing events. He is respected by all who know him and has lived an honorable and upright life.

ROBERT SMITH, superintendent of the New Era press room, enjoys the distinction of being the only printer in Lancaster who has ever been connected with the great publishing house of J. B. Lippincott & Co., having been associated with that house continuously for a period of twenty-five years, serving until the great fire which destroyed their building, on Thanksgiving Day, 1899. Those who comprehend the amount of ability which is necessary in order to successfully hold a position with such a house as that of the Lippincotts will understand that Mr. Smith must be thoroughly acquainted with his business in every detail.

Mr. Smith can trace his ancestry to Scotch-Irish progenitors, and his maternal grandfather was of the "landed gentry" class in his native country. Coming to America, he made his home in Philadelphia, where his last years were passed. Isaac Smith, father of Robert, of Lancaster, was a stationary engineer, was born in Londonderry, Ireland, and died in Philadelphia some thirty years ago. His widow, who was born in Scotland, died in Philadelphia in 1896. They had a family of thirteen children, only four of whom survive: Sarah, who is the wife of John Watkins, of Philadelphia; Mary J., who is the wife of Dean Caterson, a farmer of Wayne county; William, who is a printer, in Philadelphia; and Robert, of Lancaster.

Robert Smith was born in Philadelphia Dec. 8, 1853, and was educated in the public schools of that city. When fourteen years old he became apprenticed to the printer's trade with McLaughlin Brothers, who were relations on his mother's side. One of them was Frank McLaughlin, who was connected with the Philadelphia Times for so many years. At the age of twenty-two years Mr. Smith entered the house of J. B. Lippincott & Co., and by faithful attention to duty and honest service he was gradually promoted until he was made foreman of the job press-room, a lucrative as well as responsible position. After the fire Mr. Smith came to Lancaster and accepted his present position, his knowledge gained during his long association with the Philadelphia house making his skilled services particularly valuable. Few men possess a more thorough knowledge of the technical part of the business than Mr. Smith, and his intelligence and fund of general information are also exceptional.

Mr. Smith's first marriage was to Sarah Dunsford, who died in 1893, the mother of three children: Isaac, who is in the postal service in Philadelphia; William, who is in the service of the Pennsylvania railroad, and lives in Philadelphia; and Elizabeth, who is also a resident of that city. In 1896 Mr. Smith married Miss Ella Neff, of Philadelphia. In religious belief he is a Baptist, while fraternally he is connected with the order of Odd Fellows. The Smith family has been noted for its longevity, the youngest of his ancestors having lived to the age of eighty-five years, the oldest reaching the age of ninety-six.

DAVID L. KREIDER has for a number of years lived retired in East Lampeter township, where during his active life he was successfully engaged in farming.

Mr. Kreider is a grandson of John Kreider, who was born in Lancaster county, and lived there all his life. By occupation he was a farmer. He married Miss Barbara Buckholder, and they were the parents of the following named children: Daniel, a farmer of Lancaster county; Jacob, who was a tailor by trade; John, who died at the age of sixteen years; Lizzie, wife of John Stoumb; Annie, wife of John Leshner; Mary, wife of Daniel Rohrer; and Abraham.

Abraham Kreider, the father of our subject, was born in East Lampeter township. His father dying when he was a mere lad, Abraham was put out to work on a farm, and he received a common-school education, attending during the winter season. He married Miss Susan Landis, and to them were born eight children, two of whom died in childhood; Benjamin died when eighteen years of age; Annie is the wife of Jacob Lefever; Miss Susan resides in Witmer; David L. is mentioned below; John, deceased, lived on the old farm; and Levi L. is deputy sheriff of Lancaster county. The parents were both members of the Old Mennonite Church.

David L. Kreider was born in East Lampeter township Dec. 1, 1835, and was educated in the local public schools. He continued to live at home until he was twenty-three years of age, when he began farming on his own account, on the place he now occupies in East Lampeter township. In 1885 he gave up active farming pursuits, and since that time he has lived retired.

In 1850 Mr. Kreider wedded Miss Mary K. Landis, daughter of Benjamin B. Landis, and to this union have been born three children: Sue L. is the wife of Rufus K. Cooper, of Mechanicsburg, Pa.; Lizzie L. is the wife of John Kreider, of East Lampeter; Mollie L. is the wife of Amos G. Herr, of Bird-in-Hand. Mr. and Mrs. Kreider and one daughter are members of the Old Mennonite Church.

JACOB H. ROHRER, who has but recently retired from active life, was for over half a century interested in various lines of business in Lancaster county, and no resident of East Lampeter is more highly respected.

Mr. Rohrer is a son of Jacob Rohrer, who was born in East Lampeter township, on a farm which our subject now owns, in about 1781. He followed farming exclusively all his life, and died at the advanced age of eighty-six years. In politics he was a member of the Old Whig party, but he never sought office. Religiously he was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Annie Hartman, daughter of Christian Hartman, and they were the parents of five children: Mary, who was the wife of Christian Johns, a farmer of New Holland; Elizabeth, who died unmarried; Abraham, a farmer of East Lampeter township; Annie, wife of Peter Johns, a farmer; and Jacob H.

Jacob H. Rohrer was born on the old homestead in East Lampeter township, April 17, 1821, received a common-school education, and lived with his parents until he was about twenty years of age. Then he began life for himself, farming on the old homestead for twenty-nine years. Meantime other lines of business also claimed his attention, and he followed them with uniform success. He was the senior member of the firm of Rohrer, Johns & Co., who built and sold the Champion reaper and mower in Lancaster county. After this firm dissolved he engaged in droving quite extensively, shipping from Chicago, Pittsburg and Baltimore, horses, mules, cattle, etc. He also engaged quite extensively in growing and buying tobacco and was regarded as one of Lancaster county's successful tobacco dealers. In politics, Mr. Rohrer has always affiliated with the Republican party, and he has held various important offices, discharging the duties of same with credit to himself, and to the satisfaction of all concerned. For three years he was prison inspector, and he was also poor director for the same length of time, and during his term of office bought all the meat consumed in the institution. He served as school director for some nine years, and was also auditor of the township for a time. Public-spirited in all things, he was one of the committee who constructed the Bridgeport and Horseshoe pike, and he has been one of the directors up to the present time. In 1868, Mr. Rohrer left the old farm and moved to where he now resides, and he conducted a coal and lumber business until 1900, since which time he has lived retired.

Mr. Rohrer married Miss Maria Shaffer, daughter of Adam Shaffer, and to this marriage came eleven children: Annie (deceased) was the wife of Benjamin Kreider; Elizabeth is the widow of John L. Kreider; Adam S. is deceased; Abraham S. is a farmer in East Lampeter township; Susanna is the wife of Abraham Herr; Jacob is a farmer in Paradise township; Amanda is the wife of Jacob Burkhardt; Aaron is a farmer in East Lampeter township; Mary died unmarried at the age of twenty-seven; Milton S. is a farmer in East Lampeter; Emma is the wife of John Buckwalter. The mother of the above named children died in 1885.

Mr. Rohrer has spent a long life, full of usefulness, and he is one of Lancaster county's most esteemed citizens.

JAMES FORNEY MCCOY, one of the most prominent of the younger members of the Lancaster Bar, is ably sustaining the enviable reputation established by his distinguished and honored ancestors. He is the third of the family to bear the name of James, and the McCoy's have been long at home on American soil.

James McCoy, our subject's grandfather, was a farmer in the State of Delaware, and his father, Rev. James McCoy, has been the beloved pastor of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, at Paradise, this county, for the past fourteen years. The latter married Alice Grove, a daughter of Jacob Grove, a wholesale druggist of Baltimore, Md. To this union came two children: a daughter who died in infancy; and James Forney.

James Forney McCoy was born Dec. 20, 1874, in Columbia, Lancaster county, where his father then had a charge. After attending a preparatory school at Kingston, N. Y., he entered the University of Pennsylvania, completed the Sophomore year there, and then entered the law department of that institution, from which he was graduated in the class of 1898. He was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar in June, 1899, but not desiring to practice in Philadelphia he came to Lancaster, at once entering the office of Brown & Hensel, to further perfect himself in the mastery of the intricacies of the law. In December, 1899, he was admitted to practice in the courts of Lancaster county, and later was admitted to the Superior and Supreme Courts, in both of which he has practiced with profit to his clients and credit to himself. Mr. McCoy is naturally a Presbyterian, his father being one of the foremost Presbyterian divines in Lancaster county. Politically he is a Democrat, and has enjoyed the distinguished consideration, although so young, of receiving the nomination for district attorney of Lancaster county in 1901. Mr. McCoy is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity, Franklin and Marshall College. Socially, religiously and professionally he has already gained an enviable standing, and life for him is full of promise.

HENRY F. HARTMAN (deceased) was a man highly respected for his many admirable personal qualities, as well as for his keen business instincts and the success which attended his efforts. He died in East Lampeter township June 27, 1899, and was buried in Heller's Church cemetery, Leacock township.

Henry F. Hartman was born June 20, 1830, in Bavaria, Germany, and emigrated to America in 1849, locating in New York State upon his arrival in this country. There he remained for one year, after which he went to New Jersey, and after a few years he located at Witmer, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he conducted a farm and operated some excellent lime-kilns, becoming very prominent and meeting with unqualified success; he thoroughly understood every detail of his business and knew how to take advantage of all opportunities offered.

In political matters Mr. Hartman was a strong Democrat, taking a great interest in party affairs and being a popular leader in his community. For three years he served most acceptably as county commissioner, from 1885 to 1888. Fraternally he was a member of the F. & A. M., reaching the Knight Templar degree. At the time of his death he was a member of three insurance companies. His church connections were with those of the Mennonite faith. A good business man, a kind neighbor and loving husband and father, he made many friends, and was noted for his liberal spirit and charity, of both speech and action.

On Jan. 3, 1856, in New Holland, Pa., Mr. Hartman married Catherine Krantz, and they had the following children: Anna M. married John Roth, and they live on the old homestead in East Lampeter township, and have seven children; Henry, who died at the age of twenty-six, married Lizzie Peters, and they had three children; Elizabeth died at the age of four; Catherine married Jeremiah Delong, of Lancaster, Pa., and they have seven children; Mary married Levi Bixler, a grocer of Lancaster, and they have five children; David, who operates the old lime-kilns of his father, married Lizzie Hoar, and they have eight children; Christian was killed on the railroad; Jacob, who is unmarried, resides on the old homestead; John K. is a resident of Lancaster.

Mrs. Hartman was born March 9, 1829, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Fox) Krantz, of Germany, who came to America in 1852, settling at Octoraro, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he carried on farming, dying in 1860, aged sixty-one; his wife died in 1867, aged sixty, and both are buried in the Strasburg Mennonite cemetery. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Krantz were as follows: Catherine; John, who married Fanny Herr; Barbara (deceased), who married Jacob Getz; Mary, married to Peter Howan, of Cullom, Ill.; Lizzie (deceased), who married John Gress, of Cullom, Ill.; Christiann, who married Frank Reyburn, of Lancaster, Pa.; and Lena (deceased), Mrs. Graybill, of Cullom, Illinois.

Mrs. Hartman has a very pleasant, hospitable home in Lancaster, where she welcomes her friends and family. Although she mourns the loss of her husband, she has learned to look upon the cheerful side of afflictions even, and sets a beautiful example by her Christian fortitude and charitable actions, endearing herself to all who know her.

SAMUEL SHEAFFER STACKS, the efficient judgment and mortgage clerk to the county commissioners of Lancaster county, and who has held that position since 1894, as well as having been assistant clerk for five years to Secretary of the Commonwealth W. W. Griest when the latter was chief clerk to the county commissioners, is a genial, clever gentleman, and has made hosts of friends by his courteous and intelligent discharge of the responsible duties of his office.

Thomas Stacks, his grandfather, came to America from England, and settled in York county, where he followed his trade of blacksmith, making a specialty of the manufacture of sickles, which were of the finest make and much larger than those of to-day.

Thomas Stacks, son of Thomas (1), came to Lancaster county from York county when he was eleven years old. He was a farmer for a time in East Donegal township, and later followed the same occupation in West Donegal and near Washington borough. He died in the latter place Feb. 24, 1901, aged eighty-two years. He married Miss Mary Sheaffer, of Dauphin county, and their home was brightened by nine children, of whom the following named are living: Jacob S., of Chicago; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph A. Schlegelmilch, a contracting carpenter of Auburn, Ill.; Mary, wife of Joseph A. Lindemuth, a retired farmer of Columbia; Fanny, wife of Eli Menaugh, a contractor and builder of Florin; Amanda, wife of Jonathan Shank, a contractor and builder of West Donegal; Emma, wife of Lincoln Stehman, a farmer of Manor; and Samuel S., assistant clerk to the county commissioners.

Samuel Sheaffer Stacks was born in East Donegal township May 28, 1853, and was educated in the schools of his district and at Lebanon Valley College. Leaving the latter institution, Mr. Stacks entered into the coal and lumber business with his father at Florin, and, dissolving the partnership after a while, he carried on the business himself for one year, at the end of which time he became a tobacco farmer. His next venture was in connection with the Conoy Creamery Company, after which he spent two years in the employ of the State Tobacco Growers' Association of Pennsylvania, in connection with one of their experimental stations.

Mr. Stacks is a member of the Knights of the Mystic Chain, of Florin, having been recording scribe since the organization of that body in his home place—a period of twelve years. He also belongs to the Knights of Malta, of Lancaster. In religious work he has always been active, and is a member and trustee of the U. B. Church of Florin, as well as a teacher in the Sunday-school, of which he was for seven years superintendent.

Mr. Stacks married Miss Leah Geistwheit, daughter of Jacob Geistwheit, of Florin. Four children were born to them, one of whom died at the age of seven years. The survivors are Harvey G., a machinist; and Elsie and Elizabeth, at home. Mr. Stacks has been a staunch Republican since boyhood, and served one term as county committeeman from his district. He was assessor of East Donegal for seven or eight years, and from 1894 served as judgment and mortgage clerk, the last term for which he was elected expiring the first Monday in January, 1903. His duties are discharged promptly, and his courteous treatment of those who have business with him has won him many friends.

PHARES WISE FRY, one of Lancaster's prominent leaf tobacco dealers, with warehouse and office at No. 119 North Christian street, is descended from one of the oldest and best known families in Lancaster county, his ancestors having been the founders of Fryville, in Ephrata township, and there his grandfather died. The family came originally from Switzerland, and possessed a family crest. Samuel Fry, father of Phares W., was a well known miller of Millport, Warwick township, and died in 1868, aged sixty years. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Christian Wise, a farmer of Millport, and she entered into rest in 1873, aged sixty years. Samuel Fry was the father of eight children, the survivors being Menno M., who is in the leaf tobacco trade in Lancaster; Susanna, wife of Benjamin Wissler, a miller and farmer of Clay township; and Phares W., leaf tobacco dealer of Lancaster.

Phares Wise Fry was born in Millport Dec. 24, 1845, and was educated in the public schools and the State Normal School of Millersville. During the war of the Rebellion he enlisted in the 195th P. V. I., as an "emergency man," for one hundred days, but really served six months; he ranked as corporal. In 1864 he found employment in a store at Lincoln, Lancaster county, and in 1865 became a salesman in Lane's dry-goods store, East King street, Lancaster, remaining there seven years. In 1872 he began the wall paper and window shade business, on North Queen street, on his own account, and was the original exclusive dealer in those lines in Lancaster. He met with marked success, and continued in that trade until 1886, when he closed the business and entered the leaf tobacco and cigar trade, on Market street, in partnership with his brother Menno M. Fry. This partnership was continued until 1890, when it was dissolved, and in 1892, Mr. Fry removed to his present location, No. 119 North Christian street, where he soon became recognized as one of the leading leaf tobacco dealers of his section.

Mr. Fry was married, April 7, 1878, to Miss Josephine C. Hess, daughter of Capt. George Hess, of Safe Harbor. By this union he has become the father of the following children: (1) Howard W., a graduate of the Lancaster high school, is now a stenographer and typewriter in the law office of Owen P. Bricker, Esq.; he is an exquisite performer on the violin, being a member of Prof. Burger's Opera House orchestra. (2) Emma H., also a graduate of the Lancaster High school, is at home with her parents. (3) Allan C., assists in the office of his father.

The cozy home of the family, located at No. 511 West Chestnut street, was purchased by Mr. Fry at the time of his marriage, and he has since remodeled it. Mr. Fry attends the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Lancaster, of which Mrs. Fry and family are members. Politically he is a Republican. He belongs to no secret orders. Conscientious in all his relations with his fellowmen, possessed of more than ordinary intelligence, affable at all times, Mr. Fry is deservedly popular, in social as well as business circles.

JAMES M. SMOKER. Mr. Smoker is of German lineage, his paternal great-grandfather, Peter Smoker, having come from Germany to America and settled in Lancaster county at a comparatively early period in the history of that bailiwick.

Peter Smoker was a farmer and a man held in high esteem for the many sterling qualities of his rugged character. His son, John, the grandfather of James M., was born in the same county in 1787, and was also a tiller of the soil, although the latter years of his long life were passed in peaceful retirement at the home of his son, Jacob K., the father of James M. Smoker. He died in 1873, at the age of eighty-six years and six months. He was a member of the German Reformed Church, as was his wife, Mary Kerns. She was a daughter of Jacob Kerns, who was also a German immigrant and one of Lancaster's early settlers, and in addition to farming carried on the business of an auctioneer. Mrs. John Smoker died in 1872, at Salisbury, Vt., at precisely the same age as did her husband. They were the parents of four children, of whom Jacob K., the father of James M., was the third. The others were George; Eliza, who married John Rochie; and Samuel, all of whom are deceased.

Jacob K. Smoker was born in Paradise township, Jan. 4, 1822. He grew up on his father's farm, and at the age of twenty began learning the carpenter's trade. This pursuit he found not to his liking, and he embarked in buying and selling live stock in Philadelphia and the West. On March 4, 1864, he enlisted in the Union army in an engineer corps of the Pennsylvania Volunteers, and remained in the service until Jan. 16, 1865, when he was mustered out at Harper's Ferry. On his return home he began farming in Paradise, but in 1873 removed to Columbia, where he began business as a huckster. Two years later he went to Perry county, and spent another two years there in farming. Becoming dissatisfied, he returned to Columbia and opened a boarding-house, but after three years once more became a huckster, also acting as auctioneer when his services were needed. He is a Presbyterian in faith and a Republican in politics, and a member of the G. A. R. His wife was Sarah L. Nelson, of Bart township, to whom he was married April 4, 1850. She bore him seven sons and four daughters, of whom the eldest, William H., lives in Columbia. John L. is a resident of Lancaster. Jacob G. and Anna M. died in infancy. Lillie married George Hughes, and died in 1894. Franklin also died in infancy, as did Elizabeth, the youngest child. George M. was a car inspector for the Pennsylvania Company, and lost his life in a railroad accident, April 23, 1894. Hannah L. is the wife of John Wymer, who conducts a bakery at Columbia. Howard G. is a successful druggist at Mount Joy.

Sarah L. (Nelson) Smoker was born in Leacock township, July 27, 1830. She was the first born of the five children of William H. and Mary (Crawford) Nelson, both of County Derry, Ireland. Her parents immigrated to this country in 1829, and after a year's residence in Philadelphia settled in Leacock. Her father was by trade a carpenter, and was also a prosperous farmer and teamster. He lived to see his sixty-seventh birthday, and died in 1874. His wife was born in December, 1804, and passed away on April 8, 1891. The two younger sisters of Sarah (Nelson) Smoker were Mary, who married Henry Bachman, of Bart township; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Jacob Rowe, who died in 1896. Two brothers, James and William, are locomotive engineers, the elder living in Philadelphia, and the younger at Denver, Colorado.

James M. Smoker was born in Lancaster county, Aug. 16, 1862. He was reared upon a farm, and at the age of fifteen years found employment in a saw-mill. In 1879 he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Company as a brakeman. Within three years he was promoted to be flagman, and on June 23, 1882, was given the position of conductor, his promotion having been the result of patient, intelligent, faithful work. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics a Republican.

In October, 1884, in Columbia, James M. Smoker was married to Margaret J. Kraus, of Columbia. To them have been born eight children, Clara E., William K., Marshall F., Vernon E., Dorothy F., Howard G., Nettie B. and Jacob W. Mrs. Margaret (Kraus) Smoker was born in Philadelphia, March

2, 1866, a daughter of Frederick and Mary (Roesch) Kraus, both of whom were born in Germany. Her parents were married in Oxford and settled in Lancaster county in 1867. Frederick Kraus was born June 19, 1833, and is still living. He is a shoemaker by trade and for twelve years served as justice of the peace at Marietta. His wife, Margaret, died in 1897, after reaching the age of fifty years. Their children numbered seventeen, and were named Anna, Herrmann, Elizabeth, William, Margaret J., Charles F., Gottlieb, Nettie, Jacob, Ernest, Martin, Henry, George, Robert, Frederick, Luther and James.

THOMAS LEWIS McMICHAEL, sheriff of Lancaster county, comes from a long-lived and prominent family, of Scotch-Irish descent. His grandfather and his grandmother each lived to be eighty-eight years old, and his father, James McMichael, died Nov. 20, 1901, in the ninetieth year of his age. The latter was for twenty-seven years manager of the James M. Hopkins ore banks, and afterward a farmer, living and dying on the old homestead in East Drumore. James McMichael was married three times, his second wife, who was Hettie Phillips, daughter of Jacob Phillips, of East Drumore, having been the mother of Thomas L. James McMichael had three children by his first union, seven of the second union and five of the third. Mrs. Hettie McMichael died when her son Thomas L. was three years old. His brother, Harry S., is a prominent attorney at law in Indianapolis. His father's brother, Rev. W. W. McMichael, was in his eighty-ninth year when he died, and he was at the time of his death the oldest member of the Philadelphia M. E. Conference.

Thomas Lewis McMichael was born on the old homestead in East Drumore, which he now owns, Sept. 28, 1856. He was educated in the public schools of the district, and worked on his father's farm until he was twenty-one, when he engaged in the live stock trade, dealing extensively in horses, and not a little in cattle. He is still a live-stock dealer, and a very reliable and successful one.

A staunch Republican, Mr. McMichael took an active part in politics in his district, and so popular did he become that his friends insisted on his running for sheriff, to which important office he was triumphantly elected in November, 1899; he has given the greatest satisfaction in the discharge of his duties.

Mr. McMichael was married, June 26, 1901, to Miss Margaret Killinger, daughter of Jacob Killinger, of Lancaster. One child, Ruth, died at the age of five months. The sheriff now lives at No. 907 East King street, or, more properly speaking, on the Philadelphia turnpike, in Lancaster township. He is a member of the Mt. Hope Methodist Episcopal Church, and belongs to the Blue Lodge of Masons, the American Mechanics, the Elks, and the Young Republicans, and is one of the most popular men, personally, in all Lancaster county.

ISAAC KAUFFMAN (deceased) was one of the prominent citizens of Lancaster county in his time, and was born and reared on the old homestead in Manor township. He was born Aug. 15, 1801, and died March 12, 1888, and within these limits lived a singularly useful life.

Mr. Kauffman remained in Manor township for eleven years after his marriage, and then established himself in Penn township, where the rest of his life was passed. In Manor township he owned a farm near Central Manor, which is now in the possession of Samuel Kauffman. In Penn township he owned a farm of 100 acres. A most methodical farmer, everything was kept by him in the best order. Though never very much interested in public and political affairs, he was a good citizen, and very highly regarded in the community.

Mr. Kauffman was married three times, his first wife being Elizabeth Martin, and his second Mary Hertzler, was born in 1806, and died when fifty years of age. She was born and reared in Manor township. They became the parents of eight children: Christian H.; Benjamin B., who resides at the Gingrich Mill in Manheim township; Isaac C., deceased; Mary H., widow of John Nestleroth, and living in Manheim borough; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Buckwalter, of Kissel Hill; Barbara, who died unmarried; and two who died in infancy. Mr. Kauffman married for his third wife a Mrs. Reist. He and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church, of which Mr. Kauffman was a deacon for many years.

CHRISTIAN H. KAUFFMAN was born Feb. 17, 1827, and was reared on the farm. His education was secured in the common schools, and when he was twenty-three he began life for himself. For eleven years he had his home in Manheim township. During the first seven years of that time he cultivated his father's farm on shares, and then bought the farm, consisting of 112 acres. About four years later he sold it and bought a smaller farm of sixty-four acres, a mile south of Petersburg, where he carried on general farming until his retirement, in 1891, when he removed to Petersburg, where he had his home until his death. His honesty, industry and intelligence united to make and keep a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Kauffman was married twice, first in 1849 to Miss Mary Huber, daughter of John Huber, of Manheim township. To this union were born: John, who is deceased; Abraham, a missionary of the Mennonite Brethren of Christ in the West; Amos, deceased; Fannie, wife of David Groff, of Bird-in-Hand; Mary, wife of Jeremiah Barts, of Mt. Joy township; Annie, wife of John E. Hess, of East Hempfield township; Jacob, a farmer in Missouri; Lizzie, wife of Emanuel Hertzler, of Philadelphia, Pa., and the mother of Esther, Aldus and Harry. Mrs. Mary Kauffman died March 11, 1886, lacking but a few days of being fifty-six years old.

Mr. Kauffman married for his second wife the widow of Jacob Odenwalt. She was born in Manor township March 25, 1836, daughter of Martin Dambach, a resident of Manor township, now deceased. By her first marriage she was the mother of five children: Lizzie, wife of John Hoffmaster, of West Hempfield township; Susan, wife of James Coxen, of York county; Martin, deceased; John, living in Lancaster; and Mary, wife of Joshua Lewis, of Columbia. Mr. Kauffman belonged (as does also Mrs. Kauffman) to the Old Mennonite Church, and was highly respected in the community where his useful life passed.

John Kauffman, the eldest child of Christian H. and Mary Kauffman, left a widow and six children. He married Amanda Shriner, and they had seven children: Clayton, Elmer, Ellen, Amanda, Lizzie, Naomi, and Mamie, the latter deceased. Clayton married Ida Shaub, and they have one son, Lester; Elmer married Emma Huffman, and has one son, Herman; Ellen married James McCauley, and they have two children, Edna and Paul; Amanda married George Shaub.

Abraham Kauffman, the second child of Christian Kauffman, married Lizzie Hurst, by whom he had four children, Ada (Mrs. Burkholder), Harvey, Elmer and Alvin.

MICHAEL BRECHT, one of the leading citizens of Lancaster, and a retired hotel man of that locality, was born in Lancaster Nov. 2, 1854, son of Michael and Elizabeth (Hillesine) Brecht, natives of Baden, Germany, where they married and lived until 1848. Then, attracted by the accounts they had heard of the opportunities in America, they emigrated, and settled in Lancaster, Pa. In his native land the father was a farmer by occupation, and naturally followed the same calling in the new home. He died in 1879, when he was sixty-nine years of age, very highly respected by the entire community. His wife died in 1877, aged sixty-five, and they are buried in Lancaster cemetery. Both were consistent members of St. John's German Reformed Church. The father was a member of Red Jacket Tribe, Red Men. The children born to their union were: Christopher (deceased) married Catherine Blessing; Jacob (deceased) married Mary Loucner; Barnard (deceased) married Catherine Lewis; Francis, born in 1850, died in 1882, unmarried; Michael is mentioned below. In addition to farming, on his small property of four acres, in the Eighth ward, the father also did rafting on the Conestoga creek.

The early history of Michael Brecht, Jr., was the same as that of any farmer boy, for he worked for his father, and attended the public schools whenever opportunity offered. At the age of sixteen, however, he began to learn the trade of cigarmaker, at which he worked four years, when his attention was attracted toward the oil fields of Pennsylvania, and he was then engaged for three years operating steam pumps. He returned to Lancaster, where after a few years he engaged in the hotel business, and for eleven years, from 1891 to 1902, he operated one of the best and most popular hotels in the city, at the latter date transferring it to his nephew, William C. Brecht, who continues it under the old and justly famous policy.

All through life Mr. Brecht has made it a rule to devote himself to whatever line of business he was pursuing, and as a result of his thrift and foresight he has been unusually successful, and can well afford to enjoy some of the comforts his industry has procured for him. In religious matters he is a member of St. John's German Reformed Church. Politically he reserves the right to vote as his opinions dictate, preferring to select a man according to his fitness for the office rather than to be entirely guided by party policy. In all his dealings he has won and retained the respect of his fellow-citizens, and he has a host of friends with whom he is deservedly popular.

BAYARD T. LOCKARD is a conductor and assistant yardmaster in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with his home in Columbia, where he was born Sept. 28, 1854. He is the grandson of Charles and Elizabeth Lockard, of Lancaster county, his grandfather being of English, and his grandmother of German descent. Charles Lockard was a shoemaker and river pilot who spent his life in Columbia, where both he and his wife passed away. The father of Bayard T. was John Lockard, also of Columbia, who was a foreman in the stone quarries of Chickies, Pa. He died in 1883, having reached the age of seventy-three years. His wife was Hannah Long, of Lancaster county, whose father, Joseph, was a soldier in the war for independence. She died in 1880, in her seventieth year.

Bayard T. Lockard was the eighth of their ten children, the others being Elizabeth, Mary, James, Charles, Patience, Jennie, John, Kate and William. Elizabeth married Wesley Davis and is now deceased. Mary is the widow of Samuel Musser, late a Pennsylvania conductor. Charles is a passenger engineer, and lives in Philadelphia. James was a member of Co. K, 45th P. V. I., and fell a victim to the privations suffered while a prisoner at Andersonville. Patience became Mrs. Joseph Hogendobler, and is dead. Jennie is unmarried and resides in Chicago, Ill. John has retired from business and has his home in Columbia. Kate married Thomas Hinkle, a bricklayer of that place, and William died in childhood.

Mr. Lockard, when a boy of fourteen years, began work in the rake factory of his native town, and at the age of seventeen obtained a position as brakeman for the Pennsylvania Company. After two years he was assigned to work in the yards, and after a few years more experience as brakeman, flagman and conductor, was made yard master, a post which he filled for seven years. He then again went upon the road as a conductor, and has continued with the road in that capacity, occasionally doing extra work as yard master. He is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and an active worker in the Pennsylvania Railroad Y. M. C. A. He belongs to the United Brethren Church, and in politics is a Republican. His tastes are domestic and literary, and his library contains a well-selected assortment of volumes. He was married in August, 1883, at Mountville, to Miss Mary Quinn. Their union has been without issue, but they have reared an adopted daughter from her childhood.

Mrs. Lockard was born at Danville, Pa., in 1865. Her grandfather, John Quinn, came to America from South Wales and settled at Scranton, where he died. Her father was named Henry, and her mother was Anna Lewis, their marriage taking place in Danville. She was their only child. Henry Quinn came to this country with his parents when a boy of twelve years, and learned the trade of an iron worker; he passed his life at Danville and Columbia, and died June 18, 1872, in his forty-third year. His wife was the daughter of Stephen and Margaret (Mowery) Lewis, of Muncy, Pa. Mr. Lewis was a tailor, and died in Bellefonte, Pa. His widow, who was born in July, 1816, is still living in Sunbury, Pennsylvania.

FRANCIS HERR (deceased). This name is numbered among the prosperous farmers who did much to develop Lancaster county, for he spent his life engaged in agricultural pursuits, and died near his birthplace in December, 1852. His remains were interred in the Longenecker cemetery.

Mr. Herr was born in West Lampeter township, Lancaster Co., Pa., in 1786, son of Rev. Francis Herr. Reared upon a farm, and receiving such educational advantages as were within the means of his parents, he adopted farming as his life occupation, although later in life he was often called upon to settle estates, his well known probity and keen sense of justice making his services satisfactory to all concerned. Although not a member of any denomination, he was interested in and gave generously to the New Mennonite Church. At his death Lancaster county lost one of its best citizens, and his family a wise and loving head. Although half a century has passed since his demise, he is remembered with affection, and his name is held in respect as the result of a life of uprightness and honorable living.

In May, 1813, Francis Herr married, in Lancaster, Frances Neff, who was born in Strasburg township, Lancaster Co., Pa., in 1791, and died in West Lampeter township in 1871; she was buried by the side of her husband. She was a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Herr) Neff, of Lancaster county. The following family was born to Mr. and Mrs. Herr: Elizabeth, widow of Adam Herr, of Strasburg, Pa., has two children: Anna C. (deceased) married Martin Weaver, of Lancaster county, and had four children: Amos F., a retired farmer of West Lampeter township, married Anna Frantz, and had twelve children; Frances is at home; Charlotte, widow of Henry Herr, lives with her two sisters, Frances and Amanda (she has one child, Lizzie F.); Cyrus N., a retired farmer of Lancaster, married Ella A. Brackbill, and they had nine children; Amanda is at home; Mary A. died young; Franklin J., who died in 1892, married Sarah Frantz, and they had twelve children.

SAMUEL KURTZ ZOOK, the popular and enterprising jeweler in Lancaster, is a son of Morris Zook, a leading leather dealer of Lancaster, and in both paternal and maternal lines comes of ancestry distinguished for enterprise and worth.

Before coming to Lancaster Morris Zook was the proprietor of a woolen mill in Providence township, where the Zooks have been prominent people for the past several generations. Mr. Zook was married, in 1866, to Miss Elizabeth S. Locher, daughter of the late Henry T. Locher, who was one of the pioneer morocco tanners and manufacturers of Lancaster, and who, as keeper of the Lancaster county prison for years, won a reputation as a humane and honest official that extended all over the State. Three children were born to the union of Morris Zook and Elizabeth S. Locher: Catherine; Harry L., who for several years has been engaged in the leather business on East King street; and Samuel Kurtz Zook, the jeweler.

Samuel Kurtz Zook was born on the old homestead, in Providence township, Dec. 21, 1867. His parents removed to the city when he was four and a half years old, and he acquired his education in the public schools, leaving the Boys' High School to learn the jewelry trade with H. Z. Rhoads, with whom he remained six and one-half years. He then spent one year in the finishing department of the Lancaster (now Hamilton) watch factory, after which he went to Trenton, N. J., where he became final inspector of work, a responsible position, which he held for one year, and then resigned to go to Waltham, from which place he went to Keyser, W. Va., where for four years he was manager of a jewelry store. Soon after his marriage Mr. Zook returned to Lancaster, and, purchasing the jewelry store of Walter C. Herr, at the corner of North Queen and East Orange streets, proceeded to enlarge and remodel the place until it has become noted for its beauty and for the excellence of its goods. The business has more than quadrupled since Mr. Zook took hold of it, and so large did it become that, in the spring of 1901, he found it necessary to have more room, which he secured by adding the store room on the north, this giving him a frontage of thirty-eight feet on North Queen street, with a depth of thirty-five feet, constituting the handsomest store in Lancaster. Thoroughly practical in the business, as may be inferred from the watch factory and other experiences which we have referred to in his career, Mr. Zook was not long in meeting with extended and substantial recognition, the extent of which may be judged from the fact that he supplied and put in the new courthouse clock (of which he was custodian for six years), and the clock in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

On Aug. 9, 1893, at Keyser, W. Va., Mr. Zook married Miss Birdie Miller, daughter of John Miller, a merchant of that town. Fraternally Mr. Zook belongs to the blue lodge of Masons, the Benevolent Order of Elks and the Young Republicans; religiously he is a member of the First Presbyterian Church. John Miller was born in Glasgow, Scotland, came to America when thirteen years old and settled in West Virginia, where he was a merchant, and was postmaster under President Harrison; he married Margaret McCan, and they had seven children.

JACOB LEFEVER. Among the substantial and leading farmers of East Lampeter township perhaps none are better known than Jacob Lefever, as during a period of forty-nine years he regularly attended market and successfully disposed of his surplus, dealing fairly and honestly with his patrons, and thus making many friends.

Jacob Lefever was born in Millport, Lancaster county, Dec. 19, 1826, a son of John and Magdalena (Neff) Lefever. Until he was sixteen years of age he remained at home, but at that time his father, desiring to see his son being prepared for a future useful life, hired him out, according to the custom of the time, to Henry Doner, a farmer, stipulating that the lad should be permitted to attend school during the winter sessions. This farmer was one of the kind that believed that the less education a man possessed, the more manual labor he could perform, and when he discovered that his new boy was able to read, write and understood mathematics, he decided that more education would not be good for him. The two succeeding years were passed by Mr. Lefever with this farmer, but he then returned home and remained until his twentieth year.

About this time his brother Daniel gave him an opportunity to live with him and assist on his farm, and here Jacob remained for a year, when he decided to visit his Ohio relatives. At that time the trip was almost a stupendous event in the life of a farmer boy, but young Lefever bravely started upon his travels. Going by rail to Harrisburg, he there took the canal boat to Pittsburg, thence to Cincinnati by the old stern-wheel steamboat down the Ohio, and from there he reached Dayton by means of a stage coach. After six months passed in the society of his Buckeye relatives, he went home and remained there the following year, when he again became a member of his brother Daniel's family, where he continued until his marriage with Annie Kreider, Nov. 15, 1849.

Mr. and Mrs. Lefever began married life on a fine farm of 103 acres, in East Hempfield township, and lived there busy and comfortable for fifteen years. In 1864, Mr. Lefever bought his present farm in East Lampeter, and with the exception of the residence, has made all of the improvements upon it. These represent a considerable outlay, as all of them are of the most substantial character, and are well fitted to the large farming operations which he carried on. Mr. Lefever has owned several other farms, one of them having been located in Upper Leacock township, and at one time he also owned the farm which adjoins his, but this he gave to his son. In connection with his farming, the constant attendance at market for so long a period has entailed much labor, and during forty-nine years his pleasant face was seldom missed by the attendants of the Lancaster market.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lefever are: Susanna, who married Henry Buchwalter, a farmer of East Lampeter, and has four sons and three daughters; Annie, who died at the age of eleven; Abram, born Sept. 20, 1854, and died in 1899, leaving a widow, Anna Burkholder (with four daughters), who now lives with her father in Upper Leacock township; Mary Ann, who died in childhood; Melinda, born May 1, 1859, and died at the age of five years; John, born Aug. 7, 1861, and married to Luetta Buchwalter, and by whom he has four sons and three daughters; and Frank, born Dec. 8, 1868, and married to Mary Landis, by whom he had one child, now deceased, and they rent the home farm.

All his life, Jacob Lefever has been a hard-working man, and has always possessed the esteem of the community in which he has had his home. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and faithfully strive to live up to their religious professions.

HENRY M. HOUSER, an active and eloquent member of the Lancaster Bar, has an ancestry that dates back to the early history of Lancaster county. His grandfather, John Houser, a farmer, was born in Adamstown, this county, on the ancestral acres, and his son, Abraham, the father of Henry M., was for years a merchant tailor of New Holland, but is now leading a retired life. Abraham Houser married Miss Anne Louisa Brubaker, daughter of Henry Brubaker, at one time a farmer, and later a hotel-keeper. They had five children: Ida, wife of Lewis Murr, of Lititz; Handford F., assistant manager of the Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan Railroad, living at Elkhart, Ind.; Henry M.; R. B., a machinist, of Lancaster; and Etta M., at home.

Henry M. Houser was born in New Holland in 1860, and received his education in the local schools and Chambersburg Academy. In 1879 he entered the law office of D. P. Rosenmiller, read and studied closely, and was admitted to the Bar in 1881, and to the Supreme court in May, 1884; later he was admitted to practice in the Superior and United States District courts. Mr. Houser conducted a case before Judge Butler as early as 1885, though only admitted to practice in 1881.

Mr. Houser is a Republican, and as he is a forcible and popular speaker his services on the hustings are in much demand. He took a very active part in the first McKinley campaign. This same power of oratory has made him very prominent in criminal cases, and to this side of practice he has given more than ordinary attention. As solicitor for the board of prison inspectors of Lancaster county he served one term. Mr. Houser is a director of the Champion Blower & Forge Company, of Lancaster, and of the American Mechanics' Building & Loan Association of that city.

In religion Mr. Houser is identified with the M. E. Church. Socially he is a Mason and has risen to the Lodge of Perfection, and he is a past officer of the Benevolent Order of Elks. Mr. Houser owns and occupies a commodious modern house at No. 323 North Lime street, Lancaster. He is rearing a boy whom he took as a protegee, and to whom he is giving as much care and attention as though he were his very own. In all the walks of life Mr. Houser is popular and much esteemed.

B. FRANK BARR, the florist, is one of the leading and responsible business citizens of Lancaster, and his establishment, the "Floral Bazar," located at No. 32 West King street, is the center of interest for all of the residents of Lancaster who delight in a lavish and beautiful display of flowers, at all seasons of the year. His success in the floral line has given him a reputation which extends all over the State.

Mr. Barr was born in Greenland, Lancaster county, Aug. 28, 1871, son of Benjamin M. and Lydia (McMullen) Barr, who are still residents of Greenland, where they live retired. Young Frank was reared on a farm and acquired his early education in the public schools, finishing with a thorough training for a practical career in the Lancaster Business College. When he was nineteen years of age he decided to become a florist, and with this end in view, he connected himself with the establishment of the Dingee-Conard Co., of West Grove, Chester county, with whom he spent two years, gaining a complete knowledge of all the details. Later he was connected with the trade in Harrisburg, and then embarked in the business for himself, buying a large plant in Lancaster. When Mr. Barr took charge of the business in this place he was somewhat handicapped through the poor business methods which had formerly prevailed, but he immediately applied himself with enthusiasm and energy, and soon displayed such a complete knowledge of the art of floriculture, together with the business methods which are, also, most necessary to ensure success, that he gained the confidence of his associates and the trade, and is acknowledged to be a leader in his line in the State.

Mr. Barr's greenhouses are located on Cottage Place, just off of Columbia Avenue, West End avenue, and First street—a most desirable location, in every way. His plant covers an immense area, there being more than twenty-one hothouses, with 75,000 feet of glass. Here he grows in perfection all kinds of flowers and foliage plants, making a specialty of tropical plants, and has developed a large business in the cut flower trade. His patrons have found that he can supply all kinds of flowers, for private and public festivities or other occasions, at much less than would be required if the orders were sent to Philadelphia.

Mr. Barr's trade is both wholesale and retail and covers almost all of the United States. Until 1897 his trade was wholly wholesale, but, as there had been a constant and growing demand for local accommodation in the retail line, Mr. Barr yielded to it and he has fully supplied the public want. The greater part of his attention, however, is given to his wholesale business, in which alone he employs from ten to fifteen capable assistants. Since 1897 his retail business has grown to such proportions that he has found it advisable to issue a retail as well as a wholesale catalogue. Many of his choice specimens have been exported from other countries, his houses offering a rare and wonderful collection of the most desirable plants both of home and foreign growth.

Mr. Barr is connected with the American Florists Association, the B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 142, of Lancaster, and the Young Men's Republican Club.

No man in this community has done more, perhaps no other man has done as much, to create and encourage a love for flowers as has B. Frank Barr. His unusual success in all lines of floriculture, and particularly in the matter of growing chrysanthemums, carnations and American Beauty roses, has created a demand for his goods that extends far beyond the confines of Lancaster county. It is not only as a grower that Mr. Barr is noted, but also as a decorative artist, his taste in the floral arrangements and designs for festive or other occasions making his services most desirable.

Although his fellow citizens have not been slow to acknowledge their pride in his achievements, Mr. Barr is modest and unassuming, and is ever ready to assist his patrons in his lines, many of whom have come to depend entirely upon him, not only for their decorations, but for other arrangements.

PETER R. EABY, now living retired in East Lampeter township, was born Sept. 25, 1841, in East Earl township, and was for many years identified with the prosperous farmers of Lancaster county.

Peter Eaby, the father of our subject, was born Sept. 10, 1804, in Leacock township, this county, and was educated in the local public schools. In 1830 he wedded Miss Annie Runk, daughter of Jacob Runk, and to this union were born eleven children, three of whom died in infancy: Susan became the wife of Jacob Evans: Mary wedded Jacob Senich; Elias is a resident of Atlantic City; Annie is the wife of Aaron H. Bair; Peter R. is our subject; Adam is deceased; Elizabeth is the wife of Samuel G. Souder; Daniel, resides in Fetterville, Pa. The mother was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. Mr. Eaby in politics was a Republican, and he held the office of school director for some years.

Peter R. Eaby remained at home with his parents until he was about twenty-eight years of age. His education was acquired in the common schools of the county. When he began farming for himself he followed that occupation two years on his father's farm, after which he moved to Paradise township and farmed there for ten years. He has since lived retired. Mr. Eaby is a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He has always affiliated with the Republican party in politics, and has held the office of tax collector for about twelve years.

Our subject wedded Miss Annie Longenecker, of Lancaster county. They have no children. Mr. Eaby is one of Lancaster county's most progressive men, and he is very highly respected in the community in which he lives, a fact to which his long continuance in office, bears most convincing testimony. He is public-spirited, and is fully alive to all the best interests of his church and community.

ROBERT CLAYTON SELDOMRIDGE, one of the leading grocers of Lancaster, is regarded as one of the most prominent and successful business men of that city. He is a native of Pennsylvania, born Dec. 31, 1862, in Monterey, Lancaster county.

Benjamin T. Seldomridge, father of Robert C., was a son of Isaac Seldomridge, a native of Lancaster county, a farmer by occupation, and a Lutheran in religious faith. Benjamin T. married a daughter of the late Robert Bursk, and five children graced their union: Catherine B., wife of Darius Simmons, of Lancaster; Ella M., wife of Frank Good, a farmer of Bareville, Pa.; Rev. I. N., pastor of the U. B. Church at Harrisburg, Pa.; Robert C., who is more fully spoken of farther on; and Howard G., who, after taking a three-years course at Curran's College of Oratory, in Boston, was graduated May 6, 1903, and on May 8th (two days later), gave a recital in the Martin Auditorium, Lancaster. The father of this family has been a school director, and secretary of the board of Upper Leacock township for twenty-five years continuously.

The Bursks trace their ancestry back to the time when three brothers of the name were captured by the Indians, one of the three surviving to tell the tale of their terrible adventure. This one settled in Bucks county, Pa., married, and had three sons, and one of these sons was the great-grandfather of Robert Bursk, previously mentioned.

Robert C. Seldomridge received his education in the public schools in the neighborhood of his place of birth. At the age of sixteen years he came to Lancaster, and, entering the store of D. S. Bursk as junior clerk, remained until he was twenty-eight, at which time he received the appointment of manager of the grocery store in Lancaster which was opened by a Philadelphian at Nos. 18 and 20 North Queen street. In 1895 this Philadelphia concern failed, and on Sept. 28, 1895, Mr. Seldomridge became the owner by purchase. The original store was more than doubled in size, while the trade has quadrupled, all due to the thorough business acumen of its wide-awake owner, who has fairly won a place among the successful men in the community in which he lives. The business had now attained to such proportions that Mr. Seldomridge was compelled to seek a larger store room, which he found at Nos. 6 and 8 North Queen street.

On June 16, 1885, Robert C. Seldomridge was married, at Intercourse, Lancaster county, to Miss Harriet E. Sample, daughter of Dr. S. R. Sample, a prominent physician of that section, and member of one of the oldest and most highly esteemed families of Lancaster county. Seven children were born of this union, five of whom are yet living, viz: Edna R., Florence A., Robert B., Helen E. and S. Warren. All but the youngest are attending school.

Mr. Seldomridge is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, and socially is affiliated with the F. & A. M. (blue lodge, chapter and Lodge of Perfection), the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. Politically he is a member of the Young Republican Club, being a zealous and enthusiastic Republican, though never obtruding his opinion upon others.

JOHN E. MALONE, one of the prominent and representative members of the legal profession in the city of Lancaster, is a native son of the place, although his long line of ancestry reaches far back in the history of Ireland. To these ancestors Mr. Malone is indebted for many fortunate characteristics which have eased his way to success—the quick wit, the ready comprehension and the active brain belonging to descendants of Irish stock, who now make up so large and important a part of the citizens of the United States.

Thomas Malone, an honest and industrious wheelwright and miller, whose birthplace and lifelong home was in County Cavan, Ireland, was the great-grandfather of John E. Malone. He married a maiden of the same county, Jane Lee, and they had a family of seven sons born to them, namely: John, Thomas, James, Patrick, Hugh, Bernard and Michael, all of whom, with the exception of John, came in the course of time to America, and became prominent and successful citizens.

James Malone, son of Thomas, married Alice McGraw, also of County Cavan, Ireland, and in 1845 emigrated to America, settling for one year in New York, later moving to Philadelphia, and late in 1846 reaching Lancaster, where he entered upon his business of contracting and building, becoming well known and prosperous.

Richard A. Malone, son of James, and father of John E., of Lancaster, requires no introduction to the residents of that city, although his large business contracts keep him outside her borders a great portion of the time. Mr. Malone was born in County Cavan, Ireland, in 1834, and came with his parents to America in 1845. He is widely known for his excellent work in the contracting and building of bridges and tunnels, some of his work justly entitling him to rank with the leading men in his line. This was notably the case in the construction of the Dorchester (Mass.) bay tunnel, which at the time was regarded as a feat of engineering skill. In this great work he was associated with David McN. Stauffer. Mr. Malone has built many miles of the Vanderbilt railroad system, and his work for other lines, in the way of bridges and tunnels, has been so satisfactory that his services are in demand all over the country.

The first marriage of Richard A. Malone was to Miss Mary Gilliece, who was born in Philadelphia, daughter of James Gilliece, a native of Ireland, and a prominent contractor in Philadelphia. The second marriage of Mr. Malone was to Ellen, a sister of his first wife; she died in May, 1902, aged fifty-two years. The children of the first union were: Richard J., a graduate of St. Mary's College and the Harvard Law School, now an ex-attorney and railroad contractor in Philadelphia; Alice R., wife of Thomas S. Galvin, a florist of Boston, Mass.; Raymond, a contractor in Philadelphia; Elizabeth, wife of E. A. McGloughlin, an attorney in Boston, Mass.; John E., of Lancaster; Mary, wife of Col. James Duffy, of Marietta, Pa.; Regina, who died unmarried at the age of thirty years; and Charles, who is engaged with his father in business. Children as follows were born to the second marriage: Edwin, deceased; Dr. Clarence M., a physician in Lancaster; James, deceased; and Miss Edna, at home. Mr. Malone educated all his sons in St. Mary's College, at Emmitsburg, Md., with the exception of Dr. Clarence M., who was educated at Fordham College.

John E. Malone was born in Marietta, Lancaster county, Jan. 8, 1862, and after receiving a preparatory education in the public schools entered Emmitsburg (Md.) College, graduating in 1881. His legal studies were pursued under Jacob L. Steinmetz, in Lancaster, and he was admitted to the Bar in 1884. Mr. Malone early made himself felt in politics, and for a period of eight years served as chairman of the Democratic County Committee. During the four years of President Cleveland's second term he was the efficient and popular postmaster at Lancaster, and has been very active in all the movements of the party in this section of the State.

Mr. Malone married (first) Josephine Duffy, who was born at Marietta, Pa., daughter of Col. James Duffy, and died within a year of their marriage. His second marriage was to Mrs. Mary A.

(Audenreid) Sherk, who was born in Philadelphia.

Mr. Malone's fraternal connections are with the Hamilton Club and the B. P. O. E. He has friends everywhere, and he is pointed to from all sides as a representative member of his profession.

W. EDGAR BATES, M. D., chief consulting physician of Dr. Barnes, a prominent specialist of Lancaster, was born Feb. 16, 1865, in Lehigh county, this State, of which his parents, George P. and Sarah A. Bates, were also natives. His literary education was acquired in the high school of Allentown, Pa., and at Muhlenburg College, and in 1883 he entered Jefferson Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1886 with the degree of M. D., though he spent the year of 1885 in the University of Pennsylvania. The year following his graduation was spent in the Philadelphia Hospital, and at the end of that time he entered the office of Dr. A. W. Duvall, of Philadelphia, with whom he was connected two years. He was next associated with the "Green's Nervura" people in Boston, as one of the consulting physicians, or rather corresponding physician, and remained with them until 1896, when he formed his present connection with Dr. Barnes at Lancaster, Pa., assuming full control of the large practice of that gentleman in Lancaster, in September, 1899. Their specialties are ear, nose, throat, lung, nervous and chronic diseases, all of which are treated at their office. They are very careful in the diagnosis of any and all diseases that come under their care, and deal frankly with each and every case. They also treat by symptom blanks, and are giving relief to many throughout this entire section of the State. If there is no possibility of relief from their treatment, they hold out no hopes. Dr. Bates is a man of more than ordinary ability and proficiency in his profession, and is calculated to give the best of satisfaction to those who come to him for treatment. In 1897 and 1898 he was instructor in mathematics and hygiene at the National Farm School in Doylestown, Pennsylvania.

In December, 1889, Dr. Bates married Miss Hannah Wright Brigham, a native of Massachusetts and a representative of the old and well-known Brigham family of Boston. They have one child, W. Edgar, Jr. The Doctor and his family are earnest and active members of the Presbyterian Church and the Christian Endeavor Society. They have a pleasant home at No. 18 West Orange street, where the Doctor also has his office.

HENRY ARNDT, ex-merchant, and vice-president of the Manheim National Bank, in the borough of Manheim, Lancaster county, is a native of that borough, born Feb. 21, 1821.

John Arndt, grandfather of Henry, was the first of this family to come to Lancaster county, Lebanon county having previously been his place of residence. He was a tanner by trade, and being poor began here by using two or three hogsheads for vats. He persevered in his calling until he had secured for himself a tanyard of considerable dimensions. He also established a brickyard, and became wealthy and influential. He died in the faith of the Reformed Church.

John Arndt, son of John, and father of Henry, was born in 1793. He served in the war of 1812, and soon afterward succeeded his father in the tanning business, which he conducted until about 1825, when he purchased the Baron Steigel property, at the corner of North Prussian and High streets. There he engaged in merchandising until the spring of 1846, when he sold out to his son and son-in-law. He then started a store in Mt. Joy in partnership with Henry Bechtol, and this business was prosperously carried on for several years, when Mr. Arndt sold his interest and retired to private life.

Mr. Arndt married Miss Elizabeth Diffenderfer, who bore him two children: Susan (now eighty-five years of age), wife of Nathan Worley, of Marshalltown, Iowa; and Henry whose name opens this sketch. Mr. Arndt died in 1867, in the faith of the Reformed Church. In politics he was a Democrat, and socially he ranked among the most respected citizens of Manheim borough.

Henry Arndt was reared and educated in Manheim, and also attended school for two years in Lititz, Lancaster county. He then clerked for his father until 1840, when he went to Philadelphia, where he clerked in a wholesale jobbing house for a short time, ill health causing his return to Manheim. After a short rest he again went to Philadelphia, and had a brief experience in the wholesale house of James Kent, Souttee & Co.—the largest in the city—when he was recalled by his father, who needed his assistance. In 1845 his father admitted him into partnership, and for one year the firm name was John Arndt & Son. Then a brother-in-law of Henry, Nathan Worley, who had returned from Ohio, was admitted as a partner, and the new firm of Arndt & Worley was formed, lasting until 1857, when Henry Boyd succeeded Henry Arndt. Three years later, in 1860, Henry Arndt resumed mercantile trade, succeeding to the interest of Mr. Worley in the old firm, the style Arndt & Boyd being maintained five years, when Mr. Boyd withdrew, and Henry Arndt was sole proprietor of the business until early in the eighties, when he sold out to the Beckers.

About 1888 Mr. Arndt purchased a farm of 105 acres one and one-half miles from Manheim, where he passes the greater part of his time. He has beautified and improved the place. Mr. Arndt has done a great deal toward improving the borough of Manheim, and he has erected a three-story brick dwelling, besides a large store building and a roomy tobacco warehouse. For years he has been connected with the Manheim National Bank as director, and is now vice-president of same. For three years he was director in the Farmers Bank of Lancaster, and he was also one of the organizers, and is a director of the Manheim & Lititz Turnpike Co. He has ever been one of Manheim's most public-spirited and patriotic citizens, and was one of the first to advocate and to help organize the fire department. He has served as burgess, member of the council and member of the school board.

The marriage of Mr. Arndt took place Oct. 23, 1849, when he was united to Miss Anna B. Maurer, who was born Aug. 15, 1830, daughter of Daniel Maurer, of Mt. Joy. They celebrated the Golden anniversary of their wedding in 1898, the event being the occasion of great festivity and congratulation on the part of the immediate members of the family and a host of warm-hearted friends. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Arndt have been born twelve children, five of whom died in infancy. The others were born in the following order: Liz-zie B., wife of Dr. B. Frank Schall, of Philadelphia; Anna V., married to Charles E. Bickle, of the same city; John, of Manheim; Sadie, wife of George De Haven, of Lancaster; Harry, a druggist in Philadelphia; Susan, who died when twenty-one years old; and Willie H., who died at the age of fifteen years.

Mr. and Mrs. Arndt are members of the Re-formed Church and have led a life so consistent with the teachings of their faith that they have gained the unfeigned esteem of every person who has had the pleasure of their acquaintance.

PROF. WILLIAM WARD MOORE, A. M., President of the Madame Cotta College for Young Women, is justly ranked among the foremost educators of this community.

Charles Moore, the grandfather of Prof. William W., a native of the North of Ireland, was a farmer by occupation and a Presbyterian in his religion. Thomas Moore, his son and the father of the Professor was born in McConnellstown, Pa., and entered into rest, in 1884, when in his sixty-fifth year. Sarah Dunn, his wife and the mother of the distinguished president of the Madame Cotta College, was of Irish descent. She became the mother of three sons and one daughter, but of these William Ward is the only survivor.

William Ward Moore was born in McConnellstown, Pa., Dec. 24, 1849, and remained in that vicinity until he was seventeen years of age. At that time he became a student of Kishacoquillas Academy, then of the Williamsport Academy, and completed the Freshman year at Mercersburg College. In 1872 he entered the Sophomore class of Franklin and Marshall College, and the following year began that career as a teacher in which he has been so very successful. For several years he taught in Huntingdon county, and in 1877 was principal of a school at Wyoming, Iowa. In 1880 he returned to Pennsylvania to take the principalship of the Lumber City Academy. In August, 1886, Prof. Moore came to Lancaster, where he filled the position of Rector of Franklin and Marshall Academy. The following year the degree of A. M. was bestowed upon him by the trustees of Franklin and Marshall College. Mrs. Moore became the matron of the Academy, numbers of out-of-town students boarding in the building. Rector Moore secured the opening of the doors of the Academy to young women, numbers of whom soon attended its instruction. After some years of earnest and intelligent effort on the part of Prof. Moore and his cultured and attractive wife, he resigned. At his coming there were six students in the Academy, and when he left over one hundred were in daily attendance, and the academy was proving a valuable adjunct to the college proper. Prof. Moore had an experience in these earnest and laborious years that gave him a very intelligent idea of the needs of young women in preparing for college, and he presently organized a private school in the Haas Building on East Orange street. This was the beginning of a most important educational movement in Lancaster, out of which has grown the Madame Cotta College for young women, which has been taken under the patronage of the Lutheran Church. For a time it was maintained in Grace Lutheran Church, but it soon grew to demand quarters of its own. It is now found in the Yeates Institute Building on North Duke and Walnut streets, where it has an extensive patronage from representative families here and elsewhere.

The Faculty of the Madame Cotta College for Young Women is exceptionally strong, and consists of the following members: Prof. W. W. Moore, A. M., President, Latin and Greek; Rev. C. E. Haupt, A. M., D. D. (University of Pennsylvania), Vice President, Mental and Moral Philosophy; Paul Kieffer, Mathematics and Physics; B. G. Philgrim, A. B. (Franklin and Marshall), History and Archaeology; W. A. Kepner, A. B., Natural Sciences; Rev. F. F. Buenmyer, German and English; Ada Douglas Moore, Elocution and Embroidery; Martha M. Bowman (N. Y. School of Design), Art and French; Helen L. Hecker (Philadelphia Cooking School), Cooking and Domestic Science. Instruction is also given in Voice Culture, and on the Piano and Organ.

"The design of this institution is to prepare the girl for the domestic sphere. The branches pursued have, possibly, a greater influence upon the development of the student than is usually supposed or conceded. The work here is so arranged that the studies touch the girl at every point in the unfolding of her powers. A careful study and observation has been made of the various courses offered to girls in the past, noting the opinions of persons of both sexes who have had broad experiences in the sphere of education and allied pursuits. The general consensus is that the girls' college of the past has fallen short of fulfilling its mission.

"The schools that have been established may be classified under three heads: First, the so-called finishing school, the purpose of which is to add to the graces of the young woman those accomplishments which fit her for the drawing-room. Secondly, the one that stands for sound education. This arranges its courses on the same plan as the college for men, which, it is plainly evident, necessitates much effort on the part of the girl, which is neither congenial nor of much profit. Thirdly, the technical school, the tendency of which is to develop a taste for those special pursuits that lie within man's sphere.

"The social condition of life as it now exists, demands from the college that it trains its students for true womanhood, as it has to do with the home in every department. The truly cultured woman is she whose sympathies have been so developed that they are in harmony with the Christian mother. Reference is made to the course of study as found in the catalogue, for the scope of our work. The branches are so taught that actual life is kept before the student."

On Feb. 6, 1879, Prof. Moore was married to Miss Ada Douglas, who was born in his native town, McConnellstown, a daughter of Joseph and Nancy (Johnston) Douglas. Her paternal great-grandfather, was a native of Scotland, who became one of the pioneer teachers of Central Pennsylvania. Her grandfather lived in McConnellstown, where was born her father, Joseph Douglas, who became a merchant there and died in December, 1882. His wife, Nancy Johnston, was born in the same locality, as was her father, James Johnston, a farmer by occupation, and a soldier of the war of 1812. Mrs. Douglas, the mother of Mr. Moore, died in April, 1889, and was survived by five of her seven children.

Prof. and Mrs. Moore have two sons, Ralph D. and Carl B., bright and manly lads, who give every promise of a useful future.

JOHN LEFEVER, the eldest son of the late John and Magdalena (Neff) Lefever, was born on the old homestead farm, which is now in his possession, at Millport, Lancaster county, on Jan. 26, 1823.

Mr. Lefever was reared on the farm, and received but limited educational opportunities, but travel, reading, and a habit of close observation, have made him one of the most intelligent and best-informed men of the neighborhood in which he resides. At the age of eight years he was bereft of his mother, but he remained with his father until thirty-three years of age, when the latter died. His father's will left the old home to him, and Mr. Lefever has pursued an agricultural life, and has become one of the most esteemed citizens of the township.

In 1848, feeling a desire to see something of the country, Mr. Lefever made quite an extended trip. As he was not limited as to time, he enjoyed a leisurely journey over many miles of country, as far west as the Mississippi river, at St. Louis. Transportation, as we understand it now, was then almost in its infancy, and his initial voyage was on the canal boat, en route for Pittsburg. At Johnstown a break in the canal bank interrupted the passage of the boat, but Mr. Lefever solved the matter for himself, by taking a short cut, over the mountains, and when he again reached the canal, on the other side, took a boat and finally landed in Pittsburg. There he took passage on a steamboat for Cincinnati, but extended his visit as far as Louisville, Ky., then went to St. Louis, Mo., and then took a boat up the Illinois river, to Peru, Ill., and thence home again. The trip no doubt was a delightful one, the leisurely methods of travel permitting more enjoyment of the scenery than is possible now, in the days of lightning express train service.

Mr. Lefever married Mary, a daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Rohrer) Doner, and to this union were born: Amos, who first married Lucinda Rutter, who, at death, left four children, and second, Hettie Make; John, who died at the age of twenty-four; Daniel; a daughter who died in infancy; and Henry, who married Susan Muhr. John Lefever and wife are pious, Christian people, and are among the leading members of the Old Mennonite Church. In the community they are highly respected, and Mr. Lefever is a worthy representative of an old Lancaster county family.

COL. WILLIAM R. GERHART, A. M., whose office is in the Law Building, corner of Duke and Grant streets, Lancaster, is engaged as a patent solicitor, having a very successful and extensive business. Col. Gerhart, who was one of the youngest men ever commissioned colonel in the U. S. army (being a veteran of the Civil war), has a professional record which is as honorable as his war record.

Col. Gerhart was born in Gettysburg, Pa., Jan. 10, 1844, a son of Rev. E. V. Gerhart, D. D., LL. D., president of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church in the United States at Lancaster, an account of Dr. Gerhart's interesting and useful life being given elsewhere in this work. Col. Gerhart is the eldest in his family, and was reared and educated in Lancaster, entering Franklin and Marshall College in 1859, and graduating in 1863, with the degree of A. B. Soon after his enlistment in the army the college conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts, and, the war of the Rebellion being then in progress, there were no commencement exercises. In 1862 he was lieutenant of the State militia called out at the time of the battle of Antietam. In June, 1863, he enlisted in Independent Battery I, Pennsylvania Artillery, becoming first sergeant and later second lieutenant. With his battery he went to Philadelphia, and thence to Harper's Ferry. In the spring of 1864 he was commissioned major of the 125th United States Colored Infantry, of which he later became colonel, and from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., marched with his regiment across the plains to New Mexico, taking the old Santa Fe trail through that State and Colorado as far as El Paso, Texas. This was a difficult and hazardous march of thirteen hundred miles or more, through a hostile country, all the Indians being on the war path, and it took about three months to accomplish it. The march was made without loss of animals or materials. The regiment remained in New Mexico about a year and a half, protecting the settlements against hostile Indians, until 1867, and returned in December of that year. They had several encounters with the Indians at Fort Craig and other points, and after being mustered out, at Fort Leavenworth, returned to their homes. Col. Gerhart returned to Lancaster and became city engineer or regulator, occupying that position for four and a half years. In 1876 he opened his office as solicitor of patents, and has succeeded in becoming widely known and in building up a splendid business. Fraternally Col. Gerhart is a Grand Army man, being a member of George H. Thomas Post, No. 84, and he is past commander of the Knights of the Mystic Chain. Politically he is a staunch Republican.

In 1882 Col. Gerhart married Miss Ella Carpenter, daughter of the late William Carpenter, who is mentioned in the sketch of Henry Carpenter, Esq., a popular member of the Lancaster Bar. Mrs. Gerhart entered into rest in June, 1902.

CARL REESE EABY, a prominent young attorney at law in Lancaster, comes from a family whose various representatives have been closely associated with the history of this county for generations.

The first Eaby in this section was Daniel M. Eaby, who came from England, passed the remainder of his life on his farm in Bart township, and rose to considerable prominence in his community. He was Scotch-Irish by birth and a Presbyterian in religious faith.

George W. Eaby, the father of Carl Reese, is a prominent real-estate and insurance man of Lancaster. He married Rachel A. Reese, a highly educated lady, belonging to a well-known and substantial family of Revolutionary ancestry. Mrs. Eaby is a Daughter of the Revolution, and is eligible to membership in the Society of Colonial Dames.

Carl Reese Eaby was born in Sadsburyville, Chester Co., Pa., Dec. 4, 1867, and, his parents removing to Lancaster when he was a mere lad, his education was obtained in the public schools of the city and Franklin and Marshall College. He graduated from the city high school June 30, 1882—the youngest male graduate of that school in its entire history. Upon his graduation from Franklin and Marshall young Eaby entered the law office of Brown & Hensel, both highly distinguished members of the profession, and who subsequently attained distinguished honors, Mr. Brown on the Bench of the Supreme court and Mr. Hensel as Attorney-General of the State. With such preceptors, coupled with his own ability, Mr. Eaby entered upon the practice of the law under more than ordinarily favorable circumstances, and the promise of that bright beginning has been richly fulfilled. He was admitted to practice March 4, 1889, when only twenty-one years old.

Mr. Eaby was married, Oct. 16, 1895, to Miss Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Washington F. Hambright, the popular depot master of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Lancaster, and this union has been blessed by the birth of one child, Carl Reese, Jr.

On April 9, 1894, Mr. Eaby joined the Hospital Corps of Battery C, and during the Spanish-American war became commissary sergeant of Co. B, 11th Regiment, Provisional National Guard of Pennsylvania. On Sept. 10, 1897, he accompanied his command to Hazleton to put down the riots, remaining there three weeks; and in the latter part of 1900 he served nineteen days with his command at Shenandoah, again helping to quell strike trouble.

Mr. Eaby is an active, earnest Republican, and has given faithful and intelligent service as county auditor, to which office he was appointed by the court. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, and fraternally belongs to Lodge No. 43, F. & A. M.; Temple Chapter, No. 248, R. A. M.; Lancaster Lodge, No. 134, Order of Elks (in which he is a past officer), the Royal Arcanum, and Herschel Lodge, No. 123, I. O. O. F. Religiously he is a member of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church. He stands very high in the esteem of all who know him. His genial nature and bright personality have won him a host of friends, and he is one of the most popular young men in the professional and commercial life in Lancaster at the present time.

JOHN J. COCHRAN, late of the coal firm of John Keller & Co., and still connected with that business, belongs to an old and distinguished family. His father was John Jefferson Cochran, who was the son of Dr. Richard Ellis Cochran, of Columbia. Back of them stretches a long ancestral line to the Scottish nobility. The first Cochran came to this country from Paisley, Scotland, in the early part of the 18th century.

John Jefferson Cochran, father of John J., made his appearance in Lancaster forty-eight years ago, and was a member for a time of the firm of Cochran, Peale & Co. Drifting into journalism, Mr. Cochran became the editor and publisher of the Lancaster Union. At the inception of the New Era, he became its editor, and was in charge of the publication until his death in May, 1879. For two terms he was postmaster of the city, discharging the duties of that responsible position with a rare fidelity and an ability that won him many friends. In early manhood Mr. Cochran was married to Catherine, daughter of Thomas Baumgardner, a prominent citizen of York. To this union were born thirteen children, five of whom survive: Thomas B. and Harry B. are the editors and publishers of the Lancaster Examiner, the former having been for twenty-five years in prominent positions in Harrisburg, among them being the chief clerkship of the Senate; Richard Ellis is the vice-president of United States Life Insurance Co., of New York, and ex-president of the National Association of Underwriters; Alice Evans is the wife of Charles Morrell, of Merchantville, N. J., and John J.

John J. Cochran, was born March 4, 1856. After his graduation from the Lancaster High School he entered the old Inquirer printing office, now known as the Wickersham Company, as apprentice. Here he remained until 1876, when he took a course in the Dickenson Business College in Philadelphia, after which he resumed his work in the printing business. In 1878 he went to Texas and for eight months engaged in ranching, but was called back to Lancaster by the serious illness and death of his father. Mr. Cochran entered the lock manufacturing industry, in which he was engaged in 1879 and 1880, when he became secretary of the Columbia Rolling Mill Co., a position he held until 1893. That year he became a member of the coal firm of John Keller & Co., and here he continued until Jan. 1, 1900, when he withdrew from the firm, but still remained as an assistant in the management of the business. Mr. Cochran has always been an ardent Republican, and was elected to the common council, from the sixth ward, though he did seek the office.

Anna Maud Keller, his wife, is the oldest daughter of the late John Keller, the prominent railroad contractor. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran have four children: Marion, Ethel, Amy and John Franklin, all young and in school, the youngest being in the kindergarten.

Mr. Cochran has been an extensive traveler, particularly in the far West. He is a man of intelligence and keen observation, and his travels have proved a source of pleasure to himself and a profit to his friends, his conversation being very instructive. Of quiet and peaceful temper, he pursues the even tenor of his way, a man much respected and esteemed by all.

SIMON B. MINNICH, one of the prominent citizens of Landisville, Lancaster county, was born in that village Jan. 5, 1845, a son of Simon and Elizabeth (Brubaker) Minnich, and a descendant of Simon Muench, who was his great-great-grandfather, and who arrived at Philadelphia from the Rhine provinces, Germany, in 1751. [Vol. XVII, 2d Series, Pennsylvania Archives.] Jacob Muench son of Simon Muench, married Elizabeth Wolf in 1774, and settled on Chestnut Hill, where he followed his trade of carpenter or cabinetmaker and also engaged in farming. To this couple were born eleven children, the eldest of whom, Jacob, was born in 1775. This son, Jacob, was twice married.

By his first wife, Barbara Lare, he had seven children, and by his second, Elizabeth Gamber, he had ten. Simon Minnich, born in 1803, was the third child by the first wife, and was the father of Simon B. Minnich, the subject of this sketch.

Simon Minnich was a well-known resident of Landisville, where for many years he conducted a blacksmith shop, later engaging in farming. About 1847 he opened the "Sycamore Hotel," which he conducted for more than thirty years in connection with farming. His wife, Elizabeth Brubaker Minnich, was born in 1827. To them were born eight children, Simon B., Henry E. (deceased), Fannie B. (Trout) (deceased), Jacob B., Jonas L., Elizabeth (deceased), Ella, and Anna B. (Courtney). Simon Minnich died in 1879, at the age of seventy-six, his widow surviving until 1897.

Simon B. Minnich was married, Nov. 5, 1867, to Mary C. Wissler, born May 23, 1848, a daughter of John S. and Catherine H. (Baer) Wissler. To Simon B. and Mary C. Minnich were born six children: Simon W., born Dec. 28, 1868; Mamie W., who died in childhood; Harvey W., born July 4, 1878; Lizzie W., who died in childhood; John W., who died young; and Grace Evelyn, born June 1, 1888.

Simon B. Minnich was reared in the village of his birth, and attended public school in East Hempfield township. He was an apt and diligent pupil, with a natural talent for mathematics. At the age of nineteen he began teaching, and for three terms was engaged in this profession, teaching what is now Independence school, two miles east of Landisville. He then engaged in the mercantile business, and for a number of years conducted the general store in the village. He early developed a fondness for mechanics, the logical result of his youthful training in mathematics, and when not occupied with his business interests was working on models or plans of different useful mechanical appliances, quite a few of which he perfected and patented. His most successful invention is a baling press for baling tobacco, paper-stock, hides, hops, hay, hemp, wool, flax, broom-corn, blankets, cotton, scrap tin, &c. Several thousand of these presses have been sold, and they are in use as far east as India and the Philippines, and as far south as Peru. Other inventions that have proved either a commercial or a mechanical success are a hay hoisting machine, a stable hook, wagon jack, door fastener, double eccentric lifting device, mechanism for overcoming the dead-center in crank-driven machinery, nut lock, broom holder, and, recently, a rotary blower which gives promise of success, a model of which is now being constructed.

In 1883 Mr. Minnich erected machine shops for the manufacture of his inventions. This plant is now occupied by the Monitor Steam Heater & Generator Manufacturing Company, and is located near the Pennsylvania Railroad. In 1900 the increased business demanded better facilities for the erection of his baling presses, which have grown from a small tobacco press of 1876, weighing 150 pounds, to a mammoth all steel structure of more than 3,000 pounds, and to meet this demand a two-story brick factory, 40x120 feet, was erected and fitted with new and improved machinery.

In the pursuit of his business Mr. Minnich has visited all the large cities, and scores of the larger towns between St. Paul, Minn., and Portland, Maine. Energetic and active, never idling about, progressive, with original advanced ideas on sociology and economics, broadened by his frequent contact with the bright business men of the country, thoroughly domestic in his habits and desires, notwithstanding his frequent extended business trips, of strong and upright character, consistently advocating all measures for the advancement and betterment of humanity, and living up to his own high standards of life, modeled after the teachings of the great philosophers and educators, he receives from all the respect and confidence which he so well merits.

JOHN E. HOUSER, one of the younger business men and citizens of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, belongs to an old and honored family and worthily wears a good name that has come to him from respected ancestors.

John E. Houser was born in West Lampeter township, Aug. 16, 1870, and is a son of Christian and Emma F. (Hoover) Houser. The father was born in West Lampeter township, on the old Houser homestead, a mile and a half northeast of Lancaster, in 1844 and died in 1898. He was a son of John and Lydia (Lefever) Houser, and a grandson of Christian Houser.

Christian Houser, the father of John E., was reared on the old homestead and educated in the public schools. Remaining at home until he was twenty-three, he was then married and located on a farm of fourteen acres near Lampeter Square. After spending some four years at that point, he moved to the farm where he spent the remainder of his days, and where his widow is still living. This farm comprises eighty acres and is a mile north of Lampeter. Success attended his earnest efforts. Tobacco was his favorite crop and he did well in its culture.

Christian Houser was married to Emma F., a daughter of Jacob and Hettie (Hoffman) Hoover. She was born in Strasburg township in 1846, and is the mother of the following children: Hattie, the wife of Ephraim Weaver, of Manor township; John E.; Edith, who died in childhood; Winnie M.; Lizzie; Ella M.; Mabel A.; Emma L.; Ethel A.; Maude C. Mr. and Mrs. Houser belonged to the Reformed Mennonite Church.

John E. Houser was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools. When he was twenty-three years of age he engaged in business for himself on the farm he has since occupied. It contains twenty-three acres and is a mile and a quarter north of Lampeter. On this beautiful and modern farm in 1894 he erected a handsome brick residence, and from time to time has made other and valuable improvements. Mr. Houser, in addition to carrying on his own farm, superintends his mother's. The community entertains for him the highest respect, and has made him judge and inspector of elections, as well as calling him to other positions, complimentary to one so young.

John E. Houser was married March 23, 1893, to Emma K., a daughter of the late Adam Lefever, by whom he has four children; Kathryn E., Evelyn M., Willis L. and John L. The family is well regarded by those who know them best.

JOHN HENRY KLINE, one of the proprietors of the Boston Shoe Store, on West King street, Lancaster, is not only a merchant, but a printer and pressman, and at present has charge of the stock room of The New Era Printing Company. His grandfather came to America from Germany and settled in Lebanon county, Pa.; his grandmother came to this country from Switzerland and settled in Dauphin county, this State. Both came to this country when children.

John M. Kline, father of John Henry, was a stationary engineer of Belle Grove, Lebanon county. He married Miss Leah Landis, whose father was at one time steward of the Dauphin county almshouse. Their union was blessed with two sons, one of whom died in infancy, the survivor being John Henry.

John Henry Kline was born in Lebanon county, Jan. 1, 1845, and was educated in the public schools of his district and in Annville Academy. When he was fourteen years old his father died, and the lad was obliged to give up his studies. His first employment was in a store in Harrisburg, and in 1860, when the big "Wideawake Club" processions were being held, young Kline was told that he would be given free transportation to Lancaster, if he could get a cape and go along with a club. He secured the cape, came to Lancaster and never left it. The next morning he found employment in John Herr's dry-goods store, in East King street, but not liking that business went to printing in the old Union office, in Centre Square. His next move was to the Daily Express office, where he remained eleven years, and after spending four years on the Inquirer he became superintendent of The New Era press-room, retaining that position for twenty-one years. In 1898 Mr. Kline engaged in the shoe business, but although still retaining his interest in the shoe store he has returned to The New Era, and holds a responsible position there.

During the war of the Rebellion, Mr. Kline enlisted in Co. E, 50th P. V. I., serving gallantly until honorably discharged at the close of the struggle.

On Nov. 10, 1864, Mr. Kline was married to Miss Kate Martin, daughter of the late George Martin, one of the pioneer rope manufacturers of Lancaster, and belonging to one of the oldest and most respected families in the county. To this union came four children, only one of whom is living, Benjamin Franklin, a bright lad, who is a member of the class of 1903, Boys' High School, of Lancaster. Mr. Kline's daughter Katie, who became the wife of Oliver Baker, a salesman in Marshall & Rengier's hardware store, entered into rest in September, 1900.

Mr. Kline is an earnest member of St. John's Lutheran Church, where he was a deacon for several years. He is superintendent of Gotwald Memorial Mission Sunday-school, a position he has held for more than thirty years, and to the support of which he has given a great deal of intelligent labor. Socially he belongs to Monterey Lodge, No. 242, I. O. O. F., and to Washington Encampment, No. 11. No man in the city is more respected, and no man stands higher in the esteem of his fellow church workers, fraternal associates, neighbors and the community in general than John Henry Kline, printer, pressman and merchant.

SAMUEL RICHMOND WEAVER, Esq., a member of the Lancaster Bar, is descended from ancestors who came to America from Switzerland several generations ago, and this branch of this family were the founders of Weaverland, this county. Samuel E. Weaver, the grandfather of Samuel R., was a well-known cattle dealer living near Blue Ball, and Eli, the father of Samuel R., was also a cattle dealer—the most extensive, indeed, in Eastern Lancaster county. He, too, lived at Blue Ball, where he died in 1891, aged only forty-six years, his death having been caused by blood poisoning induced by an accident. Eli Weaver married Susan Richmond, daughter of Isaac Richmond, a farmer of Martindale. Mrs. Weaver died in 1884, aged thirty-seven years. Although the parents of Samuel R. Weaver died so early in life, both of his grandmothers are living, and each is now (1903) seventy-eight years old. Seven children were born of the union of Eli Weaver and Susan Richmond, six of whom are living, as follows: John R., a livestock dealer of Philadelphia; Elizabeth, wife of H. M. Stauffer, a coal and lumber dealer at Leola; Mary, wife of Harvey E. Weaver, a cigar manufacturer of Terrehill; Emina, unmarried and making her home with her sister, Mrs. Stauffer; Viola, wife of John H. Hornberger, traveling salesman for Miller & Hartman, wholesale grocers of Lancaster; and Samuel R.

Samuel R. Weaver was born in Earl township Jan. 5, 1868, and after receiving a partial education in the public schools of his district attended Muhlenberg College, at Allentown, from which he was graduated in 1890. After graduating from college, Mr. Weaver read law with the late George Nauman, Esq., and was admitted to practice Oct. 15, 1893. After practicing his profession until 1898, Mr. Weaver accepted a position with the North American of Philadelphia, remaining with that journal until March, 1903, when after a few years of experience in newspaper work, he returned to Lancaster and resumed the practice of his chosen profession. Mr. Weaver is unmarried.

A staunch Republican, Mr. Weaver belongs to the Young Republicans, this being the only organization of which he is a member. He has always taken an active interest in the affairs of the Republican party, having been a member of the Republican County Committee from Blue Ball for two years, a delegate from the Northern District to the Republican State convention, in 1892, and a campaign orator for the Republican cause, having made speeches in various sections. Religiously, Mr. Weaver is a Presbyterian, being a member of the Cedar Grove Presbyterian Church; and, religiously, politically and professionally, he is deeply in earnest, and the future for him is full of bright promise.

CHRISTIAN HABECKER, distiller, of Elizabeth township, descends from an old and honorable family of Lancaster county. His grandfather also named Christian, lived and died near Brunnerville, Pa., where he carried on a butcher business in connection with farming until his death, in 1850. He married Miss Barbara Hollinger, by whom he had the following children: Joseph, of Warwick township; Moses, a carpet weaver of Brunnerville; Adam, the father of Christian; David, who was proprietor and manager of a woolen mill and a distillery; Christian, a distiller in East Earl township; Jonas, a resident of Lebanon county; Isaac, a butcher near Brunnerville; and Mary, who died unmarried.

Adam Habecker, the father of Christian, was born near Brunnerville March 6, 1809, and in 1831 completed his apprenticeship to the distiller's trade with Martin Grube. He followed that work until his death, in 1893. He married Miss Susan Shoemaker, and became the father of eleven children: Isaac, deceased, was a carpenter and painter at Lititz; Henry is a blacksmith at White Oak, Pa.; Christian is mentioned below; Catherine is the wife of Isaac Dickens; Barbara is the wife of John White; Allen is a foundryman in the city of Lancaster; Benjamin is a resident of Montgomery county; Jacob is a pretzel baker of Kissel Hill, Pa.; Elizabeth is the wife of David Keath, of Unionville, Pa.; Adam and John died young.

Christian Habecker, whose name appears at the opening of this article, was born in Warwick township, Aug. 27, 1840, and lived at home with his parents until after he was of age. His education was received in the public schools, and he was well prepared for the responsibilities of active life. Remaining at home for about four years after passing his majority, he worked at farming, and then established a distillery on the farm of Mr. Sahm, which he operated for some five years. At the end of that period he bought the property where he is still established, and where he has built up a creditable reputation as a distiller, the Habecker whiskey having become famous all over the State.

Mr. Habecker married Mary Sahn, daughter of Daniel Sahn, and to this union were born three children: Catherine, who is the wife of William Reyer, of Manheim, Pa.; Henry, at home; and Lydia, who married Abram Balmer, of Rothsville, Pa. Mr. Habecker is one of the enlightened and progressive citizens of Lancaster county. Personally he commands the friendship of many by reason of his kindly character and genuine public spirit.

GEORGE B. WILLSON, whose name to the people of Lancaster county is synonymous with progress, is a native-born Lancasterian, his birth occurring in that city April 4, 1856.

George Willson, Sr., his grandfather, was an Englishman by birth, but with his two brothers espoused the cause of Ireland in 1798, and fought in the Irish army. For this his property in England was confiscated, and he never returned to his native land, but died in the land whose distress had so appealed to his sympathies.

George Willson, Jr., was nine years of age when his father died. He was born in County Derry, Ireland, in January, 1799. At the age of nineteen he came to America, and located in Lancaster, where he engaged in the wholesale jewelry business for twenty-five years. At the end of that time he retired, and his death occurred in 1881. About 1847 he married Mary A. Rettew, daughter of David and Elizabeth Rettew, farming people of Lancaster county. The Rettews have long been known in Pennsylvania, having had a grant of 1,500 acres of land direct from the Penns. To George Willson and his wife were born six children, as follows: Anna, who died in infancy; John C. and David B. (twins), both deceased, of whom John C. was a civil engineer and David B. a priest of the Episcopal Church; Rachel R. and Mary E. (twins), of whom Rachel is deceased; and George B. The father was a Democrat in political faith, and was elected a councilman from a strong Republican ward, serving as long as he would accept the office.

George B. Willson received his education in the common schools of Maytown, Lancaster county, and at the age of seventeen began an apprenticeship at the coach trimming trade with Samuel Cox, with whom he worked four years. In 1877 he went to Bellefonte, Pa., for his health, his lungs having become affected. In the fall of that year, however, he returned to Lancaster and took charge of the books of Flinn & Breneman, house furnishers, with whom he remained two years, when he bought the interest of Major Breneman. After three years he sold it back to Major Breneman, and on account of failing health sought the milder climate of the sunny South. In May, 1884, he returned to his native county, and purchased the old Buchanan home, known as "Wheatland," where he has since resided. This house is historical, inasmuch as it was the home of president Buchanan for twenty-seven years, and where he died, in 1868. The place originally contained twenty-two acres, but part of this Mr. Willson sold to H. F. Williamson, who erected a fine home. From this beginning sprang the building up of the beautiful West End of Lancaster, which contains many of the beautiful homes of the county. After selling this land to Mr. Williamson Mr. Willson bought fifty acres of the Amos Funk farm, and in company with Judge Brown platted and laid out and graded streets, and built a city of fine homes just outside the city limits of Lancaster. They also bought fifty acres more, treating it in the same manner. Through liberal inducements the car line has been extended and everything possible for the comfort and well-being of the residents effected. Mr. Willson has a large green house and makes a business of raising hot-house fruits and vegetables.

In all things is Mr. Willson progressive. He was one of the first to conceive the possibility of utilizing the Conestoga as a power to light the streets, and was one of the organizers of the Lancaster Electric Light, Heat and Power Co., of which he has been and is now secretary. In his political faith he is a Gold Democrat, and was a delegate to the convention that placed in nomination Palmer and Buckner. He has often been urged by his friends to run for office, but has refused to accept such honors. He has traveled quite extensively in the United States. In his fraternal connections Mr. Willson is a twenty-second degree Mason, and has passed all the chairs in the different lodges up to that degree. He is a communicant in the Episcopal Church, and is a vestryman and registrar of the parish of St. James Church.

WILLIAM M. CROUSE, a highly respected citizen of West Cocalico township, Lancaster county, was born Aug. 10, 1828, near Reinholds, son of William and Sarah (Marshall) Crouse, and was reared on the old homestead.

Michael Crouse, his grandfather, was the first of the family to come into Lancaster county. He was born and reared at Worms, Germany, and when he reached manhood came to this country, landing at Philadelphia, where he married Hannah O'Connor, the adopted daughter of a Mr. Carson, of that city. To this union were born the following children: (1) John married and moved to Lycoming county, and from him is descended Judge Crouse, of that county. (2) Susan married Ludwig White, of Berks county, and lived in Manheim township, Lancaster county, where their descendants are still to be found. (3) James lived in Snyder county, and became a prominent character. His son Jeremiah at one time filled the office of prothonotary in that county, and held a contract in the government service. His daughter Annie became the wife of Dr. Moore, of Philadelphia, and another daughter married Rev. Jacob Peters, a Lutheran minister then located in Manheim, but now living retired in Dauphin county. (4) Elizabeth married Samuel Spears, a boatmaker of Reading, and passed away long ago; all her children are also deceased. (5) Samuel was married to Elizabeth Binkley, of Reinholds, and they had five children, John, Mary, Hannah, Elizabeth and Sarah, all now deceased with the exception of Sarah, who is living at her home in Lebanon county, widow of John Eby, of Ephrata township. Samuel Crouse married, for his second wife, Sarah, the sister of his first wife, and to this union were born seven children, four of whom survive, Samuel, Jr., Mrs. Polly Moore, Mrs. Kate Houck and Mrs. Caroline Smith, all of whom are living in the vicinity of Myerstown, Lebanon county. (6) Hannah married Jacob Lebo, and is now living in Indiana. (7) Michael, who married Kate Pinkley, moved to York, Pa., where he and his son Henry in after years were engaged in the combmaking business. He is deceased, and his son Henry is a wealthy retired merchant of Reading. (8) William was the father of William M:

William Crouse was born Aug. 10, 1794, at Reading, where he was reared, and where he learned the combmaking business. He married Sarah Marshall, of Fritztown, Berks county, and settled near Reinholds, Lancaster county. Diedrich Marshall, the father of Mrs. Sarah Crouse, built the first house in what is now Fritztown, in 1754; it was of stone, is still standing, and belongs to a Mr. Hatt. Mr. Crouse set up a comb factory on the Crouse place, and operated same many years; it was afterward run by his son, William M., and is now in the hands of a grandson, George Crouse. To William and Sarah Crouse were born the following named children: (1) Mary, born July 2, 1824, married Louis Gettle, and moved to Iowa, where they died, leaving eight children. (2) William Marshall, whose name introduces this article, was born Aug. 10, 1828, and was the only son of his parents.

William Crouse was an active Whig and a staunch Republican. He voted for Jackson, but voted twice for Lincoln, and afterward for Gen. Grant, and was proud of his support given to the Union during the dark days of secession. He passed to his reward Sept. 6, 1872, his wife preceding him to the Silent Land, July 10, 1872. For many years both had been devout and venerated members of the Reformed Church.

William M. Crouse was married Oct. 12, 1858, to Hannah, daughter of Henry and Anna (Garman) Eberly, of Reamstown, and they have had the following children: (1) Abner L., born Oct. 11, 1860, married Annetta Openhauer, and is living at Sinking Spring, Berks county. They have two children, Jennie (who married Solomon Steffy) and Stella. (2) Henry Victor, born Jan. 8, 1863, is superintendent of the Tenth and Windsor Street Market House, at Reading, where he is also a clerk in a book store. He married Emma Hintz, of Reading, and they have three children, Rosa, Elsie and Magdalene. (3) Mary Alice, born July 11, 1864, married Benjamin Bennetch, of Cocalico, and they have three children living, Harry, Allen and Raymond. (4) George Washington, born Feb. 22, 1866, married Susan Weidner, daughter of Benjamin Weidner, of Reamstown. They have two children living, Hattie and Mamie. Their home is on the old Crouse farm, and the comb factory, built by his grandfather, is also operated by him. (5) Kate Elizabeth, born Aug. 29, 1867, married Lemon Bucher, of Reinholds, and is the mother of one child, Stephen. (6) Willie Eberly, born Dec. 7, 1868, is a merchant at Schoeneck. He married Cora Mellinger, daughter of George and Anna (Hogy) Mellinger, and they have three children, Albert, Willie and Harry. (7) Calvin Moses, born Sept. 4, 1871, married Sallie Sterner, of West Reading, Berks county, and is the father of two children, Anna and Catherine. (8) Edwin Lawrence, born Aug. 10, 1874, died April 19, 1876. (9) Sarah Bertha, born April 18, 1876, married Lemuel Snyder, of Berks county, and lives at Walters Park. They have one child, May. (10) Amy Valeary, born Aug. 20, 1879, is at home, as are (11) Julia Bessie, born April 15, 1882, and (13) John Adam, born April 26, 1885. (12) Martha Magdalene, born June 23, 1884, died Sept. 29, following.

When Mr. Crouse was twenty-one he cast a Republican ballot, and he has been staunch in his support of that party to the present time. He has served as election officer, and has been justice of the peace for five years. During the Civil war Mr. Crouse entered the army, but he did not remain at the front very long, being discharged on account of ill health. At the present time, after a long and useful life, he is living retired on the old home place, still taking an active part in political and religious matters.

CHRISTIAN H. MYERS, a general farmer in the township of East Donegal, is living on the farm where he was born, Feb. 1, 1845. Henry B. and Mary D. (Hershey) Myers, his parents, were born in Rapho township, and both are now dead. The father died on the family homestead in 1898, at the age of seventy-six. In 1844 he located his family there, and it was his home until his death. The mother died in 1894. After their marriage his parents spent some ten years in Florin, and lived for a time on another farm in East Donegal before locating on the place where Christian H. is now found. When the mother died, the father broke up his home and spent his last days with his son, Christian H. They were members of the River Brethren Church, and had two children: Christian H.; and Anna E., who died unmarried at the age of fifty years.

The paternal grandparents of Christian H. Myers were Henry and Barbara (Brenner) Myers, both of whom were natives of Lancaster county, and spent their lives engaged in farming in East Donegal township. Mr. Myers' maternal grandparents, Christ and Susan (Gish) Hershey, were natives of Mt. Joy and West Donegal townships, respectively. They were farmer folks.

Christian H. Myers and Anna Sheetz were married in Rapho township, April 14, 1874, and have become the parents of the following children: John, a farmer in Waldon, Colo.; Levy, deceased; Elam, a farmer in East Donegal, married to Emma Wiser; Mary and Amos, who are at home; and Ezra, deceased.

Mrs. Anna (Sheetz) Myers was born in Rapho township, March 17, 1856, and is the daughter of John and Catherine (Acker) Sheetz, of that township. Her mother died in 1894, at the age of sixty-three; and was buried in the East Donegal Cross Roads cemetery. They were members of the River Brethren Church. Their children were: Henry, of Florin; Barbara, who married Samuel Gible; Anna; Samuel, of Mt. Joy; Elizabeth, who died young; Fanny, who married Samuel Fissel. The mother married for her second husband, Samuel Halderman, who died in 1900. By him she had one daughter, Emma, who married William Peiffer. Mrs. Myers' paternal grandparents were Abraham and Barbara Sheetz, both natives of Lancaster county, where all their lives were passed.

Christian H. Myers has spent his life engaged in the cultivation of his farm, and takes rank among the best and most advanced agriculturists of the county. One hundred acres, all cleared and tilled according to the most modern notions, are in his farm, and he takes great pride in the neat and creditable appearance of the place. In his church matters he is known throughout the community as a prominent and reliable member of the River Brethren Church, and he is universally regarded as a thoroughly upright and honorable man.

CHARLES ALBERT SAMUELS, proprietor of the Bon Ton Millinery, in the Woolworth building, Lancaster, is descended from a family who have been distinguished in the art of manufacturing feminine headwear.

Marcus Samuels, who came to America from Posen, Germany, when a boy, became a wholesale milliner in New York City, and died there; and his wife, whose maiden name was Eva Cohn, was the daughter of a banker of Posen, and is still engaged in the wholesale millinery trade in New York City, making two trips annually to Europe for the purchase of artistic flowers and trimmed hats, and spending her vacation—after each summer's trip to Europe—in her cottage at Long Branch. Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Samuels were blessed with ten children, seven of whom are living as follows: Rosa, wife of Oscar Muir, in the millinery trade in New York City; Charles Albert; Augustus, in the same trade in Louisville, Ky.; Henry, in the millinery trade at Fall River, Mass.; Herbert, a milliner, of New York; Sidney, at school in New York City; and Hattie, at home with her mother. Surely this is a remarkable record—unequalled, perhaps, by any other family in this country; certainly not equalled by any other family in this section.

Charles Albert Samuels was born in New York City Aug. 23, 1863, and was educated in the public schools. Leaving school at the age of fifteen years, he entered a wholesale millinery establishment, and later a second establishment of the same kind, spending six years with one and five years with the other. He entered into business for himself, coming to Lancaster, and locating at No. 13 East King street. This was in 1890, and the "Bon Ton," which he then established, has steadily grown in popularity until there is scarcely a woman or girl in the city or county who has not purchased goods there. When the grand Woolworth building, on North Queen street, was completed, Mr. Samuels secured a corner store room, and removed to this new and most desirable location about March 1, 1901. It was a pronounced success from the beginning, and a more beautiful store than the present "Bon Ton" cannot be found anywhere in this State.

On June 7, 1891, Mr. Samuels was married to Miss Hattie Leopold, whose father, now deceased, was a prominent merchant of Louisville, Ky. One child has blessed the union, Elsie L., a bright little lady of nine years (1901).

Mr. Samuels belongs to the Masonic fraternity and the Benevolent Order of Elks and has been a member of the board of directors of the Harmonie Club, one of the leading social organizations of Lancaster. Quiet and unassuming in manner, ever attentive to business, and unwearied in his efforts to please his army of patrons, he richly deserves the great success that has attended his business efforts.

W. K. BENDER, of Lititz, is one of the most successful veterinary surgeons of his section in Lancaster county.

Mr. Bender is of German descent, and comes of one of the old established families of this region. His great-grandfather, David Bender, was born July 26, 1741, in Upper Leacock township, this county, and died April 20, 1824. His wife Margaret was born Oct. 1, 1755, and died Sept. 21, 1809. They were the parents of seven children: John, George, Catherine (Mrs. Joseph Heller), Susan, Sarah (both of whom died unmarried), Mrs. Whideler and Mrs. Shreiner. The father was a successful farmer, and left each of his sons a fine farm. He was a devout Christian, and one of the founders of that branch of the German Reformed Church now known as Heller's Church.

John Bender, our subject's grandfather, was born in Upper Leacock township, where he followed farming until his death. He married Elizabeth Kinzer, and eleven children were born to them: one that died in infancy; David, Michael, Maria, George, William, John, Adam, Deller, Joseph and Widler.

John Bender, father of our subject, was born in Leacock township, May 7, 1825. He was engaged as veterinary surgeon, and kept the "Rome Hotel," near Lititz, which is still in the hands of the family. He was a very extensive horse dealer, and furnished horses for the government throughout the Rebellion. In politics he was a staunch Democrat, and a very active worker for his party. Mr. Bender married Miss Rebecca Busser, and to them were born sixteen children, eleven of whom died in infancy: They are buried in the old Heller burying ground, in Leacock township. W. K. is our subject; John T. is a cigar manufacturer of Lititz; Tillie is the wife of S. K. Snively, of Lititz; Alma is the wife of H. M. Eckert, of Lititz; Clara is the wife of Frank Funk, of Pittsburg. The father died Sept. 15, 1883.

W. K. Bender was born in Leacock township Oct. 2, 1852, and lived with his parents until he was twenty-eight years of age. He received his literary education at the Lititz academy, and studied veterinary surgery with his father, finally beginning practice on his own account. He has continued to follow this calling ever since, and is one of the most successful in his line in Lancaster county. Mr. Bender kept the old "Rome Hotel" for four years. Mr. Bender has always been found reliable and trustworthy by all who have had dealings with him. His standing as a citizen is among the best residents of his community, where he holds the high regard of all who know him.

Mr. Bender married Miss Maria Bachman, daughter of Cornelius and Charlotte Bachman, and to this union have been born three children: Harry E., who is also a veterinary surgeon, a graduate of the Lititz high school, of Franklin and Marshall Academy, of Lancaster, and of the University of Pennsylvania; Miss Charlotte Irene, a graduate of Linden Hall Seminary, living at home; and John Richard, at home.

J. FRANK BUCH. One of the best-known and most influential citizens of the historic borough of Lititz, is John Franklin Buch, a native of Warwick township, where his grandfather first saw the light.

Mr. Buch's ancestry came from Germany, before the time of his grandparents, and settled in Warwick township, near Lititz. Isaac Buch, the father, was born in Warwick, in 1827, and in 1849, married Elizabeth, the daughter of John Mengle, a well-known citizen of Manheim. From this union two sons and one daughter were born: Amanda, wife of A. K. Hornberger, of West Earl, this county; Walter, a clothier of Lititz; and J. Frank, editor and publisher of the Lititz Record.

J. Frank Buch was born in Warwick, near Lititz, Feb. 16, 1852, and was educated in the public schools of the district and in the Lititz Academy. Leaving the latter institution, he came to Lancaster and entered the office of the Intelligencer, as an apprentice at the printing trade, remaining there three and one-half years, when he went to Philadelphia. There he worked for one and one-half years in a first class printing office, perfecting his knowledge of "the art preservative."

Returning to Lititz in 1876, he started a job printing office, and so great was his success that he determined to publish a newspaper, and this determination resulted in the establishment of the Lititz Record. This was in the fall of 1877, and although the paper was started as a six-page folio, it has several times been enlarged until today it is one of the newest, most vigorous and most substantial weekly publications in Lancaster county.

On March 10, 1881, Mr. Buch was married to Miss Mary E., a daughter of Mr. Valentine Brobst, of Rehrersburg, Berks county, a sister of Dr. James C. Brobst, of Lititz. From this union were born these children: Edith May, deceased; Ralph; Theodore; Mary Esther; John Edward, the last named was the namesake of two uncles; and Charles Franklin, who died young. Mr. Buch is a member of Lodge No. 253, Knights of Pythias, of Lititz. He has served as a member of the Board of School Directors, of Lititz; has been treasurer of the Springs Committee of the Moravian Church—the committee which looks over the interests and has absolute control of the world-famous Lititz Springs and their beautiful grounds; and has been secretary of the Lititz Electric Light Company from the date of its organization in 1893. In 1901 he was one of the organizers of the Farmers' National Bank of Lititz, of which he has served as secretary from the beginning.

Mr. Buch is known almost as well in Lancaster as Lititz, being personally very popular among the newspaper men of the capital city of the county, and just as popular among the leading merchants of the city, many of whom avail themselves of the wide circulation of his paper—in one of the richest agricultural regions of the state—to advertise their merchandise. Progressive in all things, and in nothing more than in the conduct of his ably-edited and neatly-printed paper; sociable and friendly with all persons who come in contact with him; straightforward in all his business dealings, and with a pleasant personality that is constantly winning friends. Mr. Buch is a veritable tower of strength in the community in which he lives.

ARTHUR BOARDMAN. Looking for one of the most popular business men as well as substantial and highly esteemed citizens of Lancaster, attention is soon called to Arthur Boardman, who is probably the largest wholesale coal dealer in Lancaster county. Although a business life of integrity entitles him to universal respect, his action in refusing to advance the price of his commodity to his old customers, gave his fellow-citizens who were suffering from the effects of the disturbances in the coal regions, a still further proof of his honest intentions and desire for only legitimate profit.

Mr. Boardman was born in Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 13, 1865, a son of Harris and Sarah (Billings) Boardman, the former a native of Griswold, Conn., and the latter of New London county, Conn. The late Harris Boardman was born in Griswold, Conn., Feb. 10, 1824, a son of John and Abby (Cook) Boardman, prominent farming people, who reared two daughters and seven sons, all of the latter displaying great mechanical genius. Until the age of eighteen, Harris Boardman remained on the farm and then entered a machine shop where his natural tastes soon made him expert and skillful. In young manhood he came to Lancaster to set up some engines and being pleased with the country and the business outlook, remained and became a citizen. His mechanical ability was noted at that time, he having set up the largest engine ever put into operation in Lancaster, up to that time. In 1856, with S. S. Spencer and Seth Spencer, brothers, he entered into a partnership for the manufacture of cotton goods, a business which was continued until 1861, when it was dissolved at the death of Seth Spencer. Then Mr. Boardman began the manufacture of gun locks, and furnished the same used in the army during the Civil war, closing this establishment when the active demand for this article ceased. He then became the pioneer cork manufacturer and conducted this business for eight years with increasing prosperity, the burning of his mill causing him to retire from active business. He was the inventor and patentee of all the present machinery used in the cork works of Lancaster, much of it of a complex character, necessary for the work done in this factory. These patents made Mr. Boardman a man of large wealth. For a time he was one of the school directors in Lancaster, and was a very prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, being a Royal Arch Mason. In politics he was active in the Republican party. After a life of unusual mental activity combined with unceasing business industry, Mr. Boardman died Feb. 10, 1871, aged forty-seven years. His acquaintance was large and he was a man who enjoyed the esteem of all. Through the possession of a fine, cultivated voice, he was popular in various musical organizations and social meetings in his community. Mr. Boardman was buried in Woodward Hill cemetery.

The children of Harris and Sarah (Billings) Boardman were the following: Dr. Walter, who was a prominent physician in Lancaster, died in 1900, married Ella Kiser, and their one son, Walter P., resides with his mother; Arthur, a leading coal merchant of Lancaster; and Harris, an electrician, is superintendent of the Orange Street plant in Lancaster. His residence is with his mother, who contracted a second marriage, with Henry Carpenter, and resides in Lancaster.

The maternal ancestry of Mr. Boardman can be traced back as far as 1640, when William Billings left his home in Brighton, Eng., and emigrated to America with his brothers Nathaniel, Roger and Richard. Ebenezer Billings, the great-great-grandfather, was a lieutenant in the French and Indian War, and a captain in the Revolutionary War, and married Ann Comstock. Sanford Billings, son of Capt. Ebenezer, married Lucy Gear. Capt. Gilbert, son of Sanford, was a captain of a vessel in the mercantile trade, and married Lucy Swan, of Connecticut. Hon. Benjamin F. Billings, the father of Mrs. Carpenter, was born in New London county, Conn. In early life he was a farmer and also a teacher of music. Later he entered into political life and served for one term as a member of the Connecticut State Senate, and three terms as a representative in the General Assembly.

At the age of eight years, Arthur Boardman went to spend some time with his mother's relatives in Connecticut, but returned four years later and has made this city his home ever since. After completing his course in the Lancaster schools, which included graduation from the High School, Mr. Boardman took a course in Franklin and Marshall College, but entered into business life at the age of twenty years. His office is conveniently located, and his yards so placed as to give excellent railroad facilities. Mr. Boardman handles all kinds of first-class coal and is next to the largest dealer in Lancaster.

In 1888, in Lancaster, Mr. Boardman was united in marriage with Mary King, who was born in White Rock, a daughter of John King, and a member of a family of prominence whose ancestors took part in the Revolutionary War. Her mother was a Slaymaker. One daughter has been born to this union, Sarah B. Mrs. Boardman is a lady of culture, and is a member of the social Society of Revolutionary Dames. Both she and husband are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Boardman is a trustee. In politics he is identified with the Republican party. His fraternal connections are with the B. P. O. E., and the Masonic orders, his family all having been prominently associated with this fraternity.

WILLIAM T. PUGH. Among the prominent business citizens of West Lampeter township, who is also an efficient public official, is William T. Pugh, the proprietor and operator of the well-known Wheatland Mills, and since 1895, the capable and reliable postmaster.

William T. Pugh was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, March 1, 1862, a son of James and Mary E. Pugh, growing up in his native place and attending the public schools. At the age of thirteen he entered the Nickel mills where he was employed until he was eighteen, and then entered upon the milling business, of which he has made so much of a success. For five years he was employed at the Pequea mills, under a Mr. Haskell and thoroughly mastered every detail, and then, in association with his brother, Samuel J. Pugh, under the firm name of Pugh & Bro., took charge of the mills and engaged in the business there for a period of two years, later assuming entire control for three years. After retiring from the Pequea mills he and his brother worked the Willowstreet mill for one year, and then returned to the Pequea mills where he took charge for the following two years.

For the past five years, however, Mr. Pugh has successfully conducted the great Wheatland Mills, doing both custom and merchant milling. In connection with D. G. Kendig, he purchased this plant, and upon the death of the latter two years later, took entire charge of the business, which has grown to large proportions, taxing the capacity of the plant. His output is largely disposed of in the vicinity, much of his trade being with the merchants of Lancaster City.

William T. Pugh was married, in 1884, to Kate Agon, daughter of John Agon, of Conestoga township, this county, and to this union have been born ten children: Elizabeth (who is a student at the Lancaster Business College), Fannie, Lydia, Mable, Carrie, Annie, Olive, Miles, Ella and John Arthur. In politics Mr. Pugh is a staunch Democrat, and he has been active in local politics. His standing is that of a good citizen, and he holds the respect and esteem of all with whom he has relations.

PETER B. ESBENSHADE, one of the enterprising and progressive farmers of Lancaster county, was born March 13, 1851, on the old homestead in Manheim township, where he was reared to farm life and obtained his education, attending the public schools. Until he was twenty-seven years of age he remained at home, and when he married he settled down on a considerable part of the homestead, his parents retaining seventy-six acres for themselves. His home is a mile north of the city of Lancaster. The improvements on the place are thoroughly modern, the house being new, and the surroundings made beautiful by the free use of trees and shrubs. In 1887 Mr. Esbenschade put up a fine barn, and he has made many other improvements on the place, every feature of which denotes thrift and prosperity. His entire attention has been given to farming, in which he has prospered steadily, and he has acquired considerable property in this county, owning four different farms and wood lots—making his total holdings about 402 acres. He believes in progress, is a stockholder in the various trolley lines in the county, and is ready to help along any movement that looks to the public good. He belongs to the board of education of Manheim township.

Peter B. Esbenschade was married Dec. 13, 1877, to Miss Susan B. Leaman, daughter of Henry Leaman, of Strasburg township, and to this union have come four children, Franklin L., Elmer L., Cora L., and Maria L., the last named dying when three years old. The family are among the most respected people of the county.

EMANUEL G. FRY, box manufacturer of Rothsville, Lancaster county, is one of the prosperous business men of his section. He descends from one of the old and honored families of Lancaster county, being a grandson of Jacob Fry, who was born in Warwick township, in 1803. Jacob Fry was a farmer, and followed that calling all his life. He was a member of the United Brethren Church in which he was a class leader. He married Miss Lydia Hornberger, and they were the parents of three children: Samuel H., the father of our subject; Michael, deceased, who was employed at general work; and Fannie, wife of Levi Hollenger.

Samuel H. Fry was born in Warwick township May 25, 1827, and lived at home until he was about twenty-three years of age. He was educated in the common schools, and in early life he learned the cooper's trade. He has also worked at carpentry, butchering, box making, etc., and by thrift and industry succeeded in making a good living. Mr. Fry was ordained to the ministry of the Evangelical Church in 1855, by Bishop Esher, and has been a very faithful worker in the church ever since. He married Miss Barbara Gutiahr, and to their union have been born three children: Emanuel G., our subject; Annie, wife of Aaron Johnson; and Elias, a box maker, of Rothsville.

Emanuel G. Fry was born in Warwick township March 25, 1852, and remained under the parental roof until he was twenty years of age. He was educated in the common schools, and then learned the trade of carriage building, with John Stark, with whom he continued three years. He then engaged at carriage building on his own account, in Millport and Oregon for about fifteen years. He has since carried on box manufacturing. Like his father, Mr. Fry is an active member of and worker in the Evangelical Church, and is a class leader. He wedded Miss Jemima Keller, and to this union have been born eight children, four of whom died in infancy; Ellie is the wife of Clayton Adonis; and Miss Clarie, Martin and Edna are at home.

CLAYTON S. WENGER. The early records of the family of which Clayton S. Wenger is a worthy representative, tell of its establishment in America, and trace clearly this particular branch in Lancaster county. In the early days in the settlement of the State of Pennsylvania, three brothers by the name of Wenger, left their home in the Old World and sailed for America, but one brother died on the long voyage, only Henry and Christian reaching these shores. Henry Wenger settled near Pottstown, Pa., and Christian came into Lancaster county, where he bought 289 acres of land, in West Earl township, from William Penn, for the sum of £44, 16s. this transaction taking place in 1741, and the land is still in the possession of the family.

Christian Wenger and his wife, Eve, had these children: Michael, John, and Henry. Michael succeeded his father in the old home, which was deeded to him in 1764, and he became the father of the noted Mennonite minister, Rev. Joseph Wenger, and the latter was the father of the no less noted Rev. Michael Wenger. The latter lived on the old homestead and left the property to his son Joseph, who lived and died there, leaving the farm to his son Michael Wenger, who was the grandfather of Clayton S. Wenger, of this biography.

Michael Wenger, grandfather of Clayton S., had a family of six sons and four daughters: Marks, Fannie, Michael, Joel, Elizabeth, Mathew, Gabriel, Menno, Susan and Maria. Joel Wenger married Fannie M. Swarr, in 1848, and to this marriage these children were born: Clayton S., of this sketch; Lizzie, born in 1853, married Amos P. Shaffer, of East Lampeter township; Susan married Clarence Lichty, of Lancaster; and A. Lincoln, born in 1864, died in 1890. In 1872 the mother of these children passed away, and on Jan. 11, 1882, Mr. Wenger married Miss Sallie Caproth, of West Earl township, from which union there has been no issue.

Clayton S. Wenger was born on Aug. 14, 1850, a son of Joel and Fannie M. (Swarr) Wenger. His education was in the district schools of West Earl, and early in life he learned the business of milling, being at present engaged in that business, and he is also the proprietor of the Brownstown Electric Works, and one of the most capable and reliable men, in a business way, in this locality.

On Dec. 5, 1876, Clayton S. Wenger was married to Miss May Landis, of Manor township, a daughter of Jacob and Anna (Herr) Landis, and to this union three sons have been born: Clarence L., born June 30, 1877, resides at home; Vincent Eugene, born April 27, 1880; and Jacob Joel, born Jan. 5, 1884, now a student in Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster. Mr. Wenger is one of the most highly respected citizens of Lancaster county, a Republican in his political views, and a worthy and consistent member of the German Reformed Church.

DANIEL B. NISLEY. In almost every pleasant town contiguous to a flourishing farming district, may be found a most excellent class of citizens who have located there late in life, after a busy and successful agricultural career. This is notably the case in Maytown, Lancaster county, and prominent in this class is Daniel B. Nisley, who has resided in the town since leaving his farm in 1889.

Mr. Nisley was born in West Donegal township, two and one-half miles east of the village, April 2, 1829, a son of Martin and Anna (Bachman) Nisley, of West Donegal township and Lebanon county, respectively. The father died on the old farm in 1831, at the age of thirty-five, and the mother remained on the farm until 1880, when she removed to Maytown, dying in 1893, aged ninety years. Both parents were buried in the Bossler Meeting House cemetery, having been consistent members of the Mennonite Church.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Nisley were: Peter, Anna and Christian, all deceased; Daniel B.; and Jacob, deceased. To the second marriage of the mother, with Jacob Brandt, were born: Joseph; and Anna, who married John Heisey, of Maytown. The paternal grandfather of Daniel B. Nisley was Martin Nisley, a prominent farmer of Mt. Joy township, and the maternal grandparents were, Peter and Anna (Kreider) Bachman, of Lebanon county.

The subject of this biography was reared by his uncle, Jacob Nisley, from the age of six years, and he remained with this kind relative until he was eighteen years old and then went to work for his brother Peter, until he had attained his majority. Following this, he assisted his wife's relatives for a time, and then, on account of the death of his brother Jacob, took charge of the farm, on which he remained until retirement in 1889, when he sold it, the estate consisting of 188 acres.

The marriage of Mr. Nisley occurred on Oct. 5, 1858, in Lancaster, to Miss Sarah Lindemuth, and the children born of this union are: Emma, who married Albert Risser, a tobacco packer; J. Frank, who conducts a meat business in Maytown, married Amelia Kantz, and has two children, Clyde L., and Alta. Mrs. Nisley was born in East Donegal township, Sept. 9, 1833, a daughter of Jacob W. and Sarah (Brocht) Lindemuth, the former of whom was a farmer until some years before his death, which occurred Nov. 28, 1887, when over ninety-four years of age. The mother passed away April 29, 1885, at the age of seventy-nine, both of them now resting in the Lutheran cemetery in Maytown; they were devoted members of Zion Children's Church during their long and useful lives. Their children were: Catherine, who married Jacob Bear; Daniel, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Sarah, Mrs. Nisley; Jacob, deceased; and John, also deceased. This was not a marrying family, only two members of it ever having wedded.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Nisley were George and Christiann (Wolfe) Lindemuth, and the great-grandfather came from Germany. His name was Ludwig Lindemuth and he purchased land in East Donegal township, between Mt. Joy and Marietta, and died in 1777.

In politics, Mr. Nisley upholds the tenets of the Republican party. In religious life, Mrs. Nisley is a member of Zion Children's Church, and is a most estimable lady.

MICHAEL W. HURST, M. D., who ranks among the able, prosperous and time-honored physicians of Lancaster county, of which he is a native, was born Sept. 27, 1835.

David Hurst, his grandfather, was born in Caernarvon township, Lancaster county, and became a thrifty farmer of that locality. He was the father of children, as follows: Henry, born in 1791; Barbara, 1792; Maria, 1793; Joseph, 1795; John, 1797; Amos, 1799; Elizabeth, 1802; and Susan, 1804.

John Hurst, father of Dr. Hurst, was born in Caernarvon township, and all his life followed agricultural pursuits there. In 1819 he married Katherine Witmer, and children as follows were born to them: Daniel, who died in childhood; Isaac, a prominent farmer of Caernarvon township; David, a fruit grower in Cornville, Ariz.; Amos, John and Benjamin, all three deceased; Samuel A., a farmer in East Hempfield township; Michael W., the subject of these lines; and Martin, who died in the Civil war in 1864.

Dr. Michael W. Hurst was reared on the home farm, and received a liberal education in part at the public schools of the neighborhood of his birthplace, in part at Millersville State Normal. In 1859 he commenced the study of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from that institution in 1861, and at once commenced the practice of his profession in Talmadge, Lancaster county, where he has since remained, having built up a highly lucrative clientele.

In 1863 Dr. Hurst was married to Miss Hattie Oberholtzer, of East Earl township, Lancaster county. Nine children blessed their union, viz: Margaret, born in 1864, is the wife of Rev. J. D. Woodring, a minister of the Evangelical Church; Minnie E., born in 1865, is the wife of A. R. Wenger, of Talmadge, Lancaster county; Anna V., born in 1867, is the wife of Rev. W. H. Hartzler, of the Evangelical Church; John O., born in 1871, resides in Cornville, Ariz.; Ira W., born in 1872, died in childhood; Willis W., born in 1875, died in infancy; Hattie, born in 1877; Spencer W., born in 1881; and Edna P., born in 1883, resides at home.

In politics Dr. Hurst is a Republican and for several years has served as school director. In religious faith he is a consistent member of the Evangelical Church, and, socially, is affiliated with the State Medical Society, and the County Medical Society. He has lived an honorable and upright life, a large portion of which has been devoted to the good of others, and he enjoys the respect and esteem of the community at large.

DAVID WATTS EMERY POISAL, member of the Lancaster school board from the Fourth ward, has a very interesting personal history. His paternal ancestors were French.

Jacob Poisal, his grandfather, was born in Martinsburg, Va., and among his children was the Rev. John Poisal, and another was Michael Poisal, a tailor, who was the father of our subject.

Michael Poisal married Elizabeth Watts, daughter of the Rev. James Watts, pastor of the Methodist Church at several important points. She was born in Virginia, while her parents were both natives of Pennsylvania. To Michael Poisal and wife were born ten children, seven of whom are living, as follows: Nannie W., widow of A. W. Tennant, of Baltimore; Clara J., widow of G. L. Swartz, of Davis, W. Va.; Maggie E., the wife of J. W. German, a druggist of Baltimore; Fannie S., widow of A. C. Roberts, of Baltimore; John W., a druggist of Baltimore; George S., a clerk in Baltimore; and David Watts Emery, of Lancaster.

David Watts Emery Poisal was born in Berkeley county, Va. (now a part of West Virginia), in 1846, and was educated in private schools until he reached the age of fourteen years, when he became an apprentice at tanning and currying in his native county. He remained at his trade until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he entered the Confederate Army, joining the 2d Va Infantry, serving under "Stonewall" Jackson for three years. At Cedar Creek he was wounded in the right arm, near the shoulder, but survived, and when the war ended he settled at Wheeling, W. Va. He worked for the same house for a period of fifteen years. In 1881 he removed to Baltimore for the purpose of engaging in the leather business on his own account, but after three years he came to Lancaster, to take charge of the tannery of A. A. Myers & Co. This was in 1884, and five years later Mr. Myers withdrew from the business, and Morris Zook, who was the "Company" in the firm, assumed the responsibility, and he has retained Mr. Poisal as his superintendent up to the present time.

On April 26, 1866, Mr. Poisal was married to Miss Christiana, who was born in Scotland, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Maurice, her father having been a well-known mining engineer. This union was blessed with one child, Elizabeth, who died at the age of two years, and whose ashes are interred at Wheeling, W. Va. Mr. Poisal was appointed a member of the Lancaster school board to fill the unexpired term of W. P. Brinton, who had removed from the ward, thus creating a vacancy. Mr. Poisal has since been twice re-elected on the board, where he has served on a number of important committees.

Mrs. Poisal has taken an active interest in the affairs of the Lancaster General Hospital as well as in the Y. W. C. A., and also in the St. Paul's Reformed Church and Sunday-school, of which she and her husband are both members. They are great workers for good purposes, and Mrs. Poisal especially may be said to be always doing good. Mr. Poisal is traveling salesman as well as superintendent for Mr. Zook's extensive leather business. Much of his spare time is devoted to the interest of the public schools. Mr. Poisal is a Democrat, and is an ardent supporter of the party.

CLAYTON R. FARMER. Among the prosperous and successful residents of East Donegal township, is Clayton R. Farmer, a tobacco raiser and agriculturist, who also owns and operates a lime kiln. He was born July 2, 1863, in West Hempfield township, a son of Samuel and Mary (Rinehart) Farmer, the former of whom died in East Hempfield township in Sept., 1863, at the age of forty-seven, the latter surviving until June, 1893, both of them now resting in the cemetery at Marietta. The children of these most worthy people were: Rebecca, who married John Kaine and died in 1878; John, of East Donegal township; George, of Martic township; Emma, who married John Christie, of Columbia, Pa.; Clementine, who is the widow of John Kaine; Malinda, who died at the age of twenty-four; Warren, of West Hempfield; Mary, who married George Strohm, of Marietta; Samuel, deceased; and Clayton R.

The paternal grandparents of Mr. Farmer, of this sketch, were John and Nancy (Hinkle) Farmer, the former of whom died in 1892, and the latter in 1837. To this union were born: Samuel, deceased; Eliza, the widow of J. P. Walter, of Marietta; Barbara, John, Kate, Anna, Margaret and Fanny, all deceased; and Mary A., deceased wife of Joseph Reim.

On July 25, 1885, Clayton R. Farmer was married to Soplua M. Stultz, and one son, Clayton S., has been born of this marriage. Mrs. Farmer was born in Marietta, Pa., March 24, 1863, a daughter of Christian and Lena Stultz, both of whom were natives of Germany, and died in Marietta, within a few weeks of each other, in September, 1870. They were worthy members of the Lutheran Reformed Church and had these children: Fred, deceased; John, deceased; Christian and William, who are in the meat business in Marietta; Sophia M.; Adam, of Jersey City; and Harry, of Jersey City, both of these being railroad men.

Clayton R. Farmer remained on the home place until 1892, engaged in farming for his mother, but since that time he has occupied his present fine farm which he conducts very profitably. Mr. Farmer is well known in that locality and the whole family is one that possesses the esteem of the community, and ranks among the representative citizens.

HENRY ROTÉ. Mr. Rote was born in Lancaster, March 15, 1859. He is of German lineage, his grandparents on both the paternal and maternal sides having emigrated from Germany in early life.

Henry and Elizabeth Rote, the father's parents, settled in Lancaster, and for several years conducted hotels at that place and in Columbia. The mother died in the latter place, her husband in Lancaster. They brought with them their son Daniel, Henry Rote's father, who was then a mere child. While yet a young man, Daniel entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as brakeman, and at the outbreak of the Rebellion, he volunteered as a private in the Union army. He lost his life in battle, being then a young man of thirty-five years. He married Catherine Wagner, also a native of Germany, who was born in that country on Christmas Day, 1837. She is yet living in Lancaster. Both she and her husband were members of the German Lutheran Church. Her father died in the Fatherland, but her mother crossed the ocean and is spending her last years with her daughter.

Henry Rote was his parents' only child. After his father's death, however, his mother married Christ Born, by whom she became the mother of four children. The eldest, George, is in the employ of the railroad company and lives in Columbia. Charles, the second son, resides in Lancaster with his mother. The two younger children have both died.

At the age of sixteen, Henry Rote went to work in the bolt factory in his native town, Lancaster. On attaining his majority he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania road as a brakeman, four years later he was made a flagman, and three years after was given the post of conductor. He belongs to the Order of Railway Conductors, and is a member of the Reformed Church. His political creed is that of the Democratic party.

On Sept. 24, 1880, Mr. Rote married Miss Elizabeth Everhart, of Lancaster, who bore him one daughter and three sons. The two elder, Alice and Harry, live at home; the younger, Charles and Raymond, are deceased; Mrs. Rote was born in Safe Harbor, Pa., Feb. 18, 1864. Her parents, John and Mary Everhart, were both born in Germany, but are at present living in Lancaster, he being a retired mechanic. Both he and his wife were born in 1840, and both are members of the German Reformed Church. Mrs. Rote is the sixth of a family of eight children, the others being: Christina, who married Harry McGlouchlin, of Lancaster; Charles; Reuben; Fanny, wife of a Mr. Cleve, of Lancaster; Jacob, living in Ohio; Anna, married to Lewis Parker, of Lancaster; and Mary, who is married and lives in the same city.

OLON Z. LANDIS. Among the prominent, intelligent and substantial farmers of East Donegal township, who now reside in Maytown, since retirement from active duties, is Solon Z. Landis, who was born in Washington, Lancaster Co., Pa., Sept. 1, 1845, the only child of Michael B. and Barbara (Zeigler) Landis, of Landisville.

Michael B. Landis was a man of education, who successfully followed the profession of teaching in Iowa, Pennsylvania, Oregon, and Colorado, and for a number of years was a land agent in Iowa. Mr. Landis possessed many talents, and was also a merchant and a surveyor and for eight years was connected with the Pension department of the government, in Washington, D. C. Never robust in health, he lived, however, to be seventy-two years old, coming to Lancaster to pass his last days, where he died in 1892. His support was given the Republican party. The death of his wife had occurred in Manor township in 1880, at the age of sixty.

The Landis family in Lancaster county, is an old and prominent one, conspicuous in many of its commercial and financial affairs. The grandparents of Solon Z. Landis were John and Mary (Bachman) Landis, of Lancaster county. John Landis was a farmer, who in time became possessed of large means, and laid out the town of Landisville, giving it his name. During life he was instrumental in organizing the Lancaster County Bank, of which he was president, and the heaviest stockholder. His years extended until he had almost reached eighty, his death occurring in 1860, when he was buried in the beautiful cemetery in the town which he had founded.

The maternal grandparents of Solon Z. Landis, were Jacob and Barbara (Lindemuth) Zeigler, the former of whom was a prosperous farmer and was a director and heavy stockholder in the Lancaster County National Bank. These families through intermarriages have become connected with many of the oldest and best families in the State.

Solon Z. Landis was reared in his native town and received his primary education in the common schools, supplementing this with some time spent at Duff's Mercantile College in Pittsburg, thus preparing himself for four years as assistant bookkeeper in the office of the Patriot, of Harrisburg. After retiring from this position, Mr. Landis began tobacco farming, on a tract of ninety acres, and for several years was engaged in Maytown, in the tobacco packing business. His present possessions include a farm in East Donegal township.

Mr. Landis was married March 17, 1878, in Maytown, to Miss Amanda Rombauch, and to this union one daughter was born, Anna Pearl, a young lady who has displayed musical gifts of a high order. Her parents have given her every advantage, and she attended for five years the Broad street Conservatory of Music, in Philadelphia, from which she graduated. Mrs. Landis was born in Maytown in May, 1840, a daughter of John and Mary Rombauch.

Mr. Landis as a prominent Republican, has held many of the local offices, and is a valued member of the Masonic order, being a Knight Templar, of Columbia Lodge.

AMOS B. MILLER, M. D. As a specialist in diseases of the skin and blood, Dr. Amos B. Miller has a deservedly large following in Lancaster, and it is doubtful if any in the town have given to these special human ailments more profound and exhaustive research. A native son of Pennsylvania, Dr. Miller was born in East Hempfield township, Lancaster county, Sept. 24, 1844, a son of Dr. John L. and Barbara (Baer) Miller, also natives of Lancaster county.

Dr. John L. Miller was a practicing physician for twenty years, and was also a farmer. During 1856-57 he conducted a mercantile business in Rohrerstown, Pa., and then returned to the seclusion of his well-tilled acres. In 1867 he went into a general merchandise business with Jacob Harnish, in Lancaster, and at the end of eight years dissolved partnership, and started another business of the same kind with John L. Baer as partner. At the end of three years John P. Swarr was admitted as a partner and Mr. Miller eventually stepped out of the business, and became manager of the Lancaster Mutual Fire Insurance Company until his death, in March, 1899, at an advanced age. He was buried in Millersville Mennonite cemetery; he was the originator of the church of that denomination in Lancaster. His widow, who lives at No. 147 West King street, is the mother of four children, of whom Amos B. is the oldest; Lizzie married Benjamin Snively, a bookkeeper in Lancaster; Fannie is unmarried and living at home; and Anna is the widow of Joseph Dikler, of Lancaster.

Until twenty-three years old Dr. Amos B. Miller lived on the paternal farm, and in 1867 began reading medicine with his father. When the elder Miller retired from practice his son assumed charge of the same, and in 1870 located in Lancaster, where he has specialized, as before stated. He has never attended a medical college, but has followed along the lines laid down by his sire, who also experienced success in the treatment of cancers, tumors, scrofula, and kindred blood disorders. Amos B. Miller was licensed to practice Nov. 25, 1881. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He married in 1857, Fannie Baer, born in East Hempfield township in 1847, a daughter of Jacob B. and Fannie (Bardell) Baer, of Lancaster county. Mr. Baer was a farmer and distiller of some prominence, and died in 1882, at the age of seventy-four. Dr. Miller is popular and enterprising, and has more than a local reputation as a skilled specialist.

JACOB KEPLINGER MANN, with the Freihofer Vienna Baking Company, 24th and Master streets, Philadelphia, belongs to one of the oldest families in Lancaster county, people who have been prominent in Manor township for generations. His grandfather was a farmer in Manor township, and in later years a hotel keeper, making the name of John Mann universally respected by his honest and upright life on the Marietta turnpike.

Jacob S. Mann, the father of Jacob K., was a farmer in the same township, but purchased property in Manheim township thirty years ago, and is living there at the present time. He married Margaret Keplinger, daughter of a farmer at Chestnut Hill, and to them were born six children, four of whom are living: Jacob K., and Henry, both of Lancaster; David and Elizabeth, at home.

Jacob Keplinger Mann was educated in the public school near Petersburg, which he left when he was seventeen years old. Coming to Lancaster to make his way in the world, he found employment in the grocery store of D. S. Bursk, a position which he held for six years. His next move was to Philadelphia, where he became advertising inspector for the Sunlight Soap Company, discharging the duties of that responsible position until Christmas, 1899, when he returned to Lancaster. After being with the firm of Reese and Poutz, Leacock, Pa., for a short time, Mr. Mann was connected with the establishment of W. D. Sprecher, Son & Company, and while there became agent for the celebrated Freihofer bread and cakes. This business grew rapidly, keeping a delivery wagon constantly busy in supplying the patrons, and its quick development induced Mr. Mann to give up his position and go into business for himself. The Freihofer goods for which he has been sole agent since Aug. 1, 1900, had grown to be a wonderful success in Lancaster and Mr. Mann received on an average of 1,000 loaves a day. Business was built up so swiftly that he was given a position by the company that took him from one city to another. At York City, Pa., his success was equal to that at Lancaster, and at Philadelphia the demand for the goods became so great that at last all outside business was cut off. Mr. Mann is now city solicitor and general all-around man for what he considers one of the finest firms in America.

When Mr. Mann returned to Lancaster, after entering the employ of the Freihofer Vienna Baking Company, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Reese, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eber O. Reese, the former one of Strasburg's most respected and prominent farmers.

Mr. Mann is not yet thirty years old, having been born July 2, 1873, but young as he is, he has shown an enterprise and pluck, combined with good judgment, that make the promise of the future bright.

PETER WEHNER. The great railroad system of Pennsylvania requires brain and brawn, skill and reliability in every department, to ensure the safety of life and property and the efficiency of the service. A very responsible class are the conductors, and Columbia is the home of many who have won their way to promotion through faithful work, and one of these is Peter Wehner.

Conductor Peter Wehner is a native of Columbia, where he was born Feb. 25, 1857, a son of Adam Wehner, a native of Germany. Adam Wehner came to America in 1830 and first settled in Baltimore, Md., where he was engaged in work for a long time on the canal between Baltimore and Pittsburg, and during this time he made three trips over the Alleghany mountains. Wages were small at that time, and during the money panic he worked for twenty-five cents a day. In 1853 he came to Columbia, having been in Cincinnati for six months, and soon after locating in the former city, he found employment with J. G. Hess and remained with him in his coal business, for many years, the latter part of the time being foreman. He died in 1872, at the age of sixty. Socially he was connected with the Knights of Pythias. The death of his widow occurred in 1882 at the age of sixty-four; both had been members of the Catholic Church.

The children of Adam Wehner were: Henry, an employe in the Lancaster rolling mill; John, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania lines; Christiann, who married John Wonder, a shoe manufacturer, of Columbia; Peter; Mary, who is the widow of Frederick Wendler, of Columbia; and Rose, deceased. Adam Wehner was a devout member of his church and was one of the chief movers in the establishment of the Catholic Church in Columbia, and his services for the church are remembered by a beautiful memorial window.

The educational advantages of Mr. Wehner were limited as he was obliged to go to work at the age of fourteen. He earned his first wages in setting up the pins in a bowling alley, where he remained six months; he finished out the year in the Susquehanna Iron Works, later finding better paying work in Bonner's coal yard, where he remained for seven years. An opportunity presenting itself, he entered into the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad as brakeman, pursuing the difficult duties of this position for five years and then was promoted to be flagman, and in 1890 was made a conductor. So many years of continuous service have made him very valuable and he enjoys the confidence and esteem of his superior officers.

Mr. Wehner was married Jan. 3, 1886, in Philadelphia, to Miss Elizabeth M. Glosser, who was born in Columbia, a daughter of Andrew Glosser.

In his political sympathies, Mr. Wehner is a Democrat and is fraternally connected with the O. of R. C., and the B. of R. T., in both of which organizations he is well known and much esteemed. As a citizen, he is respected and is known for his charities, his generous impulses leading him into much benevolence.

DAVID B. LANDIS, the lamented father of Clayton G., who is at the head of the real estate business at No. 32 East Orange street, Lancaster, and who is well and popularly known in the business, political and social circles of that city, was a son of Benjamin Landis, who was born in East Lampeter township, this county, engaged in farming, and became quite-well-to-do, owning five farms which he operated until he retired from the active cares of life. He died about 1873, aged seventy-one years. He was active in the public life of the community, serving as school director and township supervisor, and was a leading Republican of his district. Mr. Landis married Miss Mary, daughter of David Buckwalter, of East Lampeter township, and they had seven children. Mrs. Landis's father was born in the same township, and was of German descent. He was a Mennonite, and one of his sons was a minister of that denomination. Mr. Buckwalter was a prosperous farmer, and owned a large estate. His wife died in 1886, and he died at the age of eighty-eight years.

David B. Landis was born Jan. 13, 1830, in Upper Leacock township, this county, and lived on his father's farm until, when he was twenty-seven years of age, the property, comprising 117 acres, came into his possession, and from 1857 to 1867 he operated it. In 1867 he bought a mill on Mill creek, three miles from Lancaster, which had a capacity of fifty barrels of flour per day, and which he ran for six years. He then sold out and engaged in the brewing business at Lititz, for the next twelve years. His home, during this period was near Lancaster, where he owned a farm of twenty-four acres. About this time he bought the old Landis Mill, on Mill creek, and also another mill property, still further up the river, running both mills for three years, at the end of which time he sold the upper one. In 1878 he purchased a warehouse on Lemon and Water streets, Lancaster, and embarked in the grain business. In 1889 Mr. Landis assisted in organizing the Conestoga National Bank, was elected president at the start, and continued to the day of his tragic death. This institution was incorporated with a capital of $125,000 and in July, 1891, the stock was increased to $200,000. At that time the bank was removed to the present building, at the corner of King and Queen streets. Mr. Landis was also for eight years a director in the Farmers' Bank.

In 1857 David B. Landis married Miss Martha Groff, who was born in the same township as himself, daughter of Daniel Groff, an old settler and miller of the locality. Mr. and Mrs. Landis had only one child, Clayton G., who was in partnership with his father in the grain business for many years. David B. Landis was a loyal Republican. He served as school director of East Lampeter township for three years, was twice elected director of the poor, and was president of the board for one term. He was for ten years a director of the Inquirer Publishing Company, now known as the Wickersham Publishing Company. He was also a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and was one of the trustees, being chairman of the board and on the building committee.

No tragedy in a century has so moved the people of Lancaster as the murder of David B. Landis by Ralph Wireback; the deed was committed at high noon, April 7, 1898, when Mr. Landis was trying to do his slayer a friendly act; and although the criminal was ably defended he suffered the death penalty, this having been the first and only execution in Lancaster for half a century. Mrs. Landis survived her husband but a few years, and died Jan. 17, 1902.

CLAYTON G. LANDIS, the only son of David B. and his wife, was born April 24, 1862, and received his education in the public schools. At the age of twenty years he became associated in business with his father, and so continued until the latter's death, when he gave up the grain business, and entered the real estate and insurance world, meeting with unqualified success. He is a member of the Lancaster Board of Trade. In September, 1892, was organized the Lancaster Real Estate Company, of which Mr. Landis is president. He is regarded as an excellent judge of real estate values. With all his other interests Mr. Landis is a lover of good horseflesh, dealing extensively in thoroughbreds. Besides his fine stable at home, he has one in New York city at No. 112 West 54th street, under the name of the Union Coach Horse Co., where he handles only strictly high class horses.

On Dec. 30, 1896, Clayton G. Landis was united in marriage with Mary E. Doerr, and they have two children, David B. and John B. Politically Mr.

Landis is a Republican, and belongs to the Republican clubs, and fraternally he belongs to the Masons and the Elks.

ANDREW H. GOCHNAUER owns and conducts one of the finest farms in Warwick township, located near Lititz, and he is looked upon as one of the most progressive and industrious residents of that region. Mr. Gochnauer's ancestors have been engaged in farming in Lancaster county for several generations. His grandfather, John Gochnauer, was born near Landisville, where he lived and died. He was a farmer and distiller, and followed those occupations all his life. He married Miss Miller, and they were the parents of two children: Henry, the father of our subject; and John, a retired farmer of Landisville.

Henry Gochnauer was born in East Hempfield township in 1832, and lived at home until he was twenty-seven years of age. For the next four years he carried on a hotel in Manheim, and then began farming in East Hempfield, which he continued until his death on Jan. 2, 1894. He married Miss Annie Kauffman, and to their union were born nine children, one of whom died in infancy; John and Henry are engaged in farming on the home place; Fannie and Mary are also at home; Andrew H. is our subject; Emanuel is at home; David is at home; and Amos lives with our subject.

Andrew H. Gochnauer was born in East Hempfield township, Feb. 7, 1866, and received a good common-school education. He lived at home until he was twenty-seven years of age, when he began life for himself, farming, on the farm where he now resides.

Mr. Gochnauer married Miss Esther Herr, daughter of John and Elvina Herr, of Millersville, and to this union has come one child, Annie, born April 15, 1898. In politics our subject is a stanch Republican, and a very ardent worker for the success of his party.

JAMES B. HENDERSON, one of the most substantial and highly esteemed citizens of Maytown, Pa., who for many years was prominently identified with the Internal Revenue service, lives a somewhat retired life, after much activity in former years.

James B. Henderson was born in Maytown, Dec. 20, 1841, and comes of old Lancaster county stock, being the son of David and Anna (Shaffer) Henderson, who had long been residents of the county, through which Mr. Henderson was known as a successful farmer and distiller. David Henderson was born in 1794 and died in 1859, the mother surviving until 1861, both of them now resting in the old Reformed Church cemetery, in which Church they were known as good and most estimable people. Their children were: George, deceased; David S., a retired farmer of Alexandria, Pa.; Anna, who died young; John, deceased; Jacob, a bricklayer of Maytown; Caroline, who died young; James B.; and Benjamin, a contractor and builder in Harrisburg.

Very early in life James B. Henderson began his business career. His tastes did not incline him toward farm life, and after leaving school, as early as thirteen years he began to learn the carpenter trade. Four years later he entered the employ of a large lumber firm in Marietta as shipping clerk, continuing there for nine months, when he became a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, working so faithfully and well, that in 1862, he was promoted to the position of engineer. His career in this direction was cut off, in a few months, as he was drafted into the army for service in the Civil war, and he remained in the ranks until the close of the struggle.

Recognizing the ability of Mr. Henderson, the government soon after the war, made him Revenue Inspector of the Ninth and Fourteenth Districts, and he efficiently performed the onerous duties of this position for the succeeding four years, at the close of which period he was made special agent of the Internal Revenue service, his official duties continuing for nine years and only ending with the abolition of the office. From 1881 to 1885 he was associated with his son, in the tobacco packing business.

In January, 1857, James B. Henderson was married, in Elizabethtown, to Miss Rebecca Zearing, and to this union were born: John D., a manufacturer of cigars and a tobacco packer, of Maytown, who married Miss Sarah Honseal; and James A., a trained nurse and a druggist, now connected with the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital, in Philadelphia. Mrs. Henderson was born in Cumberland county, and died Aug. 8, 1899, a daughter of John H. and Sarah (Croll) Zearing, the family having come to Maytown in 1850 and some years later moved to Middletown, where Mr. Zearing engaged in a mercantile business. In politics, Mr. Henderson has always been an ardent and active Republican, and has been of much service to the party. His position before his fellow-citizens is a representative one, and no one more entirely possesses their respect and esteem.

JAMES SCOTT DICKEY, whose leaf tobacco warehouse and fertilizer manufactory is at Nos. 630 and 632 North Prince street, and whose residence is at No. 125 North Pine street, Lancaster, is descended from a Scotch-Irish ancestry, whose history in Pennsylvania dates back to 1710.

Hon. Jesse C. Dickey, his grandfather, was a member of the State Legislature, and a member of Congress from Chester and Delaware counties. He was the first man to make a speech in Congress for the admission of California to the Union, and was the first man to make a speech in the halls of legislation for the abolition of slavery. At one time he was a paymaster in the United States Army.

David Dickey, father of James Scott Dickey, who is engaged in the paint business in Philadelphia, was married to Miss Scott, the daughter of James Scott, at that time the leading cattle dealer of Chester county. From this union were born five children, two of whom died in infancy. The others are: Elizabeth W., wife of Walter T. Lees, commission merchant of Philadelphia; Margaret, wife of Judson L. Snodgrass, a prominent undertaker of Philadelphia; and James Scott, of Lancaster.

James Scott Dickey, the Lancaster leaf tobacco dealer and fertilizer manufacturer, was born at Lewisville, Chester county, July 16, 1864, and was educated in the Westchester State Normal School, leaving that institution to read medicine, pursuing his medical studies for two years in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, finishing at the Cincinnati Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1883. After practicing his profession for a year and a half in Philadelphia, he gave it up, on account of a growing dislike for it, turning his attention to business, and becoming connected with the S. E. M. Rice Varnish Company, of Newark, N. J., traveling over the greater part of the United States in their interest. At the death of S. E. M. Rice, Mr. Dickey became the junior partner of the concern, and continued with it for eleven years. At the end of this time he came to Lancaster and engaged in the leaf tobacco business. In November, 1900, Mr. Dickey established a plant for the manufacture of a fertilizer from the stems of the tobacco, contracting for all the stems which the dealers in Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Lancaster, Philadelphia and New York can furnish him for a term of years. By the aid of powerful machinery, and proper treatment, he produces from the waste of tobacco houses a fertilizer, shown to contain from three to five per cent. of ammonia, from eight to eleven per cent. of potash, and an appreciable amount of phosphoric acid. It bids fair to revolutionize the business of insecticides and phosphates; and from the fact that a leading phosphate company had ordered one hundred tons of it, it is evident Mr. Dickey knew what he was about when he launched this enterprise.

Mr. Dickey was married to Miss Martha A. Overly, a daughter of the late William Overly, of Lancaster.

JOSEPH K. HEISEY (deceased) was born near the Graybill Mill in East Donegal township, August 22, 1822, and died in the present home of the family, July 16, 1891. His remains were interred in the cemetery connected with Reich's Meeting House in East Donegal. Joseph and Elizabeth (Kauffman) Heisey, his parents, were farming people in Lancaster county, and were members of the River Brethren Church. They had the following children: Elizabeth; Christian; Catherine, wife of John Risser; Martha, the wife of Frederick Peck; Anna; Joseph K. and Mary. All the members of this family are now deceased. The paternal grandparents of J. K. Heisey were Daniel and Elizabeth Heisey. Daniel Heisey died in 1822, at the age of seventy-five years, and his wife March 8, 1815, at the age of sixty-four years. They were buried on Clement Brubaker's farm in East Donegal township, Lancaster county.

Joseph K. Heisey and Susanna K. Wissler were married in York county, Pa., Sept. 11, 1856. The only child born to this union was JOHN W. Susanna (Wissler) Heisey, who was born in Manor township, died Dec. 4, 1865, aged thirty-five years, and was buried in Reich's cemetery in East Donegal township. Jacob and Elizabeth (Kauffman) Wissler, her parents, were natives of Lancaster county, and both died on the old homestead in Manor township. They had the following children: Susanna; Martha, who married O. Strickler, of Manor township; Barbara, married to Reuben Strickler, of Manor township; Elizabeth, who died unmarried at the age of forty-five years; and Martin, who died in the West at the age of eighteen years.

Joseph K. Heisey and Sarah S. Heisey were married Dec. 4, 1867. Mrs. Sarah S. Heisey was born in Mt. Joy township, the daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Seifert) Heisey, of Mt. Joy township and Middletown, respectively. Her father died in 1879, at the age of seventy-three, and her mother in 1880, at the age of seventy-one. Born to this union: Fanny, who died at the age of twenty-one; Henry, a farmer in Cumberland county; Christ, a retired farmer in Florin; Daniel, a farmer in East Donegal township; Sarah S.; Mary, of Mt. Joy; Levi, a farmer and carpenter in Cumberland county; Lydia, unmarried in Harrisburg; Christiana, who died young; and Abraham and Joseph, both deceased. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Heisey were Daniel and Susie (Barrick) Heisey, of Lancaster county.

Joseph K. Heisey was a farmer until 1875, when he came to Florin, and from that time until his death he lived a retired life in that pleasant little borough. Both his wife and himself were members of the River Brethren Church, and were counted among the best people of the city.

BENJAMIN S. RUPP. Among the well-known farmers of West Earl township no one possesses the esteem of the community in a higher degree than Benjamin S. Rupp, who owns and operates a farm located about one mile south of Talmage. Benjamin Rupp was born Aug. 13, 1864, a son of John and Harriet (Sheaffer) Rupp, of West Earl township, who were of German ancestry.

The family of Rupp has been established in Lancaster county for many years. Grandfather Abraham Rupp was born here and reared a family of six children: Abraham; Martin; Lemon; John; Lizzie, who married John Wolf; and Annie, who married one of the Royers.

John Rupp, the father of Benjamin S., married Harriet Sheaffer, in 1863, and these children were born of this union: Benjamin S.; Clayton, born in 1865, married Emma Burkholder, and resides on a farm in West Earl township; and Isaac, born in 1867, married Ada Kline, and resides in East Calico township. The death of the father of these children was at the early age of twenty-five, in 1868, and in 1883, his widow married Joseph Rupp.

Reared on a farm, Mr. Rupp has continued to follow an agricultural life and has met with great success. His education was acquired in the public schools of West Earl, and ever since entering into business for himself, he has been one of the industrious and self-respecting farmers of this locality, always interested in anything which has promised to be of benefit to him, in the management of his land, or to the community in which he lives. His well-cultivated and improved farm of forty-seven acres testifies to his success as a farmer, and the confidence of his neighbors in his ability and uprightness has been shown by his election to the office of assessor for several consecutive terms.

On Feb. 25, 1885, Mr. Rupp was married to Miss Ella Fink, who was born Oct. 8, 1866, a daughter of Samuel and Caroline (Carpenter) Fink, of Upper Leacock township, and to this union have been born: Russell, born Aug. 10, 1886, died Sept. 6, 1886; Roscoe H., born May 22, 1888; Winnie born June 7, 1890, died Aug. 24, 1890; Jessie, born Oct. 30, 1891, died Feb. 27, 1893; Gertrude, born June 4, 1894; Ruth, born April 7, 1896; Lemon, born May 31, 1897; Sidney, born April 9, 1899, died May 20, 1899; Marion Hazel, born May 18, 1900.

Benjamin S. Rupp is highly regarded through the township and well represents its best element. His political sympathies are with the Republican party, and, although he has never formally connected himself with any religious denomination, his life is a moral one, and he is known as a kind husband and father, and as a charitable and generous member of the community.

CHARLES F. NEWELL, paper hanger and decorator, whose place of business is at No. 22 East Orange street, has been in that location about four years, where he has established a large and lucrative trade. Mr. Newell was born Aug. 18, 1856, in West Philadelphia, his father and grandfather both being natives of the same place.

Samuel Newell, the father of Charles F., was an auger manufacturer, and was the proprietor of an extensive shop which he managed for forty-five years. He married Mary Jenkins, who belonged to an old Philadelphia family, of Scotch and Irish descent, and became the mother of six children, four of whom are living. James Newell, a brother of Charles Fremont, was a veteran of the Civil war, and died while a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1878, (having been a member of that body for ten years) at the age of forty-four years.

Charles F. Newell was educated in the public schools of West Philadelphia, and at the age of seventeen years he became an apprentice at paper hanging and decorating, serving four years at the trade. For several years he was on the road, working at his trade in various points in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and in 1883 arrived at Lancaster. For four years he was in the employ of a prominent house in this city, and then began in business on his own account, securing contracts for some of the finest buildings in Lancaster. His decorations are exquisite and he enjoys the reputation of originality in his designs and artistic excellence in his execution. For some time past Mr. Newell has been associated with Mr. Shelito in the carpet cleaning business, the firm being Shelito & Newell. They have a new process for cleaning carpets, and the business has so greatly increased on their hands that they have been compelled to secure more commodious quarters. In the paper hanging and decorating, however, Mr. Newell is alone, and the demands of that line keep him busy the year through, so that Mr. Shelito is the active man in the carpet cleaning trade.

Mr. Newell was married at Philadelphia, in 1880, to Miss Mary, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Jackson. They spend their summers in a cottage on the Pequea, where they entertain friends from Philadelphia and elsewhere. Mr. Newell is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Order of Elks. Personally popular and always attentive to his patrons, Mr. Newell has fairly won a place among the business men of Lancaster.

ISAAC N. FORREY. Prominent among the number of large and substantial agriculturists of the flourishing township of East Donegal, is Isaac N. Forrey, the owner and operator of a well cultivated and valuable estate, consisting of 126 acres, located in a very desirable part of the county.

Isaac N. Forrey was born in Rapho township, March 26, 1871, a son of John K. and Mary (Newcomer) Forrey, of Manor and Rapho townships, respectively. John K. Forrey, since 1892 has been a retired farmer of Rapho, having been prominently identified with many of the financial institutions of the county, for many years being a director of the First National Bank of Columbia. His birth was in 1817, and that of his estimable wife in 1824, both of them being consistent members of the Mennonite Church. The children born to John K. When he had reached man's estate, he located upon his present farm and has continued to reside here since, becoming one of the most progressive young farmers of the locality, his fine surroundings and well cultivated lands testifying to his ability.

Mrs. Forrey was born in Conoy township, Feb. 14, 1869, a daughter of Cyrus and Susan (Hoffman) Engle, and granddaughter of John and Martha (Lindenuth) Engle, of Conoy township, and of Michael and Anna (Hershey) Hoffman, of Lancaster county. CYRUS OLDWEILER, a general farmer and carpenter of Conoy township, where his industrious life and unswerving integrity have made a deep impression on the community, was born in West Donegal township Aug. 27, 1840, a son of Philip and Susan (Barnhard) Oldweiler, both born in Lancaster county, where they lived and died. Philip Oldweiler, who was a farmer until the last fifteen years of his life, died at the age of sixty-nine years, his widow surviving until March 1, 1887, reaching the age of seventy years. They were buried at Good's Cemetery in West Donegal, and at Mt. Tunnel Cemetery, in Elizabethtown, respectively. To them were born the following children: Cyrus; Jacob, a retired farmer in West Donegal township; Fred, who died at the age of sixty years; and Kate, widow of Joseph Kener. After the death of Mr. Oldweiler, his widow became the wife of Daniel Ebersole, to whom she bore the following children: Anna, the wife of Ben Capp, of West Donegal township; Fanny, deceased wife of John Schrader; and Kate, wife of David Hawk, of West Donegal township.

Mrs. Mary (Ebersole) Oldweiler was born in Conoy township, in February, 1846, and died March 10, 1901, her remains being interred in the cemetery connected with the Good's Meeting House in West Donegal township. She was a daughter of Peter R. and Susan (Kindig) Ebersole, both natives of Lancaster and her womanly nature, kind heart and generous disposition, together with her unwearied devotion to her husband and children, can never be forgotten. Peter R. Ebersole died Jan. 23, 1899, at the age of seventy-seven years and his wife in June, 1900, at the age of seventy-three. Cyrus Oldweiler remained with his mother until 1861, when he started west to make a home in the famous Wabash valley in Indiana, and reached Covington, that State, where he enlisted Aug. 11, 1862, in Co. H, 63d Ind V. I., and served until the close of the war, receiving his discharge July 3, 1865, at Indianapolis. Mr. Oldweiler was a brave and faithful soldier, and participated in many battles, among them being the bloody struggles at Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain, Franklin and at Nashville, and he escaped without a wound.

Mr. Oldweiler spent some months after his discharge at Covington, Ind., and then returned to Lancaster to take up the carpenter trade. He continued to work at his trade in connection with farming until 1884, when he came to his present farm. Previous to that year his home had been in West Donegal township. Mr. Oldweiler is a Democrat, and belongs to the Mennonite Church. An industrious and upright man, he commands the confidence of the community, and is highly esteemed not only for his many good qualities and his habits of thrift and industry, but for his general knowledge and wide range of information.

Rev. Daniel Ebersole, who died in Conoy township, in May, 1871, at the age of fifty-three years, was buried in a private burying ground on the family homestead. He was a Mennonite preacher, and exercised a great influence for good in the community. In his farming operations he was quite successful, and at different times in his life owned several farms. His widow, Elizabeth Ebersole, was born in 1827, and now has her home in South Annville, Lebanon county. Their children were as follows: Anna died young; Samuel E.; Amos, who died at the age of twenty-four, married Eliza Risser; Barbara, Fanny, Daniel and Benjamin all died young; Abraham, of Lebanon county, with whom his mother now has her home, has been twice married, first to Anna M. Samuel E. Ebersole is in the sixth generation from John Jacob Ebersole, who came to Lancaster county from Switzerland, 1753, crossing the ocean with the progenitor of the Engle family, of Lancaster county.

Jacob Ebersole and his wife, the paternal grandparents of Samuel E., spent their lives in Conoy township, and were buried on their old farm which is now the property of Mrs. Collins, of Marietta. Samuel and Sarah (Shank) Ebersole, the maternal grandparents of Samuel E., were born in Conoy township, where they spent their lives on a farm now belonging to our subject, and where their remains were interred in a private burying ground long used by the family.

In October, 1873, in Elizabethtown, Samuel E. Ebersole married Mary Sandoe, and to their union were born: Ida S., deceased; Albert, a school teacher; Alice, twin to Albert, now the wife of Simon Landis, a teacher of West Donegal township; Raymond S., a teacher at home, and a chicken fancier, being engaged extensively in the incubation of chickens for the market; and Grace S., at home.

Mrs. Mary (Sandoe) Ebersole was born in East Donegal township, Oct. 23, 1849, a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Stibgeon) Sandoe, natives of Marietta and West Hempfield township, respectively. Henry Sandoe died in East Donegal township, in 1867, at the age of fifty years. He was a machinist and a manufacturer of implements for many years, but in his later years he retired from the factory, and bought a farm, on which, as his health was poor, the most of the work was done by hired help. Mrs. Elizabeth S. Sandoe died in Elizabethtown in 1890, at the age of seventy years, and was buried in the Reich's Church burying ground. She was a member of Zion's Children Church. Mr. and Mrs. Sandoe were the parents of the following children: Sarah S., wife of Joseph Heisey, a retired farmer in Elizabethtown; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Adam Longenecker; Anna S., deceased, who married Daniel Fishburn; Mary; Fanny, who married Albert Leicht, a coach maker of Elizabethtown; and Abraham S., twin to Fanny, and now deceased.

It is a choice farm consisting of ninety-one acres, now in a high state of cultivation under his close and industrious care. Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole are members of the Mennonite and Zion's Children Churches, respectively, and are people of the highest standing in the community.

Mr. Ebersole is a Republican, and for fifteen consecutive years has filled the position of school director. He is a clever and kindly-hearted man, genial and honest, and well deserves the very substantial measure of success he has achieved.

OSCAR HOHEIN. The greensward of Greenwood cemetery covers all that is mortal of Oscar Hohein, a gentleman who for many years was one of the leading citizens of Lancaster, and whose death on March 13, 1901, was regarded as a distinct public calamity. He had been connected with the business interests of the city for five decades, and his name during that period in business circles was synonymous with integrity and fair dealing. His merchant tailoring establishment was conducted on a high plane, a reputation fully sustained by his son since the father's retirement from active business.

Oscar Hohein was a native of the Fatherland, where he was born in 1829, son of Frederick Hohein, a manufacturer and dealer in pottery. Other members of the family were Clark, now a carriage manufacturer of Mendota, Ill.; and Mena, who married a Mr. Beerwad and died in America. Oscar Hohein was reared in Germany, where he was given the advantages of middle-class Old Country life, his education having been along practical lines. He was apprenticed to the tailor's trade, it being the custom for young German youths to become acquainted with one of the trades, whether they followed it or not. At twenty years of age he resolved to try his fortune in the new world and on July 4, 1849, he landed in New York. From thence he traveled to Philadelphia, and after a short sojourn in that city, came to Lancaster. During his residence in the Quaker City Mr. Hohein had met and become enamoured of the lady who now survives him, Miss Elizabeth Louser, the marriage occurring in December, 1851. To this marriage were born: Louis, now an invalid, at home; Frederick, a tailor at Lancaster; Benjamin, who died in the West; Mary, deceased; Emanuel, deceased; Frank, of Norfolk, Va.; George, of Norfolk, Va.; and Hiram, of Lancaster. The mother of this family was born at Jonestown, Lebanon Co., Pa., Feb. 5, 1833, daughter of John and Katherine Louser. Their family consisted of Elizabeth; Andrew, deceased; Solomon, deceased; John, deceased; George, of Fredericksburg, Pa., a retired tanner; Henry, deceased; Kate, of Lebanon, Pa., married Cyrus Carmany; Mary, deceased; Amanda, who is now the wife of John Feldy, of South Bend, Ind.; and Sarah, deceased.

After his marriage Oscar Hohein came to Lancaster, where he began a merchant tailoring business, first on a modest scale, and as good management and close attention to business prospered him, on an increasingly larger scale, until he was one of the leading tailors of the city. He was also successful in other business investments, so that when he died he was able to leave a competence to his family. For several years before his death he had retired from active labor, and ended his days in comparative luxury. Mr. Hohein was a gentleman of social temperament, and delighted in the enjoyment he found in the different lodge rooms, being a worthy member of the Masonic fraternity, in which he was a Knight Templar, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Maennerchor, and various other societies. Religiously he was a Lutheran. He was an independent thinker in politics preferring to cast his vote for the men and measures that more nearly met his approval.

JOHN P. MARTIN, proprietor of a large storage warehouse and interested in the transportation business of Lancaster, was born in this city, April 26, 1848, son of John G. and Lavina (Fitzgerald) Martin.

John G. Martin, the father, was a man of prominence in Lancaster county. His father was proprietor of the old "Relay House," located on the corner of Prince and Walnut streets, and John G. became its owner and conducted it as a hostelry for a period of twenty-five years. Prior to taking charge of it he was in official life, holding the office of sergeant of arms of the State Senate, from 1860 to 1866. For several years he was a deputy United States marshal in the Ninth district, under Collector Muhlenberg, and held many of the local offices with great efficiency. He died Sept. 16, 1882, at the age of sixty-four years. As a member of Encampment and subordinate lodges in the order of Odd Fellows, he took an active part in that organization for many years. Mrs. Lavina (Fitzgerald) Martin died in March, 1890, at the age of sixty-six years, and both parents were buried in the cemetery in Lancaster. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Martin were as follows: Henry, who died at the age of forty-five years, at which time he was a Government storekeeper and gauger; John P., of this sketch; Charles B., who is a tobacco packer in Lancaster; and Mary E., who died young and was probably the first victim of the dread disease of diphtheria, in Lancaster county. The paternal grandparents of Mr. Martin were John J. and Mary E. Martin, both of whom were natives of Germany, but who came to America in 1800, settling in the village of Pittsburg, Pa., in a log cabin, where they lived until about 1812, at which time they moved to Lancaster where Mr. Martin purchased what is now known as the "Relay House," but at that time was called the "Bald Eagle Hotel." This historic old inn has remained in the family, the grandfather operating it until his death, which occurred in 1845, at the age of seventy-eight years. His widow assumed charge, and later rented the same until her son, the father of our subject, was old enough and prepared to take charge of it, which he did in 1866. Until 1882 John G. Martin was its host, and after his death, his son, our subject, took charge and conducted it until 1894, when he rented it to George M. Meyers, whose great-grandfather was probably its original owner sometime in the eighteenth century. Could the old walls talk, what tales would be revealed, for in those old days the inns were what might be termed the "nerve centers" of the life of the vicinity, the general gathering place of all political and extraordinary meetings of every kind. This was particularly so just prior to, and after, the Revolutionary war, when doubtless the "Bald Eagle Hotel" had many noted guests.

The children born to John J. and Mary E. Martin were two. John G.; and Mary, who died young. By a previous marriage with Philip Stoll, the mother had two sons, Philip (deceased), who was a master mechanic in the blacksmith department in the Philadelphia Navy Yard; and George, who died at the age of forty-five years, a trucker and drayer. The grandmother of our subject died at the age of eighty-four years. The maternal grandparents came from Ireland, Grandfather Edward Fitzgerald being a well-known contractor and builder in Lancaster.

John P. Martin remained at home with his parents as long as they lived and then took charge of the hotel as noted above, and operated it until 1894. Since that he has been actively engaged in the storage business.

In politics, Mr. Martin is a stanch Republican, and he is fraternally connected with the I. O. O. F., and the Uniform Rank, K. of P. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Martin is regarded as a fine business man, and is widely known and much respected.

JOSEPH RUPP. There was a time, in the history of Lancaster county, when its farming interests were far less important than at the present day, but now, to be the owner of some 215 acres of land in as prosperous a township as West Earl, is to belong to the most independent and substantial class of citizens to be found in the State. Such is the enviable situation of Joseph Rupp, one of the most highly esteemed agriculturists and stockraisers of this locality. The location of his valuable property is about one mile north of the town of Farmersville, thus making possible the enjoyment of both country and town advantages.

Joseph Rupp was born a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Wenger) Rupp, the former of whom was a son of Jacob Rupp, of German origin, a thrifty farmer in his day, who reared five children. Samuel Rupp was born about 1790, became one of the most prosperous farmers of this section, married Elizabeth Wenger, in 1815, and died in 1870, the father of the following children: Levi, a wealthy farmer of West Earl, residing near Brownstown; Jacob and Abraham, deceased; Maria, who married Isaac Burkholder; and Joseph of this sketch.

Reared on the farm, Joseph Rupp early decided to make the cultivation of his lands and the raising of fine stock his business in life, and he has admirably succeeded, being now considered, most justly, one of the most substantial farmers of the township. For many years he has been engaged in the stock business, and has shipped much stock—horses and mules—to the East, buying advantageously in the West. His education was received in the common schools, and he is one of the best-informed and most intelligent citizens of this locality, much interested in public topics, and a stanch adherent of the Republican party. For more than ten years he has acceptably served his township as school director, and has always given his influence in the direction of the advancement of education.

In 1851, Joseph Rupp married Miss Eliza Buch, of West Earl township, a daughter of George and Elizabeth Buch, and the children of this marriage are: Samuel A., born in 1854, is a miller at what is known as the old Rupp mill near the old Rupp home place in West Earl; Maria, born in 1858, is the wife of Lemon Rupp, of West Earl township; David, born on Jan. 10, 1860, resides on the home place, a farmer and stock dealer; and John, born in 1865, married Eliza Burkholder and farms the old home place, and also raises tobacco and buys and sells it. Mr. Rupp is one of the most highly esteemed citizens of the township, has many public and private friends, and in the domestic circles is devoted to the interests of his children and grandchildren.

HENRY A. YOUNG, proprietor of the Keystone bakery, of Lancaster, and one of the leading business men of the city, was born in Lancaster, Aug. 5, 1857, son of David and Minnie (Reece) Young.

David Young, father of Henry A., was born in Hanover, Germany, and since emigrating to the United States and settling in Lancaster, he has carried on the shoe business. He was born in 1826, and his wife was born in 1834. Both of them are members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: Dora, who married Jacob F. Keller, a cigar-maker of Lancaster; Henry A., of this sketch; and Fred. who died in January, 1898.

Henry A. Young grew up in Lancaster, and attended school and lived with his parents until he was nineteen years old. Then he learned the bakery trade with William Rapp, serving an apprenticeship of two years, and later working as a journeyman for him in this city, until 1883, when he opened up his present business. By his industry and energy he has built himself a fine trade, his methods of dealing as well as his excellent products finding a liberal patronage which is increasing in a very satisfactory manner. Mr. Young is an expert mixer and baker and supplies this vicinity with 3,500 loaves of bread per week, and also manufactures all kinds of delicious cakes and pastries. He has a delivery wagon which is kept busy, and he employs four men to assist in the business.

In June, 1883, Mr. Young married Miss Mary Miller, born in Lancaster county, daughter of David and Caroline (Kautz) Miller, the former of whom is a retired cotton mill worker. One son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Young, Henry A.

In politics Mr. Young is a Republican and served for three years on the city council. He is a leading member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Young is a self-made man, having accumulated means and built up a business by his own endeavors. He is regarded with esteem in his community, and is justly considered one of the representative business men of the city of Lancaster.

MICHAEL REILLY. It is really only a comparatively short period of time since transportation from one section of our country to another was only accomplished on foot, or by the help of a trusty steed; when swiftly-flowing streams were scarcely passable, and mountain ranges served to effectually separate citizens of the same country. Now in contemplation of the rapidly moving train which so safely rushes across the country, rattles over the turbid waters of swollen streams and roars through the very heart of the mountains and even climbs the same with speed and security, an enthusiasm is aroused for those capable builders whose knowledge and skill have made these achievements possible. They truly hold the lives of the public in their keeping, for a weak span in the bridge, a spurious species of cement or gravel, faulty engineering or careless building and indifferent inspection, may imperil the lives of thousands.

Among those thoroughly reliable and careful builders and contractors who have made transportation through Lancaster county fraught with so few dangers is Michael Reilly, who, after a long, important and successful career, now resides in Lancaster, enjoying a life of well-earned ease, surrounded by a family whose welfare has been one of his first cares. Mr. Reilly was born in County Meath, Ireland, Jan. 30, 1833, son of John and Mary (Smith) Reilly, the former of whom lived out his life in his native country engaged in farming and merchandising. His children were: Patrick, who is a merchant in Ireland; Michael; and William, who died in Australia.

Michael Reilly was but ten years old when he found his way to America and found work on the railroads, in New York City, where he passed through all the grades, thoroughly learning the business, so that by the time he had reached his nineteenth year he was competent to begin contracting. Forming a partnership with John Keller, and later with others, Mr. Reilly engaged in railroad contracting and building for a period of over forty years, only retiring in 1892. He built the greater part of the old trolley lines in Lancaster, Pa., and has built many miles of railroad; built the road between Reading and Columbia; the East Pennsylvania road between Allentown and Reading, and very many others, besides tunnels, bridges and grading of all kinds. While in partnership with Mr. Keller Mr. Reilly built the Quarryville railroad, which was leased for ten years to the Reading Railway Co., and finally was sold to the Pennsylvania Railway Co. In 1862 Mr. Reilly built his present comfortable residence in Lancaster.

In 1851, in the State of New York, Mr. Reilly was united to the most estimable lady who is still spared to him as a companion. She was Mrs. Anna (McGovern) McManis, and was born in Lancaster county, a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Duffy) McGovern, natives of County Cavan, Ireland, who came to America at an early day, when the ocean voyage still consumed three months. Mr. McGovern became a successful farmer and a well-known contractor in Lancaster, and built many railroads and canals, gaining a reputation for careful, expert work. Both he and his wife died in Lancaster. They had the following named children born to them: Anna, wife of Mr. Reilly; Eliza, widow of Samuel Farant, of Philadelphia; Margaret (deceased), wife of John Masker; Helen and Sarah, who died young; Sarah, who is the widow of Henry McConomey, Esq., of Atlantic City; Thomas and Edward, deceased; Catherine, deceased; and John. The first marriage of Mrs. Reilly was to John McManis, who died in 1846. Two children were born to that union, namely: Praticious, a prominent contractor in Philadelphia, who has been twice married, his second wife being Elizabeth McGovern (he is the father of six children, one of whom is deceased); and Thomas, unmarried, who is a railroad contractor in Lancaster.

Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Reilly: James, who conducts the St. Charles Hotel, at Atlantic City, N. J., married Mary Bryant, and they have a family; John, who is associated with his brother, married Catherine Steckley, and has three children; William (deceased) married Tessie Mogan, and they had five children, one of whom is deceased; Robert (deceased) married Elsa Eberly; Frank married Mamie Wharton; Charles, who is unmarried, operates the home farm. This is a particularly happy and united family, and they enjoy the esteem of many friends. They belong to the Catholic church, to which Mr. Reilly contributes liberally.

GRANVILLE W. PAULES, an influential and respected citizen of Columbia, was born in Marietta, Lancaster county, May 10, 1852. A successful contractor and builder, he is also prominent in public affairs, and is deservedly held in high esteem by his fellow townsmen.

Mr. Paules' paternal grandfather, John, was born in York county. There he married a Miss Leber, who bore him eight children, Elizabeth, Sarah, Henry, Jane, John, George, David and Frank. Subsequent to his marriage he removed to Marietta, Pa., where he resided until his death. By trade he was a cooper, but after taking up a residence in the last named town he also conducted a hotel. He attained the extraordinary age of ninety-four years and eleven months.

Three of his children yet survive. Sarah is the widow of Simon Albright, a justice of the peace in Lancaster county. John is a retired blacksmith, living at Mechanicsburg, Pa., and David is a retired farmer of Marietta. Elizabeth is deceased, and Jane was the wife of John Hercleroth.

George Paules, the sixth child and third son, was the father of Granville W. In 1847 he married Mary Yunker, a daughter of Andrew and Mary M. (Myers) Yunker. She was born in York county, as were her parents. Her father successfully carried on the business of a miller until within a few years of his death, which occurred in 1875, at the age of seventy-five. His wife, who was four years his senior, followed him to the grave the following year, at the age of eighty. He was of German descent, his parents, Caspar and Anna M. (Wintermyers) Yunker, having emigrated from the Fatherland in early life. Of the four children born to Andrew Yunker and his wife, Mary, the youngest, was the mother of Granville W. Paules. The others were: Sarah, unmarried, residing in York, Pa.; Jacob, who died at Baltimore at the age of seventy-two; and Henry, who passed away in 1899, after passing his seventy-fifth birthday.

George Paules, who, as has been said, was the father of Granville W., was the master of two trades, having been both a cooper and locksmith. He passed his life at Marietta, with the exception of a year (1864) spent in Indiana, and was for three years superintendent of an ore bank near the town. In 1868 he retired from active business, and in July, 1889, he entered into rest, aged sixty-eight years. His wife yet survives him, making her home with her son Granville. They had four children: Edward is a resident of Middletown, Pa.; William died when ten years old; Mary, was taken away in infancy; Granville W. was the youngest.

The boyhood of Granville W. Paules was passed upon a farm, and at the age of sixteen he began his apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade, for which he early developed a great aptitude. He has passed all his life in Lancaster county with the exception of a short time spent in Lower Windsor township, York county, after which he came to Columbia, which has since been his home. In 1880 he formed a partnership with H. H. Cramer, but ten years later embarked in business alone.

On Christmas Day, 1873, in Lower Windsor township, Mr. Paules married Miss Nancy A. Beard, who was born in York county in December, 1850. Both her parents, as well as her grandparents, were highly esteemed residents of York county. Her paternal grandfather, Joseph Beard, married Susan Layman. Her maternal grandfather was Daniel Gehley, a man of substance, who carried on a grist-mill and engaged in carpet-weaving; he married Anna Wike. Mrs. Paules is the fifth and youngest child of John E. Beard, who married Nancy Gehley. Mr. Beard was by occupation a tanner. He died in 1895, after reaching the age of eighty-four, surviving his wife for forty-four years. Mrs. Paules' elder sisters, Priscilla and Mary, are both deceased; her brothers, Frank and Harry, are engaged in business, the first named at Wrightsville and the younger at York.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Paules has been blessed with four children. The eldest, Gertrude, is the wife of James A. Ryan, of Denver, Colo. Mary E., the second in order of birth, is a school teacher. The two younger children, Mabel B. and Granville E., are living at home.

Mr. Paules and his family attend the M. E. Church. He is a member of the Order of K. of M. He has been repeatedly honored by being chosen to fill offices of high trust and grave responsibility. For six years he has been a member of the school board, and for one year president of that body, and for the past three years has filled a seat in the borough council. He is broad-minded and public-spirited, keenly appreciating the needs of the community and quick in devising remedies for existing evils. In private life he is affable and social, kindly in his impulses and generous in his sympathies.

MARION DIVET. Mr. Divet's career affords a striking illustration of the possibilities afforded to young men in a free, democratic commonwealth. He has been the architect of his own fortunes, and, to quote an ancient writer, "hath both planned and builded well."

Mr. Divet was born in Donegal township, Lancaster county, July 27, 1861, the son of Peter Divet and Susan Rhodes, the issue of whose marriage was two children, Josephine and Marion. His sister married Henry Riggle, of Kinderhook, Pa., who is in the service of the Reading Railroad Company. His paternal grandparents were John Divet and Anna Mary Frye, of Gravel Hill, in Rapho township. John Divet was a farmer and also operated a still. He died April 11, 1886, within a few days of his eighty-ninth birthday. Peter Divet, the father of Marion, was a gallant soldier in the Union army during the Civil war, having enlisted as a private in 1864 in the company led by Capt. Kessler. He died at the age of thirty-three, in Salisbury prison, from starvation. He was a successful farmer prior to the war. The mother of Mr. Divet, nee Susan Rhodes, was born in 1841, and is still living. She is a daughter of John Rhodes, a fence builder, of Marietta, who died at Kinderhook in 1858, at the age of forty-six.

Marion Divet was reared by his grandfather on the latter's farm, and remained with him until he was twenty-two years old. His early life was passed in Newtown, where he learned the culture and preparation of tobacco. After his grandfather's death he found employment with W. H. Hogendobler, a carpenter and building contractor. He remained with Mr. Hogendobler until April 12, 1900, with the exception of one year, when he was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and was located in Philadelphia. He is at present engaged in business as a contractor and builder on his own account, and his success has been remarkable. Thoroughly familiar with every detail of his work, energetic in the execution of every task assigned to him, and characterized by scrupulous and unswerving fidelity, he commands the confidence of all who have an opportunity to become familiar with his sterling worth. Although reared in the Democratic faith, he is a Republican. His first vote was not cast until he reached the age of twenty-four. He is a member of the order of Hep-tasophs. His home on Chestnut street is one of the most attractive in Columbia.

Mr. Divet married Miss Nettie Saylor, of Marietta, in 1889. Her father, William Saylor, was born in York county, and her mother, whose maiden name was Emeline Snyder, in Mt. Joy. They were married in Lancaster in September, 1862. William came with his parents to West Hempfield township in boyhood, and passed the greater portion of his life there, engaged in farming. He died at Marietta in 1886, in his forty-eighth year. His wife, Mrs. Divet's mother, was born Sept. 16, 1841, and is now living with her daughter. She is a member of the Lutheran Church. The children of this union were: Mary, Elmer, Samuel and Alice, who all died young; Nettie, wife of Marion Divet; and Anna, who married Charles Lochar, of Columbia. Mrs. Divet's paternal grandparents were Samuel and Mary (Durr) Saylor, he having been a farmer in West Hempfield. He passed away June 25, 1900, after reaching the unusual age of eighty-two. His widow, who yet lives at Marietta, was a daughter of Joseph and Anna (Dyer) Durr, of Manheim, in Lancaster county.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Divet has been blessed with one son, Roy.

CHRISTIAN FUNK STONER, deputy register of wills of Lancaster county, with residence in the city of Lancaster, is one of the best known and most popular citizens of the community in which he lives.

Mr. Stoner's ancestors were among the early settlers of the county, three brothers of the name having come here from Germany, and settled in what was then Conestoga (now Pequea) township, having secured a patent for one thousand acres of land in that locality. The great-grandfather of Christian F. erected the dwelling house, and there the grandfather was born and passed all his days.

Abraham Stoner, who farmed, and, in connection, conducted a machine shop near Stonersville (named after the family of Stoner), in West Lampeter township, was the father of Christian F. Stoner. The late H. K. Stoner, who was a pioneer dealer in improved farm implements in this county, was a half-brother of Abraham Stoner. The latter married Lydia Funk, of Manor township, Lancaster county, and their children were: Isaac, deceased; Susan, deceased wife of Rev. Samuel Roth, of York county, Pa.; Fanny, wife of Jesse Strickler, both now deceased; Miss Lizzie and Miss Lydia A., both living on one of the finest truck farms in Lancaster county; Levi, of Lancaster; John F., with the Safety Buggy Company; and Christian F., whose name introduces this sketch.

Christian F. Stoner was born Nov. 6, 1850, in West Lampeter township, Lancaster Co., Pa., and was educated in the public schools of Pequea township, whither his parents had removed when he was two years old. Leaving school at the age of fifteen years, young Stoner entered the dry-goods store of Hager & Brothers, in Lancaster, and there remained eight years, at the end of which time, his father having died, he returned home. Until 1879 he remained on the home farm, in that year receiving the appointment to the office of deputy register of wills. He served as such until 1881, under Capt. Edward Edgerly, and then served three years under Mr. Umble, at the close of which term he was elected register of wills, and for three years remained at the head of that office, discharging the duties thereof with characteristic intelligence and fidelity. Upon his retirement from this incumbency he for a time bought leaf tobacco for Dohan & Taitt, of Philadelphia, also served one year as a clerk in the recorder's and sheriff's offices, and was then recalled to the register's office, this time under Joseph Reeser, register of wills, serving as deputy register three years under him, then three years under M. G. Musser, and since Jan. 1, 1900, he has been serving under A. H. Diffenbaugh—altogether a truly remarkable record, and a just recognition of intelligence, fidelity and integrity. While living with his sister in Pequea township, after his father's death, Mr. Stoner was elected assessor of the township for two terms, and justice of the peace one term, resigning from the latter office before the expiration of the term.

On March 28, 1885, Christian F. Stoner married Hannah Martha Martin, daughter of the late John Martin, in his day a well-known hotel-keeper at West Willow, this county, and two children have blessed their union: Lucretia M., who graduated from the Girls' High School, Lancaster, in 1902; and Mercy Fridy, who is a member of the class of 1904, same school. The entire family attend the services of St. Paul's Reformed Church, Lancaster.

In fraternal relations Mr. Stoner is a member of Levergood Lodge, I. O. O. F.; the Jr. O. U. A. M.; the Artisans, and the Elks. Taken all in all, there is no more popular man in the community, both personally and politically, than Christian F. Stoner.

WILLIAM G. BEAR (deceased.) Prominent among the business men of West Earl township, was William G. Bear, late the popular veteran proprietor of the well-known "Brownstown Hotel," a hostelry which justly deserves the commendation of the traveling public.

Jacob Bear, the father of William G. was born March 31, 1820, and died June 21, 1890, and for many years was a hotelkeeper, in Brownstown. On Nov. 5, 1845, he married Sophia Gorman, who was born Jan. 17, 1827, and died March 5, 1900. William G. Bear was reared in West Earl and received his education in the common schools. His business came to him from his father, who was also an excellent hotelkeeper, and all of his life, with the exception of his army experience, was passed in looking after the convenience and comfort of his guests. His excellent hotel was well and favorably known, and he had a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Bear enlisted in 1864, in Co. G, 195th P. V. I., and continued in the service of his country until the close of the Civil war. Although Mr. Bear came of a Democratic family, his belief was in the Republican party and his vote was always cast in its support. In the township he filled many of the local offices, and was a most efficient judge of election. Socially he was connected with the K. of P., in which order he was highly valued.

On Nov. 15, 1873, William G. Bear was married to Miss Emma L. him best. Devoted to his family and friends, upright in his dealings with the public, and a progressive and intelligent man, he represented the fine old county of Lancaster.

WILLIAM FUHRMAN, wholesale and retail meat merchant and proprietor of the largest meat trade in Lancaster, was born in Philadelphia, Aug. 17, 1849, son of William, Sr., and Catherine (Daumer) Fuhrman.

William Fuhrman, Sr., came to America from Germany, soon after his marriage, and with his wife settled in Philadelphia, where he engaged in the butcher's business. In 1858 he removed to Lancaster and opened up his place of trade at the market still kept by his son. He remained there until his death, which occurred in 1881, at the age of sixty-one. His wife died in 1871, aged sixty-four years. Both of them belonged to the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Fuhrman was a Democrat in politics and belonged fraternally to the I. O. O. F. They had these children: Hannah, deceased, in 1894, the wife of Frederick Gackler, who is engaged in the real estate business, in Philadelphia; William, of this sketch; and Misses Amelia and Lydia, both residents of Philadelphia.

William Fuhrman, our subject, received an excellent common school education and then learned the meat business under the careful supervision of his father, at the latter's death purchasing the same from the estate and carrying it on ever since, on progressive lines. His business is both wholesale and retail and he manufactures all kinds of sausages as a specialty, and carries the largest trade in his line in Lancaster. In 1887 he erected his three-story slaughter house, back of his residence, and it is modern in every way, clean and sanitary and equipped with the latest conveniences. Mr. Fuhrman employs a force of fifteen men and gives the public the very best service and the most wholesome meat that can be found anywhere. By close attention to business, honest and upright dealing and courteous and obliging manner, Mr. Fuhrman has distanced all competitors and occupies the leading position in his line in this city.

In 1869 Mr. Fuhrman was married to Mary Schemerbrant, of Lancaster, by whom he had two sons, William and Henry. Mrs. Fuhrman died, and on Nov. 12, 1886, in Lancaster, Mr. Fuhrman was united in marriage to Elizabeth Frankford, born in Providence township, Lancaster county, daughter of Philip and Evaline (Lee) Frankford, the former of whom was a shoemaker in this city, born in 1804 and died in 1874. The mother of Mrs. Fuhrman died in March, 1883, aged fifty-eight years, and both were buried in Lancaster and both were members of the U. B. Church. Their children were: Joshua, a leather merchant in Philadelphia; Margaret, deceased; Martha, who married Elias Hamilton, and lives in the southern part of Lancaster county; Elizabeth, who is Mrs.

Fuhrman; Ellen, who married Harry Ailes, a carpenter in Harriman, Tenn.; Ruth, who married Walter E. Harvey, a farmer in this county; Mary, who married John Bielfeldt, of Philadelphia; Eva, who married Jonas Heiland, a cigarmaker of Harrisburg; and William, of Lancaster. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fuhrman, namely: Ray C., Ira N., Guy L., Paul Lester and C. Earl.

JOHN SCHLEICH was born in Baden, Germany, April 14, 1807, and died in Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 6, 1871. He came here from Germany in 1828, settling at once in Lancaster, and remaining to the end of his days. He was a baker by trade, and he operated a baking establishment until 1857, when he entered the grocery business, from which he accumulated a considerable fortune. Politically he acted with the Democrats. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. and of Zion Lutheran Church. He married Maria B. Glessing of Wurtemberg, Germany, by whom he had the following offspring: John, Jr., who died Oct. 29, 1898, aged sixty-two; George H., born in Lancaster in 1839; Jacob F., who died in Feb., 1899; Miss Margaret C., now residing in Lancaster with George H. None of these ever married. The mother and widow died in 1876, at the age of seventy-five.

GEORGE H. SCHLEICH, who continues his father's business, was reared in it, and it naturally came to him at the death of his parents. He is one of the oldest survivors of the native-born citizens of Lancaster, within whose bounds he owns many valuable properties, and where he is well and prominently known. Like the rest of his family he has worked hard. They have all been constant accumulators, good business men of quiet disposition. All are, and have been, members of the Lutheran Church.

FRANKLIN N. KREIDER, one of the young and representative farmers of East Hempfield, Lancaster county, was born Sept. 21, 1868, a son of John and Anna M. (Neff) Kreider.

Jacob Kreider, the paternal grandfather, was a farmer by occupation, and greatly respected in East Hempfield township, where his son John was born Oct. 15, 1845. Until 1890, the latter engaged in farming, but at that date, retired from active life. However, in April, 1900, he interested himself in the large creamery at East Petersburg, and has since devoted his attention to this line of business. His most estimable wife, Anna M., was a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Miller) Neff, influential people of Manor township, and she bore him two children: Franklin N.; and Jacob N., born on Aug. 24, 1870, married Kate Hostetter, and died in 1895, at the age of twenty-four. John Kreider and his wife are members of the Old Mennonite Church, in which denomination they are highly esteemed.

Franklin N. Kreider spent his boyhood days upon the farm of his father, learning to till the soil, and attending the public schools, during the winter months. When he attained his majority, the enterprising young man rented the farm he now occupies, and commenced business for himself. So successful was he in conducting his farm, that within three years the thirty-seven acres comprising the property, became his own, and since then his excellent crops have continued as a result of his good management and thorough understanding of the science of farming.

On Nov. 7, 1890, Franklin N. Kreider married Lizzie A. Kauffman, a daughter of Benjamin B. and Anna (Kreider) Kauffman, of Manheim township, formerly of East Hempfield township. Three children have been born of this marriage: Ammon K.; Elmer K. and Irvin K. The religious connections of Franklin N. Kreider and wife are with the Old Mennonite Church, in which faith they were reared. Surrounded with their little ones, these two young people have a bright future before them of happy lives, spent in peaceful enjoyment of the comforts provided by their industry, enterprise and economy.

KAUFMAN DEUTSCH (deceased), for many years a well-known citizen of Lancaster, was born in Danville, Montour Co., Pa., and died from the effects of a paralytic stroke, at his home in Lancaster, May 25, 1891, and was interred at Danville. His father was Moses Deutsch, who was born in Germany, but who emigrated to the United States early in life and settled at Danville; his occupation was that of a drover, and in his many trips made through the State with cattle and stock, he acquired a wide acquaintance.

Kaufman Deutsch was not born into a wealthy home, and while still a lad, started out to make his own fortune, his financial capital being a ten dollar bill given him by his father. That he was provident, industrious and energetic, was proven by the ample fortune he amassed, and the prominence to which he attained as a horseman in this vicinity. Few men in this line were better known in Lancaster county, where he made his home through many years. In Philadelphia, on June 7, 1874, Kaufman Deutsch was married to Miss Elizabeth Hickey, who was born in Philadelphia, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Darrow) Hickey, natives of Ireland. Mr. Hickey was the proprietor of a large tailoring establishment until he enlisted for service in the Civil war, under Col. Chantry, in the 169th Pa. V. I., and was so severely wounded in the thigh at the second Battle of Bull Run, that his leg had to be amputated, from which the faithful soldier died. His widow survived until 1877, dying at the age of sixty-four years. Both parents were worthy members of the Roman Catholic Church. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hickey were as follows: Sally, widow of Christian Schoud; Elizabeth, widow of Mr. Deutsch; John, a decorator in New York City; Emma, deceased wife of Frank Thompson; Frank, deceased; and Mary, who died young.

Mr. Deutsch was a valued member of the order of Odd Fellows, while in his political views, he belonged to the Democratic party. His religious connection was with the Synagogue, but Mrs. Deutsch is a consistent member of the Catholic Church, where she has many attached friends. Mr. Deutsch was a whole-souled, kind-hearted man, very genial and pleasant, and while he had made his own way in the world without assistance, he was always ready to extend a helping hand to others. His circle of friends was large and he is much missed. The one daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Deutsch is Minnie L., who is the widow of Gerald J. Peiper, of Washington, D. C., where he was a photographic artist. Mrs. Peiper has two children, namely: G. D. Maitland and Florence A.

HENRY K. OBER, a school teacher, surveyor, notary public and conveyancer, of Mastersonville, Pa., was born in Rapho township, Jan. 2, 1878, and is the son of Michael R. and Susan (Kulp) Ober, of the same township, where they still reside.

Michael R. Ober, a successful general farmer of Rapho township, now retired, was born there March 27, 1836, a son of Christian and Barbara (Ruhl) Ober. He has been twice married. On May 11, 1858, in Lancaster, he wedded Catherine Spigler, who was born in Catfish, Lancaster county, in 1841, and died Sept. 29, 1871. She sleeps her last sleep in Chickies Meeting House burying ground. She was a daughter of Samuel and Susan (Burdolf) Spigler, who lived and died in Lancaster county, the former passing away in Mt. Joy township, and the latter while on a visit in Juda. For his second wife, Michael Ober married Susan Kulp, who was born in Rapho township, Jan. 17, 1851, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Baker) Kulp, of Lancaster county. To them were born two children, Henry K.; and Emma, the wife of Alva W. Wolgemuth, a farmer of Rapho township.

Henry K. Ober lived at home with his parents until his marriage, excepting the time spent in the State Normal school, at Millersville, Pa., where he graduated in the spring of 1898. After that he again returned to his father's home and lived there until early in 1901, when he moved to Mastersonville, his present residence. Mr. Ober has taught school since 1896 and has given his leisure time to conveyancing and the duties of his office of notary public, and for the past three years to his profession of surveyor and civil engineer. He is very energetic and a hard worker, so that, although diversified, his employment is conscientiously attended to.

On May 25, 1899, Mr. Ober was married to Miss Cora B. Hess, who was born Aug. 6, 1879, daughter of Henry L. and Anna (Brinzer) Hess, of Mt. Joy township, the father being a retired farmer of prominence in his locality. He recently moved from Mt. Joy to Elizabethtown, Pa. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ober.

Mr. Ober, though young, has by his indomitable pluck and energy already gained a foothold in business circles which will eventually lead him to fortune and prominence in his locality. Of very agreeable manners, he has the faculty of making many friends who remain such. Mr. Ober and his wife are members of the German Baptist Church.

OWEN F. BRUNER, proprietor of the "Swan Hotel," corner of South Queen and East Vine streets, Lancaster, is descended from ancestry that has long been connected with the affairs of Pennsylvania. Owen Bruner, his grandfather, was a lumber dealer of Ephrata.

Peter Martin Bruner, son of Owen, carried on general merchandising at Conestoga Center, for forty-two years. For some years past he has been living retired, at No. 443 South Duke street, Lancaster. Mr. Bruner was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth Ohmit, daughter of Christian Ohmit, a well-known river pilot living at Washington borough. This union was blessed with nine children, the following of whom are living: Peter, a hotel-keeper at Gettysburg; Jacob M. and William, in the coal business in Philadelphia; Martha, wife of A. J. Zercher, an undertaker of Conestoga Center; Rebecca, wife of William Caldwell, of Rock Hill; Mary, at home; and Owen F. proprietor of the "Swan Hotel." The mother of these children died thirty-one years ago, and Mr. Bruner then married Della Sourbeer, daughter of Reuben Sourbeer, of Safe Harbor. Three children were born of this union: Harry, connected with the butter department of the caramel factory of Lancaster; and Emma and Bertha, at home.

Owen F. Bruner was born in Conestoga Center Feb. 12, 1867, and was educated in the public schools of that district. Leaving school at the age of seventeen years, he entered his father's store, and later learned cigarmaking. When he attained his majority Mr. Bruner went into the bread business at West Willow, but after one year abandoned this to engage in the hotel business at Gap, remaining one year. This was followed by four years as proprietor of a hotel at Rock Hill. He then came to Lancaster and became connected with the "McGrann House," North Queen street, where he remained until March, 1899, when he took possession of the "Swan Hotel," corner of South Queen and Vine streets, where he has met with great success. The "Swan" has accommodations for forty, and in its stables there is room for two hundred and fifty horses. It is a fact most gratifying to the genial host that hotel and stables are alike popular, the former never lacking lodgers, and the latter always well filled.

Mr. Bruner has been twice married. His first wife was Ella Hoffman, daughter of a well-known farmer of Willowstreet. To this marriage came one child, Bertha, who died at the age of one year. The child's death was closely followed by that of the mother. For his second wife Mr. Bruner wedded Mary Weninger, daughter of Gottlieb Weninger, a well-known citizen of the Fourth ward, Lancaster. Socially Mr. Bruner is a member of the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Malta. He has been an active worker in the Reformed Church of Conestoga Center, and for a time sang in the choir. In church or social circles, in business or in his home, Mr. Bruner is a most excellent and pleasant gentleman.

JACOB MUSSER BRUNER, brother of Owen F. Bruner, has succeeded in one of the largest centers of trade in the world, Philadelphia. He was born in Conestoga Center May 8, 1862, and, after attending the schools of the district, finished his education at the State Normal School at Millersville. Leaving the latter institution when nineteen years old, Mr. Bruner clerked for a time for his uncle, H. F. Bruner, who was engaged in the coal trade in Philadelphia; and then, having mastered the intricacies of the business, entered into the coal trade for himself in that city. He began business for himself Dec. 1, 1885, and the fact that he now owns three coalyards in Philadelphia is the best evidence that he has succeeded. These yards are located respectively at the northeast corner of 13th street and Washington avenue, where the main office is; at the northwest corner of 16th street and Indiana avenue, and at No. 4503 Girard avenue. All of these yards have telephone connections, and nineteen delivery wagons are kept busy in meeting the demands of the extensive trade.

In 1890 Mr. Bruner was married to Jennie Messick, daughter of M. A. Messick, a well-known miller of Delaware. One son has blessed this union, J. Millard Bruner. Mr. Bruner belongs to the Blue Lodge of Masons, and to the Knights of the Golden Eagle. Politically he is a Republican; religiously a Presbyterian; and in all the affairs of life he is a wholesouled, enterprising gentleman.

A. LINCOLN ERB is the efficient superintendent of the Wrightsville Lime Co., a noted establishment on the old Halderman farm, five miles from Marietta, a place consisting of 250 acres, mostly of limestone rock, with 4,300 feet of river front. Here about 200 men are employed, and fifteen lime kilns are kept in operation, seven of them being of the latest design. He was born at Lobata, in Conoy township, Sept. 25, 1865. He remained at home until he reached the age of seventeen years, when he engaged in teaching, an occupation which he followed for the ensuing nine years, fitting himself more thoroughly for this work by a two years' course in the State Normal School at Millersville. In 1890 he gave up teaching, and attended a business college in Philadelphia. In 1892 he came to the Wrightsville Lime Company to take a position as a clerk. In 1896 he was made superintendent of the works, a responsible position which he fills with satisfaction to his employers and credit to himself. In his politics he is a Republican, and is highly esteemed in the community, both for his sterling manly and business qualities and for kind heart and genial disposition.

On May 12, 1895, Mr. Erb was married in Conoy township to Miss Fanny Hershey, who was born in Mt. Joy township May 30, 1868, a daughter of Christian and Sarah (Engle) Hershey, both born and reared in Lancaster county. To Mr. and Mrs. Erb have been born three children, Mary H., Christian S. and John E.

Christian Hershey, who was a son of John and Elizabeth (Hershey) Hershey, of Lancaster county, was a farmer and a man of means. He died in East Donegal township, Aug. 14, 1895, aged fifty-seven years. His wife, Sarah Engle, was born in 1840, a daughter of Henry and Fanny (Hoover) Engle, also of Lancaster county. To Christian and Sarah (Engle) Hershey were born children as follows: Eli, a tobacco salesman in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Henry, deceased; Eusebius, a traveling salesman from Philadelphia; Fanny; Anna, wife of H. K. Alwine, a cattle drover of Middletown; Lizzie, wife of Harry Brinzer, of Middletown; and Norman, a resident of Maytown. The mother of these children is still living, and makes her home in East Donegal.

GEORGE L. BRENNEMAN is one of Columbia's enterprising, progressive and energetic business men, whose acumen and integrity have won for him the undisguised and universal esteem of his fellow townsmen.

The paternal grandparents were Abraham and Sarah Breneman, who settled in Donegal township in 1806, and for many years conducted a well-ordered and thriving hostelry at Columbia. Christian Breneman, father of George L., married Sarah Collins, daughter of James and Jane (Everlin) Collins. Mr. Collins was born in Conestoga township, and his wife in Columbia. Christian Breneman was a lime manufacturer, a man of some means, prominent in local affairs, and was held in high repute by his neighbors. He filled the office of school director and chief burgess, and occupied a seat in the council. He died in Columbia in 1877, after reaching the age of sixty-seven. His widow lived to see her eighty-second birthday, and entered into rest in 1892, at Wrightsville. Their children were seven in number. The two eldest, James and Jane, died in childhood. Emma, the third child, is unmarried and resides at Wrightsville. Oscarluca died in his twenty-first year. Mary is Mrs. Calvin Flora, of Wrightsville. George L. was the sixth child, and the youngest, Anna, died before reaching maturity.

George L. Breneman's life has been full of activity and well directed effort. He was born in Donegal township, April 16, 1851, but came to Columbia at the age of nine. When fourteen he began his career as a driver for a teamster, and before he had reached his eighteenth year he set out to seek his fortune in the West. For a year and a half he worked upon a Kansas railroad, then returning to Columbia, he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as a fireman. Three years later he was made engineer. For nineteen years thereafter he continued in the company's service in the same capacity, and then he began the life of a farmer in Manor township. After seven years he tired of this, with its prosaic round of duties, and coming to Columbia in the spring of 1900, engaged in his present line of business, that of a dealer in fruit and produce. In this he has been successful, his natural qualities well fitting him to succeed in any avocation where sound sense, industry and integrity are indispensable.

He married Miss Kate Reece, of Lancaster, in June, 1877. Of their five children, the eldest, Jennie, is a trained nurse in New York City; the others, Witmer, Alice, James and Sally, are at home with their parents.

Mrs. Breneman's father, George Reece, was a hotel keeper at Mountville. He died in 1876, before reaching his fiftieth year. Her mother was Elizabeth Poisht, a devout Lutheran, who died in 1872, at Lancaster, aged sixty-seven years. She bore her husband four daughters and three sons, Mrs. Breneman being the third child in the order of birth. A brief mention of the others may prove of interest. David, the eldest, as well as Anna, Mrs. Josiah Conklin, reside in Columbia; Ella married Jacob Bitner, of Mountville; Mary is the wife of Harry Friday, of Lancaster; George is a pretzel baker in the same city; Thomas, the youngest of the family, lives at Mountville, and is a dealer in horses. Mrs. Breneman's grandparents, both paternal and maternal, were born in Germany, and came to America while yet young. Henry and Mary (Lively) Reece, the parents of her father, settled in Lancaster county; as did those of her mother, Henry and Elizabeth Poisht. Henry Poisht was by occupation a baker of pretzels.

Mr. Breneman is independent in politics, placing patriotism before policy, just as he would uplift charity above creed.

S. L. BINNESDERFER was born in Petersburg, Lancaster county, Aug. 22, 1869, a son of Samuel and Elizabeth. (Landis) Binnesderfer, natives of Petersburg and Pennsylvania, respectively.

Samuel Binnesderfer, who is still a resident of Petersburg, was born in June, 1842, was reared as a butcher, but afterward became a tobacco merchant, in both of which lines he realized considerable profits, and for the past sixteen years has been the popular and genial landlord of the "Black Horse Hotel." His wife was called away from him in 1881; at the comparatively early age of thirty-nine years, in the faith of the Lutheran church. They had three children, viz.: S. L., whose name introduces this article; Agnes, who died when but two and one-half years old; and Idella, who still has her home with her father.

The paternal grandparents of Scott L. Binnesderfer were George and Susan (Kahler) Binnesderfer, who were born in Lancaster county, Pa., were reared on farms belonging to their respective parents and died in Petersburg.

S. L. Binnesderfer was reared on the old homestead at Petersburg, where he continued to reside until twenty-four years of age. In the meantime he acquired a good common-school education, and at a very early age began packing tobacco. At the age of fourteen years he made a full hand at the tobacco press, and continued to work at packing in the home tobacco warehouse until twenty-three years old, and a year later began working at the carpenter's trade, followed it until November, 1900, and then came to Mountville, and purchased the business of E. B. Kready, which he has since disposed of.

Mr. Binnesderfer is a member of the P. O. S. of A., the Jr. O. U. A. M., the Mystic Chain and the Royal Arcanum. In politics he is a Republican, but has never accepted a public office. He is straightforward in all his dealings, and during his business life in Mountville established a high reputation for integrity. He enjoys the respect of quite a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HERSHEY, the enterprising coal and lumber dealer on the Lititz turnpike, near the stock-yards, and who with his brother Christian, has built up quite a settlement in that section, comes from one of the oldest, most numerous and influential families in Lancaster county. His grandfather was Benjamin Hershey, a farmer, near Leaman Place, Lancaster county, and his father, Christian H. Hershey, is a well-preserved and active man, who after a long and busy life, is now devoting his last years to the helping of his sons in the extensive business at the new settlement near the stock-yards.

Christian H. Hershey married Miss Jane Shultz, a daughter of Martin Shultz, of Paradise, Lancaster county, at that time in the service of the Pennsylvania Railway Company. Seven children were born to this union, all of whom are living: Ida C., wife of F. K. Leman, formerly a partner with B. F. Hershey in the coal and lumber business at Gordonville; Susan, wife of Levi Zimmerman, a farmer at Kinzers; Clara, wife of William J. Aiken, a carpenter and undertaker, of Williamstown, Lancaster county; Hettie A., wife of E. E. Keneagy, a farmer near Kinzers; Bertha, wife of Milton M. Myers, of Kinzers, a telegraph operator in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Christian, a graduate of the Pennsylvania Business College, and now engaged in the grain and feed business in the settlement noted above; and Benjamin Franklin.

Benjamin Franklin Hershey was born near New Holland, Oct. 21, 1869, and had his education principally in the public schools at Kinzers, to which point his parents removed while he was still a lad. When he was seventeen years old he left school, and went to farming with his father, with whom he remained for three years, and then engaged in the same line two years for himself. While hardly yet out of his boyhood he engaged in the coal and lumber business at Gordonville, which he successfully conducted for five years, and then, seeing an opportunity near the city of Lancaster, with his brother, he bought four acres near the stock yards tract, erected four buildings, comprising a large warehouse, a mill, a smithy, and an office, and there they began what has proved an extremely profitable trade. The creation of this important suburban addition to Lancaster was begun in the early fall of 1900, and by the following spring everything was in order. Both telephone services are employed to meet the wants of a rapidly growing trade. A branch office has been established at No. 12 East Orange street.

In 1889 Benjamin F. Hershey was married to Miss Susan, daughter of the late Elias Leaman, who was a farmer near Intercourse, and this union was blessed with five children, one of whom, Alta A., is deceased. The survivors are: Jennie E. and Elsie May, at school; and Elmer L. and Benjamin Herbert, at home. Mr. Hershey, who has now closed out his enterprise at Gordonville, is devoting all his efforts to the development of his very promising business at Lancaster. He lives at No. 623 North Lime street. In religion he is an Old Mennonite, the Hersheys having been connected with that church for many generations. In politics he is a Republican, and he is a public-spirited and patriotic citizen.

WILLIS G. HARRY, manager of the Lancaster Dairy Company, at No. 36 West Chestnut street, Lancaster, is an Ohioan by birth, but has adopted this city as his home; and as he has made himself felt in his crusade for pure milk he deserves more than a passing notice.

Mr. Harry is a son of Silas C. Harry, of Wooster, Ohio, who is now living retired in that pleasant little city after a long and useful career as a contracting plasterer. He married Margaret Sommers, and from this union came Scott G., Anna May and Willis G., the two first named at home with their parents in Ohio.

Willis G. Harry was born in West Lebanon, Ohio, where his parents lived for a time, and after reaching the proper age became a pupil in the schools of Wooster, graduating from the high school in due time. His first work was in the dairy and creamery business, and then he spent a year in study at the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Harry was then employed at the Ohio Agricultural Experimental Station, where he spent two years, after which he spent a year at the Ohio State University. Mr. Harry then came East and was employed in the creamery business in York, Pa. He was next at Lititz, where he had charge of the creamery business of E. L. Garber, through whose enterprise and liberality the Lancaster Dairy Company was established in the spring of 1900, with Mr. Harry as manager. Mr. Harry proceeded to pasteurize the milk and cream, and for the first time the people of Lancaster were offered a pure article. So popular did this pure liquid food become that in a short time four wagons were required by the growing trade, taxed to their utmost capacity in serving the many patrons the Lancaster Dairy Company had secured. Mr. Harry has brought not only rare industry, but rare intelligence as well to the work, and the people of Lancaster have abundantly shown their appreciation of his work.

HENRY S. MUSSER, a prosperous and successful general farmer of Rapho township, Lancaster county, was born in East Hempfield township, May 24, 1874, a son of Martin N. and Anna M. (Seitz) Musser. The father was born on the farm where he is now living in East Hempfield township, December 25, 1846, and the mother in Rohrerstown, Pa., in 1850. They are members of the New Mennonite Church, and are very highly esteemed by all who know them. They had two children: Mary S., who died at the age of fifteen years; Henry S.

The paternal grandfather of Henry S. Musser was Benjamin Musser, a farmer of Providence township, whose death, however, occurred in East Hempfield township, in October, 1892, at the age of sixty-seven years. The great-grandfather of Henry S., also Benjamin Musser, was a lifelong resident of Lancaster county. The maternal grandparents of Henry S. Musser were John M. and Mary (Mellinger) Seitz, both native to Lancaster county.

Henry S. Musser was married in Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 2, 1897, to Lizzie N. Shenk, by whom he has had one child, Anna S. Mrs. Lizzie N. (Shenk) Musser was born on the farm where she has her present home, Sept. 15, 1875, a daughter of Henry H. and Anna (Nissley) Shenk, both of whom were born in Rapho township, and there died. They came to the farm in 1872, and her father was a farmer all his days. When he died in 1882 he was only thirty-two; and his wife was only twenty-five at her death, in 1878; their remains are resting in a private cemetery on the farm where Mrs. Musser is now residing. They were members of the New Mennonite Church, and were in every way honorable and upright people. Their family consisted of two daughters, Lizzie N., who is Mrs. Musser, and Anna N., who married Edward Crist, a farmer, near Rawlinsville, Lancaster county. Her paternal grandparents were Rev. Henry and Magdalena (Hostetter) Shenk, of Lancaster county. Her grandfather was a Mennonite preacher, and was engaged in farming on a very considerable scale. Her maternal grandfather was Joseph Nissley, who married a Miss Sherk, both of Lancaster county.

Henry S. Musser remained with his parents until he was married, when he established himself on his present farm, where he has met that success that fitly attends unwearied industry and wise economy. When he was eighteen years of age he attended the State Normal at Millersville one year, and is well prepared for the practical duties of life. His farm comprises ninety acres of choice land, thoroughly cultivated and presenting a fine appearance to the critical eye. There he keeps fifteen cows, and carries on modern farming with good returns from his labors. Living four miles from Columbia, he keeps in close touch with the world, and is regarded as one of the progressive, broad-minded and leading men of the town. In politics he is a Republican.

JAMES B. REILLY, who built, owns and conducts the "St. Charles Hotel" at Atlantic City, N. J., was not born in Lancaster, but he spent his boyhood there, and his father resides in the place, and is one of the city's most prominent men.

Michael Reilly, the father, came from Ireland to America many years ago, and was long a railroad contractor, besides engaging in many other enterprises. For a time he was sole owner of the Quarryville railroad, and as an individual, purchased the farm which through his efforts has since become the beautiful Conestoga Park of Lancaster. He has made his impress on many important affairs in the community. Michael Reilly married Miss Anna Maria McGovern, daughter of the late Thomas McGovern, also a heavy contractor. This union was blessed with a family of several children, four of whom are living: James B., proprietor of the "St. Charles Hotel" at Atlantic City; John, assisting his brother James B.; and Frank and Charles, at home in Lancaster.

James B. Reilly was born in Belvidere, N. J., his father being engaged in contract work there at the time. He spent his younger days in Lancaster, and was educated in its public schools. His first mercantile venture was in the coal business, but he abandoned that to engage in the contracting business with his father. No contractors were better known than McManus & Reilly, and James B., as a member of the firm, took an active part in its affairs. A great deal of work was done for the Pennsylvania Railway Company, but many other large undertakings were also carried through during the thirteen years of active operation.

In 1896 Mr. Reilly bought nine acres of land at Atlantic City, and began the great task of erecting fifty buildings, of which the magnificent "St. Charles" forms a leading part. With the exception of the hotel Mr. Reilly has disposed of nearly all the property. St. Charles Place of which Mr. Reilly was projector, builder and owner, comprises one of the finest parts of this famous sea side resort.

Mr. Reilly was married, in 1881, to Miss Mary E. Bryant, daughter of the late Daniel Bryant, known as America's most famous minstrel, and whose hall years ago in New York was the center of amusement for all classes of citizens. Seven children have been born to this union, all of whom are living: Bryant, James and Charles attending Mount St. Mary's College at Emmitsburg, Md.; and Anna Marie, Helen, Bessie and Richard, at home.

HARVEY B. NISSLEY. Though born in Carroll county, Maryland, this prominent and successful young mechanic of Silverspring, Lancaster county, is the representative of an old family of the latter county. His parents, John W. and Fayette (Berry) Nissley, were both natives of Lancaster county and his paternal grandfather, Abraham Nissley, was one of the sturdy agriculturists of the same county nearly a century ago. John W. Nissley was born in 1822 and in his native county married Miss Fayette Berry, whose parents were residents of Conoy township. John W. Nissley learned and followed the trade of cabinet-maker and carpenter. He went to Maryland about 1855 but returned to Lancaster county in 1877 for three years. His wife died at Ironville, Pa., in that year, aged fifty-five years. To John and Fayette Nissley were born two children, Penrose, who died in Ironville, Pa., December, 1898, and Harvey B. Returning from Maryland a second time, John Nissley now resides in Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pennsylvania.

Harvey B. Nissley was born Feb. 10, 1868. He was nine years of age when he came with his parents from Maryland to Lancaster, their native county. Self-reliant and active in temperament, he two years later, at the age of eleven years, began working out on farms, continuing until he was seventeen. Deciding to learn the blacksmith trade, he began and completed a three years' apprenticeship with Gideon Smith at Silverspring. The young journeyman then started out for a little experience. He worked at his trade for a year at Lititz, then with commendable assurance opened up for himself at Moore's Mill, Rapho township, a shop which he successfully conducted for three years. In the light of experience thus gained, the place of his apprenticeship offered attractions and accordingly in 1891 he began business at his present stand in Silverspring. Trade has grown steadily and his custom stands faithfully by him, for he is an excellent mechanic, makes fast friends and keeps well informed, both in matters pertaining to his trade and in issues of general moment. He has risen to command the high esteem of his fellow citizens and is becoming one of the public-spirited leaders of the township.

Mr. Nissley married March 7, 1889, at Columbia, Pa., Miss Mary G. McCune, and to them have been born four children, Maud, Lester, Blanche and Jennie, all living. Mrs. Nissley was born in Silver-spring in July, 1870, the daughter of Daniel and Susan McCune, now residents of Silverspring. The father was born in 1840 and the mother in 1842. Five children were born to Daniel and Susan McCune, namely: Emma, deceased wife of Andrew Bard; Frank, of Ironville; Mary G., wife of Harvey B. Nissley; Webster, a telegraph operator at Silverspring; and Laura, deceased.

In politics Harvey B. Nissley is a staunch Republican. He is prominent in the fraternal orders as a member of the I. O. R. M., of the Knights of the Mystic Chain and of the Knights of Malta.

WALTER F. ALBRIGHT. In reviewing the records of a number of Lancaster's enterprising business men we find that they have succeeded to industries established by their fathers, and have, by their upright dealings and keen sagacity, added prestige to honored family names. An instance of this kind is afforded by the record of Walter F. Albright, whose flourishing bakery business was established by his father, Frederick A. Albright, and by him carried through its early days of doubtful success until placed upon a substantial and profitable basis.

As a boy Frederick A. Albright learned the whitesmith's trade and followed it for a time, but the demand for such workers being limited he found it necessary to seek a new field of employment. Accordingly he went to New Jersey, where he worked in a shovel and pitchfork manufactory. His next location was in Chester county, Pa., where he was employed as stove finisher in a foundry. He was subsequently employed in the railroad shops at Columbia, which were then carried on by the State. Coming to Lancaster in 1857, he engaged in the grocery, flour, grain and feed business, and in 1861 turned his attention to the bakery trade. For thirty years he conducted a prosperous business, keeping several delivery wagons in constant use and gaining the patronage of a large number of people. Finally, when advanced in years, he retired in favor of his son, Walter F., and from that time forward lived in retirement from business cares, dying Aug. 4, 1892, when seventy-one years of age. Though a staunch Republican he never sought office, and the only position he ever consented to fill was that of councilman, in which capacity he served for two terms. In religion he was connected with the Moravian Church. To his marriage with Sarah C. Auxer, who resides in Lancaster, there were born five children, viz.: Charles, who died when nine years old, Mary, Mrs. Benjamin Sides, who died when thirty; Walter F., of Lancaster; Sallie (deceased), who married Valentine Werkheiser, a well-known wholesale grocer of Lancaster; and Frederick, who was two years old at the time of his death.

Walter F. Albright was born Oct. 14, 1851. When a boy he learned the baker's trade under his father's careful oversight, and remained an employe of the concern until, on his father's retirement, the business was turned over to him. He thoroughly understands every department of the work, and his three wagons are kept in constant service, delivering orders to his customers. Like his father, he is a believer in Republican principles, and, like him, too, he does not care for official position. Fraternally he is connected with the Eagles and the Elks. At Mt. Nebo, Lancaster county, in February, 1876, Mr. Albright married Barbara Garrett. The only child of their union, Dazy M., is now the wife of John Musser, a broker and brick and tile manufacturer. Mrs. Albright was born in Conestoga township, this county, daughter of Henry and Nancy Garrett, for many years leading residents of that township. Among the people of Lancaster Mr. Albright is recognized as an industrious and persevering business man, who richly merits the encouraging success of his projects, and has won the confidence of associates by uprightness of life and energy of disposition.

MICHAEL M. KAUFFMAN, an experienced and thriving young farmer of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, was born Sept. 2, 1868, at the home he still occupies, and is a son of Henry S. and Anna G. (Musser) Kauffman, the former of whom was also born on a part of the present farm, and the latter near Silverspring in an adjacent part of the township; they did not, however, as man and wife, make the farm their permanent home until 1863. There the father, Henry S. Kauffman, followed his vocation of farming the remainder of his life, dying Oct. 9, 1883, when forty-two years old, and there the mother passed away, Aug. 17, 1899, at the age of fifty-nine years, both in the faith of the Dunkard Church, and the remains of both were interred near Silverspring. They were the parents of two children, Michael M., and Amos G., the latter still unmarried and residing with his brother.

The paternal grandparents of Michael M. Kauffman were Michael and Anna Kauffman, both natives of Lancaster county, the former of whom was a substantial farmer and was twice married; the maternal grandfather, Michael S. Musser, also a native of Lancaster county, married a Miss Garber and died in West Hempfield township.

On March 4, 1890, in York county, Pa., Michael N. Kauffman married Miss Agnes Gohn, who has borne him one son, Henry G. Mrs. Agnes (Gohn) Kauffman was born two miles from Wrightsville, York county, April 18, 1868, and is a daughter of John D. and Sarah (Strickler) Gohn. John D. Gohn was a well-to-do farmer, and died in January, 1893, when forty-nine years old, his wife died in December, 1897, at the age of forty-eight years, both in the faith of the Dunkard Church, their remains being interred in Strickler's (private) burying ground. The children born to John D. and Sarah Gohn were seven in number and named as follows: Tillie, who was married to Jacob Walck, a farmer of York county; Agnes, Mrs. Kauffman; Clara, wife of Charles Kinard, also a farmer in York county; Menotti, a school teacher in York county; Sally, living with Mrs. Kauffman in West Hempfield township, Lancaster county; Enos and May, both deceased.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Agnes Kauffman were John and Magdalena (Dellinger) Gohn, farming people of York county; the maternal grandparents were John and Sarah (Stoner) Strickler, also of York county, where Sarah Strickler died some years ago, but where John Strickler, who is a retired farmer, is still living at the age of eighty-seven years. There is reason to believe that the family name was not Gohn originally, but John, and was changed to suit the convenience or whim of one of its early members.

Mr. Kauffman has a well-improved and fertile farm, and all its surroundings indicate the presence of an experienced and skillful manager, as it is a model in every detail and is one of the best cultivated places of its dimensions in the county. Mr. Kauffman is a member of the Dunkard Church and in politics is a Republican.

MRS. BARBARA HOWARD. Among the well-known residents of East Lampeter township, is Mrs. Barbara Howard, widow of the late Levi Howard, whose death took place Nov. 13, 1894. Mrs. Howard was born in Millport, Lancaster county, July 25, 1829, a daughter of the late John and Magdalena (Neff) Lefever, and a twin sister of George N. Lefever.

When but two years of age, Mrs. Howard was bereaved by the death of her devoted mother, and thus knew little of maternal care. She was educated in the schools of the district, and grew to womanhood under the protection of a fond father. On Jan. 4, 1849, she married the late Benjamin Dffenbach, and to this union were born: John, born Nov. 5, 1850, whose residence is not known; Franklin, born Nov. 11, 1854, who is the trusted night watchman in the business house of S. R. Moss & Co., in Lancaster; Amanda, born July 28, 1856, and now the wife of Martin Kreider; and Emma Louisa, born Jan. 28, 1859, and now Mrs. Amos B. Landis. The father of these children died Jan. 5, 1860.

On Dec. 24, 1865, Mrs. Dffenbach married Levi Howard, and to this union two daughters were born: Mary Catherine a most estimable lady, is noted for her tact and business ability; and Elizabeth, born Nov. 18, 1866, died in November, 1869. The death of Mr. Howard, on Nov. 13, 1894, was a great bereavement, but Mrs. Howard is a pious, Christian lady and bears her sorrows with resignation. In the Old Mennonite Church she is highly valued, and in the neighborhood she is known as kind and charitable, and worthy of the highest esteem.

ALBERT L. GALLAGHER, chief deputy sheriff of Lancaster county, has for years past been a prominent and popular figure about the courthouse. His grandfather, Anthony Gallagher, came to America in 1811, and settled in Donegal township, this county, spending the remainder of his days engaged in farming, in that township and in Rapho.

John Gallagher, son of Anthony, was a farmer of Rapho township, and died in 1890, aged eighty-four years. He married Sarah Lutz, daughter of Jacob Lutz, a well-known citizen of Petersburg. She entered into rest in 1887, aged sixty-nine years. This worthy couple had nine children, seven of whom are living: Mary, wife of Rufus H. Hipple, a teacher of Rapho; Samuel, of Rapho, now living retired; Emanuel, in the Lebanon bolt works; Sarah, wife of Henry Bradley, of Columbia; Amos, employed in the Pennsylvania Steel Works, at Steelton; Eli, a merchant tailor of Latonia, Ohio; and Albert L., chief deputy sheriff of Lancaster county.

Albert L. Gallagher was born in Rapho township March 5, 1862, and was educated in the public schools of the district, in Mt. Joy high school, and in Lebanon Valley College. Leaving college, Mr. Gallagher became a public school teacher, teaching in West Hempfield township for nine years, and then passing the Civil service examination, he entered the United States Mail service, running from New York to Pittsburg. In 1894 he was appointed deputy sheriff of Lancaster county, and has continued in that office ever since, having served under Sheriffs Hershey and Myers, and the present capable official, Sheriff McMichael. It is needless to say that he has performed the responsible duties of his position to his own credit and that of his superiors, as well as to the entire satisfaction of the public.

Mr. Gallagher married Miss Emma Weaver, daughter of the late John K. Weaver, a contracting painter, of Silver Spring, and two children have been born of this union: Estella, at home; and Paul, at school. Mr. Gallagher belongs to the Jr. O. U. A. M., the Knights of Malta, the Artisans, the Elks and the Masons. In religious connection he is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church. Politically as may be inferred, he has been an active and staunch Republican ever since he has been a voter. Wherever found, in his office, in his social organizations, in political circles or in his home, he is a manly man.

PETER R. BECK. Mr. Beck, who is a flagman in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, resides in Columbia, and was born in Lititz, Lancaster county, Sept. 7, 1865. He is a great-grandson of Daniel Beck, and a grandson of John Beck, both of that county. His grandfather, whose wife's maiden name was Susan Beck, was a millwright, as was his father, whose baptismal name was Daniel.

Daniel Beck (2) died in February, 1886, at the age of fifty-six years. His death resulted from the bite of a rabid dog, and occurred in a hospital in Lancaster, whither he had been taken for treatment. Peter R. Beck's mother was born in 1829, and named Rebecca Miley. She is still living in Columbia, and is an earnest member of St. John's Lutheran Church.

She is of German descent on the paternal side, her father and grandfather, both of whom were named Matthias, having emigrated from Germany, the younger in early life. Both were bricklayers. The elder Miley, who married Barbara Off in the Fatherland, settled in Lititz, and his son at Lexington. The latter soon after coming to these shores married Mary Ampriester, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Beck is the sixth of a family of ten children. His eldest brother, William H., is a resident of Perryville, Md. Mary L., the second born, married John Wilson, a railroad engineer, and lives in Columbia. Matilda C. is the wife of Joseph Eves, of the same place. Emanuel, another brother, was formerly a railroad conductor, but having lost both hands in a railroad accident, is now living in retirement, at Lancaster. Reuben D. is also a railway conductor, and has his home at Philadelphia. Sarah S. married Fred Beaver of Columbia, and Herman, the youngest brother, resides in that town. Kate is the wife of Jacob Palmer, and Anna died in infancy.

The first thirteen years of Mr. Beck's life were passed upon a farm. Coming to Columbia, he began work in his brother's cigar store, and later found employment as a huckster. On May 1, 1885, he entered the employ of the Reading Railroad Company, as a brakeman, and afterward was fireman. Two and one-half years later he left the Reading for the Pennsylvania: for four years he worked as a brakeman, and has since then held the position of flagman. He belongs to the Brotherhood of Railway Trainman, and his politics are those of the Democratic party.

Mr. Beck was married, July 28, 1887, to Miss Julia Dunbar, of Columbia. They have two children, Emma A. and William D. Mrs. Beck was born in November, 1869. Her father was William, a son of Thomas Dunbar, of Lancaster county. Her mother, before marriage, was Elizabeth Beveridge, and her maternal grandparents were Robert and Eliza Beveridge. William Dunbar was born Nov. 3, 1849, and is assistant yardmaster at Columbia. His first wife was born in Ireland, and died in 1875, in her thirty-sixth year. Mrs. Beck is their eldest child. Mary J., the second daughter, is deceased, and Carrie W., the youngest, is the wife of Henry Rasbridge of Columbia. After the death of Mrs. Beck's mother, her father married again, his second wife being Ella Hoffmaster. To this union have been born seven children: William H., of Philadelphia; Cora M., Mrs. Clayton Clay, of Mountville; Mary F., the wife of George Smith, of Columbia; Rebecca B., Edith I., Alford C. and Robert, all of whom are unmarried and live with their parents.

LEMAN BROTHERS, the enterprising proprietors of the Y. M. C. A. shoe store, North Queen street, Lancaster, are grandsons of the late Henry E. Leman, whose rifles carried the name of Lancaster to all parts of the United States and even to Europe, as Leman's Rifle Works of Lancaster turned out rifles for the United States Government for years. No man's name was more familiar to the people than that of the late Henry E. Leman, and no shoe store is better known in the city than that of his grandsons, Reuben Johns Leman and Herbert Dubois Leman, doing business under the name of Leman Brothers.

Henry E. Leman, Jr., father of Leman brothers, is a retired farmer living at Mechanicsburg. He married Lizzie A. Johns, a daughter of the late Reuben B. Johns, who died at Bareville in the summer of 1901, aged eighty-one years. Three children were born of this union, one of whom died in early childhood. The survivors are the enterprising young men who established, on April 1, 1901, the thoroughly up-to-date Y. M. C. A. shoe store on North Queen street.

REUBEN JOHNS LEMAN was born in Lancaster, Nov. 7, 1876, and, after studying for a time in the public schools, attended the Yeates Institute, in Lancaster, and the West Chester State Normal School. Upon leaving the latter institution he entered a general merchandise store at Mechanicsburg, where he remained three years, and then entered the shoe business at Wilkesbarre. After spending eight months there he came to Lancaster, and, associated with his brother, Herbert Dubois Leman, established the elegant shoe store in the new Y. M. C. A. building.

HERBERT DUBOIS LEMAN was born in Lancaster Feb. 1, 1879, and was educated in the public schools, Yeates Institute, and Weidler's Business College. He was only seventeen years old when he entered the business world, and at eighteen was acting postmaster at Mechanicsburg, his father having received his appointment as postmaster from President McKinley. The father practically turned the office over to his son, Herbert Dubois, who was perhaps the youngest acting postmaster in the United States, certainly the youngest of whom we have any knowledge.

Both of the brothers were fully equipped by education and experience for the responsible undertaking of establishing a shoe store of such magnitude as that of the Y. M. C. A. store, and their success has been phenomenal. Their store is known, literally, to every one in the community, and the reputation of the proprietors for integrity, good judgment and big values to patrons extends all over the great county of Lancaster.

MILTON S. ROHRER was born Oct. 14, 1861, on the farm in East Lampeter township, which he now occupies and cultivates.

Jacob H. Rohrer, his father, was also born on the old homestead, in 1821, and remained there until 1868, when he moved to Greenfield Station. There he commenced dealing in agricultural implements, being one of the first to introduce some of the most modern machinery. He has also been a drover, bringing cattle, hogs, etc., from Chicago, and he has engaged in tobacco raising, and has also been quite an extensive dealer and packer of tobacco. In politics Mr. Rohrer is a staunch Republican, and he has held the offices of school director, prison inspector, and poor director. He is one of Lancaster county's most respected citizens, known among his neighbors as a man of truthfulness and honesty. He married Miss Maria Shaffer, daughter of Adam Shaffer, and they are the parents of eleven children: Elizabeth, wife of John L. Kreider; Adam, who died at Mechanicsburg; Annie, deceased wife of Benjamin Kreider; Mary, who died unmarried; Abraham, a farmer of Binkley's Bridge; Susan, wife of Abraham Herr; Amanda, wife of Jacob Burkhart; Jacob, a farmer of Kinzers; Aaron, a farmer of East Lampeter; Milton S., our subject; and Emma, wife of John Buckwalter.

Milton S. Rohrer left the old home when he was about seven years of age, and went to live with his sister for five years. He was then at home with his father again, and there he remained until he was twenty-two years of age. He acquired his education in the public schools of the county.

On Jan. 31, 1884, Mr. Rohrer wedded Miss Emma, daughter of John R. and Elizabeth Kreider, and to this union have been born three children as follows: Lizzie, Elam and Ada, all at home. After his marriage, Mr. Rohrer returned to the old homestead, where he has given his whole attention to farming. He and his wife are both members of the Old Mennonite Church. Mr. Rohrer is an enterprising man, and is regarded as one of the valued citizens of the community in which he makes his home.

HARRY HAWTHORNE MOORE, warden of the Lancaster County Prison, presents in his own career a remarkable illustration of what character and intelligence, conjoined with integrity and industry, may accomplish in the making of a man.

Henry Moore, his father, was a farmer in Lancaster county. On Nov. 5, 1849, he married Mary Ann Hawthorne, daughter of George Hawthorne, who was among the early settlers of Donegal, and of Scotch-Irish descent. They celebrated their Golden Wedding in 1899, and are now living in retirement at Mountville. They had seven children: George, the eldest, died at twenty years of age; Anna C. is the wife of John C. Forey of West Hempfield; Sarah Jane and Mary are unmarried and at home; Elizabeth is the wife of Roland Greiner, a farmer of Upper Leacock township; Harry Hawthorne; and John Grant, married Elsie Cooper, of Akron.

Harry Hawthorne Moore was born in West Hempfield township, July 31, 1862. Until he was ten years of age he attended district school, and then he began helping his father on the farm at Columbia, remaining at home until he was twenty-one years of age. At that time he began to learn the auctioneering business with William Evans, of Lititz, with whom he spent much of the time for the next five years, but continued to help on the farm. At the age of twenty-two, he was elected assessor of Warwick township, being re-elected six times in succession. When he was twenty-nine years of age he was appointed second underkeeper of the Lancaster county prison, where he served for three years. His next engagement was as auctioneer with the Real Estate Exchange and Improvement Co. In 1896 he was a candidate for prison keeper, and in a heated contest was defeated by the late Jacob S. Smith. In May of that year, Mr. Moore became one of the proprietors of the real estate exchange, the firm being Moore & Rudy. On May 1, 1898, Mr. Moore was appointed Prison Keeper to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Smith, and in November of that year was elected for a term of three years without dissent. He became a candidate for re-election at the March primary in 1901, was nominated without opposition, and was re-elected at the November election, beginning the duties of his third term of three years in January, 1902. Mr. Moore withdrew from the real estate business in 1899, and has since devoted his entire energies to prison work, securing the accomplishment of reforms that before had never been so much as attempted. Better sanitary conditions were brought about at a trifling expense to the county, while the morale of the Institution was greatly elevated. During the summer of 1900 Mr. Moore devoted much time and labor to the improvement of the prison park, which had been thrown open to the public by the removal of the fences, and has made it one of the prettiest spots in the State. To add to the improvement of the eastern section of the city, Mr. Moore built seven handsome houses on King street in the late summer and fall of 1900. On Dec. 6, 1887, Mr. Moore was married to Ella Louisa, daughter of Samuel and Mary E. Stark, of Lititz, where the former was a well-known cigar box manufacturer. Mr. Moore belongs to the I. O. O. F., American Mechanics, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and takes an active interest in all of them. He is a lover of humanity, and is deeply interested in every uplifting movement of the present time, displaying much sympathy and a wise helpfulness for the unfortunates under his charge in the Lancaster County Prison.

MARTIN SHAUBACH, a thrifty young farmer of Providence township, Lancaster county, was born Feb. 17, 1875, son of Andrew and Christina (Worth) Shaubach, of Strasburg township.

Andrew Shaubach, the father, was a son of Andrew Shaubach, a farmer of this township also, and he became the father of six children, as follows: Amos; Reuben; Andrew; Annie, who married Jacob Harnish, of Strasburg township; Maggie, the wife of Adam Haring, of Leacock township; and Martin. Andrew Shaubach was a consistent member of the German Baptist Church. He was an excellent farmer and an honorable and reliable citizen.

Martin Shaubach was reared on the home farm and acquired his education in the common schools. He learned the carpenter's trade at the age of eighteen years, followed the same for some four years, and then resumed farming. When he started out on his own account he was dependent upon his own endeavors, and that he has succeeded unusually well is proved by his present possession of a fine farm, comprising 152 acres of well improved land, with first-class buildings—a farm which is generally recognized as the best in Providence township. His industry and energy have been well rewarded. In politics Mr. Shaubach is a Republican. Although not a member of any religious organization, he is liberal in his support of moral, charitable and benevolent enterprises in his locality, and is regarded as a man of sterling worth.

On Nov. 12, 1896, Mr. Shaubach was united in marriage to Miss Annie M. Rohrer, born April 17, 1878, daughter of Levi and Hattie (Shaub) Rohrer, of West Lampeter township, both of whom still survive. Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer have had children as follows: Miss Elizabeth, residing at home; Annie M., Mrs. Shaubach; Hattie, who married William Killian, of East Lampeter township; Emma, who married Martin Bowman, of Lancaster county; Ida, who married Elmer Mickley, of Strasburg township; and Milo, who is deceased. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Shaubach, namely: Clara, Estella and Andrew, the second of whom passed away when but one year old.

Both Mr. Shaubach and his wife belong to old and honorable families of Lancaster county. They enjoy the respect of the neighborhood in which they live, and have a wide circle of warm personal friends. Their home is one of plenty and hospitality, and they are esteemed through Providence township.

CHARLES A. WINOWER. Among the younger generation of business men in Lancaster, Charles A. Winower, painter and decorator, is one of the most promising and capable. He was born in this city, Aug. 31, 1876, a son of George V. and Jennie (Messenkop) Winower, and grandson of Peter J. and Catherine (Vogt) Winower. The ancestry of his family is centered in Germany, whence his great-great-grandfather, John Peter, emigrated to the United States, in time to tender valuable service in the Revolutionary war.

George V. Winower, the father of Charles A., was also a painter and decorator, and he was a member of the Lancaster police force for four years. He died Oct. 30, 1895, at the age of forty-nine years, and is buried in Woodward Hill cemetery. His widow now lives in Lancaster. Their only child was Charles A.

Mr. Winower learned the art of decorating under Charles Newell, with whom he became associated when fifteen years old, and with whom he has since continued to work. He is studious, and keeps abreast of the times, and is the possessor of a well selected library. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and in politics is a Republican. In religion he is an Episcopalian. Mr. Winower has sound business judgment, is honest of purpose, and is blessed with the gift of application.

JOHN WESLEY ANDERSON. Among the prominent and well-known men who find a congenial home and prosperous business connections in Lancaster is John Wesley Anderson, the inventor and manufacturer, whose reputation extends far beyond the limits of his home city.

William Wallace Anderson, his father, a farmer of York county, Pa., married Rachel Ann Thompson, a daughter of Jonathan Thompson; all lived and died in York county. William Wallace Anderson and his wife had three children, two of whom survive: Harriet A., wife of Joseph Barber, a farmer of York county; and John Wesley.

John Wesley Anderson was born in York county, Pa., March 7, 1843, and after attending the public schools of his district began work on a farm, at the age of seventeen years, remaining so employed for the two following years. Then, realizing that his talents led in an entirely different direction, Mr. Anderson became an apprentice at the carpenter and wagonmaking trade, serving three years, after which he embarked in the carriage and wagon building business for himself, carrying it on in York for six or seven years. With his brother Mr. Anderson then came to Lancaster county, locating at Mechanics Grove, where they established the Anderson Manufacturing Company. In 1878 Mr. Anderson came to Lancaster and engaged in the manufacture of carriage hardware specialties, having his works on Fulton street for four or five years. Then he became a partner with B. G. Dodge & Son, in the manufacture of hardware specialties, this partnership lasting for two years, when Mr. Anderson sold his interest to Dodge & Son. After traveling one year for that firm he established the National Manufacturing Company, on Sherman street, in Lancaster, and continued for two years in that connection.

However, all these years were fully occupied by Mr. Anderson, aside from the management of large business interests, in the invention and perfecting of many ingenious and useful articles, and although he has sold many he retains control of thirteen of his most important inventions, and has interested himself in the establishment of a company for their special manufacture. Many of his earlier inventions are now considered invaluable, notably the popular "jump-seat" for vehicles; a bread and meat slicer which is regarded as the very best article of its kind now on the market; and a fuel-economizer, upon which he has three patents and of which he has sole control.

Mr. Anderson has been twice married first to Miss Keziah M. Martin, a daughter of John I. Martin, a farmer of Liberty Square. Three children were born to this marriage, but Mr. Anderson has been bereaved of two of them, one son dying at the age of nineteen months, and Miss Ada, a popular school teacher of Lancaster county, passing out of life July 1, 1901. The surviving son is Oliver N. Anderson, an artist and decorative paper hanger whose ability and taste are recognized far beyond the bounds of his native city, as he frequently receives calls from surrounding cities. Mrs. Anderson passed away Aug. 7, 1900, and on Oct. 31, 1901, Mr. Anderson was united in marriage to the estimable lady who now graces his pleasant home. The marriage ceremony which united Mr. Anderson and Mrs. Jennie M. Fairley, of Greenwich, N. Y., was performed by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Anderson is a daughter of Gen. John R. McMurry, and was the widow of Hon. James M. Fairley, and a niece of Hon. Robert Black, ex-mayor of Brooklyn, N. Y. Both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are prominent in social circles, and a delightful hospitality is dispensed at their beautiful home, at No. 146 East New street, Lancaster, which has been his residence for the past sixteen years. Mr. Anderson has been identified with much of the industrial development of Lancaster, and has always been a public-spirited and liberal citizen.

WILLIAM PETER GORRECHT, one of the most popular members of the police force of Lancaster, is a grandson of William Gorrecht, who lived and died in Lancaster, and belonged to a family which was among the early settlers of the locality.

William Gorrecht, the grandfather, was an extensive dealer in coal, at the corner of Lemon and Water streets, and died from cholera in 1865. He left a large estate, and the late Peter V. Gorrecht (father of William Peter) became the successor to the coal business, which he successfully carried on until 1877, when he entered into partnership with John Keller, under the firm name of John Keller & Co., coal dealers. Peter V. Gorrecht was a member of the common council from the Ninth ward for three years; of the select branch of the city councils for two terms, having been sent there by the Republicans of his district; and was coal inspector for the city water works for ten years. He died June 20, 1901, in his sixty-fifth year. His wife, who was Miss Elizabeth M. Metzger, a daughter of John Metzger, is living near Lititz. Mr. Gorrecht is also survived by nine children, as follows: I. Forney, who is in the Elgin watch factory; Maggie E., wife of John Dailey, in the restaurant business in New Haven, Conn.; Charles F., of Lancaster; Mary E., wife of Edw. Bowman, an employe of the city water works; Howard H., inspector at the city water works; Clarence B., a clerk; Clara B. and Bessie B., of Lancaster; and William P.

William P. Gorrecht was born in Lancaster March 2, 1859, and after being educated in the public schools, attended the State Normal School at Millersville for a time. After leaving the Normal Mr. Gorrecht became a foreman for Keller & Co., coal dealers, remaining in that position seventeen years, after which, he accepted a position with the late John Best, at his boiler works, remaining with him until April 2, 1900, when he was appointed a member of the police force, a position he has filled with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the public. He has one son, Herbert A., an employe of the Lancaster silk mills. Mr. Gorrecht is a member of the First Reformed Church, in politics is a staunch Republican, and fraternally belongs to the Golden Eagles; he also belongs to the Philadelphia Casualty Company. Faithful in the discharge of his duty, pleasant in manner, upright in his dealings, Mr. Gorrecht has made many friends, and is highly esteemed throughout the city.

DAVID K. HARTMAN, one of the enterprising and progressive residents of East Lampeter township, was born there March 23, 1866, and is of German descent.

Henry Hartman, his father, came from Germany when he was twenty-two years of age, and located first in New Jersey, afterward moving to Lancaster county, where he settled. He followed lime burning here all his life. Politically he was a Democrat, and took quite an active part in politics, holding the office of county commissioner for some time. He was a member of the Free Masons Lodge in Lancaster county, and in religion was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He married Miss Catherine Krantz, and they were the parents of the following children: Annie, wife of John Roth; Kate, wife of Jerris Delong; Mary, wife of Levi Bixler; Henry, deceased; David K., our subject; Christian, who was killed on the Pennsylvania railroad; Jacob, who lives on the old homestead; and John, a contractor and builder of Lancaster City.

David K. Hartman received his education in the local public schools, and has always remained on the old place, engaged at farming. He is also interested in the coal business with Hartman Bros., and by well directed industry and strict attention to business has succeeded in placing himself in comfortable circumstances. He has an honorable standing in his community, both for his evident business ability and for his genuine worth as a man.

On Dec. 15, 1887, Mr. Hartman wedded Miss Lida Hoar, daughter of John Hoar, Soudersburg, and to this union have been born eight children, four of whom died in infancy; Harry, Clarence and Elsie, are at home; and William, a bright little lad of ten years, met his death by accident in April, 1901. He was playing near a keg of powder, when it exploded, and burned him so badly that he lived only twenty-eight hours.

MILTON L. SWARR, one of the substantial farmers of East Hempfield township, is located midway between East Petersburg and Landisville, and successfully conducts his farm of eighty-seven and one-half acres—the old homestead which has been in the possession of the family for several generations.

Milton L. Swarr was born March 31, 1868, on the farm adjoining his present place, son of Martin P. and Maria (Landis) Swarr, the latter a daughter of Rev. John B. Landis, of East Petersburg. Mrs. Swarr still survives, but the father passed away March 9, 1895, in his fiftieth year. He had been a successful farmer, and came into possession of the old home place in 1884, remaining there until his death. His life was filled with good deeds, and he was identified with a number of public trusts, being a stockholder and a director in the Farmers' National Bank of Lancaster, and a director in the Lancaster and Elizabethtown Pike Co. A consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church, he was valued there for his many traits of true Christian character. For some time he served as a member of the board of Education in the township, and was also its capable auditor. The four children born to Martin P. and Maria Swarr were: Salome L., widow of Phares S. Aungst; Milton L.; Harry L., who resides at home with his mother and sister; and Martin L., who lives with Milton L.

Milton L. Swarr was educated in the public schools, and began farming on his own account in 1891, selecting a tract of land in East Lampeter township, where he remained until the spring of 1896. He then returned to the old homestead, which he has since operated, and he succeeded his father also as director in the Lancaster and Elizabethtown Turnpike Co.

The marriage of Milton L. Swarr, on Aug. 18, 1890, was to Minnie S. Cassel daughter of Jeremiah G. Cassel, of Penn township. A son, Harry M., was born to them Jan. 10, 1896; a daughter, Elsie, died at the age of four years. Both Mr. Swarr and his estimable wife are members of the Old Mennonite Church, where they are highly esteemed.

HENRY GOOS, the proprietor of the bread and cake bakery, at No. 16 North Shippen street, Lancaster, comes of an excellent German family, and his name has been prominently associated with the baking business in that city for more than half a century.

Frederick Goos, the father of Henry, came to this country from Germany when eighteen years old. Landing at Philadelphia, he remained there some time, and then came to Lancaster. For seven years he was engaged in the Steward's department of the State Normal School at Millersville, when he went to learn the baking business with his brother Lawrence, whose arrival in this country preceded that of Frederick, and who was then conducting a successful baking trade at Lancaster. Having finished his apprenticeship, Frederick Goos started a bakery on West King street, where he remained but a few months, as he purchased property on North Queen street, where he moved, and where he successfully conducted his business until his death. He accumulated considerable property, and his estate is still in the possession of his widow. Mr. Goos married Miss Wolf, daughter of Philip Wolf, of Lancaster. Her mother died only a few years ago, at the advanced age of ninety years. To this marriage were born seven children, five of whom are living: Henry; Miss Louisa; Charles, married, but living with his mother; and Frederick Charles, a baker, and Anna Mary, both unmarried and living at home.

Henry Goos was born in Lancaster, and attended the public schools until he reached the age of eleven years, at which time he became an apprentice in his father's bakery, where he remained until he was twenty-two years old. At that time he worked as a journeyman baker in other shops, continuing this until 1892. That year he was elected boss baker to the Lancaster County Prison, a position he held for five years, and was re-elected for a sixth term, but his resignation soon followed. He then took charge of a bakery business in Baltimore, and also engaged in the insurance business but later returned to Lancaster and took possession of the bakery on North Shippen street, where he is found engaged in a very good business at this time.

On Feb. 6, 1888, Mr. Goos was married to Susan Rhoads, daughter of Abraham Rhoads, a farmer of Eden township. Mr. and Mrs. Goos, with no children of their own, have opened their hearts and home to young relatives, upon whom they have bestowed the care of parents.

Mr. Goos is of an inventive turn of mind, and has invented a number of useful articles. The most notable one, and one that he has patented, was the Improved Game of Checkers, the first innovation on the old game of checkers that had been made for hundreds of years, making it possible to play what is known as Naval, Military or Political checkers. This game has had quite a sale, and is on the market to-day. Mr. Goos is a member of the Order of Mystic Chain, the Golden Eagle and the Daughters of Naomi, and his circle of friends and acquaintances is extensive.

WILLIAM C. SAPP, one of the leading merchants of Lancaster, engaged in the wholesale and retail furniture business at Nos. 41 and 43 South Queen street, is not only prominent in the furniture trade, but has added much to the material growth of Lancaster in the remodeling and erection of its residences. Mr. Sapp's ancestors came to America from Germany. His father, the late Jacob Sapp, was a contracting house carpenter, and was for years in the service of the Pennsylvania Railway Company. His mother was Miss Anna Sides, daughter of the late Jacob Sides, a farmer of Strasburg. Nine children were born to their union of whom three are living: William C., our subject; Anna F., widow of L. R. Rote; and Mabel, wife of Charles Myers, an upholsterer, of Washington, D. C.

William C. Sapp was born on the old homestead in Strasburg, Feb. 16, 1858, and was educated in the public schools of Lancaster. Leaving school he became apprenticed to house carpentering, with his father, working at that trade for five years, after which he became a traveling salesman for a New York house, continuing in that line until 1885, when he embarked in the furniture trade. Opening an establishment at the corner of South Queen and Vine streets, he remained there one year, at the end of which time the increase of trade demanded more room, and we next find him in the building now occupied by Mr. Watson, the undertaker. Three years in that location and another place of business became a necessity to meet the requirements of the trade; hence his removal to his present commodious quarters at Nos. 41 and 43 South Queen street. Three delivery wagons are kept busy, at times to deliver the goods to Mr. Sapp's many patrons. Anything desired by customers which cannot be found in the immense and varied stock Mr. Sapp manufactures to order. Mr. Sapp remodeled the fine property at the corner of West Chestnut and Mary streets, which is now his home, as well as the equally fine mansion adjoining which he also owns; and he erected twelve modern houses on South Queen, South Prince and South Beaver streets.

Mr. Sapp married Miss Amelia Peusch, daughter of the late Frederick Peusch, a grocer of Lancaster. No children have been born to this union. A member of the Elks, the Artisans, and the Trinity Lutheran Church, Mr. Sapp is welcomed in social and church circles; and in business circles he is regarded as among the foremost merchants of his age in Lancaster. Always at his post, prompt in all his dealings, and full of enterprise and pluck, he has won the success that has attended him because he deserved it.

JOSEPH E. HERTGEN, proprietor of the Lancaster Lithographing and Box Company, with works covering a quarter of the block, is one of the bright and progressive young men of the city.

B. Hertgen, his father, was born in Alsace-Lorraine, and came to this country in early manhood. His wife, Mary Klingler, bore him four children, all born in this country, and all of them dead except Joseph E. The elder Hertgen, who was a stationary engineer, crossed the ocean half a dozen times. He died in July, 1898. Mrs. Hertgen makes her home with her only surviving child, who has a pleasant residence on East Orange street in this city.

Joseph E. Hertgen was born in Boston, May 14, 1868, and in 1871, accompanied his father and mother to Europe, where he attended school in Alsace for three years. At the expiration of that time the family returned to this country. In 1879 the family made a second voyage to Europe, young Hertgen again attending school in Alsace, this time for a period of two years. His father spent some part of these two years in the United States, then bringing his family back to Boston. There Joseph E. completed his school days and entered a store as a cash boy, where he worked for about nine months, and then secured a situation in a rope factory where his father was an engineer. Leaving this place he went to New York City, and studied the art of lithographing, beginning at this business while still fourteen, and this has been his business to the present time. In 1892 he came to Lancaster and founded the Lancaster Lithographing Company, establishing it in the Foltz Building on East Chestnut street. In this location he continued for five years, when his increasing business compelled him to seek more commodious quarters, which he found in the Long & Davidson Building on the same street. Two years in this location found him still needing room, and he secured the spacious quarters where he is found to-day, and where he has added to the lithographic business the manufacture of paper boxes. In the matter of lithographing, Mr. Hertgen's work stands very high, and among his patrons are found men who are famous in mercantile circles in New York, Chicago and other large cities.

In 1889 Mr. Hertgen was married to Miss Philopena Blum, daughter of Philip Blum, a contracting house carpenter of Jersey City Heights. To this union were born two children, Florence M. and Joseph J. Mr. Hertgen is a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church. He seeks no political office, belongs to no secret organizations, but devotes all his time to his family and his business. His success in life is evidence in itself that he has not only given steady, but intelligent, attention to his work in hand.

BYRAM DOUTRICH, a stonemason and farmer of Paradise township, residing on his place at Vintage, was born in Berks county, Pa., son of David and Ellen (Hickman) Doutrich, both also natives of Berks county. The Hickmans were among the wealthiest residents of Berks county, and were of German origin, as were also the Doutrich family. They have all been farmers, and have been residents of America for over a hundred years.

Jacob Doutrich, the great-great-grandfather of Byram, was the founder of the family in Lancaster county. John Doutrich was his son. Isaac Doutrich, son of John, and grandfather of Byram, was a prosperous farmer of Berks county, where he stood high as a citizen and a man. He owned three good farms. He married a Haines.

David Doutrich, father of Byram, was an extensive farmer of Berks county, but he met with reverses, and died in very moderate circumstances. His name stands high as that of a leading citizen of Berks county and a representative Democrat. Shortly before his death he removed into Lancaster county, where he died in 1859, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. His widow passed away in 1878, at the age of sixty-six. They were the parents of a numerous family, four of whom died in childhood:

David is a resident of Limeville; Israel lives in the same place; Ephraim, an engineer, is deceased; Elizabeth married Amos Goodland, of Berks county, and is deceased; Mary married John Myers, of Berks county, and is deceased; Jefferson is a resident of Salisbury township; Catherine is the wife of Samuel Oberly, of Harristown, Lancaster county; Jacob is a resident of Scotland; Edward is overseer of the Southern Home for Confederate Veterans, at Richmond, Va.; Ellen, the widow of Mr. Moore, is a resident of Reading Pa.; Byram is mentioned below.

Byram Doutrich was born Sept. 27, 1848, and was reared to a farm life, acquiring his education in the public school. Remaining at home until the age of twenty-three, he learned the milling trade. This not proving a pleasant work, Mr. Doutrich came back to the farm, where he later learned the brick and stone mason trade, which he followed in connection with farming. In 1859 he came to this county, where he has made his home to the present time. Mr. Doutrich also does work as a well digger, and as a bridge builder has been largely employed by the county as well as the Pennsylvania Railway Co. He has also worked as a carpenter and a blacksmith, and for three years was a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Myers. He is ready and versatile, and keeps abreast with modern ideas.

Mr. Doutrich was married, in 1868, to Miss Catherine, daughter of Christian Hess, of East Earl township. Of their numerous family four died in childhood; Martin is a farmer in Paradise township; Jacob is a resident of Lancaster; Harry died in the spring of 1901; Emma is the wife of Harry Hacker, of Lititz; Frank is a brakeman on the Pennsylvania railroad; Isaac is a farmer of Paradise township; Samuel is a fireman on the Pennsylvania railroad; Adam and Lydia are at home. The Doutrichs are connected with the Old Mennonite Church, and the among the highly esteemed residents of the county.

JOHN H. EPLER, a well-known and representative citizen of Elizabethtown, belongs to an old and honored family of Lancaster and Dauphin counties.

Mr. Epler was born Oct. 13, 1835, in Dauphin county, Pa., son of David M. and Catherine (Rothrock) Epler, the former of whom was a native of Lancaster county, but in 1814 made his home in Dauphin county, where the remainder of his life was spent. David M. Epler was well known through his adopted county, and was identified with much of its public life. He was zealous in the cause of education and was one of the most earnest advocates of the free school system, serving as president of the board of education when that great system went into operation. Mr. Epler held many of the local offices and always lived an upright life, which enabled him to command the respect of his community. His birth occurred early in the century, and after a useful life of eighty-one years he passed away in 1892. His wife, born in 1815, preceded him to the grave in 1883. In 1866 he retired from farming activity, but was intelligently interested in public, local and neighborhood affairs until his death.

The family born to David M. Epler and wife consisted of twelve children, namely: John H.; Eliza Ann, who died at the age of twenty-one years; Elizabeth, who married Moses Good; Margaret, who died in infancy; Mary, who married Abraham W. Nissley, of West Donegal township; Barbara, who married Joseph Peck, of Elizabethtown; Jacob R., who is a farmer and politician of Dauphin county; David M. and Catherine, who died young; Abraham, who was killed by accident, in infancy; Lydia, who married Daniel C. Sweigart, a contractor and builder of Elizabethtown; and Emma, who married Joseph H. Goss, a tobacco farmer residing in Elizabethtown.

The paternal grandparents of John H. Epler were John and Barbara (Moyer) Epler, the former of whom was born in Dauphin county, just over the Lancaster line, in 1774, but resided in Lancaster county until a few years after his marriage, when he returned to his old homestead in Dauphin county. Mrs. Barbara (Moyer) Epler was a daughter of Isaac Moyer, who was an artilleryman in the Revolutionary army. The Moyer family belonged in early days to Berks county, but later the family was founded by two brothers in Dauphin county, this branch becoming numerous and prominent. The maternal grandfather of John H. Epler was Henry Rothrock, of Lancaster county, who married a Weaver; both died in Dauphin county. Henry Rothrock was a son of Peter Rothrock, who lies buried south of Elizabethtown.

John H. Epler attended the district schools, and was given as fair an education as the locality afforded. He grew to manhood on the farm, and until he was fifty-two years of age followed agricultural pursuits. Prior to locating in Elizabethtown, Mr. Epler served his township in many ways, his peculiar fitness making him eligible for all the local offices, in which he efficiently and reliably served for a number of years. From 1869 to 1888 he was justice of the peace, resigning when he became a resident of Elizabethtown, and two years had scarcely elapsed when he was elected to the same office for five years, and in 1900 he was appointed. He has continued to discharge his duties with dignity and justice. While living on the farm he was interested in all agricultural enterprises and was an active member of the Grange. In politics Mr. Epler has been a lifelong Republican, casting his first vote for Fremont. With his family he belongs to and generously supports the Lutheran Church.

On Jan. 5, 1860, in Elizabethtown, John H. Epler was married to Miss Anna Kaylor, and they became the parents of the following named children: David M., a farmer on the old Epler homestead in Dauphin county which came into the family in 1767; J. Frank, traveling auditor for the Allentown & Lehigh Valley Railroad; Elmer E., deceased; Kate A., wife of Eli M. Kinzey, of Dauphin county; William H., a carpenter, living at home; and Emma L., wife of Joseph T. Carter, of Lancaster.

Mrs. Epler belongs to well-known families of Dauphin county. Her father, Joshua Kaylor, was long a skilled carpenter in Dauphin county, and her mother, Barbara (Welker) Kaylor, was born and reared in the same county.

He and his wife still make their home in Lancaster.

He has been a brewer throughout his active business life, and by his thorough familiarity with all the details of his business, strict attention to the demands of the trade and honorable methods has made a success of his chosen line. His standing in the commercial circles of Lancaster is unquestioned.

ROBERT A. MORRISON. Among the leading and representative farmers of Lancaster county Robert A. Morrison, of Little Britain township, takes a leading position. Mr. Morrison was born in Lancaster county, in Colerain township, Dec. 7, 1838. He was a son of Samuel and Abigail (Gordon) Morrison, of Scotch-Irish origin, both natives of Colerain township.

Grandfather Samuel Morrison was a son of Gabriel Morrison, who came from Ireland in 1750, and located in Lancaster county, Pa., buying land in Colerain township. Samuel Morrison (1) was the father of these children: Alexander G., deceased, who was a minister in the Presbyterian Church; Robert E., who was a clergyman of the Methodist Church, deceased; Samuel; James G., deceased; Gabriel S., deceased; Annie, the only daughter, deceased; and Dr. John A., a physician, living in Chester county; he is the only member of this family yet surviving, and has reached the age of eighty-seven years.

About 1830 he married Abigail Gordon, who died in 1852, leaving a family of six children: William G., died in 1867; Alexander, a clergyman of the Presbyterian Church, died in 1896; John H., of Chester county; Robert A.; and Frank and Morgan J., both deceased.

Robert A. Morrison began his life on a farm and his interest has always centered in agricultural pursuits. His present farm is one of the most valuable in this part of Lancaster county, where he has made excellent improvements, has a comfortable dwelling and one of the most commodious barns in the township. Mr. Morrison is known to be an excellent farmer and his methods are progressive and successful, his long attention to this line making him an authority on the usual subjects with which a successful farmer must be thoroughly acquainted.

On Oct. 8, 1866, Robert A. Morrison was married to Miss Isabella W. Black, of Little Britain township, born in 1848, a daughter of James and Margaret (Clark) Black. The five children born to this union were: Harry E., who married Ada Patterson, of this township; Annie; Ruth A.; William, who married Catherine Hayes, of Little Britain, where they live; and Minnie, who is at home. For the last fourteen years he has been school director in this township and has done much for the advancement of education in this locality. As a citizen, neighbor, husband and father, Robert A. Morrison, is a worthy representative of this honored Lancaster county family.

REV. JOHN KOHLER (deceased) was born May 27, 1820, in Thompsonstown, Juniata Co., Pa., and died at his home in New Holland, Lancaster Co., Pa., April 11, 1878. He was buried in the cemetery attached to the Lutheran Church in New Holland.

The parents of Rev. John Kohler were Andrew and Anna M. (Brennsholtz) Kohler, of Adams county, Pa., the former of whom was a miller by occupation. His death occurred in New Berlin, Union Co., Pa. The children born to Andrew Kohler and his wife were as follows: Jacob, who died young; Rev. John; Andrew, a miller and later a merchant in Akron, Ohio; William, a farmer in Juniata county; Frederick, a merchant in Juniata county; Margaret, Mrs. Fisher, a widow, residing in New Berlin (her husband was a builder and contractor); Simon, a farmer of New Berlin, Pa.; Augustus, who died when young, out West; Thomas who died at the age of sixteen; and Ann M., who died young. All of the family have passed away with the exception of Mrs. Fisher.

For many years Rev. John Kohler was a prominent man in Pennsylvania, occupying positions of responsibility in the church of his belief and in her educational institutions. His early rearing was on a farm, but at the age of sixteen years, by close application, he had prepared himself for entrance to Gettysburg College, and he studied faithfully until ordained a minister. His first location was in Williamsport, Pa., and in 1851 he was transferred to New Holland, where he remained in the faithful discharge of his spiritual duties for fourteen years. Mr. Kohler was then placed in charge of the work at Trappe, Montgomery county, where he preached the Word for ten years, after which he accepted a call to Stroudsburg, in Monroe county. This was an important charge, and there he remained nine busy years, leaving it only when called to be the principal of Muhlenberg College, at Allentown. Dr. Kohler continued his educational work for two years, and from there went to Mechanicsburg, where the last eight years of his ministry were passed. Few men have more fully lived up to the ideal Christian life than did Dr. Kohler, and great were the earthly compensations to his faithfulness. He is remembered with deep affection and the influence of his life is still felt among the people for whom he labored so long.

On Feb. 6, 1846, in Mifflintown, Juniata Co., Pa., Rev. Mr. Kohler married Louisa A. Baum, the ceremony being performed by Rev. S. R. Boyer. To this union were born the following named children: Miss Emma J., residing at home; Rev. Charles, a clergyman of the Lutheran Church, at Cleveland, Ohio, married to Elizabeth Truckenmiller; Dr. John B., a physician in New Holland, married to Ella Storb; Martin Luther, an attorney in Philadelphia, married to Josephine Royer; Anna M., at home; Rev. Frederick, financial secretary of the Chicago Theological Lutheran Seminary, who married Victoria Brown and resides in Chicago; George, an optician, residing at home; Louisa E., who married Robert Brown, a furniture dealer and undertaker, and resides in Stroudsburg; and Mary, married to William M. Mearig, of Upper Leacock township.

Mrs. Kohler was born Aug. 7, 1820, in New Berlin, Union Co., Pa., daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Snyder) Baum, of Bucks county. Mr. Baum was a gunsmith by trade. He was born in Bucks county in 1769, and died Oct. 2, 1842. His wife died Sept. 25, 1839. They were good and worthy people, members of the Lutheran Church. Their family consisted of children as follows: Samuel, who died in 1879, aged eighty years; Elizabeth, Mrs. George Bogar, who died Oct. 4, 1890; Barbara, deceased, Jan. 18, 1892, aged ninety years, who married James Cummings; Mary A., who died Feb. 17, 1868, wife of Rev. William German; Margaret, Mrs. German, who died Jan. 13, 1894; Charles, who died May 22, 1852, aged forty-five years; Jacob, who died in 1864, aged fifty-four years; Henry, deceased; Rachel, who died June 18, 1886, aged eighty-one years, married to Rev. S. R. Boyer; John E., who died June 22, 1885, aged sixty-eight years; Louisa A., married to Rev. John Kohler; and Miss Sarah J., who lives in Stroudsburg at the age of seventy-nine years, the youngest of a family noted for longevity.

The paternal grandparents were Carl and Barbara (Ewens) Baum, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in Scotland, this combination of two hardy races probably having had much to do with the vigor of their descendants. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Kohler were Jacob and Margaret (Daws) Snyder, the former a native of Germany, and the latter of Philadelphia.

This family is a prominent one in its home county and its members have worthily represented its honorable name wherever they have located.

A. L. STIVELY, a prominent and popular merchant of Collins, Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in that township, March 5, 1844, son of Frederick and Anna (Barr) Stively.

Frederick Stively was born in Strasburg township, this county, Jan. 9, 1806, and his wife was born the same year in Eden township, daughter of Jacob and Esther Barr. Mr. Stively was reared in Strasburg township and was a young man when his parents moved to the West. He remained in Lancaster county, however, and was the only representative of his family left in Pennsylvania. For a life career he settled upon the cooper's trade, and after his marriage lived for a time in Strasburg, but later moved to East Drumore township, where he followed farming, making his home there some five years, and then removing to a farm in Colerain township, where he lived until 1870. In 1865 he bought a farm in Eden and Strasburg townships, on which he made his home from 1870 until his death, in June, 1891. In 1869 he erected buildings there, the second set of buildings on the place. Though Frederick Stively started in life a poor young man, by the exercise of thrift and industry, coupled with wise management and integrity, he became wealthy, and died possessed of a large estate. In 1860 he purchased a farm of 100 acres in Providence township, upon which were located immense ore mines which are known to-day as the Stively ore banks. This property he retained until 1864, when he sold at an advance of $5,000. Mrs. Stively passed to her rest in September, 1897. Both were members of the Mennonite Church, and were regarded as good and consistent Christian people. In politics he was a staunch Republican. To Frederick and Anna Stively were born nine children, of whom five are still living. (1) Christianna and (2) Martha died young. (3) Fannie, born in Strasburg township in 1833, is now the widow of John M. Shank, and makes her home in Providence township with her three children, Anna, Elizabeth and John S. (4) Jacob, born in 1835, married Sallie Stafford, and located in Providence township, where he followed farming until his death in 1865. His son Jacob is a merchant in Little Britain, is married and has a family. (5) Fred, born in East Drumore township, is now a successful farmer of Strasburg township. (6) Mary, born in 1840, is the widow of David Miller, and makes her home in Harrisburg with her only daughter. (7) A. L. is next in the family. (8) Elizabeth born in October, 1846, married Martin Mower, and died in Philadelphia, where Mr. Mower and his son Frederick still reside. (9) John M., born in Colerain township in 1850, married for his first wife Anna Brown, of Colerain township, by whom he had one daughter, Alice, now the wife of George Bracken, of West Grove. John Stively married Ella Wells, of Chester county, for his second wife, and they reside on his farm; to them have come five children, Fannie, Mary, Edna, John and Charles.

A. L. Stively was educated in the public and select schools of this county. When a young man he engaged in farming, which he followed for a number of years on the old homestead in Colerain township until 1888, in which year he purchased the general store of U. M. Collins in the village of Collins, where he has carried on general merchandising up to the present time with marked success. He owns considerable real estate in the village, and is a prosperous and successful business man.

Mr. Stively was married in April, 1898, to Miss Emma F. Herr, of Quarryville, daughter of Martin and Maria (Martin) Herr, who are still living in Quarryville, at the advanced ages of eighty-nine and eighty-three years, respectively. Mrs. Stively was born in Paradise township in 1856, was educated in the home schools and at the Millersville State Normal, and for sixteen years taught in the public schools of Lancaster county; for two years she was a clerk for her brother in his store at Bloomfield, Iowa, and for two years was with another brother in Missouri, returning to Lancaster county in the spring of 1897, where she was married the following year. Mr. and Mrs. Stively have one daughter Mary H., born Oct. 25, 1900.

Politically Mr. Stively is a Prohibitionist. He has been postmaster at Collins for fourteen years. Both himself and his wife belong to the Methodist Church, of which he has been a member for twenty years, and in the work of which they take an active part. He held the position of steward and trustee for several years, and is an officer of the church at the present time.

Mr. Stively is a man of more than the ordinary intelligence. Personally he is a genial and warm-hearted companion and an interesting conversationalist; he is loyal to his friends, and is beloved by many, who know and appreciate his numerous good qualities.

MARTIN GREIDER, commissioner of Lancaster county, and a member of the firm of M. L. Greider & Company, dealers in all kinds of agricultural implements, tobacconists and cigar manufacturers, of Mt. Joy, Pa., was born in Rapho township, Feb. 26, 1842, a son of Christian and Margaret (Lindemuth) Greider, the former of West Hempfield and the latter of Rapho township, both of them passing out of life in the latter place.

Christian Greider was a well-known farmer and lived to the age of eighty-one, dying in 1877; the mother survived until 1881, her years reaching seventy-two. Both parents were laid away in the family burying-ground on their own farm in Rapho township. They were consistent members of the Mennonite and Lutheran Churches, respectively. Their children numbered two: Jacob, who died in 1852; and Martin, of this biography. The paternal grandfather was Martin Greider, a prominent farmer of West Hempfield township, who married a Miss Weldy; and the maternal grandfather was Jacob Lindemuth, who married a Miss Ilick; both died in Rapho township.

Martin L. Greider was reared on the farm and attended the district schools. When he reached the age of twenty he rented his father's farm and engaged in business for himself, successfully operating it until 1868, at which time he inherited the property and continued his residence upon it until the spring of 1893. He then retired from active agricultural labor, removed to Mt. Joy and opened up his present extensive business. In 1899 he was elected to the office of county commissioner on the Republican ticket, and since then has devoted much of his time and energy to county business.

On May 5, 1863, Mr. Greider was married in Lancaster county to Mary A. Shirk and the children born to this union were: John, who died young; Elmira, who died young; Samuel, who lives on the old farm in Rapho township; Christian, who is a bookkeeper in the Harrisburg Boiler Manufacturing Company, of Harrisburg; and Lillian, who married Jonas N. Hostetter, who is associated in business with Mr. Greider.

Both in commercial and social circles in Mt. Joy, Mr. Greider holds a prominent position and has long been regarded as a political factor in that locality. The family is one of the most respected in the neighborhood, and is well known through its connections all over Lancaster county.

LEVI REINHART, now a prominent retired farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in Pequea township, in February, 1840, his parents being Michael and Fannie (Martin) Reinhart, both of whom were born in Lancaster county.

Michael Reinhart was a son of Michael (Sr.) and Martha Reinhart, both of whom were born in this county though of German parentage. They settled in Pequea township, where Michael Reinhart with his three brothers attained manhood; they were Daniel, John and Harry. They all lived and died in Lancaster county.

Michael Reinhart lived in Pequea township for some years, when he moved into Lampeter township, where he lived until 1867. That year he removed to Colerain township, where he was engaged in farming until 1870. Then he went West, and located near Sterling, Ill., where he was a farmer until shortly before his death in 1892. His widow has recently passed to her reward. They had a family of four sons and three daughters, and six of their children accompanied them in their westward movement. (1) Elizabeth married Jacob Kendig, and has her home in Kansas. (2) Martha married Christian Shaw, of Lancaster county, and though they went to Illinois with her parents, they came back to this county, and have a home in Colerain township. (3) Fannie accompanied her parents to the West, where she married a Mr. Moyer, and made her home in Sterling. (4) Daniel married Barbara Myers, of Strasburg township; they made their home in Sterling, Illinois, where he died in 1880, leaving a widow and two children. (5) John married a Miss Moyer in Illinois, where they located on a farm, and have two daughters. (6) Amos died when a boy in Lancaster county. (7) Levi.

Levi Reinhart was reared in Lancaster county, where he was given a district school education in Pequea and West Lampeter townships. Until the breaking out of the Civil war he worked as a farm hand. His enlistment as a member of Co. G, 122d P. V. I., under command of Capt. J. N. Neff, occurred in 1862. The regiment was attached to the Army of the Potomac, and served under Gen. McClellan, forming part of the reserve at the second battle of Bull Run, where it was for the first time under fire. After several heavy skirmishes the regiment took part in the battle of Centerville, and of Fairfax Court House. At Fredericksburg it was in the thick of the fight, and again at Chancellorsville, where Gen. Whipple, the brigade commander, was killed. Company G, in which Mr. Reinhart was enrolled was detailed as a guard of honor to escort the remains of Gen. Whipple back to Washington, where military honors were paid the heroic dead. About this time the term of Mr. Reinhart's enlistment expired, and in May, 1863, he returned to Lancaster county.

In Lancaster county Mr. Reinhart resumed his labors as a farmer, and was presently married to Sarah A., the daughter of Daniel and Catherine Fulton. Daniel Fulton was for many years a justice of the peace, and a surveyor of Pequea township, where he lived and died. There Mrs. Reinhart was born in 1844, and was reared to young womanhood.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhart lived for a time in Providence township, where he followed farming, and then moved into Colerain township, where he purchased the Joseph Robinson farm in 1885, after having owned and operated the Jacob Miller place for some fifteen years. The Robinson farm contains 141 acres, and was provided with a large brick house, frame barn, and other farm buildings in fine condition. A few years later he erected a large addition to the house, put up a wind mill pump, and made many other substantial improvements.

Mrs. Reinhart died in 1898. She was a member of the Colerain Baptist Church, and is remembered in loving hearts as a good Christian woman, greatly excelling in those things that make a woman well beloved by all who know her. She bore her husband eleven children. (1) Benjamin F. Reinhart, the oldest child of the family, was born in Pequea township, Nov. 8, 1866, where he was reared and married, Maggie Crossin, of Chester county, becoming his wife. They reside in Chester county, where he holds a position as foreman of a repair gang on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. They have one daughter, Mildred S. (2) Daniel F., born Nov. 8, 1868, is single and lives at home. (3) Laura K., born in Providence township, Feb. 18, 1870, married William B. Ferguson, of Colerain township, and is the mother of one son, Uhler.

(4) Michael, born Sept. 20, 1871, married Laura Bennard, of Colerain township, and has his home on a part of his father's old homestead; they have one son, Floyd. (5) Fannie E., born in January, 1873, married Charles S. Thompson, of Bart township, and is the mother of two children, Rufus N. and Levi C. (6) William M., born in December, 1874, married Hannah Hastings, and resides in Little Britain township. (7) Harry E., born in March, 1876, is a groceryman in Philadelphia. (8) Charles E., born in April, 1879, is unmarried. (9) Georgie A. and (10) Mary, twins, were born in August, 1881. Mary died in infancy and Georgie, now the only daughter at home, received a good education in the home school and in the Union High School. Since the death of her mother, she has had charge of the home, where she has given her father every care and attention that his declining years demand. She is a young woman of much character and culture, and enjoys the respect and esteem of the community to a marked degree. (11) Miller, born Sept. 5, 1883.

In politics Mr. Reinhart has always been identified with the Republican party, and has held the office of supervisor one term, and has also been school director. He is a charter member of the Birely Post, No. 511, G. A. R., of Quarryville, where he has held various official positions.

S. T. DAVIS, M. D., of Lancaster City, and one of the gallant ex-soldiers of the war of the Rebellion, is a native of Huntingdon county, Pa., born in 1838. He is the eldest of six children of Henry Davis, a blacksmith and justice of the peace, all of whom are still living.

Dr. Davis worked for four years in his father's shop, and studied at odd hours to acquire an education. Every Sunday for a long time he walked five miles to the office of Dr. H. Orlady, of Petersburg, to recite, and thus prepared for his future success and still later he took a course at Mooresville Academy in Huntingdon county. In the summer of 1858 he was the first pupil from Huntingdon county to attend the Millersville State Normal School, and in the fall of the same year he returned to Huntingdon county and taught school. The following year he was teaching in Lancaster county, and had just nicely settled down to his work, when the war broke out. He enlisted in Co. H, 15th P. V. I., and was in the service three months. He was promoted to the rank of ordnance sergeant of the regiment, and was discharged at Carlisle, but then re-enlisted, this time for three years, in Co. C, 77th P. V. I., as second lieutenant, and later was appointed and commissioned adjutant of the regiment. In the early part of 1862 he was detached as acting assistant adjutant general on the staff of Brigadier General E. N. Kirk. When the three years time was out, he was commissioned captain of Co. G, 77th Pennsylvania Volunteers. This company he himself recruited and it consisted of fifteen members of the old Co. G, and the remainder of new men, all of Welsh descent. The Doctor is next found serving as acting assistant-general with the rank of captain, on the staff of Gen. William Grose. While thus serving he was slightly wounded at Shiloh and Chickamauga, and very seriously wounded at the engagement of Resaca, Ga., and for five days lay on the field. After being at the hospital for three months at Chattanooga, he, in 1864, was honorably discharged from the service on account of wounds received in action, and after taking part in thirteen battles.

During his military career he had splendid opportunities for obtaining a close familiarity with surgery. In 1864-65 he took a course of lectures at Jefferson Medical College, and in the summer of 1865 he graduated from Long Island College Hospital. He returned to Millersville, where he was associated with Dr. S. B. Hartman for a year, and then was in practice alone for nine years. In 1874 he moved to Lancaster, and at the present is located at No. 132 North Prince street. The Doctor is a member and ex-president of the City Pathological Association, and of the county society. In addition he is serving his sixth term as president of the State Board of Health. The Doctor has been a member of this board since July, 1889, having been appointed for six years. He was one of the original members of the American Surgical Association, and is a member of the American Medical Association. He has performed many difficult operations on the human body, and makes a specialty of surgery and gynecology.

In local politics the Doctor has taken considerable interest and has served in the city councils for five years, filling the office of president of the common councils at one time. In the fall of 1885 he was elected to the State Legislature, and in 1887 was re-elected by the largest Republican majority ever polled in the city. While in the Legislature the Doctor was very active in medical legislation pertaining to matters of hygiene and sanitary affairs. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, of the Union Veteran Legion and of the Loyal Legion. He has donated his sword and war relics for the use of the museum connected with the order, which will shortly be built. He is a 32d degree Mason and has served as thrice potent Grand Master in the Lodge of Perfection of that order.

Dr. Davis has delivered many addresses at Sanitary Conventions and Medical Societies, and in other ways has been prominent in movements of this character. He usually takes a few weeks every year for the purpose of hunting, and has been all over the United States and Canada; at his residence can be seen numerous heads of deer and other mementos of camp life. He is also an amateur photographer, and his house is filled with pictures of people and places. He has a very large practice in Lancaster, and is a very busy man, of pleasant, social characteristics, who makes a most entertaining companion, and he is known as a physician and soldier all over the United States. The Doctor is serving his second term as a member of the Pension Board. He is president of the Greenwood Cemetery Association, having been one of its organizers.

Dr. S. T. Davis married in Millersville, in 1866, Miss Elizabeth Fenstermacher, a daughter of Christian and Catherine Fenstermacher. There have been no children born to this union, but the Doctor and wife have an adopted daughter, Martha H. Davis. Dr. and Mrs. Davis and their adopted child stand very high socially and professionally, as well as officially, the Doctor bears a most enviable reputation.

JOHN W. ZELL, M. D. Among the representative men of Lancaster county, a leader in both political and professional life, is Dr. John W. Zell, the popular and appreciated physician of Fairmount, Pa. For many years Dr. Zell has taken an active part in all the progress and development of this section and is well known and beloved, having been for forty-six years identified with the people of this locality in one of the closest relations of life.

Dr. Zell comes of German ancestry, although he is a product of Lancaster county, born in Colerain township, Dec. 27, 1820. His parents were Isaac and Elizabeth (Swift) Zell, both of whom were also natives of this county, the mother having been born in the historic old home of the great inventor, Robert Fulton.

Grandfather Adam Zell was a miller by occupation, and for many years he was engaged in the milling business, in Honeybrook, Chester county, where he reared a large family who became useful and respected members of society. They were known as: John, Samuel, Levi, Adam, Margaret, Henrietta and Isaac.

Isaac Zell, born in 1791, was a prominent man in his locality for many years, as merchant, teacher, and local preacher in the M. E. Church. His wife was born in 1801, and they both lived worthily until advanced in years, the mother of Dr. Zell dying at the age of ninety-four. She was the devoted mother of a large family: Joseph S., deceased; Emmor E., deceased; Dr. John W.; Dr. E. M., a dentist of Little Britain township; Isaac B., deceased; Dr. Amos B., of Little Britain township; Daniel, of Perrytown; Dr. D. A., of Little Britain township; Martha, deceased; Elizabeth, unmarried; and Dr. Samuel Allen, a dentist of Hinkletown, the others dying in infancy.

Dr. John W. Zell was reared on the farm, but agricultural pursuits did not appeal to him in his youth, and after gaining a good, common school education, he entered the Pennsylvania Medical College in 1853, graduating from that then noted institution in 1855. Returning to Lancaster county he immediately began the practice of his profession, and in this locality he has remained for a period of forty-six years. During this time many changes have taken place and many of the old friends of Dr. Zell have passed away, but new associations have been formed and few men in this locality possess more vigor of mind or body. The Zell family is not only one of the oldest but also one of the most intelligent in the county, and one which has had an unusual leaning toward professional life. Dr. Zell, like many other young men, had his own way to make in the world, being one of a large family, but with the pluck, perseverance and energy bequeathed him by sturdy ancestors, he carved out a path to fortune and prominence. Dr. Zell owns two good farms in this neighborhood, both of them well improved.

The first marriage of Dr. Zell was in 1865, to Miss Mary R. Patterson, of Britain township, a daughter of James Patterson, who was a near neighbor and warm friend of President James Buchanan. Her death occurred in 1870. Dr. Zell married for his second wife Mary Bell Johnson, of Little Britain, who was born in 1834. No children were born to either union. Mrs. Zell is descended from one of the oldest families in lower Lancaster county, her mother being an Andrews of Colerain, and her father an extensive farmer in Little Britain. Dr. Zell has always been an ardent advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and has always conscientiously supported the men and measures of that great organization. For many years he has been identified with the Methodist Church of which he is a trustee, and he is fraternally connected with both county and State medical societies and also with the American Medical Association. Dr. Zell served also as president of the Lancaster City and County Medical Society. Few men have more personal friends than Dr. Zell, his kind heart having caused him to give way to so many generous impulses that he is recognized as not only the skilled physician of this vicinity, but also as the sympathizing and helpful adviser. His hospitality is liberal and few hosts are more entertaining.

JOHN L. BRENNEMAN, one of the leading agriculturists of Pequea township, Lancaster county, is a large land owner and a citizen of high standing and influence in the county, and is among the honored older citizens of the township that are yet living.

John L. Brenneman was born Aug. 15, 1827, on what is now the Bishop A. B. Herr farm in Pequea (then Conestoga) township. He is a son of John and Charlotte (Lemon) Brenneman and grandson of Jacob Brenneman. The latter was born in 1753 and became a large landowner in this locality. He was twice married, marrying (first) Barbara Myers, who was born Jan. 25, 1757, and died Sept. 14, 1825, and (second) Anna Rush, who was born in 1782.

John Brenneman, father of John L., was born in 1787. He learned the trade of a weaver and followed it in his early life. He then turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, which he followed throughout his lifetime, becoming a prosperous and extensive land owner. John Brenneman married Charlotte Lemon, who was born March 20, 1789, and died May 12, 1869. The husband died June 12, 1843. Their children were: John L., our subject, who is referred to at a greater length farther on; Barbara, who married Rudolph Herr; Susan, who married Christian Hess; Elizabeth, who married Christian Brenneman, and Lydia, who is a resident of New Danville, all deceased excepting John L. and Lydia.

John L. Brenneman was reared on the home farm and has devoted his life to that vocation. He received such privileges for obtaining an education as the neighborhood district school afforded, attending it through the winter seasons and assisting on the farm through the rest of the year. He started out in life with a purpose and determination to succeed. In this he has not fallen short of the mark as he is the owner of two large farms, aggregating some 202½ acres, well improved and under a high state of cultivation.

On November 1, 1854, Mr. Brenneman was married (first) to Anna Harnish, who died March 6, 1862; and (second) Aug. 15, 1863, to Mary Ann Lefever, both ceremonies being performed by Rev. Jacob Strain, of Lancaster. To the first union were born: Aaron H.; John H., and Amanda. To the second, Elmer Ellsworth L. and Susan L., both deceased. Mrs. Mary Ann Brenneman passed away March 15, 1900.

Mr. Brenneman has been upright and honorable in his dealings with his fellow-men and so conducted himself and regulated his life as to enlist the respect and high regard of the community in which he has so long lived. He has ever taken a deep interest in all the affairs of the township, having in view the advancement of society and the business interests of his section. He has been industrious and a good manager, and has prospered. For the long period of twenty-four years he has most efficiently served his township as a school director; he has also filled the position of assistant assessor. His religious connections and those of his family are with the Old Mennonite Church. Politically he is identified with the Republican party.

SAMSON D. REESE, a farmer and dairyman of Elizabethtown, and one of the older and more prominent citizens of that thriving community, was born in the township of Manor, Aug. 6, 1830.

The parents of Mr. Reese were Samson M. and Caroline (Snyder) Reese, natives respectively, of Harford county, Maryland, and Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The father came to Lancaster county when he was eighteen years of age and made a home in the township of Manor where he remained fifteen years, removing at the end of that time to a home in East Donegal township. For some forty years he was a pilot on the Susquehanna river, and only gave up that calling when compelled to do so by the infirmities of age, retiring at last to a small farm. In early life he was a wagon maker, but left that occupation in 1838 to follow a river life. He died in 1875 at the advanced age of eighty-five years. His widow survived two years and died in 1877 when eighty years old. Their remains lie in Mt. Joy Cemetery. Born to them were the following children: Anna, the widow of John Nauman, lives in Elizabethtown; Alexander is the superintendent of the Bell Telephone Company at Harrisburg; Samson D.; Mary A., died young; Margaret, the widow of David Martin, lives at Osborn, Ohio; William, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, has his home in Harrisburg; Caroline (deceased) was the wife of Edward Campion; Sarah (deceased), was the wife of John Cox.

David Reese, the paternal grandfather of Samson D., was born in Scotland, and made his home in Harford county, Md., when a young man. Henry Snyder, the maternal grandfather of S. D. Reese, was born in Lancaster county, and followed the occupation of a tailor in his earlier manhood.

Samson D. Reese was married in Lancaster, October, 1860, to Elizabeth Good, and to this union were born the following children: Samuel G., a farmer in West Donegal township; Christian G., who is a brick maker in Elizabethtown; David G., a machinist in Elizabethtown; U. Grant, died young; Harry G., a telegraph operator in Elizabethtown; Edgar G., at home; Anna G., at home.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Good) Reese was born in Rapho township, Feb. 14, 1836, and is a daughter of Christian and Mollie (Gantz) Good, both natives of Rapho township, where they lived and died. Her father was a farmer all his days, and was a man of more than ordinary character. His neighbors elected him at different times to positions of trust, making him supervisor, tax collector and giving him other responsible offices. His death occurred in 1881 at the advanced age of eighty-six years, his wife having passed away in 1879 aged seventy-two years. They were members, respectively, of the Old Mennonite and the Lutheran Churches, and both are buried in a private cemetery in Rapho township. These were their children: Jacob, Joseph, Samuel, Anna, the wife of David Kriner, Abraham, and Mary, deceased; Elizabeth, noted above; Trifina, deceased; Malinda E., the wife of Michael Myers Christian, of East Donegal township. The paternal grandparents of Elizabeth (Good) Reese were Jacob and Mary Good. Her mother's father was George Gantz, who married a Miss Nosen; both were born in Germany and came to this country in early life.

Samson D. Reese remained on the farm with his parents until he reached the age of eighteen years, when he went to Louisiana and Texas, where he was engaged in sawmill work for a number of years, spending his summers north. In 1858 he returned to Pennsylvania to take a position as watchman on the railroad, a place he held for fifteen years. At the expiration of that period he began farming near Elizabethtown, and in 1885, removed to his present location, his home being in Elizabethtown, while his farm lies mostly in West Donegal township. For twelve years he has served in the town council, and holds an enviable place in the estimation of his friends and neighbors. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a member of the Reformed Church.

WILLIAM PENN BRINTON, in his time one of Lancaster's most prominent citizens, was born at the old family mansion on the Brandywine creek, near West Chester, Chester Co., Pa., June 20, 1824. His ancestors came from Birmingham, England, and settled in Pennsylvania a year after Penn's treaty with the Indians. They were in the possession of large means, and took up extensive tracts of land in Philadelphia and Chester counties, and some of their descendants occupy portions of these lands to the present day. William P. Brinton, the youngest son of Caleb and Hannah Brinton, was named after the founder of the province, William Penn. Caleb Brinton was a prominent citizen of Chester county, owned several farms, and carried on farming on an extensive scale.

William P. Brinton spent his early days at home, attended the district school, and later was sent to a boarding school and an Academy at New London, Chester county. In November, 1841, he entered the Freshman class of Washington College; in his Junior year he delivered the address at the anniversary of the Union Literary Society; and after a full course of study he was graduated with high marks. In the summer of 1848 he made an extended tour through the Eastern States and Canada, as correspondent of a Philadelphia paper. Later he began the study of the law in the office of Hon. Henry G. Long, and read a thorough course, but about the time he expected to begin practice he met with a serious accident, his right hand being injured so badly that he could not use it for several years, being unable even to hold a pen. In consequence of this injury, he abandoned the law, and engaged in other business in Lancaster and elsewhere. In 1856 Mr. Brinton was united in marriage to Miss Susan M. Reigart, eldest daughter of the late Emanuel C. Reigart, one of the foremost of Lancaster's lawyers a generation ago. They took up their residence in the house formerly occupied by Thaddeus Stevens, No. 38 South Queen street, and occupied it during all their married life. Mr. Brinton was for a long time a director of the Philadelphia and Lancaster Turnpike; of the Lancaster and Middletown Turnpike; and was for six years before his death treasurer of the Lancaster and Williamstown Turnpike road. In 1859 Mr. Brinton was elected treasurer of the Lancaster & Susquehanna Turnpike Road Company, and held the office up to the time of his death. He was for many years in the management of the Inland Insurance & Deposit Company. He was elected a member of the Lancaster school board in 1863, and at once took an active part in school affairs. In 1866 he was chosen president of the board. He was regarded an excellent parliamentarian and an impartial presiding officer, while his thorough knowledge of the rules governing the board enabled him to transact business with dispatch and regularity. Although Mr. Brinton declined re-election to the presidency in 1873, he remained a member of the board until 1878, doing good work for the schools. In 1867 he was re-elected a member of the common council, and was chosen president of that body. The following year he was re-elected a member from the Fourth ward, by a majority of one, he being the only candidate on the Democratic ticket who secured election. Mr. Brinton was always a stanch Democrat, and always took an active part in local, State and National politics. He was a delegate to a number of State conventions and senatorial delegate to the Democratic State Convention that nominated his warm personal friend, Judge Sharswood, an eminent jurist, for judge of the Supreme court, and in recognition of his services he was, with Hon. Richard Vaux, appointed to inform him of his nomination. He then served for three years on the Democratic State Committee, and was again chosen senatorial delegate to the Democratic State Convention of 1874.

Mr. Brinton entered into rest on April 13, 1888, in the sixty-fourth year of his age, and no man who ever lived in the community died more lamented—for his was a genial, generous, noble nature. His widow now resides at No. 549 North Duke street, Lancaster. She is one of the managers of a number of charitable homes, hospitals and organizations, and is active in Episcopal church affairs. One daughter and two sons are still living: Henrietta, the eldest, is the wife of William L. Deming, vice president of the Deming Manufacturing Company, of Salem, Ohio: they have one child, Susan Brinton. Edward Penrose Brinton, Esq., was born Aug. 25, 1860. WILLIAM REIGART BRINTON, Esq., was born in Lancaster, May 7, 1865. Both brothers—Edward P. and William R.—are graduates of Franklin and Marshall College, the latter taking the first honors in his class; both read law with the late Samuel H. Reynolds, Esq., one of the most distinguished members of the Lancaster Bar, William R., also spending a year in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and both are in active practice in Lancaster. Edward P. Brinton is a Republican in politics, and has been active and prominent in the affairs of that party; while William R. is just as ardent a Democrat, and has been honored by his fellow Democrats with nominations for district attorney, Congress and delegate to State conventions. He was City Solicitor of Lancaster in 1892-93, the only time in twenty-five years that the Democratic party had control of the city councils. Both brothers are in practice in the Superior, United States District and Supreme Courts.

Edward P. Brinton was married Oct. 17, 1899, to Miss Henrietta Taylor, daughter of Robert M. Taylor, late of West Chester, Pa. Mr. Brinton is a member of The Hamilton Club, is a manager in a number of corporations, and his law practice is extensive.

William Reigart Brinton was married Dec. 27, 1893, to Miss Annie M. McGovern, daughter of the late John R. McGovern, one of the most prominent and successful railroad contractors of this county, and they now live in the old McGovern home, at the end of North Duke street, one of the finest suburban homes of that section. Three children were born to them: Anna Reigart, Catherine McGovern and William Penn. Mr. Brinton belongs to the Elks and the Young Democrats, and in religion is an Episcopalian, being an active member of the St. James' Church, and a member of the board of trustees of the Episcopal Home. Mr. Brinton is also solicitor for the City Savings Fund & Trust Company of Lancaster, solicitor for the Conestoga Fire Insurance Company, solicitor for the Lancaster Hotel Company, solicitor for the Lancaster Electric Light, Heat & Power Company, treasurer of the Lancaster and Williamstown Turnpike Company, and member of the board of the Lancaster and Columbia Turnpike Company; and no man of his years in Lancaster is, personally, professionally and politically, more popular.

JACOB B. NEWCOMER, a well known citizen of Manor township and one of the most prosperous and progressive farmers of Lancaster county, Pa., was born in Millersville, July 15, 1838, and is a son of Jacob and Magdalena (Breneman) Newcomer, both deceased.

Jacob Newcomer was a blacksmith by trade and for some years carried on business on his own account in Millersville, but about 1839 migrated to Wayne county, Ohio, where his death occurred about 1840 in middle age. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. To Jacob and Magdalena Newcomer were born two children that grew to maturity, Isaac B., a farmer of Providence township, and Jacob B.

Mrs. Magdalena Newcomer was at the time of her marriage to Jacob Newcomer, the widow of Henry Harnish, of Conestoga township, by whom she had two children, viz.: John B., a retired minister of the Mennonite Church, residing in Pequea township; and Catherine, deceased wife of Daniel Lintner, of Lancaster City, to whom she bore two daughters, still living, viz.: Lizzie, wife of John Derr, of Lancaster City; and Annie, married to David Good, a merchant of Cumberland county. At the death of her second husband, Jacob Newcomer, in Ohio, Mrs. Newcomer returned with her infant children to Lancaster county, Pa., purchased a farm, and there died a few years later.

Jacob B. Newcomer was a mere babe when his father died, was quite young when his mother passed away and from the age of fourteen years has been obliged to take care of himself. His opportunities for acquiring an education were but meager, yet he availed himself of the public schools until attaining the age mentioned. Soon after this the charge of his mother's farm fell upon him for ten years. His marriage took place, Sept. 11, 1862, to Miss Maria H. Wissler, a native of Manor township, and a daughter of Rudolph Wissler, who was for years a justice of the peace.

On marrying, Jacob B. Newcomer moved to his father-in-law's farm and managed it for two years, and then purchased his present place of thirty-two and a half acres, one mile south of Letort, and has since been engaged in general farming. On this farm he had the misfortune of losing his amiable life-companion, Dec. 3, 1893. She was a faithful member of the United Brethren Church, of which Mr. Newcomer is the present president of the official board, having been a member of the society since 1858.

Mr. Newcomer is one of the very enterprising and public-spirited citizens of Manor township, and taking into consideration the size of his farm, has been a most successful agriculturist. His friends are numerous and sincere in their esteem for him, and his standing in the community is all that could possibly be desired.

DAVID WESTFIELD JACKSON, the proprietor of the Willow Mills in Bart township, Lancaster county, was born near Avondale, Chester county, in December, 1834, a son of David and Elizabeth (Westfield) Jackson, both of whom were natives of County Derry, Ireland, where they were reared to maturity, and where they married.

In 1828 David Jackson came to this country, bringing his wife and son, and they made their home in Chester county. The father was a linen weaver by trade, but in Chester county he determined to make farming his life business and met with success in his work. Both he and his wife lived to be aged. After coming to America they were mostly associated with the Friends. In his earlier years in this country Mr. Jackson was a Whig, but later became a Democrat. His simplicity of purpose and strength of character, together with his kind and genial disposition, won him many friends wherever he was known. He reared a family of nine children. (1) Henry, born in Ireland in 1827, became a blacksmith and located first near Fagg's Manor, Chester county, following his trade for some years, and then removed to Perry county. His last location was near Steelville, Chester county, where he engaged in farming. He married Martha Susan Creswell, who died in 1898. He died in 1899, leaving the following family: Wilson W., David Creswell, Jane Elizabeth, William and Charles. (2) Abraham, born in Chester county in 1829, is now a wholesale saddler, of Benton, Ill., where he is widely known in business circles; he married Virginia Dudley, a native of Indiana, and a descendant of the Dudleys of Virginia. Their children were Henry, William, Charles and Anna Belle. (3) John H., born in Chester county in 1831, married Margaret Baker, and, locating in Chester county, engaged in farming. At one time he was a partner with his brother, David W., in a contracting and building business. He is the father of three sons, George, Richard and David, all of whom are on farms in Chester county in the vicinity of Doe Run. (4) Eleanor Dixon, the only daughter of the family, was born in Chester county, and is unmarried; she makes her home near Parkesburg, and is highly esteemed and beloved by a wide circle of friends. (5) David Westfield is fifth in the order of birth. (6) William E., born in Chester county, is a harnessmaker and has his home and business in Jefferson county, Ill. He married Louisa Elston, a native of Illinois, and they have two children living, Ralph and Oliver, having buried six children. (7) Joshua, born in Chester county, married Anna Speakman, of Chester county, and they were living on his farm near Kimbleville, at the time of his death in 1898; his widow survives him. (8) Thomas W., born in Chester county, married Rachel Pearl, and they make their home near Parkesburg, where he owns and operates a gristmill. (9) Westfield Evans, born in Chester county, married Miss Catherine Baker, of his native county, and they have their home on the Jackson homestead, in Chester county.

David Westfield Jackson was reared and educated in Chester county, where he early mastered the carpenter trade, and he followed it much of the time for twenty-two years on an extensive scale, as a contractor and builder. In 1869 he bought the Willow Mills property in Bart township, which consisted of gristmills and a farm in connection, and there he has remained to the present time, and has developed a large milling business.

On Feb. 18, 1875, Mr. Jackson was married to Miss Philena C. Wood, the estimable daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Coates) Wood; she was born in Chester county, and reared and educated in Chester, Delaware and Lancaster counties, having been a student at Concordville Seminary and at the Millersville State Normal, and for a time she was a successful teacher in Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson have two children. (1) Lindley D., born in March, 1876, was educated in the public school, and in the local high school. In 1895, 1896 and 1897 he was a student in the State Normal School at Millersville, where he took a special course in book-keeping. As a capable young business man he has impressed himself upon the community, having charge of the milling interests of his father at the present time, for which he was thoroughly prepared by early and careful training. (2) Elizabeth Westfield, the only daughter of her parents, was born in September, 1881, and educated at the Friends' school in Abington, Montgomery county. She is a member of the Senior class at Swarthmore College, near Philadelphia, graduating in 1903. Mr. Jackson and his son are both members of the Prohibition party. Mrs. Jackson belongs to the religious Society of Friends, and is a member of the W. C. T. U. They are among the solid and reliable people of the community, and their many good qualities have made them respected and beloved by a wide circle of friends.

REV. OTTIWELL WOOD, of Lancashire, England, had two sons, John and Thomas. John died in England, unmarried. We find recorded, "A Name." "The Woods of Lancashire are a distinguished family for character, wealth and talent. The eldest son, John, has been returned member of Parliament for Preston several times and proved himself a steady supporter of civic and religious liberty. A laughable circumstance took place upon a trial in Lancashire when the head of the family, Mr. Wood, Sr., was examined as a witness. Upon giving his name as Ottiwell Wood the judge, addressing the reverend, said 'Pray, Mr. Wood, how do you spell your name?' The old gentleman replied, 'O double T, I double U, E double L, double U, double O. D.' Upon which the astonished lawyer laid down his pen, saying it was the most extraordinary name he had ever met with in his life, and after two or three attempts declared he was unable to record it; the court was convulsed with laughter."

Thomas Wood (1), second son of Ottiwell, was born in Lancashire, England, and emigrated to America with wife, Mary, and two sons, William and Joseph. He settled in Chester county, Pa., near the London Grove meeting-house, near which he now lies buried. He owned a fulling mill in England. He bought land of William Penn in West Marlboro township, Chester county, on the north side of the street road, one mile west of London Grove meeting-house, where he built a fulling mill. He was a churchman.

Richmond Wood, daughter of Thomas (1) and Mary Wood, was born during the voyage of her parents to this country. She was named in honor of the captain of the ship and the day on which she was born. She married William Shepherd, of Adams county, Pa., in 1749. Her descendants live in the vicinity of Union Bridge, Maryland.

Joseph Wood, second son of Thomas and Mary, was born in England in 1730, and died in 1797. He married Catherine Day in 1769. He first settled in Nottingham, Chester Co., Pa., and afterward went to southern Lancaster county, where his descendants now live.

William Wood, eldest son of Thomas (1) and Mary, was born in Lancashire, England, in 1723, and died in Chester county, Pa., in 1775; he was buried in the burying-ground of London Grove meeting-house. He became a Quaker after coming to this country. He married Margaret Holland, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Holland, of Prince George county, Md., who was born in 1730, and died in 1775, in Chester county, Pa. They had children as follows: Thomas (2); Joseph, who married, and died in Frederick county, Va., in 1816; Mary, the eldest daughter, who married Caleb Swayne, of East Marlboro, Chester Co., Pa.; George, who died in infancy; Casandra, who married Robert Miller, and died in 1818; William, who married Mary Smith; Elizabeth, who married Jesse Hughes; Margaret, who became the wife of Garret Garretson, and later married Edward Brooks, of Wilmington, Del.; Joshua, who married Hannah McKay, of Frederick county, Va.; and Ruth.

The following authentic history of Thomas Wood (2), great-grandfather of Mrs. David W. Jackson, is interesting, and shows that he was not of a political or warlike character, but possessed of deeply religious sentiment. From the records of New Garden Monthly Meeting, June 3, 1769, William Wood requests a certificate for son, Thomas, born in 1750, to Concord, apprentice. In January, 1772, Thomas returned, and on Oct. 2, 1773, Thomas, son of William and Margaret Wood, and Susanna Pusey (born in 1750, died in 1811, daughter of John (deceased) and Katherine, declare intentions of marriage—first time, March 11, 1773. The children of this marriage were as follows: Joel, born in 1774, died in 1776. William, born in 1775, died in 1803 (no issue). John, born in November, 1777, died in October, 1847; he married Lydia Swayne, and they are the grandparents of Mrs. David W. Jackson. Lydia Ann, born in 1779, died in 1812. Nathan, born in 1781, died in 1863; he married Margaret Watson, and lived in Ohio. Margaret, born in 1783, died in 1835; she married Samuel Plummer, and lived in Ohio. Thomas, the fifth son, born in 1785, died in 1843; he married Mary Shepherd, of Maryland, who was born in 1791, and died in 1875. Susanna, born in 1787, died in 1794. Pusey, born in 1789, died in 1875; he married Charity Redd, of Ohio. Caleb, born in 1792, died in 1879; he married Lydia Redd, of Ohio. Mary, the youngest daughter, born in September, 1796, died in 1867; she married John Dennis Bates, of Ohio.

From the records in West Chester, Chester county, it appears that William Wood, of London Grove, fuller, and wife Margaret, conveyed to son Thomas 120 acres in that township June 19, 1773, and Thomas Wood and wife Susanna conveyed the same to Daniel Hoopes March 12, 1782, for £600. Thomas is styled a "waver." By deed Sept. 1, 1785, Samuel Sharp and wife Mary conveyed to Thomas Wood 105 acres of land in Newlin township, Chester county, at the mouth of Doe Run creek [Deed Book B2, 510]; March 18, 1794, Thomas Wood of Newlinton, yeoman, and wife Susanna, conveyed to Samuel Laverty, of Caernarvon, Berks county, and William and Jesse Laverty, of East Fallowfield, ironmasters, $2\frac{3}{4}$ acres of the above on Doe Run [K 2, 452]; March 30, 1795, Thomas Wood of Newlin, yeoman, and wife Susanna, conveyed to Jacob Grubb of East Fallowfield, Chester county, hammerman, for £350, a messuage of fifty-two acres, 123 perches, on west side of Brandywine and north side of Doe Run, part of the land from Sharp [M 2, 87]; March 25, 1796, Thomas Wood, of New Garden, yeoman, and wife Susanna, to Mark Unger, of West Marlborough, blacksmith, for £194, 15s, forty-one acres, eleven perches on the south side of Doe Run and west side of Brandywine, in Newlin, part of land from Sharp [M 2, 489]. This land bought and owned in Newlin township, Chester county, by Thomas and Susanna (Pusey) Wood, is the site of the Laurel Iron works, south of Coatesville, long known as the Hugh E. Steele iron works. It is not known positively who erected the iron works, but a little incident of their completion in 1791 is given by Pemberton Wood, of Maryland, son of Thomas Wood and Mary Shepherd, and grandson of Thomas and Susanna Wood: "I distinctly recollect one evening in the fall of the year my father came into the house, with a peculiar smile on his face, and I suspected he had something good to tell me (as we were very confidential friends). He began by saying, 'Thee is just six years old and I have something to tell thee which I want thee to remember; when I was a little boy just thy age some men came and built a forge on father's place.' He went into detail of the building of the forge and 'tell hammers,' so minute that it interested me much and the little boy's eyes and ears and mind must have been open to remember so well what he said, for that was many years ago. After the waterwheel was built and the tilt hammer all in place the men got a dry inch oak board and placed it on the anvil and started the hammer. 'Such a noise and at night, too! It roused the whole neighborhood.' That must have been in 1791."

During the Revolutionary war, in 1777, Thomas Wood was appointed one of a committee to look after cases of suffering on account of the war; 1781 on a committee to labor for reformation. He was several years clerk in the monthly meetings and had charge of the preparation of marriage certificates, in fact was one of the active members in every department of business in the meetings. In 1787 London Grove meeting proposes the recommendation of Thomas as a minister. In 1789 he visited meetings at Bush Creek, Md., and Warrington Quarter, "he being of an exemplary life and conversation and his ministry acceptable." On March 6, 1791, Thomas Wood was appointed on a large committee to attend the opening of a preparative meeting at West Grove, Chester county. When London Grove monthly meeting was established, in 1792, he was one who was appointed for the consideration of a division from New Garden, and from the time he was accepted as a minister in the Society of Friends he was an earnest thinker and worker in this chosen path. The paper given below, copied from the original, gives one an idea of his sincere Christian life. It is dated 1803, and reads as follows:

As I have often of late times found something secretly moving upon my mind to leave in manuscript for the perusal of my children and grandchildren when I am gone, some of the Lords tender dealings with me, and fatherly care over me, from my youth up through life, and further reason for writing is, I have known some young people so at a loss for information that they were scarcely able to trace back their line of predecessors further than their own immediate parents. I was born the 17th day of the 11th mo. 1750 of parents professing the truth (as held by friends) William and Margaret Wood, whose residence at that time and until their death was in Londongrove township Chester County Pennsylvania. They were rarely concerned to bring me and the rest of their children, nine of whom lived to be men and women, up to do strict justice between man and man and to live blameless lives among men, and my mother was often deeply concerned to inculcate into our minds the principles of the Christian religion and I know since I have come to years of religious thoughtfulness that her prayers were often poured forth before the Lord for the blessing of preservation to the tender offspring that we might be preserved in innocency and Godly fear before him all the days of our lives, and as it is written that the effectual fervent prayer of an upright man availeth much, so I believe her deep religious concern for our preservation has been a blessing to most of us. There was one part of her religious exercise and care that I have often thought worthy to be preserved that was, I believe for many of the latter part of her life she never spent one day when at home and in health without spending a part thereof in silent retirement to wait upon the Lord well knowing with the Royal Psalmist that it is a good thing to wait upon the Lord inasmuch that he gave it in charge to his own soul in this language, "O my soul wait thou upon God because my expectation is from Him." She had a private chamber with a table and a large Bible lay upon it, to which she retired, and when I came in and misted her out of the common house and wanted to speak to her, and as I had often applied to her in that place concerning little wants, she had taught me to approach her chamber in great quietness and I often found her cheeks bathed in tears sometimes reading and at other times sitting in awful reverent silence, and although it often struck an awful reverential thought upon my mind yet I did not fully understand the meaning thereof, but to me it has proved like bread cast upon the waters found after many days, and O, saith my soul at this time that not only me and my children, but all mankind may more and more endeavor to "live the life of the righteous that so we may die the death of the righteous—for mark the perfect man and behold the upright the end of that man is peace."

The following, under date 6 month, 1803, is another part of the manuscript:

I have had some clear openings of latter time of the work of the new creation in the souls of mankind running parallel with the six days work of the outward creation. Wherein all creating power out of darkness created light and divided light from darkness, and the seas from dry land brought all things into order and in the last days work created man after his own image, which clearly points out to me that man is not brought into the image of God and a state of perfection and holiness till he witnesses a passing through the six dispensations comparable to the six working days, first man was created in an innocent sinless state and stood in favor with God until he became an actual sinner and rebelled against the law of God by eating of the forbidden fruit of which God had declared "in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," that herein man becomes separate from the divine harmony and cast out into an earthly state, where death reigned till Moses dispensation (for death reigned from Adam till Moses) wherein he was raised up a minister to bring the children of Israel out of Egyptian darkness and bondage and received the law from God out of Mount Sinia wherein was statutes, judgements and ordinances to be observed, that third dispensation to me points out being brought into a good regular moral life yet as the law made not the comers thereunto perfect but it must be the beginning of a better hope, that it is clear to me, that morality alone will not perfect the but the coming up from under death through the law to the next dispensation, which is that of John's must be known where a baptism unto repentance is known. I, indeed, says this eminent forerunner, baptize you with water unto repentance "but one cometh after me the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and fire," our Lord bore testimony that John was a burning and shining light and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in the light, but I have greater witness of that than John for though he was the greatest prophet that was ever born of a woman yet the least in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than he. That is his dispensation as my soul well knows a passing through this tender watery dispensation, wherein all that was within me was ready to melt with contrition before God was a joyful dispensation in its season, because I found the Kingdom of Heaven to be at hand, but I found this to be a decreasing dispensation and a more trying fiery dispensation coming on which was that of Christ's whose fan in his hands which is to blow away all the light and chaff thoroughly purge away the floor of the and save the weighty precious seed unto of rest and peace forever. Well after this fifth and most proving dispensation has done and effected the redemption of soul from under the law of sin and death the comforter's dispensation comes (according to my prospect), "If I go not away said our dear Lord—the Comforter will not come, but if I go away I will pray the father, and he will send you another comforter, even the spirit of Truth"—that it is under the sixth dispensation, when all Truth has the reins and government of the heart, that man is created anew into the likeness and image of God. Behold said our dear Lord, "I create all things new a new Heaven and a new earth wherein dwells righteousness." That at the end of this new creation the holy Sabbath of rest is to be experienced when the morning stars sing together and all the sons of God shout for joy.—Thos. Wood.

Another item.—The 17th day of the 1st mo. 1807 I heard of the death of William Croch a minister from England and William Ellis a friend who had lived in good esteem at Muncy, Penna., their deaths by suicide. The news so affected my mind, with sorrow that it feelingly settled on my mind, blessed are the dead who have died in the Lord, it also begat desires in my mind that I might be preserved in such an humble watchful state as to feelingly and humbly beg every day of my life to the great Preserver of man that he would be pleased to grant me the blessing of preservation through the dangerous tribulated passages to the end.

In the summer of 1798 a certificate was signed for Thomas Wood, wife Susanna, and six of their children, Nathan, Margaret, Thomas, Pusey, Caleb and Mary; also certificates for William Wood and Lydia Wood to Pipe Creek, Md.; they had made application for themselves.

"John Wood, of West Marlborough, third son of Thomas and Susanna, of Frederick county, Md., and Lydia Swayne, daughter of Samuel and Hannah Swayne, of East Marlborough, were married Nov. 8, 1800, at Londongrove meeting." Their children were: Hannah, Samuel, Nathan (who died young), Thomas, Joshua, John and Lydia Ann. John Wood died in 1847 in Steelville, and lies buried at Ercildoun graveyard, in Chester county. His family: (1) Hannah married (first) Benjamin Ladd, of Ohio, and (second) John Hill, of Ohio; she had three daughters, Lydia S., Elizabeth and Hannah, by her first marriage. She was a teacher of note, both in the schools in Ohio and at her alma mater—Westtown, Chester county. (2) Samuel married Orpha Broomall, of Ohio, and their children were Thomas and Phoebe. (3) Nathan died young. (4) Thomas, born in 1807, married Massey Lamborn in 1830, and Sarah Coates in 1841. (5) Joshua married (first) Ann Taylor, by whom he had one son, Enoch, deceased. By his second wife, Eliza Hall, he had one son William, who married Susanna Coates and had two children, Anna and Alberta, both married and living at Russellville, Chester county. William Wood (son of Joshua) died in 1898, aged fifty-eight; his wife, Susanna (Coates) Wood, and her daughter, Alberta Wickersham, live in Russellville. Samuel and Anna W. Martin, of near Russellville, have several children. (6) John married Elizabeth Kirby, of Ohio, and both died in Iowa, at the home of their daughter, Lydia S. Worthington. They had three children, Anna Wood Painter, Frank (who died unmarried) and Lydia S. Worthington, wife of William Worthington, of Ohio. For many years John Wood followed the business of bringing droves of Ohio sheep to Lancaster and Chester counties. Both his daughters were educated at Westtown Orthodox Friends Boarding School and for several years were successful teachers in Chester county, Pa. Finally they all left the East, and there is living today but one to represent the family of John and Elizabeth Wood—Lydia S. Worthington, of Iowa. (7) Lydia Ann until her marriage lived in Chester county, where she was born. She was educated at Westtown Boarding School, and was a successful teacher. She married Samuel B. Smith, of Ohio, where they made their home, and they had six children, a twin deceased, Louisa, Amy, Morris, Mary and Joshua (married). Two children and several grandchildren reside in Iowa.

Thomas Wood, eldest son of John and Lydia Wood, father of Philena C. W. Jackson, has six children living. Three—Amos, Eleanor, Laura Sarah—died young, and are buried at Homeville (Chester Co., Pa.) burying-ground. He was twice married, his first wife being Massey Lamborn, whom he married in 1830. She died in 1838, the mother of three children: (1) Dr. Eliza Jane, a graduate of the Woman's Medical College, Philadelphia, born near Doe Run in 1832, married Henry Armitage, of Ohio, and lives near Damascus; they had no children. (2) Benjamin Ladd, born in 1834 in Steelville, married in 1860, Anna Wilson, of Fairville, Chester Co., Pa., and they had one daughter, Gertrude M. Seal. For his second wife Benjamin L. Wood married Louisa M. Faucett, of Ohio, by whom he had two daughters, Anna and Mabel, both married and living in Iowa where the parents resided for fifteen years. In 1900 Mr. Wood married for his third wife Mary Martin, one of Chester county's successful school teachers. They live in Avondale, Chester county. (3) Amos, who died young, was the third of this family.

In 1841 Thomas Wood, then residing in Steelville, Chester county, married his second wife, Sarah Coates, daughter of Warrick and Eleanor Coates, of Londonderry township, Chester county. She was a granddaughter of Samuel Coates, of Caln township, and a descendant of Moses Coates, the emigrant. Her mother, Eleanor Pusey Coates, was of the distinguished Pusey family; they were all members of the Society of Friends. Sarah Coates, born in 1815, died in 1896. She was one of a large family of children. Hart Granville, Ellis Pusey, Samuel Warrick, Susan, Sarah, Abigail and Philena lived to maturity, and all except Samuel married and raised families. Abigail Hoopes and Philena C. Lynch are the only surviving children of Warrick and Eleanor (Pusey) Coates. There are descendants into the third and fourth generations living in Chester and Lancaster counties.

Thomas and Sarah Wood had children as follows: (1) Lydia married Jesse, son of Moses and Margaret Hollowell Brinton; children—Marion, Laura Alma and Estella. They reside in Montgomery county, Pa. (2) Laura married Leslie Barnes. (3) Ellis Pusey married Rebecca Martin, daughter of Thomas and Hannah Martin, and they had two children, Walter Thomas (who married Mary Pusey) and Mary (who married Samuel Pusey in 1900). (4) Philena C. married David W. Jackson, and has two children, Lindley D. and Elizabeth. (5) Morris Thomas married Margaret Weldon, and they had two children, Leila Mary and Elizabeth Hodgson, both attending the Woman's College at Baltimore. On Feb. 12, 1891, Thomas Wood and his wife Sarah celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. A year later he died suddenly from an attack of influenza. Four years later, at the age of eighty-one, his widow passed as peacefully into the other life as she had lived in this life on earth. Beautifully sweet did old age creep on until she was claimed, leaving four children devoted to her memory. Thomas and Sarah Wood lie side by side in the burying ground at Ercildoun, Chester county.

CYRUS LINGERFIELD (deceased) was born in Paradise township, Lancaster county, Sept. 6, 1835, and he died at the present home of his family, April 9, 1894. His ashes repose in Atglen Cemetery. His paternal grandparents came to Lancaster county from Germany at an early day.

John Lingerfield, his father, was born in Paradise township and died there. To him and his wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Ruth, were born the following children: (1) Cyrus. (2) Catharine, born in Paradise township, died unmarried in Christiana Feb. 16, 1894, at the age of fifty-seven. (3) Sarah A. married T. R. Hirst. (4) John, now a retired merchant of Philadelphia, enlisted in Philadelphia, in September, 1862, in the 15th P. V. C., was all through the southwestern war serving under Gens. Rosecrans and Thomas, and he was with Gen. Sherman on his march to the sea; in 1864 he was detailed from the regiment as commissary sergeant for Gen. Thomas. After being mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., in June, 1865, he started in the meat and provision business in Philadelphia, so continuing until 1884, when he retired. In 1880 he married Ettie E. Cooper, daughter of Jesse K. Cooper, of Bird-in-Hand. (5) Miss Hettie resides in Christiana. John Lingerfield, the father, was a miller by trade, and followed that avocation until 1841. That year he entered a warehouse as a clerk, a position he held until 1855. He died March 6, 1874, at the age of seventy years.

Cyrus Lingerfield was married Feb. 28, 1867, in Lancaster, to Adaline Barr, by whom he had two children: John B., a clerk in Philadelphia, married Jennie C. Matlock, and has one child, Harold Christine; and Lois Gertrude is at home. Mrs. Lingerfield was born in Millersville, Pa., a daughter of Jacob R. and Christiana (Dickle) Barr, the former a son of Owen and Mary (Richards) Barr, of Lancaster county though of English extraction, and the latter of German parentage. Jacob R. Barr was a coachmaker in Millersville, where at one time he held the office of postmaster, and for some time was deputy collector of the Internal Revenue. Socially he was a member of the I. O. O. F. and of the American Mechanics. His death occurred in Millersville, Aug. 21, 1876, at the age of sixty-five, and his widow passed away in 1889, at the age of seventy-four. They were both members of the Zion's Reformed Church. Their children were: (1) Samuel died in infancy. (2) Mary A. is the widow of Hiram S. Witmer, a farmer of Millersville. Nine children were born to them, of whom three—Edwin, William and Katie—died in youth. Those surviving are: Jacob Henry, Christiana, Elizabeth May, John Washington, Alvin and Mary Emma. (3) Susan, (4) Jacob and (5) Henry, all three died in infancy. (6) Miss Fannie died in 1890. (7) Catherine married John H. Stauffer, of Millersville. (8) Adaline is Mrs. Lingerfield. (9) William Clay, an ornamental painter of New Haven, Conn., was a soldier in the Civil war. He married Amelia T. Knotwell, and their children were: Zelve May, Viola Maria and John Reginald. (10) Benjamin F. died in infancy. (11) John Washington married Gertrude A. Cook, of Philadelphia. He was a physician of Philadelphia, with one of the largest practices of any young physician in the city, and he died in 1891, at the age of forty-one years. (12) Emma E. married Martin A. Baldwin, a coachmaker, of New Providence, Lancaster county, and they have one child, Sara Barr. (13) Miss Sara A. has her home with her sister Emma. (14) George and (15) Christiana, twins, and (16) Elmira died in infancy.

Cyrus Lingerfield entered a coach shop at Paradise, where he served his apprenticeship, and became an expert workman. In 1866 he formed a partnership with T. R. Hirst, his brother-in-law, and the two were in business together for ten years, when they dissolved partnership by mutual consent. Mr. Lingerfield was then appointed notary public, an office he held for three terms, and was Scrivener until his death. In the community he was a man of considerable prominence, and built up a fine business. In Masonic circles he took an active part, and filled at various times all the chairs in the local lodge, and served as secretary of the same for a period of six years when he resigned. In politics he was a Republican. His religious connections were with the Presbyterian Church, in which he served as treasurer and trustee.

HENRY REIGART BRENEMAN, one of Lancaster's leading general insurance and real estate men, with office in the Woolworth building, comes from a long line of prominent people, paternally and maternally. The first of the line on the paternal side to come to America was Melchoir Breneman, who came here from Switzerland, in 1709, driven from home and country by religious persecution. He was the preacher of the colony of Mennonites who came here and settled in the neighborhood of New Danville, this county, on a land grant from Penn, later increasing his land holdings by purchases.

Dr. Abram Breneman, the grandfather of Henry R., was in his time one of Lancaster's most prominent physicians. His home was the house for many years afterward owned and occupied by the late Hon. A. Herr Smith, and still owned by Miss Eliza Smith. It is a very old house, having been built prior to the time of the Revolution, and there Dr. Abram Breneman and his son, Dr. Abram (the father of Henry R.), who was also a member of the medical profession, lived and practiced medicine together, and there both of them died, and were buried on the same day, Dr. Abram, Jr., having attended the elder Dr. Breneman in illness that resulted fatally to both, the son dying from brain fever induced by his close attendance upon his father. Dr. Abram, the son, died on Friday, and Dr. Abram, the father, died on Sunday following, and the funeral was a double one. This was in December, 1847.

Dr. Abram Breneman, Jr., married Miss Anna Reigart, daughter of the late Henry M. Reigart, whose homestead and mill were in East Hempfield township, afterward postmaster of Lancaster, who died just one month before James Buchanan was elected President of the United States, in 1856. Mrs. Breneman entered into rest in 1881, aged sixty-one years. Her family, famous for generations in the annals of the county, was represented in the Revolution by Lieut. Col. Adam Reigart, of the 2d Pennsylvania Line, in the campaign of New Jersey and Long Island. She was the mother of five children, two daughters, Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Calder and Miss Emma M. Breneman, having entered into rest. The survivors are Henry R.; John S., a coal dealer of Lancaster, and Prof. Abram A., a distinguished chemist in New York City, who held a professorship at State College for a time, later a professorship at Cornell University, was vice-president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and for a time editor of the Chemical News.

Henry Reigart Breneman was born on one of his grandfather's farms, in Manheim township, was brought to Lancaster when only two weeks old, and, arriving at school age, was educated in private schools until he entered the high school, from which he was graduated in 1857. He graduated from State College in 1862, by special permission receiving his diploma from the latter institution in advance of Commencement Day, in order to allow him to enter the army. He enlisted in the 12th P. V. C., entering the service as a private and being discharged as adjutant of the regiment. At the close of the war Gov. Geary commissioned him as major. His term of service lasted from Sept. 6, 1862, to July 31, 1865, when he was discharged by reason of the close of the war. Serving under Gen. Kelly, Gen. Averell and Gen. Sheridan, in West Virginia, and the Valley of the Shenandoah campaign, Major Breneman was taken prisoner by the Confederates at Rocky Gap, W. Va., near the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, while holding the rear, at the close of a two days' battle, against a superior force, during withdrawal on Aug. 27, 1863, and he was confined in various "prison pens," including Belle Isle, Andersonville, Savannah, and Millen, Ga., for fifteen months. At the close of the war, Major Breneman entered the coal business in Lancaster, remaining in same for ten years, and then embarked in the real estate and insurance business, in which he is at present engaged. He was treasurer of the Champion Blower & Forge Company for ten years; was a member of the school board of the city for nine years; president of the Peoples Building, Loan and Deposit Company; and secretary of the Lancaster County Monumental Association, from date of organization, having superintended the erection of the soldiers' monument in the Square at Lancaster.

Major Breneman, as he is familiarly known, married Miss Eleonora de Welden Breneman, daughter of the late A. N. Breneman, who was for many years the most prominent shoe merchant in Lancaster. Two daughters were born of this union—Miss Carolyn, a teacher and a gifted painter; and Miss Minnie, who entered into rest ten years ago. Major Breneman is a Republican in politics, and in religion an Episcopalian, having been a vestryman of St. James' Episcopal Church for ten years or more. He is a member of the George H. Thomas Post, No. 84, G. A. R., of which he has twice been commander and is now trustee; a member of the Union Veteran Legion, of which he was colonel for one term; and a member of Encampment No. 14. The recital of his experiences in the cavalry and as a prisoner of war for fifteen months, would "fill a big book," and a most thrilling one it would be, and yet, such is his modesty and reserve, he seldom, if ever, refers to it unless drawn out on the subject by those of his friends who know his history and love to hear him relate the more interesting incidents.

SAMUEL MILLER (deceased). Many of the comfortable old homes of Lancaster county have been bereft of the heads of the household, who through long years have exerted in the community good influences and have set examples of upright living. When Death calls these from earth, both family and neighborhoods mourn. Such was notably the case when Samuel Miller, who had passed his life in Sadsbury township, and was well and widely known, was called hence on Nov. 21, 1890, at the age of seventy-three.

The birth of Samuel Miller was in the log cabin built by his grandfather, on the farm now occupied by the widow of the former. Here Heronimus and Mary (Duffy) Miller settled at a very early day, cleared up this fine farm and in turn left it to their offspring. Here they reared a family of five children: Samuel; William; Sarah, who married William Knott; Catherine, who married Mrs. Moffet; and John, all of these having long since been gathered to their ancestors.

John and Anna (Murphy) Miller, parents of Samuel Miller, both of Lancaster county, were farming people and settled on the old Miller homestead, where the father died in 1840, at the age of sixty-five years, and the mother, ten years later, at the age of fifty-six. Their children were: Samuel; Anna, who died in youth; Mary J., unmarried, who lives with Mrs. Miller on the old homestead; and William, a blacksmith, who married Sarah Nicholson, and died in February, 1874, at the age of fifty-two years, the father of the following children: John (deceased), Mary (who died in infancy), Ella (who married John Barr, lives in Harrisburg), William (deceased), Miranda (who is the widow of Jefferson Fritz, and resides with Mrs. Miller), Mary (who is the widow of Charles Sparver, of Harrisburg) and Frank (who resides also in Harrisburg).

Through life Samuel Miller pursued agriculture and was regarded as an excellent farmer and most worthy citizen. Although he believed in the principles of the Democratic party, he was never a politician, and never desired public office. Pursuing the even tenor of his way, he lived the honest, upright life of a kind neighbor, good husband and father, and loyal friend. For seventy-three years he was known in one locality. His remains were laid to rest in the Union Presbyterian cemetery in Bart township, he having been a supporter and attendant of the Presbyterian Church, with which his most estimable widow is connected by membership.

On March 29, 1842, Samuel Miller was married in Lancaster, Pa., to Hettie E. Hill, and the children born to this union were: Martha, who married Isaac Wence, a farmer near Harrisburg; John, who died young; Samuel, a farmer in Sadsbury township, who married Lizzie Rowe; Ashmer, deceased; and Howard, who lives unmarried with his honored mother.

The birth of Hettie E. (Hill) Miller occurred near Wilmington, Del., Dec. 25, 1821. Her parents were John and Martha (Phillips) Hill, of Wilmington, where they spent their lives, with the exception of the years 1839-40 spent in Lancaster county. Father Hill died in 1843, at the age of seventy-five years, the mother dying in 1824, at the age of fifty-six years, the latter belonging to the Society of Friends. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hill were: Maria, who married John Rumor, is deceased; John, deceased; Ellen, who died in youth; Hannah, who lived unmarried, and died in advanced years; and Hettie E., who became Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Miller is one of the universally respected ladies of Sadsbury township, where she has lived so long. Beloved by her family and esteemed through the neighborhood, few heads of families command more affection. Her hospitality is well known and so vigorous is she in mind and body that there is every hope that so lovable a character may long be spared in the old home.

JACOB SHANK, a representative farmer of Manor township, belongs to a very old and highly respected family of Lancaster county.

The first of whom we have any record was John Shank, a native of Switzerland, who located here about 1740, and purchased a tract of government land in Manor township, consisting of some 400 acres of Central Manor, which has been transformed by the family into one of the finest farms of the county and is still in their possession, being now occupied by Abraham Shank. John Shank devoted his attention to the improvement and cultivation of this place until called to his final rest when in middle life. He was a large man of powerful physique. Before leaving his native land, he married a Miss Gingerich, a daughter of Hans Gingerich, and to them were born eight children: Henry, the grandfather of Jacob; Daniel, who went to Indiana, where he died at the advanced age of ninety years; John, who remained in Lancaster county, but left no descendants here as his only son died unmarried, and his daughter, Mrs. Philip Borger, went West; Michael, who also went to Indiana; Elizabeth, wife of Martin Funk; Martha, who died unmarried; Mrs. Gashan; and Mrs. Shupp.

Henry Shank, our subject's grandfather, was born in 1755, and spent his entire life on the old farm in Manor township, where he died at the extreme old age of ninety-seven years, seven months and twenty-six days. He married Barbara, daughter of Abram Hostetter, and they became the parents of five children: Christian, a farmer, who died unmarried at the age of forty years; John, who married a Miss Strickler and died at the same age; Henry, the father of Jacob; Abram, a farmer of Manor township, also deceased; and Elizabeth, who married Henry Hoover, a Mennonite minister, and had four sons, who grew to maturity and moved to Clark county, Ohio.

Henry Shank, Jr., father of Jacob, was born June 9, 1791, and died Feb. 7, 1869. He was reared on the old homestead and at the age of twenty-one began teaming between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, following that pursuit for several years. With his team he was pressed into service during the war of 1812, but was retained only for a short time. About 1821 he married Miss Barbara Shellenberger, a daughter of Henry Shellenberger, and by that union he had the following children: Henry, born in December, 1822, who followed farming and died unmarried, March 28, 1897; Barbara, the wife of John Dietrich, of Manor township; Isaac, a farmer of the same township; Abraham, a farmer of Cumberland county, Pa., who married Rebecca Bender and has two daughters; and Benjamin, a resident of Manor township, Lancaster county. For his second wife the father married Mrs. Barbara (Kauffman) Fry, widow of Adam Fry, and the only child born of this union was Jacob, whose name introduces this sketch. The mother died in 1856, at the age of fifty-six years.

Jacob Shank was born May 12, 1836, and was reared on the farm in Manor township, his education being obtained in the common schools of Prospect Hill. At the age of sixteen he commenced learning the blacksmith's trade with Samuel Grash, of that township, and followed that occupation for six years. After his marriage he turned his attention to farming, operated rented land for six years and then purchased a small tract of his brother Isaac, near Central Manor, which he made his home until 1874, when he bought eighteen and a half acres where he now resides. In connection with farming he has followed butchering among the farmers for thirty years.

On July 22, 1858, Mr. Shank was united in marriage with Miss Lydia Funk, who was born in Manor township, Aug. 27, 1840, a daughter of John and Mary (Herr) Funk. Seven children were born to them. (1) Barbara died in childhood. (2) John, a mechanic of Washington borough, wedded Mary Shank and they have five children, Minerva, Minnie, Daniel, Ruth and John. (3) Kate is the wife of Albert Ulmer, of Manor township, who was born in Columbia, and they have one child, Jacob S. (4) Mary is the wife of Joseph Zinkand, an employe in the rolling mill at Columbia, and they have two children, John H. and Annie. (5) Amanda, (6) Jacob and (7) Elizabeth are all at home. The family are among the most worthy and respected citizens of the county. Mr. Shank affiliates with the Republican party and has served as supervisor two terms. He has in his possession two family heirlooms in the shape of Bibles, one printed in 1536, the other in 1580.

ISAAC SLATER GEIST, late editor and proprietor of the Marietta Times, was born March 5, 1832, in Manheim township, Lancaster county, a member of a family that has long been established in Pennsylvania. The first representative in this country was George Geist, Sr., who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, and many years after his marriage started for America, accompanied by his wife and five children, Simon, Leonard, George, Mary and Rosina. The last named died on the voyage and was buried at sea.

The family landed in Philadelphia in 1750, and the sons, Simon and Leonard, soon afterward apprenticed themselves to a man named Slaymaker, in Strasburg, to pay the expense of the voyage and relieve their parents of that burden. After a brief sojourn in Morris county, N. J., the family removed to Virginia, where the father engaged in farming. Later, however, he returned to Morris county, where he died. One of his brothers, Philip, came to this country from Germany in 1753, and settled at Strasburg, Lancaster county. His son, Philip, Jr., became one of the most prominent Whig politicians of the county, served as commissioner in 1853, and filled other local offices.

Simon Geist, the eldest son of George Geist, Sr., was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Bachman, whose father, Felix Bachman, was a large land owner in the southeastern part of Lancaster county. Their children were: Margaret; Mrs. Elizabeth Hood, who died in Ohio; Jacob, a resident of Ohio; George; Henry; Mrs. Barbara Fogel; Mrs. Susan McCord, of Colerain township; Sarah, who died unmarried; and Mrs. Rachel Pickle. Leonard, the second son of George Geist, Sr., married a Miss Pickle, and made his home near Pittsburg.

George Geist, Jr., was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, April 18, 1739, and after coming to this country was apprenticed to a farmer, Daniel Roger, residing in Manheim township, five miles north of Lancaster City, until twenty-one years old. Afterward purchasing land, he became the owner of 120 acres of land near Neffsville, where he resided until his death, Oct. 21, 1821, at the age of eighty-two years, five months and twenty-four days. George Geist, Jr., was twice married. His first wife was Barbara Wolfe, and after her death he married her sister Susan. Their children were seven in number, namely: Jacob married and lived near Lancaster, Ohio; Elizabeth, wife of George Kraft, died in Manheim township; George, Jr., married Mary Burkenhouse, and for his second wife chose Miss Mary Johnson; Andrew married Anna Baker, and they lived in Erie until his death, at the age of ninety-five years; Susan became the wife of Rev. Michael Witman, of Manheim borough; Daniel married Elizabeth Tuft and lived in Pennsylvania; John married Mary Slater. The latter's father, Capt. John Slater, was the first merchant of Neffsville. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, enlisting in 1778 in Col. Hollenbach's regiment, and serving as captain of his company until mustered out, Aug. 26, 1780. Capt. Slater had a liberal education and for some years taught school. He opened the first dry-goods store in Fiddler's Green (now Neffsville), and also served as postmaster at that place.

John Geist, the father of our subject, was born in Manheim township, Jan. 25, 1787, and received meager educational advantages. His life was that of a farmer, his home being near Neffsville. Politically he was a Whig in early life, and later a strong advocate of Republican principles. In religious belief he was a Lutheran, in which faith he died Oct. 18, 1863, aged seventy-six years, eight months and twenty-three days. His wife, Mary, who was born Sept. 28, 1791, in East Lampeter township, died May 22, 1863, aged seventy-one years, seven months and twenty-four days. She was a devout member of the Presbyterian Church. John and Mary Geist had issue: Daniel S. and John S., twins, were born June 27, 1813, the latter dying Dec. 4, 1888; Jacob, born Dec. 26, 1818, lives in Dayton, Ohio; Samuel S., born June 24, 1820, lives in Manheim township; Henry and Mary, twins, were born Feb. 26, 1823, and the latter, Mrs. Augustus Sigltner, is now living on the old homestead in Manheim township; Barbara was born Jan. 30, 1826, is the wife of William Fritz, a carpenter of Leacock township; Abram, born May 12, 1829, is a resident of Manheim township; Isaac Slater and Rebecca, twins, born March 5, 1832, and the former is the subject of this sketch; the latter, unmarried, is living in Lancaster. Susan, the youngest, born March 2, 1836, is the wife of John Long, of Womelsdorf, Berks county.

Isaac Slater Geist was educated in the schools of Manheim township, Whitehall Academy, at Harrisburg, and the Millersville State Normal, graduating from the scientific department of the latter institution in 1861. Prior to this he taught a number of terms of school, being thus engaged in Illinois a short time. On his return East he took his scientific course, and then taught one year, after which he was for four years professor of natural sciences of Millersville State Normal School. On returning to Marietta he became principal of the high school, which position he held until 1888. Altogether he was employed for thirty-six years as principal of schools. In 1886 he purchased the Marietta Times, which he edited and published until his death.

Editor Geist was an active Republican and one of the leaders of his party in this section of the county. After retiring as principal of the high school he served as director of the Home Building & Loan Association. He belonged to Ashara Lodge, No. 398, F. & A. M., of which he was secretary for twenty-five years; Corinthian Chapter, No. 224, and Cyrene Commandery, No. 34, K. T. In the Presbyterian Church of Marietta he served as deacon. Mr. Geist was married October 26, 1865, to Miss Margaret, daughter of Frederick Franck, of Marietta.

HON. AMOS H. MYLIN, ex-senator and ex-auditor-general of the State of Pennsylvania, lives in the historic home in West Lampeter township which was built by his great-grandfather, but which has been remodeled and modernized by its present occupant. In Rupp's "History of Lancaster County" appears a full-page illustration of this fine old mansion, which was built by Martin and Ann Meylin (as the name was then spelled) in 1740, and the same history has this to say of the dwelling: "They built what was then called a palace of sandstone. It was, in 1742, one of the most stately mansions in the county, and as the Mennonites were a plain people, and Martin Meylin an active member, the house was not only considered too palace-like, but the appearance of it might, as the Mennonites reasoned, strengthen their enemies in prejudicing the government against them. The Bishop, Hans Tschantz, with his elders and assistants, having repaired to the humble cottage hard by the stately mansion and organized the meeting, Martin Meylin was summoned and questioned, but he stated that he consulted only his comfort, and had no sinister views in building the mansion." So says Historian Rupp. Of course the trouble finally ended and the grand old building remained to give shelter and comfort to unborn generations; and it stands to-day, a proud monument to the progressiveness and liberality of Hon. Amos H. Mylin's great-grandfather.

Amos H. Mylin was born in the old homestead where he still lives, in West Lampeter township, Sept. 29, 1837, son of Martin Mylin. He is descended from one of those Mennonite families who, in 1709, emigrated from Canton Schaffhausen, Switzerland, to the New World, seeking that religious peace and freedom denied them in the Old. They were a vigorous race, and transplanted with them the intense love of home which has ever been a characteristic, so that the first resting-place that gave them welcome in the New World became their fixed and permanent abode.

Born and reared among such influences, Amos H. Mylin inherited the sturdy character and unswerving integrity of his ancestors, and growing up in the home established by them has developed a strong, honest and rugged manhood. Through his own unaided efforts he laid the foundation of a liberal education in the public schools of his native county, and at Charlotteville, N. Y., completing his studies at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. Although leaving that institution with a thorough knowledge of the classics and a perfect mastery of the German language, he has never ceased to regret his inability to pursue the full collegiate course of study for which he was preparing himself while in Andover. Failing health thwarted his ambition, and he had to return home.

On his return to Lancaster county Mr. Mylin worked around the neighborhood, husking corn, cutting wood, etc., and in 1861 began to read law with the late A. Herr Smith, of Lancaster, afterward Congressman from this district. His studies were stopped in 1862 by his enlistment in the 10th Regiment of Pennsylvania Emergency Men, but he resumed them on his return, at the University Law School, in Philadelphia, graduating in 1864. He practiced his profession in Lancaster for four years. But office work did not agree with this farmer boy, and his health again broke down, so he abandoned the law and went back to the old homestead, where he has since lived and tilled the farm. Always active in Republican politics, in 1872 his neighbors insisted that he run for a seat in the Lower House of the Legislature. He was nominated and elected without leaving his farm for one day's canvassing, an auspicious beginning to a legislative career that lasted exactly twenty years. At the expiration of his third term he was nominated for the State Senate, and continuously represented Lancaster county in that body from 1876 to 1892. His services were given on some of the most important committees of both Houses, and he was twice chairman of the Senate Appropriations committee, and for several sessions was chairman of the committee on Education. During the long special session of 1883, and the regular session of 1885, he was president pro-tem of the Senate.

In 1891 Senator Mylin was a candidate for the nomination of auditor-general, and had over sixty votes in the State convention but Gen. David M. Gregg won the nomination. Although disappointed, the former went to work for the ticket as vigorously as ever. His friends all over the State did not forget him, and when he announced his candidacy in 1894 they rallied around him with a unanimity that assured his nomination from the start, and he was triumphantly elected. Senator Mylin was well qualified for the position. There was hardly a law in the statute books that he had not helped to frame, alter or amend. In the legislation affecting corporations, consequent upon the adoption of the new Constitution, he took part, while his services on the Appropriations committees had thoroughly familiarized him with the State's expenditures, and the workings and needs of institutions receiving State appropriations. His long legislative career was the highest evidence of the esteem in which he was held by those who knew him best, his friends and neighbors. His private life had been one of thrift and economy—a fit training for that particular servant of the people who passes upon the people's bills, and this, together with his unimpeachable honesty, his diversified knowledge, and his marked sympathy with the agricultural interests of a great commonwealth, united to make him a model auditor-general.

Since his retirement from the auditor-general's office Senator Mylin, for he is known to the whole community by the title he so long bore with much credit to himself and his constituents, has lived quietly on his farm, looking after his home interests. He married Mrs. Carrie Powell, of Williamsport, Pa., an accomplished lady, who is descended from a Revolutionary family, and is an active member of the Daughters of the Revolution. She is also a member of the Iris Club, and is one of the leaders in the local circles of Lancaster society. Two daughters were born to Mrs. Mylin's first union: Carrie and Elizabeth (who married Mr. Parvin). By her union with Senator Mylin three children have been born, Barbara, Helen and Mercy, all of whom are at school. The Senator is prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of the chapter and the Knights Templar.

A genial and forceful man, unostentatious in manner, with a kindly greeting for all whom he encounters, it is not a matter for wonder that Senator Mylin has been for so many years one of the most popular men in all Lancaster county—"Honest" Amos Mylin, as he is familiarly and lovingly called by hosts of people. His acquaintance with prominent men all over the State gives him a prestige that has seldom been enjoyed, to the same extent, by one of Lancaster county's citizens.

GEORGE HAMBRIGHT (deceased) was in his active life one of the most reputable citizens of Mount Joy and Rapho townships, where his manly character, strong sense of honesty, and instinctive readiness to help onward every good work and word in the neighborhood, made him one of the most useful men of his times. He was born May 2, 1821, in Rapho township, and he died in the village of Florin, Mount Joy township, Feb. 9, 1896, almost reaching the age of seventy-five years, and he was buried in the Florin cemetery beside his first wife who preceded him to the grave about twenty-five years.

Adam and Rebecca (Hossler) Hambright, his parents, lived and died in Rapho township, and were buried in the graveyard adjoining Hossler's meeting house, Rapho township, at advanced ages. They followed farming, and the father also carried on carpentering and cabinet making. To them were born two children, as follows: Susan, who was married to a Mr. Musselman, of Cumberland county; and George, as noted above. Mr. and Mrs. Musselman lived together in Cumberland county some years, but their married life was cut short, as the wife was burned to death while boiling soap at her home. Adam Hambright, the father, had four brothers, who were all prominent citizens of Lancaster city and vicinity, all reaching advanced ages. They were as follows: Frederick, George, Martin and Michael Hambright.

On Oct. 20, 1842, George Hambright was married to Catharine Baker, of Rapho township. After successfully carrying on farming for some years in Rapho township, they removed to Florin, Mount Joy township, and lived a retired life. They were blessed with but one child, a daughter, Mary, born Sept. 21, 1843, who was united in marriage to Henry P. Breneman, of Mount Joy township, and at present they live a retired life in Florin.

Mrs. Catharine (Baker) Hambright was born March 9, 1824, in Mount Joy township, and after living a retired life only a few years with her husband in Florin died about 1870, and was buried in the Florin cemetery. She, together with her husband, lived a Christian and righteous life and they were well liked by the whole community.

George Hambright was married, in 1874, to Miss Fanny Peters Breneman, of Mount Joy township, and they became the parents of these children: (1) Benjamin B., born near Breneman's school house in Mount Joy township, March 31, 1875, received a common school education, and while yet young commenced working on the farm and is now a successful and prosperous farmer near Florin, Mount Joy township. On June 4, 1900, he was married to Miss Alice Caslow, second in a large family of children born to Albert Caslow and wife, of Mt. Joy township. (2) Amos B., born Aug. 20, 1876, near Breneman's school house, Mount Joy township, after attending school until the age of sixteen commenced the study of telegraphy. He now lives in the village of Landisville, where he is employed as telegraph operator and towerman for the Pennsylvania Railroad. On June 15, 1899, he was married to Miss Elizabeth S. Yetter, youngest daughter of William P. Yetter and wife, of Bachmanville, Dauphin county, and they have had two children: William Russel, born June 26, 1900, at Florin, and died at the age of ten days; and Irene Elizabeth, born June 16, 1901, at Florin. (3) George B., born Jan. 25, 1878, at Florin, received a common school education and then commenced the study of telegraphy and was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad at the age of nineteen years. He was, however, soon stricken down with poor health, and lingered until Sept. 20, 1900, when he died from tuberculosis, and was buried on the family plot in the Florin cemetery. (4) John B., born at Florin, May 5, 1883, attended the village school and the Mount Joy High school for several years, and at the age of nineteen years, entered Lebanon Valley College at Annville, Pennsylvania.

In politics George Hambright was a Republican, and followed farming in the early part of his life, but never held any public office. He was an honest and upright man, and is well remembered as an exceedingly industrious and earnest man who wished to do his full share in the work of life. He was a Christian man in the fullest sense, nearly all his life, and in his young manhood was a member of the United Brethren Church in Rapho township, and the last few years was a member of the same church at Florin, where he set up a good example for his family in the Christian work.

Mrs. Fanny (Breneman) Hambright, the youngest in a family of eight children, was born near Breneman's school house in Mount Joy township, Dec. 25, 1841. After the death of her husband she remained living at their home in Florin, with her children living close around her. Her parents were Benjamin and Nancy Breneman, who were of old and conspicuous families and wealthy and progressive farmers near Breneman's school house in Mount Joy township. Benjamin Breneman served many years as a school director in his township, and he was the principal promoter of education in his vicinity, it being chiefly through his efforts that the school house was built which now still bears his name. Benjamin Breneman and his wife were Christian people, and died at advanced ages, and were buried in the graveyard adjoining Kraybill's Mennonite meeting house in East Donegal township.

George Hambright, the subject of this sketch, retired from the farm before his second marriage, when he moved from his farm in Rapho township to the village of Florin and gave up active labor. The proprietor of an extensive farm, he was not obliged to do severe labor and took delight in making a way for those who needed work. As a kind hearted and upright man he had many friends and his loss is still felt in the community.

GEORGE HILDEBRAND RANCK, of New Holland, at present postmaster and editor of the New Holland Clarion, was born in Mifflinburg, Union Co., Pa., Feb. 2, 1843, but he is practically a son of Lancaster County, as his parents were born and reared in this county and after a two years residence in Mifflinburg returned to their native county.

The Ranck family is of German origin, coming from Wurtemberg, and the ancestors of our subject were among the pioneer settlers of eastern Pennsylvania, having emigrated to this county, taking up land in the eastern part, in 1726. Other branches of the family settled in Berks and Lebanon counties, where many of their descendants have become prominent citizens. We cannot give the chain of descent complete, but John Philip Ranck, the great-grandfather of George H. was a farmer in East Cocalico township. He was married to a Miss Haas, a descendant of another German pioneer family, and they had four sons—James, Philip, David and Isaac—and five daughters—Nancy, Mrs. James DeHaven; Mary, Mrs. George Miller; Barbara, Mrs. Ream; Elizabeth, Mrs. Bander; and Mrs. Richmond. David removed to Ohio and engaged in farming near Dayton; James was similarly engaged in Chester county; and Philip and Isaac were also farmers in this county. All attained to a great age, except Isaac who died at the age of thirty-three. The ages of the others ranged from eighty-five to ninety-six.

Isaac Ranck was the grandfather of our subject. He was born about 1794, and married Margaret Swope, a descendant, in the third generation, of Yost Swope, who emigrated from Wurtemberg, Germany, and settled in Upper Leacock township, this county, in 1723. Three sons were born of this union: John, who was a tailor and resided in Kentucky, where he died in 1882; Daniel, a potter, who died in New Holland in 1894; and Isaac, who resides in northern California.

Daniel Ranck, our subject's father, was born in East Cocalico township, March 14, 1819, and was educated in the district schools of that period. He learned the pottery trade, then an important industry in this county, and in 1842, soon after his marriage, removed to Mifflinburg; Union county, where he worked at his trade two years. Moving back to Springville, Lancaster county, he resided there two years, when he moved to Leacock township, where he continued at his trade until 1891, when he retired and located in New Holland, where he died in 1894. His wife was Anna Hildebrand, daughter of Michael Hildebrand (3), a grandson of Michael Hildebrand, who emigrated from the Palatinate, Germany, and settled near New Holland in 1738. His son, Michael, was a member of Jenkin's battalion in the army of the Revolution. The wife of Michael Hildebrand (3) was Barbara Weaver, a descendant of another German pioneer family in Pennsylvania, that settled near New Holland in 1721. Daniel and Anna Ranck were both members of the Lutheran Church, in which he served as a deacon for a number of years. Mrs. Ranck died March 26, 1900, in her eighty-first year. They had two children: George H.; and Catharine Elizabeth. The latter was twice married, first to Cyrus Rutter, and subsequently to Jacob Diffenderfer. Four children are yet living by the first marriage: Daisy, wife of J. J. Shirk, of Pequea; Cora, wife of Adam Fry, of New Holland; Newton, of Blue Ball; and Jennie, wife of F. W. Oehme, of New Holland. By her second marriage she has one daughter, Elsie.

George H. Ranck received a fair education, attending the public schools and also a private school in New Holland. At the age of eighteen he became a teacher which calling he followed eight years, his last term being as principal of the New Holland schools. In 1869 he purchased a small job printing outfit from John Black, in New Holland, and continued at this business until 1873, when The Clarion, a weekly newspaper, was founded by him and J. W. Sandoe, from Waynesboro, Franklin county. This partnership continued until 1878, when Mr. Sandoe withdrew, and Mr. Ranck has continued in charge up to this time, a period of thirty years. The Clarion is an eight page paper, 16x22 inches in size, and has a general circulation throughout this section of the county, and has become one of the necessary fixtures of the community, whose worth would be fully realized were it to drop out of existence. The job printing department of the establishment has always been noted for its attractive and artistic work, and this department has always had a good patronage.

In politics Mr. Ranck is a Republican, and he has always taken an active part in political affairs. He served one term of five years from 1871 to 1876 as justice of the peace; six years, from 1882 to 1888, as school director; seven years, from 1882 to 1889, as notary public; was a member of the county committee for several years; was twice elected a delegate to the State Convention; was a member of the State Legislature in 1889-90; was elected the first burgess of New Holland when the town was incorporated in 1895; and was appointed postmaster at New Holland in 1897, which position he still holds. In every enterprise tending to advance the interests and promote the welfare of the community he has always taken an active part and by his personal aid and his influence through the columns of The Clarion has done some good service to the community.

Mr. Ranck was joined in wedlock on May 20, 1866, to Ann Elizabeth Hollingsworth, a daughter of the late Samuel Hollingsworth, a furniture manufacturer of New Holland, and a granddaughter of the late Abraham DeHaven, a prominent farmer near New Holland. Five children were born of this union: a daughter who died at birth; Ivan Luther, who is foreman of the Clarion Printing House; Anna Mary, assistant postmaster; Bertha Virginia, who died in 1883, at the age of seven years and six months; and Elizabeth Etta, a clerk in the post office.

Mr. Ranck is a member and a past grand of Earl Lodge No. 413, I. O. O. F.; and past president of Washington Camp, No. 40, P. O. S. of A. He has also been district president of the Lancaster Eastern District, of the State Camp of the latter order. He is also a member of the Pennsylvania-German Society, and of the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association. At the age of fifteen years he was admitted to membership in Trinity Lutheran Church, New Holland, and he has always taken an active part in church work, serving as a deacon from 1871 to 1884, and as an elder since the latter date. He has also been treasurer of the Sunday-school since 1870, a teacher in the Sunday-school since 1869, and he has served as delegate to meetings of the church conference and synod a number of times.

JOHN HESS, in his day one of the successful agriculturists of Salisbury township, was a descendant of the Hess family which has been established in Lancaster county for several generations and has been closely identified with its development and progress, especially along agricultural lines. They have been honorable and honored citizens from the time of their settlement, nearly two centuries ago, and the gentleman whose name introduces these lines was a worthy representative of a worthy name.

About 1709 a Swiss colony came to this region, and among the settlers were Samuel Hess and his two brothers, the first of the name in America. Samuel located at Pequea. He had a large family, and one of his sons, Jacob, in 1734, took up a tract of two hundred acres lying one mile east of Lititz, in what is now Warwick township. The property has remained in the family ever since, being now occupied by James H. Hess. Jacob Hess resided with his father on the old homestead until his death in 1778; he was interred in the family burying-ground. He had eight daughters and two sons, the latter named Christian and John.

Christian Hess, the father of John, passed the greater part of his life in Paradise township, where he built and conducted a woolen mill, operating what is now the Hunsecker mill for many years. He passed his latter years in retirement from active business, and during this period served as poor commissioner of Lancaster county. His death occurred in Paradise township. He married Elizabeth Rupp, and they had children as follows: Christian; Moses, a farmer of Duncannon, Pa.; Henry; John; Samuel; Mary, Mrs. Cyrus Royer; Eliza, who also married Cyrus Royer; Nancy, Mrs. David Groff; and Barbara, Mrs. George Hiltenbrand, all now deceased.

John Hess was born Dec. 27, 1821, in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, and passed his entire life on the homestead where he was born, engaging in farming. The place comprised sixty-five acres, and Mr. Hess was successfully occupied with its cultivation throughout his active years. He was industrious and progressive, and ranked among the best farmers of his day in Salisbury township, where he was likewise highly respected for his sterling traits of character. His integrity was never questioned, and he retained the esteem of all with whom he came in contact, in either business or social relations.

On March 7, 1854, in Leacock township, Mr. Hess was united in marriage with Miss Harriet Ann Rutter, and children as follows came to their union: Amos S., who was born March 24, 1855, is a farmer by occupation, lives on the old homestead, married Margaret Eby, Jan. 20, 1880, and has had three children, Elizabeth, Leroy and John; Ida, born Aug. 11, 1857, died May 17, 1862; John R., born Nov. 2, 1859, a merchant at Gap, Lancaster county, who married Eva Snodgrass, and has two children, Ralph and Ruth; Henry, born April 30, 1862, a farmer and miller in Salisbury township, who married Elizabeth Hershey, and has had four children, Clyde, Harry, Willis and Harriet; Elvira J., born June 25, 1864, who married Jacob Ranck, a farmer of Paradise township, and has three children, Bessie, Elwood and Anna; Jacob, born March 7, 1866, unmarried, and residing with his mother at Gap; Eli, born April 25, 1868, a merchant at New Holland, this county, who married Barbara Frantz, and has one child, Edith; Hannah E., born Oct. 29, 1869, who is the wife of Ephraim Eby, a farmer of Gap, and has four children, Ralph, Ross, Wilbur and Evelyn.

John Hess passed away April 11, 1871, at his home in Salisbury township, and was laid to rest in the cemetery of Christ Church, in Leacock township. Though not a church member, he was a regular attendant of that church, and contributed liberally toward its support. He was a Democrat in political sentiment. Mrs. Harriet Ann (Rutter) Hess, who survives her husband, was born May 20, 1834, in Leacock township, daughter of Eli and Elizabeth (Skiles) Rutter, of that township.

DAVID B. LEVENITE, a well-known and prominent business man of Millersville, is a native of Manor township, Lancaster county, and was born Sept. 28, 1843.

Samuel W. Levenite, the founder of the Lancaster county family bearing his surname, was born in York county, Pa., in 1810, and when a young man settled in Manor township, Lancaster county, engaged in distilling and later in farming, as well as in teaming between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. Mr. Levenite is virtually the business manager, and by his fair dealing has won for himself and his firm hundreds of warm and steadfast friends.

The marriage of David B. Levenite with Miss Elizabeth Nunamacher, daughter of William and Anna Mary (Fox) Nunamacher, has been favored with four children, viz: Sallie A., born Oct. 8, 1869, now in the employ of J. B. Joy townships, respectively. In 1821 they settled on the farm where their son Philip is now living, and there the mother died in 1845, at the age of fifty-one years, after which the bereaved father retired from active farm work and made his home in Elizabethtown, where he died in 1871, at the age of seventy-six years. They were buried in the cemetery connected with the Lutheran Church of that place. The father was a man of considerable prominence in his active days, and served as school director six years. John and Catherine (Rehm) Albert, the maternal grandparents, were both born in Conestoga township, and there they spent their lives in farming.

Philip Fisher and Mrs. Fanny (Groff) McBride were married in Manheim, May 28, 1868, and to them was born one son, William, who died young. Philip Fisher has spent his life on the farm where he is now found with the exception of some two and a half years which he devoted to cabinet making in Elizabethtown, and some six months when he was working at his trade in Dauphin county. Mr. Fisher is a man of high character and good principles, and attends Zion Church with his wife. For some three years he served as school director and then declined farther continuance in that office.

ADAM KEEN. In striking contrast with the life of the average business man, who is drawn daily into the whirlpool of competition, excitement and bustle of the world, subjecting his mind to the temptations and allurements of fortune getting, we present a sketch of a successful farmer of Eden township, Lancaster Co., Pa., who, in early life, took as his standard, Virtue instead of gold. Mr. Keen is a descendant of a very old and respected family of his native county, and has inherited many of the traits that have long been a credit to the name. He was born in Eden township, near Quarryville, Sept. 8, 1830, his parents being Henry and Julia A. (Mower) Keen, who were both born in Lancaster county.

Henry Keen was the son of Henry and Elizabeth Keen, whose ancestors were German. They first settled in Berks county, and later came to Eden, where our subject's father grew to manhood. They raised a large family of sons and daughters, all of whom are dead.

Henry Keen, the father of our subject, settled in Eden township on a farm near the borough of Quarryville, where he purchased a large tract of land. He became one of the most prosperous farmers of his section. During his life he owned half a dozen good farms which he improved with buildings and barns. His last home was the one in which our subject resides. Henry Keen's first wife was Julia A. Mower, the mother of our subject. She died at the age of thirty-six, leaving seven children. His second wife was Mrs. Brubaker. She died in 1882 leaving no children. Mr. Keen died in 1879, leaving an honored name among the many who knew and respected him for excellent qualities of head and heart. In politics he was a staunch Republican and took an active part in party work. In religion he was a member of the German Reformed Church, and was always very active in church work, being one of the founders of the Providence Church.

David Keen, the eldest of this family, was born in Strasburg township in 1826. He married Miss Martha Herr, who was born and raised in Eden township, who was a daughter of John and Nancy Herr, one of Lancaster's old and prominent families. They resided on his farm near Quarryville, where he lives a retired life. His wife died in May, 1900, leaving a large family. Samuel Keen was born in 1829; he married Miss Mary Girvin, of this county. They now reside on one of his father's farms near Quarryville, and have a family of four children: Hiram, Ella, Anna and Grace. Mary Keen, the fourth child of Henry Keen, was born in 1833 and was the wife of Amos Wade, deceased, who resided in Drumore township. Julia A., another daughter, was born in 1835; she is the wife of Hiram Girvin, and now resides in Salisbury township. Henry Keen, born in 1839, married Miss Lydia Shaub, and they reside on his farm in Bart township, and have three children living: Sallie (wife of William Amment), Henry and Ella (both at home). Catherine Keen, the youngest of the children of Henry Keen, was born in 1841, and is the wife of John Johnston, who lives on one of her father's farms. They have no children.

Adam Keen, our subject, grew up on his father's farm in Eden, where he received a district school education. He remained with his father until he was thirty years of age. In December, 1859, he married Miss Mary A. Herr, daughter of John and Nancy Herr. Mrs. Keen was born in Eden township, March 8, 1840, and grew to young womanhood at the old home; where she acquired her education in the district schools. Her father died at the old home, leaving two daughters, Mrs. David Keen, and the wife of our subject. For almost half a century Mr. and Mrs. Keen have lived at their present home. In 1879 he purchased his father's last homestead, which is one of the finest farms in that section. To this couple have been born five children, as follows: Edith died in childhood. Susan C., born in 1860, married William Hess, who resides in Quarryville borough; they have ten children: Virgil (wife of Alvin Hess of Lancaster), Adam, Catherine, Odessa, Edith, William, Ernest, Ruth, Bertha, and Francis. William Keen, born in 1864, received an education in the local schools; he married Miss Lizzie Breneman, of Lancaster county and they now reside in Quarryville, where he is engaged in the business of contracting and building. They have no family. Harry Keen was born in 1869, and received a business education in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He is now a resident of Lancaster City and engaged in book-keeping for the firm of Metzger & Hollinger. He married Miss Frances Mylove, of Lancaster county, and they have one daughter, Lulu Keen. Emma Keen was born in 1872 and married George Gregg, of Chester county, Pa. They now reside in Chester county. They have four children, Millard, Mary, Blanch and Grace. Politically, socially and religiously our subject has given much thought to the betterment of the condition of his fellow men. In this as in all things he has been unselfish and conscientious. He has not asked for office, he has not bid for fame. Content to remain a plain but successful farmer, he has found the need of a great work at home. Mr. Keen and his wife have for thirty years been active in the support of the Reformed Church of Providence, of which they are devout members. Politically our subject is a Republican having been identified with the best interests of the party for many years. For over twenty years he has held the office of school director in Eden.

Unselfish devotion to principle, of which love is the foundation, has endeared this couple to all who have been brought in contact with them. A Christian companionship as man and wife covering a period of half a century, and blessed with children and grandchildren, and the love and esteem of many friends cannot fail to leave a lasting impression for good.

JOHN LINCOLN BRENEMAN (deceased) grew from boyhood to manhood among the citizens of Mt. Joy, Lancaster county, who ever held him in high esteem for his sterling integrity. He was born in Bermudian, Adams Co., Pa., Sept. 15, 1865, son of Templeton and Mary (Bosserman) Breneman.

Templeton Breneman was a native of York county, Pa., born in 1837, and his early life was spent in his home county and in Adams county. The public schools of York county afforded him ample facilities for acquiring a good education, and so well did he take advantage of his opportunities that he became one of the successful teachers of the county. In 1861 he went to Adams county and engaged in business, and in 1869 he located in Mt. Joy, where he still conducts a large dry-goods store. In Bermudian, Adams county, he married Mary, daughter of John and Catherine Bosserman, and by this union became the father of three children: John Lincoln; Della, wife of H. W. Hartman, of Lancaster; and Joseph Templeton, paying teller of the Lancaster Trust Company.

John Lincoln Breneman was educated in the schools of Mt. Joy, and began his business training by clerking in his father's store. He then became teller of the Mt. Joy National Bank, and for two years discharged the duties of that responsible position, at the end of that time associating himself with the Philip Frank Malting Company, in which he held the position of secretary and treasurer for a number of years prior to his decease.

Mr. Breneman wedded Miss Minnie Frank, daughter of Philip Frank, of Mt. Joy, and to their union came four children, two of whom are yet living: Joseph Templeton; Philip Frank, who died when eight months old; Mary Louisa, who died at the age of three months; and Catherine Frank. In his political views Mr. Breneman is a strong Republican, and he takes an active interest in the work of the party.

Philip Frank, father of Mrs. Breneman, and head of the Philip Frank Malting Company, is one of the most substantial business men in Lancaster county. He is a native of Baden, Germany, born Oct. 2, 1829. His education was obtained in the schools of his native land and he remained in his early home until 1851, when he came to this country. His first location in America was at Marietta, this county, where he arrived in April, and the following September he moved to Mt. Joy, where he found employment in the Hackman mill, just east of the town, laboring there industriously for five years. He had been studying the customs of the country and people preparatory to engaging in business on his own account, and in 1856 he built the extensive property and started the business which today bears his name, and which he has continued to conduct so successfully.

Mr. Frank has been twice married. By his first union he had three children: Maria, wife of Harry C. Shock; Minnie, Mrs. John L. Breneman; and Harry, now residing in Baltimore. Mr. Frank's present wife was Louisa Wagner, widow of Robert Briggs, of Philadelphia; to this marriage no children have been born.

The other, Jacob H., lived to become one of the most eminent physicians of Lancaster county, and is regarded as in every way reliable and trustworthy by the people of Millersville, with whom his lot is cast. The mother died in 1865, and the father was again married to Miss Elizabeth Waller, of Conestoga township, who became the mother of one son, Posco, who made his home with his father. Mr. Line was married on Feb. 22, 1874, to Miss Mary Fritz, who was born in Ephrata township, March 14, 1834, a daughter of George and Rebecca (Shaffer) Fritz. Mr. and Mrs. Fritz were natives of Berks county but they were among the old settlers in Lancaster county, where Mr. Fritz carried

Mr. and Mrs. Howett own the fine farm upon which they reside and there enjoy an almost ideal country home, surrounded with the advantages of rural life, while near enough to the village of Kirks Mills to enjoy the social features there.

Mr. Howett was married Nov. 20, 1873, to Miss Alice Wright, who was born Feb. 13, 1849, a daughter of James and Sidonia Wright, of Little Britain township. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Howett: Margaret, who is a teacher in the schools of Lancaster county; and Granville and Gilpen, at home.

Mrs. Howett's grandfather, Thomas Wright, came to America from Ireland and was an early settler in Southern Lancaster county. His children were: William, Thomas, Joseph, Samuel, John, Enoch, Jane, Margaret, James and Robert, all passed from earth. Ten children were born to the parents of Mrs. Howett: Mary Ann, Joseph L., Sidonia and Benjamin (deceased) the latter from the kick of a horse; Thomas, a resident of Rising Sun, Md.; Emily, deceased; Margaret, residing in Maryland, unmarried; James, a resident of Maryland; Elizabeth, of Little Britain township; and Alice, the wife of Mr. Howett.

Mr. Howett and family belong to the Presbyterian Church, where he is one of the liberal supporters of its Christian extension work, and he has long been an active and influential member of the Republican party. In the estimation of his locality Mr. Howett stands high, as one of the honorable citizens, good neighbors and reliable friends, whose influence may always be counted upon to be on the side of morality and education.

At the end of that period he came back to the old home in Colerain, and purchased the Moses Brinton farm, on which he made very general improvements. He has never married. Before he bought his present home, he sold his interest in the family patrimony to his brother John. He has always adhered to the old Democratic faith. He belongs to St. John's Lodge, No. 115, A. F. & A. M., at Philadelphia. Like others of his name he has taken a leading position in the community, and has passed a life free from reproach.

RICHARD J. DERRICK, the popular hotel keeper at Herrville, is well known and thoroughly liked in his section of Lancaster county.

Calvin A. Derrick, father of Richard J. Derrick, was born in Columbia, Pa., Aug. 10, 1829, and passed his early life in his native place, living at home until he was about twenty-one years of age. He was educated in the common schools of the county. His first position was with the Pennsylvania Railroad, known then as the State Railroad, where he was employed as fireman, and afterward promoted to the position of engineer. Mr. Derrick ran an engine over the road for years. After leaving the railroad he started in the butchering business, in Columbia, under the firm name of Wike & Derrick, and carried on this business for some years. He then bought a farm in Martic township, and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1890, in which year he retired, moving back to his birthplace, Columbia, where he died Feb. 18, 1899.

Calvin A. Derrick was a staunch Republican, but never sought office. Fraternally he was a member of the I. O. O. F., at Rawlinsville, and the K. P. at the same place. In religion he was a member of the German Reformed Church at Columbia. Richard Derrick married Miss Catherine Johnson of Lancaster, and to this union were born two children: Richard, subject of this sketch, and Mary, who died in childhood.

Richard J. Derrick was born in Columbia Dec. 31, 1857, received a common school education, and remained at home until he was twenty-seven years of age. He then went to Lancaster city, where for five years he held a position with the street car company. After this he went into the hotel business with John A. Shink. For about a year they ran a hotel on the southeast corner of the Square in Lancaster. For another year Mr. Derrick was at the "Engleside Hotel," after which he purchased the hotel of which he is now the proprietor.

On July 25, 1879, Mr. Derrick married Miss Annie Gochnauer, of Providence township, and they are the parents of two children: Milton, who lives at home; and Calvin A., who died in infancy.

Mr. Derrick takes a keen interest in the welfare of his community, and in business and social circles is respected and esteemed for his many sterling qualities. In politics he has always affiliated with the Republican party, but has never sought office. He is a member of Emanuel Lodge, No. 1104, I. O. O. F., of Lancaster; of Lodge No. 99, K. M., Lancaster; of the K. P. at Rawlinsville, in which order he has passed all the chairs; and of the G. E. C., at Rawlinsville, in which also he has passed all the chairs.

DR. THOMAS FRANCIS McELLIGOTT, one of the rising young professional men of Mt. Joy, has secured for himself the confidence and patronage of the public, and has been recognized as an able leader in the ranks of the Democratic party.

The birth of Dr. McElligott occurred in the city of Lancaster, Jan. 6, 1874, a son of Thomas F. and Clara L. (Norbeck) McElligott, the former of whom was a native of New York City and the latter of Gettysburg, Pa. Thomas F. McElligott was born a few days after the arrival of his parents in America from Ireland, and while still a child he accompanied them to Lancaster, and still resides there, where he has always taken a prominent position in the affairs of the city. Mr. McElligott is the efficient reporter of the Lancaster Intelligencer. Before he was twenty-one years old, he served as a city alderman, for twelve years acted on the school board and has been connected with many of the different organizations, political, fraternal and social, in the city. He was born in 1847, and his wife in 1851. They both are consistent members of the Catholic Church. Dr. McElligott is their only child. In politics, Mr. McElligott is a Democrat.

The paternal grandparents were Jeremiah and Anna McElligott, both of whom died in Lancaster county, where the former had followed the trade of blacksmith for many years, and at his death owned considerable land. The children born to Jeremiah and his wife were: Hannah, a resident of Lancaster county; and Thomas F., also of Lancaster. The maternal grandfather was Louis Norbeck, of Baltimore, Md., where he conducted a general store, and where he died, his wife passing away in Lancaster.

Dr. McElligott was reared in Lancaster, and for a time, about the age of eighteen, engaged in clerking, but his mind was fixed upon a professional career and in 1892 he entered the University of Pennsylvania, remaining two years and then going to the Philadelphia Dental College from which he was graduated on March 18, 1895, immediately opening up an office in Lancaster. In 1897 he removed to Mt. Joy, since which time he has been prominently identified with much of its public and official life. As an active Democrat he has been made president of the Democratic club, and he is fraternally connected with the Knights of St. John's and the Knights of St. Michaels, of Lancaster.

The marriage of Dr. McElligott took place on June 20, 1895, to Mary V. Gill, a daughter of James and Bridget (Gallagher) Gill, the former of Galway and the latter of Donegal, Ireland. One son has been born to the Doctor and his estimable wife, Thomas Giles. Of pleasing personality and professional skill, Dr. McElligott has won the confidence of the public and his practice is already an absorbing one. As a politician his ability has been remarked, and in social life, he has also become a factor. A student, he understands and makes use of all modern discoveries and some of his work has won for him much praise in the profession.

WILLIAM R. RICE, general farmer of Union Square, Rapho township, was born in Lebanon county, Feb. 17, 1844, son of Philip and Lucinda (Reinoehl) Rice, of Lebanon, Pa., the parents removing to Rapho township, where they remained thirty-two years on one farm, when they moved to another farm near Mastersonville, and then, in 1869 to the place where William R. Rice now resides.

Philip Rice, the father, was a farmer and shoemaker. He died in 1887, at the age of sixty years, and his wife followed him to the grave in 1894, at the age of seventy years. They are buried in the Mastersonville cemetery. They were members of the Lutheran Church. Their two children were: Miss Mary, who lives with her brother; and William R., the subject of this sketch.

On Nov. 27, 1873, Mr. Rice married Miss Maria

Shelley, of Lancaster. There have been born to this union the following children: Alice S., and Harvey S., who died young; and Lucetta S., Harry S., Philip S., Maria S., Katie S. and William S., all of whom are at home with their parents. Mrs. William R. Rice was born in Rapho township, July 31, 1851, daughter of Peter and Maria (Ritter) Shelley, of Rapho township, the former of whom was a farmer until about six years prior to his death, which occurred June 8, 1889, at the age of seventy-five years, and the latter died in September, 1874, at the age of fifty-six years. They are buried in Griders' Meeting House cemetery. Both were members of the German Baptist Church. To Peter Shelley and wife were born the following children: Anna R., widow of Benjamin Brubaker, of Manheim; Elizabeth R. (deceased), married to John Brubaker; Joseph R., deceased; Jacob R., supervisor of Manheim township; Harriet R., widow of Amos Brene-man, of Petersburg; Anthony R., deceased; Barbara R., widow of A. Chafner, of Manheim; Maria, wife of William R. Rice; John R., deceased; Peter R., a farmer of Rapho township; and Emma R., deceased. Mr. Rice has remained on his present farm since he moved on it in 1869, and he will undoubtedly pass the remainder of his days there. He is a Republican and takes some interest in politics, having been supervisor for three years. He is a thoroughly practical man, fully alive to the force of passing events, and a man of influence in his community. The family is well known and respected, and is widely known, Mr. Rice's father being a prominent and wealthy man of the township.

JOHN W. MCGINNIS has since 1895 successfully conducted the "Exchange Hotel" at Mt. Joy, Lancaster Co., Pa., which is the leading hostelry in the place. He was born in the city of Lancaster, June 12, 1861, a son of Thomas and Sarah (Parnell) McGinnis, representatives of old families in the county. In his native city he was reared and educated, and at the age of sixteen began learning the trade of coach trimmer, at which he was employed for seven years by D. Altie & Son. During the following three years he held a position as salesman with Abraham Springer Brown, and was then employed at the depot restaurant in Lancaster until coming to Mt. Joy in 1895. He is a man well adapted to his present business, being genial, obliging and progressive, and in this undertaking has been eminently successful.

Mr. McGinnis was married in 1880 to Miss Mary A. Snyder, also a native of Lancaster, and a daughter of Michael and Marguerite Snyder. By this union two children have been born, Mary S. and John A. In his social relations, Mr. McGinnis is a member of Lancaster Lodge No. 134, B. P. O. E.; Island City Lodge, No. 88, K. P.; and Fulton Castle, No. 10, K. G. E. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and takes advantage of any and all opportunities for promoting the advancement of his party's interests.

JOHN M. HAVERSTICK, son of Levi Haverstick, was born on the Haverstick homestead near Washington borough, Manor township, Lancaster county, Jan. 9, 1855, was educated in the common schools and was reared on the home farm as an assistant to his father, although the natural trend of his mind was toward mechanical pursuits; yielding to the persuasions and representations of his father, he continued on the farm and probably does not to-day repent his decision so to do, as success has rewarded him for his labors in this field of industry.

Mr. Haverstick, however, cannot break away from his penchant towards mechanics, and has erected on his farm a workshop in which much of his spare time is passed in perfecting his previously conceived notions of various mechanical devices, handling with equal facility steel, iron or wood, and shaping these to suit his notions. But this workshop is conducted simply for his amusement and not for profit, as the latter is derived from the cultivation of his farm; this comprises eighty-nine acres and lies contiguous to Washington borough.

The marriage of John M. Haverstick and Elvina C. Warfel took place in 1879. This lady was a daughter of Valentine Warfel, and was called away from earth June 22, 1891, at the age of thirty-two years, the mother of four children, viz.: Clara May, Harry Hoyt, Florence Ray (who died an infant) and Charles Arthur. In religion the father of this family is a Mennonite, has always led a strictly moral life, and stands high in the esteem of his fellow-citizens.

CHRISTIAN N. MUMMA, who has conducted a meat market in Mt. Joy since 1894, is one of the progressive young business men of that place, and is gaining a solid footing among its most substantial citizens.

Mr. Mumma was born Dec. 16, 1869, in East Donegal township, this county, son of Jacob S. Mumma, and grandson of Jonas Mumma, the last named a native of Rapho township. Jonas Mumma was a farmer by occupation and settled on a place in East Donegal township, where he and his wife both died. He married Catherine Shirk, of Rapho township. Jacob S. Mumma was born in 1845, on the farm in East Donegal township where he yet lives, and has engaged successfully in farming and dairying. He is one of the respected citizens of his locality, and has served four years as school director in his district. Mr. Mumma married Miss Rebecca Nissley, who was born in Mt. Joy township, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Graybill) Nissley, farming people of this county. Mr. Nissley at one time represented his district in the State Legislature. To Mr. and Mrs. Jacob S. Mumma have been born children as follows: Anna, who married Harry Rich, cashier of the First National Bank of Marietta; Christian N.: Catherine, married to George Best, of Lancaster; Minnie, of Philadelphia, a trained nurse, who is now attending the University of Pennsylvania; Jacob N., engaged at steam fitting in Reading, Pa.; Bessie, at home; John, at home; Ella, deceased; and Harry, at home. The mother is a member of the Mennonite Church.

Christian N. Mumma received his education in the public schools of his locality, and remained under the parental roof until he had reached his majority. His first year away from home was spent in Texas, where he was employed on a ranch. On returning to Pennsylvania he located in Marietta, where he remained three years, working in a flour mill with his brother-in-law, Mr. Rich. He then spent another year at home before coming to Mt. Joy, where in November, 1894, he embarked in the butcher's business, to which he has since given his entire time and attention. Mr. Mumma enjoys a lucrative trade won by honest dealing, which, coupled with thrift and good judgment, is bound to bring success. He has high standing in the community, of which he received substantial evidence in the spring of 1900, when he was elected to the borough council. His political support is given to the Republican party.

On Oct. 26, 1894, Mr. Mumma was married in Lancaster to Miss Lillie Hoffman, Rev. Dr. Mitchell performing the ceremony. Three children have come to this union, Matilda H., Bernice, deceased, and Mark. Mr. Mumma attends the Bethel Church of God, in which he holds membership. Fraternally he belongs to the I. O. R. M.

Mrs. Lillie (Hoffman) Mumma was born in 1869 in Stacktown, Conoy township, Lancaster county, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Rhodes) Hoffman, of East Donegal township. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman now reside in Conoy township, where he is engaged extensively in farming and tobacco dealing.

JOHN F. BALMER, a venerable resident of Elizabethtown, whose career as a soldier of the Union deserves special mention, and whose industrious life as a plasterer should not be lightly passed over, was born in Mt. Joy township, June 13, 1835.

Mr. Balmer is a son of Hon. Daniel and Harriet (Fisher) Balmer, natives, respectively, of Mt. Joy township, and Elizabethtown. Both parents died while absent from their home in Elizabethtown. The father came to Elizabethtown in 1837 and engaged in the mercantile business, his previous life having been passed in farming. For fifteen years he was a justice of the peace, and in 1843 was sent to the State Legislature. In his later years he was engaged in carpentering. He died in December, 1884, at the age of seventy-eight years; his widow survived him three years, and died in 1887 at the age of seventy. They were buried in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. Both were members of the Reformed Church, and had the following family: John F., whose name appears above; Israel P., a contractor and carpenter in Elizabethtown; Daniel W., of Elizabethtown, who has been justice of the peace, and operated a bakery, and was a lieutenant in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion; Eliza (deceased), who married George W. Lewis; Mary L., who died young; Abraham F., a physician at Brookville, Pa.; Margaret I., the wife of T. W. Nissley, a machinist of Reading, Pennsylvania.

The first of the family, the great-grandfather of John F. Balmer, settled in Lancaster county, on the site of what is now Reamstown. He was a blacksmith and nail maker for the government, taking an active part in the Revolution. Samuel Balmer, his son, and the grandfather of John F., married Elizabeth Shell, also a native of Lancaster county. He was a farmer and a successful man of affairs. John Fisher, the maternal grandfather of John F. Balmer, married Ann Eliza Cremer, of Mt. Joy township, and lived in Elizabethtown, where he followed the occupation of a drover and farmer.

John F. Balmer was married Nov. 18, 1866, in Elizabethtown, to Sarah A. Ebersole, by whom he had the following children: Maggie C., living at home; Ina M., deceased; Ida L., at home; A. Ellis, a railroad fireman, living at home; Sarah C., operator at the telephone office, living at home; Christ E., night operator at the telephone office, living at home; Eva L., deceased; John A., at home.

Mrs. Sarah A. (Ebersole) Balmer was born in Conoy township, and is a daughter of John and Sarah A. (Seyfert) Ebersole, both natives of Conoy township, where the father died in 1846 at the age of forty-five years. He was a farmer and a man of industrious habits and good character. The mother died in Elizabethtown Feb. 13, 1896, at the age of eighty-four years. They were both interred in Mt. Tunnel Cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole were members of the Mennonite communion, and had the following children: Christian S., a grocer of Norristown, Pa., deceased; Catherine, widow of John L. Good, of Cumberland county; John, who was a produce merchant in Elizabethtown, deceased; Fanny, wife of John B. Engle, of Cumberland county; Levi, a retired farmer of Whitley county, Ind.; Aaron, unmarried, of Elizabethtown; Sarah A., whose name appears above.

John Ebersole, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Balmer, lived in Lancaster county. Anthony Seyfert, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Balmer, married Miss Shiley, and died in Lancaster county, at the age of forty-four years; he was born Sept. 26, 1787.

John F. Balmer came to Elizabethtown with his parents when he was only two years old, and was reared on the farm, where he remained until he reached the age of eighteen years. In 1870 he was compelled to give up farm work on account of ill-health that came from the exposure and hardships of army life.

Mr. Balmer enlisted in Co. I, 77th P. V. I., under Capt. John Bell. He participated in the closing scenes of the great war, but was not wounded though he contracted disease, and spent several months in the hospital, being discharged from the Chestnut Hill Hospital in August, 1865. After his dismissal from the hospital Mr. Balmer came home and worked for about a year at his trade as his health permitted, being able to do little or nothing for the first ten months. As his health came back he worked more steadily at his trade and has long since become one of the leading men of the community. Mr. Balmer has been a member of the council and for a number of years was assessor. In the Reformed Church of which he is a member his standing is good, and he is known as one of the reliable men connected with church work. Mr. Balmer is a Republican, and receives a pension of thirty dollars a month from the Government, a just recognition of the severity of the disease that followed him from the army, and the suffering he has undergone.

JOSEPH K. HABECKER. Mr. Habecker's family is of Swiss origin, the first American ancestor having emigrated to the American colonies from the indomitable European republic early in the eighteenth century.

Christian, the father of Joseph Habecker, was one of Manor township's resolute and successful farmers. He inherited a portion of the old family homestead farm, which embraced about 150 acres, and stretched northward from Central Manor. This tract may be said to have been the nesting place of this old and esteemed Lancaster family. The first division of the land was made between Christian and David, the first named being the father of Mr. Joseph Habecker. Christian was a Democrat from principle and thoroughly lived up to his political creed. He was his party's local leader, and filled many offices within the gift of his fellow townsmen, who held him in high regard. In church affairs he was even more prominent than in civil matters; for more than four decades he was virtually the leader and principal supporter of the church of his denomination, which was long known as the "Habecker" Church. Since his death his son, Joseph, has succeeded to the same position of influence. Christian Habecker died in 1860, in his seventy-second year. His wife was Elizabeth, the daughter of Isaac Kauffman. Eight children were born to them, as follows: Isaac, a farmer, who died at the age of fifty-one; Esther, deceased wife of Ephraim Rohrer, of Manor; Christian, who died in childhood; Elizabeth, the widow of Christian Habecker; Maria, Mrs. P. W. Heistand, of Millersville; John, who died at the age of seventeen years; Joseph K., the subject of the present sketch; Jacob, a farmer in Rapho township.

Joseph K. Habecker was born Nov. 30, 1834. He received such education as was obtainable in the district schools of the time, and continued to assist his father on the farm until he was twenty-four years old, when he was married; but in 1859 his father's failing health compelled him to assume the management of the property, and when in 1860 the elder man died, Joseph K. succeeded to the inheritance. Mr. Habecker's success has been pronounced, if not phenomenal. He owns one hundred and thirty acres of fertile, well-watered land, on which are all improvements known to the modern agriculturist. While devoting close personal attention to his farm, he yet finds time to look after other large financial interests which claim his notice. He is a stockholder in the Mountville National Bank, of which he was one of the incorporators. He was also one of the promoters and organizers of the Fair View Flannel Mills, in which he yet retains an interest. He also owns stock in the Lancaster Hardware Company.

In 1858 he was married to Miss Hettie Charles. She was a daughter of John Charles and Susan Herr, and to this marriage has come a family of nine children: Joseph, who died in childhood; John, a bachelor, and living at home; Christian C., who married Anna Gamper, and lives on the Manor farm; Elizabeth C., unmarried; David C., deceased; Jacob C., married to Fannie Lindemann; Amos C., unmarried; Charles C., and Harry C., who are also single and with their unmarried brothers and sisters live at home with their parents.

Mr. Habecker is an active and earnest member of the Mennonite Church and has contributed liberally toward its support and growth.

GEORGE BARD, one of the leading business citizens of Mechanicsburg, Lancaster county, was born in Upper Leacock township, on July 30, 1856, and he was a son of George and Caroline (Shindle) Bard, natives of Upper Leacock and Manor townships, respectively.

George Bard, the father of our subject, came to Mechanicsburg about 1833. He was born May 6, 1809, and his useful life ended Aug. 20, 1873, his burial being in the Zion Lutheran Church cemetery. His parents were Michael and Catherine (Weist) Bard.

George Bard was married on Dec. 15, 1836, in Lancaster, to Miss Caroline Shindle, and the children born to this union were: Margaret, who married Samuel Shaub, and lives in Reading, Pa.; Catherine, unmarried, who lives in Mechanicsburg; Susannah, who married Abram Groff, and lives in East Petersburg; Wayne, who resides in Upper Leacock township; David, who lives in Chester county; Mary Ann, who married Rudy Brown, and lives in East Earl township; Elias, a farmer in Mechanicsburg; Salinda, who married Rudy Frankheiser, of Lancaster; Lucy, deceased May 25, 1899, who was the wife of Adam Miller, of East Lampeter township; and George, of Mechanicsburg. Mr. Bard was a successful farmer and became prominent in public matters and was a leading member of the Lutheran Church. The mother of our subject was born in Manor township, March 4, 1818, and died Oct. 12, 1898.

The early rearing of George Bard, the subject of this sketch, was similar to that of almost every prominent citizen of this country. The biographer finds some knowledge of the soil connected with the past of almost all, even when a little later other lines of business have been entered, and such was the case with Mr. Bard. At the age of eighteen he began the trade of machinist, leaving the farm to the management of other members of the family, and he remained under the able instruction of Valentine Andes for a period covering six and one-half years; he then entered upon his present line, that of dealer in agricultural implements, his stock consisting of agricultural machinery, paints, oils, etc.

Mr. Bard was united in marriage Nov. 13, 1887, in Mechanicsburg, to Miss Mary Andes, and these children have been born to him and his wife, Ruth, Mary A., Richard A., Levi A., Nelson A., Miriam, and George A., all bright and intelligent, promising to become excellent and useful citizens under the guidance of a wise father and a most estimable mother. Mrs. Bard was born in Mechanicsburg, and was a daughter of Levi D. Andes, a retired manufacturer.

Politically Mr. Bard has always been connected with the Democratic party, while religiously the family is connected with the Lutheran Church. Mr. Bard takes an active interest in many public enterprises and his financial standing is established by his connection with the Northern National Bank, in which he has been a director for the past five years. The business and social standing of Mr. Bard is equally high and he is a thoroughly representative citizen.

ELI AMENT. The Ament family is one of the oldest and most respected in Lancaster county. Our subject's great-grandparents were natives of Germany, whence they came to America in an early day, making their permanent home in Lancaster county.

George Ament, grandfather of Eli, did a prosperous teaming business in the early days, carrying goods between Philadelphia and Pittsburg when railway connections between those cities were a dream of the future. He was a man of many resources; by trade a carpet weaver, in his later life he became a farmer, and at the same time carried on business as a butcher. He lived to an advanced age, dying in May, 1880. He married Catherine Herr, daughter of Christian Herr, of Lancaster county, and they reared a family of eight children, viz.: Christian; Catherine, who married Martin Manning, of Highville, this county; Elizabeth, who married Christ Kaufman, of Highville; Mary Ann and Elias, both deceased; Henry H.; and Abraham and Fanny, twins, the former a resident of Highville, and the latter the wife of Jacob Kaufman (brother of Christ), of Lancaster. The parents were members of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Ament passed away in 1885.

Christian Ament, the father of the prominent citizen of Manor township, who is named above, was born in 1821, and died in his seventieth year. He was a farmer, owning seventy acres of land, which now belongs to his son Eli. He married Hannah, a daughter of John and Rosanna Crupp, who emigrated from Germany to America, and settled in York county, Pa. John Crupp died at the age of forty-five, and his wife in her seventy-sixth year. To Christian Ament and his wife were born two children, Elizabeth and Eli, Elizabeth being the wife of Joseph McDonald, of Manor township.

Eli Ament was born Jan. 16, 1851. He grew to manhood on the paternal farm and, when advancing age began to impair the physical powers of his father, he assumed its entire management. At the death of the latter, he purchased the interest of the other heirs in the estate and continued to reside at the old homestead until 1899. In that year he removed to a farm adjoining, located about one mile southwest of Letort, which he had purchased the previous year. This place embraces 186 acres, and was formerly known as the Catherine Hershey farm. Mr. Ament is one of Lancaster's most enterprising farmers, and his land is among the most highly improved plots in the county. He is thoroughly wide awake, keeping in close touch with every advance in scientific agriculture. In addition to general farming he cultivates flowering plants, vegetables and fruit extensively, in hot houses and forcing beds, and finds a ready and profitable market for the same in the city of Lancaster. Since 1892 he has owned and operated two threshing machines, both of which are kept constantly busy in the harvest seasons. In public affairs he has ever shown a progressive spirit, guided by sound judgment and an enlightened conservatism.

In 1875 Mr. Ament married Mary, a daughter of Benjamin and Hattie Dietrich. The issue of the union has been fourteen children, twelve of whom are living, namely: Henry, Hettie, Ross, Ira, Mary, Barbara, Lydia, Fannie, Christian, Ada, Annie and Eli. The two who died were named Clara and Roy. Mr. and Mrs. Ament are members of the Reformed Mennonite Church.

BYRON J. REEMSnyder, M. D., a prominent physician and surgeon of Hinkletown, Lancaster county, was born in Ephrata township, Lancaster county, near Akron, July 23, 1853, and is a son of Dr. Henry and Mary J. (Gray) Reemsnyder, a grandson of Samuel Reemsnyder, and a great-grandson of Herman Reemsnyder, who was a native of Germany, and immigrated to this country in early manhood.

Herman Reemsnyder married in Berks county, where he settled, but later removed to Chester county. His wife belonged to the Musser family. In his active years he was a cabinet maker and Dr. Byron J. Reemsnyder has in his possession a small cabinet which has descended to him from the founder of the family in this country. Herman Reemsnyder was buried at Honeybrook, where his last years were passed. He was a soldier in the war of the Revolution and received a wound from which he never fully recovered, though he lived to an advanced age. In his family were many children, but the names of only two sons and three daughters are on record. Samuel is noted above as the grandfather of Dr. Byron J. John removed to Ohio. Sallie married Samuel Vogan, and lived in Earl township, where she attained a great age, living a widow many years; the Vogan family founded the village of Vogansville. Two daughters of Herman Reemsnyder were married to men by the name of Snoder. The father of these children was a man of more than the usual intelligence and left many poems bearing on the Revolution, as well as on religious topics. The latter part of his life was spent in Lancaster county.

Samuel Reemsnyder, the grandfather of Dr. Byron J., was a cabinet maker, and had more than a local reputation as a carpenter and builder. He owned and conducted a farm near Earlville. A man of broad and progressive spirit, he was a devoted member of the Reformed Church. His first wife bore him a large family. On her death he married a widow, Mrs. Rock, but to this union no children were born.

Henry Reemsnyder, the father of Dr. Byron J., was born at Talmage in 1825 and died in 1877. He was reared on the farm and attended the public schools. While still a young man, he entered the office of Dr. Weidler, of Mechanicsburg, where he began the study of medicine, and took his degree from the Pennsylvania Medical College at Philadelphia. Coming out of college, he located at Akron, Lancaster county, where he was engaged in the practice of his profession for many years. In connection with medicine he took up dentistry and became very proficient. For some years he had a drug-store in Lancaster. During the Civil war he wore the "Union blue," entering the service as First Lieutenant of Co. F, 9th Pa. Cav., a position which he shortly afterward resigned in order to accept the captaincy of another company. He was in active service for eighteen months, and was honorably discharged on account of physical disability.

At the conclusion of his military service, Dr. Henry Reemsnyder returned to Lancaster county, broken in health, but with an indomitable spirit. He again took up the practice of his profession and followed it until his death. In public matters he was always deeply and actively interested. In politics he was a Democrat, and was ready at all times to work for the interest of his party, which to him represented the welfare of the country. In his religion he was a member of the Reformed Church.

Dr. Henry Reemsnyder was married to Mary J. Gray, a daughter of Henry and Eliza (Hibshman) Gray, who was born in Ephrata township, and is still living there, aged nearly seventy. To this union were born five children: Dr. Byron J.; Charles A., a cigar maker in Philadelphia; Jennie, the wife of Isaac Nissley, a resident of Ephrata; Dr. Henry, a resident of Ephrata; Edward S., a cigar maker in Lancaster.

Dr. Byron J. Reemsnyder was educated in the public schools and read medicine in his father's office. In 1873 he entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1875, and at once located at Hinkletown, where he has remained to the present time, building up a large practice and commanding a host of friends by his manly qualities and professional skill. To the various State and County Medical Societies he gives much attention and in these is a hardworking and active member. In politics he is one of the leading Democrats of the county.

Dr. Byron J. Reemsnyder was married in 1877 to Miss Alice Winters, a daughter of R. N. and Mary (Martin) Winters. She died in 1882, leaving one child, Anine, who is now at home. The Doctor was again married in 1884, to Mary, a sister of his first wife. She was born in 1860, and is the mother of two children, Mary and Charles.

Dr. Reemsnyder belongs to the Reformed Church, and the entire family are numbered among the most substantial citizens of the county. The Doctor is a thoughtful and scientific practitioner, and aims to keep abreast of every advance in his great profession.

HENRY H. DAMBACH, a thriving and greatly respected farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, with his residence one mile southeast of Columbia, was born in that township Jan. 9, 1847, and is a son of Martin and Elizabeth (Herr) Dambach.

Henry H. Dambach received such an education as the public schools of his township afforded, and his knowledge of agriculture was acquired on the home farm on which his boyhood and earlier manhood were passed until twenty-five years of age, when he married and began farming on his own account on a tract of land belonging to his father and situated near Columbia. After one year's employment in this line, the father made a division of the tract, awarding the son sixty acres, on which the latter still resides but has since purchased 115 acres adjoining the home place on the west. This property is now divided into three distinct farms, with many improvements, all of the first class, including dwelling, barns, etc. On this farm is one of the finest peach orchards in Manor township, and this orchard contains at least 900 trees in bearing condition to which the proprietor devotes the greater part of his attention—indeed, all that can be spared from the general conduct of the farm.

In November, 1871, Henry H. Dambach was united in marriage with Miss Lydia Ann Herr, a native of Pequea township, Lancaster county, and a daughter of Rudy and Barbara Herr; this union has been made the more happy by the birth of two children, viz.: Benjamin F., still under the parental roof; and Ellen, wife of Amos Rohrer, of Manor township. Mr. Dambach and his wife are members of the Mennonite Church, and socially are most highly respected.

LEVI R. FORNEY, one of the successful and representative farmers of Penn township, belongs to a highly respected family of Lancaster county. He was born in East Cocalico township, July 14, 1849, and was educated in the common schools. He moved to the farm where he now resides, with his father in April, 1850. The father died in 1883, and a part of the farm became the property of Levi R., who has devoted his efforts to the cultivation of market products ever since, and attends the Lancaster markets with a choice assortment of farm and dairy products, the results of his own energy and industry.

In 1892 Mr. Forney was united in marriage to Miss Fannie Wissler, the estimable daughter of Levi and Fannie Wissler, of Clay township, and to this union two children have been born, one of whom died in infancy; the other, Mary W., was born Jan. 5, 1896. Mrs. Forney is a member of the Old Mennonite Church. No citizen of Penn township enjoys the confidence and esteem of his patrons or of his neighbors more than does Mr. Forney, and none have proved better farmers or business men. In public affairs he shows a progressive spirit and is always alive to the best interests of his county.

JOHN JACKSON PENNELL, of Kirk's Mills, Little Britain township, is one of the leading citizens, substantial farmers and representative men of this locality. Mr. Pennell was born Jan. 26, 1842, on the farm which is now his own property, and he was a son of John and Rebecca (Brown) Pennell, of Little Britain township.

John Pennell, the father of John J., of this sketch, was a son of William and Elizabeth Pennell of Britain township, the former of whom with his father, who was of Irish origin, settled on the old home place about 1745, the county then being but sparsely settled in that vicinity. Four children were born to William Pennell: John, Hugh, Anna and Isabella, all of whom have passed away.

John Pennell was born Oct. 17, 1771, and died Jan. 28, 1863, after a long and most estimable life, at the age of ninety-one years. On Dec. 27, 1827, he married Rebecca Brown, who was born Aug. 25, 1805, and who died Oct. 4, 1861. They had a family of nine children: Elizabeth, born Oct. 11, 1829, the widow of John P. Hays; Mary Ann, born Nov. 16, 1831, the widow of James Patterson, of Illinois;

William, born Jan. 5, 1833, a retired farmer of Little Britain township; Rebecca J., born Feb. 5, 1835, died young; Margaret Isabel, born on March 23, 1837, died young; Lavenia, born Oct. 19, 1839, the wife of Charles Hays, of Little Britain; John J., of this sketch; Rachel Amanda, born May 8, 1845; and James F., born March 31, 1850.

The early rearing of John Jackson Pennell was like that of other lads of his vicinity who had had the good fortune to be born of wise and careful parents, who, while they insisted on his attendance at the district school, also gave him a practical education on the farm. Later in life he had reason to use this knowledge on his own land, to great advantage. Mr. Pennell now is the owner of the excellent home farm which consists of 180 acres in Little Britain township, where he occupies a most comfortable two-story dwelling, and he is also the owner of one of the fertile and productive farms of Chester county.

The marriage of John J. Pennell took place Feb. 11, 1885, to Miss Maggie L. Duyckinek, of Cecil county, Md., and this marriage has been blessed with three children: Emily D., born March 6, 1886, died in infancy; William Horace, born Jan. 17, 1889; and Ruth Lavenia, born June 13, 1892. Mrs. Pennell was born Dec. 19, 1856, and she was a daughter of Horace and Emily (Longstreet) Duyckinek, the former of whom was born in 1819 and died in 1891, and the latter of whom was born in 1818 and resides with her daughter, Mrs. Pennell. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Pennell was Richard B. Duyckinek, of Dutch origin, and her maternal grandfather was Aaron Longstreet and belonged to the same family as the Confederate Gen. Longstreet. Mrs. Pennell was the youngest of her family, the others being: Anna, the widow of William Haines of Cecil county, Md.; Ellis L., a resident of the old home place; and Aaron L., a banker and grain dealer in Rising Sun, Maryland.

Mr. Pennell has been identified with much of the progress and development of this township and is well and favorably known. Fraternally he is connected with the Masonic Lodge No. 353, of Oxford, Pa. He and his family are consistent and respected members of the Little Britain Presbyterian Church.

JOHN CHARLES PERRY, the genial and capable superintendent of the Hamilton Watch Factory, of which all Lancaster people are so justly proud, has had a career of more than ordinary interest.

Mr. Perry's ancestors came to America from England early in the eighteenth century, John L. Perry, the great-grandfather of John C., settling in what was then the Province of Massachusetts. He was the father of eleven children, all of whom were killed by the Indians with the exception of the youngest, Charles A., who was the grandfather of John C. Charles A. Perry was only five or six years old when the Indians killed his family, and he was adopted by a family and taken to Boston, where he grew to manhood and became a furniture dealer and undertaker. There (in Boston) Charles Alexander Perry, the father of John C., was born, and in manhood became a Methodist clergyman, entering into rest in 1884. He married Caroline Elizabeth Eaton, who passed away in 1898, aged eighty-four years.

John C. Perry was born in Grafton, Mass., Dec. 1, 1839, and was educated in the New Salem (Mass.) Academy, from which he was graduated. At the age of seventeen years young Perry went to Boston and became messenger to the Massachusetts Senate, retaining that position four years, when Abraham Lincoln became President of the United States. Mr. Perry, then just twenty-one years old, was appointed to a clerkship in the Boston Custom House, serving three years, and then resigning because of ill-health of his wife, who was suffering from consumption. His next move was to Eagle river, Lake Superior, where he became paymaster for the Humboldt Mining Company, remaining there one and a half years. We next find him having charge of a private banker's office, retaining that position two years, and next in Canada, where he became paymaster of the Lochabor Plumbago Mining Company, a position which he held for two years. Mr. Perry then went to Springfield, Mass., where he became a clerk in the New York Watch Company. This was in 1869. After clerking there two years he became superintendent of the factory, holding the position five years, and, the Hampden Watch Company having been formed from the New York Watch Company, he (Mr. Perry) became superintendent of that concern, remaining in that incumbency four years, and then going on the road to sell goods for this company. He sold their goods until he became associated with a prominent jewelry manufacturing house, remaining with them two years. His next business association was with a syndicate that purchased the Aurora Watch Company's plant, in Illinois, remaining with them until the Hamilton Watch Company of Lancaster was organized, in 1892, the Aurora having been merged into the Hamilton. Mr. Perry again went on the road, selling goods for the Hamilton until three years ago, when, at the death of Henry C. Cain, he became superintendent. It is an interesting fact that he and Mr. Cain (whose successor he became) were constantly associated (with the exception of two and one half years) from 1869 until Mr. Cain entered into rest. The Hamilton has had a wonderful development under Mr. Perry's management, their goods ranking second to none, anywhere. They employ 472 people, and the new annex, just completed (1903) makes room for three hundred more people.

Mr. Perry has been twice married. His first wife, Vironia L. Sears, whom he married in Massachusetts, in 1861, became the mother of two children, a son and a daughter. The son died, and the daughter, Lillian J. (now Mrs. W. H. Wilson), lives in Aurora, Ill. His second wife was Jessie E.

Richards, whom he married in Aurora, in 1894. Three children were born of this union, but all of them are dead, and the wife and mother has also passed away. Mr. Perry is a member of the Masons, and of the Benevolent Order of Elks; is a Republican in politics, a Universalist in religion, and, withal, an intelligent, liberal-minded, wholesouled gentleman.

BENJAMIN HICKMAN POWNALL, a general farmer and leading citizen of Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, where he was born Jan. 23, 1842, is a son of Hon. Joseph D. Pownall, of Sadsbury township.

Hon. Joseph D. Pownall was a farmer and a drover, and died March 6, 1887, at the age of sixty-seven years; his wife, who was a Miss Hickman, born in Goshen, Chester county, Dec. 8, 1817, died April 20, 1899. Both were buried in the cemetery connected with the meeting house of the Society of Friends in Sadsbury township, of which they were members. Joseph D. Pownall filled the office of justice of the peace at Christiana at the time of the Riot of 1851. In 1857, and again in 1859, he was elected as a representative to the General Assembly, and he was a delegate to the Republican Convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln in 1860. In business circles he was prominent, and held the position of director of the National Bank of Chester Valley from its inauguration until his death. In fraternal matters he belonged to the Masonic Order, and was a member of the Blue Lodge. To him and his wife were born: Benjamin H., whose name appears above; Joseph, and Ambrose, who both died in infancy; Lewis, who died at the age of nine years; and Elwood P., a farmer of Christiana, who married Mary Baker.

The paternal grandparents of Benjamin H. Pownall were Joseph and Phoebe (Dickinson) Pownall, natives of Sadsbury and Salisbury townships, respectively. Joseph Pownall was born in 1791, and after a life passed in agricultural pursuits died March 17, 1829. His widow, born Nov. 14, 1793 passed to her reward March 30, 1875. Both were laid to rest in the cemetery of the Society of Friends in Salisbury township. They had the following family: Moses; Levi; Joseph D.; Elizabeth, wife of Hon. George Witson, formerly a representative of the township, and long a justice of the peace; Henry, deceased; Ambrose, a retired farmer of Sadsbury; Simeon B., a retired farmer of Harrisburg; Catherine, who married Thomas Greist, a retired grain merchant of Philadelphia; Oliver, who died young; and Phoebe, who wedded William Webb.

The paternal great-grandparents of Benjamin H. Pownall were Levi and Elizabeth (Buckman) Pownall, and came into this county from Bucks county, making the journey on horseback, and having but little idea of where they would locate, but Sadsbury township pleased them, and they settled at Simmonstown, where they started a tannery. Here they purchased a large tract of land and made their home for life. Levi Pownall was born Aug. 25, 1755, and died Aug. 20, 1840. His widow, born Sept. 12, 1756, died April 30, 1844.

The maternal grandparents of Benjamin H. Powall were Benjamin and Mary (Hickman) Hickman, bearing the same name but being no relation. They were born in England, and came to America, settling in a cave in Westtown township, near Westtown Friends Boarding School.

Benjamin H. Pownall was married May 24, 1866, in the home of the bride in Highland township, to Filena Clark. Born to this union were two children as follows: M. H., who taught school for nine years, and then married Charles G. Jones, a farmer of Sadsbury township, and has one child, Gordon P.; Lydia C., unmarried and at home. Mrs. Filena (Clark) Pownall was born near Coatesville, Chester Co., Pa., March 4, 1842, a daughter of Joseph D. and Lydia D. (Brown) Clark. Her parents were natives of Chester county, but resided in Christiana from 1871 to 1875, when they returned to Chester county, where they passed their lives. Her father was a miller in his earlier days, but in later life was a farmer.

Mr. Pownall was reared on the farm under his parents' watchful care, and remained with them until he embarked in a mercantile career in 1866. That year he bought a store of James Coates, and operated it until his removal to his present farm. For fourteen years he filled the position of school director, and was supervisor three years. For many years he was a judge of elections, and has long acted as township auditor. In his religious views he is a member of the Society of Friends, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity, being connected with Lodge No. 417 at Christiana. His military services during the Civil war entitled him to a membership in the G. A. R., which he has been proud to claim. In his politics he is a Republican.

Benjamin H. Pownall enlisted in the 50th P. V. I., at Christiana, June 29, 1863, responding to an emergency call, and was honorably discharged Aug. 15th, of the same year. His enlistment was for ninety days, and he served along the Potomac, and below the Hagerstown country. He had enlisted Sept. 6, 1862, in Company H, 2nd Regiment—an emergency company—but as his services were not needed he was discharged the same day.

Mr. Pownall holds all the old family wills, and has many heirlooms of his family, including a clock that has been in the family over a hundred years. He is personally a man of fine character, and is much esteemed in the community where his useful and industrious life is passing.

GEORGE A. MORISON, of Manor township, Lancaster county, was born in Adams county, Pa., Sept. 1, 1829, and is a son of George and Susannah (Wolf) Morison, of whom the former was born

George Morison when a boy came from his native State to Pennsylvania, for a short time was employed in Philadelphia at various occupations, and while still a young man went to Adams county and worked with farmers the greater part of his life, but toward his latter years purchased, jointly with his son, George A., a farm in Adams county. He died in the village of Hunterstown in 1870, when at the age of seventy years, and his wife, who was born in 1801, died when almost eighty years old; both accepted the faith of the Methodist Church. To the marriage of George and Susannah Morison were born twelve children, of whom Mary Ann and Jerry died young; Margaret died the wife of Frederick Harman, of Adams county; Jacob is a carpenter of West Hempfield, Lancaster county; Elizabeth is the widow of Henry McLain; George A.; James I., resides in Bainbridge, Lancaster county; Susan is the deceased wife of John Imhoff, of Adams county; Matilda is married to Henry Bigler, of Columbia, Lancaster county; Charlotte is the widow of James Paxton, of Adams county; Frederick W. is sheriff of Adams county; and John N. is deceased.

George A. Morison was reared in Adams county, in 1850 came to Lancaster county, and worked for Christian Charles, of Manor township two years; in 1852 he married and went to work raising tobacco on rented land, and about 1870 purchased his present farm of twenty-four acres, three miles southeast of Columbia. This farm was partially improved with buildings, but Mr. Morison has erected much finer ones and has the best farm of its size in his part of the county, all the surroundings showing the extreme thrift, care and intelligent management of the owner. While Mr. Morison has raised, packed and shipped a large quantity of tobacco, general farming has not been neglected, and in this respect the same good management is manifested.

On Oct. 4, 1852, George A. Morison married Susan, daughter of John Dabler, of Rohrerstown, Lancaster county, and this union has been blessed with one child, Annie, wife of Abraham Kilheffer, a farmer of Manor township. To Mr. and Mrs. Kilheffer have been born three children, Harry, Fannie and Mary. George A. Morison and his wife are devout members of the Old Mennonite Church and stand very high socially. In politics Mr. Morison is a Democrat.

His father died in December, 1899, at the age of eighty-three years, five months and twenty-seven days, and the mother was called away some years previously. Adam Herr was born and reared in Quarryville, Lancaster county, and was a son of Abraham Herr, who came of a very old Lancaster family.

Benjamin B. Herr was reared in Millersville and educated in the public schools, and in 1882 left the home place to begin business on his own account on his present farm of sixty acres, which is situated three-quarters of a mile east of Letort and is one of the finest places of its size in the county. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Ranck had the following family: John D.; Jacob, a farmer of Earl township; Margaret, a single lady; Martin, unmarried, and living in Lancaster; Diller, a farmer in Chester county, Pa.; Luella, who married Daniel W. Groff, Barbara A., married to Isaac Musser, and living in Lancaster; David, who died young; Elizabeth, who also died young.

The paternal grandparents of J. D. Ranck were John and Elizabeth (Shively) Ranck; his maternal grandparents, John and Margaret (Rhoads) Diller.

Both families were honorable farming people of Lancaster county.

Mr. Ranck was married in December, 1856, to Louisa Diller, by whom he had one child, Mary E., who is unmarried, and is living at home. Mrs. Ranck was born in April, 1837, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Basore) Diller.

John D. Ranck lived with his parents until his marriage, when he moved to Chester county and was there engaged eight years in farming, then moving into East Earl township to carry on a farm the same length of time. In 1887 he established himself on the farm where he is found at the present time. Mr. Ranck has been supervisor in both Earl and East Earl townships, and was known as an honorable and efficient official. In politics he is a Republican. He stands well in the community.

CHRISTIAN H. ROHRER. The family of Rohrer is one of the early, as it is also one of the most respected, families of Lancaster county.

Abraham Rohrer, the grandfather of Christian H., was a farmer in Manor township, locating there early in life and spending there the remainder of his days. His wife was a Miss Eby, and their son Ephraim was the father of Christian H. He (Ephraim) first saw the sun upon the paternal farm, and on those acres he passed the greater part of his life, nine years being spent in or near Mt. Joy, Lancaster county. He purchased 100 acres of land in the same township and through thrift, intelligence and industry achieved success. He was an earnest Menonite, being for many years a deacon, and for more than a decade a preacher in the denomination. He was widely known and generally beloved for his many admirable qualities of mind and heart. He was a firm believer in the principle of free, universal education, and his intelligent advocacy of the cause led to his being repeatedly chosen a member of the local board of education. He was born in 1811 and his wife, Esther Habacker, in 1816. He fell asleep on June 14, 1891, while she survived him until August, 1897, entering into her reward at the age of four score and one. Their nine children were named Elizabeth, Christian H., Ephraim, Esther, Isaac, Benjamin, Mary, Annie, and Miami. Only three are yet living, Christian H., Mary and Annie. Elizabeth married Joseph Newcomer, of Manor township, and Esther was the wife of Amos Miller, of Quarryville. Mary is the wife of Joseph Charles, of Donegal township; and Annie remains unmarried.

Christian H. Rohrer was born Feb. 3, 1838. He passed his boyhood much after the fashion of other farmers' sons of his day and generation who happened to be born in the same locality. His natural bent was toward the life of a farmer and his success has abundantly demonstrated that in selecting his life's work he did not choose amiss. In 1860 he was married, and took his bride to a farm conducted by himself. The following year (1861) they removed to his present farm of 130 acres, near Mountville.

His success has been pronounced, yet when it is remembered that it is attributable to native discernment, pluck and perseverance, it occasions no surprise. He has been a promoter of not a few commercial enterprises of magnitude, in the direction of several of which he still holds a seat. Among these may be named the Columbia Iron Company, the Fairview Milling Company (of Columbia), the Mountville National Bank and the Mountville Manufacturing Company. He is politically a staunch Republican, yet while ever ready to do what he may to advance party success along legitimate lines, he has never sought reward in the form of political preferment. He has, however, consented to serve as school director for six years.

Reference has been made to his marriage. It occurred Nov. 25, 1860, to Catherine Forrey, whose parents, Daniel and Catherine (Kauffman) Forrey, were residents of Manor township. Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer have reared a large family of children, all of whom are living. Isaac, the first born, married Mattie Walker and lives in Manor; Annie is Mrs. Eli Mann, her husband being a farmer of the same locality; Elizabeth is the wife of Jacob Bender, of East Hempfield; Benjamin is a farmer, in the same township, and the husband of Mary Grider; Christian married Elizabeth Shuman, and has his home in Manor; Ephraim married Mary Good, and is a resident of Mountville; Amos owns a farm in Manor and is the husband of Ella Dambaugh; Esther is unmarried and lives at home with her parents. The family are members of the Mennonite Church.

J. M. COONEY, of Fulton township, Lancaster county, is a well-known farmer and miller. He was born Nov. 8, 1841, in Cecil county, Maryland. He is a son of Thomas and Catherine (Bravo) Cooney, of Cecil county.

Thomas Cooney, the father, was born in 1803 and died Oct. 17, 1880. He was a son of Thomas Cooney, who emigrated from Ireland to America and who had a family of four children, viz.: James, Thomas, Sarah and Catherine. Thomas Cooney (2), father of J. M. Cooney, married Miss Catherine Bravo, of Maryland, in 1830. Her father was John Bravo, of Maryland, his family being of French origin. The marriage of Mr. Thomas Cooney and Miss Bravo resulted in the following family: Thomas and Mary J., deceased; Isabel, the wife of Thomas Emmett, of Maryland; J. M., of this sketch; and David L., deceased. Mrs. Cooney, the mother of this family, was born in 1808 and died in 1883.

Mr. J. M. Cooney married Elizabeth B., daughter of John Shaub, of Lancaster, in June, 1867. This couple have had ten children: Mary S., born Jan. 15, 1868, deceased; Thomas, born March 19, 1869, a machinist at Chestnut Level, Pa., and married to Miss Mary L. Brown; David L., born Feb. 2, 1872, a partner with his brother Thomas in the mercantile business, and married to Miss Lydia Neff; Daniel W., born May 2, 1874, who died in youth; Kate E., born June 12, 1875, the wife of Scott Wilson, residing in Rising Sun, Md.; Walter B., born Jan. 29, 1877, married to Miss Ella M. Wilson; John M., born Sept. 28, 1879, deceased; Joseph G., born Dec. 25, 1880, at home with his parents on the farm; Daniel B., born June 10, 1883, deceased; and Esther, the youngest child, born July 7, 1885. The mother, Mrs. Cooney, was born Sept. 12, 1845.

Mr. Cooney is a staunch Democrat in politics and a Presbyterian in religion. He has been a mail contractor for years. In 1891 he bought the mill and farm where he now resides, and it is valuable property. Mr. Cooney has had an honorable career and holds the esteem of a good many friends and neighbors.

MARTIN NISSLEY BRUBAKER. The stranger could not travel far in Lancaster county without meeting with the names of the families from which Martin Nissley Brubaker has descended, for they are widely scattered and prominent in whatever community found.

Martin N. Brubaker was born in Elizabeth township on the banks of the Hammer Creek, Oct. 11, 1835, a son of Shem and Magdalina (Nissley) Brubaker, the former of Elizabeth township and the latter of Rapho township, near Sporting Hill. The father was a farmer all his life, retiring from active duties but a few years before his death, which occurred in September, 1887, at the age of seventy-four. The family moved to Mt. Joy township in April, 1884, and occupied the farm upon which Martin N. resides. During many years the father was a school director of his district, as he was always interested in educational affairs. The mother died in August, 1884, at the age of seventy, having been a pious, worthy woman, well known in the neighborhood for her kindness and ready sympathy for those in need. The parents rest in the cemetery at Landisville. Both father and mother were consistent members of the Old Mennonite Church, and their family consisted of two sons; Martin N.; and Jacob, a minister of the Mennonite faith, who lives on the old homestead in Rapho township.

The paternal grandparents of Martin N. Brubaker were Jacob and Maria (Eby) Brubaker, who lived in Elizabeth township, where the former, a farmer all his life, died in 1853 at the age of seventy-two years and six months, his widow surviving until 1863, reaching her eighty-first year. These beloved grandparents were interred in a private burying ground on the old homestead. The great-grandparents were also natives of Elizabeth township; the great-grandfather, also Jacob Brubaker, caught the yellow fever in Philadelphia, from which he died in 1793. The maternal grandparents also represented old and honored names in the county, and were Martin and Maria (Baumberger) Nissley, of Warwick township, near Lititz.

Martin N. Brubaker, eldest son of his parents, grew up on the farm but did not take naturally to the life of a farmer. During his youth he attended the district schools and later the Lititz Academy, going at the age of eighteen to the Mt. Joy Academy, and at the age of nineteen he took a practical course in surveying. The next two years were spent in the mercantile line, but this business was not satisfactory and young Martin then went to East Hempfield township where he engaged in farming near Petersburg, and also did surveying, remaining in that locality for six years; he then went to Landisville where he practiced surveying until 1888, at which time he located in Mt. Joy.

Mr. Brubaker is considered an expert in his line of business, and for two years served as county surveyor, and for the past twenty-five years has been a notary public. Whatever he undertakes, he does thoroughly and is considered a very capable and reliable surveyor. In politics he is a Republican, although he cast his first vote for James Buchanan, local pride influencing him, as the candidate was a resident of this county.

The marriage of Mr. Brubaker occurred on Oct. 25, 1856, to Mary A. Snavelly, of Penn township, and to this union was born one daughter, Fanny S., who died in 1887, at the age of thirty, unmarried.

Mary A. (Snavelly) Brubaker was born in Penn township, Sept. 25, 1837, a daughter of Henry and Mary Snavelly, of Penn and East Hempfield townships, respectively. They died in Penn township, at a place now known as Lancaster Junction. Mr. Snavelly was a merchant and miller at that place, and Henry R., the grandson, still carries on the business.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Brubaker are valued members of the Old Mennonite Church and are among the most respected and esteemed residents of the locality.

DAVID H. KREITER, one of the enterprising business men and farmers of Penn township, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born in Warwick township, Feb. 11, 1858, and is one of the self-made men of our country, his prosperity being the result of his own unaided efforts, directed along paths of industry and integrity.

When only five years of age, he suffered the loss of his father, but he remained with his mother until twenty-one years of age, receiving his early education in the common schools of the neighborhood. Later, realizing the necessity for more extensive educational advantages, he went in 1884 to Indiana and entered the Northern Indiana Normal School of Valparaiso, where he remained three and one-half years.

In 1891, Mr. Kreiter established a cigar factory in Lititz and for five years was engaged in the manufacture of cigars, and during this time he also bought and packed leaf tobacco. While successfully conducting these enterprises, in 1896 he purchased the fine farm where he now resides, then known as the old Sunmy homestead, near Fairland, and rented the property for four years. From time to time, as the occasion demanded, he made improvements until he brought the place into a high state of cultivation, and made it one of the finest farms in Lancaster county. In 1901 Mr. Kreiter removed to his farm and himself engaged in farming, which calling he is now following with great success.

On Dec. 20, 1892, David H. Kreiter was married to Miss Maria Whitcraft, a daughter of John and Maria Whitcraft, and two children have been born to them: David Paul, born Aug. 3, 1899; and Charles Henry, born May 23, 1901.

Mr. and Mrs. Kreiter are both active members of the Moravian Church of Lititz, and are highly esteemed in that congregation. Mr. Kreiter is a man of enterprise and public-spirit and has borne an active part in all measures tending toward the development and improvement of the affairs of the township.

JOSEPH K. SHULTZ. Among the self-made men of Lancaster county—men who started out in life with health, strength and indomitable will as their only heritage and have achieved success and prominence as business men—we find the name of Joseph K. Shultz, who was born near Washington borough, in Manor township, Lancaster county, June 19, 1849, a son of Isaac and Mary Ann (Kearey) Shultz. The boyhood days of our subject were passed on the home farm and he early learned that to be the son of a Pennsylvania farmer did not mean a life of idleness. He attended the winter sessions of the common school in his neighborhood until, arriving at the proper age, he entered the Normal School at Millersville, remaining through four sessions. His school days ended, he began teaching a country school in North Hempfield township, an occupation which he followed successfully four years, after which he entered Eastman's Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. On graduating therefrom he was tendered and accepted the position of bookkeeper in the banking house of E. K. Smith & Co., of Columbia, Pa. Seeing an opportunity to start out in business on his own account, he, in 1877, opened a lumber yard in Washington borough, Lancaster county, and soon after added a coal yard to his lumber establishment. For many years he supplied the people for miles around with coal and one of the pleasant facts in connection with his dealings in coal (and his sales have exceeded $300,000), upon which he can dwell with much satisfaction is, that no patron of his ever paid for a pound of coal he did not get. In 1877 he purchased from his father the farm which he now owns, adjoining Washington borough, and where he now resides. This property is called the Blue Rock farm and is widely known as the leading tobacco farm in the county and environs, and its owner has become the acknowledged tobacco king of that section of the State. His average acreage of tobacco is forty, from which he has realized as high as $11,300 in a single season. Other farm products of a general or miscellaneous character are also produced on the farm and receive his personal supervision. As an agriculturist, coal and lumber merchant, Mr. Shultz finds his time too fully employed to admit of his taking an active interest in politics or seeking political honors or emoluments from his, the Democratic party.

On March 30, 1878, Mr. Shultz was joined in marriage to Miss Emma F. Stauffer, daughter of Jacob and Maria (Forrey) Stauffer. To this union have been born five children. (1) Joseph S. was graduated from Lehigh University in 1900, standing second in a class of 520 and being the valedictorian; he is now a draughtsman in the Navy department at Washington, D. C., the position having been tendered him prior to the date of his graduation. (2) Mamie E. is a student at Irving College, Mechanicsburg, Pa. (3) John J. is next in order of birth. (4) Isaac Victor died at the age of three years. (5) Albert Lloyd. The Shultz family, like their ancestors, are devout members of the Church of God. Starting out in life with honesty and fair dealing as the corner stone of his business life, public-spirited and enterprising as a citizen, Joseph K. Shultz deservedly holds a high place in the esteem of the community where his whole life has been thus far spent.

JOHN McMANAMY, in his day one of the leading farmers and highly esteemed citizens of Sadsbury township, this county, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, and ended a long and estimable life on his farm on April 20, 1893. He was buried in the Parkesburg cemetery, under the auspices of the Catholic Church, of which he was a devout member.

Hugh and Anna (McKale) McManamy, parents of John, were also natives of Ireland, where they spent their lives on a farm. They reared the following named children: Bridget, deceased wife of John Carty; John; Michael, a contractor and builder in Australia; and Thomas and James, both deceased. All but John went to Australia.

John McManamy was reared to young manhood in his native land, coming to America in 1859. After settling at Gap, Lancaster Co., Pa., he entered upon a life of industry which brought him worldly prosperity, reared his family in comfort, and when he was called away by death left many mourning friends. His warm heart was ever ready to respond to the call of those in distress, and few men in the locality had more friends or were more highly respected. In 1866 he moved to a farm which adjoins the present homestead, and which is still in the possession of his widow and children, and in 1879 the family settled on the present farm, which is well improved and very valuable.

Mr. McManamy was married Oct. 5, 1850, in Manchester, England, to Miss Bridget O'Connor, and children as follows were born to this union: Annie (deceased) married Joseph Hunter. Hugh married Belle Pennington; he holds the responsible position of foreman in the rolling mill at Chester, Pa. James M. married first Mary Hannah, and later a Mrs. Dunlap. Michael T. is residing with his mother. John M. also lives with his mother. E. Jenie married Harry Linton, a carpenter of Sadsbury township. Dora R. married John L. Gibeny, who conducts a hotel in Duncannon, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. McManamy was born in Galway, Ireland, May 14, 1831, daughter of Michael and Mary (Barrett) O'Connor, farming people of County Galway, the former of whom died in 1835 and the latter in 1876. The two children born to these excellent people were both daughters: Bridget, Mrs. McManamy; and Mary, who is married and still lives in Ireland.

Industrious, energetic, and the soul of honesty, Mr. McManamy was highly esteemed in his locality by his fellow citizens, and perhaps the only matter upon which he and his family did not agree was that of politics, the father being a Democrat, while the sons and the mother believed in the principles of the Republican party. All his life John McManamy was a devout member of the Catholic Church and lived up to the teachings of his faith.

JACOB H. GOOD, of the firm of J. H. Good & Son, butchers and dealers in fresh and salted meats at Millersville, Lancaster Co., Penn., was born in Pequea township, same county, Aug. 27, 1845, was reared on the home farm, and was educated in the public schools of his district.

Joseph Good, grandfather of Jacob H., was also a native of Lancaster and was a son of the supposed founder of the family, who came from Germany. Joseph Good was a resident of Pequea township and was a very active business man, being at various periods a farmer, miller and distiller. Joseph married Mary Kindig, a native of Lancaster county, to which union children were born in the following order: Jacob K., father of Jacob H.; Mary, deceased wife of Christian Johns, of Lancaster township; Barbara, deceased wife of Benjamin Martin, of the same place; John, deceased, who was a hotel keeper in Martic township and was also in the milling business for a time; Catherine, late wife of Benjamin Goss; and Elizabeth, married to George Warfel, of Pequea township.

Jacob K. Good was also born in Pequea township, was reared a farmer, but early in life engaged in milling and distilling, and later in butchering at Penn Valley, was active in local affairs, officiated as a member of the school board and was supervisor of Pequea township. He married Mary Haverstick, who bore him eleven children, namely: Joseph, a farmer who died unmarried in Pequea township; Susan, wife of Michael Hess, of Manor township; Elizabeth, unmarried; Abraham, a railroad employe, who enlisted three times during the Civil war, first for nine months, secondly for three months, and lastly for three years, and who died in Pequea township; Jacob H.; Kate and Mary, both unmarried; John who died in childhood; Barbara, unmarried; Solomon, a butcher on the old homestead in Penn Valley; and Sarah, widow of William Bechtold, residing in Florin, Lancaster county. The mother of this family died Sept. 2, 1891, at the age of seventy-two years, three months and six days, and the father passed away in 1895.

Jacob H. Good was employed in his father's distillery when a young man, but soon after marriage engaged in farming, which he followed until 1897, when he embarked in the butchering trade in partnership with his son, Elmer E., at Millersville, under the firm name of J. H. Good & Son, doing their own slaughtering, salting, smoking and packing and having also a large trade in fresh meats.

Jacob H. Good married, Feb. 20, 1870, Miss Elizabeth Smith, who was born in Conestoga township in 1851, and is a daughter of John Smith. To this marriage have been born thirteen children, of whom Elmer E. is the eldest; he was first engaged in the baking business at West Willow in company with J. R. Smith, under the style of Smith & Good, but is now the partner of his father, Jacob H. The remaining twelve children were born in the following order: Mary L., wife of Elam Herschok, of Herrville; William; Cora, wife of Benjamin Heidlauf, of Mountville; Elam, of Manor township; Charles, Ella, Annie, Jacob, Lucy, and Cora, all of the same township; Grant, deceased; and Flora, at home.

DANIEL D. HESS (deceased), a former business man of Quarryville, was born in Little Britain township, Aug. 15, 1835, a son of Jonas and Abbie (Pettigrew) Hess, who were both born in Lancaster county of Scotch and Irish parentage.

Jonas Hess, the father, was a farmer of Little Britain township for many years, and he raised a family of six children as follows: Daniel D.; Jackson Hess, deceased, was born in Lancaster county and moved to Wisconsin where he died in 1898, leaving a widow and one son, who still reside in Wisconsin. Martin, deceased, was a farmer of Quarryville. William, deceased, was a farmer of Little Britain township. Elias, deceased, was born in Lancaster and settled in Mechanics Grove, where he died in 1870, leaving a family. Mary J., who was born in Lancaster county, is the widow of Daniel Eckman, who resided for years at Providence, and then moved to near Quarryville, where he died in 1871, leaving a widow and two sons, who reside on the homestead; the sons are Galen L. and Daniel H.

Daniel D. Hess was reared on his father's farm, and received his education in the schools of the county. He died Feb. 4, 1890. Mr. Hess was married, in 1855, to Miss Catharine, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth Lefever, a pioneer family of Lancaster county. Mrs. Hess was born Dec. 6, 1832, on the family homestead in Quarryville borough, where she was reared and educated. At the time of his death Mr. Hess left a widow and eight children: S. Milton, born in Quarryville, in January, 1856, attended the Millersville State Normal School, where he received a good business education, after which he engaged in the manufacture and sale of phosphates, doing a large business in Pennsylvania and other States; he married Miss Sallie Williams, and has two sons, Walter and Miles. William was born in January, 1857, and married Miss Susan Keen, of Quarryville borough, where they reside on the old homestead owned by Mr. Hess's mother; he has ten children as follows: Virgie, who married Alvin Hess, of Lancaster City, and has one daughter, Mary C.; Adam; Anna; Odessa; Edith; William; Ernest; Ruth; Bertha; and Francis. Anna E. Hess (deceased) was born in January, 1859, and was well educated in a seminary; she was married to David Boffenmyer, of Lancaster county, and they afterward located in Quarryville, where the husband engaged in the coal and lumber business; Mrs. Boffenmyer died in December, 1890, leaving a son, John, and a daughter, Lucy, who were raised by their aunt Clara, on the homestead. Daniel M., born in June, 1860, was educated in the Millersville State Normal School, after which he married Miss Annie Hildebrand, of New Providence, at which place they now reside on a farm owned by Mr. Hess; they have one daughter, Esther. George B., born Oct. 8, 1863, received a normal school education, and is now engaged with his brother at Philadelphia, in the manufacture of phosphates. He married Miss Susan Popp, of Reading, Pa., and they reside in Philadelphia. They have seven children, as follows: Mary Celia, Daniel, Gertrude, George, Anna, Charles and Margaret. Mazie E., born in 1866, was married to Alfred Ellmaker, of Lancaster county, and they now reside in Philadelphia, where Mr. Ellmaker is now in the railroad business; they have one son, Lee. Emmet L., born in 1869, was educated in the State Normal School, and is now a traveling salesman for his brother's phosphate factory. Clara B., born in August, 1878, was educated at the Millersville State Normal School; she is at home with her mother, giving that aged parent her best care and attention. Mrs. Hess was several years ago stricken with paralysis, and this adds largely to Miss Hess's duties. In addition she has charge of her deceased sister's two children. Miss Hess is a lady of culture and refinement, and her gentle manner makes her greatly beloved by all who know her. Daniel D. Hess, the father of the foregoing family, lived with the late Jacob Kreider, in Fulton township, until he reached the age of sixteen years, when he moved to Quarryville and worked in the quarries there as a laborer. After his marriage, in 1855, he went into the lime business, and carried it on successfully until 1875; for years he was the largest operator in lime in the county, and he employed a large force of men and teams in the business. He then retired from business, selling out to his son, L. M., who also carried on the trade for several years. Mr. Hess built the warehouse on the Quarryville railroad, and dealt extensively in coal and lumber for some time, after which he sold the business, and building himself a handsome residence in the borough, retired from active business, and devoted his spare time to his farm property. This, however, proved not enough to engage him, and he embarked in the phosphate business in Reading, building a large concern, which in company with his sons, L. M. and G. B., has been made a heavy enterprise. He built large buildings on his farms, and improved them by helping the soil and raising proper crops. Mr. Hess took a prominent part in the building of the Quarryville railroad, and was a stockholder and director until the time of his death. He, in connection with Daniel Blair, graded the road from Quarryville to New Providence. He also built a number of houses in Quarryville. In 1862 he erected the large storehouse now occupied by G. W. Hensel, to whom he also sold a merchandise business. Toward the close of his life Mr. Hess's health failed and he left the active duties of his many enterprises, to the care of his sons. He took a great deal of pleasure in raising fine stock and owned some notable specimens.

In politics Daniel D. Hess was a staunch Democrat, and was a very prominent man in his party. Although not caring for office, he was a justice of the peace, and school director for quite a while. He was a member of Lodge No. 834, I. O. O. F., of Quarryville. In his death the community in which he resided lost a most valuable citizen, and his loss was deeply regretted by all. No man did more than he to improve and enrich the section in which he lived, and the charities were largely benefited by numerous contributions by him. He was an officer and greatly interested in the Sunday-school work of the Reformed Church. In all social circles his presence was always wanted, and his kindly manner and easy address were marked to a degree. He never spoke evil of any one, and did not like to hear others do so. Whether rich or poor, his hand was always outstretched to his neighbors, and he was democratic in all his ways.

SAMUEL BRUBAKER, a retired farmer and miller, belongs to the number of those venerable citizens of Lancaster county whose long and industrious lives have been given to the service of their community, and who are now waiting the opening of the doors to the Land Beyond in the peace and comfort that should wait on the closing years of an honorable and useful career.

Mr. Brubaker was born at Mill Creek, Earl township, Sept. 20, 1817, and is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Aker) Brubaker, of Lancaster county. The elder Samuel Brubaker was a farmer, and died in 1818, while a young man. His widow lived to be eighty years of age, dying in 1867, and both were buried in Rowland cemetery. They had a family of children as follows: Aker died young; William, born in 1810, died in 1891, Thompson, born in 1816, died in 1896; Samuel is mentioned below. These children were reared in the ancient Mennonite Church, of which father and mother were devoted members.

Samuel Brubaker, whose name introduces this sketch, is a grandson of Jacob Brubaker and also of Peter Aker. Both were farmers and lived in Lancaster county, where their quiet and well ordered lives were passed. Samuel Brubaker married Eliza A. Sprecker, by whom he has had the following children, Lizzie, Katie, John E., Anna and Samuel P. The mother of these children was born in Earl township and was a daughter of Isaac Sprecker.

Mr. Brubaker lived at home with his mother until he attained his majority, and then established himself as a miller on Mill Creek, where he was engaged for forty years in the mill which he had purchased when he was twenty-one years of age. In 1871 he retired from active life, and is now at an advanced age enjoying the respect and esteem of the community in which he lives. He has removed to New Holland, where he takes much satisfaction in the services of the Reformed Church, of which he is a member.

JOHN R. SMITH, a substantial business man of Pequea, is a native of that township, having been born May 10, 1855, at the place where he yet resides. He is a son of Isaac Smith, and a grandson of Christian Smith.

Christian Smith was of English descent, and grew to manhood in Lancaster county. He was left an orphan early in life, and had no educational advantages. He learned the plasterer's trade with Samuel Miller, of Strasburg, who was killed on J. W. Wise's Island while felling a bee tree. Mr. Smith worked at his trade during most of his life, and during the winter, for fifteen years, drove a wagon from Lancaster to Wilmington, Del. He married Miss Elizabeth Stotzemberger of Strasburg, and they were the parents of three children: Isaac, father of our subject; John and Eliza, both unmarried; all now deceased.

Isaac Smith was born in Lancaster county about 1828, passed his early life at home, and learned the plasterer's trade with his father. He received a common school education. He began life for himself before he was twenty years of age, and followed the trade of plasterer until his death, March 7, 1891. In 1853 he wedded Miss Harriet Rohrer, daughter of John Rohrer of Strasburg, and they had a family of six children: Christian W., of Lancaster; John R., our subject; Benjamin F., of Lancaster; Eliza, wife of John F. Martin, of West Willow; Isaac R., of Lancaster; and Eva B., unmarried.

John R. Smith lived with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age, and worked at the plasterer's trade. He was educated in the common schools of the county. Commencing life for himself, he continued in the plastering business until 1895 when he started the bakery which he has since carried on so successfully. He has also been extensively engaged in buying and packing tobacco, and has met with the prosperity he deserves. Politically he has always affiliated with the Republican party, and he has held the office of county committeeman for two terms. Fraternally he is a member of Lodge No. 912, O. U. A. M., of Lancaster City, and of the K. G. E., at West Willow. He is a member of the M. E. Church, at West Willow.

On April 13, 1884, Mr. Smith married Miss Susie Swartz, daughter of Christopher Swartz, of Highville, Lancaster county. They have no children.

LEWIS W. IRWIN. As an example of what may be accomplished by energy, industry and exemplary living, the successful career of Lewis W. Irwin may be cited, for he began life as a poor boy and now is reckoned among the leading and substantial men of his locality. His success has come through legitimate means, and it must be a source of pride and congratulation that he is a self-made man and has been able to attain to his present standing unaided. Mr. Irwin was born in Chester county, Pa., Jan. 25, 1853, a son of Andrew and Lizzie Irwin, both of whom were born and reared in Chester county.

By trade Andrew Irwin was a wheelwright, and he came of honest Scotch-Irish ancestry. Through some portions of Chester county he was well known as a skilled workman at his trade, which he followed there through life. He died in 1891, his widow surviving until 1897, her home having been with a daughter in Columbia. They reared a family of ten children, these being: (1) Thomas, born in Chester county, when a young man engaged on a whaling vessel going to New Zealand, and in that country he married. After some years of residence there he came back to America, locating at Wilmington, Del., where he followed the blacksmith trade for some years and later moved to Cumberland, Tenn., where he died in 1880, leaving a wife and three children. (2) John, born in Chester county, when a young man, enlisted for service in the Civil war, from his native county, and after its close, married and settled in Wilmington, Del., where both his wife and child died, some years ago. (3) James, born in Chester county, was a veteran of the Civil war, was three years in the service of his country as a volunteer, and then entered the regular army, and he died in the service, unmarried. (4) Charles, born in Chester county, also served through the Civil war and was one of the brave men killed at Charleston, S. C.; he was unmarried. (5) Benjamin, born in Chester county, learned the trade of carpenter, is unmarried, and lives on the old homestead. (6) Malcomb, born in Chester county, married and then settled in Wilmington, Del., where he died, leaving a family of two children. (7) Rebecca, born in Chester county, is the wife of Jefferson Kennedy, of Parkesburg, and they have one son, Charles. (8) Mary A., born in Chester county, is the wife of Benjamin Furguson, a resident of Mechanic's Grove, in Lancaster county, and their two children are,

Anna and Cecil. (9) Sallie, born in Chester county, married Samuel Mullen, of Columbia, where they reside, he being an engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and their two children are Ralph, and Clara.

Lewis W. Irwin, who completes the above family of ten children, grew up in Chester county, where he learned the trade of blacksmith and then went to Cumberland county, Tenn., where he followed this business for a period of two years. Then he returned to his old home and engaged in work at Quarryville for some five years, when he opened up a shop at Running Pump, and did a thriving business there for four years. He then purchased a farm, and in connection with his farming operations, carried on work at his trade. Those were busy years for Mr. Irwin, and he was up early and late, never neglecting any duty, and by his industry accumulating considerable money. For fourteen years Mr. Irwin worked in this way.

In 1884, Mr. Irwin was united in marriage to the most estimable daughter of one of the leading citizens of Lancaster county, belonging to a family well and widely known. The lady of his choice was Miss Lizzie Myers, who was a daughter of Jacob and Susan Myers, and she was born in Lancaster county and was reared to fair young womanhood on the old homestead, in Eden township. She received a good, common school education, and was in every way fitted to be the capable helpmate for our subject.

In February, 1898, Mr. Irwin became the fortunate owner of what is locally known as the Samuel Shimp farm, which is located in Eden township, although it is on the line of Bart township. This consists of eighty acres of some of the best land in Lancaster county. It is well watered, advantageously situated, and the improvements made since his location here have added vastly to the place, not only in attractiveness, but also in material value. With his accustomed energy he completely renovated everything, and now his beautiful brick house stands in the midst of a fertile tract, while the huge bank barn testifies to the necessity for providing for an abundant yield. Mr. Irwin believes in many modern methods of farming, and his place is fitted with conveniences and sanitary arrangements not found in many larger estates.

To Mr. and Mrs. Irwin have been born a family consisting of two sons and one daughter, all three bright and intelligent students, namely: Jessie, born in January, 1885; Charles, born in Eden township, in 1887; and May, born in 1889. In his political faith, Mr. Irwin has never wavered from the Democratic party. Although he has never aspired to office, he was honored by President Grover Cleveland, by an appointment as postmaster at May, which duties he most efficiently performed. Through his own industry Mr. Irwin has become independent and prosperous, and has succeeded in gaining the esteem and confidence of all with whom circumstances have thrown him. His cheerful persistence and constant industry have brought their reward, and he is now assured that his declining years may be those of ease, while he has been able to make proper provision for his loved ones.

JACOB W. HEISEY, a retired farmer in West Donegal township, was born on the farm adjoining his present residence, Feb. 18, 1838, and is a son of Henry B. and Catherine (Wolgemuth) Heisey. The parents were natives of Mt. Joy, and came to the farm where Jacob W. was born in 1834, and there they spent their remaining years.

Henry B. Heisey was born Aug. 26, 1808, and was an extensive farmer until some twenty years before his death, May 23, 1896. His wife, who was born Feb. 23, 1816, died Dec. 13, 1890, at the age of seventy-four years. They were laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill burying grounds, a part of the old homestead. Born to them were the following children: Barbara, deceased, who married J. B. Brene-man, and lived in McPherson, Kans.; Nancy, deceased, who married Christ. Miller, of Conoy township; Jacob W., whose name introduces this article; Catherine W., deceased wife of John B. Longenecker; Elizabeth W., deceased, who married F. W. Gantz; Susan W., who married C. D. Stauffer, now a retired farmer of Elizabethtown; Mary, Fanny and Henry, who all died in infancy; Solomon W. (deceased); and Daniel W., a farmer of West Donegal township.

The grandfather of Jacob W. Heisey was Daniel Heisey, who was a farmer all his days. At his death his remains were interred in Pleasant Hill cemetery. His children were: Jacob B., who married Lizzie L. Lehman; Daniel B.; Henry B., who married Catherine Wolgemuth; Barbara, wife of Peter Lehman; Elizabeth, wife of Michael Shenk. All are dead. The paternal great-grandparents spelled the name Heise, and came from Switzerland.

The maternal grandparents of Jacob W. Heisey were Daniel and Barbara (Witmer) Wolgemuth, farming people of Lancaster county. Daniel Wolgemuth died in Mt. Joy township, and the remains of himself and wife were buried in a private cemetery on their old farm. They had the following children: Joseph W., whose wife was a Nissley; Samuel, whose wife was Barbara Sherrer; Henry, whose wife was Fanny Brubaker; Barbara, the wife of Jacob Engle, died in January, 1901; Nancy, wife of Abraham Brubaker; Catherine, wife of Henry Heisey. All these are dead, but Barbara, the wife of Samuel, and Henry.

Jacob W. Heisey and Miss Fanny Longenecker were married in Lancaster, Nov. 28, 1858, by the Rev. J. J. Strine. They became the parents of the following family: Simon C., a farmer in West Donegal township, who married Anna Lindemuth; W. Scott, a farmer, merchant and lime manufacturer in Rheems, West Donegal township, whose biography occupies another page; Lizzie L., wife of Ferris Landis, a farmer and the owner of a steam thrasher in West Donegal township; Harry L., of West Donegal township, who married Lizzie Lindemuth; Edward L., of West Donegal township, who married Anna Erb, and Christ. L., Samuel M. and Mary L., all living at home.

Mrs. Fanny (Longenecker) Heisey was born in West Donegal township, May 5, 1841, only child of Christian and Elizabeth (Berks) Longenecker, born on adjoining farms in Lancaster county. Her father, who was born Nov. 20, 1805, died Feb. 23, 1895, at almost ninety years of age; her mother, who was born Jan. 16, 1800, died Aug. 10, 1851, and they were laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill cemetery. They were members of the Old Mennonite Church.

Jacob W. Heisey remained at home with his parents until he became of age, when he rented the old homestead, and carried it on for nine years. At the end of that time he took part of the farm, on which he erected new buildings, and there he made his home for seventeen years, when he returned to the old homestead, remodelling the buildings with the intention of spending his remaining years there. Two years later, however, he removed to his present home, and here he is still living, full of years and honor. He was school director three years, and in his more active days one of the most influential citizens of the community. For some time Mr. Heisey has been nearly blind, but takes much interest in the affairs of the world about him. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, and in religion a member of the Brethren in Christ Church. His name deserves honorable mention in a work devoted to the leading men of Lancaster county.

JOHN W. PHILLIP (deceased) was in his life time a successful farmer in East Drumore township, Lancaster county, and was born in Colerain township, Oct. 2, 1845, a son of William and Mary J. (Lovett) Phillip, both of whom were born in Lancaster county, and who lived in Colerain township. Of their children the only son living is now in the West. Three of the daughters are still living: Margaret J., who is the wife of James Montgomery, of Eden township, and the mother of four children; Annie, the wife of Nelson Bunting, of Colerain township; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Hugh Penny, of Russellville, Chester county, and the mother of one daughter, Etta.

John W. Phillip grew to manhood under the care of his parents and became a farmer, to which work his life was devoted. In February, 1872, he was married to Mary L., a daughter of John and Rebecca (Northamber) Barkley, an old and prominent Lancaster county family. John Barkley was born in Colerain township, Feb. 12, 1818, and was the son of James Barkley, who was of Scotch-Irish parentage. John Barkley was settled for a time after his marriage at Peach Bottom, Lancaster county, and then removed to his present home in Colerain township, where he is still living at an advanced age. His wife died in 1892, leaving two sons and three daughters.

Mrs. Phillip, who is the eldest of her father's family, was born in December, 1849, and was reared to womanhood under the parental roof in Colerain township, where she married Mr. Phillip. They located on one of his father's farms in Colerain township, where they remained for eighteen years. For three years they lived in Bart township, and then buying the Hines farm in East Drumore township, made that their home as long as he lived. His death came in September, 1896. His widow is still living on the farm.

Mr. Phillip was not only a successful farmer and an industrious man, but his character and integrity commanded the respect and retained the confidence and esteem of the community. For several years he was one of the trustees and the superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Methodist Church, of which he was a devout member. In politics he was a Republican, and an active worker in the interests of his party.

To Mr. and Mrs. Phillip were born the following family: Grace, born in December, 1873, who is unmarried, and lives at home with her mother; Cora B., November, 1874, who married Harry Shirk, a farmer of Colerain township; Harry B., Aug. 31, 1876, who manages the farm for his mother; Anna M., October, 1877, who is the wife of John Whitman, and lives with her husband in East Drumore township; Walter W., November, 1882, who is unmarried and at home, as is his brother, Charles L., born in April, 1884; George Blair, born Aug. 7, 1890, was killed by a runaway team in May, 1900.

The following are the brothers and sisters of Mrs. Phillip: Nancy, who married Emanuel Waltman, of Chester county, and is the mother of Roy, Clyde, Ada, Flossie and Sarah; William J., who died when a young man; John, a farmer in Chester county, who married Miss Mary Clinton, and has the following family, Freeland, Ruth, Marion and Helen; A. S., a farmer in Chester county, who married Anna Pickel, and has one son, John; Clara, who is the wife of Emmett Hinness, of Chester county, and is the mother of John and Delia.

John W. Phillip served as a member of Co. D, 195th P. V. I., and shared the fortunes of his regiment until the close of the war. His honorable discharge was given him at Washington in January, 1866. Mr. Phillip was a man highly esteemed in the community, where he was loved and respected for his many good and manly qualities.

AARON HUBER. One of the most popular and highly esteemed members of the old and honored Huber family, of West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, is Aaron Huber, the owner and operator of one of the best appointed farms in that locality. Aaron Huber was born in December, 1854, a son of Christian and Ann (Harnish) Huber, was reared on the old homestead, and received his education in the public schools of his district.

After completing his schooling, he went to work on his father's farm, remaining under the home roof until he was thirty years old. He then began operations for himself on a desirable tract of twenty acres, where he carries on general farming. His ideas are progressive and his land shows that it is managed in a scientific way, and yields very satisfactory returns. A staunch Republican, he has taken an active interest in the advance of his party, but never consents to accept office at its hands. Mr. Huber is a bachelor, but while not held by domestic ties, he is one of the most popular residents in the neighborhood, and one of the most satisfactory and substantial citizens of West Lampeter township.

HENRY RINIER. There are few men in Quarryville, Lancaster county, Pa., who have passed through the vicissitudes of fortune and war that have come to the subject of our sketch, since his early manhood. From a modest farmer to a patriotic soldier, fighting for the Union under Grant, amid the most active events of the campaign, from a soldier, returning to his home with honors, to a citizen identified with the best interests of his county and State, Mr. Rinier has born himself with credit to the name he bears. At the same time Mr. Rinier has furnished a practical example to the younger generation of men who may be handicapped as he was in his youth by lack of opportunity. Mr. Rinier is a self-educated, self-made man, as will appear later in the sketch.

Henry Rinier was born in Colerain township, Aug. 4, 1827. His parents were Asa and Nancy (Stewart) Rinier. Asa Rinier was born in West Drumore, Lancaster county, in 1798, and his wife was born in East Drumore in 1801. Asa Rinier was the son of Joseph and Polly Rinier, who were born in New Jersey. Joseph Rinier was the son of Joshua Rinier, whose parents were French. On the maternal side of our subject—the Stewarts, Nancy was the only child of William and Mary Stewart, who came to this country from Ireland, and settled in Bart township, Lancaster county, in 1784.

Joseph Rinier, our subject's grandfather, first settled, as far as is known, in West Drumore in 1780, where he lived and died, leaving a family, as follows: Jesse, Samuel, Peter, Asa (the father of our subject), Joseph, Stacy, John, George and Lydia (who became the wife of Jacob Peters, who lived and died in Manor township, Lancaster county). Asa Rinier grew up in East Drumore and in 1820, married Miss Nancy Stewart, a daughter of William Stewart, a man of fine education, who was one of the first school teachers in this section. Asa Rinier and wife first settled in West Drumore. Here they lived for a time, later moving to Colerain, and eventually to Conestoga township, where he died at the home of his son Joseph, in 1882. His wife died in 1849. Asa Rinier was a member of the M. E. Church, while his wife had always adhered to the Dunkard Church. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. They raised a large family, of which Rev. Daniel, the eldest, was born in 1822, and as a young man married Elizabeth Beech, of Lancaster county. After fitting himself for the ministry he located in his home county, where he is still preaching. John, born in 1825, married Miss Martha Hinet, and is now a resident of Manor township; he is a stone mason by trade. Mary A., born in 1829, is the deceased wife of John O'Brian; they resided in Lancaster county, where she left a large family. Joseph, born in 1832, was a soldier in the Civil war; he married Miss Snyder, of Lancaster county, and they now live in Martic township. Hiram and Alfred were twins, of whom Alfred died in childhood, while Hiram, who was a soldier in the Civil war, married a lady of Lancaster county, and now resides in Martic township with a large family. William, born in Lancaster county in 1836, enlisted as a soldier in the Civil war, was taken prisoner at Cold Harbor, and died in Andersonville prison in 1863.

Henry Rinier, our subject, grew to manhood in Lancaster county, and received a very limited education. Recognizing the value of an education later in life, he applied himself assiduously to books, and as the result of thorough study, he is now a well informed man on all subjects, particularly the history of this and foreign lands. As a young man he engaged in farming, and hauling ore. In 1851 he married Miss Julia A. Rinier, the daughter of George and Susan (Fondersmith) Rinier, one of Lancaster county's old pioneer families. Mrs. Rinier was born in 1830, in Strasburg township, where she grew to womanhood. Our subject settled in the town of Quarryville in 1852, and has continued his residence there to the present time, being engaged largely in the line business. During the Civil war he enlisted in the 3rd Heavy Artillery, stationed at Fortress Monroe. Later he was transferred to the 88th P. V. I., under General Grant. Here he remained until the war closed in 1865. During the exciting period of the war, our subject saw much active service. His company was engaged at different times with Mosby's guerrillas. He was on duty at Richmond and other important places. At the close of the war he was mustered out at Fortress Monroe and he hastened home to his wife and family. Our subject is the father of two daughters. Elmyra, the eldest, born in October, 1852, is now the wife of Benjamin Swinehart, a farmer of Colerain township. They have four children, Daisy, the eldest, was raised by our subject and his wife. She is single and resides in Lancaster county. The other children are Conrad, Charles and Annie, who have remained with their parents. Susan, born in Quarryville in 1855, was educated in the public schools of that town, and is now the wife of Frank Waltman, of Quarryville. They have six children, Effie (the wife of Irwin Ramsey, of Eden township), Annie, Harris, Wayne, Herbert and Abbie.

Politically Mr. Rinier was brought up a Democrat, but affiliated with the Republican party. He may be counted among the independent voters. Religiously both he and his wife are devout members of the M. E. Church. Ambition, experience and earnest endeavor have been the qualities of mind that have moulded the life of our subject, and endeared him to the people of his town and county. His uprightness of character and his many virtues have given him a place among the intellectual people of Lancaster county. Few men there are who, lacking opportunity, have forged their way to the front by dint of perseverance. As a great reader in a wide range of subjects, and as a keen observer of men and events, Mr. Rinier merits the credit and esteem which are accorded him by his fellow towns people. He has lived a retiring, unassuming life, but always ready to bear his share of the burdens and ever ready to help others.

ISAIAH F. HESS, a successful young farmer of Manor township, but a carpenter by trade, with his residence a mile and a half north of Safe Harbor, Lancaster county, was born Nov. 23, 1860, in the township where he still resides, and is a son of Jacob and Margaret (Frey) Hess, of well-known Lancaster county families.

At the age of twenty years, Isaiah F. Hess, who had been reared on a farm near Creswell, Pa., and had been educated in the public schools, rented land on which he farmed for ten years, in the meantime working at his trade, which he had learned from his father. By following carpenter work and raising tobacco on his rented land, Mr. Hess was able in 1890 to purchase thirty-nine acres of good farming land on which he does general farming, taking besides an occasional contract at carpenter work.

In 1880 Isaiah F. Hess married Miss Emma Manning, daughter of Adam K. and Annie (Funk) Manning, and this union has been blessed with two children, viz., Jacob M., born April 6, 1881; and Annie M., born July 28, 1883. The family worship at the United Brethren Church, of which Mr. Hess has been a member for more than twenty years and is at present a class leader.

David Hess, the great-grandfather of Isaiah F. Hess, was born in Germany, was a farmer in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, and reared a family of three children, John, David and Michael. Michael Hess, the youngest of these three, was the grandfather of Isaiah F., and was a hotel keeper by vocation the greater part of his life. Michael Hess married Miss Mary Rothran, who bore him eight children, of whom five reached mature years, viz.: Daniel, John and David, all now deceased; Michael, of Illinois; and Jacob.

Jacob Hess, father of Isaiah F. Hess, was born Oct. 31, 1822, in Conestoga township, where he learned the carpenter's trade at which he worked until 1865, then enlisted for the Civil war in the Union army, but, the war being brought to a close, was discharged in 1866 and next engaged in farming in Manor township. To the marriage of Jacob Hess and Margaret Frey, daughter of Frederick Frey, have been born eleven children, viz.: Mary, widow of Christ Kline, living in Illinois; Josiah, deceased; Christiann, wife of Christ Deitrich, of Manor township; Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Kindig, of the same township; Isaiah F.; Amanda and Mattie, unmarried; and four that died in infancy. The family are members of the United Evangelical Church and are among the most respected and substantial residents of Manor township.

HENRY PHILLIPS. Perhaps no resident of Quarryville, Lancaster county, has more personal, attached friends than has Henry Phillips. The elements of character which win confidence and high regard, are possessed by him, in the highest degree. Mr. Phillips is a man of moral worth, of integrity of character, a friend to be depended upon, and one whose exemplary life is an example to others, although quiet and entirely unobtrusive.

The birth of Henry Phillips was in the township of East Drumore, July 29, 1842, and he was a son of Michael and Hannah (Harmon) Phillips, both of whom were born in Lancaster county, the former being the son of Henry and Margaret Phillips, who, although born in this county, came of German ancestry.

Henry Phillips, the grandfather, first settled at Conewingo Furnace, in this county, managing here for a number of years for James Hopkins, and both he and wife died at this place. Their children were: Michael, father of Henry; Katie, who died unmarried; Henry, deceased, who settled in East Drumore township and was a carpenter by trade; Miss Nancy, a resident of East Drumore township; Jacob, deceased, who settled in Philadelphia, where he was a moulder by trade, and reared a family; Mrs. James McMichael, deceased; Betsey, deceased, was the wife of George Shaub, of Quarryville; Polly, deceased, the wife of Jacob Shaub, a farmer of East Drumore township; Lydia, deceased, wife of Jacob Brown, of Lancaster city; and Susan, wife of Jacob Barr, of East Drumore township.

Michael Phillips, son of Henry, and father of Henry, of this sketch, was given the best possible schooling in his locality, and started out in life as a tailor, learning the trade while still a young man. His marriage was to Miss Hannah Harmon, who was a daughter of Henry Harmon, one of the wealthy and prominent farmer citizens of East Drumore township. After marriage Mr. Phillips and wife settled in East Drumore township where, in connection with work at his trade, he carried on farming, purchasing an estate in this township. In later years he removed to Quarryville, where he engaged in work at his trade until within a few years of his death; his wife had passed away prior to the Civil war. Both parents were worthy members of the Old Mennonite Church, consistent Christian people. The family of children born to Michael Phillips numbered ten: Mary, the eldest, suffered death in childhood from burns; James died in childhood; Jacob, born in East Drumore township, grew to manhood, served faithfully in a Pennsylvania regiment through the Civil war, and after its close came home and was married to Margaret Redman, of Lancaster county, and they settled on a farm in East Drumore township, where he died, leaving a wife and family who now reside in Colerain township; John learned the tailor trade and worked at it until twenty-six years of age, when he died in Quarryville; Anna, who is the widow of Joseph Shaub, resides with her family in East Drumore township; Henry is the sixth in the order of birth; Benjamin, born on the old homestead, enlisted for service in the Civil war, was wounded in one of the early battles, was later transferred to one of the gunboats, veteranized in Co. D, 195th P. V. I., and served until the close of the war, when he moved to Carroll county, Va., where he married a Miss Graham, and where he is now engaged in contracting and building, having become one of the substantial men of that county; Susan, born in this county, is the wife of James Fry, and resides in East Drumore township; Elizabeth, born in East Drumore, is the wife of John Lundy, of Reading, Pa., and Michael, the youngest, is a cigar-maker of Lancaster City, married Miss Mary Killion, of Lancaster, and has no family.

Henry Phillips received but limited education, leaving school to enter upon his apprenticeship under his father in the tailoring business. In 1859 he was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Groff, the estimable daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Myers) Groff, both of these families being prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Lancaster county. The birth of Mrs. Phillips was in East Drumore township in 1842, and here she grew to womanhood, obtaining her education in the common schools of Lancaster county. The children born to this union were: Fannie and Susan, both of whom died in childhood; Joseph, who married Miss Ida Sutter, a daughter of Lorin Sutter of this village, follows the trade of shoemaker in Quarryville, and has one daughter, Anna, who is a student; and Charles G., the youngest of the family, is now a printer in the office of the Quarryville Sun, unmarried.

After marriage, our subject and wife settled in Quarryville, where he engaged in his tailoring business. At the outbreak of the Civil war, Mr. Phillips was one of the first loyal citizens to offer his services to his country, enlisting in Co. D, 195th P. V. I., serving faithfully until the close of the war, in the Army of the Potomac, and was honorably discharged. Returning to his home, Mr. Phillips resumed his merchant tailoring and has continued to prosper ever since.

Politically, Mr. Phillips has always supported the Republican party, and has efficiently performed the duties of tax-collector for his borough. Socially, he is a member of Post No. 511, G. A. R., of Quarryville, in which he holds official position. Both Mr. Phillips and family are active members of the M. E. Church of Quarryville, in which he has long been a trustee, for many years the efficient superintendent of the Sabbath school and for the last eighteen years has been the leader of the church choir.

Henry Phillips is one of Quarryville's most respected and influential citizens, in business as well as church work. His charities have been large, his interest in public affairs constant, and his neighborly kindness has won him the affection and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact.

BENJAMIN K. ESHLEMAN. It is rare in American communities to find a family in which for generation after generation the father has taught his trade to his son, and where in each case the proficiency of the learner has been the theme of general comment and admiration. Such, however, has been the exceptional history of the Eshlemans, who for more than a century have been among the most highly esteemed citizens of the locality in which they have resided.

Henry Eshleman, the great-grandfather of Benjamin K., was a blacksmith, of sturdy strength and strong sinews, who carried on his trade at Cromwell, where he owned forty acres of land. He was the father of three sons, Jacob, John and Henry, and two daughters. Of the latter, one married a Hawthorne and the other a Kline. John, the second son, was the grandfather of Benjamin K. Eshleman. He learned his father's trade and worked at it throughout his life. In 1811 he put up a new shop and built a large dwelling of sawed logs, in which he intended to keep a tavern; this business, however, was not to his taste, and the house, which became the family homestead, is now the residence of Benjamin K. Toward the close of his life he gave up active work at his trade and devoted himself to farming upon the thirty-six acres of land which he owned. He was one of the founders of the Evangelical Church at Cromwell, donating the land for the site of the church building; he was also one of the denomination's exhorters. During the war of the Revolution he was drafted as a soldier and for a short time did military service in the patriot army. He was twice married, his first wife being Susan Bender and his second Catherine Dickey. Of the second marriage there was no issue, but by his first he became the father of eleven children: John, Jacob (the father of Mr. Benjamin K. Eshleman), Henry, Martin, Elizabeth, Susan, Mary, Catherine, Anna, Martha and Fannie.

Jacob Eshleman was born in 1807. He learned the trade followed by his father and grandfather and in 1830 opened a smithy of his own. In 1851 he bought his father's shop, which he conducted until 1860, when, upon the marriage of his son, Benjamin K., he surrendered the business to him, retiring to his thirty-six acre farm, which he continued to cultivate until his death, in 1887. He, too, was an earnest and active member of the Evangelical Church. He married Catherine, a daughter of Michael Kauffman, who bore him nine children, of whom Benjamin K. was the third in the order of birth, the eldest son. The others were Mary Ann, Fannie, Jacob, Susan, Elizabeth, Adeline, Amanda and Isaiah. Mary Ann married David Burkley; Fannie became Mrs. John Binkley; Jacob died in childhood; Susan married Abraham Hershey; Elizabeth, Benjamin Erb; Adeline, Daniel Frey; and Amanda, Jacob Kauffman. Isaiah was a school teacher and died unmarried. After the death of his first wife, Jacob Eshleman married Elizabeth Lev-enite.

Benjamin K. Eshleman learned the ancestral trade, and became an excellent machinist. His grandfather and father had both made wagons, and he continued the manufacture, the output of the shop being conceded to be the best in the county. It was in 1860, shortly after his marriage, as has been already said, that he took possession of the old shop in which his father and grandfather had toiled so hard, so long and so well. In 1885 he purchased his father's thirty-six acres, and he and his wife own six acres besides. In addition to the conduct of his shop and farm, he has dealt successfully to some extent in horses. While largely self-made, his intercourse with the world has sharpened his perceptive power and broadened his comprehension. He may be said to be sympathetic without being gullible, shrewd yet broad minded; gentle yet strong. He has served on the school board several years.

Mrs. Eshleman's maiden name was Mary Hershey. She was a daughter of Abraham and Magdalena (Martin) Hershey, and was born in 1836, in the neighborhood of Cromwell. Five children have been born to herself and her husband, who were married in 1860: Anna M., who died in infancy; Abraham, Alice and Elizabeth, who live with their parents; Benjamin, a farmer, who married Anna Kendig, and is the father of one son, Edward. He was educated at the State Normal School at Millersville, and for two years taught school in Lancaster county. The family are members of the United Evangelical Church, Mr. Benjamin K. Eshleman being one of the society's trustees.

MARTIN METZROTH was born in Lancaster, Pa., in June, 1854, and died May 22, 1900.

Anthony and Barbara (Rowe) Metzroth, his parents, were born in Germany, and were married in Lancaster. The father died in 1884, at the age of fifty-six years; and the mother in 1896, at the age of seventy-five years. They were buried in Zion and St. Joseph cemeteries, in Lancaster. The father was a successful business man, and conducted a bakery in Lancaster for thirty-five years. In his politics he was a Democrat. To him and his wife were born: Martin; Mary, the wife of Jacob Brownsworth, a barber in Lancaster; Anthony, who was associated with his father, is now managing the business which he established, and married Elizabeth Herzog, the sister of Mrs. Martin Metzroth; and Charlotte and Elizabeth, who died young. Anthony Metzroth was a member of several fraternal orders at the time of his death, and was highly esteemed in the community.

Martin Metzroth and Amelie Herzog were married May 18, 1876, and to their union was born one daughter, Mary E., who is now at home with her mother.

Mrs. Amelie (Herzog) Metzroth was born in Lancaster, Pa., a daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Gardner) Herzog, both natives of Baden, Germany. The mother came to America in 1854, and settled in Lancaster. The father was the proprietor and manager of a hotel in Lancaster for many years after his return from the army. The hotel business impaired his health and he was compelled to give it up. A successful speculator, he became quite prosperous in his closing years. He also carried on a grocery store for some time, which paid him well. Mr. Herzog belonged to the I. O. O. F., and the Red Men. Politically he was a Republican. His death occurred in 1872, when he was forty-eight years of age. The mother, who was born June 22, 1823, is now living in Lancaster. They had the following children: Catherine, late wife of John Koutz; Thomas, who is unmarried, and makes his home with his mother; Mary, the wife of Andrew J. Huffnagle, of Lancaster, Pa.; Caroline, wife of Martin Muller, a cigar manufacturer at Quakertown, Pa.; Elizabeth, the wife of Anthony Metzroth; Amelie; Catherine, the wife of Chester Hubly, a traveling salesman, of Collingwood, New Jersey.

Martin Metzroth served a thorough apprenticeship at the baking trade under his father's instructions, with whom he remained until his marriage, when he came to Lancaster, to operate the "Spring Garden Hotel," the property of his wife's father. There he remained for six years, and in 1885, established himself in Florin, and until his death carried on the hotel, where his wife now resides. In his politics he was a Democrat, and he was a member of the Red Men and the Mystic Chain.

In Florin he held a good position in the community, where he was known as the proprietor of a good hotel, and as a man who did business in a thoroughly practical and satisfactory manner. Mr. Metzroth had many warm friends and was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

ISAAC DILLER, a well-known farmer of Leacock township, where his good qualities and industrious habits have long commanded the recognition and respect of the community, was born in Salisbury township Oct. 12, 1835, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Bashore) Diller.

Isaac Diller was a farmer, and died in 1871, at the age of sixty-five years; his widow died in 1874, at the age of seventy-five. Both were buried in Rowland's Church cemetery. The following children were born to them: Mary A., the widow of George Worst, of Paradise township; Daniel and George, both deceased; Margaret, widow of Christ. Eby, living in Salisbury township; and Isaac, whose name appears above. The paternal grandparents of Isaac Diller were George and Susannah (Sprecker) Diller, both of Lancaster county. His maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bashore, of Lancaster county, moved to Adams county, where they lived and died.

Isaac Diller was married in 1865, in Salisbury township, to Josephine, daughter of Isaac and Rebecca (Brooks) Walker. Mrs. Diller was born in Sadsbury township, and died in 1873, at the age of thirty-two years. She was the mother of the following children: Anna L., who is unmarried, and makes her home with her father; Isaac W., who married Lizzie Skiles, by whom he has four children, and who is in the livery business at Christiana, Pa.; and Coleman, a farmer of Leacock township, who married Alice Carpenter, by whom he has one child. Isaac Walker, who was a merchant at Gap, Pa., died in 1896. His widow died in 1898. Both were buried in the old Quaker cemetery in Sadsbury township, both having been Friends in religion. He was a merchant twelve years, and a farmer prior to that time. Mr. and Mrs. Walker had children: Josephine; Mary L., who married John Roberts, and lives in Texas; Anna M., who died unmarried; James, an attorney at Lancaster; Esther, married to Diller Worst, of Chester county, Pa.; Sarah J., married to Harry Hershey, of Philadelphia; and Louis, a merchant in Sadsbury township, who has his father's old store.

Isaac Diller lived with his parents until his marriage, when he began farming on the old homestead in Salisbury, where he remained until the death of his wife. After that he was engaged as a cattle drover at Intercourse some twelve years, at the expiration of that period resuming farming operations in Leacock township, which he has very successfully followed to the present time. Socially he belongs to the Knights of Pythias, and in politics he is a Democrat. Mr. Diller stands well in the community, and has accumulated a very good fortune, the reward of thrift, industry and business ability combined in a degree not at all common.

ISAAC M. BOWMAN. Lancaster county has among its reliable and substantial citizens, many who have won their ease and prominence through their own unassisted efforts, and one of these is Isaac M. Bowman, who is respected and esteemed by his community and valued for his worth as an honest citizen. He was born in Strasburg township, in July, 1836, a son of Isaac and Annie (Musser) Bowman, well known residents of the county.

Isaac Bowman was born in New Holland, in Lancaster county, and his wife came from one of the old and leading families of Cumberland county, Pa. For eight years after marriage, Isaac Bowman resided in Strasburg township, and then removed to a farm located in Eden township, this place being his home for a period of twenty years, his next change being as years were creeping on, to the home of his son, Isaac, in Camargo; and there, with filial care and affection surrounding him, he died in 1879. Some two years prior to this, his wife had passed out of life. She had been a most devoted member of the Mennonite Church, her lovely Christian life exemplifying the faith taught by the pious teachers of this unworldly order. To Isaac Bowman and wife a family of nine children was born, these being: John, a resident of New Providence; Elizabeth, who died at the age of eighteen years, just as she was blooming into fair womanhood; Henry, born in Lancaster county, and now a farmer in Dauphin county, who married Miss Annie Bowman, and they have one son, Frank; Susan, who married George Benedict, of Lancaster City, and died leaving a family of four children to mourn the loss of a most devoted mother; Joseph, who married Miss Laura Grush, of Strasburg, and resides in Philadelphia, where he is engaged in work at his trade of cabinetmaker; Amanda, who married Isaac Groff, of this county, and has a family of six children; Benjamin, who died when a young man; Annie, who is the wife of Rev. Abraham Brubaker, of West Lampeter township; and our subject, Isaac M.

Reared under the careful eye of a good and pious mother, and given a good, common school education, Mr. Bowman of this sketch was not badly equipped for beginning life. His first move was a wise one, as he early decided to learn the shoemaker trade and thus be able to make an honorable living, no matter what misfortune might overtake him. His teacher was the well known Isaac Myers, Esq., who later moved to Ohio, and died some years ago. Mr. Bowman worked industriously at his trade, in the village of Camargo, prospered and bought a home there, made many friends, and some years after was able to purchase a tract of land in this locality, and built upon it one of the most attractive and comfortable residences in the village. This the family has occupied ever since.

The marriage of Mr. Bowman to Miss Charlotte Alexander, was celebrated in 1859. She was the estimable daughter of James and Martha Alexander, this family being one of the leading pioneer ones of Lancaster county. The birth of Mrs. Bowman was in Eden township, in 1837, and her companionship was given our subject until 1881, when she was called from earth, having been a devoted wife and a loving mother. The children of this union numbered seven, as follows: Freeland, born in Eden township, when grown to maturity, moved to Cleveland, Ohio, and is engaged there in a mercantile establishment; he married and has one daughter, Gladys. Harry, born in 1863, is a telegraph operator, in Atlantic City; he married Miss Katie Yager of this county. Edward, born in 1865, is located at Harrisburg, where he is engaged in railroading, on the Pennsylvania Railroad; he married Ida Fraley, and their three children are Clara, Freeland and Elwood. Ada N. died in childhood. Abbie, born in 1869, is the wife of Thomas Edwards, ticket agent at Mount Hope, this county, and their five children are, Edna, Charles, Mable, Percy and Jay. Frank, born in 1871, married Miss Jessie Longmaker, of this county, by whom he has three children, and they now reside on his farm in Lampeter township. Martin, born in 1874, married Miss Emma Rohrer, of Strasburg, and they live in Providence township, on a farm; their two children are, Isaac and Elsie. Mr. Bowman takes great pride and comfort in these most estimable children and in the host of intelligent grandchildren, all of whom give him honor and respect.

In politics Mr. Bowman has, for many years, been thoroughly identified with the Republican party, and in religious matters he is of the Mennonite faith. During late years Mr. Bowman has been giving attention to truck and fruit raising for the Lancaster city market, and he has been eminently successful. Starting out in life with very limited means, by his energy and industry, he has accumulated much more than a competency. His life has been filled with kind deeds to others, his character is one of integrity, and his circle of both private and business friends is very large.

CHRISTIAN MYERS, deceased. During a long and useful life Christian Myers stood for all that was best in both private and public life in his community. Mr. Myers belonged to one of the oldest and most honored of the pioneer families of Lancaster county, having been a son of Jacob and Susan Myers.

Christian Myers was a product of Eden township, where he was born in March, 1834, and there he lived, esteemed and respected by those who had known him longest and best, until the date of his death, Nov. 6, 1898. His home was on the old homestead, which was his property for many years prior to his decease, at which time he owned also much other valuable land.

Christian Myers was married in December, 1882, to Miss Ella Pickle, who was born in December, 1862, in Bart township, the estimable daughter of Josiah and Amanda (Baughman) Pickle, her family being one of the old and prominent ones of the county. Josiah Pickle was born in Bart township in November, 1831, and his wife was also born in Bart township, in 1837, daughter of Peter and Amelia Baughman. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Myers was Peter Pickle, who married Mary A. Hidlebaugh, and they settled on a farm in Bart township, where the family home was founded. The mother of Mrs. Myers died in 1885, leaving her husband with four children, namely: Edwin, who was born in 1860, married Miss Ida Mendenall, of Chester county, and they reside in West Grove, Chester Co., Pa.; they have one daughter,—Ruth. Josiah B., born in 1866, married Miss Mary Hines, of Colerain township, and they reside on his farm in Kirkwood; they have two children, Melvin and Lulie. Minnie, who was born in 1868, is the wife of George Hines, and they live in Bart township; they have no family. Ella is Mrs. Myers. Mr. Pickle is one of the most substantial and highly esteemed citizens of Bart township, where the family has been prominent many years. For thirty years he has been one of the leading members of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. Myers is a lady of education, good judgment and many admirable qualities, and is widely and favorably known through this community. Her residence is on one of the fine farms near the old homestead. Her family consists of three children: George, born in 1885; Ada, born in 1886; and Clara, born in 1892. All are students in the home schools, bright, intelligent and affectionate children, of whom Mrs. Myers has every reason to feel proud.

JACOB R. GISH, a retired farmer and a prominent citizen of West Donegal township, Lancaster county, was born in that township, Nov. 24, 1837, a son of John and Anna (Risser) Gish, natives of West Donegal township, and Dauphin county, respectively. The father, who was a farmer all his days, died on his old homestead in 1877, at the age of seventy-seven years; the mother died in December, 1896, at the age of eighty-nine years; both were buried in the Longenecker Mennonite Church cemetery in West Donegal township. Born to them were the following children: Peter, a farmer and a miller in West Donegal township; Abraham, deceased; Jacob R.; John, David and Anna, all deceased; Samuel, engaged in the tillage of the old homestead.

The paternal grandparents of Jacob R. Gish were Abraham and Elizabeth (Longenecker) Gish, born and reared in Lancaster county, where their lives were spent. They came of Swiss stock. The maternal grandfather of Jacob R. Gish was Peter Risser, a farmer and miller.

Jacob R. Gish was married Jan. 10, 1861, in Lebanon, Pa., to Elizabeth Rutt, and to them were born the following children: Abraham, who married Amanda Hershey, and is in the implement business in Elizabethtown; Henry, at home, unmarried; Catherine, married to Amos Herr, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Emma, married to Steven Lindemuth, a farmer in East Donegal township; Enos, who died young; Amos R., in the implement business, and a sketch of whom is given elsewhere; Levi, at home.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Rutt) Gish was born in West Donegal township, Jan. 10, 1842, a daughter of Abraham and Catherine (Hernley) Rutt. Her parents were both born on the farm where their active years were spent. The father was a farmer and actively pursued that calling until five years before his death, Oct. 26, 1897, being over seventy-eight years old at the time of his death. Her mother died Jan. 31, 1896, at the age of seventy-seven years, and both were buried in Longenecker's cemetery. They were members of the Mennonite Church. To them were born the following children: Elizabeth; Henry, who died at the age of three years; and Abraham, who died in infancy.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Elizabeth Gish were Henry and Elizabeth (Weaver) Rutt, both born in Lancaster county, where their lives were spent, and where the grandfather followed farming and blacksmithing. Her maternal grandparents were John and Susan (Kinsey) Hernley, also natives of Lancaster county.

Jacob R. Gish spent the years of his boyhood and youth under the parental roof, and when he reached his maturity he rented the farm where he is found today, and worked it on shares for ten years; then he bought it, and has become one of the solid and successful farmers of that part of the county. Prominent and progressive in his farming, he is alert and wide-awake to the world around him. In his politics he is a Republican, and exercises considerable influence in local affairs.

LEVI H. BRACKBILL, a general farmer and highly respected citizen of Salisbury township, was born Aug. 18, 1858, son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Metzler) Brackbill.

As long as his parents lived Mr. Brackbill remained at home. His education was acquired in the common schools and as a boy he became accustomed to duties on the farm during the busy seasons. After the family had been separated on account of the death of the parents, Levi H. went to live with his uncle Abraham Metzler, for whom he worked for two years, going then on the Peter Hershey farm for two years. Being strong, willing and capable, the young man had no difficulty in finding employment with neighboring farmers, and twelve years of his life thus passed away, six of these being spent with his brother, Rev. Christian Brackbill. With all of this valuable experience Mr. Brackbill was able to enter intelligently upon the operation of his own farm, on which he has remained ever since. There he has been very successful, and he is regarded in Salisbury township as one of its excellent and progressive farmers. In politics Mr. Brackbill is identified with the Republican party. His religious membership is with the Mennonite Church.

On Nov. 21, 1883, in New Holland, Mr. Brackbill was married to Miss Susan Ranck and to this union the following children have been born: Benjamin R., Bertha M., Anna E., Parke R. and Elsa S. Mrs. Brackbill was born Nov. 16, 1863, in Paradise township, daughter of Benjamin and Lydia (Hershey) Ranck, natives of Lancaster county.

They now reside in Paradise township where Mr. Ranck has long occupied a position of prominence. He is a farmer of standing in that township and for many years has been a valued member of the school board. Mr. Ranck was born Dec. 28, 1838, and his wife Dec. 13, 1843. They are leading members of the Mennonite Church. In politics Mr. Ranck supports the Republican party. Their family consisted of these members: Abraham, deceased, who married Susan Kreider; Susan, the wife of Mr. Brackbill; Harry, a farmer in Paradise township, who married Anna Stoner; Ellen, married to Tobias Kreider, who is a farmer in East Lampeter township; Anna, married to Martin Kreider, a farmer in East Lampeter township; Benjamin, who died young; Jacob, a farmer in Paradise township, who married Frances Kreider; Jesse, also a farmer in Paradise township, married to Elizabeth Keaner; Christian, a painter living near Philadelphia; and Cora, Ida, John, Amos, Esther, Cecelia and Park, all at home.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Brackbill were Jacob and Susan (Leaman) Ranck, natives of Lancaster county, but of Swiss ancestry. The maternal grandparents also were of Swiss origin and were Abraham and Barbara (Eby) Hershey, of Lancaster county.

ALBERT HILLER ESHLEMAN, house painting and decorating contractor, with office and warehouse at No. 52 North Christian street, Lancaster, comes from a north of France Huguenot family, which emigrated to America in 1767. They were agriculturists and settled in Lampeter township, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

Martin Eshleman, grandfather of Mr. Eshleman, was born in Martic township, and in 1847 removed to Indiana, where he acquired extensive mill and real estate interests along the Wabash river. Both he and his wife died in Indiana. Samuel Eshleman, their son, and the father of the subject of this sketch, returned as a boy to Pennsylvania, making his home at Marticville, this county. After quitting school he learned the trade of cabinetmaking and painting. He married Miss Mary Hiller, daughter of Jacob and Anna Hiller, now deceased, and sister of Casper Hiller, for years a prominent member of the Lancaster County Agricultural Society. Thirteen children, nine of whom are living, were born to this union: Albert Hiller, of Lancaster; John C., a house painter, of Philadelphia; Laura, widow of William Makinson, of Philadelphia; Elizabeth, wife of Frank Simpson (Simpson Bros., plumbers), of Lancaster; Paul Sherman, a cigar-maker of Lancaster; Flora, of Philadelphia; Lottie, at home with her mother; Edward, a house painter in the employ of his brother Albert H.; and Perry, who is engaged in the Hamilton Watch factory.

Albert Hiller Eshleman was born near New Danville, Lancaster county, and educated in the public schools of Marticville. Leaving school when fourteen, he obtained employment in a store at Dru-more Centre. After two weeks he took to painting, and in September, 1891, moved to Lancaster, starting in business for himself. He has been successful, as many of the best improvements in Lancaster testify. He painted the Franklin street and Strawberry street school buildings; the fine suburban homes of H. S. Williamson, J. R. Foster, C. J. Swarr, H. L. Raub, ten of the Hagen houses in the West End, the great Woolworth building, the new Y. M. C. A. building, and many others. His force comprises twenty-five workmen, who are kept busy all the year round.

Mr. Eshleman married Miss Maggie Pickel, daughter of Francis and Elizabeth Pickel, late of Lancaster. Three children have been born to them: Elizabeth, now at home; and Anna and Ida May, at school. Mr. Eshleman is an earnest Republican, and has been a member of the common council from the Seventh ward since 1897. He has served on one of the most important committees, that of Streets, and at this time is chairman of that body. No man either as a private citizen or as a public official stands higher in the community than Mr. Eshleman. He is a member and trustee of St. Paul's M. E. Church, and is superintendent of the M. E. Mission Sunday-school on East Walnut street. He is a member of the Artisans; Junior O. U. A. M.; Knights of the Golden Eagle; Knights of the Mystic Chain; and the Benevolent Order of Elks. With a fine record and in the prime of manhood, it is more than likely that Mr. Eshleman's career has but just opened.

ABRAHAM M. SHENK, a wide-awake and progressive young farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, was born Nov. 21, 1864, on the old Shenk homestead at Central Manor, and is a son of Abraham L. and Fannie Shenk, of whom the latter is deceased.

Abraham M. Shenk was educated in the common schools of his district and was reared to farming, assisting his father until 1891, when he began operations for himself on the old homestead, which has been in the possession of the Shenk family since 1740, and comprises eighty-one acres, now under the highest state of cultivation and in a greatly improved condition. Abraham M. keeps fully abreast of the times in general farming and avails himself of every modern agricultural implement and every useful and practicable theory which late experience has shown to be advantageous to the enterprising farmer.

On Jan. 8, 1891, at the time of beginning operations on his own account, Abraham Shenk married Miss Kate Rohrer, daughter of Christian H. Rohrer, of Manor township, and this union has been graced with two children, Clayton R. and Elizabeth R. The parents are conscientious members of the Mennonite Society and liberally contribute of their means toward the payment of its expenses. The standing of Mr. and Mrs. Shenk in the social circles of the township is all that could be desired.

The Shenk homestead is one of the neatest and most homelike and comfortable in Manor township, and no small credit is due to Mrs. Shenk for the taste displayed in the interior and exterior decorations of the dwelling proper and its floral surroundings.

MICHAEL B. MYERS, who is now living the life of a retired farmer in Florin, Pa., was born on the farm, which has long been the homestead for the family, in East Donegal, Oct. 16, 1830, a son of Henry and Barbara (Brenner) Myers. The father, who was born in East Donegal, died there in 1860, at the age of eighty-two years; the mother died in Florin, Pa., in 1875, at the same age. Mrs. Malinda (Good) Myers was born in Rapho township, Feb. 25, 1841, and is a daughter of Christ and Magdelina (Garrust) Good, both natives of Mt. Joy township. Her father was a farmer and died in his native township in 1880, at the age of eighty-six. The mother passed away in 1875 at the age of seventy-two years. They were both interred in the Horst cemetery in Rapho township. The mother was a devoted member of the Lutheran Church. Born to this union were children as follows: Jacob, Joseph and Samuel, all deceased; Anna, living in Mt. Joy township, the widow of David Kriner; Abraham, Mary, Elizabeth, who married Samuel Reese, Griphina and Malinda, all deceased.

Michael B. Myers remained on the old homestead farm until March 25, 1897, when he concluded he had done hard work enough, and moved into Florin, where he is living a retired life. Both he and his wife are good Christian people, and are highly regarded by the community in which they live.

MICHAEL G. MYERS, a general farmer, now in charge of the paternal estate in East Donegal township, is living on the place where he was born in 1872, the son of Michael B., whose life is treated above. In May, 1897, he was married in Camden, N. J., to Josephine Miller, and one child, Pearl M., has been born to this union.

Mrs. Josephine Myers was born at Marietta, Pa., and is a daughter of Henry H. Miller, who has now retired from his life work of shoemaking, and lives in East Donegal township. Born in Manheim township, in 1844, he is a son of Joseph and Catherine (Hartman) Miller, natives of Strasburg and Manheim, respectively, and both of whom died in Manheim. Joseph Miller was a butcher and lived retired some years. In 1893 he died at the age of eighty years, and she in 1884 at the age of sixty-six years. Both were buried in the Manheim cemetery. They were members of the Evangelical Church, and had the following children: Adeline, now the widow of Prof. Benjamin Danner; Henry H.; Clement H., who died at the age of fifty-four; Pernenna H., of Manheim, Pa., unmarried. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Miller was Henry Miller, who married a Rohrer, both born in Strasburg, and died on Sporting Hill, Lancaster county. Henry Miller was a retired farmer at his death.

Henry H. Miller in 1865 married Julia Fishburn, at Marietta, Pa. Born to this union was: Josephine, who married Michael G. Myers. Julia Fishburn was born in Dauphin county.

Mr. Miller remained with his parents until he reached the age of twenty years, when he went to Marietta, Pa., where he mastered the shoemaker's trade, and spent the ensuing thirty years engaged at it. For a few years he attended a gate for a turnpike company, and in 1896 came to his present home, where he has since remained. In politics he is a Republican, and has always taken an intelligent and thoughtful interest in politics.

Michael G. Myers remained with his parents until he reached the age of twenty-one years, when he left their sheltering roof and began the cultivation of his present place of forty-seven acres. In this work he has been highly successful, and though a young man, has taken a prominent position in the community, where his good qualities, energetic habits and high character have won a host of friends.

DANIEL E. RANCK, a merchant and miller of Lancaster township, is a representative of a Lancaster county family, long and favorably known in this part of the State.

Samuel Ranck, his father, was born in East Lampeter township in 1813, and early learned the milling trade in Stauffer's Mill, near Bird-in-Hand. He was a miller until his death, which occurred in 1894. In politics he was a Republican, and for some years he was school director in his native township. He married Susan Eby, and they had eleven children, four of whom died in infancy: Esther is the wife of Jacob R. Witmer; Abram lost his life by being burned in a mill (the same one now operated by our subject), when he was only eighteen years of age; Jacob E. is a farmer in Lancaster township; Isaac is a janitor in a public school in Philadelphia; Adam is an employe of the Philadelphia Custom House; Henry was drowned when three years of age; Daniel E. is mentioned below. Both father and mother were members of the Old Mennonite Church.

Remaining at home with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age, he secured his education in the meantime in the public schools, and then began life for himself. For three years he was a farmer in East Lampeter township, and for six years in Upper Leacock township. At the end of that time he came back to the old homestead, and worked in the mill for his father five years, at the end of which time it passed into his charge, and has received all his attention to the present.

He is one of the broad-minded and progressive men of his section of Lancaster county, fully alive to the best interests of his community, where he is considered one of the most upright and substantial business men of the day, with many a kind word for his good qualities and lofty character. In politics Mr. Ranck is a Republican.

AMOS N. LEHMAN is a son of the Rev. Benjamin K. Lehman, for many years a distinguished clergyman of Manor township, and was born on his father's farm, April 14, 1847. Attendance at the district school was supplemented by a brief term of study at the State Normal School, at Millersville, and he devoted himself for many years to assisting his father in farm work.

On Jan. 5, 1873, Mr. Lehman was married to Mary R. Shellenberger, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rohrer) Shellenberger, born Oct. 24, 1848. After his marriage, he and his bride went to live upon a farm belonging to his father (and now owned by his brother John), which he tilled with considerable success until the spring of 1874.

Meanwhile domestic misfortune had overtaken him, his young wife having died Nov. 22, 1873, after the birth of her child, a daughter named Mary S. He resolved to enter the educational field, and with a view to qualifying himself therefor, he resumed his studies at the State Normal School and in the autumn of 1876 began his career as a teacher at Central Manor. He followed this profession for fourteen years, varying his work in 1890 by acting as census enumerator for his native township. In 1891 he concluded to return to agricultural life and purchased a small farm of twelve and a half acres, some two miles southwest of Mountville. Here he yet resides, in a pleasant home, whose surroundings indicate thrift, prosperity and refinement. He is highly esteemed in the community in which he has lived since boyhood, and is now serving his third term as town auditor. In politics he is a Republican, and in 1895 was appointed by Senator John H. Landis paster and folder in the Documentary department of the Senate. He is also a director in the Manor Mutual Insurance Company. On Nov. 30, 1876, Mr. Lehman married a second time, his wife being Annie R. Meyers, a daughter of Jacob and Annie (Rohrer) Meyers. She was born Sept. 9, 1846, and died May 29, 1886. Two sons were born of this marriage, of whom the elder died in infancy; and the younger, Benjamin F., lives with his father.

The father was a farmer and died on his place in 1887, at the age of fifty-seven years, having retired from active duties several years before his death. His remains were buried in a private cemetery on the farm. The mother, who was born in 1836, is still living in Mt. Joy, Pa. She is a member of the Brethren in Christ Church, of which her husband was also a member during his lifetime. There were born to this couple the following children: Harry, a farmer living on the old homestead; Isaac, a farmer of Dallas Center, Iowa; Daniel B.; Elias, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Susan, wife of Nathan Eshleman, a Mt. Joy farmer; Abraham, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Fanny, deceased; and Barbara, deceased. The paternal grandfather of Daniel B. Wolgemuth was Daniel Wolgemuth, a farmer of Mt. Joy township, while his maternal grandfather was Henry Brubaker, of Lancaster county, whose wife was a Longenecker.

Mr. Wolgemuth lived with his parents until he became of age, attending in the meantime the schools of the county. After his majority was attained he farmed the Wolgemuth homestead for seven years, and then moved to his present home. He and his family are members of the Brethren in Christ Church, and Mr. Wolgemuth is a Republican in politics. The gentleman is a thrifty careful manager, and has been very prosperous in his undertakings largely on account of the care and judgment used in carrying out his operations. He is well thought of in the community for his kindly disposition and generous nature.

JOSEPH A. HOKE. Among the leading citizens of Penryn, Pa., is Joseph A. Hoke, the genial host of the "Penryn Hotel," one of the best and most comfortable inns in Lancaster county.

The family originated in Germany and from that country emigrated to the United States, the location of the founder of the American branch being in Lebanon county, Pa., some time early in 1700. Grandfather Jacob Hoke was born in Lebanon county, Aug. 9, 1787, and followed farming until old age compelled a cessation from active work. His death occurred on July 15, 1868. He married Barbara Snively, and to them were born four children: Catherine, the wife of Peter Greider; Mary A., deceased wife of Joseph Smith; Jacob, deceased, a farmer of Lebanon county; and Joseph, the father of Joseph A., of this sketch.

Joseph Hoke was born in Lebanon, June 26, 1822, embraced an agricultural life and successfully followed it until he retired in 1884. His wife was Hannah Smith, and they were the parents of twelve children, of whom, five died in infancy; Maria, the eldest of the survivors, is the wife of Aaron Brubaker; John H., is a farmer on the old homestead in Lebanon county; Joseph; Jacob, a farmer of Lebanon county; Henry, a farmer on the old home; and Elmina, who is the wife of Edwin Gassert.

In the public schools of his township he finished the common school course and at the age of twenty-three years was ready to begin his own career. For nine years he conducted farming operations in Lebanon county, then sold his property there and moved to Bismarck, where he lived retired for a space of five years, and then purchased the "Penryn Hotel." There he made many improvements and has become one of the most popular landlords in the vicinity, as his hotel is the resort of the best of the traveling public.

Mr. Hoke married Sarah O. Kurtz, and the one son of this marriage is Mays K., a young man who graduated at the Pennsylvania Business College, of Lancaster, and is now employed by J. M.

Yeager, at Yeagerstown, as stenographer and general bookkeeper.

Mr. Hoke has been active in several of the fraternal orders, notably the P. O. S. of A., Washington Camp, No. 70, and the A. O. K. of M. C., No. 19, of Lititz. As a good citizen he is highly esteemed and few men are more universally liked for their pleasant personality. Mr. Hoke takes a great interest in all progressive measures and is always ready to advance the interests of every enterprise which promises to be of advantage to his section.

HENRY CONNER, now a retired farmer of Colerain township, whose active career has been very largely run in Bart township, was born in County Derry, Ireland, May 19, 1823, and is a son of Hamilton and Nancy (Eton) Conner. The parents were both natives of County Derry, where the father died. The mother brought her family to the United States in 1860, and died in Philadelphia two years later. The father was a member of the Episcopal Church, and the mother of the Presbyterian. They had a family of six sons and three daughters. (1) John, who was born in Ireland in 1803, was an Irish farmer, and died in his native island, leaving three children, Hamilton and Joseph, who live in Philadelphia, and Margaret, who is in Illinois. (2) William, born in Ireland, where he married and spent his life. His widow brought their children to this country, and made a home for them in Germantown, Pa., where she died. The children were: Martha, Mary and Elizabeth, who lived in Germantown; and William, who became a physician, and opened an office in Germantown; he married Annie, a daughter of Henry Conner, by whom he became the father of three children, Annie, Alice and Norman. (3) James, born and married in Ireland, died in his home land, leaving a family who reside there. (4) Hamilton, born in Ireland in 1821, married and settled in his native land, making his home on the old Conner farm, where he died, leaving a family who still reside in their native land. (5) Robert, born in Ireland in 1826, came to this country while still a lad and settled in Philadelphia, where he became a shoe merchant, and is still active in that trade. He has six children living, Hamilton, Robert, Hannah, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Jane. (6) Margaret Conner died in Ireland. (7) Jane Conner, born in Ireland, came with her mother to Philadelphia, where she married William Aiken, and located in Philadelphia, where they both died, leaving one son, Hamilton, now a business man of Philadelphia. (8) Mary, born and reared in Ireland, where she married Robert Miller, came to Philadelphia, where they made their home; both are now dead, leaving three daughters, Margaret, Mary and Adaline, all living in Philadelphia, where they were born and reared. (9) Henry.

Henry Conner was educated in a subscription school in Ireland, and in 1846 was married in his native community, to Leah, a daughter of James and Mary Givven, both of Ireland. Three months after marriage the young couple came to Philadelphia, where they lived ten years, and then moved to Salisbury township, Lancaster county. There Mr. Conner bought a farm, and remained some ten years. Then he bought a farm in Bart township, where he engaged earnestly in its cultivation, erecting a new house and farm buildings. At the present time Mr. Conner owns two farms in that township.

Mrs. Henry Conner died in November, 1898, leaving a large family. (1) Hamilton, (2) Mary and (3) Jane, all died young. (4) Priscilla, born in Philadelphia, married Albert Price, and lives on his farm in Russellville, Chester county, where they have a family of four children; Eva, Samuel, Burton, and Gertrude. (5) Annie, born in Philadelphia in 1851, married Dr. William Conner, of Chestnut Hill, Germantown, Pa. (6) Henry, born in Philadelphia in 1853, married Miss Tillia Mapshire, a daughter of Samuel Mapshire, of Colerain township, lives in his native city, and is an engineer in an electric light plant. They have seven children: Burton; Walter; Phillip, now of Arizona; and four whose names are not given. (7) Alfred, born in Philadelphia in 1858, was educated in the Lancaster county schools, where, growing to manhood on his father's farm, he was married to Ruth, the daughter of Isaac Montgomery, of Eden township, where she was born and reared. She is a woman who is well and favorably known, not only as a good wife and mother, but as a friend and neighbor in the community. Mr. Conner has three children, Elizabeth, Marvin and Ellen. Mr. Conner moved to Christiana after his marriage, and there followed the butcher's trade some years. He is a natural born mechanic, and put up a fine house on his father's farm; Mr. Conner never served an apprenticeship, but worked out his trade by his own genius. In Chester county he was a farmer several years, and then moved to Kirkville, where he bought the hotel property. There he is erecting a fine barn. This is one of the fine hotels of Colerain township. (8) Mary, who was born in Bart township, in 1861, married Uriah Ecker, of Bart township, Lancaster county, and is the mother of three children, Henry, Alfred, and Louisa. (9) Charlotte was born at the Bart township homestead, where she received her early education. When thirteen years old she entered the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, where she remained four years, and then spent a year in Paris, where she completed her art studies. She is now engaged as an artist in New York, her productions commanding large prices. Miss Conner is one of the famous artists of Lancaster county, and commands the admiration of all who are interested in art. (10) William J. Conner, born on the Bart township farm in 1866, grew to manhood in his native community. He married Susan, a daughter of John and Susan Hess, of Eden township. They reside on his father's home in Bart township, where they have a son and daughter, Marian and Leon.

Mr. Conner is a Republican, and is a worker in the local organization. Since he was sixteen years old he has been a member of the Episcopal Church. All his life he has been an active worker in that body, and has for years been a member of the American Protestant Association. Mr. Conner has been connected with the Odd Fellows for more than fifty years. He came to this country a poor boy, and was very early thrown upon his own resources; by thrift and economy he has risen to a prominent place in the community, where his life has been above reproach.

DANIEL D. FORRY has for nearly forty years been a continuous resident of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, where he has engaged successfully in agricultural pursuits. During his long residence he has gained a wide circle of friends and acquaintances in Lancaster and adjoining counties, and the probity and strength of his character have contributed not only to the material development of this rich locality but to its moral and social advancement also. He comes of good old Pennsylvania stock, of the race that won first honors in wresting the land, now rich in historical associations, from its primitive wild and inhospitable conditions.

A native of Helm township, York Co., Pa., Mr. Forry was born July 30, 1840, son of John and Sophia (Dellinger) Forry. There he was reared to manhood, schooled in the bleak adversities of the times, and receiving the moderate education which the district schools then afforded, grounded in the faith and rectitude of the Dunkard Church, to which the parents held religious allegiance, and devoting the years of his youth to the arduous labor of the farm.

He remained on the home farm until he was twenty-two years of age. His elder brother also adopting the vocation of farming, Daniel D. crossed the Susquehanna and entered upon his long and prosperous career in the adjoining county of Lancaster. In West Hempfield township he purchased seventy-five acres of his present farm, to which he subsequently added fifteen acres. Here in 1868 he married Barbara Musser, a native of West Hempfield township, born April 19, 1846, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth (Garber) Musser, natives, respectively, of Rapho and East Donegal townships. Michael Musser was for many years a prominent farmer of West Hempfield township, where he died in December, 1897, aged eighty-three years; his wife, Elizabeth, also died on the old homestead, in advanced life.

To Daniel D. and Barbara (Musser) Forry have been born the following children: Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Breneman, a farmer of Rapho township; John, a farmer of Manor township; Michael, a farmer of West Hempfield township; and Daniel, Fanny, Henry and Rudolph, living with their parents at the homestead hallowed by the family associations of many years. In politics Daniel D. Forry is a Democrat. He has served West Hempfield township in the capacity of supervisor, and has attained in the pursuit of his chosen vocation a full measure of success.

John and Susanna (Engle) Forry, the paternal grandparents of Daniel D., were likewise lifelong residents of York county. His maternal grandparents were Henry and Susannah (Ortstadt) Delling, of York township, and the former's father was an emigrant from Germany. The parents of Daniel D. Forry were industrious country folk and rounded out their useful and influential lives in peaceful old age, the father passing away in 1886, at the age of seventy-one years. The mother survived until Sept. 1, 1898, to her ninety-sixth year.

Children were born to John and Sophia (Delling) Forry as follows: (1) Susannah, who married Samuel Newcomer, and lives in York county; (2) Eliza Ann, who married Joseph Darn, and is now deceased; (3) Sarah A., who married Rudolph Arnold, and died in 1896; (4) Frances A., who married John Wasser, and is now deceased; (5) Mary A., deceased wife of Elias Hoke; (6) Elleanor, who died young; (7) John, a farmer of York township; (8) Daniel D.; (9) William, a farmer and hotel man of York county; and (10) Rudolph, a farmer of York county.

GEORGE SELDOMRIDGE (deceased) was for many years a very prominent man in Salisbury township, well known in all that part of Lancaster county. He was born June 20, 1819, in Salisbury township, son of John and Christianna (Smoker) Seldomridge.

John Seldomridge, the father, conducted a hotel at Intercourse, Leacock township, for many years, and there died in 1851, aged sixty years; his widow survived until 1859, dying at the age of seventy years. They were members of the Amish Church, and were interred in Roland's Church cemetery, in Earl township. The children born to them were as follows: John, who died in 1898; George, who died Nov. 22, 1898; Maria, deceased, who was the wife of Abigner Miller; Elizabeth, deceased, who was the wife of John Knox, of Leacock township; and Catherine, deceased, who married John Jacobs.

Until his marriage George Seldomridge followed the occupation of drover principally, and was then engaged in farming in Leacock township until 1873, when he removed to Salisbury township and for fifteen years operated what is now known as the Hess mill, at the end of that period locating on the farm where his last years were spent. He was a consistent member of the Episcopal Church, and was buried in Christ Church cemetery, in Leacock township. He was a man of reliability and influence, and was often called upon to accept public charges, serving in Leacock township as school director and as auditor in Salisbury township.

On Dec. 29, 1853, in Lancaster, Mr. Seldomridge was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Ann Fenninger, who was born in Paradise township Dec. 20, 1831, daughter of John F. and Sarah (Swigart) Fenninger, and children as follows came to this union: John F., the proprietor of a hotel at White Horse, Pa., married Mary E. Worst; Edward F. is a farmer of Salisbury township; Sarah C. married Samuel Wanner, a farmer of Salisbury township; George M., a farmer of Salisbury township, married Mary Reeser; Fred G., a farmer on the old home place, married Alta Bair, born May 2, 1876, in Salisbury township, daughter of Eckert and Fianna (Hoover) Bair, who still reside in Salisbury township; Hannah E. married Milton Oberholtzer, a farmer of Salisbury township; Aldus M., also a resident and half owner of the old home farm with his brother Fred G., married Amanda Miller, born in 1872, in Centerville, Pa., daughter of John I. and Anna M. (Smoker) Miller, the former of whom is an ex-soldier and retired wheelwright of this county. (Mr. and Mrs. Aldus M. Seldomridge have two children, Anna M. and Elsa M.)

The Seldomridges are ranked among the old and prominent families of the county, and are especially noted for substantial character and excellence as agriculturists. The two brothers, Fred G. and Aldus M., own and operate the home farm, consisting of 146 acres, and are well and favorably known throughout Salisbury township. In politics they are Republicans. Their religious connection is with the Episcopal Church.

JOHN H. FUNK, residing two miles east of Washington borough, Lancaster county, comes from one of the oldest of the county's families and was born on the Funk homestead in Manor township, Nov. 27, 1830, and is a son of John and Mary (Herr) Funk, the former of whom was born on the old place, Dec. 31, 1798, and died July 23, 1887. John was a son of Henry and Annie (Moyer) Funk, both natives of Lancaster county. Henry was born near Central Manor and was probably one of the first in the county to engage in raising young fruit trees as a nurseryman. His death took place at the age of sixty years and that of his widow at eighty-eight. They had a family of five children, born in the following order: Annie, who married a Mr. Heidlaugh; John, of whom further mention will be made; Mary, who was married to Christian Kauffman, and with him went to Hamilton county, Ind., where both died; Martin, who was a farmer of Manor township; and Elizabeth, who married Jacob Kauffman, and went to Cumberland county, Pa., where Jacob died, while she returned and died in Manor township.

John Funk, the second born of the above named five children, was reared on his father's nursery and followed the business through life. He married Mary Herr, daughter of John Herr, better known as "Sawmill" Herr. Mrs. Funk died at the advanced age of eighty-four years, a member of the Old Mennonite Church, as was her husband. They were the parents of ten children, viz.: Elizabeth, wife of Andrew Shenk, of Millersville; John H., whose name opens this sketch; Annie, deceased wife of Adam Manning, of Manor township; Fannie, deceased wife of Rudolph Kauffman; Barbara, married to Jacob Souder; Lydia, wife of Jacob Shank, all three of Manor township; Lena, wife of Michael Yake, of West Hempfield township; Kittie, wife of David Stauffer, of Manor township; and two children that died in infancy.

John H. Funk was reared on the old homestead, was educated in the public schools, and at twenty-four years of age began working out by the day; he continued at this employment for ten years, and then in 1865 purchased his present forty acre farm in Manor township, all the improvements on which have been made by himself.

On Jan. 25, 1855, John H. Funk married Miss Catherine Shertzer, who was born May 8, 1830, in Washington borough, and is a daughter of David and Mary (Dunkle) Shertzer. She is a member of the Church of God, while Mr. Funk is a Mennonite. He has served his fellow townsmen as supervisor for five years.

JOHN S. ZOOK. Among the honored and respected citizens of Upper Leacock township, John S. Zook, takes a leading position, as a successful agriculturist and also as a beloved and highly esteemed minister of the Amish Mennonite faith.

The origin of the Zook family was in Switzerland, and many years ago John Zook came from that land and settled in Berks county, and was the father of David Zook, the grandfather of John S., of this biography. Simon, the son of David, was born in Mifflin county, in 1820, and died in 1886. In his boyhood he came to Lancaster county, and about 1845, he married Barbara King, of East Lampeter township, who was born in 1824, and to them were born: Christian, a farmer of West Earl township; Joel, a farmer in Upper Leacock township; Katherine, the wife of John Zook, of East Lampeter township; Simon K., a farmer near Talmage, in West Earl township; and John S.

John S. Zook was born Jan. 10, 1850, a son of Simon and Barbara (King) Zook, the latter of whom now resides with her son near Talmage. Educated in the common schools of his district, Mr. Zook grew to manhood on the farm, and has engaged in agricultural pursuits all his life. His beginnings were small, but he has been industrious, energetic and provident, and now is the owner of a fine farm of sixty-six acres of good land, improved with excellent buildings of all kinds. Since 1886 he has been one of the faithful ministers of the Amish Mennonite Church, believing firmly that he has been called to this religious field, and having no financial interest in it.

The marriage of John S. Zook was on Feb. 24, 1874, to Miss Joanna Beiler, who was born May 14, 1851, a daughter of John L. and Lydia (Hartzler)

Beiler, and this union has been blessed with eleven children: Mary, born June 9, 1875; Simon, born June 25, 1876, who died at the age of eighteen; Ezra, born Jan. 8, 1879; John, born April 10, 1880; Elizabeth, born Sept. 18, 1882; Katherine, born in 1884, died in childhood; Amos, born April 19, 1885; Joseph, born June 27, 1887, died in childhood; Katherine, born March 13, 1891, died in childhood; Annie, born April 6, 1893; and Moses, born Nov. 27, 1895. In Mr. Zook Upper Leacock finds one of its best citizens, an honorable, conscientious and upright man, devoted to his family and living an exemplary life, which exerts a wide and beneficial influence.

ZACHARIAH R. WITMER, residing a mile and a quarter east of Highville, Manor township, Lancaster county, is a son of John and Susan (Ripley) Witmer, was born July 1, 1833, and is now a farmer, but in early life was taught the trade of carpenter, at which he still occasionally does some little work.

John Witmer, grandfather of Zachariah R., was in his day one of the wealthiest men in Manor township, but was of so liberal disposition and so desirous of assisting his less fortunate neighbors that he ruined himself by going security for them and endorsing notes they never paid, so that he was compelled as a man of honor to settle these obligations himself, after which act of generosity he sought a home in the West, where he passed the remainder of his days.

John Witmer, father of Zachariah R., owned a farm of twenty-seven acres in Manor township, but was a carpenter by trade and while carrying on business in this line employed a large force of men and realized a comfortable fortune. He was a Republican in politics, served as commissioner of Lancaster county and was likewise very active in local military affairs and was really a leader in all the public transactions of his township and county. To John and Susan Witmer were born eight children, named in the order of birth, as follows: Jacob, who is a foundryman in Columbia; John, a blacksmith in Millersville; Zachariah R.; Daniel, a farmer, living in Des Moines, Iowa; Susan, deceased wife of Adam Doerstler; Adeline, deceased wife of Joseph Sawyer, of Iowa; and Frank, also in Des Moines, Iowa, a merchant and bank president. The father of these children passed away at the age of fifty-four years, but the mother lived to be seventy-two years old. She was a member of the United Brethren Church. Rev. John Ripley, the maternal grandfather of Zachariah R. Witmer, was for years a local preacher in Manor township, and held services from house to house, as church edifices were not at all numerous; he succeeded in giving strength to and adding to the membership of the United Brethren Society and died one of the most sincerely beloved men of his township.

Zachariah R. Witmer assisted on the home farm until nineteen years of age and was then apprenticed to David Illius to learn the carpenter's trade. After having served out his apprenticeship indentures, Zachariah worked as a journeyman until about twenty-seven years old when he entered into trade on his own account. His first contract worthy of mention was for building a large grist mill known as the Doerstler mill, which proved to be so substantial and satisfactory that orders came to him from all over the county, and with the aid of a large force of workmen he soon realized a competency.

On retiring to his present farm of 104 acres, Mr. Witmer turned his attention almost exclusively to its cultivation, but also takes a contract now and then at carpenter work. In 1855 Zachariah R. Witmer married Miss Elizabeth Breneman, daughter of Joseph Breneman, and to this union have been born six children, in the following order: Benjamin and John, farmers of Manor township; Jacob of Millersville; Barbara, wife of John Kendig; Ann, married to William Rice, of Millersville; and Daniel, a farmer of Manor township. The family are all members of the United Brethren Church; and in politics Mr. Witmer is a Republican.

MARTIN H. GOOD is the son of John B. Good, was born July 7, 1855, in Conestoga township and lived home with his parents until he was twenty-one years old. He then married Miss Martha Shoff and settled first in Martic township, where he resided about ten years, and then removed to the place where he now resides, known as the Shoff and Good farm, property comprising 197 acres of land, which has been in the Shoff family about 140 years. The place has the very best of modern buildings and is regarded as one of the finest farms in Conestoga township. Mr. Good is a Republican and has held the office of assistant assessor. He is a member of the Masonic Charles W. Howell Lodge, No. 496.

John B. Good, father of Martin H., was born in 1832 in Conestoga township, and was a carpenter by trade, but also engaged in farming and the milling business. He was a Republican, but never sought or held office. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., of Rawlinsville. In 1854 he married Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob Harnish, of Conestoga township. They had children as follows: Martin H.; Angeline, wife of Martin M. Eshleman; Jacob H., of East Lampeter township; Franklin, deceased; Susan, of Lancaster City; and William H., of Philadelphia.

Martin Good, the grandfather of Martin H., was born in 1800 in Conestoga township, and followed the calling of farmer and also butcher. He married Barbara Bronner, of Manor township. They were the parents of nine children: Jacob B.; Barbara, wife of Samuel Warfel; John B., father of M. H.; William; Levi; Catherine, wife of John Regon, both deceased; Jonas; Elizabeth, wife of Michael Kreider; and Benjamin.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin H. Good have had four children, Oliver, Cora E., Martin and Elizabeth, all of whom are at home with their parents. Mr. Good is the junior member of the firm of Shoff & Good and looks after the business of the firm. He is also engaged in the tobacco business, buying, selling and raising it. He like his partner is a wide-awake business man, and well up in all modern methods of handling any enterprise which he may be engaged in.

JOHN W. HOLMAN. In disposing of the opportunities at his command John W. Holman has evinced a judgment and acumen consistent with the most substantial development of his native city of Lancaster, where he was born Sept. 2, 1849. At present an iron manufacturer, he has been equally successful as a builder of many of the finest public and private structures in the city, his accomplishments in all directions being the result of triumph over early circumstances, which compelled him to do his own thinking and planning, and work out his own future without money or influence.

John Holman, the father of John W., was also born in Lancaster, and until ten years prior to his death was engaged in the manufacture and sale of shoes. Owing to a fall he became incapacitated for further business activity, and died in 1865, at the age of fifty-eight years. He was a member of the Moravian church, and politically identified with the Democratic party. His wife, formerly Martha Brown, who is living in Lancaster, and at the age of eighty-four, retains to a remarkable degree her alert faculties, is the mother of seven children: Charles H.; Washington, deceased at the age of eighteen; John W.; Josephine, unmarried and living with her mother on East King street; Alice, also living with her mother; Clara, who died at the age of seven; and Catherine, wife of Rev. N. J. Miller, of the Reformed Church in Lancaster.

When but nine years old John W. Holman began his career of self support on a farm, where he lived until fifteen years old. He then began an apprenticeship in the Norris Locomotive Works, in Lancaster, and at the end of three years' hard labor, served four more years in the Baldwin Locomotive works in Philadelphia, Pa. While in the Quaker city he partially made up for a necessarily deficient education by taking a night course at Pierce's Business College, and upon returning to Lancaster, studied for a year in the preparatory department of Franklin & Marshall College. His first independent business venture was as a manufacturer of blacksmith supplies on West Chestnut street, in a small frame house, and, having demonstrated his fitness for this kind of work, bought, at the end of three years, the place of Richard Blickenderfer. This was enlarged and re-built, and conducted in a highly satisfactory manner for seven years, the owner then disposing of his interest, and turning his attention to building and contracting. In connection with this latter work Mr. Holman purchased a third interest in the Lancaster Planing Mill, which he owned for twelve years, and during that time, or up to 1898, he was one of the foremost builders in the town, putting up some of the most imposing business blocks, and most artistic and modern residences. The year 1898 witnessed his re-entrance into the iron manufacturing field, and he is now engaged in turning out principally street railway, signal and car brakes.

In Lancaster, in 1883, Mr. Holman married Maggie Boothe, a native of Richmond, Va., whose father was a furniture manufacturer in Richmond, and met his death as a Confederate soldier, near the close of the Civil war. To Mr. and Mrs. Holman have been born three children; Howard, who died at the age of two and a half years; John, who is living at home; and Helen B., who also is living with her parents. Mr. Holman has been prominently before the public in many capacities, his sympathies and practical help being ever on the side of progressiveness and stability. At the time of its erection, he was one of the directors of the Lancaster General Hospital. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran church, in which he resigned a trusteeship after a faithful service of twenty-five years. Politically he is independent, and invariably votes for the man he deems best qualified for public trust. Mr. Holman lives in one of the handsome and hospitable homes of the city, and has hosts of friends among the business and social circles of Lancaster.

ISRAEL PUTNAM BALMER, a carpenter, contractor and builder of Elizabethtown, was born there July 10, 1837. Mr. Balmer is a son of the Hon. Daniel and Harriet (Fisher) Balmer, who were prominent and much respected people of an early day in this county. John F. Balmer and Israel P. are brothers, and both are worthy representatives of an old and honored family of Lancaster county.

Israel P. Balmer was married in Elizabethtown, in August, 1863, to Catherine De Arman, by whom he had the following family: John H., a druggist, in Elizabethtown; Mary L., married John M. Kuhn, a baker of Elizabethtown, the mother of one child, Mary C.; Harriet, deceased.

Mrs. Catherine Balmer died in September, 1884, and was buried in Mt. Tunnel Cemetery. She was a daughter of Peter and Mary (Cunningham) De Arman, and a granddaughter of James De Arman, a native of France, who took part in the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Balmer has made Elizabethtown the scene of his life work. When he was twelve years old he began working at the carpenter trade, and this has been his occupation ever since. When he was twenty-one years old, he began teaching school during the winter, working at his trade in the summer, and for the ensuing five winters was engaged as winter school teacher. Nine years later he resumed teaching, and taught for three years, making nine terms in all. In 1873 he began contracting and building on his own account. From 1865 to 1873 he worked for the Pennsylvania Railroad as a carpenter.

In 1863 Mr. Balmer was enlisted in the Union army as a member of Co. I, 15th P. V. M., being mustered in under an emergency call, and serving three months as first sergeant of the company.

Mr. Balmer is a member of the I. O. O. F., of the Associated Encampment, of the K. P., the O. U. A. M., and of the K. M. C. In his politics he is a Republican, and in his religion a member of the Church of God. Personally he is a man of high character, and is greatly esteemed in the community.

STEPHEN J. HART. Lancaster county has sent out into the world many of her native sons, who have achieved fame, fortune or influence in wide fields of human endeavor. Among the lads of Lancaster county a half century ago, upon whom no favoring fortune had then smiled, or offered pledge or promise of future success, was Stephen J. Hart, now a prominent business man of Upper Sandusky, Ohio. Mr. Hart spent his boyhood days, his youth and the years of his active manhood in Lancaster county, but for more than a score of years he has been a resident of Ohio.

Joseph Hart, his father, came to America from Baden, Germany, landing in New York with his wife and two children in 1834. He had served for fourteen years in the German army. On arriving in New York City he started at once for Pennsylvania, driving all the way, and conveying by team to a new and unknown home his wife, his children, and all his earthly possessions. Locating in Lancaster city, he there became a dealer in farm and garden produce of various kinds. He entered into rest in 1877, aged seventy-three years. His wife, who was Anna Catherine Gross, also from Baden, Germany, died in 1873, aged sixty-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hart had eleven children, two of whom died in infancy. Among those who died later in life were Prof. John Hart, Lancaster's most noted elocutionist, and a tragedian of more than ordinary ability, who died in 1879, aged forty-two years. Matthias, another son, was killed at Fort Fisher, Jan. 15, 1865, while serving in the Union army; and Paul entered into rest before the mother's death. The surviving children are Stephen J., of Upper Sandusky, Ohio; and Barbara, wife of Benjamin K. Dorwart, a machinist of New York.

Stephen J. Hart was born at Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, Dec. 18, 1844, but his parents having returned to Lancaster while he was young, he was educated in St. Joseph's parochial school in that city. At the age of fourteen years he left school and went into the hair-dressing business with his brother John, and in 1881 left Lancaster for the West, where he has ever since lived. For years past he has been extensively engaged in the manufacture of Hart's Tetter Lotion, his manufacturing plant being in Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Mr. Hart married Miss Lydia Ann Martzall, daughter of the late John Wendell Martzall, owner and proprietor for many years of the "Plow Tavern" of Lancaster, a hotel which came into his possession through Mrs. Martzall's father, Jacob Ackerman, one of Lancaster's oldest and best known residents. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen J. Hart were blessed with six children, as follows: Henry Matthias, who is engaged in business in the oil fields of Ohio; John and Stephen J., Jr., barbers of Findlay, Ohio; Catherine Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Berry, of Washington, N. C. (Mr. Berry's uncle was a Confederate colonel in Fort Fisher when Matthias Hart was killed, and his (Mr. Berry's) father was a captain in the Confederate navy); Anna Mary, wife of John O'Neal, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio; and Mary Theresa, at school.

Stephen J. Hart is descended from Ludwig Becker, who came to America in 1737, and took up a land grant in Warwick township, Lancaster county, from the Penns. the same year. His remains are buried in Trinity Churchyard, Lancaster. Mr. Hart is a Catholic in religion, and is not a member of any secret orders. He has recently been engaged in Lancaster county tracing the genealogy of his wife's ancestors, with a view to producing the proof of identification necessary to secure their interest in a large and valuable estate in Europe.

E. H. HERSH, the proprietor of the machine shops and a general repairer at Rheems, West Donegal township, is a man of remarkable mechanical skill, and enjoys a reputation that reaches far beyond the limits of his little home town.

Mr. Hersh was born in Lancaster township, Lancaster county, Sept. 6, 1856, and is a son of Cyrus Hersh, of East Donegal township, and a brother of Benjamin F. Hersh, of the same township.

Elam H. Hersh was married in Columbia, Pa., Nov. 15, 1886, to Miss Lizzie G. Longenecker, and to them have come the following children: Walter H., deceased; Harrison, deceased; Anna C.; Mary E.; Lotta M.; and Rebecca.

Mrs. Lizzie G. (Longenecker) Hersh was born in West Donegal township in 1860, and is a daughter of Elder John and Anna (Garber) Longenecker, both natives of West Donegal township, where they spent their lives. Her father, who was an elder of the Mennonite Church, was a lifelong farmer, but lived retired the last few years before his death, which occurred in 1895, at the age of seventy-four years. His widow is living with her son, Elam H., and has now attained the age of eighty years. They had the following children: John, a farmer in Kansas; Levi, a farmer in West Donegal township; Christian, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; Anna, married to Levi S. Kraybill, a farmer in West Donegal township; Lizzie, the wife of Elam H. Hersh; Catherine, married to Jacob N. Rutt, a farmer in West Donegal township; Barbara, deceased.

Elam H. Hersh remained with his parents as long as his father lived, and then began in business for himself. For six years he conducted a machine shop and a blacksmith establishment at Anchor, Mt. Joy township. In 1899 he removed his business to Rheems, put up his present shop, and entered upon an extended partonage. Four men are in his employ, and he is doing a very satisfactory business.

Mr. Hersh is a Republican in his political views, and is one of the solid and substantial citizens of the community. In his early life he was employed twelve years at Brunnerville in the agricultural shops, where he learned his trade, and where his father also worked twelve years.

Mr. Hersh is a pleasant and kind-hearted gentleman, whose thorough workmanship and honest dealing have caused him to be well and favorably known all over the county.

H. H. HARNISH. In the beautiful township of Drumore, Lancaster Co., Pa., there are many representatives of agricultural life, and among those who take a leading part in all progressive measures looking toward the advancement of the material welfare of the community, is H. H. Harnish, who was born March 12, 1845, in Manor township, near Millersville, a son of Michael and Annie (Shank) Harnish, of Manor township, but of German origin.

Michael Harnish was a thrifty farmer and a member of the New Mennonite Church. His father, grandfather David Harnish, was the father of thirteen children, namely: Jacob, Martin, Eli, David, John, Henry, Michael and six who died in infancy. Michael had eleven children, six of whom grew to maturity, namely: Henry H.; Adeline, the wife of Daniel Herr; Melina, deceased wife of Jacob Charles; John, of Lancaster City; Frank, of Eden township; Lizzie, the wife of David Stoner, the youngest of the family.

Mr. Harnish is a thoroughly self-made man. During his boyhood he was obliged to work hard upon the farm and only attended school three months in all his life, so his education was secured by hard study at home. By earnest effort and unflinching honesty he has steadily advanced along the path of fortune and now is the possessor of one hundred and six acres of rich farming land, on which is a fine residence, a large and substantial barn and all necessary outbuildings, his house being built of stone and fully equipped with modern conveniences. Mr. Harnish and his son also own one of the best and most modern nurseries in that part of the county, and they carry a full line of nursery goods. Both gentlemen thoroughly understand every detail of their business and have been very successful.

On Oct. 20, 1869, Mr. Harnish was married to Miss Mary Ann Herr, of Manor township, the daughter of Emanuel and Mary (Mussleman) Herr, and six children have been born of this union: Annie, wife of Enos Herr of Paradise township, who has two children, Anna M. and Enos Earl; Emanuel, born Dec. 25, 1873, who is at home on the farm and is in partnership with his father, being a bright, hard-working young man, a Republican in politics and still unmarried; Naomi, wife of S. C. Groff, of East Drumore township, who has one child Marius H.; Lillie B., Emma E. and John Henry, all at home and unmarried.

Politically Mr. Harnish is a Republican and is staunch in his support of the candidates of his chosen party. While not holding a membership in any religious denomination, Mr. Harnish lives the life of an upright, earnest Christian man, believing that honesty of purpose and deed, the performing of what appears to be the duty of one human being to another, is the fundamental principle underlying all religion. During his useful life, he has never had any disputes with his neighbors, nor been drawn into a lawsuit, is a devoted husband and kind father. Being a man who takes a deep interest in township affairs, he naturally is regarded as one of the leaders in local matters, and is highly respected by all who know him.

ELI WARFEL is a grandson of George Warfel, who was born in Conestoga township, Aug. 25, 1783, and spent most of his life there. He married Miss Catherine Marks, Sept. 18, 1808, and to them the following children were born: John, father of Eli; Catherine, who died in infancy; Fanny, wife of Michael Ressel, deceased, of Conestoga township; Jacob, of Conestoga township, still living at the age of eighty-seven years; Elizabeth, who died in childhood; Barbara, wife of Christian Warfel, who is yet living in his ninety-sixth year; Eliza, died in childhood; Nancy, widow of Jacob Herr; George, of Pequea township; Martin, of Martic township; Benjamin, deceased; and Nicholas, of Illinois.

John Warfel, the father of Eli Warfel, was born in Conestoga, near where his son now lives, in the year 1810. Although a weaver by trade, he followed farming most of his life. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church during his entire life. He married Miss Barbara Leachey, April 21, 1842, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Mr. Strine. They were the parents of thirteen children: David, who died in childhood; Mary, wife of Martin Hess, of East Lampeter; Anna, wife of Isaac Funk, of Conestoga township; Sarah, deceased in childhood; Eli, subject of this article; Martin, of Lancaster City; Barbara, drowned in the big spring on the farm at two years of age; an infant daughter, deceased; John L., of Conestoga township; Leah, wife of Clayton Keller, of Lebanon; George, of Conestoga township; Catherine, who died in infancy; and Adeline, widow of Henry Peters, of Conestoga township.

Eli Warfel was born Aug. 19, 1850, on the farm near where he now resides, and was educated in the common schools of Lancaster county. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-one years old. He then married Miss Barbara Kreider, daughter of George Kreider, of Pequea township, and began life for himself. He rented a farm from Reeves & Company, which he occupied for thirteen years, when he purchased a small place of his own where he lived about three years. He then bought the farm where he now resides. In politics he belongs to the Republican party, has been school director for six years and was lately re-elected for another term. Both he and his wife are members of the Old Mennonite Church and he is superintendent of the Sunday-school.

The couple are the parents of nine children: Elizabeth, wife of Elias Kreider, of East Lampeter township; George K., who is married and resides in Conestoga township; Annie, wife of Milton Huber, of Pequea township; John, at home; Emma K., now at school at Millersville; Barbara, at home; Harrison, who died in childhood; Mary and Walter, at home.

Mr. Warfel has devoted his entire attention to farming and has succeeded well in life, owning one of the finest places in the township. He is generous and broad-minded and keeps a close track of current events.

BENJAMIN F. MARTIN, the popular proprietor of the Hotel Leacock, at Mechanicsburg, Pa., and the manufacturer of a well-known useful remedy much used by farmers and owners of fine cattle and stock all over the country, is one of the leading business men of this locality.

Mr. Martin was born in Pequea township, Sept. 18, 1856, and he was a son of Benjamin and Barbara (Good) Martin, both of whom were born in the same township, but died in Lancaster township. Benjamin Martin was one of the most prominent men of Pequea township, where he was a successful farmer until 1872. In his younger days he taught school and was the efficient assessor of his township for a long period, was school director and operated the "Willowstreet Hotel." Mr. Martin died in Lancaster township, whither he removed in 1872, in January, 1891, at the age of eighty-eight years. His wife died in January, 1884, at the age of sixty-six, and both were interred in the Mennonite burying ground, at Millersville, as they were consistent members of that denomination. The children born to them were: Joseph, who served through the Civil war, returned in safety and then again left home; Lizzie, unmarried, living with our subject; Susan, who married B. F. Bleacher, a dairyman of Lancaster; Mary, deceased; Benjamin and David, who both died in infancy; Benjamin F., our subject; and Barbara, who married John Lechner, a farmer and dairyman of Lancaster township.

The paternal grandparents of Benjamin F. Martin were well-known farming people of Pequea township, David and Susan (Eshleman) Martin, while the maternal grandparents were prominent people of Conestoga township, Joseph and Elizabeth (Kendig) Good, the latter following the trade of miller.

Benjamin F. Martin was reared on a farm, but was eight years of age when his father took charge of the "Willowstreet Hotel" in Pequea township and there the family remained for six years, moving from there to Lancaster township. Our subject assisted his father in all his enterprises and helped on the farm and in the conduct of the dairy until 1894, when he went out as a traveling salesman for the firm of Kiehl & Keefer, remaining with them for four years. In 1898 Mr. Martin took charge of the "Leacock Hotel," and about the same time began the manufacture of condition powders, the recipe for which has come to him from his great-grandfather. Formerly these excellent powders were only made for use in their own yards, but their efficiency has been so well proven that Mr. Martin wisely determined to place them upon the market, and they are now on sale as Martin's O. K. Horse and Cattle Condition Powders. While the formula is simple, it contains just those ingredients suitable for the use intended and Mr. Martin will probably become in a way a real benefactor to the owners of large herds.

The marriage of Mr. Martin occurred on March 10, 1881, in Lancaster, to Miss Mary McCombs, and to this union two children were born: Benjamin S.; and Mamie, whose life closed at the age of seven years. Mrs. Martin was born in Martic township, and she was a daughter of John and Rebecca (Shank) McCombs. The former was a manufacturer of charcoal for many years in Martic township, where he died in 1885, at the age of fifty-six years. The mother died in 1898, at the age of eighty-two years, and both were interred at Mount Wayne. Their children were: Joseph, who is a farmer in Michigan; Sarah, who resides in Parkesburg, Pa., the wife of G. T. Bailey; Mary; Susan, who is the widow of Albert Fisher, of Lancaster; Amanda, who is the wife of Hugh Armstrong, a retired farmer living in Lancaster; Jennie, deceased wife of Marcus Reece, of Martic township; George, deceased; and Kate, who married Edward Evans, a railroad engineer of Scottdale, Pa. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Martin was Thomas McCombs of Trenton, New Jersey.

There is no doubt that Mr. Martin has a fortune in his valuable condition powders, and he is preparing to put them up on a large scale. This may become one of the important business enterprises of the community, as they meet a real want and are the very best and most effective yet placed upon the market. Mr. Martin is a progressive and enterprising man in both public and private affairs.

HENRY D. FREY, a leading member of the business world of Lititz, comes of sturdy and honorable German stock, his grandfather, Henry Frey, having emigrated from that great country to America. Henry Frey was the first member of the family to settle in Lancaster county. Only one son was born to him, George, who was born in Lancaster county, in 1826.

George Frey, the father of Henry D., learned the shoemaking trade when a young man and through life followed that trade in connection with farming. In 1858 he passed away, having been a quiet, industrious man. His wife was Sarah Ann Dunn, and their only child was Henry D., of this sketch.

Henry D. Frey was born in Elizabeth township, this county, Jan. 18, 1854, and was bereft of his father when he was but four years old. With his mother he remained in the old home, assisting her and going to school, and in 1885 began to learn the manufacture of cigars in Lititz, where he now has built up a fine business. At the time of his father's death, his mother bought the farm, and there he has made many improvements until under his management it has become one of the finest farms in the locality.

Mr. Frey was married to Miss Emma S. Will, who was a daughter of Peter M. and Catherine Will, and the one son of this marriage is Nathan W., his father's capable assistant in the cigar factory.

Mr. Frey is one of Lancaster county's most respected citizens, is a valued member of the Reformed Church, of White Oak, and enjoys the esteem of the whole community. His business is conducted upon honest principles and receives the encouragement it deserves.

N. C. HENNINGER. The successful business career of N. C. Henninger, the principal undertaker and furniture dealer, in New Holland, Pa., offers but another proof of the results to be obtained by the application of energy and perseverance in any direction, for his early manhood found him hampered by want of means, his accumulation of a competency resulting entirely from his own efforts.

Mr. Henninger came of good, sturdy stock, a combination of Scotch-Irish on the maternal side, while the paternal was German, his parents being John R. and Maria L. (Hunter) Henninger, the former of whom was for many years a well-known undertaker in the city of Reading, Pa. His birth occurred in 1821, his death, in 1893, his wife, who was a year younger, surviving him one year. They reared a family of twelve children: Sarah, who married Granville Hanger, of Reading; William, of Reading; Mary, who married William Swartz, of the same city; N. C., of this sketch; Isadore, of Reading; Annie, who married Charles Lewis, of Reading; Clara, who married Calbert Hartman, of Reading; four others who died in childhood.

N. C. Henninger was born June 21, 1851, and received his education in the common schools of Berks county, coming to New Holland in 1878 and working with various undertaking establishments till he acquired a complete knowledge of the details of the business. In 1886 he opened up an establishment of his own, fitting it out in modern style, and his house is the only one in that part of the county which is prepared to conduct satisfactory embalming, his success in this line having caused him to gain the full confidence of the public. In connection with his undertaking, Mr. Henninger has also opened up a complete furniture store, the whole business being managed with the care and attention which has been the main cause of the prosperity which has attended his efforts.

Mr. Henninger was married to Miss Sarah C. Orman, of Reading, Pa., and six children have been born to them: James C., of New Holland, Pa.; Rosa L., who married Raymond Boum, of Lancaster; Marion; Emma, who died in childhood; and two infants who passed away.

Mr. Henninger is one of the staunch Republicans of New Holland and is a justice of the peace in the borough, standing as one of its most esteemed citizens. His religious connection is with the Reformed Church, where he is highly valued, and in private life he is a type of the excellent neighbor and a pattern of the domestic virtues, while his pleasant personality and high character keep for him both respect and affection.

SAMUEL M. RUTT, a representative and leading young business man of Terre Hill, Lancaster county, was born in Brecknock township, Nov. 17, 1862, and is a son of Jacob and Nancy (Myers) Rutt. The parents both died the same week in 1894, the father being seventy-two, the mother ten years younger. The father was established near Martindale, Earl township, where he followed farming and the butcher business. He was born in Caernarvon township, and the mother in East Earl.

Joseph Rutt, the grandfather of Samuel M., died when his son Jacob was a small boy. His wife also passed away soon after his death.

Jacob Rutt was reared at Churchtown and while quite a young man became a butcher. In this occupation he soon rose to prominence, and by his methods and integrity became quite wealthy. For fifty-five years he dealt in meat, doing both a wholesale and retail business, and for years was a familiar figure on the markets at Reading. He owned a farm of a hundred acres and kept it in fine condition. In religion he belonged to the Mennonite Church, and his wife to the Reformed Church. They had a family of ten children: Martha, who is the widow of Levi Weaver, and has her home in Spring Grove, Lancaster county; John J., a butcher in Lancaster; George, who is a farmer, and has his home in Terre Hill; Mary, married to Aaron Huber of Earl township; Samuel M.; Christian, deceased; David, a butcher at Hinkletown; Edwin, a farmer of Earl township; Abraham, deceased; Annie, the wife of John Weaver, of Reading, Pennsylvania.

Samuel M. Rutt was born in Brecknock township but was reared in Earl township, and mastered the butcher's trade under the instruction of his father, and this occupation he has always followed in connection with his farming. A place of thirty-two acres, one mile north of Terre Hill belongs to him, where he has his slaughter house, and all the equipments for his business, which is both wholesale and retail, and is widely extended through that part of Lancaster county. In 1893 he began business on his own account, and his success has been in every way creditable. The buildings on his farm are solid and substantial and were erected by his father.

Mr. Rutt was married in 1882 to Miss Eliza Rupp, a daughter of Isaac Rupp, of Earl township. They have a family of ten children: Cora, who married Abraham Kurtz, of Philadelphia; Bertha; Isaac; Jennie; Jacob; Samuel; Lizzie; Vera; Mary; Miles.

Mr. Rutt is a Republican, and the family belong to the most respected and generally esteemed citizens of Lancaster county.

OLIVER B. BRUBAKER, who resides on his farm two miles southwest of New Holland, Earl township, was born in Manheim township, June 22, 1853, and is a son of Thompson and Anna (Bair) Brubaker.

Thompson Brubaker was born in Upper Leacock township, and was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth Brubaker. He died in 1890, when seventy-four years old. In his active years he followed farming and after his marriage located at Binkley's Bridge, where he kept a hotel for several years. In 1855 he removed to Earl township and established himself on the farm where his son, James W., is now to be found. There he lived while erecting buildings on the adjoining farm where his son, Oliver B., now resides. In 1857 he located on the farm where he had erected the new buildings and made his home there until 1877, when he moved to the farm now occupied by James W. Brubaker, where he died, and where his widow is still living, at the age of seventy-four. In religion he was a member of Roland's Reformed Church, of which he was a trustee for many years. Of this church he was a founder and a liberal supporter. In the community he became a leading and influential citizen, and owned three farms, amounting to 200 acres of land, not counting several tracts of timber land. Much of this property was acquired through his own efforts. His family consisted of four children: J. Frank, a civil engineer, of Leacock township; Oliver B.; James W., a farmer of Earl township; one who died in infancy.

Oliver B. Brubaker was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools, also attending the State Normal at Millersville. In 1882 he began operations on his own account, locating on the farm where he is still living, a place of fifty acres. His attention is wholly given to farming and he has won an enviable standing as a progressive and public-spirited citizen. In politics he is a Republican, and at present a member of the school board of Earl township. His home is one of culture and refinement, and shows evidence of thrift and prosperity.

Mr. Brubaker was married Oct. 19, 1881, to Miss Clarissa R. Numbers, a daughter of Hanna Numbers, of Leacock township. Mr. and Mrs. Brubaker have two children living, Claude T. and Roy W. Ross, a third child, died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Brubaker belong to the United Brethren Church. Mr. Brubaker is interested in several pieces of real estate in Lancaster county; one farm of sixty acres at Binkley's Bridge, in Manheim township, has been in the possession of the Brubaker family since it was deeded from William Penn.

JOHN M. RANCK, a resident of Earl township, has a home one mile east of New Holland. He was born on the farm where he is now located, and is a son of John and Elizabeth (Weideman) Ranck, both of whom are now deceased. The Rancks belong to an old and honored family of the county whose history runs back to Valentine Ranck, the first of the name in Lancaster county. The grandfather of John M. Ranck was John Ranck.

John M. Ranck was born June 3, 1861, and was reared on the farm where we find him at the present time. His education was secured in the public schools, and when he was twenty-three he began business for himself, taking charge of the family homestead, which contained fifty-five acres. There he has since been engaged in general farming, and is one of the bright and progressive men of the township. In politics he is a staunch Republican. His home and surroundings give evidence of thrift and prosperity.

Mr. Ranck was married June 9, 1885, to Miss Elizabeth M. Shaeffer, who was born April 24, 1864, in Earl township, a daughter of Adam and Mary (Frey) Shaeffer. To their union have come two children: Margie L. is living; one daughter died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Ranck belong to the United Brethren Church of Rancks, in which he has long been an active worker. From 1879 to 1900 he was one of the official members of that body, and has always been active in Sabbath-school work, being librarian for many years.

JAMES RETZER. Among the leading and representative citizens of Little Britain township, is James Retzer, who was born in Cecil county, Md., Aug. 24, 1813, and was a son of John and Ann (Reed) Retzer, who were natives of Bucks county, Pa., but of German origin.

John Retzer was a farmer by occupation and was one of the early settlers of Lancaster county, where he lived an honest and upright life for a great many years, and reared a highly respected family noted for its adherence to the Presbyterian religion and the Republican party. The eight children born to John and Ann Retzer were: George, John, Nancy, William, Daniel, Joseph, Jennetta and James, all having passed out of life with the exception of James Retzer of Little Britain township.

James Retzer was reared among farm surroundings, and was afforded the best education that could be obtained in the country schools of his time. With small means he started out to carve his own way, and in his case, as in that of many others, patient and unremitting industry, thrift and energy have brought their full reward. Mr. Retzer now owns 325 acres of fine farming land in Little Britain township, divided into two tracts, both of them in a high state of cultivation, and improved with excellent buildings for residence, stock, and shelter for the great and abundant products of his lands.

Since 1860 Mr. Retzer has been identified with the Republican party, but prior to that time he had been a Jacksonian Democrat, his first vote having been cast for Andrew Jackson. The issues before the country in 1860 caused him to vote for Abraham Lincoln and since then he has been a staunch and active supporter of Republican principles. No creed binds Mr. Retzer in religious life; he makes reliance upon a life of integrity and upright living the foundation of his religion, and he has lived the honest life he professes, always extending the helping hand, and winning the esteem of his neighbors by his universal kindness.

Mr. Retzer has never married, a niece named Miss Jenkins, being his very capable and estimable housekeeper. Although he is one of the oldest citizens of the county and for some time has lived retired from activity, he takes an intelligent interest in all matters of public concern, and enjoys affording hospitality. From his long residence here, Mr. Retzer is a very interesting and companionable host.

W. SCOTT HEISEY, a manufacturer of lime on an extensive scale, and a dealer in coal, grain, flour, feed, salt and general merchandise, and an estimator of building materials, whose headquarters are at Rheems, Pa., was born in West Donegal township, Lancaster county, June 12, 1862, on the old Heisey homestead, where his home is now established, a son of Jacob W. Heisey.

W. Scott Heisey remained under the parental roof until he reached the age of seventeen years, when he began teaching school at Pleasant Hill, where he had been a pupil, and here he taught until he reached the age of twenty-seven years. He attended State Normal School at Millersville, and had schools in East and West Donegal and East Hempfield townships. After his marriage Mr. Heisey and his estimable wife settled on their present farm, the original Heisey homestead, and he engaged in its cultivation in connection with teaching until the spring of 1890, when he began to ship lime, at the same time opening a coal, grain and feed business at Rheems, where he was instrumental in securing the establishment of a post-office, of which he was the first post-master, holding this position at the present time. In the spring of 1894 Mr. Heisey purchased the old Jacob Rheems farms contain 250 acres, and the output of that family since the days of the Penns, and laid out the village of Rheems, building the first house in the new settlement, in which he opened a grocery store and a post-office in 1895. Later on, Mr. Heisey bought a second Rheems farm, which was underlaid with a high grade of limestone rock. The two Rheems farms contain 250 acres, and the output of the lime works, which he at once established, and which were chartered in 1900 under the name of the "High C Lime & Stone Company," is increasing and enlarging. Of this company he is president and general manager, and C. I. Heisey is the secretary. Mr. Heisey has built a railroad to one of his stone quarries, and is known as an energetic and pushing business man, with an unusual capacity for work. He established a private school at Rheems in 1899, and sold to the West Donegal school board one acre of ground on which a new public school house has been erected. He also built the railroad station and ticket, freight and express office and is the agent for the Company at Rheems. In politics he is a Republican, and without question is one of the leading business men of this part of the county. A very extensive business has been developed by him, and it would be difficult to find a better grade of lime than that which he is now putting on the market on a most satisfactory basis.

On Nov. 19, 1885, W. Scott Heisey and Miss Susan G. Breneman, daughter of Mrs. Anna M. Breneman, were married at the home of the bride in West Hempfield township, and to them have been born the following children: Arthur B., Bertha M., Henry B., Paul W., Anna C. and S. Grace.

WALTER JOHN COX, the manufacturer of the celebrated "Yellow Jack" and "White Satin" candies at No. 34 South Duke street, Lancaster, comes from one of the oldest and best known families of this county. His father, Samuel B. Cox, now living retired at an advanced age, was for many years at the head of the firm of S. B. Cox & Company, carriage builders, long and favorably known in the interior of the State. S. B. Cox is the only survivor of his family, and among those who have entered into rest are Major B. F., at one time steward of the Lancaster County Almshouse and Hospital; George, a coach maker; and Thomas, who was a practicing physician in Philadelphia.

S. B. Cox was twice married, his wives being sisters, named Deisley, who came from the eastern end of Lancaster county. The children by his first marriage were: Clara E., Maggie, Anna M. and Carrie L., all of whom are unmarried, and are at home; Thomas B., deceased, who was a practicing physician in Lancaster county; Bertha D., wife of Dr. Richard Douglas McCaskey, a dentist of Lancaster; Henry Franklin, a stationary engineer; and Walter John, noted above as a candy manufacturer.

Walter John Cox was born in Lancaster Jan. 26, 1869, and was educated in the public schools and at Weidler's Business College. He then became a clerk in Zahm's second-hand book store, later clerking for W. Parke Cummings, after which he kept books for Thomas A. Anderson, a builder of engines and boilers. Leaving the service of Mr. Anderson, Mr. Cox opened an establishment at No. 34 South Duke street, for the sale of plumbers' and steam-fitters' supplies. He began the manufacture of "Yellow Jack" and other choice candies on May 14, 1901, and so popular did his products become that they soon found a market not only in Lancaster, but all over the country. The absolute purity of these goods gave them instant popularity, and the manufacturer of them is at times taxed to the utmost to supply the demand.

Mr. Cox married Miss Lillian P. McCaskey, a daughter of Cyrus D. McCaskey, formerly of Lancaster, but for years past the yard master of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Philadelphia. To this union was born one child, Robert McCaskey, who is now attending school. Mr. Cox is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, is an ardent Republican, and an industrious and intelligent business man.

NEWTON JACKSON, foreman of the boiler department of the Pennsylvania Railroad round-houses, in Columbia, Pa., an esteemed citizen and one who risked his life in forty-three engagements during the Civil war, is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born in Strasburg, in this county. His parents, well-known residents of Strasburg township, were David and Catherine (Petro) Jackson.

In his early life Mr. Jackson went to school but a short time, as at the age of ten years he went to work in a cooper's shop, working there during the winters and assisting on the farm in the summer. When the Civil war broke out in 1861 he enlisted for service, joining Co. D, Second P. V. C., fifty-nine in line, under Capt. William Brinton for three years, and remained his full time. If the long series of the engagements of the Army of the Potomac be recalled, one can wonder that a soldier passed through all those dangers without wound or capture, but this was the fortunate case with Mr. Jackson. On Nov. 6, 1864, he returned safely to Lancaster county, and entered the shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad, where he has been a fixture ever since, beginning at the bottom of the ladder in the boiler room and working up to the responsible position of foreman. Since 1881 he has held the latter position, which is one that requires skill, cool judgment and much physical endurance, all of these qualities being possessed by Mr. Jackson, in marked degree.

In September, 1865, Mr. Jackson was married to Miss Sally M. Albright, of Columbia, and to this union have been born three children: John W., who is engaged in railroad work; William L., who is employed in the Philadelphia Custom House; and Mary G., who married B. F. Stauffer, of Columbia. The birth of Mrs. Jackson was in West Hempfield township, Dec. 25, 1843, a daughter of Samuel W. and Catherine (Wisler) Albright, of Lancaster county.

For many years Mr. Albright was known as a most capable and reliable brick and stone mason, and his death occurred in Marietta, at the age of forty-eight, but the mother died in West Hempfield. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Albright were: John, who was a member of the Pennsylvania Reserves, and died in Salisbury prison; Samuel, deceased; Christiann, who married into the Leonard family of Clearfield; Mary, deceased; Elizabeth, who resides with Mrs. Jackson; Catherine, who married a Mr. Green, and lives in Clinton county, Ellen, who is the widow of a Mr. Green, of West Hempfield township; and Sally M., the wife of Newton Jackson.

Mr. Jackson's political sympathies are with the Democratic party, while socially he is connected with Post No. 118, G. A. R., where he is highly regarded by his comrades. DR. NAPOLEON B. WOLF, prominent alike in the medical and political world, was born in Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, December 24, 1823, and died in Cincinnati, Ohio, July 17, 1891.

HENRY GOOD, is one of the leading farmers and most extensive land owners of Pequea township, Lancaster county. The forefathers of Mr. Good have for several generations played a conspicuous part as active, energetic, industrious and successful men among their fellow farmers and the business men of Pequea township, and their descendant has followed worthily in their footsteps.

Henry Good was born Sept. 7, 1836, in what is now the township of Pequea. He was a son of Christian and Catherine (Brenneman) Good, and grandson of John and Jane (Crider) Good.

John Good was an active business man, thorough going and pushing. He was engaged in farming, milling, distilling and other pursuits. He reared children who were also men and women of snap and occupied creditable positions in society and business life. His children were: Christian, referred to more fully farther on; Barbara, married George Warfel; Jacob; John; Polly married (first) a Mr. Deitrick, and (second) Benjamin Kauffman, and Daniel, served as commissioner of this county.

Christian Good, the father of our subject, was born Jan. 1, 1796. He followed farming and in connection with it engaged in other lines of business, becoming very prosperous and successful. He married Catherine Brenneman and to the union came children as follows: John, who died when aged twenty-eight years; Mary (deceased), who was the wife of Jacob Good; Barbara (deceased) who was the wife of Emanuel Harnish; Elizabeth (deceased), who was the wife of David Hoover; Kittie, who died in infancy, as did also another daughter, unnamed; Christian, who was a farmer living in Illinois, where he died and where his family still reside; Henry, our subject, who is referred to more fully farther on; Elias (deceased), who was also a resident of the State of Illinois, where his family yet reside, he having been killed by the kick of a horse; Jacob, who is a resident of Pequea township, and Abraham (deceased), who was a resident of Lancaster. Christian Good, the father of this family, died when in the sixty-seventh year of his age, and the mother passed away aged sixty-eight years; the remains of both have been interred in a private graveyard on the old homestead. They gave each of their children a good start in life.

Henry Good, our subject, was reared on the farm of his father and forefathers. He early chose agricultural pursuits as a vocation and has continued in that honorable calling through his active lifetime and few indeed are there in his locality who have been more generally blessed and been more prosperous. On Jan. 31, 1861, Mr. Good was married to Susan, daughter of Rev. Martin Miller, of Martic township, Lancaster county. To this marriage have come two children: Louisa and Henry Martin.

Henry Good is a man of good judgment, progressive, broad in his views and generous in his giving to worthy objects. His landed possessions in the county aggregate 435 acres. Religiously the family are connected with the Old Mennonite Church, the church of their forefathers.

HENRY L. HESS, a well-known retired farmer of Elizabethtown, has found time in the midst of numerous personal duties to take an important part in public affairs. Mr. Hess was born in Mt. Joy township Feb. 24, 1857.

The parents of Henry L. Hess were Martin and Catherine (Lehn) Hess, the former a native of Pequea township, and the latter of Lancaster. Martin Hess passed his last days in retirement at Elizabethtown, and died April 1, 1895, aged sixty-five. His remains rest in Greentree cemetery. Both he and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church. Mrs. Catherine (Lehn) Hess was a daughter of Peter and Esther (Shissler) Lehn of Lancaster township. Their family consisted of four children besides our subject: Isaac, deceased; Mary, deceased, wife of John Nye; Elizabeth, wife of David Meckley, of Dauphin county; and Katie, wife of John Nye, a farmer of West Donegal township.

Henry L. Hess remained at home with his parents until his marriage, when he located in Elizabethtown, where he farmed for two years, and then passed a year in Mt. Joy township. For thirteen years he followed agricultural pursuits in Penn township, after which he spent some six years in Rapho. In all these years of active labor he gave to his work the methodical care that insures success, and in April, 1901, he was enabled to retire with a most comfortable competence. He now makes his home in Elizabethtown, and is passing his days in the quiet enjoyment of well earned rest. Wherever he has made his home, he has played an important part in public affairs. For six years he was a school director in Penn township, and for three years was auditor of Rapho township. He has been a director of the Lawn Fire Insurance Company for the past two years. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and well posted on the work of his party all over the country. In religious belief he is a German Baptist.

Jacob followed in the footsteps of his father, and engaged in the manufacture of grain cradles, until shortly before his death, which occurred in February, 1898, when he was aged eighty-three years. His wife, Mary W. (Kelchner), passed away in 1897, aged seventy-two years, a faithful member of the Brethren in Christ Church. Of the children of this family we have the following record: John, Cyrus, Aaron, Joseph, Samuel and Jacob all died young; Caroline is the deceased wife of Dr. Calvin Stauffer; Mary, Lizzie and Emma are deceased, Amanda, married Abraham Sherrer, of Bachmanville; and Anna K.

WILLIAM G. HESS, M. D. Among the prominent and leading citizens of Lancaster county, one who in spite of youth has become well known in medical circles, is Dr. William G. Hess, located at Greene, in Drumore township. Dr. Hess is a native of that township, where he was born May 27, 1875, a son of John M. and Martha Hess.

The Hess family is an old one in Lancaster county and was founded here some 150 years ago, by three brothers who came hither from Germany. Grandfather Benjamin Hess was a successful and well known farmer of Lancaster county and was the father of three children: Martha, deceased wife of Amos Mylin; Mary, late wife of William Giles; and John M.

John M. Hess, the son of Benjamin, and the father of Dr. Hess, is a miller by trade, well and favorably known in his locality. He was born March 26, 1832, and about 1860 was married to Martha Giles, the six children born to this union being: Hat-

After finishing the common school course, he engaged in teaching school, intent upon gaining a higher education. His efforts met with deserved success, and the ambitious young man not only became a student at the Millersville State Normal School, but later entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania. In 1894 he had commenced the serious study of medicine, and by close application, he was enabled to graduate with honor in 1898. Returning to his home locality, he began the practice of his profession in the summer of 1898, and has in this short time built up a large and growing clientage, his ability being recognized both by his patrons and the other members of his profession.

Dr. Hess was married Nov. 15, 1900, to Miss Margaret Rutter, of Drumore township, who is a daughter of A. M. and Margaret (Brenneman) Rutter, old residents of Drumore township. F., No. 50, of Greene, Pa.; and the K. of P., No. 423, of Rawlinsville.

Although Dr. Hess has had his own way to make, his own career to carve out, he has accomplished much and has fair promise for the future. Endowed with energy and natural ability, with education and a love for the profession, he has also those attributes which go far to the making of a successful physician, a pleasing personality, excellent judgment and an inflexible will. Dr. Hess has never ceased to be a student and keeps himself posted on all the advances made in his chosen profession. (Moore) Paxson, of Little Britain township. The family is of English origin; three brothers emigrated from the old country and settled near Philadelphia in the time of William Penn. The names of these brothers were William, Oliver and Reuben, and from them sprung the honorable Paxson family of Pennsylvania.

James S. Paxson, father of our subject, was a native of Philadelphia, a grandson of William Paxson, and a son of Jacob Paxson, who left Philadelphia and while yet a young man settled in Drumore township, where he reared a family of six children, viz.: William, Elizabeth, Rachel, James S., Franklin and Johnson, all of whom are dead with the exception of Rachel, who still lives in Fulton township. James S. Paxson, the father of Samuel P., was born in Drumore township in 1817 and died in 1876. He was married to Miss Mary L. Moore, of Britain township, in 1846. She was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Jackson) Moore, of English and Scotch descent. Six children were born to this couple: Emma K. is the wife of Peter Gilmer of Sullivan county, Pa.; Elizabeth S. is a resident of Fulton township; Alice is the wife of John Fulton, of Fulton township; William A. is deceased; Samuel P. is the subject of this sketch; and James M., of Britain township, lives on the old homestead.

Samuel P. Paxson was married to Miss Lizzie P. Smedley, of Fulton township, Nov. 11, 1886. Mrs. Paxson is the daughter of James and Adeline B. (Ambler) Smedley, of Lancaster county, and was born May 5, 1858. To Mr. and Mrs. Paxson have been born the following children: James Arthur, born Sept. 4, 1887; William L., born Jan. 31, 1889; and Adeline S., born Jan. 24, 1893.

Mr. Paxson owns a well improved farm of ninety-eight acres, in the finest state of cultivation. He is a Republican in politics but is not a seeker for office. He and his wife are members of the Society of Friends. Mr. Paxson is a leading man in his community, and at present is a director of the school board. He is well thought of by all and in every respect is a valued and valuable citizen.

JOHN OLMSTED, a thrifty and successful farmer of Colerain township, Lancaster county, was born in Little Britain township, Oct. 17, 1865, and is a son of James and Hannah (Moore) Olmsted.

James Olmsted was born at East Head, Conn., May 24, 1818, his wife Hannah being born in Sadsbury, Chester county, Nov. 29, 1831, a daughter of Elias and Elizabeth Moore. Mrs. Olmsted was reared to womanhood in Chester county, where she was given a fair education. Mr. Moore left a large family, all of whom with two exceptions, are dead. Sandreth Moore, a merchant of Coatesville, is the only brother living, and has seven children. Elvira M. Moore married Mahlon Mercer, and lives near Lincoln, Chester county.

James Olmsted left Connecticut when a young man on account of his health, which had begun to concern him, and for some time he travelled in different parts of the State in search of health. In 1861 he married and located at Oak Shade, where he did an extensive general mercantile business up to the time of his death, in April, 1876. He left a widow, a son and a daughter. Mr. Olmsted was widely known in Chester and Lancaster counties as an upright and enterprising business man, whose genial disposition and accommodating spirit won him many friends. In 1861 he was appointed postmaster by Abraham Lincoln, and this position he held until his death in 1876. He took a deep interest in the Baptist Church, and was an active worker in it. His widow continued his business until her marriage to John Holcomb, in 1879. They made their home on the old Webb homestead, owned by Mr. Holcomb, where they lived until her death, in October, 1899. Mr. Olmsted's children were John, whose name appears at the opening of this article, and Sarah E., who was born in Little Britain, in March, 1869. Her home is with her brother.

John Olmsted was reared in Little Britain and Colerain townships, attended the district schools, and lived with his mother on the Holcomb homestead, of which he became manager before the death of his step-father, a work he continued for some time after that event. When his mother died, he bought out the other heirs, and purchased the place. In March, 1893, he was married to Sadie C., a daughter of Adam and Emma (Retz) Overly, who was born in August, 1868, in Bart township. Her parents moved to Colerain, where they lived some ten years, but they are now living in Little Britain. Mr. and Mrs. Overly are the parents of four children: Howard, of Little Britain; Clara, the wife of John Scott, of Eden township; Adam, at home with his parents, and Sadie C., Mrs. Olmsted. Mrs. Olmsted was educated in the public schools, and is a lady of character and ability.

Mr. and Mrs. Olmsted have one daughter, Mabel R., born in December, 1893. In politics he is a Republican, and both are members of the Baptist Church in Colerain township, where he has held the office of deacon for a number of years.

ELI K. MYLIN, who carries on a large farm in Pequea township, comes of a family which has long been identified with agricultural interests in Lancaster county.

Jacob Mylin, grandfather of Eli K. Mylin, was born in West Lampeter township, where he lived and died. He was engaged exclusively in farming, and was very successful. He owned three farms one of which, the one on which the grandfather was born and lived all his life, is now the property of the subject of this sketch. Jacob Mylin was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. He wedded a Miss Haines, of Lancaster county and they were the parents of three children. Their only daughter died when fifteen years of age; the other children were John, the father of our subject; and Jacob, who lived and died in the old homestead.

John Mylin was born in West Lampeter township, Dec. 25, 1804, and lived at home until he was about twenty-four years of age. He then married Miss Elizabeth Kendig, daughter of Christian Kendig of Conestoga township, and began farming for himself on the place where his son, Eli K. Mylin, now resides. The father conducted this farm until his death which occurred April 28, 1857.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mylin were the parents of nine children: Amos, who died March 4, 1871; Isaac, who died in childhood; Eli K., our subject; Eliza, who died in infancy; Martin, of Gordonville, Lancaster county; Aaron, John, Aaron J., and Jacob, all of whom died in infancy or childhood.

Eli K. Mylin was born May 2, 1833, on the farm where he now resides. He was educated in the common schools of the county, and farmed with his father until the father's death. He then purchased the farm and has continued farming ever since, meeting with great success. His place comprises 223 acres, located in the southern part of Pequea township, and is regarded as one of the most productive tracts in this region. Mr. Mylin has won prosperity by years of unremitting industry and energy and he is justly respected for the honorable position he holds among the fellow-citizens in Pequea township.

In February, 1860, Mr. Mylin married Miss Martha Charles, daughter of Samuel Charles of Pequea township. They have had twelve children, namely: Elizabeth, who is the wife of Isaiah Stetman; John, who resides in Providence township, Lancaster county; Frances, who is the wife of Harry Keen; Benjamin, who is employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad; Charles, who died when twenty-four years of age; Jacob, who lives in Winnipeg, Manitoba; Eli, Jr., who is at home; Bertha, the wife of Charles Kendig; Walter and Cecilia, who are at home; and Harry and Christian, both of whom died in infancy. In religion Mr. Mylin is a member of the Mennonite Church.

ISAAC F. ROHRER, a self-made and prosperous farmer, residing two miles southeast of Washington borough, Manor township, Lancaster county, was born on the Isaac Forry farm, about seven miles from Lancaster City, April 3, 1863, and is a son of Christian H. Rohrer, of Manor township.

Isaac F. Rohrer remained on the home farm with his parents until about twenty-five years old, receiving his education in the public schools, and in 1888 began farming on his own account in West Hempfield township, on a tract of land belonging to his father-in-law, William Walker; he remained three years on the place, and then removed to a farm in the west part of Manor township, near Washington borough, where another term of three years was passed and then a removal was made to the present farm, two miles southeast of the borough, the property of Christian H. Rohrer.

Isaac F. Rohrer married, Nov. 10, 1887, Miss Mattie F. Walker, daughter of William and Martha (Friday) Walker, of West Hempfield township. This marriage has been blessed with two children, Laura May and Katie W., and the Rohrer home is one of the most pleasant in Lancaster county. Isaac F. Rohrer devotes his entire attention to general farming, a branch of agriculture he thoroughly understands, realizes a comfortable income, and has lived so as to win the respect of his neighbors without exception.

JACOB K. SHENCK, a prosperous and well-known farmer of West Donegal township, was born June 24, 1849, in the township where he has passed his upright and honorable career, son of John H. Shenck, of West Donegal township, mentioned elsewhere.

Jacob K. Shenck was married in November, 1872, in Mt. Joy, Pa., to Mary H. Ebersole, a member of an old and prominent Lancaster county family, frequent mention of whom is found in these pages.

Mr. Shenck remained at home with his parents until the time of his marriage, when he established himself on a West Donegal farm, where he remained until 1891. That year he came to his present location, where he has worked industriously to the end that he is known as a most successful farmer, and as thoroughly honest and square-dealing by all with whom he has business. Both himself and wife are members of the Mennonite Church.

Mrs. Mary H. (Ebersole) Shenck was born in West Donegal township Dec. 25, 1849, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Hilcher) Ebersole, both natives of West Donegal, where they spent their lives in farming. Her father died in 1871, at the age of sixty-seven years; and her mother in 1885, at the age of seventy-eight, both being laid to rest in private burying-grounds in West Donegal township. They were devout members of the Mennonite Church. Their family consisted of the following children: Levi H., unmarried, a retired farmer in West Donegal township; Mary H., whose name appears above; Susan H., wife of Adam Stump, a farmer of West Donegal township; and Joseph H., a farmer in West Donegal township, who married Anna Heisey.

Mr. and Mrs. Shenck are prominent people in Lancaster county, where they have led peaceful and industrious lives, commanding and retaining the respect and confidence of the public to a marked degree.

ISAAC S. LONGENECKER. It is not difficult to trace in the successful career of Isaac S. Longenecker, the cashier of the Union National Mount Joy Bank, those sterling qualities which have distinguished the bearers of his name in the early history of Lancaster county.

Isaac S. Longenecker was born in Dauphin county, Pa., Jan. 3, 1835, a son of Abraham and Anna (Shenk) Longenecker, natives of Dauphin county, where the father was a well-known farmer and died at the age of seventy-six, in 1880, the mother having passed away in 1860, at the age of fifty-one. Both parents were consistent members of the Brinser Dunker Church. The children born to this worthy couple were: Samuel, a farmer of Lebanon; Abraham, deceased; Isaac S.; Magdelina, deceased wife of Peter Kramer; Elizabeth, deceased; David, a minister in the U. B. Church at Lebanon; Peter and Harry, deceased. The paternal grandparents were Jacob and Barbara (Buck) Longenecker, this honored name being well known over the whole of the State of Pennsylvania.

It is a subject of general comment, that the early life of almost all men who have later become prominently identified with great institutions of any kind was passed on a farm, and such was the case with Isaac S. Longenecker. As a profession, farming did not appeal to him as a youth, and at the age of fifteen, he entered a store in Dauphin county as a clerk, applying himself so attentively to his duties that his services were retained for five years. A better opening presenting itself in Mastersonville, he came into Lancaster county, and became an efficient and trusted employee in a mercantile house, where he remained until 1861 and then, in the same capacity, was connected with one of the business houses in Mt. Joy, in 1873 forming a partnership with T. M. Breneman which continued for seven years.

The faithful discharge of duty and the excellent business capacity displayed by Mr. Longenecker, made him an acquisition to the First National Bank, of Mt. Joy, which he entered as clerk in 1880. In 1883 his value was recognized by his choice as assistant cashier. In the spring of 1885 he went to Elizabethtown, where he became cashier of the Elizabethtown National Bank, remaining with that financial institution until 1889, but since August, 1890, he has held his present responsible position as cashier of one of the old and solid banking houses of the State. The Union National Mount Joy Bank was organized in 1855 as a Savings bank, but the charter was changed in 1857, making it a State institution, and in 1865 its present status was attained.

Isaac S. Longenecker was married in Lancaster county to Miss Harriet G. Fretz, who was born in Rapho township, a daughter of Daniel and Margaret (Greiner) Fretz, the former of whom was a prominent farmer of this county. To this marriage has been born one daughter, Emma, who is the wife of J. W. Eshleman, a member of the firm of the Gray Iron Casting Company, of Mount Joy.

In politics Mr. Longenecker is a Republican, and has been prominent in civic affairs. As a member of the Mt. Joy city council, he advocated progressive methods and as auditor was instrumental in solving the question of ways and means in regard to a number of improvements. His religious connection is with the U. B. Church. His life has been one of continued activity, requiring the exercise of a high order of ability and he is regarded as one of the most substantial representative business men of Mt. Joy.

JOHN RESSEL, who has for many years been one of the successful farmers of Pequea township, is a native of Lancaster county, having been born Dec. 12, 1836, in West Lampeter township.

Michael Ressel, grandfather of John Ressel, came from Germany, and settled in Lancaster county. He was a shoemaker by trade, an occupation he followed all his life. Michael Ressel married Miss Mary Stetman, of Lancaster county, and they were the parents of the following children: Samuel, the father of our subject; Michael, deceased; John, deceased; Rachel, wife of Jacob Nuban, of Ohio; Catherine (deceased), wife of Adam Duke; Rebecca (deceased), wife of James Thompson; Nancy (deceased), wife of Adam Hess; Susan (deceased), wife of John McVey; and Leah, widow of Abram Kepperling.

Samuel Ressel was born in Lancaster county in 1796, and received a common-school education, living at home until he reached his majority. He early learned the shoemaker trade, and at the age of twenty took up the trade of stone mason, at which occupation he continued until he was fifty years of age. The balance of his life was spent in farming. He married Miss Annie Klein, of Manor township and they had a family of nine children: Betsy, died in infancy; Maria, wife of Martin Coble; Benjamin, deceased; Samuel, of Lancaster; Annie, wife of Jacob Myers; Martha, wife of Henry Hackman; Eliza, deceased; Levi, of Lyonsville; and John K.

John K. Ressel remained at home until he was twenty-one years of age, acquired a common-school education, and was apprenticed to the carpenter trade with Henry Hackman. After five years of carpentering Mr. Ressel purchased the farm where he now resides, and has ever since engaged in farming, in which he has met with gratifying success. Mr. Ressel is one of the valuable citizens of the township, and is widely esteemed for his genuine worth.

In 1861 Mr. Ressel wedded Miss Martha Good, and to this union have been born two children: Franklin G., born June 23, 1862, now a resident of Lancaster; and Annie G., born Sept. 29, 1881, at home.

E. R. RITCHIE, a well-known machinist and foundryman, resides in East Drumore township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and receives his mail at Hensel post office.

BENJAMIN F. STAUFFER, a prominent general farmer of Upper Leacock township, Lancaster county, was born July 25, 1863, and is a son of Christian and Susannah (Rutt) Stauffer, the latter of whom passed out of life May 5, 1900, at the age of seventy-one years. The former was born in Pequea township, where he was a farmer until he retired from active life, fourteen years prior to his decease, which occurred August 18, 1900, at the age of seventy-seven. Both parents had long been consistent members of the Mennonite Church, and both lie buried in Stumptown cemetery.

Benjamin F. Stauffer remained with his parents until his marriage and then made arrangements with his father so that he could farm the old homestead and receive a certain remuneration, and there he remained until the spring of 1901, when, both parents having passed away, the property was divided and our subject purchased his present fine farm. Here Mr. Stauffer has carried on a general line of farming with great success, and he is recognized as one of the best agriculturists in the township.

Benjamin F. Stauffer was married Nov. 15, 1883, in New Holland, Pa., to Miss Martha L. Hoover, and the children born to this union are; Abram H., Susan E., Mary E., Anna H., Barbara H. and Sarah C. Mrs. Martha L. (Hoover) Stauffer was born in Strasburg township, Oct. 26, 1861, a daughter of Abraham and Mary (Carpenter)

Hoover, of Strasburg township. The parents remained there until 1888, at which time they removed to Leacock township where they afterward remained, engaged in farming. Father Hoover was born Jan. 18, 1828; his wife was born Feb. 15, 1830, and died in February, 1901. She is interred in the Hershey burying ground. Mr. Hoover is one of the leading members of the Old Mennonite Church and a most highly esteemed citizen. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were: Sarah A. and Susan, who both died young; Ellen, who married Amos Brackbill, of Paradise township; Margaret, who married Frank Herst, of Newton, Kans.; Martha L., the wife of Mr. Stauffer; Juliet, who married David Hershey, of Leacock township; Kate, who married Ephraim Hershey, of Paradise township; John, who resides with his parents; David, who died young; and Abraham, who resides in Paradise township. The grandparents of Mrs. Stauffer were among the old and prominent families of the county, David and Susannah (Eby) Hoover, of old Swiss stock; and John and Sarah (Kendig) Carpenter, of this county.

HENRY J. GISH, proprietor of the Gish Feed Mill, a water power plant in West Donegal township, was born on the farm where he is now found, July 28, 1865, a son of Henry B. and Amanda (Herr) Gish. The father now deceased, was a son of John and Annie Gish, while the mother, a daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Herr, natives and lifelong residents of Lancaster county, has her home in West Donegal township.

On Nov. 3, 1898, Henry J. Gish was married in Hummelstown, Dauphin county, to Miss Mabel E. Hershey, and this union has been blessed with one child, Esther H. Mrs. Gish was born in Hummelstown, Nov. 15, 1873, the charming and estimable daughter of Christian L. and Fanny (Mumma) Hershey. Her parents were born in Dauphin county, and are still living near Hummelstown. Her father, who was born Feb. 24, 1832, in his more active years held various local positions, such as school director and tax collector, and was a very successful farmer. Her mother was born Dec. 11, 1833, and with her husband belongs to the United Brethren Church. To them were born the following children: Elizabeth, the widow of John Nissley, of Hummelstown; Emma, the wife of B. H. Engle, a real estate operator in Harrisburg; William E., in the lumber business in Harrisburg; Clinton, a real estate dealer in Harrisburg; Mabel E., noted above as married to Mr. Gish; and Harry, Henrietta and Christian, all three deceased.

Henry J. Gish has spent his life on the farm where he was born, and where he is now engaged in farming. In the fall of 1896 in company with his brother Edwin H., he undertook the cultivation of the farm, and the two brothers worked together for two years, when Henry J. bought out Edwin's interest, and since that time has had sole charge of the estate. The mill, which is also in his hands, was used to manufacture flour until 1896, when the making of flour was given up, and the work of the mill thrown into feed and chop stuff. Mr. Gish was elected town clerk in 1900, and is proving himself a popular and capable public official. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and has been a director of the Exchange Bank of Elizabethtown, since the fall of 1897. In his politics he is a Republican, and is one of the foremost young business men of this part of Lancaster county, with many friends and a bright future before him.

CHRISTIAN R. STAUFFER, one of the well-known general farmers of Upper Leacock township, and a brother of Benjamin F. Stauffer, was born in Leacock township, Feb. 28, 1852, a son of Christian and Susannah (Rutt) Stauffer, who were most worthy members of the Old Mennonite Church. Their children were: Israel, Daniel and Henry, all deceased; Christian; Barbara, who married Wayne Rohrer, of Upper Leacock township; Sue, who married David L. Kreider, of East Lampeter township; Amos, who is deceased; and Benjamin, a farmer of this township. By the first marriage of Christian Stauffer, to Anna Rohrer, one son was born, John R., who is a farmer of Bart township. The grandparents of Mr. Stauffer were prominent farming people of the county, where John Stauffer also was a miller for many years.

Christian R. Stauffer remained under his father's roof until his marriage and for the following ten years he engaged in farming on the old place, at the close of that period purchasing his present farm, where he has shown excellent management and is the owner of a fine property.

Christian R. Stauffer was married Oct. 15, 1874, in East Lampeter township, to Anna Kreider, and the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer were: Sue, who married Elam Horst, a farmer of West Earl township, and has one child, Christian; and Anna, who married David B. The second marriage of Mr. Stauffer was to Miss Barbara Landis, in December, 1884, of which marriage there has been no issue. She was born in East Lampeter township, in 1852, and was a daughter of John and Elizabeth Landis.

The Stauffer family is a leading one in that part of the county, representing wealth and prominence, and all are connected with the Mennonite Church.

F. M. GREENLEAF, one of the prosperous and substantial farmers of Little Britain township, was born Dec. 23, 1862, and is a son of Raymond and Elizabeth (Johnson) Greenleaf, of Little Britain.

Grandfather Martin Greenleaf was a well-known and respected resident of Lancaster county, of which he was also a native. His children were: Robert

P., of Wilmington, Del., where he is a practicing physician; Martin Y., of Gap, Pa.; Raymond; Isabella, of Colerain township; Lucy, the widow of John Walker, of Colerain township; and John T., also a resident of Colerain township.

Raymond Greenleaf, a successful farmer of Little Britain township, was born in 1832, that year also seeing the birth of his wife, Elizabeth Johnson. Five children were born to them: Mary, at home; John, of East Drumore township; F. M., of Little Britain township; Louisa, at home; and Maggie, deceased.

Frank M. Greenleaf was reared on the farm and was well educated, attending both public and private schools in Lancaster county. He started out in life with little but health, good habits and perseverance, but to prove that this was capital enough it may be stated that he is now the owner of a fine farm of 126 acres of excellent land with most comfortable and commodious buildings. His agricultural operations have been very successful as he has given close attention to the details of his work, has employed modern methods and used improved machinery. This farm is particularly valuable to him as it has belonged to the maternal side of his family ever since the days of his great-grandfather Johnson. Both of his ancestral families are old and respected ones in Lancaster county.

Frank M. Greenleaf was married March 21, 1889, to Miss Lucy M. Clendennin, of Little Britain township, who was a daughter of James T. and Jane (Scott) Clendennin, and was born Oct. 10, 1866. This marriage has been blessed with two children: Arthur J., born March 31, 1890, and Ethel M., born Oct. 16, 1892. Mrs. Greenleaf was one of a family of six children: Martha and Eliza, twins; Robert; Charles; Ralph and Lucy. Both Mr. and Mrs. Greenleaf are consistent and valued members of the Presbyterian Church, at the Union, in Colerain township.

Mr. Greenleaf is an ardent and active member of the Republican party, thoroughly believing in its principles. Through his locality he is held in high esteem, as an honest and upright citizen who is devoted to his country, section and family.

JOHN BAIRD BACHMAN, a venerable resident of Columbia, was, during his active years, prominently identified with the business interests of that place as the proprietor of a large planing-mill, and lumber yard, and at the time of his retirement he was probably the oldest manufacturer in his line in the State.

Mr. Bachman's ancestors on both sides have been numbered among the best citizens of Lancaster county. His great-grandfather, Felix Bachman, emigrated to this country from Switzerland in 1740, and, settling in Bart township, Lancaster county, purchased 650 acres of land from the heirs of William Penn, on which he passed the remainder of his life. He had two sons, George and Jacob. The latter, who became the grandfather of our subject, was born in Bart township on the tract mentioned, and in the house which the father erected soon after purchasing the place. This old dwelling is still standing. He was a farmer by occupation. At the age of seventeen he was drafted for service in the Revolutionary war, but the conflict closed before he was needed. He married Ann Heidlebach, and they raised a family of five children: George, Samuel, Jacob, Ann and Elizabeth.

Samuel Bachman, the father of our subject, was born in 1791, on the old home place, and passed all his days in that locality, dying April 1, 1882, at the great age of ninety-one. He was a man of energetic habits, both of mind and of body, and, as one of the most intelligent citizens of his day and place, took an active part in all the affairs of his locality. As merchant, landlord and farmer he prospered in business. His good judgment and popularity gave his opinion great weight among his neighbors, and he was frequently called upon to assist in the settlement of estates. Samuel Bachman first married Rebecca G. Baird, who was born in 1796, in Colerain township, this county, and died in 1831. Their children were: John B., whose name opens this sketch; Hiram F., deceased, who was killed by lightning; Samuel H., deceased; and Miss Anna A., now residing in Bart township. By his second wife, Isabella Bowers, Mr. Bachman had children as follows: Harriet E. and Rebecca L., both unmarried who reside with their sister Anna in Bart township; and William, who died in infancy. To his third union with Hannah Pickle, came one child, Hannah M., who married James M. Irwin, a farmer of Bart township.

On the maternal side our subject traces his ancestry to Thomas and Agnes Baird, who were of Scotch-Irish extraction. He came to this country from Tyrone, Ireland, about 1750, and settled in Colerain township, this county, taking up three hundred acres of land. He served in Colonial wars, and his son John, the maternal grandfather of our subject, served in the Revolution. The latter was born in Colerain township, and died in 1822. He was a man of prominence in his locality, and served as magistrate in Bart and Colerain townships. John Baird married Abigail Gaillilard and they had the following named children: Thomas, John, Francis (all of whom migrated West), Patience (Mrs. Miller), Sarah (Mrs. Reeves), Rebecca G. (Mrs. Bachman) and (Mrs. Andrews).

John B. Bachman was born March 22, 1820, on the old home place in Bart township, and there spent his early life. During his boyhood he attended the select schools of the neighborhood, receiving a good practical education. His first business experiences were gained by helping his father in the country store and village hotel, and at the age of seventeen he commenced to learn the trade of carpenter, which he continued to follow until 1852. In that year, desiring to extend his business interests, he removed to Columbia, with which place he has since been identified. Until 1894 Mr. Bachman conducted a large planing mill and lumber yard, engaging extensively in the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds, also in building, and he became widely known as one of the most reliable business men in this section. Since 1895 he has lived retired. However, he still takes a deep interest in the affairs of his town, and he has served as Burgess of Columbia for the past three years. Mr. Bachman previously served nine years as councilman, and his fidelity to the best interests of the town has been a marked characteristic of these years of service. Originally an old line Whig, his political sympathies are now with the Republican party. Like his ancestors, he is a Presbyterian in religious faith.

Mr. Bachman was married in 1847, at Georgetown, Bart township, to Miss Isabella Knox, and the following named children were born to them: Florence Rebecca, who is mentioned below; Hyde L., John K., Anna L., and Jennie Gail, all deceased; and Mary Gertrude, also deceased, who was the wife of Charles H. Haldeman, of Columbia. The eldest daughter first married Abraham R. Breneman, son of Abraham Breneman, and they had one daughter, Jennie, who is deceased. Mr. Breneman was engaged in mercantile business. Mrs. Breneman is now the wife of Col. Christian Shuman Kauffman, an iron merchant of Columbia. They have no children.

Mrs. Isabella (Knox) Bachman was born June 15, 1829, in Bart township, daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Ann (Rockey) and granddaughter of George and Catherine (Baker) Rocky, who were natives of Bart township, Lancaster county, and Northumberland county, respectively; both died in Bart township. Her great-grandfather, Henry Rocky, a native of Switzerland, came to America in an early day, making his permanent home in Bart township. He served in the Revolution. Mrs. Bachman's father, Matthew Knox, was born in Ireland, and came to America in 1825, making his home in Bart township. He was a shoemaker by occupation. To his marriage with Elizabeth Ann Rocky, a native of Bart township, were born four children, all now deceased except Mrs. Bachman—George, Mary who married John Q. Taggart, Isabella, Mrs. Bachman, and Catherine, who died young. The mother passed away in 1834, at the early age of twenty-eight, and the father survived until 1838, dying at the age of fifty.

CHRISTIAN H. HESS, who ranks among the thrifty farmer citizens of Pequea township, bears a name that has long been respected in that part of Lancaster county. He is a grandson of David Hess, who was a native of Lancaster county, and passed his entire life there, following farming.

John Hess, the father of our subject, was born in Conestoga township, in 1809, and lived there most of his life. He remained at home on the farm until he was about twenty-one years of age, received a common school education, and when he began life for himself took up farming, which he continued until his death in the spring of 1888. In political affiliation he was a Democrat, held the office of school director for several years and was also justice of the peace for some time. Religiously he was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. Mr. Hess married Miss Harriet Shank, who became the mother of six children, namely: John, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Martha, wife of John M. Hess; David S., of Conestoga township; Jacob S., of Conestoga Center; and Fannie, wife of Michael Good. Mrs. Harriet Hess dying, David Hess wedded Miss Elizabeth Harnish, and to this union were born five children: Benjamin H.; Christian H., our subject; Henry, of Martic township; Elizabeth, wife of Henry Charles, of Pequea township; and Susan B., wife of Martin Reesell, of Martic township. It is said that Mr. Hess (the father of this family) on two occasions walked to Ohio and bought horses which he rode home.

Christian H. Hess was born Sept. 13, 1862, in Conestoga township, and lived at home until he was about twenty-five years of age. He then began farming for himself on the old homestead, where he remained for thirteen years. After this he purchased the farm where he now resides and which contains about seventy acres. It is one of the most productive tracts in Lancaster county, and Mr. Hess has, by industry and careful management, succeeded in making a comfortable income from the property. He has made extensive improvements on the place since it came into his possession.

Mr. Hess married, Jan. 5, 1888, Miss Barbara Funk, daughter of Isaac Funk, and they are the parents of six children: Annie, Elizabeth (deceased), Maris, Ray (deceased), Cora and Barbara. Mr. and Mrs. Hess are both members of the Old Mennonite Church.

DAVID H. DAMBACH, the well known farmer and lime manufacturer of Manor township, residing one mile east of Washington borough, Lancaster Co., Pa., was born near his present home Aug. 20, 1856, and is a son of Martin W. Dambach, who is now deceased.

David H. Dambach was educated in the public schools of Manor township, and at the age of nineteen years hired out as a farm hand to his brother, H. H. Dambach, and in 1877, when twenty-one years old, purchased and settled on his present farm, which comprises thirty-three acres, and on which he has made many valuable improvements and conducts general farming. Mr. Dambach also has on his place a large double lime-kiln and a fine limestone quarry, opened by himself, and which is one of the finest in Lancaster county and produces about $800 worth of pure lime annually and is well equipped with steam drill and other modern machinery.

On Dec. 8, 1877, David H. Dambach married Miss Lydia Shenk, daughter of Abraham Shenk, of Manor township, to which union have been born ten children, namely: Fannie S., Abraham, David, Lizzie, Allen, Mary and Katie, twins, Martin, Annie and John. Mr. and Mrs. Dambach are members of the Old Mennonite Church, to the support of which they have always contributed most liberally, and are classed with the best residents of Manor township.

THE BRENEMAN FAMILY. Adam and John Breneman, two brothers, in the latter part of the eighteenth century settled on 1200 acres of land a little east of Creswell, in Manor township, Lancaster county, each brother securing for himself 600 acres, all unimproved, but from which they later developed first class farms. The tract purchased by Adam is now occupied and owned by John Frey, Benjamin Shenk, Norman Christ, Amos Doerstler, Abraham Baker and others. Adam Breneman, who was a small man, married and reared a family and in due time passed away.

John Breneman's original purchase of 600 acres is now principally owned by Peter Hiestand and Zachariah Witmer. John Breneman married a Miss Bassler, who bore him six sons and five daughters, of whom the sons were named Henry, Joseph, Jacob, Adam, Abraham and John; the record of the names of the daughters has been lost. The children all scattered, the most of them seeking homes in the West. John Breneman was also a man of small stature. The first dwelling he erected on his premises was a small cabin near the site of the buildings that now occupy the Z. R. Witmer farm. This cabin was the home of John Breneman for several years, when he erected a commodious stone farm house, which is now owned by Peter Hiestand. The stone house was the home of John Breneman until his death, which occurred at the age of eighty-two years, in the faith of the Old Mennonite Church.

Joseph Breneman, youngest child of John Breneman, was born in the stone farm house in Manor township, Oct. 20, 1807, married Miss Barbara Kreider, Sept. 2, 1828, and had born to him a family of ten children. Joseph Breneman died Aug. 7, 1872, and his wife, who was born June 26, 1808, survived until March 6, 1895. The ten children alluded to above were: Benjamin K., who was born June 11, 1831; Michael, born Sept. 5, 1833, who died April 19, 1882, leaving a widow; Elizabeth, Dec. 5, 1835, the wife of Z. R. Witmer; John K., born March 10, 1838; Barbara, April 24, 1840, who died in December, 1844; Anna, Nov. 6, 1842, who died in January, 1845; Joseph K., Sept. 30, 1845, a farmer; Jacob, Jan. 8, 1848, a resident of Millersville; Adam, Sept. 23, 1851, living in Lancaster City; and Susan, Aug. 27, 1855, who died in August, 1861. This family was reared in the Mennonite faith, in which faith the parents passed away. Mrs. Barbara (Kreider) Breneman was a daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Kreider, one of the old and highly respected families of Conestoga township.

BENJAMIN K. BRENEMAN, the oldest of these children, was born in the old stone house, was reared a farmer and was educated in the public schools. At the age of twenty-two years, Benjamin began the conduct of a farm on his father's account, and in 1865 they purchased seventy-five acres one mile east of Creswell, where Benjamin K. carried on general farming until about 1894, when he retired from active labor.

The marriage of Benjamin K. Breneman took place Nov. 3, 1853, to Miss Barbara Neff, who was born in Manor township, Oct. 15, 1830, the daughter of Henry Neff, a then prominent citizen. Six children have come to bless this union, viz: Susan, born July 21, 1854, now the wife of Daniel Witmer; Benjamin, Dec. 19, 1857, married to Elizabeth Herr; Henry, Dec. 18, 1861, a farmer, and married to Elizabeth Ruhl, all of Manor township; Joseph, Sept. 16, 1864, a resident of Donegal township and married to Rachel Lefever; Jacob, Nov. 17, 1867, a farmer in Donegal township and married to Lizzie Torrey; and Amos, Dec. 10, 1870, a farmer residing on the old homestead and married to Elizabeth Doerstler. The family are all devout Mennonites and among the most highly respected residents of Lancaster county.

JOHN SLOAD, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, makes his home at Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

AMOS K. ROHRER, a thriving and rising young farmer residing one mile south of Columbia, in Manor township, Lancaster county, was born seven miles west of Lancaster City, on the Forrey farm, Jan. 15, 1875, and is a son of Christian H. Rohrer.

Amos K. Rohrer received the usual education gleaned by farmer's lads from the public or district schools, assisted on the home place until twenty-two years of age, and then branched out for himself on his present sixty-five-acre farm, where general agriculture has since occupied his well-directed attention.

On Nov. 1, 1897, Amos K. Rohrer was united in matrimony with Miss Ella B. Dambach, daughter of H. H. Dambach, of Manor township, and to Mr. and Mrs. Rohrer has come one child, Christian Harry, born Nov. 2, 1898. Mr. Rohrer has been a very industrious man, has made a success of his vocation, and stands to-day among the leading young farmers of his township and county.

AMOS R. GISH, was born in West Donegal, Jan. 31, 1875. He is the senior partner of the firm of A. R. Gish & Bro., general dealers in agricultural implements and extensively engaged in the paint business in Elizabethtown.

Mr. Gish is a son of Jacob R. and Elizabeth (Root) Gish, both natives of West Donegal, where they now reside. Both his parents were born in 1832, and have had the following children: Harry R., who is at home; Levi, who is at home; Abraham R., the junior member of the firm of A. R. Gish & Bro., married Amanda Hershey; Emos R., deceased; Katie R., the wife of Amos R. Herr, a farmer in the township of Mt. Joy; Emma R., the wife of Steven Lindermuth, a farmer of East Donegal township.

The paternal grandparents of Amos R. Gish were John and Anna (Risser) Gish, both natives of West Donegal township, and in their day prominent and respected people.

Amos R. Gish passed the earlier years of his life at home with his parents. In the spring of 1899 he opened his present business in company with his brother, Abraham R. The almost immediate success which they attained demonstrated both the need of such an establishment as that which they maintain and their ability as business men. They keep the best goods, are prompt and reliable in their dealing, and have won a marked success in their business.

Mr. Gish is a Republican, and is much esteemed at home and wherever he is known, for his many good qualities and genial disposition.

JOSEPH JACKSON, one of the leading young farmers of Southern Lancaster county, was born Dec. 16, 1862, in Little Britain township in this county, and was a son of Robert and Eliza (Conrad) Jackson.

Robert Jackson was born in County Armagh, Ireland, in 1828 and died in Little Britain township, April 8, 1898. His life had always been one of honest toil and he was much respected through Lancaster county, whither he had come while still a young man. He married Eliza Conrad who was born in 1828, and died in 1893. Eight children were born to them. Margaret, who married Dr. McNutt, of Philadelphia; John, who is one of the leading farmers of his vicinity; Andrew Jackson, who also is a leading farmer in Little Britain township; Robert, who married Rebecca McMamee, and resides in Britain township; Joseph, of this sketch; Mary, who married Fred Gregg, of Drumore township; Ella, who married George Pollock, a merchant of Philadelphia; and Mary E., who died young.

Joseph Jackson was reared a farmer boy and attended the district schools of Drumore township. Trained by his father to be industrious and frugal, Mr. Jackson now reaps the benefit of his years of industry. Although at the age of twenty-one years he had yet his first acre of land to earn, he now owns a fine, well-cultivated farm, comprising 164 acres with excellent buildings and other improvements, in one of the most desirable portions of Little Britain township. For twelve years he has managed a hay press, this being an accommodation to his neighbors and a source of revenue to himself.

In 1891 Mr. Jackson was married to Miss Estella Retzer of Drumore township, a daughter of Joseph Retzer. The other members of her family were: Lizzie; Annie, deceased; Ada, the wife of Lloyd McGuchee; Joseph; Jennetta, who married James McMamee. This family is one of the old established ones of the county. It originated in Ireland many years ago.

Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson: Everett, Charles, Letta and Joseph. Mr. Jackson has efficiently served as county commissioner, and is one of the leading members of the Democratic party in this locality. As a farmer he is regarded as an authority in agricultural circles, and through the community he is esteemed as one of the reliable men of business, as a good citizen and an upright man who fitly represents his neighborhood.

WILLIS B. CHARLES, an enterprising young farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, is a descendant of one of the county's oldest families, was born in the township on the original Charles homestead, Aug. 2, 1874, and is a son of Amos and Mary (Bowen) Charles, both of whom are now living in East Hempfield township.

Willis B. Charles was well educated in the public schools of his native township, was reared to farming on the parental homestead and at the age of twenty-two years began agricultural life on his own account by settling on the farm of 145 acres which he still occupies, one mile south of Millersville; this tract is devoted to general crops and is recognized as one of the best cultivated farms in the county.

On Jan. 4, 1897, Willis B. Charles married Miss Lizzie C. Herr, a daughter of Emanuel and Elizabeth (Charles) Herr, and this marriage has been blessed with one child, Amos H. Mrs. Lizzie C. Herr was born on the farm on which she and her husband now live. Emanuel Herr died some years since and his widow still resides on the homestead, the joint family being among the most respected of the residents of Manor township.

JACOB K. BRENEMAN, who owns and conducts a productive farm in Pequea township, is one of the valuable citizens of his locality, and, though a young man is ranked among the substantial farmers of his section of Lancaster county.

Jacob K. Breneman is a grandson of Milton Breneman, who was born in 1772, in York county, Pa., and came to Lancaster with his family when a mere child. He learned the weaver's trade, which he followed most of his life, but in 1824 purchased a farm in Strasburg township, on which he passed the remainder of his days, dying in 1857. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church. In 1821 he married Miss Frances Lyenes, of Lancaster county, and they became the parents of two children: Peter, the father of our subject; and Fannie, widow of John B. Erb of Strasburg township.

Peter Breneman was born in 1822, in Martic township, and remained at home until he was thirty-nine years of age. His education was acquired in the common schools of the county. He was a farmer all his life. In 1861 Mr. Breneman wedded Miss Elizabeth Kreider, daughter of John Kreider of Pequea township. To this union were born three children: Maris, now of Sterling, Ill.; Frances, wife of John Bleicher, of Highville, Manor township; and Jacob K. The father was a member of the Old Mennonite Church.

Jacob K. Breneman was born in Sterling, Ill., Feb. 7, 1866. When he was but four years of age his mother died and the father brought him back to Lancaster county, where he lived with his aunt for four years. He then went to live with two ladies who were cousins of his father, remaining with them until they died. Mr. Breneman was the heir to their property and has cultivated this farm with success.

JAMES NEWTON LIGHTNER. The Lightner family is one of the old and honorable ones of Lancaster county, members of it having become distinguished both in political and professional life through several generations.

Augustus Lightner, his great-grandfather was born in Intercourse, Lancaster county, and served in the war of 1812. For many years he carried on large agricultural operations in Lancaster county, accumulated great tracts of land, became one of the financial pillars of his township, and was one of the most highly esteemed as well as one of the most liberal and public-spirited citizens of Lancaster county. He died on his farm at an advanced age. His marriage was to Miss Elizabeth Gundaker, and to them were born three sons and one daughter: Herman, James, Augustus and Elizabeth.

James Lightner, grandfather of James Newton, was also a native of this county and State, and was liberally educated at the Green Castle College, in Franklin county, graduating from that then noted institution with honors, a fine linguist, being conversant with seven languages, English, German, French, Latin, Greek, Hebrew and Spanish. In later life he studied medicine, and was graduated from the Baltimore (Md.) Medical College. He located for practice at Shirleysburg, Huntingdon county, this State, but later, he removed to Mt. Union, and there enjoyed a fine practice, going then to Churchtown, this county. In the course of time he saw a better field of operations at Allenville, Mifflin county, and sold his practice to Dr. McCaa, and took up his final residence in Allenville. Dr. Lightner ranked high in the medical profession.

He was first married to Miss Elizabeth Cromwell, and two children were born to this marriage: Henderson and Jennie. The second marriage of Dr. Lightner was to Miss Flickinger, and the three children of this union were: Elizabeth, Keziah and Isaac N. Dr. Lightner was a Democrat, and was twice a member of the Legislature, rendering valuable services during his terms of office. A man of great public spirit, he was liberal in the use of his wealth in furthering the enterprises that came under his notice, for the betterment of his locality, and for humanity in general. Much is due the memory of Dr. Lightner in the matter of the building of the structures for the comfortable care of the Huntingdon county poor, and to this enterprise he devoted much time and afforded very material financial assistance. For many years Dr. Lightner took a deep interest in raising the standard of education in his community, and served on the school boards to effect this purpose. Few men in Lancaster county were more missed or more sincerely lamented, at time of death, than was Dr. James Lightner.

In Dr. Isaac N. Lightner, the father of James Newton Lightner, and the son of Dr. James Lightner, Lancaster county has a worthy and proficient physician. Dr. Isaac N. Lightner is located in lucrative practice at Ephrata, promising to follow most successfully in the footsteps of his honored and well-remembered father. Dr. Lightner married Miss Emma B. Landis, a daughter of John H. Landis, a very prominent citizen of Northern Lancaster county. Three children were born to this union: one that died in infancy; Emma Ruth, at home; and James N.

James Newton Lightner was born at the ancient town of Ephrata, in 1878, and received his preparatory education in the public schools of Lancaster county. Later he became a student in State College, and then at Dickinson College, Carlisle, graduating from the law department of the latter institution. Upon his return from Dickinson College, Mr. Lightner continued his studies with A. B. Hassler, Esq., who is well known in the city and is now county controller of Lancaster county, and Mr. Lightner was admitted to practice on Sept. 13, 1901. Endowed with many gifts and thoroughly educated, the future holds out great promise for an ambitious young man, like Mr. Lightner, and his friends predict for him a very successful future in his chosen profession.

E. W. WRIGHT, M. D., is a well known physician and the owner of a fine farm in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, with postoffice at Wrightsdales.

ABRAHAM K. McDONALD, gardener and florist of Washington borough, Manor township, Lancaster county, was born Oct. 22, 1877, in the house he still occupies and is a son of Joseph R. and Elizabeth (Amert) McDonald, the former being of Scotch descent.

Joseph R. McDonald was born in Upper Windsor township, York county, Pa., Dec. 25, 1834, and was a son of James and Sarah (Reeves) McDonald, also natives of York county. James was a day laborer and died when about fifty-five years old, his wife having passed away when at the age of about fifty years. They were the parents of six children, named as follows: Maria, Jackson, Joseph R., Peter, an unnamed infant and William, all deceased with the exception of Joseph R. The last named was a lad of but eleven years when his parents were called away, but a short time previously he had gone to work for John Moore, a farmer of York county, with whom he made him home seven years, attending school meanwhile. When eighteen years of age, Joseph R. came to Lancaster county and entered the employ of George S. Mann, a farmer in Manor township, and continued in this employ about twenty-four years, with the exception of one year spent in the defense of his country's flag. This service was rendered in 1862-1863 with Co. E, 178th P. V. I., chiefly in Virginia, and his muster out took place in August of the last named year.

In 1876, Joseph R. McDonald purchased ten acres of good land just east of Washington borough, on which he made many valuable improvements and conducted general farming two years, and then removed to a farm of 162 acres belonging to George Mann; this he managed four years, then carried on farming on his own ten-acre farm until 1889, and then purchased twenty-one acres adjoining, so that the two tracts may be virtually called the same farm. He removed to the new addition in 1899 and has there conducted general farming ever since.

In 1877 Joseph R. McDonald was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Ament, of Manor township, Abraham K. McDonald being the only child. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald are members of the M. E. Church, in which he has served as steward and trustee. Fraternally, Mr. McDonald is a member of Columbia lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F.; likewise of Columbia encampment; and is also a member of Chickamauga Tribe, I. O. R. M. Socially he and his wife and son take rank with the best people of Manor township.

Abraham K. McDonald was reared to farming, received his preliminary education in the public school, then attended the State Normal School at Millersville two years, and later took a course at the Pennsylvania Business College at Lancaster City. Until the spring of 1899 Abraham K. assisted his father on the home farm, and then took charge of the place on his own account and carried on market gardening exclusively, until quite recently, when he determined to become a florist and erected a hot-house 30x72 feet, which is well stocked with flowers of every variety, including many rare exotics. The enterprise promises to prove an immense success.

Abraham K. McDonald was most happily married May 4, 1899, to Miss Sue C. Nissley, daughter of Jonas L. Nissley, of Manor township, and this union has been blessed with one child, A. Leroy.

JOHN G. FERGUSON, a prosperous contractor and builder of Columbia, of the firm of C. C. Ferguson Sons, occupies a prominent place in the business circles of that town.

Christian C. Ferguson, for many years a leading contractor and builder of Columbia, was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, in 1846, and was a son of James and Catherine (Christ) Ferguson, lifelong residents of that county, where the father engaged in business as a wagon maker. He died in 1867, at the age of sixty-five years, and the mother passed away in 1893, at the age of eighty-two. Christian C. was the eldest child of this union, the others being: Catherine, who married John Tyson, and died at the age of twenty-four years; and Martha, wife of Isaac Broom, of Columbia. The father was married three times and had twenty-one children.

At the early age of ten years Christian C. Ferguson left home and began the battle of life for himself, working for neighboring farmers until he was eighteen years old, when he commenced learning the carpenter's trade in Manor township. As a carpenter he engaged in contracting and building, from the age of twenty-four years until his death, which occurred in Columbia in November, 1898. He met with success in his undertakings and was able to leave his family in comfortable circumstances. He was an earnest and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a staunch supporter of the Republican party. He was thoroughly interested in whatever tended to promote the moral, intellectual and material welfare of his community, and in his death the community realized that it had lost a valued and useful citizen.

On Oct. 12, 1864, in Lancaster, Pa., Mr. Ferguson was united in marriage with Miss Sarah A. Gurney, and to them were born four children, as follows: Catherine, now the wife of Isaac Overhultz, foreman in stove works at Lehighton, Pa.; John G.; Christian, deceased; and Emory, also a contractor and builder of Columbia.

Mrs. Ferguson is a native of West Hempfield township, Lancaster county, and the only child of George and Elizabeth (Hogendobler) Gurney, who were also born in Lancaster county. Her father, who died before her birth, was of English extraction, and a school teacher by profession. The mother was again married, her second husband being David Kaufman, and she is now living in Silver Spring, Lancaster county, at the age of seventy-three years. By the second marriage there were four children, namely: Abraham, who conducts a coal yard in Silver Spring; David, a resident of the same place; Elizabeth, deceased; and Leah, wife of Horace Heidler, telegraph operator at Silver Spring.

John G. Ferguson was born Jan. 13, 1868, on a farm in Manor township, this county. When one year old he came with his parents to Columbia, where he remained to the age of eleven. Returning then to the farm, he remained there six years, engaged in agricultural work, and he has since been a resident of Columbia. For a year and a half he clerked in a grocery store, and he also worked one year in a cigar box factory before taking up his father's calling, at which he worked with his father until 1897, learning almost every branch of the business. Since the year mentioned he has carried on contracting and building in partnership with his brother, Emory G., under the firm title mentioned, and they have met with flattering success—success fully accounted for, however, by the quality and style of their work. Their business reputation is of the highest, and they are equally respected for high moral worth and good citizenship. Mr. Ferguson is a Republican in political faith.

On Sept. 1, 1885, in Columbia, Mr. Ferguson was united in marriage with Miss Ida C. Myers, and five children have blessed this union, namely: John Leo, Sarah H., Ethel M., Wilford A. and Catherine. Mrs. Ferguson was born in 1869 in East Hempfield township, daughter of Abraham and Sarah (Kauffman) Myers, natives of East Hempfield township and Columbia, respectively. He was a farmer by occupation. He died in 1870, in Ohio, while yet a young man, and Mrs. Myers subsequently married Robert Law, a tailor who now resides in Lancaster. Mrs. Law died in 1873, at the age of thirty-four. Ida C., Mrs. Ferguson, was the only child born to her union with Abraham Myers. Mr. Law's children were Anna, who is the wife of Harry George, of Witmer, Pa.; Charles, of Lancaster; Ira, of Lancaster; Miss May, of Bryn Mawr, Pa.; and Robert, who is deceased.

D. WALTER MIESSE, the progressive photographer and prosperous young business citizen, of Lancaster, whose artistic quarters are located at No. 24 West King street, well represents his line of endeavor, in that city.

The family name of Miesse is one which is well known in the State, Daniel H. Miesse, grandfather of D. Walter, having been the owner of extensive woolen mills and farm interests at Schaefferstown, in Lebanon county, although his last days were spent in Lancaster county, where his death took place about a quarter of a century ago, after some years of retirement from activity.

D. W. Miesse, son of Daniel H. and the father of D. Walter, of Lancaster, has, for the past twenty-eight years, been a leading confectioner in that city, his establishment on North Queen street being not only one of the leading, but also one of the finest, in interior fittings, in Lancaster. He married Miss Carrie B. Clore, of Westchester, and to this union were born ten children, of whom seven still survive: Miss Charlotte, who is her father's efficient assistant in the confectionery business; Emma, at home; John, who is engaged in the saddlery business; Howard, Dora and Le Roy, all at home; and D. Walter, the photographer.

D. Walter Miesse was born at No. 48 North Queen street, Lancaster, May 15, 1877. He was educated in the public schools of Lancaster, leaving these at the age of fifteen years, to take a practical course at Weidler's Business College. Later, Mr. Miesse entered upon his artistic career, during the course of which he spent eight years with the late J. E. Rote, but on Feb. 4, 1901, he bought the photographic establishment at No. 24 West King street, over Kirk, Johnson & Co.'s big music store, and immediately proceeded to re-model and refurnish the studio. At the present it ranks favorably in furnishings and work with the best to be found in the State.

Mr. Miesse was married on Feb. 12, 1901, to Miss Elizabeth M. Elliston, who was a daughter of George Elliston, who is connected with the Pennsylvania Iron works. Mr. Miesse is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, and is fraternally connected with the Artisans. Although not an active politician, he votes with the Republican party. The success which has rewarded the efforts of Mr. Miesse is due to his enthusiasm and knowledge of his business, his artistic temperament making him well fitted for such a career. Constantly studying, he keeps pace with all the modern improvements in his line, and turns out specimens of work which would do credit to metropolitan studios.

J. A. JAMISON, an honored veteran of the Civil War, is the owner of a fine farm near Wrights-dale, Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

HARRY GOOD REESE, railroad telegraph operator and newsdealer at Elizabethtown, was born in Elizabethtown, Aug. 10, 1871.

Mr. Reese is a son of Samson D. and Elizabeth (Good) Reese, both born in Little Washington, Lancaster county. When they married they came to Elizabethtown, where they have passed their peaceful and well ordered lives. The father is a farmer and a dairyman, and is now a man of venerable years, having been born in 1828. For four terms he served in the town council. The mother, who was born in 1835, has had the following children: Samuel G., a farmer and a fruit grower in West Donegal township; David M., a machinist in Elizabethtown; Christian G., a brick maker and ice dealer in Elizabethtown; U. (Carpenter) Young, born respectively, in Elizabethtown and in Maytown. Her father was a railroad contractor and spent the greater part of his time in Connecticut. He was born in 1835, and died in 1875. Her mother, who was born July 28, 1841, died Sept. 9, 1877. They were both members of the Lutheran Church, and had the following children: Hester C., who died Feb. 10, 1867; James E., of Harrisburg; and Mamie E.

Harry Good Reese has spent his life in Elizabethtown, where he has been engaged in the newspaper business for the past seventeen years. In 1893 he entered the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Elizabethtown, as a telegraph operator, and here he has remained to the present time. For the last four years he has acted as relief operator. Mr. Reese is a member of the A. O. K. M. C., of which he is relief assistant, and with his wife holds membership in the German Reformed Church. In his politics he is a Republican, and for so young a man has won an enviable position in the business world.

FRANK BROWN is one of the prosperous young men of Paradise and one who despite his youth has already won a creditable position among the leading men of the community. He was born in West Lampeter township, May 5, 1871, son of Henry and Annie Eliza (Froelich) Brown. The father is a resident of Paradise, and Frank was reared on his farm and educated in the public schools.

Frank Brown started out in life for himself at the age of twenty-one years, spending a year in the West, then returning to Lancaster county to take charge of the Paradise and Lancaster Stage Line. He operated this line for four years, and then engaged in the cattle business, giving considerable attention also to the handling of horses. In the summer of 1900 he opened a meat market; but has recently turned his entire attention to horses, and handles all kinds of road and draft animals in the Lancaster county market.

Mr. Brown is a man of wide thought and ready action, and when he sees a good opportunity is ready to embrace it at once. In the spring of 1901 he saw a good opportunity in the ice business, and promptly organized an ice company in Paradise, supplying several neighboring towns as well as that point with the cooling crystal that is such a comfort in the hot weather.

Mr. Brown was married in 1893 to Miss Jane Hogens, a daughter of William Hogens, of Mt. Pleasant. They have one child, Chester.

The Brown family is among the oldest and most respected in Lancaster county, and has a very honorable history. Jacob Brown, the grandfather of Frank, lived many years in Eden township, where he died about 1878, at the early age of forty-five years. Miss Lydia Philips, who became his wife, was the daughter of Henry Philips, and died about 1893, at the age of sixty-two. They were the parents of the following children: (1) Sarah Anna, unmarried, in Lancaster; (2) Henry, father of Frank Brown; (3) Adaline, wife of William Moore of Lancaster; (4) Harriet L., wife of J. The brothers were reared in Ephrata township, and their great-grandfather, Isaac Rettew, came from Ireland when a young man. He was a farmer and his son, William, was reared in the vicinity of Philadelphia, coming into Lancaster county when a young man. There the greater part of his life was spent, his home being most of the time in West Earl township. After a long and useful life he passed away. Elizabeth McCloud, his wife, was a native of Lancaster county, and with her husband belonged to the Lutheran Church. They had a family of six children, John, William, Leaman, Harvey, Maggie and Annie.

William Rettew, the father of Willis M., was born and reared in Earl township, but made his home in Ephrata township after his marriage. There he has held the office of inspector of election, and has several times been judge of election. In politics he is an ardent Democrat. Mr. Rettew married Elizabeth McCauley, a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Mowrer) McCauley. She was born in Warwick township, and belongs to the Lutheran Church. To this union were born eleven children; Willis M., Samuel, Hervey, Allen, Willie, Norman, Chester, Minnie, Alice, Emma and Elizabeth. The two older members of the above family are married, and compose the firm of Rettew Brothers, at New Holland.

WILLIS M. RETTEW was born Feb. 26, 1876, and was reared on the old farm, receiving his education in the public school, and graduating from the Akron high school. In 1899 he formed a partnership with his brother Samuel, under the name of Rettew Brothers, and erected a creamery, two miles west of New Holland, and two miles east of Bareville. Their plant is regarded as one of the most complete and perfect in Lancaster county. Their output is readily sold at top prices in Philadelphia, Reading and elsewhere. They manufacture as high as sixteen hundred pounds of butter a week. They also handle eggs and poultry and have a good patronage for anything they offer on the market. Willis M. Rettew was married Dec. 2, 1900, to Miss Anna Nolt, a daughter of Amos Nolt, of West Earl township. Mr. Rettew is known as a wide-awake and hustling young man, of good principles and correct habits.

SAMUEL RETTEW, the junior member of the firm noted above, was born Dec. 2, 1877, and is also a graduate of the Akron high school. He married Miss Mamie Landis, a daughter of Jacob Landis, of Ephrata township. JOHN KERNER, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, resides at Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

HARRY MUSSELMAN. Among the live and progressive young business men and successful farmers of Earl township, no one stands higher in public esteem than does Harry Musselman, who was born on the old homestead, in the southern part of Earl township, March 2, 1870. His father was Henry Musselman, now deceased, and he was reared to farm pursuits in his younger years, while attending the public schools. In search of a higher education, Harry then entered the Pennsylvania Commercial College, and after finishing a course there, at the age of eighteen years began clerking in a coal and lumber yard at New Holland, and continued there for two years with Amos Rutter. The following five years were passed in the employ of C. H. Hershey, at Bareville.

The fine farm owned by Harry Musselman is located one and one-half miles south of New Holland, comprises 112 acres, and is generally regarded as one of the best farms in that part of the county. This requires supervision, as Mr. Musselman is progressive enough to wish to have his land cared for in the best possible manner, realizing that only in this way can it give the best possible agricultural results.

Mr. Musselman has been particularly prominent in politics, being an active and influential Republican. He was made township assessor and served through one term very acceptably and then was made justice of the peace, an appointment which has given general satisfaction. Mr. Musselman is unmarried. As an upright and interested citizen, he is identified with all matters of public interest, and is highly esteemed through Earl township.

SAMUEL L. SHARP. Among the well-known residents of the borough of Ephrata, Lancaster county, is Samuel L. Sharp, the efficient manager of the Clear Point stock farm, owned by F. A. Wilson, of Ephrata.

For a number of years Jacob Sharp was a dealer in merchandise and produce, in Ephrata, his death occurring on Jan. 29, 1890, at the age of seventy-five. His widow, who was born Jan. 2, 1836, still survives and resides with her son Samuel L. The family born to Jacob Sharp and his wife numbered these children: Francis, born in August, 1859, who died in 1864; Samuel L.; and William, born in 1863, who died in infancy.

Some time later, Mr. Sharp went into the business of cigar manufacture; he was made justice of the peace and served most efficiently for a period of ten years. At present he is the capable manager of the well-known Clear Point stock farm.

Mr. Sharp stands well with the community in which he has lived so long, and during his years as justice of the peace served his section faithfully and to the satisfaction of all parties. As an intelligent business man his ability is recognized, and he is most devoted to his family and friends.

ABRAHAM B. HUBER, of Neffsville, Lancaster Co., Pa., belongs to a family whose representatives have taken an honorable place in the activities of Lancaster county, since the coming of the great-grandfather of Mr. Huber.

Abraham Huber, the grandfather of Abraham B., was born in Warwick township, Lancaster county, where his life was spent. When he died he was between fifty and sixty years of age, and had followed farming all his life. To him and his wife were born: Peter went to Canada, where he followed farming, and died; Samuel was a farmer in Lancaster county, where his descendants still abide; Jacob was a farmer, and died without issue; and John, the father of Abraham B. Huber. Of their daughters, one married Christian Hess, of Warwick township; another, Henry Stoner, of Ephrata township; a third married Samuel Martin, of Earl township; and a fourth, a Mr. Hurst, of Franklin county, Pa.; and a fifth married Andrew Groff, and went to Canada. The parents of these children were members of the Mennonite Church.

John Huber, the father of Abraham B., was born in Warwick township, in February, 1806, and died Jan. 22, 1889. He was left fatherless at about the age of seven years, and for a time he lived with his sister, but left her home to learn the weaving trade, making this his occupation until his marriage. After his marriage he located in Leacock township, where he engaged in farming, although during the winter season he still did weaving. In 1849 he sold this farm, and bought one of 192 acres on the Fruitville Pike, in Manheim township, and there he followed farming as long as he was engaged in active business. Retiring from active work after a long and industrious career, he moved to a small property near the lead mines in East Hempfield township, where he took active interest in public affairs, being among the first to serve on the school board under the first operation of the free school system, assisting in the organization of the free schools. He also served as director of the poor. His last days were spent at Petersburg, where he bought a residence. His business abilities were above the ordinary, and he was called upon to administer many estates. In religion he was an active member of the Mennonite Church. John Huber was married to Fannie Buchwalter, a daughter of David Buchwalter, of Leacock township, where she was born in 1807; she died Sept. 7, 1886. To this union were born the following children: Mary, who married Christian Kauffman, of East Hempfield township, and is now deceased; Elizabeth, widow of Daniel Brubaker, of Petersburg, Lancaster county; Abraham B.; Fannie, widow of Abraham Strite, of Washington county, Md.; David B., a retired farmer of Manheim township; Barbara, the wife of Isaac Shutter of Franklin county, Pa.; Catherine, wife of Amos Kreider, of Petersburg; John B., a retired farmer of Penn township; Annie, wife of Henry Hostetter, of Manheim township; and Jacob B., a resident of Illinois.

Abraham B. Huber, whose name appears above, was born March 18, 1834, in Leacock township, where he was reared to the age of fifteen years, when he came with his parents to Manheim township, where his home has continued to the present time. His education was received in the common schools, and when he was twenty-four years of age he began farming for himself, taking a part of his father's farm, which was his home as long as he was in active work. Another farm, of ninety-four acres was rented by him, which added to his own seventy-two acres made a field large enough for his strength and enthusiasm. In 1881 he purchased a farm of seventy-one acres just north of Neffsville, from which he has sold some twenty acres for building lots. About 1884 he purchased a mill property with six acres of ground at Rome in Warwick township. The mill was destroyed by fire the second year he owned the place, and it was at once rebuilt with a complete roller process. A son of Mr. Huber, John K., operates it, and is becoming known as a very capable millman. Mr. Huber has been a progressive and public-spirited man of the county, and was an organizer and one of the first directors of the Fulton Bank of Lancaster county, a position he still holds. For six years he was auditor of the township, and for the same length of time was school director. He was one of the organizers of the Manheim-Neffsville Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and has always given a willing ear to any proposition that looked to the public good.

Abraham B. Huber was married Oct. 13, 1857, to Miss Esther, a daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Brubaker) Kreider, who was born in West Lampeter township, Feb. 11, 1837. Mr. and Mrs. Huber are the parents of the following children: Benjamin K., a farmer in Manheim township, married Miss Lizzie Grossman, and has eight children, Fannie, Laura, Ammon, Ella, Ada, Graybill, Melvin and Susie; John K., a miller at Rome, married Lizzie Hartman, and is the father of seven children: Katie, Hettie, Lizzie, Abraham, Samuel, John and Elmer; Abraham, a farmer in Manheim township, married Fannie Landis, and has five children: Landis, Esther, Fannie, Clayton and Abraham; Lizzie married Amos Rohrer, a farmer of East Hempfield township, and has four children: Annie, Enos, Daniel and Esther; Fannie married David Herr, a farmer of Lancaster township, and has two children: Hettie and Fannie, and Mary married Jonas Harnish, a farmer of Pequea township, and has two children: Lloyd and Huber. Mr. and Mrs. Huber with the most of their family are members of the Mennonite Church. Mr. Huber retired from active life in 1892, to a pleasant home in Neffsville, where he is enjoying the fruit of industrious years.

LEVI F. CHARLES, a general farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, whose entire life has been passed in the community in which he now resides, was born on the old family homestead three miles northwest of Millersville, Oct. 2, 1854. He was reared on his native place and he acquired his education in the district schools of the neighborhood, applying himself assiduously to his studies, however, and thus he obtained a good education. He remained at home until he was twenty-seven when he began farming for himself on a part of the home farm. He now owns fifty-three acres, which he devotes to general farming. His fields present a most attractive appearance, and plainly show their owner to be a practical and progressive farmer, fully alive to the principles of up-to-date agriculture.

On Oct. 27, 1881, Mr. Charles was united in marriage with Miss Lydia Buckwalter, daughter of John Buckwalter, of Conestoga township, Lancaster county. Seven children have come to bless their home: Lizzie B., Howard B., Christian B., Edith B. and Harry T. (twins), M. Clara and Lee B. Both Mr. and Mrs. Charles are earnest members of the Old Mennonite Church, and are highly esteemed in the county, where their entire lives have been passed.

JAMES HUNTER, a general farmer and representative citizen, of Lancaster county, now a resident of Sadsbury township, was born in County Derry, Ireland, in February, 1831, a son of James and Eliza (Devlin) Hunter, both natives of Ireland, where their lives were spent. For many years James Hunter was the sexton of the Presbyterian Church, his death occurring in 1881, at the age of seventy years, the mother surviving until 1889, dying at the age of seventy-five years. The children born to James Hunter and wife were: William, deceased in Carbon county, Pa.; James; Henry, who died in Australia; Mary, widow of Robert McMichael, of Carbon county; Lizzie, who married John Park, and lives in Ireland; John, in Australia; Rebecca married to John Fisher, and living in Australia; and Samuel, who is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in Lancaster.

Until the age of eight years James Hunter lived with his parents in Ireland, working for his father and neighboring farmers. On June 1, 1854, he landed in Castle Garden, New York, having spent forty-two days on a sailing vessel from the old country. One month was spent in the great metropolis, and then he found his way to Summit Hill, Carbon Co., Pa., and spent four years in a Pennsylvania coal mine, going then into Lehigh county for one year, and to Montgomery county, in 1859. Here for twenty years he worked in a foundry, and it was not until 1879 that he settled on his present farm of sixty-three acres, in Lancaster county, and began an agricultural life. Since that time, Mr. Hunter has been successfully operating his farm, and shows little the effects of advancing age. His life has been one of constant industry, and he and his most estimable wife are now able to enjoy the fruits of former efforts.

In May, 1861, James Hunter was married in Montgomery county, Pa., to Mrs. Sally (Wentzel) Heffenfinger, and the children born to this union were: Ruth, who died at the age of five years; Eliza, who married Whitson Pickel, a casket maker in York county, Pa., and has two children; and Sally M., who married Morrison Helton, a plumber, in Gap, Pa., and has one child.

Mrs. Hunter was born at Fox Hill, Montgomery county, Pa., on Jan. 20, 1833, a daughter of Henry and Lizzie (Gresh) Wentzel, of Montgomery county, all of the family being born in the same locality, near Pottstown, Pa. Mr. Wentzel was a farmer and also a tailor and he died in 1876, at the age of seventy-five years; and his wife died in 1887, at the age of eighty-four. Both were consistent and worthy members of the Lutheran Church. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wentzel were: Jeremiah, deceased, was a soldier; Samuel died in 1898; Henry was killed at the close of the war; Augustus died in 1899; Ephraim made his home in the West; Lydia is the widow of Jacob Swenck; Sally is Mrs. Hunter; Mary married William Bryan, now retired, of Boyerstown, Pa.; Malinda married Benjamin Clemmor, of Illinois; Elizabeth lives unmarried in Illinois; and John is in the tobacco business in Pottstown.

The first marriage of Mrs. Hunter was to Isaac Heffenfinger, and the children of this union were: Emma, who is the widow of Isaac Tompkins, near Philadelphia; Forest, a resident of Philadelphia; Walton, also a resident of Philadelphia; Milton, deceased; Malinda, a widow living in Philadelphia; Sally, deceased; and Chestina, deceased. Mr. Heffenfinger was a son of George Heffenfinger, of Montgomery county, and died at the age of thirty years.

Mr. Hunter was reared in the Presbyterian belief, but is liberal minded enough to see good in all creeds, and has joined no church. Fraternally he is connected with the I. O. O. F., and in politics is an active member of the Republican party. Although Mr. Hunter has toiled all his life, he has found time to keep abreast of the world's progress and is one of the most intelligent and well-informed citizens of his township, where he commands the respect and esteem of all who know him.

DANIEL BOOK. The Book family is one of the representative ones of Lancaster county, and its numerous descendants have been scattered over many States of the Union. The paternal ancestor was Michael Book, who founded the family in Lancaster county, coming here from his home in Germany; he married and reared a family, three of his sons having been: David, of West Lampeter township; John, who removed to Juniata county, Pa.; and Samuel, who went to Maytown. Michael Book settled in the vicinity of Strasburg, and his remains lie in the old cemetery there.

David Book was born Nov. 2, 1771, and he married the youngest daughter of Adam and Catherine (Hooke) Hooke, who bore her mother's name and was born in May, 1769. These dates carry us back to historic days, and it would be most interesting to record the experiences of this large family through those troubled times in the struggling colonies. A family of ten children were born, of whom little is known but their names and the fact that they reared families of their own which are among the most respected in their various localities. These children were: Daniel, David, Catherine, Mary, Elizabeth, John, George, Adam, Michael, and Magdalena. The father lived to be almost eighty years old; his wife passed away on July 10, 1831. David Book owned a farm of twenty acres at the time of his decease, his life having been mainly spent in Strasburg.

Daniel Book, the son of David Book, was born Feb. 10, 1793, in Strasburg, where he learned the trade of shoemaker, but later turned his attention to farming, at first operating a farm on shares in East Lampeter township but in 1835 he purchased seventy-five acres of land in West Lampeter, which is the land now owned and operated by Daniel Book, of this sketch. Upon this place he carried on farming until about 1854 when he purchased a tract of some twenty-four acres, in Strasburg township to which he removed and there spent his last days, dying Nov. 10, 1870, at the age of seventy-seven years and nine months. His life had been successful, as he was a frugal, hard-working man who made his own way in the world by honesty and industry, and died a valued member of the Old Mennonite Church.

Daniel Book was twice married, the first time to Christianna Neff, the daughter of Henry and Barbara Neff, who was born in East Lampeter township, July 30, 1792, and died Sept. 4, 1831, at the early age of thirty-nine years, having been the mother of four children: Samuel, who became a farmer of considerable prominence and owned two good farms in Providence township, was aged fifty-nine years at the time of death, and left a wife and eleven children; Daniel, of this sketch; Mary, deceased, who married John Miller, also deceased, and left a family of children; and David, who resides in Dauphin county, Pa., nine miles from Harrisburg, the capital, where he conducts a large farm. For his second wife, Daniel Book married Anna Hirsh, but from this marriage there was no issue.

Daniel Book, the subject of this biography, was born Feb. 20, 1828, and was brought up on the farm, working during the summers and attending school during the winters, remaining under his parents' care until he was eighteen years old, at which time he decided to learn the carpenter trade and followed it for the succeeding seven years and then again turned his attention to farming.

The father was advancing in years and Daniel came home to take charge of the land, working it on shares for several years, but in 1860, he purchased it from his father and since then has remained there, adding at one time a tract of two acres, and at another a desirable seven-acre tract; upon this last purchase he is now living. Immediately upon securing possession of the home place, the young man began to improve it, put various plans into operation, erected substantial and attractive buildings and made it one of the most desirable homes in the locality.

In 1890 he removed to the present place, which adjoins the old homestead, and lives a life of ease while his son assumes the active cares of the farming operations. Daniel Book has been one of the successful agriculturists of the township, and has been noted for his liberal interest in everything which has promised to benefit his home section.

The marriage of Daniel Book occurred Nov. 7, 1856, to Maria Leaman, a daughter of Abraham Leaman, who was born in East Lampeter township, Nov. 1, 1834, and who died Jan. 9, 1870, the mother of five children: Christie, residing at home; Abraham, who married Lizzie Haverstick, and farms on the home place; Amanda, who married Christian Herr of West Lampeter township; David; Mary, who married Landis B. Herr, of Lancaster township. His second marriage took place on Oct. 7, 1875, to Susan Landis, a daughter of Abraham and Catherine Landis, born Aug. 25, 1834; both he and wife are valued members of the Old Mennonite Church.

The Neff family was an old and prominent one of East Lampeter township, grandfather Henry Neff being well and favorably known by his contemporaries; he was born Sept. 17, 1754, and on Feb. 1, 1778, he married Barbara Funk, who was born July 9, 1760. Henry Neff was a farmer and owned several fine pieces of property, dying in 1833, his wife surviving ten years. They reared a family of fourteen children: Martin, born in 1778; Annie, 1780; Henry, 1782; Christian, 1783; Esther, 1787; Elizabeth, 1789; Barbara, 1790; Martin (2) 1785; Christianna, 1792; John, 1795; Magdalena, 1797; Francis, 1800; Catherine, 1802; and Mary, 1804. Many members of this family reared very large families and were noted for their longevity, as well as for their estimable lives and their records for good citizenship.

Daniel Book has done much for the advancement of agricultural ideas in his locality, being a firm believer in the policy of putting land into excellent shape and maintaining this condition. His holdings are large, as he is the possessor of a small property in Lampeter, and one of 169 acres in East Drumore township, near Quarryville, which he has improved with a new residence. His name carries with it the confidence of the public both in private and public life, and it can truthfully be said that he is one of the very best representative citizens of West Lampeter township.

JACOB H. HEIDLEBACH, a substantial farmer of Pequea township, this county, is now living on the farm on which he was born, a residence covering a period of more than three score years, the home of his childhood days, of his mature years and on into life's evening. How many recollections must cluster about the old farm!

Mr. Heidlebach is of the third generation of his paternal line in this country and locality. Jacob Heidlebach, his grandfather, emigrated from Switzerland to the United States near the middle of the eighteenth century, but little is now definitely known as to his own history or that of his family. A son, Henry Heidlebach, the father of our subject, was born one mile west of the old farm alluded to in the foregoing; in his early manhood he was employed in teaming, transporting by wagon from his locality merchandise to and from the cities of Philadelphia, Pa., Wilmington, Del., and Pittsburg, Pa. Being industrious, frugal and a good manager, as time passed he saved his earnings and finally became the owner of the farm on which his son, Jacob H., now resides, it being his first landed possession. There he lived occupied in agricultural pursuits until 1861, in which year he retired from active farm work and located in West Willow. In 1876 he returned to the old farm, passing there the evening of his life with his son, and there his death occurred in 1881, at the age of seventy-nine years. He was a plain unassuming man of industrious habits, kindly disposed and held the esteem and respect of his fellowmen. He was twice married, marrying first Anna Hess, who died in 1846; and ten years later he married Mary Kendig, who is also deceased. To the first marriage were born children as follows: Jacob H.; Henry, a farmer living in Drumore township; Fannie, married to Abram Miller; Sarah, married to Frank Breneman of Rawlinsville; and Annie, the wife of Joseph Etter, a farmer of Montgomery county, Ohio.

Jacob H. Heidlebach, our subject, was born Feb. 25, 1838, in what was then Conestoga township, now Pequea. He was reared to farm labor and enjoyed the privileges for obtaining an education customary to the sons of the general farmer of that period, attendance at the neighboring district school through the winter months. By giving close attention to his daily duties, saving a little each year as time passed, he was enabled to get a footing in life, and has since by care and good management prospered and today is one of the well-to-do farmers and substantial men of his township. In 1871 he acquired his first land, partly by purchase and partly through inheritance. This was his present farm of 113½ acres and upon it he erected a substantial brick residence. The improvements in general Mr. Heidlebach has made himself and they are good. He has been a man of enterprise and public spirit, progressive in all things. A man of good judgment, painstaking and careful, he has been selected a number of times by his fellow townsmen to share in transacting the public business of the township. For eight years he served as supervisor of elections; for ten years, as township auditor and for twelve years, as school director. His political affiliations are with the Republican party. He is a straightforward, upright man and commands the esteem of the community.

On Dec. 12, 1861, Mr. Heidlebach was married to Barbara, daughter of Abram Hoover, and the union has been blessed with children as follows: Martha Ann, Emeline, Milton S., Charles H., and Jacob, all deceased; Ida, the wife of Eli Eshleman, residing on the home farm; John F. a soldier in the United States service, now in the Philippines. He enlisted April 5, 1899, and rose from the ranks to his present position, that of lieutenant in Co. H, 1st Marines.

EPHRAIM H. HERSHEY, a substantial citizen of Millersville who has only recently retired from a long active agricultural life, a calling in which his father and grandfather before him achieved success, has attained high rank among the farmers of this county.

Born Dec. 12, 1834, in Manor township, Mr. Hershey is the son of Joseph Hershey (2) and Barbara Hostetter, and the grandson of Joseph and Esther (Hostetter) Hershey, all natives of the same locality. The grandfather was born in Manor township and there passed his life in agricultural pursuits, in which he was quite extensively engaged. He and his wife were identified with the Mennonite Church and reared their five children in that faith. He died in 1831, when upward of sixty years of age, and she passed away in 1853. Their children were: Benjamin, who moved to the State of Iowa in 1852, had a large stock ranch, was engaged extensively in the manufacturing of lumber, became wealthy and there died; John, also now deceased, an extensive farmer in Manor township; Joseph (2); Magdalena, married to Jacob Hoover, of York county, this state; and Catherine, who died unmarried.

Joseph Hershey (2), the father of our subject, was born in 1808 in Manor township. He married Barbara, daughter of the Rev. Jacob Hostetter of Manheim, this county. She was born in 1811 and has attained the advanced age of over ninety years. Joseph Hershey (2) was a farmer of Manor township, thrifty and industrious, and a good citizen. Himself and his estimable wife were members of the Mennonite Church. He died in 1855. Their children were: Benjamin, unmarried, who resided in Manor township and there died when sixty-two years of age; Ephraim, our subject; Esther, who is the wife of Reuben Kauffman and resides in Manor township; Anna, deceased wife of Robert Knox; Joseph, a farmer and dealer in agricultural implements at North Platte, Nebraska.

Ephraim H. Hershey was reared on the old home farm in Manor township, and his boyhood was passed in the usual manner of farmers' sons, alternating in season between work on the farm and attendance at the district school. At the age of twenty-one he began farming on his own account on the home place, and for the long period of forty years continued to reside upon the place, engaged in general farming. In 1896 he retired from active business life and erected a neat, comfortable house in Millersville, where he is quietly passing the evening of life. Through life Mr. Hershey has been industrious, enterprising and progressive; he has ever taken a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the advancement of his town and county. He is a member of the Mennonite Church. Mr. Hershey is the owner of a well-improved farm of 117 acres.

On May 2, 1861, Mr. Hershey was married to Harriet, daughter of Joseph Shindle, now deceased, of Manor township. She died in 1887, aged forty-six years. Two children blessed this union, Emma and Joseph, the latter a farmer of Manor township.

SAMUEL M. HUBER, extensively engaged in the tinsmith, roofing, plumbing, steam and hot water heating business at Lititz, is one of the wide awake, progressive men of the town, and bears an enviable reputation for thrift and public-spiritedness. He was born in Warwick, Pa., Dec. 9, 1870, a son of John and Susan (Weidler) Huber.

At the age of seventeen years Mr. Huber discontinued attendance at the public schools and entered upon an apprenticeship as a tinsmith under J. A. Miksch, of Lititz, in the same building in which he is now engaged in business. After completing his trade Mr. Huber sought to broaden his opportunities by taking a course in plumbing at the New York trade school, after which he worked as a journeyman at Oxford, Chester county, Pa., for two years. He then returned to Lititz and worked for his brother for seven years, after which he bought out the business of Mr. Miksch, his erstwhile instructor in the tinsmith trade. The wisdom of this departure has been repeatedly demonstrated in the meantime, for Mr. Huber has won the confidence of the community in which he lives, and not only has the local trade, but is known and patronized for many miles around. He is affable, obliging, and thoroughly conversant with his many sided occupation, and his industry and application have brought in fair financial returns.

On Oct. 15, 1894, Mr. Huber was united in marriage with Catherine Haisch, daughter of Christian and Emma (Deim) Haisch, and who is a native of Lititz. Four children have been born of this union, of whom two are deceased, and the two living are called Winifred and Herbert. Mr. and Mrs. Huber are members and earnest workers in the Moravian Church. Mr. Huber is very active in political undertakings of his neighborhood, and invariably adheres to the tenets of the Republican party. He has held offices of importance within the gift of his fellow townsmen, including that of burgess of Lititz. He is fraternally associated with the Knights of Pythias of Lititz, and is well known in social and business circles.

HIRAM STONER YOUNG is regarded as one of the most progressive men of his section of Lancaster county, where he is well known, and the circle of his acquaintanceship also extends into York county, where he has held business interests for some years.

Mr. Young was born Jan. 27, 1852, at Central Manor, this county, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Stoner) Young. He was reared in the locality of his birthplace, received his education in the common schools, and while yet a boy began to learn carpentry with his father, who was a carpenter and contractor. Until 1876 he was thus engaged with his father, for whom he then farmed for two years, after which he took charge of the Blue Rock Mills, located on the Susquehanna about a mile south of Washington borough, where he has ever since remained. He was only a renter during the first ten years, but at the end of that time purchased the property, which he yet owns. As his patronage has increased and the demands of his custom have warranted it he has increased his facilities and made numerous improvements, putting in new boilers and engines, and equipping the mills with the roller process. Mr. Young carries on flour and grist milling, having both a merchant and custom trade, and his plant has a capacity of twenty-five barrels daily. However, though milling has been his principal business, he has not given all his time and attention to that line. He also handles hay and grain, and owns and conducts a coal yard in York county opposite his mill, which he established in 1897. The same year he opened a transportation line between his mill and York county, the landing being at the foot of Long Level, in York county, opposite the mill. A steamboat carries anything that is to be transported. The statement that Mr. Young is progressive needs no further support than the record of his business life. All his enterprises have been successful in the most desirable way—while bringing him profit, they have been of benefit to his fellowmen, who have appreciated fully the advantage of having so energetic a man in their midst. Though he is thoroughly public-spirited, he takes little part in public affairs. His political support is given to the Democratic party.

In 1883 Mr. Young married Miss Alice Eichleberger, of Mechanicsburg, Cumberland Co., Pa., daughter of Amos Eichleberger, and they are the parents of three children, Samuel M., J. Russell and Marie M. Mrs. Young is a member of the Lutheran Church.

R. R. BITZER. The coal and lumber business in Ephrata, Lancaster county, is in the hands of energetic and progressive men who have done much for the advancement of the borough along their lines. One of these dealers is R. R. Bitzer, who was born March 19, 1831, a son of Daniel and Lydia (Resler) Bitzer, of West Earl township. Grandfather Michael Bitzer was a prominent farmer of West Earl township and a highly respected citizen.

Daniel Bitzer, father of R. R. Bitzer was born Oct. 11, 1794, married Lydia Resler Dec. 25, 1825, and died Dec. 15, 1853, his wife being born in 1797 and surviving until Dec., 1867. To them a family of six children was born: Mary, born Aug. 25, 1829, died Jan. 25, 1850; R. R.; Julia Ann, born Oct. 5, 1834, who married George Melison, of Lebanon county, and died in 1898; Matilda, born Oct. 19, 1836, died May 11, 1837; Martin, born Aug. 1, 1838, who married Lydia Buck, of West Earl township; and Daniel R., born Sept. 16, 1840, died Aug. 3, 1860.

R. R. Bitzer was reared on a farm and educated in the public schools, and for some fifteen years he followed agricultural pursuits, at the end of which time he moved into the borough of Ephrata and opened up a lumber business which he has successfully pursued for the past thirty years; although he has seen seventy birthdays, he is still a capable and energetic man of business, trusted and respected throughout the neighborhood. During his younger years he served as prison inspector for a long season, was supervisor of roads, and has been school director in both West Earl and Ephrata townships. In 1863, he was elected justice of the peace, serving with credit for five years, when he resigned the position.

On Feb. 25, 1858, Mr. Bitzer was united in wedlock with Miss Fianna Fasnacht, a daughter of Amos and Lucy (Killiam) Fasnacht, of Ephrata township, and these children have been born to them: Alice, born Jan. 8, 1859, who died in infancy; Daniel, born June 19, 1862, deceased; Jacob and Ella, twins, born Nov. 10, 1865, the former of whom is dead, the latter the wife of Charles Leimbach; and Clara, born Feb. 10, 1868, who married Dr. Frank Winger, a druggist of Ephrata.

Mr. Bitzer and his estimable wife live in great comfort in their handsome home at 118 East Main street, Ephrata, where they delight to show hospitality and are beloved and respected by all who know them.

JOSEPH H. HABECKER, a general farmer, contractor and owner of a valuable stone quarry, is one of the leading citizens of East Donegal township. He was born at Rohrerstown, East Hempfield township, Aug. 19, 1855, a son of Christian and Elizabeth (Habecker) Habecker, of Manor township. The father died on the old farm in 1859, at the age of thirty, but the mother still survives, living on the old homestead, at the age of seventy-five. Her two sons are: Christian, who manages the old farm; and Joseph H.

The old pioneer settler of this family was named Christian, and, coming to America, purchased land from William Penn.

Joseph H. Habecker had the usual rearing of a farmer boy, and attended the district schools, remaining with his mother until the age of twenty-one. Then he purchased a coal and lumber yard, from Stacks & Meyers, of Florin, Pa., which he operated successfully until 1882, and then sold the business. For four years Mr. Habecker enjoyed a private life, but in 1886 he again returned to business and located on his present farm, where he remained engaged in agricultural pursuits for six years. Moving into Mt. Joy, he operated the Farmers' Creamery

Co., for two years, having been one of its organizers, but was then confronted by the necessity of either bringing his children up in town and resigning his farm, or of resigning his connection with the company, and for the sake of what he considered better for the children, he chose the latter and returned to East Donegal. Although another manager now conducts the business of the creamery, he still retains his stock in it, which is valuable. For three years Mr. Habecker was the acceptable auditor of the township, and has been a very earnest school director for the past two years.

The first marriage of Mr. Habecker was in the spring of 1877, in Mt. Joy, to Tillie Nissley, and two children were born to this marriage: Anna, who married Reuben Fellenbaum, the teller in the First National Bank, of Mt. Joy; and Bessie, who is deceased. Mrs. Habecker, born in Florin, a daughter of Jacob H. Nissley, a retired farmer of Florin, died in 1882, and is buried in Kraybill cemetery. In 1883 occurred the second marriage, which united Mr. Habecker and Mary Hostetter, and to this marriage have been born six children: Sadie, Mary A., Joseph, Barbara, Helen and Floren. Mrs. Mary (Hostetter) Habecker is a daughter of Jonas, and a sister of Tilman, Hostetter, of Florin.

Mr. Habecker is well known in this locality as a man of means, and of the highest personal integrity. His political connection is with the Republican party, and the family belong to the Mennonite faith. The name is one of the oldest in the county and it finds a worthy representative in Joseph H. Habecker.

JOHN JOHNSON. It is in a great country like this where democratic ideas prevail, and where men have equal chances in building foundations for character and fortune, that we find men enjoying credit and confidence for individual success. It may be as a merchant, as a professional man, or as a farmer. In the administration of those who have watched their careers there is no distinction. The race, handicapped as it is by competition and many obstacles, is run under very nearly the same difficulties and similar disappointments in life for all. In this brief sketch we are bringing to notice a man whose life has been modest and unassuming in measure with his success as a contractor and builder and farmer. John Johnson, of Eden township, Lancaster county, was born in Bart township, Dec. 17, 1840, a son of William and Mary (Haggens) Johnson.

William Johnson, our subject's father, was born in Delaware county, and his wife was a native of Lancaster county. He was a stone mason by trade, and settled in Bart and Eden townships, where he followed his trade during his life. He was honored as a successful man of sturdy character. Both he and his wife died some years ago in Eden township. To this couple a family of four children were born, and carefully brought up to manhood and womanhood: Barbara, the eldest, born in Bart township, is now the wife of H. Hompser, of Lancaster City, and she has five children, John, David, Benjamin, Mary and Ida. Elizabeth, born in Bart township, is now the wife of Henry Myers, and has three children, John, William and Mary. Hannah, the third daughter was born in Lancaster county, and is the widow of David Hompser; she resides in Eden township. No children were born to the union. John completes the family.

William Johnson had a brother, who was born in Bart township, learned the carpenter trade when a young man, and is still engaged in that branch of business in Eden township. He was never married.

The subject of our sketch began life's activities at the age of eighteen after due preparation in the district schools. Natural talents and a taste for work that might afford plenty of out-door exercise attracted him toward the vocation of contractor and builder. It was only through thorough training as a practical carpenter, however, that he acquired the proficiency and knowledge necessary to make his after-life a success. During his many years experience as a contractor and builder Mr. Johnson has been engaged in some very important work. In 1863 he went to Columbus, Ohio, where he remained for three years on a large contract. Returning to his home in Pennsylvania he continued his business. In 1867 he married Miss Catherine Keen, who was born in 1843, and was educated in the home schools, and who is very highly connected, her parents being Harry and Julia Keen, members on both sides of very prominent families. After their marriage Mr. Johnson with his young wife settled in Strasburg township, where he lived over twenty years following his trade. In 1900 his wife purchased her father's old homestead, and under the direction and experienced touch of our subject the place was greatly improved, and now makes them an attractive home. Mr. Johnson still owns his farm in Strasburg township. An adopted daughter, Luletia Johnson, brightens their home; she is a young lady of scholarly attainments and attractive personality.

The social side of the life of Mr. Johnson has not been neglected during the many years of business activity. Both he and his wife take a lively interest in church work, being members of the Reformed Church of Providence. Politically he has always been identified with the Democratic party, and he has taken an active interest in local affairs. As a family the Johnsons have occupied a prominent place in the community, where they are highly respected for their many virtues of head and heart.

MICHAEL KELLY (deceased). For a number of years one of the best-known and most highly esteemed residents of Lancaster county was Michael Kelly, who through his own efforts built up his own fortunes, and reared in affluence one of the most respected families in the city of Lancaster at the present time.

Mr. Kelly was of Irish birth and parentage. His native place was in County Derry, for which through life he felt an enthusiastic affection, and his death took place in his home in Lancaster, in 1861, in his sixty-seventh year. He was a son of Michael and Catherine (Heron) Kelly, both of whom spent their whole lives in Ireland. Their children were as follows: Michael, named above; James; Daniel; John; Bridget, who married Frank Hagan, a farmer; Catherine, who married a Mr. Kelly; and Patrick, who married Catherine Duffey. All died in their native land with the exception of Patrick and Michael.

While in their native land the early Kellys are well known in many walks of life, the maternal ancestors are equally prominent in America. As early as 1638 the great-grandfather of Michael Kelly came from England to America, and in the person of Mordecai Lincoln, established that family in Berks county, Pa. From Berks county one branch of the Lincoln family drifted to Virginia and then to Kentucky, and from this family came President Abraham Lincoln. During its early history when Indian fighters were needed, and when the war of the Revolution was to be accomplished, the Lincolns were found at the front. Daniel Boone, the pioneer, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, and was a neighbor of the Lincolns. He drifted to North Carolina, and then to Kentucky. The Lincolns and Boones intermarried, and are still among the most prominent families of Berks county.

Until he reached his eighteenth year, Michael Kelly remained with his parents in Ireland, coming then to America, resolved to win for himself an honorable position in this country of great opportunities. His education had not been neglected, and being blessed with the quick intelligence of his race, he soon accustomed himself to new conditions, and with receptive mind early took a place among the intelligent young men of his association. For four years he was engaged working with farmers, but he then purchased a horse and wagon, laid in a stock of desirable merchandise, and for some time drove through the country disposing of the same. In this way he gradually added to his accumulations until he was able to give up that business and begin work as a drover, in which line his excellent judgment and business acumen made him prominent. For a number of years Mr. Kelly followed this business, retiring only in his later years from activity, even then being sometimes tempted to enter into the horse business again for a short period.

Shortly after his marriage, Mr. Kelly located in Lancaster county, settling in Churchtown at first, but about one year later, he removed to Lancaster City. While carrying on his horse and cattle buying and selling, Mr. Kelly acquired several very valuable properties, one of these being a farm of 140 acres, and another consisting of 250 acres in Drumore township, this county. Long a consistent member of St. Mary's Catholic Church, he was one of its most liberal supporters. He was also generous in his gifts to worthy causes, and his helping hand was often extended to those less fortunate than himself. In politics he was a Democrat, but was no seeker for office. Mr. Kelly was a very intelligent man, and his last years were spent in the enjoyment of reading. His memory is not only cherished by his family, but is recalled with respect by his fellow-citizens.

On April 15, 1830, Mr. Kelly was united in marriage with Miss Catherine McCormick, and the children born to this union were as follows: James, a retired resident of Lancaster, one of its intellectual men of leisure; Hugh, who died young; Miss Catherine, one of the accomplished and cultivated ladies of this city; Anastasia, who died unmarried in 1874; and Michael and Mary, who both died young.

Mrs. Catherine (McCormick) Kelly was born in Churchtown, Lancaster Co., Pa., April 10, 1803, a daughter of Hugh and Mary (Schoff) McCormick, the former of whom was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and the latter in Berks county, Pa. Hugh McCormick was a farmer and also was a tailor. He left his native country in the days of the Irish Rebellion after a very exciting escape with his life. He was unfortunate enough to be captured by the soldiery and was condemned to be shot. No doubt the sentence would soon have been carried out, but in desperation he made the certain signal of distress used by a fraternal order to which he belonged. This was recognized by a brother among his captors and resulted in his escape. He settled in Churchtown, Lancaster county, where he married, in 1800, and for a long period followed both farming and milling. He was a capable workman, but did little at his trade after coming to America. He lived to the advanced age of seventy-seven years, dying Aug. 23, 1847. His wife died in 1856, at the age of seventy-four years. Their children were as follows: Thomas, who followed the tailor trade; Catherine, who was the wife of Michael Kelly; Philip, who was a farmer, and died in Indianapolis; John, who also died in Indianapolis; Ellen, who married John Hill, and died in Ohio; Mary, wife of John Condebary; and Hugh, who went to California, in 1849, amassed wealth and died there.

In their beautiful home, surrounded by all of the comforts and refinements of life, the two survivors of this family, a brother and sister, reside together. Both have intellectual tastes, and are happily able to gratify them to the fullest extent. Both are liberal contributors to all worthy objects and are most highly esteemed in Lancaster.

CHRISTIAN M. EPLER. The horrors of war can never be brought more fully to mind than when the soldiers of a country, after bravely facing the foe, return to the homes they have fought to preserve, and show the haggard countenance and useless limb, the roughened face and disfiguring scar which has brought them. Among those who almost gave up life for the preservation of the Union, during the dark days of 1861-65, is Christian M. Epler, who resides in his comfortable home, in Maytown, remembered by a grateful country and respected by the community who knew him when no arms were more brawny at the forge than his.

Mr. Epler was born in East Donegal township, May 13, 1827, son of David and Elizabeth (Mumma) Epler, the former of Londonderry township, Dauphin county, and the latter of East Donegal township, Lancaster county. The father was a farmer in early life, and later became engaged in the butcher business, but died at the early age of forty years. He was buried in the old Epler farm in Londonderry township, Dauphin county. The mother died in East Donegal township, when her son, Christian M. was but thirteen months old, at the early age of twenty-eight, and was buried in the East Donegal cemetery. The only child of this marriage to survive was the subject of this biography. The paternal and maternal grandparents were David and Susan Epler, and Jonas and Elizabeth Mumma, respectively.

Left motherless at the age of thirteen months, Christian M. Epler was taken to the home of his grandfather, Jonas Mumma, and remained in his kind care until he was twenty years old. When about eighteen he entered the blacksmith shop of William Winters, which was situated west of Florin, and remained with him for a period of eighteen months, until he thoroughly learned the trade, and then went on a trip to Ohio. Mr. Epler had the misfortune to cut off a finger while at work on the Little Chickies, and while it was healing worked at the Bretz Half-way House, on the Marietta and Mount Joy turnpike, for some nine months, going from there to East Donegal where he worked eight months, with John Fridy. Going west in 1848, he worked in various places at his trade, and when the Civil war broke out, he was in Battle Creek, Mich., and there enlisted in the engineer-mechanics corps, for which he enlisted forty-two men for six months, he to serve as company blacksmith. Before the term of enlistment had expired, the officers of the company sold out to the 13th Mich. V. I., which was to be a regiment of engineers and mechanics. Knowing the influence of Mr. Epler, he was offered a lieutenancy in the 13th, but not being willing to have any part in what he felt was a dishonorable act, he declined to accept, saying he preferred to remain a blacksmith and be honest, rather than be a lieutenant and be dishonest. From Michigan Mr. Epler went to Ohio, and being still determined to serve his country he enlisted as regimental blacksmith in Co. H, 42d Ohio V. I., and for three years honestly and faithfully served his country, and was mustered out of the service in the Mound City hospital in 1864.

In a terrible wreck on the Ohio & Mississippi R. R., below Vicksburg, Mr. Epler was one of the victims. The enemy had pulled a spike out of place, which threw the train down the embankment, and Mr. Epler was one of the 300 who were seriously injured. His back was dislocated, and, in terrible suffering, he was taken to the hospital at Cairo, in February, 1863, and kept there six months, going from there to another hospital, in Mound City, Ill., where four months more went by, and still three months of hospital life had to be spent, in the Mercy Hospital, Chicago, before he was in any condition to take a thirty-days leave of absence and make a visit home. However, soon after he felt obliged to return to the Chicago hospital and then was passed on to Mound City, and then was sent to his regiment to get his pay. At this time science had assisted Mr. Epler, and he wore a harness arrangement, which enabled him to walk a very little, although the physicians were obliged to tell him the truth, that much walking might produce a paralysis, which finally did take place, and this brave and faithful server of his country, has been an invalid ever since.

In March, 1850, Mr. Epler was married in Ashland county, Ohio, to Miss Jerusha Chambers, and to this union were born: David C. S.; and James J. S., who died at the age of thirteen months. Prior to the war, Mr. Epler became a prominent man in several localities in which he made his home, and during a residence in Michigan, in 1856-57, he was supervisor and constable, and in Kansas, in 1860, he also served as supervisor. In politics, he has been an active Republican, and did much for his party during his active life. At present he is an honored member of the G. A. R., of Marietta and one of the respected citizens.

The death of Mrs. Epler in 1889, at the age of forty-eight, deprived him of pleasant companionship. She was buried in Western Kansas. Mr. Epler is surrounded with every comfort, although not able to assist himself very much, but in a cousin, Mrs. Susannah (Newcomer) Epler, he has had a faithful and efficient nurse, and it is to her care that he attributes his recovery and his present state of health. For many years Mr. Epler has been connected with the M. E. Church.

JOHN G. McBRIDE, one of the prominent and popular farmers of West Donegal township, whose industrious and useful life has been attended with a well-deserved success, was born in Mt. Joy township, April 16, 1862. While he was a mere babe his father, Meredith B. McBride, son of John and Sarah (Metrum) McBride, donned the Union blue, and went out to fight for the life of the Republic. He enlisted under Capt. Root, in a company of Pennsylvania Volunteers, and after nine months of faithful service died in the military hospital at Alexandria, Va., in 1864, while still in the prime of life. Mrs. Meredith McBride, formerly Miss Fanny Groff, was a daughter of Samuel and Martha (Keener) Groff, lifelong residents of Rapho township. After four years of widowhood, she was married May 28, 1868, to Philip Fisher, a most devoted husband to herself and kind father to her children. Mrs. Fisher was the mother of two children by her first marriage, John G., and Samuel, deceased. By her marriage to Mr. Fisher she had one son, William, long since deceased.

John G. McBride remained with his mother during his childhood and youth, and was well prepared by moral training, good associations and a very thorough education for a successful business career. He has a good standing in his own community, was assessor of West Donegal township six years, has served as a member of the Democratic county committee twelve years, and has twice been elected a delegate to the State conventions.

Mr. McBride belongs to the I. O. O. F.; the Masonic fraternity, where he has held the Master's chair, and the K. G. E. At the present time he has the active management of his step-father's extensive estate and is handling the business very successfully. Intelligent and capable as he is, he commands the confidence of his neighbors and has many friends.

JOSEPH C. SNYDER. During a period of forty-two years Mr. Snyder was employed in the court house at Lancaster, and no figure was more familiar than his to the attorneys whom professional duties brought frequently to the building. On the completion of the court house, in 1854, he was appointed janitor, and served in that capacity for seventeen years. Resigning in 1872, he accepted the position of tipstaff which had been tendered him by Judge Livingston. In 1879 he succeeded George Albright as court crier, and continued in that position until his death, meantime also acting as court interpreter and assistant librarian of the law library.

The Snyders are an old family of Lancaster county, and the father of Joseph C. assisted in the building of Kugh's tavern on the Columbia turnpike more than one hundred years ago. He was born on the home farm in Manor township, in 1816, and at the age of six years was taken in charge by an uncle, Squire Bitner, of Washington borough. Later he was apprenticed to another uncle, Thomas Strawbridge, on a farm, but not finding the work or surroundings congenial, he turned his attention to the plasterer's trade, which he followed at Mount Joy and Elizabethtown, and from the latter city moved to Lancaster. While a resident of Mount Joy he joined a military company, of which he was later chosen captain, and he was also a member of the old Fencibles under Capt. Duchman and Franklin. He was the oldest surviving member of the Elizabethtown Lodge of Odd Fellows, was connected with the Red Men and with Cochranville Lodge of Masons. Though not a partisan in politics, he was a pronounced Republican and always voted the straight ticket. A man of sincere religious views, he was identified, at different times, with the Methodist and Lutheran denominations, and when he passed away, Aug. 28, 1899, it was with the faith of an earnest Christian. His body was laid to rest in Woodward Hill cemetery.

On the 4th of July, 1843, Mr. Snyder married Annie B. Wright, by whom he had the following-named children: Mrs. Henrietta Smith, deceased; and Mrs. Mary E. Nissley, deceased. Mrs. Annie B. Snyder died in 1864. His second marriage occurred Oct. 31, 1870, in Lancaster, and united him with Mrs. Annie (McElhenny) Freidenstein, who was born in Lampeter township, Aug. 1, 1836, being a daughter of Archibald and Kate (Long) McElhenny, natives, respectively, of Ireland and Lancaster county. Her father, who was a farmer, died at the age of forty-six, and was long survived by his widow, who died in Illinois in 1892, aged eighty-one years. Their children were as follows: Jacob, who died at twenty-five years of age; Henry (1), Henry (2) and John, all of whom died in infancy; Mary, widow of Thomas Harvey and a resident of Fayette county, Ill.; Mrs. Kate McCue, deceased; Mrs. Annie Snyder, of Lancaster; Samuel, a blacksmith in Fayette county, Ill.; Fannie, Mrs. Josiah Snively, deceased; Susan and Harriet, both of whom died young. Miss Annie McElhenny remained in the home of her parents until her marriage to John Freidenstein, a blacksmith of Lancaster, Pa., who died in 1868, at the age of thirty-two years. Two daughters, Mary E. and Miriam, were born of this union, but both died in childhood. Mrs. Snyder is a lady of intelligence, amiable disposition and kindly heart, and has a circle of friends that is limited only by the number of her acquaintances.

ABRAHAM SHAUB. Among the prominent and enterprising citizens of Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa., who have always devoted their time and energies to agricultural pursuits and have met with marked success in life, is the subject of this personal narrative, who now owns and operates a fine farm one and one-half miles north of Millersville. He was born on the old Shaub homestead in West Lampeter township, same county, March 23, 1842, a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Miller) Shaub. During his boyhood he attended school, and remained on the home farm until he was married in 1870 to Miss Mary Ann Huber, a daughter of Christian and Annie (Harnish) Huber. They have seven children living, namely: Lizzie B., wife of Benjamin Mussleman, of East Hempfield township; Henry R., John E., Mary E., Jacob M., and Christian N., twins, and Willis J., who are all at home. Laura Ann, the second child, died in infancy. With Mr. Shaub also resides a grandson, Christian H. Brubaker.

After his marriage Mr. Shaub located on a farm in West Lampeter township, adjoining the old homestead, comprising eighty-seven acres of land, to the improvement and cultivation of which he devoted his energies until 1884, when he purchased his present farm of seventy-eight acres in Manor township. This he has also placed under a high state of cultivation, and in its operation is meeting with most excellent success. Being a man of good business ability and sound judgment he has prospered in his undertakings, and is today a stockholder in the Farmers' National Bank of Lancaster and the Penn Building and Loan Association. For one year he was also a director in the Southern Market House, of which he is a stockholder. He is one of the most progressive and public-spirited men of his county.

JAMES M. McSPARRAN. Among the leading citizens and farmers of Drumore township is James M. McSparran, who resides in great comfort on his fine farm, located two miles east of Furness, Pennsylvania.

Mr. McSparran was born Dec. 23, 1848, a son of the late Fleming and Mary Elizabeth (Pusey) McSparran, the former of whom was born in 1817, and died in 1876. The McSparran family can be traced back to a Scotch-Irish ancestor, James McSparran, who was born in the north of Ireland and immigrated to America, settling in Lancaster county about 1739.

James McSparran (2), the grandfather of James M., was born in Peach Bottom in 1754, married Eleanor Neal, and reared these children: James and Isabel, twins, born in 1801, the former of whom married Amelia F. McCullough, March 8, 1832, and died March 31, 1863, while Isabel married John King April 26, 1827, and died Dec. 14, 1871, leaving a daughter, Ellen, the wife of Dr. B. F. Sides of Drumore township; Thomas Neal, born March 6, 1803, died March 28, 1820; Grizell, Oct. 31, 1804, who married Samuel Morrison, June 2, 1831, and died Dec. 31, 1856; Eliza, Sept. 12, 1806, who married James Barnes, July 26, 1827, and died Oct. 5, 1853; John, July 5, 1808, who died in 1885; Eleanor J., Feb. 15, 1810, who married her brother-in-law, James Barnes; Rachel N., Feb. 4, 1812, who died Aug. 28, 1819; Margaret, Dec. 8, 1813, who married William Steele and died May 27, 1866; Samuel, Nov. 20, 1815, who was accidentally shot by his brother James, Feb. 18, 1837; Fleming, Sept. 12, 1817, died March 20, 1876; Thomas N. and William, twins, Nov. 10, 1820, still surviving, in York county, Pa., the former of whom married Lydia Pusey, and the latter Alice Colwell; Joseph, June 26, 1823, who died July 24, 1834; Rachel, March 7, 1827, residing at Chestnut Level. She was the youngest and is one of the few survivors of this numerous family.

Fleming McSparran was only ten years of age when his father died, and he was bound out to James Penny; by him he was apprenticed to William Eves, of Chester county, where he remained three years, learning the tanning business. Returning then to his home, he worked for a time with his brother James on the farm, but in 1838 he went to Illinois and followed farming there for one year. The next year he engaged in boating on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, returning later to his home by way of Pittsburg. In 1840 Mr. Fleming became associated with his friend, Amos Stubbs, in the lumber business at Barnes' sawmill, on the Susquehanna river, the site being now Benton Station, on the Columbia and Port Deposit Railroad. Two years later he was made tax collector for the district, and the duties of this office he efficiently performed. On March 15, 1845, he purchased a store property at Fairfield, the location of the present village of Furniss, and embarked extensively in the mercantile business, continuing until his death.

Fleming McSparran was married to Miss Mary E. Pusey, who was a daughter of Mahlon Pusey, of Puseyville, and to this union these children were born: Emma H., born Oct. 3, 1847, the wife of David Weidley, a merchant at the old place, built in 1818, where her father was so long successful; James M.; Lydia Ellen, born Jan. 21, 1850, the wife of Dr. E. M. Zell, of Little Britain township; Edwin P., April 26, 1851, deceased; Samuel C., Oct. 28, 1852, residing in Fulton township; Mary A., Nov. 27, 1854, deceased; Ida E., April 9, 1856, the wife of W. S. Hastings, of Drumore township; William F., Dec. 13, 1857; Marion, Sept. 19, 1859, living in Fairfield; Edgar L., June 18, 1861; Isabel K., June 16, 1863, a teacher in the schools of Philadelphia; Margaret, May 15, 1866, who died young; and Anna P., her twin sister, who also died young, as did the rest of the children.

Fleming McSparran was a staunch supporter of the Democratic party and was one of the leading citizens of his time, a man of travel, good judgment and excellent business ability.

James M. McSparran was reared at Fairfield and after finishing his course in the common schools took an academic course at Chestnut Level. He was one of a large family and was mainly dependent upon his own resources for his advancement in life. His fine farm of 100 acres is very valuable and most excellently improved, the residence being one of the most comfortable and attractive in the locality.

Mr. McSparran was united in marriage Dec. 24, 1879, to Miss Laura Wentz, of Drumore township, a daughter of John and Sarah (Penny) Wentz, who were of German extraction. She was born in 1853 and was reared in a family of children, as follows: Mary, the wife of William Morrison; Joseph, of Chestnut Level; Dr. William, of New Providence; Hugh and John, residents of Bethesda; Thomas, of Kirkwood; Emma, deceased; Laura, the wife of our subject; Harriet, who is the widow of John McComb.

The children born to James M. McSparran and his wife are: G. Fleming, born Nov. 3, 1880; Walter, Sept. 4, 1882; Ellwood, March 25, 1885; Clyde, Sept. 29, 1889; Sarah Elizabeth, May 8, 1895, died Sept. 12, 1897; and James M., Jr., Sept. 23, 1898.

Mr. McSparran has always supported the men and measures of the Democratic party, and he is a leading member of the Presbyterian Church in Chestnut Level. His standing in his town and county is high, no one being more thoroughly respected.

ADAM M. RANCK. The Ranck family has long been known and esteemed in Lancaster county, Adam Ranck, the paternal grandfather of Adam M. Ranck, having been among the early settlers, and the progenitor of a numerous family.

Adam M. Ranck, who is one of the substantial and prominent farmers and dairymen of Upper Leacock township, was born in Leacock township, on a farm located about one mile east of his present home, Feb. 20, 1850. His parents were Rev. Adam and Barbara (Resh) Ranck, the former a native of Strasburg and the latter of Leacock township. Father Ranck was engaged in farming in that township until 1871 and then removed to Bird-in-Hand, remaining there until his death, March 28, 1882, at the age of seventy-five years. The mother passed out of life in May, 1895, at the age of eighty years, and both were buried at Stumptown. For a period of twenty years he had been a minister of the Mennonite Church, a pious, exemplary Christian man.

The children born to Rev. and Mrs. Adam Ranck were: Jacob, living retired on the old homestead, in Leacock township; Mary, the widow of Benjamin Kreider, of Lancaster, Pa.; Anna, the widow of Abram Kreider, of Manheim township; Barbara, the widow of Thomas E. Seigle, of Leacock township; and Adam M., the subject of this sketch.

Adam M. Ranck is justly considered one of the leading men of his township and his long continued agricultural labors have made him one of the most thorough farmers of the locality. When his father removed to Bird-in-Hand, he continued to manage the farm, which is one of the best cultivated and most productive in the vicinity.

On Nov. 6, 1871, occurred the marriage of Adam M. Ranck and Miss Caroline Wenger, in West Earl township, and the children born to this union were: Samuel W., a farmer and stock dealer of Upper Leacock township, who married Frances Pfautz, and has two sons, John M. and Charles P.; Amos W., John W. and Adam W., all deceased; Wenger W., a farmer and implement dealer, residing with his father; Anna B. and Callie W., living at home.

Mrs. Caroline (Wenger) Ranck was born in West Earl township, May 22, 1850, a daughter of Christian and Mary (Royer) Wenger, natives of West Earl and East Cocalico townships, respectively. Mr. Wenger was a well-known farmer and died on the farm on which he was born, in 1886, at the age of seventy-five years, having lived a retired life since 1875. Mrs. Wenger, although advanced in years, having been born in 1820, lives in good health with her daughter, Mrs. Gible, in Brunnerville. Both she and her husband for many years were members and supporters of the Old Brethren Church. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Wenger were: Edward, a farmer of Ephrata township; Mary, the wife of Ezra Burkholder, of Ephrata township; Salinda, deceased wife of Abram Myers; Caroline; Christian, a farmer, veterinary surgeon and owner of a livery business in Harvey county, Kans.; Samuel, on the old homestead; Abraham, a cigar manufacturer, and ex-county auditor, of Earlville; and Lizzie, the wife of Cyrus Gible, a farmer of Brunnerville. The paternal grandparents were Christian and Hetty (Stoner) Wenger, of Lancaster county, and the maternal grandparents were Samuel and Sally (Kellar) Rohrer, also of Lancaster county.

Since 1878 Mr. Ranck has been engaged in the dairy business and has two properties in his locality, his son residing on one of these, and he on the other. Mr. Ranck is connected with the River Brethren Church, known as the Brethren in Christ, and is favorably known through that part of the county.

ABRAHAM W. MARTIN, a venerable resident of Caernarvon township, whose home is situated about a mile west of Churchtown, was born in East Earl township, near Goodville, March 12, 1832, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Weaver) Martin.

Abraham Martin, the grandfather of Abraham W., was engaged in farming near Hinkletown, where he owned six farms, one being given to each of his six sons. He had also five daughters. These children, all born to his first wife, a Miss Saunders, who died in middle life, were: David, George, Jacob, Abraham, Jonas and Henry, all deceased; Fannie, who married Samuel Wenger, a minister in the Mennonite Church; Elizabeth, married to John Rupp; Eve, married to Henry Brennehan; two daughters who died unmarried. The parents of this family were both members of the Mennonite Church.

Jacob Martin, the father of Abraham W., was born near Hinkletown but was reared in East Earl township, where he spent his life as a farmer. In this career he was quite successful, and owned three farms, giving one to each of his sons. Elizabeth Weaver, who became his wife, was a daughter of Samuel Weaver, of East Earl township. They had eight children. Samuel died in childhood; Abraham W., whose name introduces this article, is one of the venerable inhabitants of Caernarvon township; Annie and Jacob both died in infancy; Mary is the widow of Christian Zimmerman, and has her home in East Earl township; Amos is a farmer in Salisbury township; Tobias lives in East Earl township; Elizabeth married Barton Hurst, and has since died. Jacob Martin died in 1873, at the age of seventy-seven; his widow died about 1885, at the age of eighty-two. They were both members of the Mennonite Church.

Abraham W. Martin was reared on the old farm north of Goodville, was educated in the common schools and at the age of twenty-four married and located on the farm, where he still lives. Here he owns seventy-three acres, and has one of the fine farms of that part of Lancaster county. Everything denotes thrift and prosperity, and he has been very successful in all his undertakings. All his life he has been a farmer, and holds a farming life to be the noblest career a man can follow in this country.

Mr. Martin was married in December, 1857, to Miss Rebecca Zimmerman, a daughter of Christian Zimmerman, the third of that name to occupy the Zimmerman homestead, north of Goodville. She was born on this historic farm, June 18, 1839. Mr. and Mrs. Martin have had the following children: (1) Lydia, who married David Lichty, of Paradise, is the mother of eight children; Mary, Walter, Lena, Emma, Lydia, Clara, Abraham and Bessie. Of these children, Mary is the wife of Benjamin Weaver, of Caernarvon township, and they have two living children, Abram and Horace. (2) Barton Martin, who is a farmer in East Earl township, married Emma Kurtz, and is the father of four children: Horace; Annie, deceased; Reuben and Clara. (3) Annie died unmarried. (4) Mary married Aaron W. Weaver, of East Earl township, and is the mother of three children, Rebecca, Susan and Martin. (5) Lizzie married Franklin Marks, of East Earl township, and is the mother of four living children, Emma, John, Minnie and Frank; Bessie is deceased. (6) Emma is the wife of Martin Ceisit, of Caernarvon township, and the mother of George, Abraham, Martin, John and Anna. (7) Abraham F., a farmer of Caernarvon township, married Hannah Spotts. (8) John J. is unmarried and is living in the West. (9) Eli is at home; he married Laura Stauffer, by whom he has had one child, Edna.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin are worthy people and occupy a creditable place in the affections of the community in which their days are passing. They are consistent and devoted members of the Mennonite Church.

HON. MILTON EBY. As farmer and legislator the subject of this sketch, a resident of Paradise township, Lancaster county, has for many years been one of its most prominent and influential citizens. Besides filling other public offices of trust he has served for ten years as a member of the State legislature, six years in the lower house and four in the senate. He ranks as one of the most successful agriculturists of his vicinity, having always been progressive and wide awake.

Mr. Eby was born Oct. 16, 1850, on the farm in Paradise township, which he now occupies. He was the son of Jacob and Magdalene (Warner) Eby, received his education in the common schools, and for one term attended the Union high school of Cole-rain township. When Milton was eighteen years of age, his father died, and the mother purchasing the farm Milton took charge of the property for her, and from that time to the present has operated the home farm. In 1871, two years after he thus early in life assumed the active duties of farming, he also engaged in burning lime, and conducted that industry on a large scale, burning as much as 60,000 bushels of lime in one year. He continued actively in that occupation until 1882. In the year following, still in connection with his operation of the home farm, he engaged in the live stock business. Annually during the next ten years he took a trip to Buffalo, N. Y., in the autumn, and there purchased stock cattle, shipping them to Lancaster and disposing of them among the farmers, repurchasing the same cattle in the spring and shipping them to the eastern markets. He is still actively engaged in that business.

Mr. Eby is an earnest Republican and he has always taken a deep interest in politics. In 1887 he was elected prison inspector, serving for three years. In 1891 and again in 1893 and 1895 he was elected to the lower house of the State Legislature, serving on the committee on Agriculture and Accounts and acting as chairman of the latter committee for two sessions. In 1897 and in 1899 he was elected a member of the State senate, serving as chairman of the Printing committee. During this extended service of ten years as a legislator it is scarcely necessary to add that Mr. Eby was ever active in the interests of his constituents. He won an enviable record as a judicious, honest, active and able representative and senator, and as such his reputation has gone widely over the State. He is generally regarded by his fellow citizens as one of the men who have deservedly risen to a position of prominence and honor in the community of which he has been a lifelong resident.

Mr. Eby married Nov. 21, 1877, Miss Alice S. Eckman, daughter of Hiranimus and Sarah Eckman of Colerain township. To Mr. and Mrs. Eby have been born three children: Clyde E., was born April 11, 1879. He was educated in the public schools, at Millersville State Normal, and at Pierce's Business College, graduating from the latter institution. Accepting a position as bookkeeper for the lumber firm of Felin & Co., in Philadelphia he remained there two years and was then transferred to Newbern, N. C., where he served in the same capacity for a year. He was then admitted to partnership and is now an active member of the firm. Ralph Warnner Eby was born Sept. 30, 1880. He attended the public schools, Millersville State Normal, and later took an extended course of instruction in the illustrating department of the Industrial Art School of Philadelphia, from which he graduated June 5, 1902. Elsie Crystal Eby was born March 8, 1884. After completing the course in the public schools, she attended a private school at Gap, was also a student at Westchester Normal School, and now attends a Musical College in Philadelphia. Mrs. Eby and daughter are members of the Presbyterian Church of Paradise township.

DANIEL H. LINTNER, justice of the peace at Millersville, Lancaster county, descends from a very old family of Manor township, his great-grandfather, Daniel Lintner, having come there from Switzerland about the year 1735.

John Lintner, son of Daniel, was the father of Daniel (2), who was the eldest of his father's family. Daniel (2) was born in Millersville, was the owner of large tracts of land, was a farmer and distiller, married Mary Herr and was the father of twelve children, viz.: John H., a well-driller of Millersville; Christian H., a dairyman, now deceased; Daniel H.; Benjamin H., night watchman at the Novelty Works in Lancaster City; Fannie, wife of Samuel Hershev, of Lancaster township; Catherine, married to Levi Buckwalter, of Lancaster county; Elizabeth, deceased; Barbara, unmarried; Mary, deceased; Susan, unmarried; and Amanda and Annie, deceased. The father of this family died in 1887, at the age of eighty-two years, in the faith of the Mennonite Church. In politics he was a Republican.

Daniel H. Lintner was born in Millersville, Sept. 14, 1843, and was educated in the public and normal schools of his native town and at Eastman's Business College in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. At the age of twenty-one years he began teaching school and followed this vocation sixteen years, but during this period traveled in the West for three years as salesman for a wholesale house. In 1876 Mr. Lintner was elected a justice of the peace in Cocalico township; he filled the office three years and then removed to Millersville and engaged in the pension agency business, one he still follows, but he was for several years also engaged in drilling artesian wells, of which he sank a large number throughout the county.

In 1883 Daniel H. Lintner was again elected on the Republican ticket a justice of the peace, but this time at Millersville, and this office he has filled in a most satisfactory manner up to the present time. A civil engineer likewise by profession, Mr. Lintner has done a great deal of work in this line, especially in the laying out of roads in Lancaster county.

The marriage of Daniel H. Lintner took place in 1880 to Miss Kate A. Windolph, daughter of Joseph Windolph, deceased, of Marietta, Lancaster county, and to this union have come four children, viz.: Edwin W., a pharmacist in Philadelphia; Minnie; Joseph W.; and Herbert W., who died at the age of four years.

ANDREW CURTIN OBER, a retired hotel man, was born in Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa., May 8, 1862, and is a son of the Hon. Michael and Harriet (Weaver) Ober, of Conoy township.

The elder Ober was in his active years a very prominent man in his part of the county, who rose by his own industry and hard work to a leading position. Beginning life as a wheelwright, for years he was a capable and popular schoolmaster, and spent his last days on a small farm in the township of Mt. Joy, where he died Aug. 25, 1872, at the age of forty-six years. An active Republican, he took part in the formative work of the party organization, and was a member of the House of Representatives in 1858. His remains were interred in Mt. Tunnel cemetery, of which he was the founder. Mrs. Harriet Weaver Ober who was born Sept. 10, 1829, is still living and has her home in Elizabethtown, where she is a member of and a worker in the Lutheran Church. The children of Michael and Harriet Ober were as follows: (1) Daniel, who died at the early age of fourteen years; (2) John, who was a school teacher, and died at the age of thirty-seven years. Before his death, Dec. 22, 1891, he had become cashier of the National Bank of Elizabethtown; (3) Anna, who is the wife of W. A. Morning, a school teacher of Elizabethtown; (4) Henry, who passed away in his twenty-second year, while still a student; he was a young man of brilliant prospects and high character; (5) Abraham L., who is a saddler of Creston, Ohio; (6) Andrew C.; (7) Christian, who is the funeral director of the Middletown Furniture Company of Middletown, Pa.; (8) Kate, who is the wife of Frank Dissinger, a blacksmith of Elizabethtown, of the firm of Witmer & Dissinger.

Andrew Curtin Ober was married in Elizabethtown, Sept. 8, 1885, to Alice Miller, and became by this union the father of two children: Daniel M. and Anna, both of whom are living with their father. Mrs. Alice (Miller) Ober, who was born Aug. 25, 1867, died in 1892, at the age of twenty-five years, and was buried in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. She was the daughter of Daniel and Anna (Hess) Miller, both of Lancaster county, neither of whom is now living. Mr. Miller at the time of his death was engaged in the hotel business. Mrs. Miller died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Singer, in Elizabethtown.

Andrew Curtin Ober remained on the farm with his parents during the first twelve years of his life, and spent the ensuing ten years at the shoemaking trade in Elizabethtown, where he established a shop for himself when he was twenty-two years old. In this business he was very successful and continued in it until 1892, when in company with his father-in-law Mr. Miller, he took charge of the "Central Hotel" in Elizabethtown. After the death of his partner Mr. Ober continued alone in the business until Dec. 1, 1900, when he sold the hotel and is now devoting himself to the care of his extensive real estate and other investments.

Mr. Ober takes much interest in fraternal societies in which he is very popular. He is a Mason, a member of the I. O. O. F., the K. of G. E., and the Mystic Chain. He is a member of the Fire Department, and in 1900 was elected to the Town Council. Mr. Ober is a man of fine character, and is much esteemed in the community in which he has passed his honest and upright life.

HENRY DINKS, a prosperous farmer residing in the vicinity of Millersville, Manor township, Lancaster county, is a native of Prussia, Germany, was born July 27, 1856, and is a son of Henry and Margaret (Waterman) Dinks.

When Henry Dinks was about eight years of age the family came to America and located in Lancaster county, Pa. The father engaged in farming near Rohrerstown, where he lived to within a few years of his death, when he retired to the vicinity of Millersville, and passed away Aug. 14, 1895. He was a member of the Reformed Church and in politics, a Republican. Mrs. Margaret Dinks is still living, the mother of four children, namely: Harman, an employe in a soap factory at Lancaster; Henry; Amelia, wife of Fred Kilkers of Lancaster City; and Hannah, married to Peter Marks, of the same place.

Henry Dinks until thirty-three years old lived on the home farm with his parents and then engaged in general farming on his own account; he owns a fine place of thirty-six acres, on which quarrying is also carried on, the product being largely crushed for macadamizing, while another part is used for building purposes.

On March 26, 1887, Henry Dinks married Miss Annie Kilcus, of Reading, Pa., and four children have resulted from this union: Harry, George, Freddie and Mary. In religion Mrs. Dinks is a member of the Lutheran Church and Mr. Dinks of the Reformed Church, while in politics the latter is a Republican.

J. F. McLAUGHLIN. Among the representative and progressive farmers of Lancaster county, Pa., is J. F. McLaughlin, of Oak Hill, Little Britain township, who was born Oct. 2, 1853, a son of Park S. and Sarah (Garswich) McLaughlin, and a grandson of James McLaughlin.

James McLaughlin, of Scotch-Irish descent, was born in 1779, and was an old settler of Harford county, living to the advanced age of ninety-seven. By occupation he was a millwright; during his early manhood he was noted for his great strength and he was active all his life. His family consisted of nine children: Theodore, James, Thomas, Joshua, Daniel, Mary, Annie, Elizabeth and Sarah, all of whom are deceased except Mary, now of Hartford, Conn., and Elizabeth, of Philadelphia.

Park S. McLaughlin was born July 6, 1811, and died May 11, 1896. By trade he was a millwright, and he and his estimable wife had these children: James, of Harrisburg, Pa.; William G., deceased; Mary, deceased; Theodore S., a farmer of Little Britain; Hannah, wife of George Day, of Little Britain township; J. F., our subject; Franklin S., of Britain; Laura, wife of Ezra Haye. The mother of this family was born in 1814, and died in 1896.

The early life of J. F. McLaughlin was similar to that of any country boy, working upon the farm in the summer and attending district school in winter. At the age of twenty-nine his attention was turned to patent medicine, and for sixteen years he successfully dealt in several well known remedies, in Philadelphia and Wilmington, Del. Upon coming to Oak Hill, Pa., he opened a general merchandise store and continued in that line until April, 1901, when he retired from business. At present he is one of the most extensive real estate owners in the township, possessing in addition to his comfortable home, some fine business property, which is used as a store; a bakery, with dwelling attached; a tin shop and a well-cultivated farm of forty acres. All of this is the result of his own unaided efforts, directed in channels calculated to carry him to prosperity. His attention is now directed towards farming; he takes a great interest in his farming property, which he is managing with the same energy and success which marked his other undertakings.

On Jan. 21, 1881, Mr. McLaughlin was married to Miss Annie S. Randall, of Mount Holly, N. J., who was born July 2, 1855. Three children were born of their marriage: Park W., born Oct. 25, 1883; Roy D., April 30, 1899; and Mary D., Dec. 6, 1900. In politics Mr. McLaughlin is a Democrat, and he and his family are members of the Presbyterian Church. While always an industrious man, Mr. McLaughlin has never been too busy to lend a helping hand to those less fortunate than himself, and he takes a deep interest in public affairs, although not an office seeker. In his family he is the beloved husband and considerate father, while throughout the neighborhood he is highly regarded for his many excellent traits of character, as well as for his business ability and the success he has attained.

LEWIS DILLER (deceased) was among the generation of men in Lancaster county who a few years ago passed away at a ripe old age, after a life of labor and success; men who were stalwart in body, in principle and achievement.

Lewis Diller deserves prominent mention. He was born in Earl township, near Laurelville, in 1808, and throughout life was a farmer and drover. His impulses were warm and generous toward his fellow men, and he was ever ready to assist the needy and distressed and to engage in any work for the public welfare. He married Sophrina Grabill, a native of West Earl township, the daughter of John Grabill, and to them were born a family of seven daughters and one son, namely: Catherine, widow of Michael Landis, a resident of Lancaster City; Sarah, wife of Jacob Herr of Bird-in Hand; Serena, widow of Abraham Hess of Lancaster City; Mary Ann, widow of Samuel Huber of Spring Garden, Pa.; Grabill, a sketch of whom appears below; Sophrina, who married Martin Bowman of Ephrata and is now deceased; Clementina, deceased wife of Martin Beech, of Farmersville; Emma L., wife of Harry P. Brackbill of Williamstown. Lewis Diller, the father, was a member of the Lutheran church. He died in 1887, mourned by a wide circle of friends. His worthy helpmeet died about 1883, aged seventy-six years.

GRABILL DILLER, only son of Lewis and Sophrina Diller, was born Dec. 19, 1843. He was reared on the farm and received his education in the common schools. Early in life he took charge of the home farm during his father's absence from home and after his marriage Grabill again assumed the management of the property for a short time, his father retiring from active life. A little later Grabill purchased a farm of seventy-five acres south of New Holland which he occupied for many years.

In 1864 Mr. Diller enlisted in Co. G, 195th P. V. I., under Capt. Philip L. Sprecher. He was one of the 100 day service men and was in the Virginia campaign, being in repeated skirmishes with Mosby's men. He made a good record as a soldier, just as his record as a citizen of Lancaster has ever been good.

Mr. Diller married Jan. 26, 1880, Miss Naomi A. Brackbill, daughter of Henry Brackbill of Leaman Place. Mr. and Mrs. Diller had two children: Frances B., born March 17, 1886, and died Sept. 18, 1886; and Earl B., born Oct. 26, 1887, and died Jan. 24, 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Diller are members of the German Reformed Church at Rawlinsville. For three years Mr. Diller was a deacon of the church, then resigned because of the distance of his residence from the church.

In the spring of 1892 Mr. Diller retired from active life, removing to Paradise village, where he purchased a pleasant home and where he has since resided in quiet and comfort. He has been one of Lancaster county's leading and honorable citizens, ever holding the confidence and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances. Affable and genial in manner, kind and courteous towards his fellow men, he has won hosts of friends.

GEORGE F. WAGNER, a shoe merchant of Elizabethtown, where he also does an extensive making and repairing business, was born in Newville, West Donegal township, March 27, 1833.

Mr. Wagner's parents were Jacob and Susan (Keller) Wagner, both natives of Lancaster county, where they spent their lives, dying in Elizabethtown. The father, who was a shoemaker, died in 1855 at the age of forty-four years. His widow, who made her home with her son, George F., died in 1877, at the age of seventy-one years. Her remains are resting in the Lutheran cemetery at Elizabethtown. Both Mr. Wagner and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church.

After the death of Mr. Wagner his widow married a second time, becoming Mrs. Barhart McAlister. George F. was the only child of the first marriage; to the second were born: John, deceased; Catherine, deceased, married William Bartells; Mary, married and living in Philadelphia; Jacob, of Highspire. The paternal grandparents of George F. Wagner came from Germany.

George F. Wagner, whose name appears at the opening of this article has been three times married, the first time being Jan. 11, 1855, to Miss Mollie Burns, by whom he had the following children:

(1) William H., married Ella Witmer, has one daughter, and is a shoemaker in West Donegal township; (2) John W., a traveling salesman, married Catherine M. Long, and is the father of six children; (3) George W., a produce merchant of Elizabethtown, Pa.; (4) Lillie A. is married and has two children.

Mrs. Mollie (Burns) Wagner, who was born in Mt. Joy township, in 1832, died in 1863, and was buried in Mt. Tunnel cemetery. She was a daughter of William Burns, of Lancaster county.

Mr. Wagner was married in Maytown in 1865, to Miss Barbara Klugh, a school teacher. She died in 1882 at the age of thirty-nine years. She was born in York county, and was a daughter of Frederick Klugh.

The third marriage of Mr. Wagner occurred in 1884, in Conoy township, when he was united to Miss Matilda Beerbauer, who was born in York county. She was a daughter of Daniel Beerbauer, a farmer, and a native of Lancaster county. Mr. Wagner has eleven grandchildren.

Mr. Wagner remained with his parents until he reached the age of fourteen, when he began an apprenticeship of five years at the shoemaking trade in Elizabethtown with David Hornaviotts. Completing this term of preparation he followed his trade as a journeyman for two years, and then spent three months as a book canvasser. His next move was to open a custom shoe shop at Mechanicsburg, where he was in business with John Gosh a year. In Elizabethtown he carried on a shoe store four years, and for a year was engaged with Matthias Brinser in the manufacture of shoes, at the end of that time retiring in favor of his partner, and establishing himself in an independent location, where he has continued alone in business to the present time.

Mr. Wagner has won a very enviable standing in the good opinion of the people of Elizabethtown, and has served as school director for three terms. He and his wife are members of the Church of God, and he is a Republican.

CYRUS ROYER (deceased). Tracing the honored family of Royer as far back as 1720, we find that in that year Sebastian Royer came to America to find a new home, and brought with him his four sons. The first settlement was made by the family on the bank of a fordable river, and hence came the name of the settlement which grew up in that part of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and which is now a village of note known as Royersford. Two of the sons of Sebastian settled there permanently, but the father seems to have been of more roving disposition, and with his two younger sons went on into Lancaster county and settled in what was Elizabeth township, and on the site of the present village of Brickerville. Here Sebastian died, after settling his son Amos, who was the youngest, on a farm in what was then Cocalico township, but now Ephrata.

Amos Royer had four sons, and Philip, the second son of Amos, had also four sons—Abraham, Jonathan, Joseph and Benjamin. Abraham died in Lancaster city, at an advanced age. In early life he was a farmer, and was twice married, rearing a family by the first marriage; Jonathan died at an advanced age in Leacock township, and had also followed farming and reared a family of several children; Benjamin was a farmer like his brothers, and died in Manheim township, leaving two sons.

Joseph Royer, the third son of Philip, was the grandfather of Cyrus Royer of this biography, and was born, reared and passed away at the old homestead in Manheim township, about one mile northeast of Neffsville. His years had been extended to eighty-seven, his death occurring in 1853. Joseph Royer married Veronica Sworr, and they had a family of seven children: John, the father of Cyrus Royer; Joseph, the father of Joseph Royer, a confectioner of Lancaster; Daniel, a farmer for many years on the old homestead, who died in middle age; Mary, who married John Pfautz, of Warwick township and reared a family of children; Veronica, married Daniel Royer, of Lebanon county; Anna, married Abraham Zug, of Lebanon county; and Elizabeth, married Emanuel Balingier, whose home was near Lititz, in Warwick township.

John Royer was born April 2, 1799, and died in June, 1870. His life was devoted to farming and like his father, he owned much land and stock and was considered one of the most substantial citizens of the township. John Royer married Miss Esther Mohler, a daughter of John Mohler, of Ephrata township, who was born Oct. 13, 1800, and died in 1875. Their family numbered seven children: Jonas, born Dec. 24, 1821, died in 1879, a farmer of Lebanon county; Anna, born Oct. 24, 1827, married Martin Zitzer, of Ephrata, and died in 1894; Cyrus, born Jan. 21, 1829; Daniel, born Nov. 30, 1831, a retired farmer, living in Naperville, Ill.; Elizabeth, born Aug. 26, 1833, the widow of John Gipple, residing in Lititz; John, born Feb. 8, 1836, residing in Talmage, a retired farmer; and Henry, born June 16, 1840, a farmer of Lebanon county.

Although a member of a strictly agricultural family, for generations, Cyrus Royer developed tastes early in life for another career. His education was acquired in the common schools, but his ambitions reached out into the world, and he resolved to learn the woolen weaving business, as one which offered inducements for future success in the commercial world. At the age of sixteen, he left the old home and went to Paradise township, where he entered a woolen mill. He remained there for several years, or until he thoroughly understood all of the details; he was then engaged by the managers and remained with the mill for some time, later opening up a similar business of his own in the mill where he had learned his trade. Three years later he removed to Providence, in 1854 purchased the Huber Woolen mill in Providence township and successfully continued in this mill until 1872. At this date Mr. Royer rebuilt on a much larger scale, put in modern and improved machinery and conducted the business until 1893, when he retired from active life, his son assuming control. The output of this mill is woolen cloth and yarns. At the beginning, it was a custom mill, but later manufactured for the local trade. Mr. Royer devoted his attention largely to this business, but still found opportunity to oversee his land, some forty acres, in Providence township. During the whole course of his manufacturing business, Mr. Royer was able to make it profitable, and by his ability, energy and strict integrity, came to be regarded as one of the foremost men in Providence township.

The first marriage of Cyrus Royer was in 1853, to Miss Mary Hess, a daughter of Christian Hess, who was born in Paradise township; she died the year following her marriage, at the age of twenty-three. In 1854, Mr. Royer married Elizabeth Hess, a sister of his former wife, who died May 29, 1879, at the age of fifty-four years, having been the mother of seven children: (1) John, born Oct. 12, 1856, resides at Mt. Hope, in Delaware county, where he is a minister in the M. E. Church, a member of the Eastern Pennsylvania M. E. Conference, since 1885. He was educated in the common schools, later attended the Millersville Normal School, taught school for thirteen sessions, during vacations working in his father's mill, and studied theology at home, becoming self-reliant and proficient in his theological studies in this manner. He married Miss Mary Miller, and they have one son, Clement. (2) Martin, born July 12, 1858, married Miss Martha Miller, and conducts the farm and mill, in Providence township. (3) The third child was a son that died in infancy. (4) Maris, born Oct. 12, 1860, is a machinist, at Dayton, Ohio, connected with the National Cash Register Co.; he married Miss Mazie Snyder, and they have one son, Jacob. (5) Ann Elizabeth, born April 5, 1864, is the wife of Benjamin F. Miller, a minister in the M. E. Church, now located in Philadelphia; they have three children,—Ruth, Mary, and Esther. (6) Mary, born March 7, 1866, is the wife of William Schrader, of Washington, D. C.; they have three children,—Eugene, Leslie, and Willie. (7) Margaret, born Jan. 31, 1869, died Jan. 13, 1881. The third marriage of Mr. Royer was in January, 1894, to Miss Susann Neff, a daughter of Christian Neff, of East Lampeter township.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Royer were valued members of the German Baptist Church, which had in Mr. Royer one of its strong supporters, all of the family, for the past three generations having been connected with this church. Early in its history the Royer family was religiously connected with the Reformed and the Lutheran faith, but now they are united in the German Baptist. After a long, busy and useful life, Mr. Royer removed to Refton, in 1893, and there he and his estimable wife, surrounded by family and friends, enjoyed every comfort until his lamented death.

ADDISON S. FLOWERS. Among the well-known citizens of Mt. Joy, Pa., is Addison S. Flowers, who for many years has been connected with the lumber interests of that locality, was a member of the city council and a successful and energetic man of business.

Mr. Flowers was born in Rapho township, Lancaster county, Feb. 1, 1853, a son of Jacob and Harriet (Miller) Flowers, the former of Colebrook, Lebanon county, and the latter of Strasburg, this county. When seventeen years old, Jacob Flowers removed with his father to Manheim and from there to Mt. Joy in 1861. He enlisted in the 77th P. V. I. and served through three years of the Civil war. At the time of his death, in 1891, at the age of sixty-seven, he was a resident of Mt. Joy, and was associated with his son Addison in the lumber business. The father was interred in the Camp Hill cemetery in Florin. The beloved mother was born in 1829 and is residing in Mt. Joy. Both she and her husband connected themselves with the U. B. Church early in life. Their children were: Charles, who died at the age of four years; Addison S.; Maria, who died at the age of seven years; and Benjamin, who is a cabinet-maker and mechanic, in Quincy, Ill. The paternal grandfather, John Flowers was a native of Colebrook, came to Lancaster county in 1841 and took charge of a charcoal furnace. The maternal grandparents were Harry and Maria (Rohrer) Miller, of Strasburg, the former of whom was a plasterer engaged in business at Sporting Hill, in this county.

The early educational opportunities of Addison S. Flowers were limited, as he was reared on a farm and at the age of twelve years went into the mines in Chestnut Hill. At this laborious work he remained one and one-half years and then entered into a shop in Mt. Joy, to learn the trade of cabinet-making; he served three years under Henry Myers, and then went to Harrisburg, where he became thoroughly instructed in the trade of wood pattern making. It seems as if Mr. Flowers has a natural affinity for engaging in some kind of business connected with wood, for, upon his return to Mt. Joy, it was to open a lumber yard, and for eleven years, in association with his late father, the business was very successful. Upon the death of the latter, Mr. Flowers disposed of this yard to A. N. Cassel & Son, of Marietta, and has been the efficient manager for this firm ever since. Aside from this prosperous line, Mr. Flowers became interested in the culture of chestnuts and his specialty of Paragon chestnuts are known to the trade and the public over a wide extent of territory. He set out a twelve and one-half acre tract of land in chestnut trees at Wild Cat, in York county, and there he has erected a hotel and dancing pavilion and has otherwise fitted up the place as a delightful summer resort.

On March 9, 1875, occurred the marriage of Addison S. Flowers to Miss Mary E. Brown, of Harrisburg, Pa., and to this union have been born: May B., born Oct. 30, 1894; Gladius M., born June 30, 1896, both interesting children. Mrs. Flowers is a native of Womelsdorf, Berks Co., Pa., a daughter of Neil U. and Caroline (Moyer) Brown, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of Womelsdorf. Mr. Brown had resided in the United States almost all of his life, as he was brought here by his parents when but fifteen months old. His death was in Lebanon, where he was a well-known brick manufacturer.

Mr. Flowers has taken a prominent position in civic affairs, and for several years, from 1895 was a member of the council. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and has been a member of the county committee. For many years he has taken much interest in the I. O. O. F. and belongs to both subordinate lodge and encampment. Thoroughly alive to the best interests of the community, Mr. Flowers is a representative citizen who enjoys the esteem of the public in a marked degree.

ALFRED B. GINGRICH, a prosperous and leading general farmer of West Donegal township, was born near Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa., Jan. 15, 1862, a son of John and Rosanna (Bauchman) Gingrich, natives of Dauphin and Lebanon counties, respectively. His parents moved to the present home of our subject in 1865, and for many years were prominent people in the township. The father, who died March 11, 1895, at the age of sixty-one years, served as auditor of the township a number of years, and held the confidence of the community to an unusual extent. His wife died in 1875, at the age of thirty-seven years. They had born to them the following children: Emeline, who married M. E. Good, a farmer in West Donegal township; Webster, a farmer in Lancaster county; John, deceased; Miss Rosanna, who is making her home with an uncle in Lebanon county; Elmira, wife of Harry Hershey, of Scranton, Pa.; Lizzie A., who married E. N. Gish, a carpenter, and resides in Elizabethtown; and Naomi, who died young.

Henry Gingrich, the paternal grandfather of Alfred B., was born in Dauphin county, and followed farming as his life business. Henry Bauchman, the maternal grandfather of A. B. Gingrich, was a native farmer in Lebanon county.

In December, 1896, Alfred B. Gingrich was married in Florin, Pa., to Elizabeth Brandt, who was born in East Donegal township, a daughter of Henry and Leah (Hershey) Brandt, both natives of Lancaster county, born in 1842 and 1843, respectively. They now reside in East Donegal township, where the father is a farmer. Both are members of the River Brethren Church. Besides Mrs. Gingrich, Mr. and Mrs. Brandt had the following children:

Alice, wife of Amos Good, of Elizabethtown; Sarah, deceased; Ella, who married Joseph R. Good, and is with her parents in East Donegal township; Anna, wife of Albert Walters, of Florin, Pa.; Miss Susan, at home single; and Mary and John, deceased. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Gingrich were David and Elizabeth (Stehman) Brandt, both natives of Lancaster county, as were also her maternal grandparents, John and Elizabeth (Erb) Hershey. To Mr. and Mrs. Gingrich have come two sons, Henry M. and John E.

Alfred B. Gingrich remained under the parental roof until he reached the age of twenty-two years, when he went to Monticello, Ind., where he did carting for a year, and then moved on to Chicago, where he secured a position as special policeman in the "Hotel Brevoort," holding this for some three and a half years, and then taking charge of the cigar stand of the hotel. The death of his father compelled him to give up his work in Chicago, and to return home that he might attend to the family business. The farm now belongs to Alfred B. and his brother Webster.

Mr. Gingrich is a Republican, and is one of the prominent and thrifty young men of the day. He was reared in the River Brethren Church, of which his parents were faithful devoted adherents. Like them he is an upright and honorable man in all his dealings, and he makes his word as good as a bond.

GEORGE WELK (deceased) was one of the worthy German emigrants who in the earlier forties settled in Lancaster county and by a life of industry, thrift and integrity acquired a modest competence and established an honored name throughout the community.

George Welk (1) was born in Germany about 1818 and at the age of twenty-four came to America. He located in East Lampeter township about two miles south of Lancaster City, where he engaged in farm work continuously until 1852. In that year he purchased a little property of eleven acres in Strasburg township about one mile south of Strasburg, where he spent the remainder of his life, engaging in day work in the neighborhood in addition to farming his own few acres. He married Miss Louisa Lesner, who was born in Germany and who came to this country in 1836, when only four years of age.

George Welk (1) was a strong Republican in politics. In his earlier years he was a member of the Lutheran church but later in life he affiliated with the Reformed Mennonite Church. He was a progressive citizen and most highly esteemed for his sterling character. He died in 1893 aged seventy-five years and his widow, who was born in 1832 still survives. To George and Louisa Welk were born eight children, as follows: George, a sketch of whom appears below; Amos, who died in childhood; Henry, a mechanic, who died in Lancaster township, leaving two children; Levi, who died unmarried in Strasburg township; Mariah, wife of Harvey Brookill of West Lampeter township; Elias, a farmer of East Lampeter; Ellen, wife of Leonard Brobst of Bart township; and Benjamin, a farmer residing in Strasburg township.

GEORGE WELK (2), the eldest child of George and Louisa Welk, was born Dec. 5, 1848, and was reared to farm life, receiving his education in the common schools of Strasburg township. When he attained his majority he began life for himself by leasing on shares a farm in Strasburg township. This he continued to operate successfully for eight years, then lived for two years in Manor township. Returning to Strasburg he again engaged there in farming for about eight years and in 1889 removed to the farm of ninety-two and half acres, located three miles east of Strasburg, which he has since occupied and operated. In addition he has operated continuously during the past ten years a threshing machine, covering Paradise, Strasburg and a part of Leacock township. He has a thoroughly equipped modern threshing outfit and has been eminently successful in that branch of farm work.

George Welk (2) married in 1870 Miss Sarah Keene, daughter of Benjamin Keene of Strasburg township. Their marriage has been blessed with seven children, as follows: Ida, wife of Samuel Apler of Leacock township, and mother of one son, Albert; Morris, at home; Harvey, who married Miss Lucy Rice, has three children,—Meta, Edna and Joseph, and resides in Strasburg township; Louisa, wife of George W. Leaman, of Bart township; John, who died at the age of eleven years; and Maud and Sally, at home.

In politics George Welk is a stanch Republican. He has served as township clerk and is regarded as one of the progressive and public spirited citizens of the township. The family are highly respected and esteemed by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

GEORGE H. HARTMAN, whose death on Oct. 6, 1886, when he was aged fifty-seven years, removed from Lancaster one of her well known business men and popular citizens, was one of those men whose moral and upright lives are an inspiration to their associates. His entire life had been passed in this county, except for a short sojourn in Iowa, and in his early manhood he learned the coach maker's trade with his father, mention of whom is made in the sketch of J. I. Hartman, to be found elsewhere. He remained under his father until his marriage, when he engaged in the livery business. At the end of four years, he decided to try new scenes and employment, and went to Muscatine, Iowa, where for two years he operated a farm. Old ties proved too strong to break and he returned to Lancaster, and opened up a brick yard on the Harrisburg pike, which he successfully conducted for two years, when he had an opportunity to purchase again the livery stable he had owned prior to his removal West. This proved his last change, and in partnership with his son, Edward, he continued in the livery business up to the time of his death. He also engaged to a large extent as a real estate dealer, and bought and sold many valuable tracts of land in Lancaster and vicinity. In his religious belief he was an Episcopalian, and was a member of St. John's parish, this city. He gave freely of his substance to the needy, and was most charitable to the faults of others. Politically he was an ardent Republican, but often in local affairs he voted independent of party. Honest in all things, he was a man whom the public instinctively trusted, and to whom many turned for advice in times of trouble.

In Lebanon, Pa., by the Rev. Mr. Crotel, George H. Hartman was united in marriage with Anna M. Bender, who was born in Lancaster, a daughter of Reuben A. and Maria (Rohrer) Bender. The following children blessed this union: Thomas B., superintendent of the Telephone Company, at Westchester, Pa.; Mary E., who married Joseph H. Rathfon, city treasurer of Lancaster; William H., superintendent of the Lancaster Independent Telephone Co., and who married Virginia Mitchell, of Kentucky; Jane O., who married Howard C. Wood, who is engaged in the marble monument business in Lansdowne, Pa.; Edward A., in the employ of the Telephone Co., at Lancaster, who married Emma Gruel; and Anna S., who married Walter C. Herr, jewelry manufacturer of Lancaster.

Reuben A. Bender, father of Mrs. Hartman, was a son of Reuben and Magdalena (Hilderbrandt) Bender, of Swiss extraction, of whom the former was a prominent farmer near New Holland, Pa. Reuben A. Bender was a successful coach manufacturer, in Lancaster, but in 1857 removed to Harrisburg, where he lived retired, until his death in 1858, at the age of sixty years. His wife died in 1857, aged fifty-eight years, and both rest in Harrisburg cemetery. They were faithful members of the Lutheran Church. In their family were the following children: George H., a retired machinist in Philadelphia, Pa.; Reuben A., who died young; John, of Harrisburg, now retired; Elizabeth, widow of John Lautz, a merchant of Muscatine, Iowa; and Anna M., Mrs. Hartman.

JOHN B. ESHBACH (deceased), a most worthy and influential citizen in his day, was born in Lancaster township, Lancaster county, in 1815, was a son of Christian and Mary (Brunt) Eshbach, and was a most successful farmer. John B. Eshbach began operations on rented land in Lancaster township, the farm then containing 113 acres, and after occupying it as a tenant for several years, purchased the place and occupied it until he was sixty-three years old, and then passed the property over to his son, Benjamin B. John B. however, had for some years owned a tract of ninety-four acres in Manor township, adjacent to Millersville, which tract had been in the Eshbach family a very long time. To this tract John B. added twenty-four acres, and having disposed of the Lancaster township farm to Benjamin, erected a dwelling in Manor township and resided there until his death, which occurred May 16, 1898, in the Mennonite faith.

John B. Eshbach first married Susannah, a daughter of John Brubaker, of Rohrerstown, but no children came to this union. The second marriage of John B. Eshbach was with Barbara Brubaker, and to this marriage were born seven children, viz.: Mary, deceased wife of Abraham Witmer, of Manor township; Benjamin B., on the old homestead in Lancaster township; Susan, wife of Josiah Good, of Marticville; Barbara, unmarried, and living in Millersville; Annie, married to John Hershey, of Petersburg, Pa.; Mattie, also of Millersville and unmarried; and John B., on the home place at Millersville.

John B. Eshbach, son of the deceased John B., was born Jan. 14, 1865, on his present farm and received the usual public school education. At twenty-one years of age he took charge of the place and managed it until his father's death, then took entire possession and has since conducted general farming most successfully, now owning 118 acres.

John B. Eshbach was united in marriage in 1886 to Miss Emma Herr, daughter of Jacob B. Herr, of New Danville, and this marriage has been blessed with three children, namely, Christine H., Edgar H., and Walter H. Mr. and Mrs. Eshbach are members of the Mennonite Church and socially hold an excellent standing.

MILTON L. BARE, a prominent and successful farmer of Upper Leacock township, was born in Leacock township, July 18, 1857, a son of Wayne and Mary (Landis) Bare, of East Lampeter township.

Until he reached his majority, Milton L. Bare remained with his father, attending school and assisting in the farm work. After marriage he removed to his present fine farm. Mr. Bare was married Dec. 11, 1883, in Salisbury township, to Miss Ida E. Worst, who was born on her old family homestead Feb. 2, 1858. She was the estimable daughter of Samuel and Anna (Kertz) Worst of Salisbury township, where the former still resides, the latter having died in February, 1896, at the age of sixty-seven years. Until 1898 Mr. Worst was a farmer and drover, but at that date he retired from active life to enjoy the comforts his former industry had provided. He was born in 1824. He has held a number of the offices in his locality, serving as school director for many years and also as supervisor.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Worst were: Annamary, who married Frank Seldonridge, a hotel proprietor of Salisbury township; Ida E., Mrs. Bare; John B., deceased; Catherine A., who married J. Milton Hershey, of "Keys Hotel," at Intercourse, Pa.; Barbara E., who married Jacob A. Stauffer, and lives on the old Salisbury township farm; Martha E., who married Isaac Eby, a farmer of Salisbury; Susan A., who married Prof. Amos A. Eby, a teacher of Witmer, Pa.; Fred S., a farmer on the old homestead; and Laura L., who resides with her sister, Mrs. Bare. The parents were members of the Presbyterian Church and the mother lies buried in Pequea township in the old Presbyterian churchyard.

Mr. Bare has long been a prominent member of the Republican party of his locality, taking an active and intelligent interest in public affairs. From 1892 to 1895 he most efficiently served as school director. Both he and his wife are valued members of the Presbyterian Church of Leacock, to which he is a liberal contributor. Mr. Bare is highly respected in his county and is ranked among its representative men.

JOHN J. GOOD, an old and honored citizen of Conestoga Center, is the son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Deitrick) Good.

The great-grandfather, Peter Good, came from Germany and settled in Martic township, Lancaster county. His son John was the grandfather of the present John J. Good. John, the grandfather, was born and spent most of his life in what is now Pequea, but was then known as Conestoga, township. He lived to an advanced age, and the latter part of his life resided in Martic township. He was a miller and distiller for many years but latterly took up farming. He was successful and at one time owned considerable property. He took a deep interest in public affairs and was best known by the title of 'Squire Good, having been a justice of the peace. In politics he was a Whig. He was three times married, first to Miss Kreiter, by whom he had four sons and a daughter: Christian; Jacob; John; Daniel; and Barbara, who was first married to Tobias Deitrick and afterward to Benjamin Kauffman. 'Squire Good married twice after the death of his first wife but had no issue by either.

Daniel Good, father of John J., was born in Conestoga township, now Pequea township, in 1804, and died in 1864. His first venture was that of farming but he was afterward engaged in the milling and distilling business. He continued in this for a number of years, when he again went back to farming, the most of his time being spent in Martic township. He also was a Whig in politics and was a man of more than ordinary capacity. He served as a member of the school board and for three years was a county commissioner; he was an organizer, stockholder and director of the Inland Insurance and Deposit Company, of Lancaster, was progressive, and decidedly a man in advance of the times. He married Miss Elizabeth Deitrick, a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Stehman) Deitrick. She was born in Pequea township near West Willow in 1808 and died in 1878. He died in Marticville. They had a family of nine children: John J.; Elizabeth, who died in childhood; Henry, deceased, a soldier in the Civil war; Mary, wife of Benjamin Mylin, of West Lampeter township; Daniel D., of Lancaster; Catherine, wife of David Huber, of Rawlinsville; Maris and Adam, twins, deceased; and Aaron, unmarried, of Marticville. The parents were members of the Lutheran Church.

John J. Good was born in Martic township, Oct. 4, 1829, and was educated in the public schools. He remained at home until he was twenty-seven years old, when he took a farm of 185 acres in Martic township, purchased of his father. Here he lived from 1856 until 1900, when he retired from active labor and removed to Conestoga Center, where he still resides. Through an active career he has confined his attention almost wholly to farming and lime burning. He is a broad-minded man, public-spirited and ever ready to assist with word or purse meritorious affairs, either of a public or private nature. He has frequently been called to positions of honor by his fellow-citizens and while still a young man was elected supervisor of Martic township. Later he served on the school board for three years, and in 1881 was elected treasurer of Lancaster county, filling that office with honor for three years.

On March 3, 1857, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Mylin, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Hess) Mylin. She was born in West Lampeter township, Oct. 6, 1836. Mr. and Mrs. Good are the parents of eleven children: Daniel M., born in 1857, who died June 14, 1900, leaving a widow; Maris M., born Jan. 15, 1860, who died March 29, 1860; Emma E., born Sept. 12, 1861, wife of Martin Bertsfield, of Lancaster; Ezra M., June 11, 1863, residing in Millersville, a stock and tobacco dealer; Henry M., Sept. 22, 1864, a farmer in Conestoga township; John S., Aug. 12, 1866, who died Feb. 12, 1868; Abraham M., June 13, 1870, who died Aug. 25, 1870; Amelia F., July 20, 1871, wife of Albert Kready, of Manor township; Ida, Oct. 31, 1876, at home; Mary E., March 6, 1878, wife of Ephraim Rohrer, of Manor township; Clara, Feb. 18, 1874, wife of Aldus Charles, of Pequea township. Mr. and Mrs. Good, together with their daughters, are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Good has been a deacon for the past five years and takes a great interest in church work.

GEORGE W. WARFEL was born in the house where he still resides, in Conestoga township, about one-half mile west of Martic forge, March 3, 1839. He is a son of Christian Warfel, born in 1802 near the place where George now lives.

Christian Warfel, the father, was a carpenter by trade but engaged in farming part of the time. He was identified with the Republican party, took an active part in politics and was a director of the poor for two sessions. He was a member of the Old Mennonite Church during the latter part of his life. He married Miss Barbara Myers, of Lampeter township, and the couple had two children: Henry, deceased; and George W., subject of this sketch. George W. Warfel was the grandson of Jacob and Polly Warfel, who were also both born in Conestoga township, and were the parents of five children: George, deceased; Christian, father of the present George W.; Paul, of whom nothing has been known for years; Jacob, deceased; and Betsey, wife of Joseph Eleacher, both deceased.

George W. Warfel has devoted his life to farming on the same place that knew him as an infant. He is a Republican in politics, but has never taken any active part. He married Miss Catherine Harnish, daughter of James Harnish, of Pequea township, Nov. 2, 1862. They are the parents of the following children, all of whom are living: Adeline, wife of Ezra Eshleman; Susan H., wife of Abraham Hess; George, at home; Catherine, wife of John Good; Barbara, wife of Frank Rice, who lives with his father-in-law, Mr. Warfel, and farms the place.

Mr. Warfel was educated in the public schools of the county. Although he has devoted much of his time to agriculture he is a well-informed and public-spirited man, always ready and willing to assist any project which has for its end the bettering of society. The family is well and favorably known in the township and enjoys the esteem of a wide circle of friends.

GEORGE WASHINGTON HICKS. Among the prominent and leading citizens of Maytown, Pa., is George Washington Hicks, a retired merchant and a justice of the peace since 1885. He was born in Linglestown, Dauphin county, Nov. 7, 1851, a son of Jacob and Christianna (Marberger) Hicks, natives of Dauphin and Schuylkill counties, respectively, although both died in Dauphin county.

Jacob Hicks was a farmer, and for twenty-five years a justice of the peace, and his death occurred in Dauphin county, in 1874, at the age of seventy-four. His widow survived until 1880. The family born to Jacob Hicks and wife numbered nine members, and were: Conrad, who was a teacher, and died at the age of twenty-seven; George, who died in infancy; John, who died at the age of forty-one; Amos, who died at the age of forty-two; George W.; William, a dairyman of Penn Brook, Pa.; J. Frank, a farmer and hotel-keeper in Dauphin county; Mary, deceased, who married Benjamin Albright; and Christiann, deceased, who married Dr. E. B. Smith, a dentist, in Harrisburg. The paternal grandfather was Conrad Hicks, a native of Dauphin county, and the maternal grandfather was Samuel Marberger, of Schuylkill county.

Until he was sixteen years old, George W. Hicks remained on the farm. His primary education had been obtained in the district schools, and he then became a student in Witmer's Academy at Palmyra, going from there to the State Normal School at Millersville, thus fitting himself very thoroughly for the profession of teaching, which he followed for one term in Schuylkill county, and nine terms in Dauphin county, and then went to Orwigsburg, in the former county, where he opened up a livery business, which he closed up eighteen months later, to come to Maytown, where, in 1881, he started in the mercantile business, and for twelve years was one of the leading merchants of the place and a prominent man of affairs. Since 1885 he has been a justice of the peace, his services giving such universal satisfaction that he has been retained in the office ever since.

On Nov. 2, 1881, in Maytown Mr. Hicks was married to Miss Anna L. Markley, a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families in Lancaster county. The children of this union are: Charles C. and Hettie L. Mrs. Hicks was born in the present family residence, in Maytown, a daughter of the late John and Hettie L. (Fowler) Markley.

John Markley was born in Strasburg, July 14, 1814, and passed out of life on Nov. 18, 1890, in the house where his widow now resides, a stone mansion in Maytown, and was buried in the Reformed cemetery, in that place. His parents were Jacob and Barbara Markley, natives of Germany who settled in Strasburg many years ago, and made that city their permanent home, following an agricultural life, where the former died in 1822. The children born to Jacob and Barbara Markley were: Elizabeth, Barbara, Harriet, Susan, Benjamin, Jacob, John and George, all of them now passed away.

On July 18, 1839, John Markley married Hettie L. Fowler, and their children were: Benjamin H., who resides with his mother; Eveline, deceased, who married Henry Honseal; Harriet, who resides in Philadelphia, the widow of John K. Brown; John L., who married Anna Miller, of Maytown; Helen, who married Abraham Sloat, of Maytown; Anna L., wife of Mr. Hicks; and Ray, who married Kate Hollinger. Until 1839, John Markley engaged in farming in his native locality, and then located in Maytown, where he assisted his brother for a few years, but then began peddling notions until 1860, which prepared him for the mercantile business, which he then opened, and in which he engaged until within two years of his death. For many years he was a well-known figure in the commercial life of this community. His religious connection was with the Church of God.

Mrs. Hettie L. (Fowler) Markley was born in Maytown, May 12, 1818, a daughter of John and Hettie (Fowler) Fowler, of Strasburg, the former of whom moved to Maytown when still a young man, and as he was gifted in many ways, he followed various occupations, but was particularly successful as an architect and drew many of the plans which were used in the building of the bridges in this locality. His death occurred in 1862, at the age of eighty, and the mother in 1859, at the age of seventy-three, and both were buried in the Reformed cemetery in Maytown. The only child of this marriage was Hettie L. The paternal grandfather was John Fowler, a native of England, who died in Marietta; and the maternal grandfather was also John Fowler, of England, although there was no relationship.

During his busy life in Maytown, Mr. Hicks has gained the respect of this neighborhood. He is a valued member of the Masonic order. In his religious connection he belongs to the Reformed Church.

GEORGE N. LEFEVER has for over forty years owned and occupied the beautiful farm in West Lampeter township which he still conducts. The highly improved condition of this tract, made so by his own efforts, would alone entitle him to a place among the most progressive and intelligent agriculturists of his section.

It is a pleasure to record that such a creditable representative of Lancaster county's farming interests is one of her own sons, Mr. Lefever having been born July 25, 1829, at Millport, youngest son of John and Magdalena (Neff) Lefever. He had a twin sister, Barbara. Mr. Lefever remained under the parental roof until the death of his father, in 1856, and the following year (1857) was married to Miss Annie Landis, daughter of Benjamin Landis. Their first home was on a fifteen acre plot, now the property of Frank Landis, and in 1860 Mr. Lefever purchased his present farm, in West Lampeter township. The place was entirely unimproved, but it cost him $165 per acre. A great transformation has taken place during the intervening years, our subject having continued to improve the property until now it would be difficult indeed to name a convenience missing on his farm. His buildings, the residence of brick, and large frame barn have been built with much care and at a considerable cost. From his home can be had a splendid view of Lancaster City and of a wide scope of country, embracing the banks and valley of the Conestoga.

George N. Lefever and his wife are the parents of the following children: Amos married Annie Groff, and they have eight children; Benjamin married Salinda Shirk, they have one son; Mary is now Mrs. Rohrer; Lizzie; Landis is deceased; John, Aaron and Abraham are in Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Lefever are members of the Old Mennonite Church.

DAVID B. ESHELMAN, a prosperous general farmer in Mt. Joy township, Lancaster county, was born in Hanover township, Dauphin county, Pa., Aug. 20, 1865, a son of Daniel and Sarah (Basore) Eshelman, of Lancaster and Dauphin counties, respectively.

Daniel Eshelman, the father, was born in 1837, and is a farmer in Dauphin county, whither he moved with his parents, Samuel and Elizabeth (Hoover) Eshelman, when he was about twelve years old. Samuel Eshelman was a carpenter in early life, but his last years were passed in farming, and he died in 1875, aged seventy-one; his wife died in 1899, aged ninety-two. They were members of the Dunkard Church. Daniel Eshelman married Sarah Basore, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Etter) Basore, the former of who died in 1892, aged eighty-five, and the latter in 1873, at the age of sixty-five.

David B. Eshelman remained a home until he was eighteen, when he began working for the neighboring farmers. He continued at this until 1893, when he came to his present farm, which he purchased from the Bishop estate.

On Sept. 13, 1888, in Elizabethtown, Mr. Eshelman was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie Bishop, who was born in Dauphin county, Sept. 29, 1868, a daughter of David and Barbara (Good) Bishop. To this union were born children as follows: Ada B., deceased; Anna B.; Clayton H.; Simon B., deceased; L. May; Harvey B.; and Earl B.

David Bishop was born in 1836, in Dauphin county, and is now living retired at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Eshelman. His wife Barbara Good, born May 13, 1843, died in 1884, and was buried in Geyer cemetery in Dauphin county. Their children were: Simon, a photographer in West Virginia; Joseph, a machinist in Elizabethtown; Barbara, wife of Harry Lane, a farmer in Mt. Joy township; David, a farmer in Dauphin county; Anna, residing with Mrs. Eshelman; and Lizzie, who became Mrs. Eshelman. The grandparents of Mrs. Eshelman were Joseph and Elizabeth (Gingrich) Bishop and Joseph and Barbara (Ebersole) Good, all farming people of Lancaster county.

In his political faith David B. Eshelman is a Republican. In 1901 he was elected school director, and he has ever been interested in the cause of education. He belongs to Zion Children's Church.

HARRY J. STEHMAN, one of the leading farmers and dairymen of Lancaster township, is a worthy representative of one of the old and honored families of Manor township, where his father, H. H. Stehman, was born. The latter was widely known in the milling business which he followed there until 1894, at which time he retired from business life and now resides in Millersville. For a number of years Mr. Stehman was a local minister in the United Brethren Church, beloved and respected by the whole community. The marriage of Rev. H. H. Stehman was to Miss Barbara Herr, and the five children of this marriage are: Olive, who is the wife of C. E. Brubaker; Alice, who is the wife of Aldus Barr, of Manor township; Annie, who is the wife of Jonas Minich, of East Hempfield township; Isaiah D., who is a miller in Mt. Joy; and Harry J., of this sketch.

Harry J. Stehman was born in Manor township, Dec. 8, 1861, and was reared on the home farm, obtaining his primary education in the public schools. This was supplemented by a course in the State Normal School in Millersville, from which he graduated. Mr. Stehman then took a commercial course in the Lebanon Valley College, returning then to take charge of the home farm, his superior education enabling him to follow intelligent methods in the development of its best resources. For a period of seven years, succeeding his marriage, Mr. Stehman farmed for himself, with success, at the close of this period moving to Millersville and engaging in the milk business. For nine years he continued in this very profitable business, and then located on the farm where he now resides. This compact and fertile tract comprises forty acres, and is situated about two miles southwest of Lancaster City.

The marriage of Mr. Stehman was to Miss Ida Krotwell, and eight children have been born to this union: Blanche N., Annie T., Alice V., Walter K., Edward H., Paul K., Ida H. and Harry H., all still remaining at home, a happy, united family. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stehman are consistent members of the Methodist Church, of Millersville, Mr. Stehman being one of the stewards, and one of the liberal supporters of its charitable and benevolent enterprises. Mr. Stehman is one of the most intelligent, progressive and public-spirited citizens of his locality, and is identified with all enterprises which promise to be of benefit to his township or county, and stands high in public esteem.

DANIEL MCKILLIPS HERSHEY is a prominent young business man of Lancaster, now engaged in the grain and feed trade at No. 430 East Mifflin street.

Benjamin H. Hershey, the grandfather of Daniel M., was a farmer at Leaman Place, and his father came from Switzerland. They were Old Mennonites and were among the first settlers of that faith in Lancaster county.

Benjamin L. Hershey, son of Benjamin H., was a merchant nearly all his life, and had his business in the eastern part of the county nearly all his life. He died on his farm near Gordonville, May 12, 1889. His wife, Elizabeth McKillips, was a daughter of Daniel McKillips, a farmer in the eastern part of the county. To their union were born the following family: Daniel McKillips; Elam; Susan E., wife of Amos B. Myers, a farmer of Groffdale; and Anna E., unmarried and at home with her mother.

Daniel McKillips Hershey was educated in the public schools of the district in which he was reared. At the age of eighteen years his schooling was ended, and he then devoted all his time to his father's farm. At the age of twenty-one he took that place on shares, working in that way for five years, when he came to the city of Lancaster, and entered the store of W. D. Sprecher, Son & Co., remaining in that establishment about a year and a half. About this time he found an opportunity of buying on very satisfactory conditions the grain and feed business of William F. Denlinger. This he did, and taking possession in the summer of 1900, immediately enlarged the business in every way, carrying a larger and more varied stock, furnishing his patrons with the best of everything in his line, and securing a rapidly growing patronage. Mr. Hershey makes a specialty of horse, cattle and poultry powders, which had been sold in this county for twenty-four years, but which he now holds as an exclusive line from the original owners and makers.

Mr. Hershey belongs to one of the Old Mennonite families in this county, and his upright and honest life presents a practical illustration of the formative power of the Mennonite teaching in securing those primal attributes of manhood—sobriety, industry and honesty.

PETER R. GISH, proprietor of the Conoy Feed and Chop Mill, on Conoy Creek, in West Donegal township, Lancaster county, was born about one and one-half miles from his present home, Aug. 1, 1830, a son of John L. and Anna (Risser) Gish, natives, respectively, of West Donegal township and Lebanon county, Pennsylvania.

John L. Gish was a successful farmer, and a man of prominence in his community, which he served some years as tax collector and assessor. He died in West Donegal township in 1880, at the age of seventy-eight, and his widow passed away in 1898, at the age of eighty-three. Their remains rest in Bassler's Meeting House cemetery. The wife and mother was a member of the Mennonite Church. To John L. Gish and wife were born children, as follows: Peter R.; Abraham, deceased; Jacob, a retired farmer in West Donegal township; John, deceased; Samuel, on the old homestead in West Donegal; Anna, who died young; and David, deceased.

Peter R. Gish remained at home with his parents until 1856, when he went to East Donegal township, where for five years he engaged in farming. This was followed by three years on a farm in Rapho township, after which he went to Mt. Joy, and there passed three years in the butchering business. He was quite successful in this work but finding it not as congenial to his tastes as farming, he returned to East Donegal township and there engaged in farming until his removal to his present home. He began the operation of the mill by hiring an engineer and miller, from whom he thoroughly learned the business. In 1898, he quit the manufacture of flour, and has since devoted himself to the other products of the mill.

Mr. Gish has been twice married. On Dec. 5, 1854, he was wedded to Miss Mary Nissley, and to their union came the following children: Abraham N., who died young; David N.; Anna N., who died young; John N., deceased, who married Barbara Hoffman; Peter N. and Daniel N., twins, the former unmarried and with his father, and the latter of whom wedded Barbara (Hoffman) Gish, widow of his brother John; and Eli, a carpenter of Elizabethtown, Pa., who married Lizzie Gingrich. Mrs. Mary (Nissley) Gish, who was born in Mt. Joy township in 1831, a daughter of Abraham Nissley, died in 1886, and was buried in Kraybill cemetery.

In 1890, in Dauphin county, Pa., Mr. Gish married for his second wife Miss Mary Ebersole, who was born in West Donegal township, Lancaster county, a daughter of Jacob and Anna (Ebersole) Ebersole, who since 1861 have resided in Dauphin county, where the former is a retired farmer and ex-township official. Jacob Ebersole was born in 1823, and his wife in 1827, and they were both reared in the faith of the Mennonite Church. Their children, besides Mrs. Gish, were: Fanny, who married Eli Westingberger, of Lebanon county, Pa.; Anna, who became the wife of Christ Brill, and was accidentally drowned in the creek; Martha, who wedded David Westingberger, of Lebanon county; and Eli, Martin and John, all three farmers in Dauphin county. Mrs. Gish's paternal grandfather was Jacob Ebersole, and her maternal, Peter Ebersole. The last named married a Rutt.

Peter R. Gish is public-spirited and progressive. In politics he is a Republican, and he has served his township as school director six years, and as auditor for a like period. Like all his family he is a Mennonite in religious faith.

ALBERT BROWN HAMBRIGHT, son of Samuel and Leah Brown Hambright, was born Aug. 20, 1856, in Manheim township, Lancaster Co., Pa. He worked for his father (on the Grand View Farm, owned by B. J. McGrann) until the age of seventeen, when he began teaching in the public schools of his native township. He was graduated from the Millersville State Normal School in 1879; principal of the Franklin school, East Donegal township, in 1881 and 1882; principal of the Manheim borough schools, 1882 and 1883; and superintendent of the Model School of his Alma Mater four years, from 1883 to 1887. He was admitted to the Lancaster County Bar in 1891; county auditor one term, three years, 1894, 1895 and 1896, and is at the present actively engaged in the practice of the law.

Mr. Hambright married, in 1894, Annie Trear, daughter of Jacob and Annie Trear. To their union have been born two children, George and Marion.

PROF. CHRIS BURGER, whose charming music store is at No. 6 North Prince street, Lancaster, is the recognized leader of orchestral and brass band music in the city.

Christian J. Burger, his father, came from Germany to the United States in 1848, and settled in Reading, where he died in 1883. His wife was Miss Annetta Kaul, a sister of the Very Rev. Anthony F. Kaul, of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Lancaster, and from this union have come six sons, four of whom are now living: Dr. A. J. Burger, now the coroner of Brooklyn; Dr. Francis J., also of Brooklyn; Rev. Clement S., pastor of the new Catholic Church of the Sacred Heart, Lancaster; and Prof. Chris. Burger.

Prof. Chris. Burger was born March 27, 1859, and was educated at Notre Dame, Indiana. Coming to Lancaster in 1892, he became the leader of the Fulton Opera House orchestra, a position he has held to the present time, to the delight of all music-loving people of the city. Since the opening of the Conestoga Park Theatre he has been musical director there. In 1896 Prof. Burger opened a music store on West King street, which proved a success from its beginning, and which he has successfully conducted to the present time in connection with his orchestral work. In 1898 he removed his store to No. 6 North Prince street, where he is found to-day.

Prof. Burger has been interested in musical matters far beyond the limits of Lancaster. For eight years he led the music for Buffalo Bill's "Wild West Show," and for fifteen years he was leader of various traveling orchestras, during his time being with Alice Oates, "The Black Crook," the Boston Opera Company, "The Fakir," "The City Directory," and various other well known attractions. He is also the leader of Burger's Military Band, which is composed of twenty-eight pieces, and which has had a successful existence of eight years; while Burger's Orchestra, composed of a dozen or more instruments, is one of recognized musical organizations of Lancaster.

Prof. Burger was married, in 1889, to Miss Emma Stewart, of Lancaster, and this union has been blessed with one child, Pirmin, who is now at school. Prof. Burger belongs to the Church of the Sacred Heart, of which his brother is the beloved priest, and is also a member of the Knights of St. John. Of a genial nature, a most pleasing personality, and withal a most earnest student of music, Prof. Burger has made his name as familiar as household words in Lancaster, and it is always associated with a most pleasant subject—good music.

REV. WILLIAM G. CAIRNES, son of George and Mary A. Cairnes, was born near Jarrattsville, Harford Co., Md., Feb. 18, 1839. His early education was secured in the public and private schools of the neighborhood. He prepared for college at Tuscarora Academy, Academia, Juniata Co., Pa., of which Prof. J. H. Shumaker was then principal. He graduated from Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., in 1865, and was Latin salutatorian of his class. One year after graduating was spent in teaching at Tuscarora Academy. He graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1869, and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Baltimore in 1869, and in September of the same year was ordained and installed pastor of Cream Ridge and New Egypt Presbyterian churches, New Jersey. In the summer of 1876 he resigned these charges, and in April, 1877, entered upon the pastoral work in the Middle Octorara Presbyterian Church at Bart, Lancaster Co., Pa., the position which he still (1903) occupies. This is among the oldest Presbyterian churches in Lancaster county, having been organized in 1727, Rev. Alexander Craighead being the first pastor. It is not known who were his successors until 1780, when Rev. Nathaniel W. Sample became pastor and remained such until September, 1821. He was followed by Rev. Joseph Barr, from 1823 to 1844; Rev. Solomon McNair, from 1846 to 1853; Rev. Joseph M. Rittenhouse, from 1853 to 1873; and Rev. William J. Henderson, from 1874 to 1876. Since 1880 Mr. Cairnes has served as stated clerk of the Presbytery of Westminster, and has twice represented the Presbytery in the General Assembly—in 1884 at Saratoga, N. Y., and in 1898 at Winoona, Ind. On June 18, 1902, the Presbytery of Westminster and the congregation of Middle Octorara Church joined in observing the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization of the church and twenty-fifth anniversary of the present pastorate. There were interesting exercises, historical sketches of the church and its various pastors, and numerous letters of congratulation, as well as presents, from various sources. Rev. J. M. Galbreath, of Lincoln University, speaking on the "Lights and Shadows of Twenty-five Years' Pastorate," said, among other things:

"Mr. Cairnes, -who has been among you for twenty-five years, is the most thoroughly tested man in this community. He has moved among you and there is scarcely a home in which he has not been, in time of joy or sadness. Part of the time he has been in his study, but brought his thoughts to you through the pulpit. There is no friendship so precious as the friendship between a pastor and his people, made and cemented in a pastorate of twenty-five years. There is another joy—that of being a teacher. As the student's face lights with thoughts of achievement, his joy and that of the teacher are the same. I have never heard of a shadow on Mr. Cairnes's pastorate, but no doubt he has had them, as we all have at some time in our life. Lights and shadows make up our lives, but Mr. Cairnes's has mostly been of lights. This work and servant is to be recognized by the Master."

In October, 1869, Mr. Cairnes married Miss Isabel Ann Patterson, daughter of Robert and Mary (Lyon) Patterson, of Spruce Hill, Juniata Co., Pa., and she has been his companion and helpmate during his ministerial service. They have three children. Mary Lyon, Robert Patterson and Anna Belle.

F. M. LENNOX, of Georgetown, Lancaster Co., Pa., is a typical self-made man—a man who, with little opportunity for scholastic development in boyhood, became "a man of letters" in the fullest sense, being not only a master of English, but a linguist as well.

Mr. Lennox was born in County Londonderry, Ireland, Province of Ulster, July 20, 1832. His father was Andrew Lennox, and his mother was Elizabeth Marshall, born in County Londonderry, and, although of Irish descent, came of good Scotch Episcopal stock. Andrew Lennox was a successful farmer. The children born to his union with Elizabeth Marshall, were: Marshall, who was an evangelist in the Salvation Army, and died in Australia; James, of Ireland, deceased; Isabella, married and living in Ireland; Mary Jane, now the wife of Mr. Green, living in San Francisco, Cal. (Mrs. Green is an experienced traveler, having made a tour of the world with her oldest son in 1870); F. M., of Georgetown; Andrew, who died in Australia, whither he had gone in quest of gold; Sarah, living in Ireland, who is the mother of twelve children; William George, living on the old homestead, the wealthiest man in his township of Aughrim; Charlotte, deceased wife of John Stanley, of Illinois.

The only son of Andrew Lennox to come to America was F. M., who came here with his cousin, John Bell, in 1846. F. M. Lennox had improved his opportunities in early youth, and, although but fifteen years old when he landed in this country, had considerable knowledge of Latin and Greek, and was also fairly familiar with the German language. After spending two years in New York and vicinity, young Lennox returned to his native land, remaining there only six months, during which time his mother died. Again returning to America, Mr. Lennox went directly to Parkesburg, Chester Co., Pa.; where he hired out to do farm work at $8 per month. After pursuing this vocation for a time, attending school in the winter, he made his home with the afterwards famous Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, Christiana, Pa. This was in 1851, and that year Mr. Lennox began teaching school; this was the memorable year of the Christiana Riot, of which he was a witness. He taught school for thirty-one consecutive terms, and during his vacation attended the Millersville Normal School, having been the first student to make application, although on account of sickness he did not register. It is, however, an undisputed fact that he was the first student, arriving there one week before school opened. This was in 1855. He had previously attended the Unionville Academy, and the Marietta Academy, making in all six terms at these several institutions of learning.

Mr. Lennox purchased his present home, in the village of Georgetown, in 1862, and he also owns another property adjoining. His postoffice address is Bart, Pa. He was married in 1875 (on Christmas Day) to Miss Abbie Hershey, of Mennonite parentage, a native of Lancaster county, and daughter of Josiah and Mary Ann Hershey, and seven children have been born of this union. These children are Charles H., living in Lancaster; Mary H., wife of William P. Trout, telegrapher, of Leaman Place; George H., druggist, of Philadelphia; Josiah H., living in Pittsburgh; Joseph H., of Philadelphia; Bessie H., and Francis H., at home.

Mr. Lennox is a member of the M. E. Church, a Republican in politics, and withal a gentleman of far more than ordinary intelligence and ability, being not only a successful educator, but possessing wide and comprehensive knowledge of affairs in general.

JOSEPH H. LONG, blacksmith, Lancaster, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania.

THE DOUGLAS FAMILY. "The broad breast of a Douglas has been Scotland's best bulwark," said the king. Archibald the Grim, the "Good Sir James," and others of the name, are historic figures. For many centuries the Douglas was a man of iron will, dauntless courage, and a mighty force in Scotland. Sir Walter Scott grows enthusiastic over the patriotism and the martial renown of the old race, born fighters and rulers for a thousand years, but no less as the old song has it, "Douglas, tender and true." It is little wonder that men find gratification in running back on sure lines to such ancestry. It stirs the blood at times to know that there have been such men and women among one's grandfathers and grandmothers, remote and near, and is cause for profound gratitude, not shallow pride nor weak vain-glorying.

We have been looking through a very interesting "Douglas book" belonging to Miss Rebecca Perkins, of Coatesville, published some twenty-five years ago in Rhode Island, which traces through a half-dozen generations a branch of the Douglas family that came to New England about 1656. In it we find brief mention of Archibald Douglas and his son George, after whom Douglasville in Berks county is named. The Pennsylvania branch of the family comes in the next generation. Four brothers, three of them young married men, came from near Edinburgh, Scotland, about 1725, perhaps 1728, bringing with them their household belongings. They were Andrew, James, Thomas and Archibald. The date could not have been much earlier than this, for Andrew died in 1742, at the age of forty years, Archibald in 1756, aged sixty-one years, and James in 1757, aged sixty years. The descendants of two of these men, Andrew and Archibald, are numbered by thousands, and include not a few of the best families in Pennsylvania.

They are said to have chartered a ship for themselves and immediate friends, and to have brought with them from their old home whatever promised to make life more comfortable in the new world. This included China and glassware, linens, bedding, household utensils, and much good furniture, solid mahogany and walnut upholstered in leather, most of which has become scattered through time, but some of it still prized as heirlooms. One of these things, known as the "Douglas clock," we saw recently in the home of Miss Margaret Douglas Wilson Latta, No. 3902 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. It is a large eight-day grandfather's clock, with fine works and very heavy brass weights, thought to be of French manufacture, that was brought from Scotland by Archibald Douglas nearly two hundred years ago. How long it was in the family before they emigrated to America is unknown. But it has ticked away the lives of a half-dozen generations on this side of the sea, and is doing its work for the seventh. It passed to Margaret Wilson from the home of her father; then to the home of a second Margaret Wilson, her daughter-in-law; then to her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Whitehill; then to her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Latta; then to her daughter Margaret, the fifth Margaret in direct line of succession, who has been its fortunate owner. The poet Longfellow might have heard in the measured beat of this grand old timepiece the refrain, "Forever-never! Never-forever!" even more distinctly than from his "Old Clock on the Stair."

They landed in Baltimore, and are said to have spent some time on the headwaters of the Chesapeake, but finally moved north into Pennsylvania, taking up choice tracts of land in what is now the extreme eastern part of Lancaster county. They built their homes in the forest, and were also of the small company to erect an Episcopal church of logs on the old Lancaster road, near "The Compass," which they named "St. John's." It was afterwards replaced by one of stone. The third church of stone stands on the same ground. One of them, it is said, gave the land for this church and graveyard, and here they all lie buried. Two of them were trustees of the congregation. The building was but a modest structure of hewn logs, like many another backwoods meeting-house that has since grown to grand proportions. These early settlers believed in the church and the school.

The "Compass church" and graveyard are just beyond the county line, being in Chester instead of Lancaster county, but its membership has always been largely from the latter county. It is not only one of the oldest but also one of the most interesting from its historical associations in eastern Pennsylvania. The graves of some of the Douglasses are marked by quaint headstones. One reads: "Esqr. Andrew, son of Lord Douglass," another, "Jane, wife of Andrew Douglas, daughter of the Earl of Ross, died 1742." They said they were of the old race; they believed it; all their immediate descendants believed it; and we believe it, too.

Lancaster county was formed from Chester May 10, 1729. The warrantee deeds on record for Lancaster shortly after that date show that Archibald Douglas took up two hundred and fifty acres in 1733 and seventy acres in 1738; James 100 acres in 1738; Archibald and Edward, the son of James, 500 acres in 1743; Thomas paid tax on 300 acres during these years, which he may have owned before the county was organized; we do not know. J. Watson Ellmaker, of Lancaster, a gentleman much interested in the early history of the county, writes: "I have a copy of the will of Conrad Rutter, dated 19th day of April, 1734. The witnesses of his signature are Andrew Douglass, Jean Douglass, and James Douglass. This Conrad Rutter was born in Prussia, was obliged to leave his native home on account of religious persecution, went to England, became identified with the English, was an Episcopalian in faith, which is proved by his name being on the old records of St. John's, in Pequea, built in 1729. The following tradition came to me, of which I have some proof: Conrad Rutter's wife was a Douglas; left England (Scotland?) in 1683, came over in the ship America, Joseph Wassey, captain. First settled in Germantown, afterward went up to Montgomery county; took up lands and improved them; before 1720 came up to Chester county, near where the Douglasses settled, and took up 588 acres (of which John P. McCaskey has the draft). Conrad Rutter had four sons, Andrew, Joseph, Peter and Conrad, Jr. His oldest son Andrew inherited the Montgomery county farm. By his will, dated April 19, 1734, he divided this tract of 588 acres among his three youngest sons. His son Peter sold his farm and bought another near the Douglasses. He died in 1772, and is buried in St. John's churchyard." We have thought it possible that the wife of Conrad Rutter may have been in America long before her brothers, and that her letters home may have induced them to emigrate. If so, some discrepancy in the dates may easily be accounted for.

Thomas Douglas left no children; James, who died Nov. 8, 1757, had one son, Edward, who in 1743 took up a large tract of land along with his Uncle Archibald. The will of Edward Douglas is dated April 8, 1761, Gabriel Davis executor. His children were Mary, Margaret, Jane, Catharine, James and Archibald.

Andrew died Jan. 20, 1742, and his wife survived him but a few days. In 1740 he was commissioner of Lancaster county. Their children were George, born March 25, 1726, died March 10, 1799; Mary, born 1734, died Feb. 14, 1807, married John Elliot. There may have been other children. The Douglas family of Douglassville is descended from Andrew, also the Buckleys, Leafs, McCalmants, Keims, Jenkins and others, making a large family connection. George married Mary Piersol April, 1747, who was born Aug. 23, 1731, and died Oct. 12, 1798. In 1761 he settled in Amity township, Berks county, where he lived until his death. He was a justice of the peace before the Revolutionary war. From 1772 to 1784 he was one of the judges of the county court. He was a soldier in the Revolution, a captain in Lotz's battalion for the Flying Camp, and was in the battle of Long Island. [See Montgomery's history of Berks county in the Revolution.] He was also one of the commissioners chosen by Congress in 1776 to sign issues of Continental bills of credit. Their children were: Richard, born 1748; Elizabeth, 1750; Jane, 1752; Mary, 1754, married Richard Graham; Rebecca, 1757,

FOUR GENERATIONS.

Taken by Saylor, 1896: Engraved by Rea.

Each of last three (1837-63-87) is the oldest of a family of seven children there being (1898) five sons and two daughters in each family.

This picture of "Four Generations" is published partly by request, but mainly in honor of one of the best of mothers. A fact of some interest in regard to it is that each of three younger members of the group here given is the oldest of a family of seven children, each family having its five sons and two daughters.

The great-grandmother, venerable in years but young in heart, who, on June 14th, 1898, will be eighty-eight years of age, comes of a strong, brave, intelligent and generous ancestry, which includes Scotch, Scotch-Irish, Welsh and German-Swiss, all of whom came to Pennsylvania long before the war of the Revolution and at very early times in the history of the colony. Through a life unusually long and active she has retained her bodily senses unimpaired, never caring even to use spectacles. Her hand and heart have always been busy for others with little thought of herself, and in this, and her child-like trust from day to day in the Divine care and guidance, lies the secret of her perennial youth. It is a rare blessing to be the son of such a mother. We can pay her no better or truer filial tribute than that which we wrote on the back of her photograph some years ago when sending it to a friend:

MY DEAR COUSIN: Pardon my delay in sending you this picture. It is a face that has a life-history behind it. Tried by sorrow but true to duty, patient in suffering, hopeful amid disappointments, unselfish, tender, loving and beloved—a better woman I have never known than this reverent Christian mother. She is that of which angels are made, or, if not, there is nothing else on earth good enough out of which to make them. I can wish you no fairer crown of blessing than that a son, who has known to his eternal gain not a few good people, shall say thus much of you when you are old.

The representative of the fourth generation is a little girl who has also, thus far, had a very busy and unselfish life, sharing with her mother the constant care of a growing family of children full of animal spirits, health and energy. This little maiden has been like her great-grandmother, in that she has been constantly and gladly caring for others with all the beauty of unconscious self-sacrifice. Can anything better come to her in life, though her age of eleven years grow to be eight times what it is and she also attain to the years of her aged "Grandma?"

The representative of the third generation is rated one of the most capable and efficient officers of his rank in the army. He has seen service in different parts of the country, chiefly in Utah and Wyoming, and in the Sioux campaign, and was for four years military commandant at the Pennsylvania State College. At the expiration of this detail he made a special trip of three weeks to Europe, in which, while visiting eight or ten leading cities, he went nearly as far east as the Black Sea, making an average rate of more than five hundred and fifty miles per day for twenty-two days. He wrote a sketch of this remarkable trip for the November number, 1896, of The Pennsylvania School Journal. This picture was taken the day before he left Lancaster for his new post of duty at Plattsburg, on Lake Champlain. He is now with his regiment at Tampa, Florida, where a part of the army has been concentrating for the advance into Cuba. God-speed! to them all—and a safe return!*

The representative of the second generation is "a looker-on in Venice," who has seen and heard and known some very good people there, and finds the world each year richer in its wonders of nature and wealth of art. It is his hope that this blessed experience of life may be continued, with an ever-broadening horizon through what is left of To-day and for the endless To-morrow.

May 1st, 1898.

married Mordecai Piersol; Bridget married James May (her daughter married Gen. Keim, of Reading); Andrew, 1762, married Rachel Morgan; and George, 1767, married Mary Lea. Elizabeth, their oldest daughter, was married Oct. 30, 1770, to John Jenkins, of Carnarvon, Lancaster county. He died March 7, 1810, aged seventy-eight, and she died April 4, 1825, aged seventy-five. Their children were: Mary, born 1774, married Peter Trego; George, 1776; William, 1778; John, 1780; Rebecca, 1782, married Thomas Morgan, and settled in Venango county; Andrew, 1785; Elizabeth, 1787, married Isaac McCalmant; Hannah, 1790. George, their oldest son, married Catharine Hamilton Aug. 20, 1800, daughter of James and Catharine Hamilton, a cousin some degrees removed, who was the daughter of Margaret Douglas by her first marriage; their descendants are numerous.

Archibald Douglas, who died Nov. 26, 1756, left eight children: Thomas, born 1722, died 1794, married Joyce Hudson Aug. 4, 1763; John, a miller and judge of the court of common pleas, 1759-1761; Archibald, had 200 acres of land in 1759; George, nothing of record; Mary, married George Boyd, many descendants; Jane, married Gabriel Davis, many descendants; Margaret, married twice, Patrick Carrigan and John Wilson, many descendants; Ann, unmarried. Thomas left his estate to his brother-in-law, Gabriel Davis, subject to legacies of 2,200 pounds and a small annuity to the "Compass Church."

Margaret Douglas (1730-1786) was married to Patrick Carrigan October, 1747. They lived in Lampeter township on the Pequea creek. He died Oct. 15, 1756, and was buried in St. John's churchyard. He left a large estate, including 700 acres of land. Their children were: Jane, born June 13, 1750, married Jonathan Coats; Catharine, born June 26, 1753, married James Hamilton Feb. 24, 1769, died Sept. 11, 1787, and Patrick, born Aug. 24, 1755, died June 5, 1779. Patrick Carrigan left John Wilson executor of his estate and guardian of his children. John Wilson (1729-1803) afterward married Mrs. Carrigan. They had five children, Margaret, born April 12, 1759; John Douglas, Nov. 25, 1761; Ann, Sept. 20, 1764; Susanna and Mary. Margaret Wilson, the oldest daughter, married and moved to Ohio. John, their son, married Margaret Eckert Aug. 1, 1786. The old house is still standing in which they were married by the Lutheran clergyman, Rev. Frederick Illing, who was in charge of St. John's Episcopal Church from 1784 to 1788. Their children were: John Douglas, Margaret, Catharine, Elisha and Mary. John married Rachel Jones, a sister of Hon. J. Glancey Jones, of Reading, who was postmaster-general under President Buchanan. Their ten children were: Clarissa, Margaret, Oliver, Richard, Steven, Sarah, Francis, John, George and Victoria, of whom four are still living. Margaret, sister of John, married Samuel Atlee Whitehill. Her daughter Margaret married Dr. William S. Latta, and their children are: Dr. Samuel W., William J., John S., Margaret D. W., and Mary. Catharine, sister of John, married John Piersol. Their children were: Cyrus, Charlotte, Margaret and Mary, of whom Cyrus died unmarried; Charlotte married Thomas McCausland, two children; Mary married Dr. William Jones, four children; and Margaret married William McCaskey, seven children, four of whom have large families. Among these are Dr. J. P. McCaskey, teacher and publisher, of Lancaster, and sons Edward, Richard, Walter and Donald; Dr. J. B. McCaskey and sons Joseph and Harry; Colonel William S. McCaskey and sons Hiram, Garrison, Douglas and Charles; Cyrus, a well known railroad man; Newton, a dentist, in Harrisburg; and Mrs. James H. Marshall and family, of Lancaster, three or four of whom are named at some length in the present volume. Elisha was married but left no children. His sister Mary married Isaac Ringwalt, three daughters. Her grandson, David R. Thompson, is editor and publisher of the Carlisle Sentinel.

The Wilson family came into Lancaster county about the same time as the Douglasses, and were of Scotch or Scotch-Irish descent. They were a very stanch and vigorous people. The records show that from twelve to fifteen thousand acres of land were taken up by Wilsons in Lancaster county. We remember well how delightfully an old grand-uncle, John D. Wilson, used to touch the strings of his violin for his own pleasure or for the dance at home in the evening after the day's work on the farm was done. He was stalwart, had a mighty hand, and a voice that could be heard for a mile when he went out to call the hounds, or gave orders to some one at a distance.

For many facts and dates given in this too-hurried sketch we are indebted to Robert E. Jenkins, of the law firm of Jenkins & Louthridge, Chicago; Mrs. Sarah Wilson Louderbach, of Highland Park, Chicago; Rev. Horace Edwin Hayden, of Wilkesbarre; W. W. Davis, of Sterling, Ill.; William J. Latta and his sister, Margaret, of Philadelphia, and others. It is not exhaustive in any sense, but may contain facts or dates that will be helpful to others interested. Its main purpose is to recall some names that have almost passed into oblivion.

We take space, in closing, for a tribute from one descendant of this fine old race to another, Dr. J. P. McCaskey to his mother, Margaret Piersol McCaskey, whose face is seen in the picture of the "Four Generations" which appears herewith. It was at the close of an address written just after her death upon the subject, "In the Beginning God." He says:

"Why have I taken a subject like this at this time? Well, first, because of its great importance; and, again, because when the request came for a paper to be read here, this was the thought which had been in my mind for days, and I cared little to turn to any other less impressive or less attractive.

"I had seen one whom I have known for sixty years, a soul sweet and helpful, unselfish, and strong, and noble, pass slowly down into the Valley of the Shadow. After a lingering illness of many months—a kind of restful and patient waiting for the end—she passed away peacefully into 'the rest that remaineth for the people of God.' Her life had been spent in deeds of kindness and glad service to others, with almost no thought for herself. Every one who knew her loved her, and by no one of kind heart who has ever known her in her long and useful life does she seem to have been forgotten. She was always young at heart, and could not grow old. Although eighty-eight years of age, her senses were well-nigh unimpaired, and she took, and enjoyed, and was grateful for every good thing that came to her, receiving it and speaking of it often as the gift of God. She had learned very early this rare lesson of life,

To trust Him in dark hours of trial,
And thank Him in moments of bliss.

"By the cradle, at her work about the house, at the milking time about the barn, in the meadow and at the spring, in the service of the church, what voice so sweet as hers, clear and strong and melodious in every tone, in ballads, hymns, lullabies, and lilted tunes that had no words, but most of all in hymns with their high suggestion? 'Margaret, sing something'—he always spoke her name in the old Scotch fashion, in two syllables, like that of Marget Howe, in the 'Bonnie Brier Bush'—was my father's frequent request. And everybody else seemed to ask it, too; for she sang as no one else I ever heard in my childhood at church or at home. It was as the bird sings, because she loved melody, and the song often gushed from her heart in sweet unconsciousness of any to listen and enjoy. And she sang, in quiet voice to the end, the old hymns of trust and love and hope, when the days were sometimes long, and when at times she was alone but never lonely. I have heard nearly all the great singers of the past forty years, but no memory among them all is so fresh and joyous as that of my mother's songs. She inherited this gift from Scotch, Scotch-Irish, Welsh and German-Swiss ancestors, for they all loved music, and would tell us how they talked in their girlhood of the songs her father and mother sang together before their marriage nearly a hundred years ago. I used to fancy that she had caught into her voice the tones of the violins in the home of her childhood. Here is an interesting fact and a somewhat remarkable thing: She always sang three verses to 'Home, Sweet Home.' All the printed copies of this well-known song some forty or fifty years ago, and later so far as I know, gave but two. But the verse she sang between the first and last became so fixed in my memory, and was so necessary for me to complete the song—for as she sang it I loved it best of all—that I gave it place on the first page of the first number of the Franklin Square Song Collection some twenty years ago. Since that time it has gone into many new music books for schools and for general use, and the song may soon be generally accepted in that form. The verse restored is as follows, and I hear her voice in it now:

I gaze on the moon as I tread the drear wild,
And feel that my mother now thinks of her child,
As she looks on that moon from our own cottage door,
Through the woodbine whose fragrance shall cheer me no more.

"It was my mother's songs that gave impulse to the numbers of the Franklin Square Collection, which seems to have gone all over our own country, and to be scattered through the English-speaking world; and to hundreds of thousands of music pamphlets that have afforded pleasure and benefit I trust to very many, young and old.

"The prevailing thought of her fourscore years is the subject of this paper: 'In the Beginning, God'—always God. She went to her grave in the quiet evening of life, as was fitting, in the quiet evening hour, with the 'Well done!' of all who knew her, music of organ and choir, and the beautiful ritual of the Episcopal Church, with which she had been familiar for more than eighty years. Through all her life went sweet and sacred song, about her as an atmosphere, and at the end it was fitting there should be pealing organ and chanting choir, and the hymns she had sung so often and loved so well. It was fitting, too, that she should lie at rest in consecrated ground, within the shadow of the venerable church which she had known in youth, and by the side of one beloved almost as a mother, whom, on this self-same spot, she had seen buried out of her sight threescore and ten years before. [Her aunt, Mary Wilson Ringwalt.] As I think of my mother the lines of Mrs. Elizabeth Barrett Browning come back to me with their profound suggestion:

Of all the thoughts of God that are Borne inward unto souls afar,
Along the Psalmist's music deep,
Now tell me if there any is,
For gift or grace, surpassing this—
He giveth His beloved, sleep!

And friends, dear friends, when it shall be,
That this low breath is gone from me,
And 'round my bier ye come to weep,
Let one, most loving of you all,
Say, "Not a tear must o'er her fall;
He giveth His beloved, sleep!"

"She has passed, we believe, from the shadow-land of time into the freshness and beauty of the glad morning upon the Delectable Mountains. I wonder sometimes if she has yet seen her mother, of whom she always spoke so tenderly, who died just seventy-five years ago, and who left so strong an impress upon her child. Lapse of years is nothing to hearts that love forever.

"It is inspiring to think what delight it may be in the next life to find glad souls, among them relatives generations removed in the line of ancestry, all in the bloom of eternal youth and vigor, who have long been diligent in labors of love and service, and who have grown more and more strong and lovable through the ages. What a thing is life, with its long chain of ancestry and descent! And what depth of meaning, intellectual and spiritual, in the Bible phrase, 'gathered to his fathers!' Not the archangel Gabriel himself, foremost of the heavenly host, can estimate the possibilities in this connection which are suggested by a thought like this: 'In the beginning, God!'—for, having Him, we may in the end have all of good and gladness that thought can suggest or heart desire.

"I have known many good things in life, but the best of all has been the blessing of such a mother. If I have been able to do any good work in the world, the origin and spring of almost everything has been hidden back in that mother's teaching and that mother's love. Ability and readiness to improve opportunities that have come to me through others, have been largely due to my mother's life of unselfish devotion.

"Two pleasant pictures come up before me: I call to see her regularly, and often as she lies in bed, week after week, not ill, but no longer strong and vigorous. In her bright, pleasant face there is a look of youth that is past, and of immortal youth that is fast coming. She greets me gladly when I come, and when I go thanks me cordially for getting in to see her. I laugh at her for thanking a son who comes to see his mother. But she was always a lady, courteous, polite, grateful for anything that gave her pleasure, so she says 'Thank you,' just the same. I ask her, in a way of pleasantry, to go along to church one Sunday morning shortly before the end. She smiles, and says with perfect peace, 'All that is over now, and I have nothing left to do but to sleep and to pray.' And so she prays—and sleeps—that I once knew so wakeful and devoted to her children and her household duties that to me, as a child, she seemed almost never to sleep. The days pass, and the end comes, with the sleep from which glad souls awake into the Eternal Morning. Even there I think that what was to her the best lesson of Time may also be the great thought of Eternity—'In the Beginning, God!'"

HENRY B. BECKLER, the lamented cashier of the Lititz National Bank, who died suddenly, from apoplexy, June 2, 1901, was one of the most notable citizens of the historic Moravian settlement of Lititz. Mr. Beckler was born at Emaus, Pa., a son of Rev. Julius Beckler, a prominent clergyman of the Moravian Church. After he had received an education at Nazareth Hall and the Moravian College, his parents removed to Lititz, and young Beckler entered the dry-goods house of Hager & Brother, in Lancaster, remaining there eight years; then returning to Lititz, Mr. Beckler became station agent for the Pennsylvania & Reading Railway Co., and also a member of the firm of Kauffman & Beckler, dealers in coal and lumber. In 1873 he married Miss Sarah C., daughter of M. J. Weaver, of Lancaster. His wife and two sisters, Emma and Olga, and his step-mother, Mrs. Theodora Beckler, survive, the widow making her home in the beautiful Moravian settlement in which her husband had been so conspicuous a figure—his beloved Lititz.

Mr. Beckler was for many years an elder in the Moravian Church of Lititz, and also a trustee of the Church and of Linden Hall Seminary. For long years he was a teacher in the Sunday-school, and was treasurer of it at the time of his death. All that is mortal of this lamented banker and churchman lies in the Moravian cemetery at Lititz, his remains having been borne to their last resting-place by the church trustees, the bank directors and hosts of other citizens of Lititz and the surrounding country attending the obsequies of the man who had been an honor to the community in which he lived.

ADAM GROFF, a retired farmer and highly respected citizen of Providence township, was born in that township Jan. 26, 1832, son of Jacob and Susan (Stoneroad) Groff.

Jacob Groff, the father of Adam, was a son of Henry Groff, who was a son of John Groff, better known in his locality as Swamp John Groff. Henry Groff was the father of seven children, namely: John, Jacob, Thomas, Benjamin, Susan, Annie and Elizabeth, all now deceased. Jacob Groff, father of Adam, was born in 1806 and died in 1857. In 1830 he was married to Susan Stoneroad, and their four children were: Adam; Thomas, of Providence township; Frank, of Strasburg township; and Henry, deceased.

Adam Groff was reared on a farm and acquired his education in the public schools. Farming has been his business in life, and he has attained success through industry and frugality. Like many of his neighbors he started out in life with but small means, but has shown what can be accomplished by steady effort and honest endeavor. Mr. Groff owns one of the well tilled and well improved farms which have made Providence township so valuable a part of Lancaster county. Since retirement from active work he has resided in his comfortable residence in New Providence, and is well known in the village and is most highly esteemed. His religious leanings are toward the Mennonite belief, although he is not formally connected with that body. In politics he is a Republican, but has never aspired to office.

In 1855 Mr. Groff was married to Miss Fanny

Mowery, of Eden township, daughter of David Mowery, a farmer of that township. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Groff, namely: Jefferson F.; Cora Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Hoffman, of Harrisburg; John M., a promising attorney of Lancaster; and Miss Mary G., a popular teacher in the Providence township schools.

Mr. Groff has been identified with the educational advancement of his township for a long period, and has always been known in this community as a man noted for integrity and reliability. Few men of Providence township are more highly esteemed.

REV. JOHN S. CRUMBAUGH. There hangs in the study hall of the Boys' High School of Lancaster a strong life-size crayon head, by Reingruber, of Rev. John S. Crumbaugh, who was principal of this school from 1851 to 1853. On another wall in the same room hangs the portrait of Dr. E. E. Higbee, who taught here for one year, 1853-54. These portraits are placed on the walls as a permanent feature of the school in grateful memory of the two most inspiring men who have been connected with the High School at any time since its organization, in 1849. They were placed there for the constant sense of companionship with these great men which good portraits may give, and in glad recognition of their helpfulness to us and to all the old boys of fifty years ago.

Mr. Crumbaugh came to Lancaster in the summer of 1851, and died here after less than eight years of such work as teacher, preacher and county superintendent of schools as will not be forgotten in generations. He was of vigorous German and Scotch ancestry. Conrad and John Krumbach came from Germany when young, and settled in Frederick county, Md. Conrad married Miss Reid, a young woman belonging to a family of Scotch refugees, who left their country because of civil and religious intolerance. They had ten children, seven boys and three girls. Simon, the eldest son, was born at Woodsboro, Md., Oct. 24, 1772, and died at the age of seventy years. His children were Gideon D., born in 1806, and John D., born in 1808. The latter was the father of John S., who was born Nov. 7, 1831, at the old homestead within a mile of Woodsboro, Md., and died at Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 13, 1859. He had two older sisters. His only son, Dr. John W., was born Aug. 9, 1855. He married Mary Lavinia Develin, of Philadelphia, born March 24, 1859. They have had thirteen children.

There were very few books in his childhood home, but the religious influence about him was positive. Both his grandfathers had been clergymen. His father wished him to remain upon the farm, but the boy longed eagerly for knowledge of books and the world. In 1846 he entered the preparatory department of Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, which place has since become famous throughout the world for the great battle fought there seventeen years later. His own beautiful valley, of which he spoke with enthusiasm, was that immortalized by the poet Whittier in "Barbara Freitchie." A year later he entered the Freshman class, carrying his work with ease and reading widely during his entire college course. In 1851 he graduated, taking the first honor of his class. In the fall of the same year he became principal of the Boys' High School of Lancaster, before he was twenty-one years of age, but looking from five to ten years older, and every inch the man of power.

A man of noble presence, tall, well-formed, erect, calm; with kind eyes that saw everything, but always too wise to act upon everything they saw; gifted with a man's voice of fine quality, deep, resonant, and sympathetic; a man who would be noted in any assemblage—he impressed us all as the master. There was an element of insubordination in the large school, but no boy cared to meet this man in honest defiance, while meanness and low trickery quailed and slunk abashed before him. He seemed fond of the study of etymology, and read Latin, Greek and German with facility. When we went with him on a botanical excursion, which he enjoyed, it was interesting to the boys to see him put one hand on the top rail, go to the other side of the fence, get what he wanted, vault back on one hand, and resume his walk as if it were all as easy as breathing. He was not only very active, but physically a very strong man. On one occasion, while principal of the High School, a number of gentlemen at his hotel, the old "Exchange," on East King street, were talking of physical strength, and one of them, also of the farm and known to be of great strength, said confidently that he could put down any man in the company. Mr. Crumbaugh said quietly that he thought not. They cleared the space, and in a few moments the confident champion was on the floor. The man who challenged the house was his friend and assistant in the High School, Kersey Coates, then reading law with Thaddeus Stevens. He afterward took a strong hand in the troubles in Kansas, and died some years since, a millionaire, in Kansas City.

The writer well remembers how for some boyish prank he was brought "to book," detained one day at noon, and, in the quiet room, Mr. Crumbaugh, taking the next seat, gave a half-hour or longer to the effort to have him see and do his duty. He required an apology to another pupil, an irascible lad, for some trouble come of a pin in the toe of a boot. He talked as we had never heard a man talk to a boy—and the boy, touched at last to the quick of his soul, promised to do as he wished, knowing that courtesy no less than duty required it. From that day he has loved that master with an undying affection. It was the best lesson of the year, and for that good deed of mastery we hope again to thank him. It was not, however, until we had read the papers which, when dying, he wrote for his little son, that we came to see why Mr. Crumbaugh should have been so kind and patient with a self-willed lad. Many another has congratulated himself during all his manhood life that it was his good fortune to have been under this wise and strong teacher.

It was always a pleasure to meet and talk with him. The last time we saw him was shortly before his death. It was a cold, bright winter day that we spoke with him for a few moments on the street. He wore a heavy fur cap and collar and gloves, everything for warmth that fur or wool could do, but the fatal chill had gone too deep for help. His raven black hair and beard in contrast with the pallor of his face made a picture not to be forgotten. But the brave eyes looked out steadily as of old, and the firm lines about the mouth were firm as ever. It was the soldier still on duty. Roman in firmness, Christian in quiet hope and patient endurance: "Be thou faithful unto death." We have often thought of that day and that heroic figure, resolute as William the Silent, and, like him, hopelessly dying by inches.

His memory from earliest childhood was phenomenal. When twenty-seven years old and slowly dying of hemorrhage of the lungs, after having done such work as few men of seventy have been able to accomplish, he wished his little son, an only child—now Dr. John W. Crumbaugh, the eminent physician of Wilmington, Del.—to have knowledge of his father's life and thought when he might be old enough to understand and appreciate it, and so he began to write the story. But he had not gone beyond the fifth year of his childhood life when the summons came and he laid down the pen. It is a "fragment" only, but of intense interest, giving in vivid narration the thoughts and feelings of a child three, four and five years old. Dim impressions of very early childhood linger in our minds, but there is, for the most part, little that is definite as to facts or years. Now and then one whose memory has been as the sensitive plate of the photographer to receive and retain tells such a story, but it is seldom written down. It is rarest of all things in literature, and always read with unusual interest.

These sketches by Mr. Crumbaugh, if he had lived to complete them, would have been a rare book filled with suggestion for parents and teachers. They are a revelation of childhood unique in character, simple and striking in style, and afford evidence that the remarkable memory of Mr. Crumbaugh was his even from babyhood. He would write an address or sermon of twenty minutes or half an hour and commit it to memory in little longer time; would read ordinary history or biography for an hour and give dates and the sequence of events with strict accuracy. At college his ready knowledge of the irregular verbs in Latin was a constant surprise to his classmates. He had committed an old Latin grammar to memory when at the country school, before beginning the study of Latin at the preparatory school of Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg. It happened that the teacher was boarding for a time at his father's house, and the young lad was often in his room. One day, in overhauling his trunk, he threw out a few books, among them one with the back torn off and otherwise in a dilapidated condition. The boy picked it up, and, seeing in it many words in the English letter, but of whose meaning he knew nothing, he asked what it was. "Oh, that's what they call Latin." "Do you know it?" "Not very much of it." "Can you teach me to read it?" "Well, I can hear you recite what's in the book." And so he did. Word for word he took in the book—Latin, English, everything—and his retentive memory held with marvelous fidelity during life what was then so rapidly learned. It was either the old Brooks' and Ross's or Andrew's and Stoddard's Latin grammar, each of which contained an unusually large number of irregular verbs.

While in the High School he studied theology under Rev. John C. Baker. In 1852 he was one of a number of young persons belonging to Old Trinity to open a Lutheran Sunday-school in the northwestern part of the city. It was organized with twenty-two pupils and Mr. Crumbaugh as superintendent. In 1853 he resigned the principalship of the school, to carry out his original purpose of entering the ministry, assuming charge of the newly-organized Lutheran congregation, which usually assembled for worship in Fulton Hall or in the lecture room of the Moravian Church. It was about this time that he was married to Miss Susan Beates, daughter of Rev. William Beates, who died in 1867 in his ninety-first year, after a life of more than sixty years in the ministry. Mrs. Crumbaugh survived her husband many years: She died March 5, 1901.

It had been resolved, April 2, 1852, to organize the new church; May 18th a committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the new building; June 15th, on motion of G. M. Zahm, the church was unanimously named "St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church;" Oct. 9th, the cornerstone was laid; March 5, 1854, the lecture room was opened for services, and on Dec. 24, 1854, the building having been completed, the consecration took place. The edifice, the plan of which was suggested by Mr. Crumbaugh, and which he once told us he had found in an old book, cost about $20,000. Some defect in the structure caused it to be taken down a few years since, and on the same site now stands one of the most beautiful churches in Lancaster, its noble tower a poem in stone.

Mr. Crumbaugh was very successful in his new field, and before him had opened a promising future in the church at large. But, under the long strain of intense college life, then of school life supplemented by the studies necessary in preparing for his ordination, and later that of the clergyman with demands from within his parish and without, for he still kept his hand upon the educational work as a member of the city school board and as a frequent lecturer before educational bodies—the strength of the heroic man gave way in a fatal direction, hemorrhage of the lungs. In speaking of this to the writer on one occasion, after describing the first attack, he smiled and said: "You can little imagine how a man feels when he sees the stream of red blood flowing from his mouth and doesn't know where it comes from." He continued his work with failing strength because of recurring hemorrhage until it became evident that to prolong his life somewhat he must be in the open air as much as possible. Accordingly, he accepted the appointment of county superintendent of schools of Lancaster county—when County Superintendent Wickersham resigned to become principal of the State Normal School at Millersville—and to the direction of this work he gave the last two years of his useful life. The professional certificate of the writer was awarded by him in 1857. He traveled and worked day after day, dying, but resolute and patient, fighting the fight to the end. He examined a class of teachers, as he lay upon his bed too weak to be upon his feet, on the Saturday before his death. He died universally lamented, and his memory is cherished as a blessed influence wherever his presence was known.

The tribute to his memory by Dr. Thomas H. Burrowes, his warm friend and ardent admirer, before the Teachers' Annual Institute, was the most impressive we ever heard from that distinguished man. In speaking of his death, editorially, in the Pennsylvania School Journal for February, 1859, Dr. Burrowes, who knew him well from long and close personal association, both as teacher and superintendent, writes: "This learned, able, conscientious and indefatigable public officer died in Lancaster Jan. 13, 1859, in the twenty-eighth year of his age and the third of his superintendency. He is believed to be the first member of the corps of county superintendents removed by death, and truly may it be said that no more shining mark could have been selected from their ranks." The city school board, of which body he had been a member, resolved that "in his death we deplore the loss of one whose learning, zeal, urbanity and sound practical sense in the discharge of his varied and difficult duties was unsurpassed;" that "as a teacher in the highest station in the gift of the board, the impress made by him on the moral and intellectual nature of the youth committed to his care was such as entirely to justify that important trust;" that "the name of John S. Crumbaugh may be added to that of our most worthy citizens, a man whose brief life is a record of learning, usefulness and honor."

Mr. Crumbaugh was endowed by nature with talents of a high order. He was a good scholar, one of the strongest and best men we have ever known, and an executive officer of the first rank. Few men have lived to better purpose, though their working life may have been many times his own. He came to Lancaster a stranger in 1851, unheralded and unknown. He held, in quick succession—for with him the time was indeed "short"—three of the highest positions in our midst; the foremost place as teacher, one of the foremost as preacher, and the foremost in supervision of general school work in city and county. He not only filled these high positions, but adorned them all. He had less than eight years in which to do all this great work; and when he died, at the early age of twenty-seven years, three months and three days, it was said, and believed, that no other man in city or county was known, and honored, and beloved by so many people. Nor is this at all strange or to be wondered at, being the man he was. He met so many people, he knew so many, he was heard by so many, what he wrote was read by so many; and he influenced so many to better thought, wiser view, and higher purpose. His chosen profession was the ministry, and he took the principalship of the High School as an aid to reach the work beyond. During the two years in this position he proved himself a teacher who might have become one of the leading educators in the land. As pastor of "St. John's" he will be a tradition of the church for many generations. Had his strong life been spared he would, we think, have become one of the most eloquent and influential men in the Lutheran Church in America. During the two years he filled the office of county superintendent of schools he exerted an influence in favor of popular education, and the improvement of the teachers and the schools, such as can never be known or justly appreciated. Speaking the German language and understanding the German character, his influence in the German districts was such as was possible to no other friend of education in Lancaster county. The quiet order and systematic plan which characterized his work enabled him to do far more than most men and to do it better. He greatly improved the teachers' institutes, utilizing every agency within his reach. The teachers knew him as a noble, sympathetic leader, who seemed a part of the school system itself. As was said by some one, "In him the common schools have a soul." Once in his room we handed him an autograph book and asked him to write his name. He took it and wrote: "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother." It is a blessed privilege to know men like John S. Crumbaugh. He died as he had lived, a Christian in the best sense of that great word. The memory of his fine personality, his helpfulness, his self-sacrifice, his love of all things pure and good, his undying purpose to work while the day lasted, has in it all the old inspiration, though nearly a half-century has passed since his untimely death.—[J. P. M.]

ADAM LANDIS, one of the respected and successful farmers of Lancaster township, was born in East Lampeter township Sept. 4, 1834, son of John and Barbara (Stauffer) Landis.

John Landis, known as "Musser John," was born in East Lampeter township, where he lived and died, following farming all his life. He died in 1857, a consistent member of the Old Mennonite Church. John Landis married Barbara Stauffer, and they had eight children: Israel (deceased), a farmer of Lancaster township; Adam: John, a farmer of East Lampeter township; Jacob, deceased; Mariah, deceased, wife of Amos Herr; Elmira, who died unmarried; Barbara, who died unmarried; and Hattie, wife of Harry W. Sheibley.

The early life of Adam Landis was spent as is that of the majority of farmers' sons, upon the farm, his education being received at the public schools. When he was twenty-five years of age he assumed charge of the homestead, and conducted that farm until 1878, when he moved to the farm of his uncle, Abram Landis, adjoining the Landis farm, and has since made it his home, having purchased it in 1880. Since coming into possession of this property Mr. Landis has improved it considerably, and also conducts a fine dairy, conveying his product to Lancaster city daily. Some very valuable stone and sand quarries are located on his farm, and he also operates them extensively.

Adam Landis married Miss Elizabeth Heller, and six children have been born to them: Harry H., a farmer, residing at home with his father; Annie, wife of Isaac Leaman, of Lancaster township; John, a farmer on his father's farm, who married Elizabeth Groff; Edwin, a farmer and teamster, also living on his father's farm, who married Emma Weaver; Amos, a clerk in the Conestoga National Bank of Lancaster city, who married Lillian Best; and Ira H., a florist, unmarried and at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Landis are both members of the Old Mennonite Church, and enjoy to the fullest extent the confidence of their neighbors and friends. For many years Mr. Landis has been one of the leading men of the township in local affairs, and always can be depended upon to assist in all measures tending toward the improvement of existing conditions, the improvement of roads and the bettering of the schools, he being in every sense a public-spirited man and loyal citizen.

JOHN F. RUTH, LL. D., justice of the peace of Warwick township, has not only become well known in that connection, but also as an educator and an expert surveyor and conveyancer.

Mr. Ruth was born April 8, 1854, at Rothsville, Warwick township, Lancaster county, son of John Ruth, and grandson of Jacob Ruth. The latter, who was of Scotch descent, was born Sept. 16, 1794, and died Jan. 6, 1878. He was a cabinet maker and undertaker. He married Mary Sponehower, who was born May 8, 1793, and died June 6, 1858: she was of Welsh descent.

John Ruth, father of John F., was born June 15, 1817, in Ephrata township, this county, and died Nov. 15, 1899. He was a carpenter by trade. He married Elizabeth Fry, who was also born in Ephrata township, June 5, 1823, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Snyder) Fry, both of whom were of German descent. Mr. Fry was a bridge builder and carpenter by occupation. Mrs. Ruth passed away Jan. 10, 1885.

John F. Ruth received his early education in the village school near his home, and commenced teaching in the public schools of the township in 1873. Meantime he continued his studies, attending the State Normal School at Millersville in 1873-75. In 1879 he was granted a professional certificate by B. F. Shaub, county superintendent, and in 1880 he was granted a permanent certificate by the State Department of Public Instruction. In 1891 he graduated with first honors from the Boston Home College, Boston, Mass. On May 9, 1903, the honorary title of LL. D. was conferred upon him by the Nashville College of Law, Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Ruth continued teaching with marked success until 1896, when he retired from the profession because of the pressure of heavy business cares. He had been elected justice of the peace of Warwick township in 1881, performing the duties of that incumbency in connection with his educational work until he relinquished the latter. Mr. Ruth took the office as successor to Nathan C. Fry, Esq., and he has served continuously, having been honored with reelection every five years; his present term expires the first Monday in May, 1906. In addition to his other work, Mr. Ruth has engaged as a practical surveyor and conveyancer, in which line he has been recognized by the court and others as an expert.

On Nov. 2, 1876, Mr. Ruth was united in marriage with C. Priscilla Lowry, who passed away March 10, 1893, and to this union came two children: Samuel M., born Nov. 18, 1877; and John L., born July 11, 1886. The elder son has taken up surveying and conveyancing as his profession; the younger is at present attending business college. In 1894 Mr. Ruth married again, his second wife being Miss Ada R. Reigart, of Lebanon county; there are no children by this marriage. Mr. Ruth is connected with the United Evangelical Church, which he joined in 1892. In political sentiment he has been a Republican ever since he attained his majority.

S. E. BUSHONG, Coal and Feed, Rothsville, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

CLEMENT SMELTZ ERISMAN, who enjoys the distinction of being the first building inspector that Lancaster has ever had, is not only descended from one of the oldest and best families in this section, but has made a record for himself—in private and public life—of which any man might feel justly proud. He is descended in a direct line from Melchoir Erisman, who came to America from Switzerland about 1716, and purchased a considerable section of land adjoining the site of Lancaster. He was a Mennonite in faith, coming to "the land of the free" because of religious persecution in his native country. Here he became a noted agriculturist, and his son Jacob, who was the great-grandfather of Clement S., was born and reared on the old homestead in Lancaster township. Jacob learned the carpenter's trade, and later he became a contractor and builder, pursuing his business in the city of Lancaster, where he entered into rest at the age of ninety years. The next in line is another Jacob Erisman, the grandfather of Clement S., and after him came Jacob (3), the father of Clement S., who was a tailor for a great many years, until appointed a tipstaff in the courts of Lancaster. He had previously been a street commissioner and also a market master. He was a Moravian in religion. Jacob Erisman (3) married Elizabeth Smeltz, of Lancaster, whose father, Clement Smeltz, was born in Germany. To this union came six children.

Clement S. Erisman, one of the six children just referred to, was born July 15, 1838, and after receiving an education in the public schools, terminating in the high school, went to carpentering, at the age of seventeen. When twenty years old he went to Harrisburg, and, after a time, returned to Lancaster. Again going to Harrisburg, Mr. Erisman there married Miss Salome E. Kleckner, a native of that city, the marriage occurring April 28, 1861. This union has been blessed with ten children, two of whom are deceased. The survivors are: Mary, wife of Milton Zercher, dispatcher for the Conestoga Traction Co.; Clara, wife of Harry Rossman, of the New Era job department; Bertha, wife of Wayne Longenecker, of Lititz, who was with Dewey at the battle of Manila; Bessie, wife of Arthur Dorsheimer, who is associated with his father, Peter Dorsheimer, in the wine and liquor business; Harry M., who is following the carpenter's trade; Clement G., a contracting house carpenter; W. P., who is studying architecture; and Charles W., who recently left the Lancaster high school to help his brother, Clement G.

Mr. Erisman became a member of Co. E, 1st Pa. Militia, one year after his marriage, and responded to the emergency call. In 1869 he became a contracting builder in Lancaster, and among the notable buildings erected by him are St. John's Lutheran Church, the Lancaster County Bank building, the elegant home of the late Miss Catherine Long, at North Duke and East Orange streets, his own handsome home at No. 602 West Chestnut street, which he built in 1890, as well as very many others of the handsome private residences in the beautiful West End; and every one of his buildings bore the same evidence of conscientious care that distinguished his career during the fourteen years that he was a member of the select council of the city, during which he served on the Special Water and other important committees, and during all of which time he "stood like a stone wall" against all attempted legislation that did not seem to carry with it the best interests of the tax-payers. It was eminently fitting, though, that he should have been honored with the position of first building inspector for the city of Lancaster.

Mr. Erisman is socially a member of the Odd Fellows and Artisans; religiously, a member of the M. E. Church; politically, a staunch, true Republican; and, whether as private citizen, builder or public official, he will always be found "steadfast for the Right," as his judgment and conscience lead him to see the Right.

HARVEY K. STORK. A resume of the business contingent directly responsible for the commercial stability of Adamstown would be incomplete without due mention of the family of Stork, extensively engaged in the tobacco business, and vitally interested in all matters pertaining to the general growth of the town. Harvey K. Stork, manager of the firm of H. K. Stork & Co., sustains the reputation for enterprise and thrift established by his sire many years ago, and as a native son of this town, where he was born, Oct. 21, 1867, is also one of its most esteemed and honored citizens.

The Stork family possess the substantial traits of character which makes all well-born German-Americans valuable adjuncts to whatever community they choose to ally themselves. Samuel Stork, his paternal grandfather, was born in Lancaster, Pa., long after his forefathers had sought this land of large promise for their future field of activity. He married Anna Regar, and to their union five children were born: Henry, a farmer near Adamstown; Kate, wife of Edwin Coldren, of Adamstown; William S., father of Harvey K.; Samuel, a farmer of Adamstown; and John, also a resident of that vicinity.

William S. Stork, the father of Harvey K., was born in Adamstown Dec. 13, 1834, and lived on the paternal homestead while receiving his education in the district schools. While yet comparatively young he became interested in the tobacco business, of which he acquired extensive knowledge, and in which he branched out, establishing a large and lucrative trade. By his marriage with Susan Krick, daughter of Peter Krick, he became the father of seven children: Harvey K.; Annie, wife of James Stauffer; Alice, wife of H. H. Zimmer; Charles (partner of Harvey K.), who married Bertha Boehringer; Harry, a partner of his father; William, deceased; and Ida, who died in infancy.

As was natural under the circumstances, Harvey K. Stork became conversant with the tobacco business during his boyhood, and under his father's able instruction, and example of success, decided that it was a promising occupation for his future livelihood. This impression was materially strengthened in 1892, during which year his father purchased the tobacco factory of Samuel Prutzman, deceased, which he in time presented to his sons, Harvey K. and Charles, himself retaining the original Stork factory, operated under the firm name of W. S. Stork & Son. The new firm was incorporated under the firm name of H. K. Stork & Co., in the management of which Harvey K. Stork, profiting by his experience under his father, has achieved pronounced success. His commodities are a staple on the market, and are sought after by those who appreciate fine goods in the tobacco line.

In 1895 Mr. Stork married Ella, daughter of M. Gangaway, a farmer of Brecknock township, this county, and four children have been born to them: Jennie, March 5, 1896; Emma, Dec. 9, 1897; Lizzie, Sept. 6, 1899; and William, Oct. 4, 1901. Mr. Stork is identified with the United Evangelical Church of Adamstown, of which his wife is a member, and he has numerous social obligations in his native town. He is possessed of shrewd business sagacity, unquestioned integrity, and a tact which gains business and friends.

WILLIAM MAJOR OSTER, one of the foremost cement, curbing and paving contractors in Lancaster, was born in Philadelphia, Pa.; Feb. 18, 1848, a son of William and Elizabeth (Major) Oster, grandson of William Oster, and great-grandson of Henry Oster. William Oster was a blacksmith by trade, as was also his father, Henry, who served during the Revolutionary war, and died at the age of fifty-nine. During the war he came near freezing to death, supposedly at Valley Forge, his two companions succumbing to the severe cold.

William Oster, the father of William Major, was a general blacksmith by trade, and with the exception of a temporary absence between the years 1844 and 1852, spent his entire life in Lancaster. His death occurred in 1872, when he was aged sixty-one, and his wife died in 1855, at the age of forty-two. Born of this union were the following children: Reuben S., deceased; Henry A., deceased; Mary A., deceased wife of John Evans; Elizabeth, Mrs. Lee, of Lancaster; Margaret, wife of Grafton Cheney; Catherine, wife of James Fulton, of Baltimore, Md., a cigar manufacturer by occupation; William M.; and Jacob, a blacksmith of Philadelphia.

When four years of age William Major Oster came to Lancaster with his parents, and was educated in the public schools of the city. When fifteen years old he took up blacksmithing with his father, and completed his trade with the Lancaster Locomotive Works, thereafter following the business until 1876. He was then appointed chief mailing clerk in the Lancaster postoffice, a position he retained for ten years, or until he began his present contracting business. Socially Mr. Oster is connected with the Odd Fellows, and in political affiliation he is a Republican. He is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church.

In 1872 Mr. Oster married, in Lancaster, Harriet A. Witmyer, daughter of Frederick and Fredericka (Shiley) Witmyer. She was born in Manheim, Pa., in May, 1844. Frederick Witmyer and his wife were born in Germany, and upon emigrating to America settled in Manheim. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Oster, viz.: Reuben S., traveling salesman for the Atlantic Refining Co., of Lancaster, who married Elizabeth Riedel, a school teacher; Estella W., a school teacher; William W., a druggist at Lancaster; Nellie L.; and Mary E. Mr. Oster is the friend of education, and his children have all graduated from the high school.

W. J. SMITH, manager of the Pennsylvania Trust Co., of Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Scranton, was born at Oxford, Chester Co., Pa., in 1848, son of James and Nancy Smith, and comes of an old and prominent Chester county family. James Smith died at his home in 1888, his widow surviving until 1892. W. J. Smith is the only son of his parents, and he has two sisters living: Lizzie, widow of Wendell Phillips, of Philadelphia; and Jennie, who married Samuel North, postmaster at Oxford.

Mr. Smith received his education in the local and high schools of Chester county, graduated from Price's College, in Philadelphia, and for a time was bookkeeper for Cope & Co., a fertilizing firm in Chester county. In 1873 he was married to Nettie Brison, of Lancaster county, daughter of James and Sarah (Eckman) Brison, of that county, the father born there in 1800; the mother was born in East Drumore township, daughter of John Eckman, one of the pioneer settlers of the county, and a sister of D. B. Eckman, of Oxford. James Brison and his wife lived for a time in Lancaster county, and then spent several years in Illinois, returning to East Drumore township to purchase the John Eckman homestead. For many years he was engaged in farming and in dealing in real estate. In 1873 they removed to Oxford, where he lived retired until his death in 1876, and there his widow is still living. Mary, their eldest daughter, who was born in 1847, received her education in the Millersville State Normal, and was the wife of the Rev. John C. Gregg, of Connellsville. She died in 1881, and her husband in 1888, leaving two children, James B. and Ulysses Grant. During the Civil war Mr. Gregg served as a chaplain in the Union army. Mrs. Smith, who is the only living member of her parents' family, was born in East Drumore township in 1854, and received her education in the Female College of Mechanicsburg.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Smith moved to Oxford, where he was engaged in bookkeeping. In 1884 they removed to Philadelphia, where Mr. Smith secured a position as manager for one of the leading firms of the city. His health gave way and he could not stand the strain so he spent some time in Colorado. When his health had been restored he became manager for the Pennsylvania Trust Co., having charge of the departments at Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Scranton and Wilkesbarre.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of five children: Mabel, born in Lancaster county in 1876, who died in Oxford at the age of ten years; J. Dallas, born at Oxford in 1878, who graduated from the Philadelphia High and Manual Training Schools, and is now engaged in the real-estate business at Scranton; Blanche, who died in childhood; Clyde F., born in 1885, a student in the Philadelphia High School; and Raymond G., who died when eight years old.

Mr. Smith, while a resident of Philadelphia, owns the old Brison homestead in East Drumore township, and another large farm adjoining. Mr. Smith is a Republican, as was also Mr. Brison, his wife's father. He and his family are members of the Methodist Church in Philadelphia.

CHARLES PETER STAMM, D. D. S., whose cozy and popular dental parlors are at No. 138 North Prince street, Lancaster, is a son of the late John Stamm, one of the prominent and successful citizens of Lancaster, who is still remembered as a man of integrity and high principle. He was a German by birth and parentage, but became thoroughly identified with American life and customs.

John Stamm was born Dec. 22, 1827, in Willings-Hausen, Kur-Hessen, Germany, a son of John Stamm, who was an extensive farmer in Germany. In 1848, at the age of twenty-one years, Mr. Stamm came to the United States and located at Lancaster, where he engaged in clerking in a store owned by a Mr. Sprecher. His real life work, however, was gardening, for which he had unusual taste, and as he followed this pleasant occupation for many years, even until he retired from active labor, he became well-known in the business, and his services and advice were always in great demand. Although he was a believer in Democratic principles and supported that party, he could never be prevailed upon to accept office. He enjoyed his fraternal membership with the Odd Fellows organization, and was faithful in his attendance upon the services at St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, contributing liberally to its support. He it was who bought the ground for that now flourishing congregation in said city of Lancaster. Mr. Stamm died Jan. 29, 1883, and was laid to rest in Zion's Lutheran cemetery.

In 1856 Mr. Stamm was married, in Lancaster, to Anna Catherine Dietz, who was born in Wallerstaedten, Germany, Dec. 1, 1834, and died June 27, 1897. She was the daughter of John P. Dietz and Anna Barbara (Landau), his wife, the former of whom came to America in 1844, and for many years followed gardening, in Lancaster, during the last ten years of his life living retired. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Stamm were as follows: George P., who died young; Martha E., a well-known resident of Lancaster; John P., who died young; and Charles P., who is a successful dentist, in Lancaster.

Charles Peter Stamm was born in Lancaster,

July 16, 1871, and after being educated in the public schools studied dentistry with Dr. H. D. Knight, and was graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College in 1891. After graduation Dr. Stamm opened an office in his native Lancaster, and has been in successful practice ever since, seven years of the time in his present location.

On Feb. 18, 1892, Dr. Stamm married Emma S. Mayer, of Reading, Pa., whose father, George Mayer, now deceased, was a well-known wholesale and retail grocer of that city. One child, Miriam, has come to brighten their happy home. Fraternally Dr. Stamm is a Mason, affiliated with Lodge No. 43, F. & A. M. In his political faith he is a Republican; religiously a Lutheran, being a member of St. Stephen's German Lutheran Church. In all walks of life—social, political, religious and professional—Dr. Stamm is well liked.

JOHN K. HARTMAN, one of the most extensive contractors and builders of Lancaster county, was born at Witmer, Lancaster Co., Pa., in 1873, son of Henry F. and Catherine (Krantz) Hartman.

Henry Hartman, the father, was born June 20, 1830, in Bavaria, Germany, and emigrated to America in 1848, first locating in New York. A year later he removed to New Jersey, and after a few years settled at Witmer, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he operated a farm and some excellent lime-kilns, becoming a man of prominence in the community. In politics he was a strong Democrat, and served as county commissioner from 1885 to 1888. Fraternally he was connected with the F. & A. M., being a Knight Templar. Both he and his wife early connected themselves with the Mennonite faith. On Jan. 3, 1856, he married Catherine Krantz, born in March, 1829, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Fox) Krantz, of Germany, who emigrated to America in 1852, settling at Octoraro, Lancaster Co., Pa., where the father was a farmer and died in 1860, aged sixty-one, while his wife died in 1867, aged sixty. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hartman were: Anna W., who married John Roth, lives on the old homestead in East Lampeter, and has seven children; Henry, who died at the age of twenty-six, married Lizzie Peters, and they had three children; Elizabeth died at the age of four; Catherine married Jeremiah Delong, of Lancaster, Pa., and they have seven children; Mary married Levi Bixler, a grocer of Lancaster, and they have five children; David, who operates the old lime-kilns of his father, married Lydia Hoar, and they have eight children; Christian was killed on the railroad; Jacob, unmarried, resides on the old homestead; John K.

John K. Hartman attended school in Lancaster after completing a primary course at his district school, and boarded while securing his education. In 1893 he removed to Cambria county, Pa., joining an engineering corps, and remained there about six months, when he located at Witmer, Pa., and entered the coal and lime business. Continuing in this line until 1895, he then settled in Lancaster and turned his attention to the business in which he was to score such marked success—contracting and building. At the present writing he has built 145 houses, and is engaged in constructing ninety-six more. His operations include the purchasing of land and the erection of houses, which he sells at prices which command a ready market. Understanding as he does, so thoroughly, every detail of his business, Mr. Hartman is enabled to embody in his work the latest ideas of building art, and to construct houses which are unsurpassed for convenience as well as architectural beauty, and he is recognized as a leader in his line of business.

In September, 1895, Mr. Hartman was married to Bertha Buckwalter, born in Leacock township, Lancaster Co., Pa., daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth Buckwalter, farmers of Leacock township. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hartman: George W., Luetta M. and Henry F. Mr. and Mrs. Hartman reside on North Duke street, corner of James. In religious matters he is a member of the Reformed Church. Politically he is independent, preferring to vote as his conscience dictates. Although still a young man, Mr. Hartman has demonstrated his business ability, and made a place for himself among the prominent and substantial men of Lancaster, and his future is very bright, if it may be judged by the past.

JENKINS DAVIS emigrated from the parish of Killkennen, County of Cardigan, Wales, early in 1700. He settled in Radnor township, Chester county, with his brothers, John and Evan, his sister, Martha, and other relatives. Considerable tracts of land, as is shown by the State records at Harrisburg and by wills and deeds in the court house at Lancaster, were taken up by Jenkins, Evan, John, Thomas, Zaccheus and Gabriel Davis. Evan, after patenting 350 acres, is said to have returned to Wales, where the family continued to hold property. Jenkins patented 1,000 acres June 1, 1743, at the mouth of Muddy Creek, in Earl township, Lancaster county. He died in 1747. Among his children were Catharine, born 1696; Zaccheus, born 1710, and Dinah. There may have been others, but we do not know of them.

Catharine married Rees Davis. How many children they had we do not know, but the most noted among them was Gabriel (1728-1813), a man of unusual energy and excellent judgment, one of the active and earnest men who gave character to Lancaster county before, during, and after the Revolutionary war. He was a member of the Committee of Safety and captain of a military company. He married Jean Douglas (1733-1777), daughter of Archibald Douglas. Their children were Margaret, born Sept. 15, 1756, died 1830; Mary, March 18, 1758, died 1798; John, Aug. 19, 1760, died 1814; Catharine, Oct. 2, 1762, died 1848; George, Sept. 7, 1765, died 1829; Jean, March 13, 1768, died 1846; Gabriel, April 26, 1771, died 1801; Benjamin, Oct. 5, 1773, and Archibald Douglas, Aug. 21, 1776, died 1813. These dates are taken from an old prayer book owned by Archibald, the youngest son just named.

Their oldest daughter, Margaret (1756-1839), married her cousin, Zaccheus Piersol, son of John and Dinah Piersol, in 1780. They had twelve children, of whom the youngest, Margaret Douglas Luckey, died in 1894, at the age of ninety-two years. She was a great-granddaughter of Archibald Douglas, and lived for many years of the latter part of her life in the house built, about 1735, by James and Thomas Douglas. This old house, which was torn down a few years ago, was in Salisbury township, within two or three hundred yards of the Chester county line, and within a mile or two of St. John's church at the "Compass." There was an unfailing spring of excellent water within a short distance, shaded by a noble tree. We have frequently been at the old place, in and out of whose doorway passed many of the earliest settlers and of every generation since their day. We remember well "Aunt Peggy," "Uncle Whitehill," good old Dinah, the faithful ancient; the big kitchen, the old-time garden, and the house-dog that "knew the names of all the cattle and horses on the farm,"—for they all had names—and was so great a favorite with everybody.

John, the second son of Zaccheus (May 13, 1783; April 14, 1816), married Catharine Wilson (Nov. 14, 1787, Sept. 23, 1825). They had four children: Cyrus, who was unmarried; Charlotte, married Thomas McCausland, two children, Margaret and Hervey, the latter enjoying life (1903) among his grandchildren in Philipsburg, Pa.; Mary, married Dr. William Jones, of Douglassville, Berks county, two sons and two daughters, of whom Harry C. and Anna Douglas are living; and Margaret (June 14, 1810, July 18, 1898), who married William McCaskey in 1836, seven children, John Piersol, Joseph Barr, Catharine Wilson, William Spencer, Cyrus Davis, James Newton and Margaret Salome, all but one of whom are still living, along with children and grandchildren, the McCaskeys and Marshalls being well-known in Lancaster.

Archibald, the youngest son of Gabriel Davis, married Juliana Barton Anderson. They had one son, Gabriel, who was born near New Holland, Aug. 2, 1803, and died in Sterling, Ill., Jan. 26, 1880. He married Susanna Roland Diller, now "eighty years young," in her pleasant home at Sterling. Their children are William White Davis, Juliana Barton, Gabriel, Isaac Newton, Henry Laurens, Edward Diller and Charles. The first named frequently writes for the newspapers of Lancaster over the familiar initials "W. W. D." He is a scholarly man, one of the live men of Sterling, and his brothers are among the leading merchants and business men of Sterling. More than fifty years ago their father, Gabriel Davis, had the leading store in New Holland, Lancaster county. He was a thoughtful man, quiet and reserved in manner, in marked contrast with his business partner, John Piersol, one of the dozen children of Archibald Piersol, and one of the brightest, quickest, most versatile and attractive of men. Often on bright Sunday mornings did we little folks look to see John come riding up the lane, for on Sunday he frequently came over from New Holland, a distance of perhaps seven miles, to visit our mother, a favorite cousin. He always had a pound or so of candies in his coat pocket "for the children." In those days we thought his laugh and his voice simply delightful. It remains with us, like the memory of music that we love; indeed, we have never heard a man's voice whose tones in ordinary conversation were more musical, or whose cheery laugh was more infectious. He was a genuine Piersol, wiry, strong, fine, quick, fearless and generous. Above most things he enjoyed a horse race, and many a time ran his horses on the level track below Intercourse. The late John Vogan, of the Wickersham Printing Company, a member of the Bucktail Regiment, used to tell with keen pleasure of the races he rode when a boy for John Piersol and Isaac Diller, of New Holland. When he won the race it meant always a new suit of clothes or an extra gratuity. John Piersol died a few years since at Jamestown, Indiana, where his son is a prominent railroad man.

Zaccheus, the son of Jenkins Davis, who is named above, died in 1788. He left six or eight children. To his son, Zaccheus, he bequeathed a gristmill and an undivided interest in a large tract of land. To his son-in-law, Willis Davis, husband of his daughter Ann, a fulling mill and the undivided half of tract named above. By the will of Zaccheus, Jr., "which is a model of affectionate remembrance," Ann is given the other half of the estate at the death of her brother in 1793. Dinah, the second daughter of Jenkins Davis, named above, married John Piersol. We have not been able to go farther back in the Piersol line, which we think is Welsh, though we are unable to fix it with certainty. It may be Scotch-Irish or Huguenot. This is but a brief sketch in a direction in which we happen to be interested. It might be extended into volumes, for the printed list of Davises occupies about seven pages in the general index to the Pennsylvania Archives.—[J. P. McCaskey.

MILTON EBY GINGRICH, paying teller of the People's National Bank, Lancaster, is descended from an old and honored Pennsylvania ancestry, the Gingrichs, from whom he comes, having been landowners in Lancaster county for generations—sturdy Mennonites who tilled the soil and contributed of their might and means to the development of this, the "garden spot" of the old "Keystone State."

John Gingrich, father of Milton E., one of the most substantial farmers of East Hempfield township, made a grand record for honesty and intelligence during two terms as one of the commissioners of Lancaster county. He was a staunch Republican, and was twice honored by his fellow Republicans with election as county commissioner, one of the most important and most responsible positions in the gift of the people of Lancaster county. Mr. Gingrich entered into rest Nov. 1, 1893. He was married to Miss Anna Eby, daughter of Christian Eby, a prominent farmer of East Hempfield township, and eleven children were born to this union, ten of whom are now living, as follows: Elizabeth, Anna, Emma, Clara, Stella and Simon P., all unmarried and living at home with their widowed mother, on West Chestnut street, Lancaster; Fanny, wife of John F. Bair, in the tobacco trade at Mechanicsville, this county; John F., a farmer at Landisville, this county; Charles S., a mechanical engineer (a graduate of the Pennsylvania State College), now holding a responsible position in Cincinnati, Ohio; and Milton E., of the People's Bank.

Milton E. Gingrich was born on the old homestead in East Hempfield township, Sept. 16, 1872, and, after receiving such an education as the schools of the district afforded, came to Lancaster, entering the People's Bank as a clerk on Nov. 2, 1890, and by industry, intelligence and probity working his way up until, in the early part of 1902, he was made paying teller of the institution, a position he now holds. Mr. Gingrich was married, Nov. 20, 1901, to Miss Elizabeth Bushong, daughter of John H. Bushong, a prominent flour and grain dealer of Lancaster. Mr. Gingrich, like his lamented father, is an earnest Republican. He belongs to the Republicans, to the Elks and to the Masons, in which latter fraternity he has attained the fourteenth degree, being a member of the Lodge, Chapter, Council, Commandery and Lodge of Perfection, having taken the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite. Modest and unassuming in manner, courteous to the patrons of the great institution with which he is connected, and painstaking in his work, he is alike popular with his official associates and the public whom he serves.

JOSHUA SOURBEER, deceased. Among the descendants of those courageous, God-fearing pioneers who in the early days of privation and struggle peopled the fair wild land of Pennsylvania and brought bloom and peace and happiness for succeeding generations were Joshua Sourbeer and his wife Charlotte, the former of whom passed away in 1894, after a well-spent life of almost fourscore years, and the latter of whom survived him several years, dwelling in the serenity and comfort of a bright old age on the fruitful farm in West Hempfield township which had been her home from 1867.

Joshua Sourbeer was born in Conestoga Center, Lancaster county, March 6, 1815, son of Henry and Barbara (Grubb) Sourbeer, of Lancaster county.

Henry Sourbeer was born May 8, 1777, and died in 1862. His wife Barbara was born in November, 1781. Their remains were laid in the cemetery at Conestoga Center. He was an industrious, honest citizen, following the vocations of farmer, weaver, cooper, etc. To Henry and Barbara Sourbeer were born thirteen children, namely: Nancy, who married Abraham Heissinger; Elizabeth; Conrad; Mary; Henry; Michael; Daniel; Margaret and Regina, twins; Joshua; Amos; Leah; and Hettie, the sole survivor of the family, now living at Harrisburg, the widow of Joseph Hougendoubler.

Joshua Sourbeer was reared on the farm, and was throughout life a resident of Lancaster county. He married May, 23, 1837, in Columbia, Pa., Miss Charlotte Hougendoubler, who was born in West Hempfield township, Oct. 2, 1815, daughter of John and Mary (Charles) Hougendoubler, and granddaughter of John and Betsey Hougendoubler, who emigrated from Germany to America and took up a large tract of land in what is now West Hempfield township. Her maternal grandfather was John Charles. John Hougendoubler, her father, a farmer of West Hempfield township, died March 23, 1823, aged forty-two years. His wife survived until June 12, 1870, passing away at the age of eighty-six. They were devout members of the German Reformed Church, and their exemplary lives were for many years held in cherished memory. Both are buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery. To John and Mary Hougendoubler were born seven children, as follows: John, who lived in Perry county; Nancy, who married Jacob Hougendoubler; Mary, who married William Pierce; Eliza, who married John Hinkle; Charlotte, Mrs. Sourbeer; Catherine; and Joseph. All are now deceased. Eleven children were born to Joshua and Charlotte (Hougendoubler) Sourbeer, namely: Benjamin, who died young; Albert, who married, and died at the age of thirty-three years; Joseph, who married Sarah Dennison, and is now deceased; Mary, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Joshua, who married Catherine Bergot, and lives in York county; Hester A., wife of Henry H. Kline, of West Hempfield township; James, deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Christian Senft, of Columbia; Charlotte, who married William Courtney, of Columbia; and Harriet, deceased.

It was in 1867 that Joshua Sourbeer located on the farm of forty-three acres in West Hempfield township where he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives, his death occurring Nov. 18, 1894; he was buried in Mt. Bethel cemetery. In politics he was a stanch Republican. The religious faith of himself and wife was that of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The career of Joshua Sourbeer was marked by that true success which follows worthy and persistent effort. His force of character was felt as an influence for good throughout the community, augmented as it was by the loyal and intelligent co-operation of his wife. His widow retained unusual cheerfulness and brightness of manner, the heritage of a life, which, though darkened by the sorrows that are the common lot of humanity, yet had the afterglow of richness of experience in fidelity, righteousness and good deeds.

OTTO EDMUND WEBER, whose elegant photographic studio is in the fine new building at No. 168 North Queen street, Lancaster, is one of the finest artists in his line in the State. He is of German extraction, and his father, Anton Philip Weber, was a merchant of Einsiedl; his mother a native of Germany, was Miss Amalia Wagner before marriage. Seven children were born to this union, but only one, Otto E., survives. He came along with his parents to this country in 1878, the father dying in Philadelphia, and the mother passing away in Lancaster; her remains were interred in Woodward Hill cemetery.

Otto E. Weber was born in Germany Sept. 25, 1857, and began the study of photography "across the waters," completing his studies under noted masters of the art in Philadelphia and New York. About fifteen years ago Mr. Weber opened a studio on North Queen street, and has been in business on the same block all these years. His present studio is one of the best equipped, for all manner of photographic work, to be found in the State. Artistic in his posings, careful in all details, it is not a matter of surprise that at the first annual Photographic Convention in Harrisburg, in 1897, he was awarded two diplomas—one for fine portraiture, and one for architectural photography—as well as a special (or third) prize, consisting of a work on photographic chemistry.

Mr. Weber served four years in the National Guard of Pennsylvania, having been a member of Co. K (Capt. John M. Groff), 3d Brigade. A great lover of manly sports, and an expert with shotgun and rifle, Mr. Weber was captain of the Lancaster Rifle Team, which made record-breaking scores under his captaincy. Religiously he is a Lutheran, being a member of the Church of the Holy Trinity; and in all the walks of life he is modest and unassuming, in brief, a true artist, devoted to his art.

JONAS STAUFFER GINGRICH, the well-known liveryman of Lancaster, whose well-equipped stables are in the rear of the Northern National Bank, in North Queen street, comes from one of the oldest and best known families in Lancaster county, his ancestors having been landowners in this section for several generations.

David Gingrich, grandfather of J. S., was born and raised in Elizabeth township, where he was an extensive farmer. He died in East Hempfield township, to which he had removed later in life. Christian Gingrich, father of Jonas S., was a farmer of Rapho township, but lived retired for a time in Lancaster, where he entered into rest in August, 1901, aged seventy-six years. He married Miss Fanny Stauffer, daughter of David Stauffer, a school teacher and farmer of West Hempfield township, and she yet survives, living at No. 207 East Chestnut street, with her son, Jonas S., and Elizabeth, the unmarried daughter. There were nine children in the family, but only four survive, the two besides those just mentioned being Annie, wife of David Snively, a well-known miller on Hammer Creek, this county, and Christian, living in Mt. Joy.

Jonas S. Gingrich was born at the old home in Rapho township, and after receiving such education as the schools of the district afforded took up farm work and pursued it for many years. In 1896 he opened his big livery, exchange and boarding-stables in the rear of the Northern National Bank, and the business has proved a great success. Mr. Gingrich's knowledge of horses has made his stables exceedingly popular, not only because those who want to hire teams know that they will secure well-fed, well-groomed and well-trained horses, but because those wanting a place to board their horses know that they are in safe hands when in Mr. Gingrich's care.

Religiously Mr. Gingrich comes from old and prominent Mennonite stock; politically he is a Republican. Wherever found, in business or in social circles, he is a genial, generous and reliable man.

JACOB S. CARMANY, a popular dealer in dry goods and general merchandise at Florin, Pa., was born at Palmyra, Lebanon Co., that State, Aug. 31, 1848, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Strock) Carmany, of Lebanon county.

Jacob Carmany spent his life in Lebanon county, where he followed farming, and for some years was engaged at the carpenter's trade. Mr. Carmany was a public-spirited and enterprising citizen, and took a very active part in the political affairs of the times in which he lived. At different times he filled local offices of trust and responsibility, and he was very efficient in securing free schools in his county. He died in 1893, at the age of seventy-four. Both he and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church, and their standing was high in the community in which their honest and industrious lives were passed. Mrs. Elizabeth (Strock) Carmany is living in Palmyra, at the age of seventy-eight years, and is still alert and active. By her union with Mr. Carmany she became the mother of the following children: Daniel, who died while serving in the Union army during the Civil war, from disease contracted in the service; Jacob S., the subject of this sketch; William, a cabinet-maker in Dauphin county, Pa.; Edwin, who died in 1892; and Albert, who died when one and a half years old.

Anthony Carmany, the grandfather of Jacob S., married a Herchelroth. He was in the tannery business, became a man of considerable means, and exercised much influence in the community. His ancestors were among the pioneer settlers of this part of the State.

Jacob S. Carmany has been twice married. In 1867, in Marietta, Pa., he was married to Otilla Grimes, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Werley) Grimes, of York county, Pa., and by whom he had one daughter, Mary O., who is at home. Mrs. Otilla (Grimes) Carmany was born in York county, Pa., died Oct. 29, 1887, at the age of thirty years, and was buried at Marietta. For his second wife Mr. Carmany married, in 1892, at Mt. Joy, Pa., Frances Dierolf, who was born in Mt. Joy, Pa., daughter of William and Barbara (Beiswenger) Dierolf, the former of whom came to this country when only nineteen years of age, and followed the shoe business at Mt. Joy, where he still resides.

Until he was sixteen years old Jacob S. Carmany lived on a farm near Palmyra, Pa., though his activities of later years have been expended in his mercantile business. For one year he attended Palmyra Academy, was engaged one year as a clerk in Palmyra, and then went to Marietta, Pa., where he clerked for Spangler & Rick for three years. He then went to Chicago, where he was employed by a grain commission house. After traveling a year in the West he returned to Spangler & Rick, with whom he spent the ensuing four years. For thirteen years he was traveling salesman for Janney & Andrews, wholesale dry-goods merchants, of Philadelphia. In 1880 Mr. Carmany came to Florin to take charge of the present store, which was started by himself and his brother in 1872. The death of his brother placed the management of the store in Mr. Carmany's hands and he has brought it up to a very popular and successful plane. He is a director of the First National Bank of Mt. Joy.

Mr. Carmany belongs to the Masonic fraternity, and is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Republican. In the community he is very prominent, and is widely known as a thrifty and up-to-date business man, and as a progressive and honorable citizen, whose heart and hand are ever on the right side.

WILLIAM DIEROLF, who is referred to above as the father of Mrs. Carmany, was born in Baden, Germany, July 5, 1833, a son of George M. and Frances (Miller) Dierolf, both of Baden. George M. Dierolf, spent his life in Germany, where he was a shepherd, and he died in 1859, at the age of fifty-six years. His wife, Frances Miller, survived until the following year, and died at the age of forty-nine. George M. Dierolf was a soldier in the German army, and was a life grenadier of the Grand Duke of Baden. His children were: William; Henry, a blacksmith in the mines at Wilkesbarre, Pa., now deceased; Joanna, deceased wife of George Hofmaster; and Charles L., a shoe merchant at Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

William Dierolf was married in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1858, to Barbara Beiswenger, by whom he became the father of the following children: William A., in the shoe business at Mt. Joy, Pa.; John H., a hotel-keeper at Mt. Joy; Frances, the wife of Jacob S. Carmany, at Florin, Pa.; Bertha, who married John Mumma, a farmer and tobacco packer of Salunga, Pa.; Charles B., a druggist of Philadelphia; Edwin, a clerk at Lancaster; Emma M., married to F. H. Shenk, of Landisville, Pa., and George M., a teller in the Farmers' Bank, at Ephrata, Pa. Mrs. Barbara Dierolf, who was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, died Feb. 21, 1899, at the age of sixty-nine years, and was buried in the cemetery at Mt. Joy. Her parents lived and died in Germany.

In Germany William Dierolf learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed until coming to this country, in 1854. For a few months he lived in Brooklyn and New York, and spent three years in Philadelphia. In 1857 he came to Mt. Joy for a six months' residence, returning to Philadelphia. The following year he again came to Mt. Joy, which has been his permanent home. Here he worked three years for Alexander Reese, and then began custom work. In 1868 he began selling shoes, and successfully continued until February, 1901, when he retired from business.

Mr. Dierolf is a member of Lodge No. 277, I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 301, K. of P., and of Tribe No. 59, I. O. R. M. In religion he belongs to the Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Republican, and in all ways he is a good citizen of the town.

CHARLES JACOB HOSTER, the enterprising proprietor of Hoster's Cafe, North Queen street, Lancaster, is the son of Charles E. Hoster, who has retired from the hotel business after a successful career of twenty-three years, and has entered into manufacturing and mercantile enterprises.

Charles E. Hoster was born in Elizabethtown, where his father, Jacob, was a master mechanic for fifty years. Of the other children in the family of Jacob Hoster, William lives in Virginia; and Frances is a widow, now living in Marietta, this county. Charles E. Hoster married Miss Sadie Strone, of Carlisle, and three children were born of this union, two of whom, a boy and a girl, entered into rest in childhood.

Charles Jacob Hoster was born in Cumberland county, Sept. 15, 1871, and was educated in the public schools and in Nazareth Hall. Mr. Hoster became assistant to his father in the management of "Conestoga Inn," at Witmer's Bridge, a place which the father had beautified until it was equal in its interior appearance to any hostelry in the State. Here Charles J. remained as assistant until 1897, when he took charge of the place, his father removing to North Queen street, where he established the elegant Hoster's Cafe. Charles J. Hoster continued in the management of the "Conestoga Inn" until April, 1903, when his father retired from the hotel and cafe business and our subject became the proprietor of the North Queen street establishment. It was the general verdict that the mantle of the father had fallen upon worthy shoulders.

Charles Jacob Hoster married Miss Jennie Ort, daughter of Levi Ort, a farmer of York county, who is still living. Two children were born of this union, Charles E. and Luther Hoster. Mr. Hoster is religiously of the Moravian faith; politically he is a Republican; and socially he belongs to the Eagles. In all circles he is held in high esteem.

It is a place of fifty-four acres, and was purchased from his father. Mr. Kauffman was married Nov. 15, 1888, to Miss Lillie M. Bowers, who was born Aug. 3, 1869, a daughter of William P. and Elizabeth (Mitzger) Bowers, residents of East Hempfield township.
